apacayagÄ• miá¹ƒ diá¹-á¹-higatÄ• naá¹ƒ pahÄ• nÄ• ya paá¹-hamÄ• ya bhÅ«miyÄ• pattiyÄ•
vÅ«pasamÄ• ... pe ... dutiyaá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ ... pe ... tatiyaá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ ... pe ... catutthaá¹ƒ pe ... paá¹-hamaá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ ... pe ... paÃ±camaá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ upasampajja viharati appa chandÄ• dhipateyyanti kusalaá¹ƒ ... pe ... appaá¹‡ihitaá¹ƒ chandÄ• dhipateyyanti vipÄ• ko ...

appaá¹‡ihitaá¹ƒ chandÄ• dhipateyyanti kusalaá¹ƒ \Ee 114/ ... pe ... animittaá¹ƒ chandÄ• dhi
... pe ... appaá¹‡ihitaá¹ƒ chandÄ• dhipateyyanti kusalaá¹ƒ ... pe ... suÃ±Ã±ataá¹ƒ chandÄ• c vipÄ• ko, tasmiá¹ƒ samaye phasso hoti ... pe ... avikkhepo \Se 168/ hoti ... pe ... ime dhamm

<547> katame dhammÄ• abyÄ• katÄ• ? yasmiá¹ƒ samaye lokuttaraá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ bhÄ• ve
apacayagÄ• miá¹ƒ diá¹-á¹-higatÄ• naá¹ƒ pahÄ• nÄ• ya paá¹-hamÄ• ya bhÅ«miyÄ• pattiyÄ•
paá¹-hamaá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ upasampajja viharati dukkhapaá¹-ipadaá¹ƒ dandhÄ• bhiÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ
chandÄ• dhipateyyaá¹ƒ, tasmiá¹ƒ samaye phasso hoti ... pe ... avikkhepo hoti ... pe ... ime d
tasseva lokuttarassa kusalassa jhÄ• nassa katattÄ• bhÄ• vitattÄ• vipÄ• kaá¹ƒ vivicceva kÄ
paá¹-hamaá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ upasampajja viharati dukkhapaá¹-ipadaá¹ƒ dandhÄ• bhiÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ
chandÄ• dhipateyyaá¹ƒ, tasmiá¹ƒ samaye phasso hoti ... pe ... avikkhepo hoti ... pe ... ime d

<548> katame dhammÄ• abyÄ• katÄ• ? yasmiá¹ƒ samaye lokuttaraá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ bhÄ• ve
apacayagÄ• miá¹ƒ diá¹-á¹-higatÄ• naá¹ƒ pahÄ• nÄ• ya paá¹-hamÄ• ya bhÅ«miyÄ• pattiyÄ•
paá¹-hamaá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ upasampajja viharati dukkhapaá¹-ipadaá¹ƒ dandhÄ• bhiÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ
chandÄ• dhipateyyaá¹ƒ, tasmiá¹ƒ samaye phasso hoti ... pe ... avikkhepo hoti ... pe ... ime d
tasseva lokuttarassa kusalassa jhÄ• nassa katattÄ• bhÄ• vitattÄ• vipÄ• kaá¹ƒ vivicceva kÄ
paá¹-hamaá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ upasampajja viharati dukkhapaá¹-ipadaá¹ƒ dandhÄ• bhiÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ chandÄ• dhipateyyaá¹ƒ \Be 133/, tasmiá¹ƒ samaye phasso hoti ... pe ... avikkhepo hoti ... pe
abyÄ• katÄ• .

<549> katame \Se 169/ \Ne 143/ dhammÄ• abyÄ• katÄ• ? yasmiá¹ƒ samaye lokuttaraá¹ƒ j niyyÄ• nikaá¹ƒ apacayagÄ• miá¹ƒ diá¹-á¹-higatÄ• naá¹ƒ pahÄ• nÄ• ya paá¹-hamÄ• ya bhÅ«
kÄ• mehi ... pe ... paá¹-hamaá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ upasampajja viharati dukkhapaá¹-ipadaá¹ƒ dan appaá¹‡ihitaá¹ƒ chandÄ• dhipateyyaá¹ƒ, tasmiá¹ƒ samaye phasso hoti ... pe ... avikkhepo h dhammÄ• kusalÄ• . tasseva lokuttarassa kusalassa jhÄ• nassa katattÄ• bhÄ• vitattÄ• vip
... pe ... paá¹-hamaá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ upasampajja viharati dukkhapaá¹-ipadaá¹ƒ dandhÄ• bhiÃ chandÄ• dhipateyyaá¹ƒ \Ee 115/, tasmiá¹ƒ samaye phasso hoti ... pe ... avikkhepo hoti ... pe
abyÄ• katÄ• .

<550> katame dhammÄ• abyÄ• katÄ• ? yasmiá¹ƒ samaye lokuttaraá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ bhÄ• ve
apacayagÄ• miá¹ƒ diá¹-á¹-higatÄ• naá¹ƒ pahÄ• nÄ• ya paá¹-hamÄ• ya bhÅ«miyÄ• pattiyÄ•
vÅ«pasamÄ• ... pe ... dutiyaá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ ... pe ... tatiyaá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ ... pe ... catutthaá¹ƒ pe ... paá¹-hamaá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ ... pe ... paÃ±camaá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ upasampajja viharati duk dandhÄ• bhiÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ appaá¹‡ihitaá¹ƒ chandÄ• dhipateyyanti kusalaá¹ƒ ... pe ... dukkhapa dandhÄ• bhiÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ appaá¹‡ihitaá¹ƒ chandÄ• dhipateyyanti vipÄ• ko ... pe ... dukkhapaá¹

dandhÄ• bhiÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ appaá¹‡ihitaá¹ƒ chandÄ• dhipateyyanti kusalaá¹ƒ ... pe ... dukkhapaá dandhÄ• bhiÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ animittaá¹ƒ chandÄ• dhipateyyanti vipÄ• ko ... pe ... dukkhapaá¹-ipad appaá¹‡ihitaá¹ƒ chandÄ• dhipateyyanti kusalaá¹ƒ ... pe ... dukkhapaá¹-ipadaá¹ƒ dandhÄ• bh chandÄ• dhipateyyanti vipÄ• ko, tasmiá¹ƒ samaye phasso hoti ... pe ... avikkhepo \Se 170/ h dhammÄ• abyÄ• katÄ• .

<551> katame dhammÄ• abyÄ• katÄ• ? yasmiá¹ƒ samaye lokuttaraá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ bhÄ• ve
apacayagÄ• miá¹ƒ diá¹-á¹-higatÄ• naá¹ƒ pahÄ• nÄ• ya paá¹-hamÄ• ya bhÅ«miyÄ• pattiyÄ•
paá¹-hamaá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ upasampajja viharati dukkhapaá¹-ipadaá¹ƒ khippÄ• bhiÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ chandÄ• dhipateyyaá¹ƒ ... pe ... sukhapaá¹-ipadaá¹ƒ dandhÄ• bhiÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ appaá¹‡ihitaá¹ƒ pe ... sukhapaá¹-ipadaá¹ƒ khippÄ• bhiÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ appaá¹‡ihitaá¹ƒ chandÄ• dhipateyyaá¹ƒ ...
jhÄ• naá¹ƒ ... pe ... tatiyaá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ ... pe ... catutthaá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ ... pe ... paá¹-hamaá
... pe ... paÃ±camaá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ upasampajja viharati sukhapaá¹-ipadaá¹ƒ khippÄ• bhiÃ±Ã chandÄ• dhipateyyanti kusalaá¹ƒ ... pe ... sukhapaá¹-ipadaá¹ƒ khippÄ• bhiÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ appaá chandÄ• dhipateyyanti vipÄ• ko ... pe ... sukhapaá¹-ipadaá¹ƒ \Be 134/ khippÄ• bhiÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ chandÄ• dhipateyyanti kusalaá¹ƒ ... pe ... sukhapaá¹-ipadaá¹ƒ khippÄ• bhiÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ animitt chandÄ• dhipateyyanti \Ne 144/ vipÄ• ko ... pe ... sukhapaá¹-ipadaá¹ƒ khippÄ• bhiÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ chandÄ• dhipateyyanti kusalaá¹ƒ ... pe ... sukhapaá¹-ipadaá¹ƒ khippÄ• bhiÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ suÃ±Ã chandÄ• dhipateyyanti vipÄ• ko, tasmiá¹ƒ samaye phasso hoti ... pe ... \Ee 116/ avikkhepo h dhammÄ• abyÄ• katÄ• .

<552> katame dhammÄ• abyÄ• katÄ• ? yasmiá¹ƒ samaye lokuttaraá¹ƒ maggaá¹ƒ bhÄ• ve
satipaá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ bhÄ• veti ... pe ... lokuttaraá¹ƒ sammappadhÄ• naá¹ƒ bhÄ• veti ... pe 171/ iddhipÄ• daá¹ƒ bhÄ• veti ... pe ... lokuttaraá¹ƒ indriyaá¹ƒ bhÄ• veti ... pe ... lokuttaraá¹ƒ bhÄ• veti ... pe ... lokuttaraá¹ƒ bojjhaá¹…gaá¹ƒ bhÄ• veti ... pe ... lokuttaraá¹ƒ saccaá¹ƒ bhÄ lokuttaraá¹ƒ samathaá¹ƒ bhÄ• veti ... pe ... lokuttaraá¹ƒ dhammaá¹ƒ bhÄ• veti ... pe ... lokutt bhÄ• veti ... pe ... lokuttaraá¹ƒ Ä• yatanaá¹ƒ bhÄ• veti ... pe ... lokuttaraá¹ƒ dhÄ• tuá¹ƒ bhÄ• lokuttaraá¹ƒ Ä• hÄ• raá¹ƒ bhÄ• veti ... pe ... lokuttaraá¹ƒ phassaá¹ƒ bhÄ• veti ... pe ... lokutt bhÄ• veti ... pe ... lokuttaraá¹ƒ saÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ bhÄ• veti ... pe ... lokuttaraá¹ƒ cetanaá¹ƒ bhÄ• v lokuttaraá¹ƒ cittaá¹ƒ bhÄ• veti niyyÄ• nikaá¹ƒ apacayagÄ• miá¹ƒ diá¹-á¹-higatÄ• naá¹ƒ pahÄ bhÅ«miyÄ• pattiyÄ• vivicceva kÄ• mehi ... pe ... paá¹-hamaá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ upasampajja vih dukkhapaá¹-ipadaá¹ƒ dandhÄ• bhiÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ chandÄ• dhipateyyaá¹ƒ, tasmiá¹ƒ samaye pha hoti ... pe ... ime dhammÄ• kusalÄ• . tasseva lokuttarassa kusalassa jhÄ• nassa katattÄ• b vivicceva kÄ• mehi ... pe ... paá¹-hamaá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ upasampajja viharati dukkhapaá¹-ipad dandhÄ• bhiÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ suÃ±Ã±ataá¹ƒ ... pe ... animittaá¹ƒ ... pe ... appaá¹‡ihitaá¹ƒ chandÄ•
... vÄ«riyÄ• dhipateyyaá¹ƒ ... pe ... cittÄ• dhipateyyaá¹ƒ ... pe ... vÄ«maá¹ƒsÄ• dhipateyyaá phasso hoti ... pe ... avikkhepo hoti ... pe ... ime dhammÄ• abyÄ• katÄ• .

paá¹-hamamaggavipÄ• ko.

dutiyÄ• dimaggavipÄ• ko

<553> katame dhammÄ• abyÄ• katÄ• ? yasmiá¹ƒ samaye lokuttaraá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ bhÄ• ve
apacayagÄ• miá¹ƒ kÄ• marÄ• gabyÄ• pÄ• dÄ• naá¹ƒ \Be 135/ tanubhÄ• vÄ• ya dutiyÄ• ya
... kÄ• marÄ• gabyÄ• pÄ• dÄ• naá¹ƒ \Ee 117/ \Ne 145/ anavasesappahÄ• nÄ• ya tatiyÄ• y rÅ«parÄ• gaarÅ«parÄ• gamÄ• nauddhaccaavijjÄ• ya anavasesappahÄ• nÄ• ya catutthÄ• y
kÄ• mehi ... pe ... paá¹-hamaá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ upasampajja viharati dukkhapaá¹-ipadaá¹ƒ dan tasmiá¹ƒ samaye phasso hoti ... pe ... aÃ±Ã±indriyaá¹ƒ hoti ... pe ... avikkhepo hoti ... pe ... i kusalÄ• . tasseva lokuttarassa kusalassa jhÄ• nassa katattÄ• bhÄ• vitattÄ• vipÄ• kaá¹ƒ viv
... paá¹-hamaá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ upasampajja viharati dukkhapaá¹-ipadaá¹ƒ dandhÄ• bhiÃ±Ã±aa samaye phasso hoti ... pe ... aÃ±Ã±Ä• tÄ• vindriyaá¹ƒ hoti ... pe ... avikkhepo hoti ... pe ... ye tasmiá¹ƒ samaye aÃ±Ã±epi atthi paá¹-iccasamuppannÄ• arÅ«pino dhammÄ• --- ime dham

<554> katamo tasmiá¹ƒ samaye phasso hoti? yo tasmiá¹ƒ samaye phasso phusanÄ• saá¹
--- ayaá¹ƒ tasmiá¹ƒ samaye phasso hoti ... pe ....

<555> katamaá¹ƒ tasmiá¹ƒ samaye aÃ±Ã±Ä• tÄ• vindriyaá¹ƒ hoti? yÄ• tesaá¹ƒ aÃ±Ã±Ä• t aÃ±Ã±Ä• paÃ±Ã±Ä• pajÄ• nanÄ• vicayo pavicayo dhammavicayo sallakkhaá¹‡Ä• upalak
paá¹‡á¸• iccaá¹ƒ kosallaá¹ƒ nepuÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ vebhabyÄ• cintÄ• upaparikkhÄ• bhÅ«rÄ« med
sampajaÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ patodo paÃ±Ã±Ä• paÃ±Ã±indriyaá¹ƒ paÃ±Ã±Ä• balaá¹ƒ paÃ±Ã±Ä• satt paÃ±Ã±Ä• Ä• loko paÃ±Ã±Ä• obhÄ• so paÃ±Ã±Ä• pajjoto paÃ±Ã±Ä• ratanaá¹ƒ \Se 173/ an dhammavicayasambojjhaá¹…go maggaá¹…gaá¹ƒ maggapariyÄ• pannaá¹ƒ --- idaá¹ƒ tasmiá hoti ... pe ... ye vÄ• pana tasmiá¹ƒ samaye aÃ±Ã±epi atthi paá¹-iccasamuppannÄ• arÅ«pin dhammÄ• abyÄ• katÄ• .

dutiyÄ• dimaggavipÄ• ko.

lokuttaravipÄ• ko.

akusalavipÄ• kaabyÄ• kataá¹ƒ

akusalavipÄ• kapaÃ±caviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡Ä• ni

<556> katame \Be 136/ \Ne 146/ dhammÄ• abyÄ• katÄ• ? yasmiá¹ƒ samaye akusalassa k vipÄ• kaá¹ƒ cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ uppannaá¹ƒ hoti upekkhÄ• sahagataá¹ƒ rÅ«pÄ• ramm sotaviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ uppannaá¹ƒ hoti upekkhÄ• sahagataá¹ƒ saddÄ• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ ... pe uppannaá¹ƒ hoti upekkhÄ• sahagataá¹ƒ gandhÄ• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ \Ee 118/ ... pe ... jivhÄ• viÃ hoti upekkhÄ• sahagataá¹ƒ rasÄ• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ ... pe ... kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ uppanna phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ, tasmiá¹ƒ samaye phasso hoti, vedanÄ• hoti, saÃ±Ã±Ä• h hoti, dukkhaá¹ƒ hoti, cittassekaggatÄ• hoti, manindriyaá¹ƒ hoti, dukkhindriyaá¹ƒ hoti, jÄ«viti ye vÄ• pana tasmiá¹ƒ samaye aÃ±Ã±epi atthi paá¹-iccasamuppannÄ• arÅ«pino dhammÄ•

<557> katamo tasmiá¹ƒ samaye phasso hoti? yo tasmiá¹ƒ samaye phasso phusanÄ• saá¹
--- ayaá¹ƒ tasmiá¹ƒ samaye phasso hoti.

<558> katamÄ• tasmiá¹ƒ samaye vedanÄ• hoti? yaá¹ƒ tasmiá¹ƒ samaye tajjÄ• kÄ• yaviÃ± \Se 174/ kÄ• yikaá¹ƒ asÄ• taá¹ƒ kÄ• yikaá¹ƒ dukkhaá¹ƒ kÄ• yasamphassajaá¹ƒ asÄ• taá¹ƒ
kÄ• yasamphassajÄ• asÄ• tÄ• dukkhÄ• vedanÄ• --- ayaá¹ƒ tasmiá¹ƒ samaye vedanÄ• h

<559> katamaá¹ƒ tasmiá¹ƒ samaye dukkhaá¹ƒ hoti? yaá¹ƒ tasmiá¹ƒ samaye kÄ• yikaá¹ƒ as dukkhaá¹ƒ kÄ• yasamphassajaá¹ƒ asÄ• taá¹ƒ dukkhaá¹ƒ vedayitaá¹ƒ kÄ• yasamphassajÄ• idaá¹ƒ tasmiá¹ƒ samaye dukkhaá¹ƒ hoti ... pe ....

<560> katamaá¹ƒ tasmiá¹ƒ samaye dukkhindriyaá¹ƒ hoti? yaá¹ƒ tasmiá¹ƒ samaye kÄ• yika
dukkhaá¹ƒ kÄ• yasamphassajaá¹ƒ asÄ• taá¹ƒ dukkhaá¹ƒ vedayitaá¹ƒ kÄ• yasamphassajÄ• 147/ --- idaá¹ƒ tasmiá¹ƒ samaye dukkhindriyaá¹ƒ hoti ... pe ... ye vÄ• pana tasmiá¹ƒ samaye paá¹-iccasamuppannÄ• arÅ«pino dhammÄ• --- ime dhammÄ• abyÄ• katÄ• .

tasmiá¹ƒ \Be 137/ kho pana samaye cattÄ• ro khandhÄ• honti, dvÄ• yatanÄ• ni honti, dve Ä• hÄ• rÄ• honti, tÄ«á¹‡indriyÄ• ni honti, eko phasso hoti ... pe ... ekÄ• kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹
dhammÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ hoti, ekÄ• dhammadhÄ• tu hoti; ye vÄ• pana tasmiá¹ƒ samaye aÃ±Ã arÅ«pino dhammÄ• --- ime dhammÄ• abyÄ• katÄ• ... pe ....

<561> katamo tasmiá¹ƒ samaye saá¹…khÄ• rakkhandho hoti? phasso cetanÄ• cittassekag vÄ• pana tasmiá¹ƒ samaye aÃ±Ã±epi atthi paá¹-iccasamuppannÄ• arÅ«pino dhammÄ• á¹ á¹-hapetvÄ• saÃ±Ã±Ä• kkhandhaá¹ƒ á¹-hapetvÄ• viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandhaá¹ƒ --- ayaá¹ƒ \E saá¹…khÄ• rakkhandho \Se 175/ hoti ... pe ... ime dhammÄ• abyÄ• katÄ• .

akusalavipÄ• kapaÃ±caviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡Ä• ni.

akusalavipÄ• kamanodhÄ• tu

<562> katame dhammÄ• abyÄ• katÄ• ? yasmiá¹ƒ samaye akusalassa kammassa katattÄ•
uppannÄ• hoti upekkhÄ• sahagatÄ• rÅ«pÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• vÄ• ... pe ... phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• r panÄ• rabbha, tasmiá¹ƒ samaye phasso hoti, vedanÄ• hoti, saÃ±Ã±Ä• hoti, cetanÄ• hoti, hoti, vicÄ• ro hoti, upekkhÄ• hoti, cittassekaggatÄ• hoti, manindriyaá¹ƒ hoti, upekkhindriya

jÄ«vitindriyaá¹ƒ hoti; ye vÄ• pana tasmiá¹ƒ samaye aÃ±Ã±epi atthi paá¹-iccasamuppannÄ• ime dhammÄ• abyÄ• katÄ• ... pe ....

tasmiá¹ƒ kho pana samaye cattÄ• ro khandhÄ• honti, dvÄ• yatanÄ• ni honti, dve dhÄ• tuyo Ä• hÄ• rÄ• honti, tÄ«á¹‡indriyÄ• ni honti, eko phasso hoti ... pe ... ekÄ• manodhÄ• tu hoti, dhammÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ hoti, ekÄ• dhammadhÄ• tu hoti; ye vÄ• pana tasmiá¹ƒ samaye aÃ±Ã
arÅ«pino dhammÄ• --- ime dhammÄ• abyÄ• katÄ• ... pe ....

<563> katamo \Be 138/ tasmiá¹ƒ samaye saá¹…khÄ• rakkhandho hoti? phasso cetanÄ• vi
cittassekaggatÄ• jÄ«vitindriyaá¹ƒ; ye vÄ• pana tasmiá¹ƒ samaye aÃ±Ã±epi atthi paá¹-iccas dhammÄ• á¹-hapetvÄ• vedanÄ• kkhandhaá¹ƒ á¹-hapetvÄ• saÃ±Ã±Ä• kkhandhaá¹ƒ á¹-hap 176/ --- ayaá¹ƒ tasmiá¹ƒ samaye saá¹…khÄ• rakkhandho hoti ... pe ... ime dhammÄ• abyÄ• akusalavipÄ• kÄ• manodhÄ• tu.

akusalavipÄ• kamanoviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡adhÄ• tu

<564> katame dhammÄ• abyÄ• katÄ• ? yasmiá¹ƒ samaye akusalassa kammassa katattÄ•
manoviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡adhÄ• tu uppannÄ• hoti upekkhÄ• sahagatÄ• rÅ«pÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• vÄ yaá¹ƒ yaá¹ƒ vÄ• panÄ• rabbha, tasmiá¹ƒ samaye phasso hoti, vedanÄ• hoti, saÃ±Ã±Ä• ho hoti, vitakko hoti, vicÄ• ro hoti, upekkhÄ• hoti, cittassekaggatÄ• hoti, manindriyaá¹ƒ hoti, up hoti, jÄ«vitindriyaá¹ƒ hoti; ye vÄ• pana tasmiá¹ƒ samaye aÃ±Ã±epi atthi paá¹-iccasamuppan
--- ime dhammÄ• abyÄ• katÄ• ... pe ....

tasmiá¹ƒ kho pana samaye cattÄ• ro khandhÄ• honti, dvÄ• yatanÄ• ni honti, dve dhÄ• tuyo
honti, tÄ«á¹‡indriyÄ• ni honti, eko phasso hoti ... pe ... ekÄ• manoviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡adhÄ• tu ho
dhammÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ hoti, ekÄ• dhammadhÄ• tu hoti; ye vÄ• pana tasmiá¹ƒ samaye aÃ±Ã
arÅ«pino dhammÄ• --- ime dhammÄ• abyÄ• katÄ• ... pe ....

<565> katamo \Ne 149/ tasmiá¹ƒ samaye saá¹…khÄ• rakkhandho hoti? phasso cetanÄ• vi
cittassekaggatÄ• jÄ«vitindriyaá¹ƒ; ye vÄ• pana tasmiá¹ƒ samaye aÃ±Ã±epi atthi paá¹-iccas
dhammÄ• á¹-hapetvÄ• vedanÄ• kkhandhaá¹ƒ \Se 177/ á¹-hapetvÄ• \Be 139/ saÃ±Ã±Ä• k
viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandhaá¹ƒ --- ayaá¹ƒ tasmiá¹ƒ samaye saá¹…khÄ• rakkhandho hoti ... pe akusalavipÄ• kÄ• manoviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡adhÄ• tu.

vipÄ• kÄ• abyÄ• katÄ• .

ahetukakiriyÄ• abyÄ• kataá¹ƒ

kiriyÄ• manodhÄ• tu

<566> katame dhammÄ• abyÄ• katÄ• ? yasmiá¹ƒ samaye manodhÄ• tu uppannÄ• hoti ki
ca kammavipÄ• kÄ• upekkhÄ• sahagatÄ• rÅ«pÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• vÄ• ... pe ... phoá¹-á¹-hab vÄ• panÄ• rabbha, tasmiá¹ƒ samaye phasso hoti, vedanÄ• hoti, saÃ±Ã±Ä• hoti, cetanÄ• vitakko hoti, vicÄ• ro hoti, upekkhÄ• hoti, cittassekaggatÄ• hoti, manindriyaá¹ƒ hoti, upekkh
jÄ«vitindriyaá¹ƒ hoti; ye vÄ• pana tasmiá¹ƒ samaye aÃ±Ã±epi atthi paá¹-iccasamuppannÄ•
ime dhammÄ• abyÄ• katÄ• ... pe ....

tasmiá¹ƒ kho pana samaye cattÄ• ro khandhÄ• honti, dvÄ• yatanÄ• ni honti, dve dhÄ• tuyo
honti, tÄ«á¹‡indriyÄ• ni honti, eko phasso hoti ... pe ... ekÄ• manodhÄ• tu hoti, ekaá¹ƒ dhar ekÄ• dhammadhÄ• tu hoti; ye vÄ• pana tasmiá¹ƒ samaye aÃ±Ã±epi atthi paá¹-iccasamupp ime dhammÄ• abyÄ• katÄ• ... pe ....

<567> katamo tasmiá¹ƒ samaye saá¹…khÄ• rakkhandho hoti? phasso cetanÄ• vitakko \Se cittassekaggatÄ• \Ne 150/ jÄ«vitindriyaá¹ƒ; ye vÄ• pana tasmiá¹ƒ samaye aÃ±Ã±epi atthi p arÅ«pino dhammÄ• á¹-hapetvÄ• vedanÄ• kkhandhaá¹ƒ á¹-hapetvÄ• saÃ±Ã±Ä• kkhandha
viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandhaá¹ƒ --- ayaá¹ƒ tasmiá¹ƒ samaye saá¹…khÄ• rakkhandho hoti ... pe

kiriyÄ• manodhÄ• tu.

kiriyÄ• manoviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡adhÄ• tusomanassasahagatÄ•

<568> katame \Be 140/ dhammÄ• abyÄ• katÄ• ? yasmiá¹ƒ samaye manoviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡adh \Ee 121/ kusalÄ• nÄ• kusalÄ• na ca kammavipÄ• kÄ• somanassasahagatÄ• rÅ«pÄ• ram dhammÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• vÄ• yaá¹ƒ yaá¹ƒ vÄ• panÄ• rabbha, tasmiá¹ƒ samaye phasso hot cetanÄ• hoti, cittaá¹ƒ hoti, vitakko hoti, vicÄ• ro hoti, pÄ«ti hoti, sukhaá¹ƒ hoti, cittassekagga vÄ«riyindriyaá¹ƒ hoti, samÄ• dhindriyaá¹ƒ hoti, manindriyaá¹ƒ hoti, somanassindriyaá¹ƒ hoti hoti; ye vÄ• pana tasmiá¹ƒ samaye aÃ±Ã±epi atthi paá¹-iccasamuppannÄ• arÅ«pino dham
abyÄ• katÄ• .

<569> katamo tasmiá¹ƒ samaye phasso hoti? yo tasmiá¹ƒ samaye phasso phusanÄ• saá¹

--- ayaá¹ƒ tasmiá¹ƒ samaye phasso hoti ... pe ....

<570> katamÄ• tasmiá¹ƒ samaye cittassekaggatÄ• hoti? yÄ• tasmiá¹ƒ samaye cittassa á avaá¹-á¹-hiti avisÄ• hÄ• ro avikkhepo avisÄ• haá¹-amÄ• nasatÄ• samatho samÄ• dhindriya ayaá¹ƒ tasmiá¹ƒ samaye cittassekaggatÄ• hoti.

<571> katamaá¹ƒ tasmiá¹ƒ samaye vÄ«riyindriyaá¹ƒ hoti? yo tasmiá¹ƒ samaye cetasiko vÄ parakkamo uyyÄ• mo \Se 179/ vÄ• yÄ• mo ussÄ• ho ussoá¸·hÄ« thÄ• mo dhiti asithilaparak anikkhittachandatÄ• anikkhittadhuratÄ• dhurasampaggÄ• ho vÄ«riyaá¹ƒ vÄ«riyindriyaá¹ƒ v tasmiá¹ƒ samaye vÄ«riyindriyaá¹ƒ hoti.

<572> katamaá¹ƒ tasmiá¹ƒ samaye samÄ• dhindriyaá¹ƒ hoti? yÄ• tasmiá¹ƒ samaye cittass
avaá¹-á¹-hiti avisÄ• hÄ• ro avikkhepo avisÄ• haá¹-amÄ• nasatÄ• samatho samÄ• dhindriya idaá¹ƒ tasmiá¹ƒ samaye samÄ• dhindriyaá¹ƒ hoti ... pe ... ye vÄ• pana tasmiá¹ƒ samaye aÃ paá¹-iccasamuppannÄ• arÅ«pino dhammÄ• --- ime dhammÄ• abyÄ• katÄ• .

tasmiá¹ƒ kho pana samaye cattÄ• ro khandhÄ• honti, dvÄ• yatanÄ• ni honti, dve dhÄ• tuyo
honti, paÃ±cindriyÄ• ni honti, eko \Be 141/ phasso hoti ... pe ... ekÄ• manoviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡adh
dhammÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ hoti, ekÄ• dhammadhÄ• tu hoti; ye vÄ• pana tasmiá¹ƒ samaye aÃ±Ã
arÅ«pino dhammÄ• --- ime dhammÄ• abyÄ• katÄ• ... pe ....

<573> katamo tasmiá¹ƒ samaye saá¹…khÄ• rakkhandho hoti? phasso cetanÄ• vitakko vic vÄ«riyindriyaá¹ƒ samÄ• dhindriyaá¹ƒ jÄ«vitindriyaá¹ƒ; ye vÄ• pana tasmiá¹ƒ samaye aÃ±Ã paá¹-iccasamuppannÄ• arÅ«pino dhammÄ• á¹-hapetvÄ• \Ee 122/ vedanÄ• kkhandhaá¹ƒ á¹-hapetvÄ• viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandhaá¹ƒ --- ayaá¹ƒ tasmiá¹ƒ samaye saá¹…khÄ• rakkhand
abyÄ• katÄ• .

kiriyÄ• manoviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡adhÄ• tu somanassasahagatÄ• .

kiriyÄ• manoviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡adhÄ• tuupekkhÄ• sahagatÄ•

<574> katame \Se 180/ dhammÄ• abyÄ• katÄ• ? yasmiá¹ƒ samaye manoviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡adh kusalÄ• nÄ• kusalÄ• na ca kammavipÄ• kÄ• upekkhÄ• sahagatÄ• rÅ«pÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• yaá¹ƒ yaá¹ƒ vÄ• panÄ• rabbha, tasmiá¹ƒ samaye phasso hoti, vedanÄ• hoti, saÃ±Ã±Ä• h hoti, vitakko hoti, vicÄ• ro hoti, upekkhÄ• hoti, cittassekaggatÄ• \Ne 152/ hoti, vÄ«riyindriya samÄ• dhindriyaá¹ƒ hoti manindriyaá¹ƒ hoti, upekkhindriyaá¹ƒ hoti, jÄ«vitindriyaá¹ƒ hoti; ye samaye aÃ±Ã±epi atthi paá¹-iccasamuppannÄ• arÅ«pino dhammÄ• --- ime dhammÄ• aby

tasmiá¹ƒ kho pana samaye cattÄ• ro khandhÄ• honti, dvÄ• yatanÄ• ni honti, dve dhÄ• tuyo
honti, paÃ±cindriyÄ• ni honti, eko phasso hoti ... pe ... ekÄ• manoviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡adhÄ• tu ho
dhammÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ hoti, ekÄ• dhammadhÄ• tu hoti; ye vÄ• pana tasmiá¹ƒ samaye aÃ±Ã
arÅ«pino dhammÄ• --- ime dhammÄ• abyÄ• katÄ• ... pe ....

<575> katamo \Be 142/ tasmiá¹ƒ samaye saá¹…khÄ• rakkhandho hoti? phasso cetanÄ• vi
cittassekaggatÄ• vÄ«riyindriyaá¹ƒ samÄ• dhindriyaá¹ƒ jÄ«vitindriyaá¹ƒ; ye vÄ• pana tasmi atthi paá¹-iccasamuppannÄ• arÅ«pino dhammÄ• á¹-hapetvÄ• vedanÄ• kkhandhaá¹ƒ á¹-h á¹-hapetvÄ• viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandhaá¹ƒ --- ayaá¹ƒ tasmiá¹ƒ samaye saá¹…khÄ• rakkhand 181/ dhammÄ• abyÄ• katÄ• .

kiriyÄ• manoviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡adhÄ• tu upekkhÄ• sahagatÄ• .

ahetukÄ• kiriyÄ• abyÄ• katÄ• .

sahetukakÄ• mÄ• vacarakiriyÄ•

<576> katame dhammÄ• abyÄ• katÄ• ? yasmiá¹ƒ samaye manoviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡adhÄ• tu up nÄ• kusalÄ• na ca kammavipÄ• kÄ• somanassasahagatÄ• Ã±Ä• á¹‡asampayuttÄ• ... pe Ã±Ä• á¹‡asampayuttÄ• sasaá¹…khÄ• rena ... pe ... somanassasahagatÄ• Ã±Ä• á¹‡avippa somanassasahagatÄ• Ã±Ä• á¹‡avippayuttÄ• sasaá¹…khÄ• rena ... pe ... upekkhÄ• sahag
... upekkhÄ• sahagatÄ• Ã±Ä• á¹‡asampayuttÄ• sasaá¹…khÄ• rena ... pe ... upekkhÄ• sah pe ... upekkhÄ• sahagatÄ• Ã±Ä• á¹‡avippayuttÄ• sasaá¹…khÄ• rena rÅ«pÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• vÄ• yaá¹ƒ yaá¹ƒ vÄ• panÄ• rabbha \Ee 123/, tasmiá¹ƒ samaye phasso hoti ... pe ... avikkh pe ... ime dhammÄ• abyÄ• katÄ• ... pe ... alobho abyÄ• katamÅ«laá¹ƒ ... pe ... adoso abyÄ
... ime dhammÄ• abyÄ• katÄ• .

sahetukÄ• kÄ• mÄ• vacarakiriyÄ• .

rÅ«pÄ• vacarakiriyÄ•

<577> katame dhammÄ• abyÄ• katÄ• ? yasmiá¹ƒ samaye rÅ«pÄ• vacaraá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ b nÄ• kusalaá¹ƒ na ca kammavipÄ• kaá¹ƒ diá¹-á¹-hadhammasukhavihÄ• raá¹ƒ vivicceva kÄ• jhÄ• naá¹ƒ upasampajja viharati pathavÄ«kasiá¹‡aá¹ƒ, tasmiá¹ƒ \Be 143/ samaye phasso h hoti ... pe ... ime dhammÄ• abyÄ• katÄ• .

<578> katame \Se 182/ dhammÄ• abyÄ• katÄ• ? yasmiá¹ƒ samaye rÅ«pÄ• vacaraá¹ƒ jhÄ• kusalaá¹ƒ nÄ• kusalaá¹ƒ na ca kammavipÄ• kaá¹ƒ diá¹-á¹-hadhammasukhavihÄ• raá¹ƒ vital

... pe ... dutiyaá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ ... pe ... tatiyaá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ ... pe ... catutthaá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ ...
paá¹-hamaá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ ... pe ... paÃ±camaá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ upasampajja viharati pathavÄ« samaye phasso hoti ... pe ... avikkhepo hoti ... pe ... ime dhammÄ• abyÄ• katÄ• .

rÅ«pÄ• vacarakiriyÄ• .

arÅ«pÄ• vacarakiriyÄ•

<579> katame dhammÄ• abyÄ• katÄ• ? yasmiá¹ƒ samaye arÅ«pÄ• vacaraá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ nÄ• kusalaá¹ƒ na ca kammavipÄ• kaá¹ƒ diá¹-á¹-hadhammasukhavihÄ• raá¹ƒ sabbaso rÅ«p paá¹-ighasaÃ±Ã±Ä• naá¹ƒ atthaá¹…gamÄ• nÄ• nattasaÃ±Ã±Ä• naá¹ƒ amanasikÄ• rÄ• Ä• kÄ• sÄ• naÃ±cÄ• yatanasaÃ±Ã±Ä• sahagataá¹ƒ \Ne 154/ sukhassa ca pahÄ• nÄ• ... pe upasampajja viharati tasmiá¹ƒ samaye phasso hoti ... pe ... avikkhepo hoti ... pe ... ime dhar

<580> katame dhammÄ• abyÄ• katÄ• ? yasmiá¹ƒ samaye arÅ«pÄ• vacaraá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ
kusalaá¹ƒ nÄ• kusalaá¹ƒ na ca kammavipÄ• kaá¹ƒ diá¹-á¹-hadhammasukhavihÄ• raá¹ƒ sab samatikkamma viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aÃ±cÄ• yatanasaÃ±Ã±Ä• sahagataá¹ƒ sukhassa ca pahÄ• nÄ upasampajja viharati, tasmiá¹ƒ samaye phasso hoti ... pe ... avikkhepo \Se 183/ hoti ... pe ...
abyÄ• katÄ• .

<581> katame dhammÄ• abyÄ• katÄ• ? yasmiá¹ƒ samaye arÅ«pÄ• vacaraá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ
nÄ• kusalaá¹ƒ na ca kammavipÄ• kaá¹ƒ diá¹-á¹-hadhammasukhavihÄ• raá¹ƒ sabbaso viÃ±Ã samatikkamma Ä• kiÃ±caÃ±Ã±Ä• yatanasaÃ±Ã±Ä• sahagataá¹ƒ sukhassa ca pahÄ• nÄ• .
upasampajja viharati \Be 144/, tasmiá¹ƒ samaye phasso hoti ... pe ... avikkhepo hoti ... pe ...
abyÄ• katÄ• .

<582> katame dhammÄ• abyÄ• katÄ• ? yasmiá¹ƒ samaye arÅ«pÄ• vacaraá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ
nÄ• kusalaá¹ƒ na ca kammavipÄ• kaá¹ƒ diá¹-á¹-hadhammasukhavihÄ• raá¹ƒ sabbaso Ä• ki samatikkamma nevasaÃ±Ã±Ä• nÄ• saÃ±Ã±Ä• yatanasaÃ±Ã±Ä• sahagataá¹ƒ sukhassa ca jhÄ• naá¹ƒ upasampajja viharati, tasmiá¹ƒ samaye phasso hoti ... pe ... avikkhepo hoti ... pe abyÄ• katÄ• ... pe ... alobho abyÄ• katamÅ«laá¹ƒ ... pe ... adoso abyÄ• katamÅ«laá¹ƒ ... pe abyÄ• katamÅ«laá¹ƒ ... pe ... ime dhammÄ• abyÄ• katÄ• .

arÅ«pÄ• vacarakiriyÄ• .

kiriyÄ• abyÄ• katÄ• .

cittuppÄ• dakaá¹‡á¸• aá¹ƒ niá¹-á¹-hitaá¹ƒ.

2. rÅ«pakaá¹‡á¸• aá¹ƒ

uddeso

<583> katame \Se 184/ \Be 145/ \Ne 155/ dhammÄ• abyÄ• katÄ• ? kusalÄ• kusalÄ• naá¹ƒ kÄ• mÄ• vacarÄ• rÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• arÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• apariyÄ• pannÄ• vedanÄ• kkhandho viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho, ye ca dhammÄ• kiriyÄ• neva kusalÄ• nÄ• kusalÄ• na ca kamm asaá¹…khatÄ• ca dhÄ• tu --- ime dhammÄ• abyÄ• katÄ• .

mÄ• tikÄ•

ekakaá¹ƒ

<584> tattha katamaá¹ƒ sabbaá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ? cattÄ• ro ca mahÄ• bhÅ«tÄ• , catunnaÃ±ca m rÅ«paá¹ƒ --- idaá¹ƒ vuccati sabbaá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ. sabbaá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ na hetu, ahetukaá¹ƒ, he sappaccayaá¹ƒ \Ee 125/, saá¹…khataá¹ƒ, rÅ«paá¹ƒ {rÅ«piyaá¹ƒ (Ce) }, lokiyaá¹ƒ, sÄ• savaá ganthaniyaá¹ƒ, oghaniyaá¹ƒ, yoganiyaá¹ƒ, nÄ«varaá¹‡iyaá¹ƒ, parÄ• maá¹-á¹-haá¹ƒ, upÄ• dÄ saá¹ƒkilesikaá¹ƒ, abyÄ• kataá¹ƒ, anÄ• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ, acetasikaá¹ƒ, cittavippayuttaá¹ƒ, nevavipÄ• kanavipÄ• kadhammadhammaá¹ƒ, asaá¹ƒkiliá¹-á¹-hasaá¹ƒkilesikaá¹ƒ, na savitak avitakkavicÄ• ramattaá¹ƒ, avitakkaavicÄ• raá¹ƒ, na pÄ«tisahagataá¹ƒ, na sukhasahagataá¹ƒ upekkhÄ• sahagataá¹ƒ, neva dassanena na bhÄ• vanÄ• ya pahÄ• tabbaá¹ƒ, neva dassane pahÄ• tabbahetukaá¹ƒ, neva Ä• cayagÄ• mi na apacayagÄ• mi, nevasekkhanÄ• sekkhaá¹ƒ rÅ«pÄ• vacaraá¹ƒ, na \Ne 156/ arÅ«pÄ• vacaraá¹ƒ, pariyÄ• pannaá¹ƒ, no apariyÄ• pannaá¹ aniyyÄ• nikaá¹ƒ, uppannaá¹ƒ, chahi viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡ehi viÃ±Ã±eyyaá¹ƒ, aniccaá¹ƒ, jarÄ• bhibl evaá¹ƒ ekavidhena rÅ«pasaá¹…gaho.

ekakaá¹ƒ.

dukaá¹ƒ

duvidhena \Se 185/ \Be 146/ rÅ«pasaá¹…gaho --- atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ upÄ• dÄ• , atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ no upÄ• dÄ• .

atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ upÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ, atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ anupÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ.

atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ upÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡upÄ• dÄ• niyaá¹ƒ, atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ anupÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡upÄ• dÄ• ni atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ sanidassanaá¹ƒ, atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ anidassanaá¹ƒ.

atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ sappaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ, atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ appaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ.

atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ indriyaá¹ƒ, atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ na indriyaá¹ƒ.

atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ mahÄ• bhÅ«taá¹ƒ, atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ na mahÄ• bhÅ«taá¹ƒ.

atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ viÃ±Ã±atti, atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ na viÃ±Ã±atti.

atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ cittasamuá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ, atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ na cittasamuá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ.

atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ cittasahabhu, atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ na cittasahabhu.

atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ cittÄ• nuparivatti, atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ na cittÄ• nuparivatti.

atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ, atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ.

atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ oá¸·Ä• rikaá¹ƒ, atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ sukhumaá¹ƒ.

atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ dÅ«re, atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ santike.

atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ cakkhusamphassassa vatthu, atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ cakkhusamphassassa na vatth cakkhusamphassajÄ• ya \Ne 157/ vedanÄ• ya ... pe ... saÃ±Ã±Ä• ya ... pe ... cetanÄ• ya ... cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡assa vatthu, atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡assa na vatthu.

atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ sotasamphassassa ... pe ... ghÄ• nasamphassassa ... pe ... \Se 186/ jivhÄ• s
... kÄ• yasamphassassa vatthu, atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ kÄ• yasamphassassa na vatthu. atthi rÅ«paá vedanÄ• ya ... pe ... saÃ±Ã±Ä• ya ... pe ... cetanÄ• ya \Ee 126/ ... pe ... kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡ rÅ«paá¹ƒ kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡assa na vatthu.

atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ cakkhusamphassassa Ä• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ, atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ cakkhusamphassas rÅ«paá¹ƒ cakkhusamphassajÄ• ya vedanÄ• ya ... pe ... saÃ±Ã±Ä• ya ... pe ... cetanÄ• ya ...
cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡assa Ä• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ, atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡assa nÄ• r

atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ sotasamphassassa ... pe ... \Be 147/ ghÄ• nasamphassassa ... pe ... jivhÄ• s

... kÄ• yasamphassassa Ä• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ, atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ kÄ• yasamphassassa nÄ• ramm
kÄ• yasamphassajÄ• ya vedanÄ• ya ... pe ... saÃ±Ã±Ä• ya ... pe ... cetanÄ• ya ... pe ... kÄ• Ä• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ, atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡assa nÄ• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ.

atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ, atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ na cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ. atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ so ghÄ• nÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... jivhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... kÄ• yÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ, atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ na

atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ, atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ na rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ. atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ sadd gandhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... rasÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ, atthi rÅ«p phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ.

atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ cakkhudhÄ• tu, atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ na cakkhudhÄ• tu. atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ sotadhÄ• tu ghÄ• nadhÄ• tu ... pe ... jivhÄ• dhÄ• tu ... pe ... kÄ• yadhÄ• tu, atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ na kÄ• yadhÄ

atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ rÅ«padhÄ• tu, atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ na rÅ«padhÄ• tu. atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ saddadhÄ• tu
... pe ... rasadhÄ• tu ... pe ... phoá¹-á¹-habbadhÄ• tu, atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ na phoá¹-á¹-habbadhÄ•

atthi \Ne 158/ rÅ«paá¹ƒ cakkhundriyaá¹ƒ, atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ na cakkhundriyaá¹ƒ. atthi rÅ«paá¹ pe ... ghÄ• nindriyaá¹ƒ ... pe ... jivhindriyaá¹ƒ ... pe ... kÄ• yindriyaá¹ƒ, atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ na kÄ• atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ itthindriyaá¹ƒ, atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ na itthindriyaá¹ƒ.

atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ purisindriyaá¹ƒ, atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ na purisindriyaá¹ƒ.

atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ jÄ«vitindriyaá¹ƒ, atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ na jÄ«vitindriyaá¹ƒ.

atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±atti, atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ na kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±atti.

atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ vacÄ«viÃ±Ã±atti, atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ na vacÄ«viÃ±Ã±atti.

atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ Ä• kÄ• sadhÄ• tu, atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ na Ä• kÄ• sadhÄ• tu.

atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ \Se 187/ Ä• podhÄ• tu, atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ na Ä• podhÄ• tu.

atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ rÅ«passa lahutÄ• , atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ rÅ«passa na lahutÄ• .

atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ rÅ«passa mudutÄ• , atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ \Ee 127/ rÅ«passa na mudutÄ• .

atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ rÅ«passa kammaÃ±Ã±atÄ• , atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ rÅ«passa na kammaÃ±Ã±atÄ• .

atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ rÅ«passa upacayo, atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ rÅ«passa na upacayo.

atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ rÅ«passa santati, atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ rÅ«passa na santati.

atthi \Be 148/ rÅ«paá¹ƒ rÅ«passa jaratÄ• , atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ rÅ«passa na jaratÄ• .

atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ rÅ«passa aniccatÄ• , atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ rÅ«passa na aniccatÄ• .

atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ kabaá¸·Ä«kÄ• ro Ä• hÄ• ro, atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ na kabaá¸·Ä«kÄ• ro Ä• hÄ• ro.

evaá¹ƒ duvidhena rÅ«pasaá¹…gaho.

dukaá¹ƒ.

tikaá¹ƒ

tividhena \Ne 159/ rÅ«pasaá¹…gaho ---

<585> yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ upÄ• dÄ• . yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá upÄ• dÄ• , atthi no upÄ• dÄ• .

yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ upÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ. yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hira upÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ, atthi anupÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ.

yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ upÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡upÄ• dÄ• niyaá¹ƒ. yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«p atthi upÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡upÄ• dÄ• niyaá¹ƒ, atthi anupÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡upÄ• dÄ• niyaá¹ƒ.

yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ anidassanaá¹ƒ. yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ sanidassanaá¹ƒ, atthi anidassanaá¹ƒ.

yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ sappaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ. yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá sappaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ, atthi appaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ.

yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ indriyaá¹ƒ. yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ, taá indriyaá¹ƒ, atthi na indriyaá¹ƒ.

yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ na mahÄ• bhÅ«taá¹ƒ. yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• h mahÄ• bhÅ«taá¹ƒ, atthi na mahÄ• bhÅ«taá¹ƒ.

yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ na viÃ±Ã±atti. yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ, t viÃ±Ã±atti, atthi na viÃ±Ã±atti.

yaá¹ƒ \Be 149/ \Ne 160/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ na cittasamuá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ. ya bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ atthi cittasamuá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ, atthi na cittasamuá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ.

yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ na cittasahabhu. yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ 188/ cittasahabhu, atthi na cittasahabhu.

yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ na cittÄ• nuparivatti. yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hir cittÄ• nuparivatti, atthi na cittÄ• nuparivatti.

yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ oá¸·Ä• rikaá¹ƒ. yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ, oá¸·Ä• rikaá¹ƒ, atthi sukhumaá¹ƒ.

yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ santike. yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ a santike.

yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ cakkhusamphassassa na vatthu. yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«p taá¹ƒ \Ee 128/ atthi cakkhusamphassassa vatthu, atthi cakkhusamphassassa na vatthu.

yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ cakkhusamphassajÄ• ya vedanÄ• ya ... pe ... saÃ± cetanÄ• ya ... pe ... cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡assa na vatthu. yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ, cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡assa vatthu, atthi cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡assa na vatthu.

yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ sotasamphassassa ... pe ... ghÄ• nasamphassass jivhÄ• samphassassa ... pe ... kÄ• yasamphassassa na vatthu. yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhatt kÄ• yasamphassassa vatthu, atthi kÄ• yasamphassassa na vatthu. yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ
kÄ• yasamphassajÄ• ya vedanÄ• ya ... pe ... saÃ±Ã±Ä• ya ... pe ... cetanÄ• ya ... pe ... kÄ• vatthu. yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ atthi kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡assa vatthu, atthi kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡assa na vatthu.

yaá¹ƒ \Ne 161/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ cakkhusamphassassa nÄ• rammaá¹‡aá¹ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ atthi cakkhusamphassassa Ä• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ, atthi cakkhusamphassass taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ cakkhusamphassajÄ• ya vedanÄ• ya ... pe ... saÃ±Ã±Ä•

... pe ... cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡assa nÄ• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ. yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ, ta cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡assa Ä• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ, atthi cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡assa nÄ• rammaá¹‡ yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ sotasamphassassa ... pe ... ghÄ• nasamphassass jivhÄ• samphassassa ... pe ... kÄ• yasamphassassa nÄ• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ. yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«pa kÄ• yasamphassassa Ä• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ, atthi kÄ• yasamphassassa nÄ• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ. ya \Be 150/, taá¹ƒ kÄ• yasamphassajÄ• ya vedanÄ• ya ... pe ... saÃ±Ã±Ä• ya ... pe ... cetanÄ• kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡assa nÄ• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ. yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ atthi Ä• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ, atthi kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡assa nÄ• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ.

yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ na cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ. yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjha cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ, atthi na cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ. yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ na
... na ghÄ• nÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... na jivhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... na kÄ• yÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ. yaá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ atthi kÄ• yÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ, atthi na kÄ• yÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ.

yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ na rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ. yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• h rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ, atthi na rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ \Ee 129/. yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ, t saddÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... na gandhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... na rasÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... na phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ. yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ atthi phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ•
phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ.

yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ na cakkhudhÄ• tu. yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattika cakkhudhÄ• tu, atthi na cakkhudhÄ• tu. yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ na sotadhÄ ghÄ• nadhÄ• tu ... pe ... na jivhÄ• dhÄ• tu ... pe ... na kÄ• yadhÄ• tu. yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ atthi kÄ• yadhÄ• tu, atthi na kÄ• yadhÄ• tu.

yaá¹ƒ \Ne 162/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ na rÅ«padhÄ• tu. yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ b atthi rÅ«padhÄ• tu, atthi na rÅ«padhÄ• tu. yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ na sado na gandhadhÄ• tu ... pe ... na \Se 190/ rasadhÄ• tu ... pe ... na phoá¹-á¹-habbadhÄ• tu. yaá bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ atthi phoá¹-á¹-habbadhÄ• tu, atthi na phoá¹-á¹-habbadhÄ• tu.

yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ na cakkhundriyaá¹ƒ. yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattik cakkhundriyaá¹ƒ, atthi na cakkhundriyaá¹ƒ. yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ na sotin na ghÄ• nindriyaá¹ƒ ... pe ... na jivhindriyaá¹ƒ ... pe ... na kÄ• yindriyaá¹ƒ. yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«pa ajjhattikaá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ atthi kÄ• yindriyaá¹ƒ, atthi na kÄ• yindriyaá¹ƒ.

yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ na itthindriyaá¹ƒ. yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ itthindriyaá¹ƒ, atthi na itthindriyaá¹ƒ.

yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ na purisindriyaá¹ƒ. yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hira purisindriyaá¹ƒ, atthi na purisindriyaá¹ƒ.

yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ na jÄ«vitindriyaá¹ƒ. yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hira jÄ«vitindriyaá¹ƒ, atthi na jÄ«vitindriyaá¹ƒ.

yaá¹ƒ \Be 151/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ na kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±atti. yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá atthi kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±atti, atthi na kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±atti.

yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ na vacÄ«viÃ±Ã±atti. yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hir vacÄ«viÃ±Ã±atti, atthi na vacÄ«viÃ±Ã±atti.

yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ na Ä• kÄ• sadhÄ• tu. yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• h Ä• kÄ• sadhÄ• tu, atthi na Ä• kÄ• sadhÄ• tu.

yaá¹ƒ \Ne 163/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ na Ä• podhÄ• tu. yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ b atthi Ä• podhÄ• tu, atthi na Ä• podhÄ• tu.

yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ rÅ«passa na lahutÄ• . yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• h rÅ«passa lahutÄ• , atthi rÅ«passa na lahutÄ• .

yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ rÅ«passa na mudutÄ• . yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ \Ee taá¹ƒ atthi rÅ«passa mudutÄ• , atthi rÅ«passa na mudutÄ• .

yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ rÅ«passa na kammaÃ±Ã±atÄ• . yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«pa atthi rÅ«passa kammaÃ±Ã±atÄ• , atthi rÅ«passa na kammaÃ±Ã±atÄ• .

yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ rÅ«passa na upacayo. yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• rÅ«passa upacayo, atthi \Se 191/ rÅ«passa na upacayo.

yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ rÅ«passa na santati. yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hi rÅ«passa santati, atthi rÅ«passa na santati.

yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ rÅ«passa na jaratÄ• . yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• h rÅ«passa jaratÄ• , atthi rÅ«passa na jaratÄ• .

yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ rÅ«passa na aniccatÄ• . yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ rÅ«passa aniccatÄ• , atthi rÅ«passa na aniccatÄ• .

yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ na kabaá¸·Ä«kÄ• ro Ä• hÄ• ro. yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«pa atthi kabaá¸·Ä«kÄ• ro Ä• hÄ• ro, atthi na kabaá¸·Ä«kÄ• ro Ä• hÄ• ro.

evaá¹ƒ tividhena rÅ«pasaá¹…gaho.

tikaá¹ƒ.

catukkaá¹ƒ

catubbidhena \Be 152/ \Ne 164/ rÅ«pasaá¹…gaho ---

<586> yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ upÄ• dÄ• , taá¹ƒ atthi upÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ, atthi anupÄ• diá¹‡á rÅ«paá¹ƒ no upÄ• dÄ• , taá¹ƒ atthi upÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ, atthi anupÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ.

yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ upÄ• dÄ• , taá¹ƒ atthi upÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡upÄ• dÄ• niyaá¹ƒ, atthi anupÄ• d yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ no upÄ• dÄ• , taá¹ƒ atthi upÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡upÄ• dÄ• niyaá¹ƒ, atthi anupÄ yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ upÄ• dÄ• , taá¹ƒ atthi sappaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ, atthi appaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ. yaá¹ƒ ta upÄ• dÄ• , taá¹ƒ atthi sappaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ, atthi appaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ.

yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ upÄ• dÄ• , taá¹ƒ atthi oá¸·Ä• rikaá¹ƒ, atthi sukhumaá¹ƒ. yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ r taá¹ƒ atthi oá¸·Ä• rikaá¹ƒ, atthi sukhumaá¹ƒ.

yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ upÄ• dÄ• , taá¹ƒ atthi dÅ«re, atthi santike. yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ no u dÅ«re, atthi santike.

yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ upÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ atthi sanidassanaá¹ƒ, atthi anidassanaá¹ƒ. y anupÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ atthi sanidassanaá¹ƒ, atthi anidassanaá¹ƒ.

yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ upÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ atthi sappaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ atthi appaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ.
anupÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ atthi sappaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ, atthi appaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ.

yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ upÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ atthi mahÄ• bhÅ«taá¹ƒ, atthi \Se 192/ na m taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ anupÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ atthi mahÄ• bhÅ«taá¹ƒ \Ee 131/, atthi na mahÄ• yaá¹ƒ \Ne 165/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ upÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ atthi oá¸·Ä• rikaá¹ƒ, atthi sukhuma rÅ«paá¹ƒ anupÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ atthi oá¸·Ä• rikaá¹ƒ, atthi sukhumaá¹ƒ.

yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ upÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ atthi dÅ«re, atthi santike. yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«pa anupÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ atthi dÅ«re, atthi santike.

yaá¹ƒ \Be 153/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ upÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡upÄ• dÄ• niyaá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ atthi sanidassanaá¹ƒ, yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ anupÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡upÄ• dÄ• niyaá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ atthi sanidassanaá¹ƒ, atthi a yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ upÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡upÄ• dÄ• niyaá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ atthi sappaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ, atthi ap taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ anupÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡upÄ• dÄ• niyaá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ atthi sappaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ, atthi appaá¹

yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ upÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡upÄ• dÄ• niyaá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ atthi mahÄ• bhÅ«taá¹ƒ, atthi n taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ anupÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡upÄ• dÄ• niyaá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ atthi mahÄ• bhÅ«taá¹ƒ, atthi na ma yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ upÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡upÄ• dÄ• niyaá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ atthi oá¸·Ä• rikaá¹ƒ, atthi sukhu rÅ«paá¹ƒ anupÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡upÄ• dÄ• niyaá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ atthi oá¸·Ä• rikaá¹ƒ, atthi sukhumaá¹ƒ.

yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ upÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡upÄ• dÄ• niyaá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ atthi dÅ«re, atthi santike. yaá¹ anupÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡upÄ• dÄ• niyaá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ atthi dÅ«re, atthi santike.

yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ sappaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ atthi indriyaá¹ƒ, atthi na indriyaá¹ƒ. yaá¹ƒ taá¹ appaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ atthi indriyaá¹ƒ, atthi na indriyaá¹ƒ.

yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ sappaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ atthi mahÄ• bhÅ«taá¹ƒ, atthi na mahÄ• bhÅ« rÅ«paá¹ƒ appaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ atthi mahÄ• bhÅ«taá¹ƒ, atthi na mahÄ• bhÅ«taá¹ƒ.

yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ indriyaá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ atthi oá¸·Ä• rikaá¹ƒ, atthi sukhumaá¹ƒ. yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ r indriyaá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ atthi oá¸·Ä• rikaá¹ƒ, atthi sukhumaá¹ƒ.

yaá¹ƒ \Ne 166/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ indriyaá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ atthi dÅ«re, atthi santike. yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«pa indriyaá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ atthi dÅ«re, atthi santike.

yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ mahÄ• bhÅ«taá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ atthi oá¸·Ä• rikaá¹ƒ, atthi sukhumaá¹ƒ. yaá¹ mahÄ• bhÅ«taá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ atthi oá¸·Ä• rikaá¹ƒ, atthi sukhumaá¹ƒ.

yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ mahÄ• bhÅ«taá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ atthi dÅ«re, atthi \Se 193/ santike. yaá¹ƒ taá mahÄ• bhÅ«taá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ atthi dÅ«re, atthi santike.

diá¹-á¹-haá¹ƒ sutaá¹ƒ mutaá¹ƒ viÃ±Ã±Ä• taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ.

evaá¹ƒ catubbidhena rÅ«pasaá¹…gaho.

catukkaá¹ƒ.

paÃ±cakaá¹ƒ

paÃ±cavidhena \Ee 132/ \Be 154/ rÅ«pasaá¹…gaho ---

<587> pathavÄ«dhÄ• tu, Ä• podhÄ• tu, tejodhÄ• tu, vÄ• yodhÄ• tu, yaÃ±ca rÅ«paá¹ƒ upÄ•

evaá¹ƒ paÃ±cavidhena rÅ«pasaá¹…gaho.

paÃ±cakaá¹ƒ.

chakkaá¹ƒ

chabbidhena rÅ«pasaá¹…gaho ---

<588> cakkhuviÃ±Ã±eyyaá¹ƒ \Ne 167/ rÅ«paá¹ƒ, sotaviÃ±Ã±eyyaá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ, ghÄ• naviÃ
jivhÄ• viÃ±Ã±eyyaá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ, kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±eyyaá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ, manoviÃ±Ã±eyyaá¹ƒ rÅ«p evaá¹ƒ chabbidhena rÅ«pasaá¹…gaho.

chakkaá¹ƒ.

sattakaá¹ƒ

sattavidhena rÅ«pasaá¹…gaho ---

<589> cakkhuviÃ±Ã±eyyaá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ, sotaviÃ±Ã±eyyaá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ, ghÄ• naviÃ±Ã±eyya jivhÄ• viÃ±Ã±eyyaá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ, kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±eyyaá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ, manodhÄ• tuviÃ±Ã±eyyaá manoviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡adhÄ• tuviÃ±Ã±eyyaá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ.

evaá¹ƒ sattavidhena rÅ«pasaá¹…gaho.

sattakaá¹ƒ.

aá¹-á¹-hakaá¹ƒ

aá¹-á¹-havidhena rÅ«pasaá¹…gaho ---

<590> cakkhuviÃ±Ã±eyyaá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ, sotaviÃ±Ã±eyyaá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ, ghÄ• naviÃ±Ã±eyya
jivhÄ• viÃ±Ã±eyyaá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ, kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±eyyaá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ, atthi sukhasamphassaá¹ƒ manodhÄ• tuviÃ±Ã±eyyaá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ, manoviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡adhÄ• tuviÃ±Ã±eyyaá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹

evaá¹ƒ aá¹-á¹-havidhena rÅ«pasaá¹…gaho.

aá¹-á¹-hakaá¹ƒ.

navakaá¹ƒ

navavidhena \Se 194/ \Be 155/ \Ne 168/ rÅ«pasaá¹…gaho ---

<591> cakkhundriyaá¹ƒ, sotindriyaá¹ƒ, ghÄ• nindriyaá¹ƒ, jivhindriyaá¹ƒ kÄ• yindriyaá¹ƒ, itth purisindriyaá¹ƒ, jÄ«vitindriyaá¹ƒ, yaÃ±ca rÅ«paá¹ƒ na indriyaá¹ƒ.

evaá¹ƒ navavidhena rÅ«pasaá¹…gaho.

navakaá¹ƒ.

dasakaá¹ƒ

dasavidhena \Ee 133/ rÅ«pasaá¹…gaho ---

<592> cakkhundriyaá¹ƒ, sotindriyaá¹ƒ, ghÄ• nindriyaá¹ƒ, jivhindriyaá¹ƒ kÄ• yindriyaá¹ƒ, itth purisindriyaá¹ƒ, jÄ«vitindriyaá¹ƒ, na indriyaá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ atthi sappaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ, atthi appaá¹-evaá¹ƒ dasavidhena rÅ«pasaá¹…gaho.

dasakaá¹ƒ.

ekÄ• dasakaá¹ƒ

ekÄ• dasavidhena rÅ«pasaá¹…gaho ---

<593> cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ, sotÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ, ghÄ• nÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ, jivhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ, kÄ• yÄ saddÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ \Ne 169/, gandhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ, rasÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ, phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatana anidassanaappaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ {anidassanaá¹ƒ appaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ (Ce Se) } dhammÄ• yatanapariy evaá¹ƒ ekÄ• dasavidhena rÅ«pasaá¹…gaho.

ekÄ• dasakaá¹ƒ.

mÄ• tikÄ• .

rÅ«pavibhatti

ekakaniddeso

<594> sabbaá¹ƒ \Be 156/ rÅ«paá¹ƒ na hetumeva, ahetukameva, hetuvippayuttameva, sapp saá¹…khatameva, rÅ«pameva, lokiyameva, sÄ• savameva, saá¹ƒyojaniyameva, ganthaniya yoganiyameva, nÄ«varaá¹‡iyameva, parÄ• maá¹-á¹-hameva, upÄ• dÄ• niyameva, saá¹ƒkile anÄ• rammaá¹‡ameva, acetasikameva, cittavippayuttameva, nevavipÄ• kanavipÄ• kadham asaá¹ƒkiliá¹-á¹-hasaá¹ƒkilesikameva, na savitakkasavicÄ• rameva, na avitakkavicÄ• ramatta avitakkaavicÄ• rameva \Se 195/, na pÄ«tisahagatameva, na sukhasahagatameva, na upekk dassanena na bhÄ• vanÄ• ya pahÄ• tabbameva, neva dassanena na bhÄ• vanÄ• ya pahÄ• na apacayagÄ• mimeva, nevasekkhanÄ• sekkhameva, parittameva, kÄ• mÄ• vacarameva, arÅ«pÄ• vacarameva, pariyÄ• pannameva, no apariyÄ• pannameva, aniyatameva, aniyyÄ• viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡ehi viÃ±Ã±eyyameva, aniccameva, jarÄ• bhibhÅ«tameva.

evaá¹ƒ ekavidhena rÅ«pasaá¹…gaho.

ekakaniddeso.

dukaniddeso

upÄ• dÄ• bhÄ• janÄ«yaá¹ƒ

<595> katamaá¹ƒ \Ee 134/ \Ne 170/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ upÄ• dÄ• ? cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ, sotÄ• jivhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ, kÄ• yÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ, rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ, saddÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ, gandhÄ• yatan itthindriyaá¹ƒ, purisindriyaá¹ƒ, jÄ«vitindriyaá¹ƒ, kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±atti, vacÄ«viÃ±Ã±atti, Ä• kÄ• s lahutÄ• , rÅ«passa mudutÄ• , rÅ«passa kammaÃ±Ã±atÄ• , rÅ«passa upacayo, rÅ«passa sa rÅ«passa aniccatÄ• , kabaá¸·Ä«kÄ• ro Ä• hÄ• ro.

<596> katamaá¹ƒ \Be 157/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ? yaá¹ƒ cakkhu {cakkhuá¹ƒ (
mahÄ• bhÅ«tÄ• naá¹ƒ upÄ• dÄ• ya pasÄ• do attabhÄ• vapariyÄ• panno anidassano sappa anidassanena sappaá¹-ighena rÅ«paá¹ƒ sanidassanaá¹ƒ sappaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ passi vÄ• passa vÄ• , cakkhuá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ cakkhudhÄ• tu pesÄ• cakkhundriyaá¹ pesÄ• samuddo peso paá¹‡á¸• araá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ khettaá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ vatthuá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ nettaá¹ petaá¹ƒ orimaá¹ƒ \Se 196/ tÄ«raá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ suÃ±Ã±o gÄ• mopeso --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹

<597> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ? yaá¹ƒ cakkhu catunnaá¹ƒ mahÄ• bh
attabhÄ• vapariyÄ• panno anidassano sappaá¹-igho, yamhi cakkhumhi anidassanamhi sapp sanidassanaá¹ƒ sappaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ paá¹-ihaÃ±Ã±i vÄ• paá¹-ihaÃ±Ã±ati vÄ• paá¹-ihaÃ±Ã±iss cakkhuá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ cakkhudhÄ• tu pesÄ• cakkhundriyaá¹ƒ peta
samuddo peso paá¹‡á¸• araá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ khettaá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ vatthuá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ nettaá¹ƒ petaá
orimaá¹ƒ tÄ«raá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ suÃ±Ã±o gÄ• mo peso --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ cakkhÄ• yatana

<598> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ? yaá¹ƒ cakkhu catunnaá¹ƒ mahÄ• bh attabhÄ• vapariyÄ• panno anidassano sappaá¹-igho, yaá¹ƒ cakkhu anidassanaá¹ƒ sappaá¹-sanidassanamhi sappaá¹-ighamhi paá¹-ihaÃ±Ã±i vÄ• paá¹-ihaÃ±Ã±ati vÄ• paá¹-ihaÃ±Ã±is cakkhuá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ cakkhudhÄ• tu pesÄ• cakkhundriyaá¹ƒ peta \Ne 171/ samuddo peso paá¹‡á¸• araá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ khettaá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ vatthuá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ netta petaá¹ƒ orimaá¹ƒ tÄ«raá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ suÃ±Ã±o gÄ• mo peso --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ cakkhÄ

<599> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ? yaá¹ƒ cakkhu catunnaá¹ƒ mahÄ• bh
attabhÄ• vapariyÄ• panno anidassano sappaá¹-igho, yaá¹ƒ cakkhuá¹ƒ \Ee 135/ nissÄ• ya rÅ cakkhusamphasso uppajji vÄ• uppajjati vÄ• uppajjissati vÄ• uppajje vÄ• ... pe ... yaá¹ƒ ca rÅ«paá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha cakkhusamphassajÄ• vedanÄ• ... pe ... saÃ±Ã±Ä• ... pe ... cetanÄ• .
cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ \Se 197/ uppajji vÄ• uppajjati vÄ• uppajjissati vÄ• uppajje vÄ• .
cakkhuá¹ƒ nissÄ• ya rÅ«pÄ• rammaá¹‡o cakkhusamphasso uppajji vÄ• uppajjati vÄ• uppa pe ... yaá¹ƒ cakkhuá¹ƒ nissÄ• ya rÅ«pÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• cakkhusamphassajÄ• vedanÄ• ... p cetanÄ• ... pe ... cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ \Be 158/ uppajji vÄ• uppajjati vÄ• uppajjissati v
cakkhuá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ cakkhudhÄ• tu pesÄ• cakkhundriyaá¹ƒ peta
samuddo peso paá¹‡á¸• araá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ khettaá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ vatthuá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ nettaá¹ƒ petaá
orimaá¹ƒ tÄ«raá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ suÃ±Ã±o gÄ• mo peso --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ cakkhÄ• yatana

<600> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ sotÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ? yaá¹ƒ sotaá¹ƒ catunnaá¹ƒ mahÄ• bhÅ«
attabhÄ• vapariyÄ• panno anidassano sappaá¹-igho, yena sotena anidassanena sappaá¹-ig sappaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ suá¹‡i vÄ• suá¹‡Ä• ti vÄ• suá¹‡issati vÄ• suá¹‡e vÄ• , sotaá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ s sotadhÄ• tu pesÄ• sotindriyaá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ loko peso dvÄ• rÄ• pesÄ• samuddo peso paá¹‡á petaá¹ƒ vatthuá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ orimaá¹ƒ tÄ«raá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ suÃ±Ã±o gÄ• mo peso --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ sotÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ.

<601> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ sotÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ? yaá¹ƒ sotaá¹ƒ catunnaá¹ƒ mahÄ• bhÅ«
attabhÄ• vapariyÄ• panno anidassano sappaá¹-igho, yamhi sotamhi anidassanamhi sappaá sappaá¹-igho paá¹-ihaÃ±Ã±i vÄ• paá¹-ihaÃ±Ã±ati vÄ• paá¹-ihaÃ±Ã±issati vÄ• paá¹-ihaÃ±Ã sotÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ sotadhÄ• tu pesÄ• sotindriyaá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ \Se 198/ loko peso dvÄ•
paá¹‡á¸• araá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ khettaá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ vatthuá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ orimaá¹ƒ tÄ«raá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ suÃ idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ sotÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ.

<602> katamaá¹ƒ \Ne 172/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ sotÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ? yaá¹ƒ sotaá¹ƒ catunnaá¹ƒ ma pasÄ• do attabhÄ• vapariyÄ• panno anidassano sappaá¹-igho, yaá¹ƒ sotaá¹ƒ anidassanaá¹ anidassanamhi sappaá¹-ighamhi paá¹-ihaÃ±Ã±i vÄ• paá¹-ihaÃ±Ã±ati vÄ• paá¹-ihaÃ±Ã±iss sotaá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ sotÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ sotadhÄ• tu pesÄ• sotindriyaá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ loko pes peso paá¹‡á¸• araá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ khettaá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ vatthuá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ orimaá¹ƒ tÄ«raá¹ƒ petaá
--- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ sotÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ.

<603> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ sotÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ? yaá¹ƒ \Ee 136/ sotaá¹ƒ catunnaá¹ƒ ma pasÄ• do attabhÄ• vapariyÄ• panno anidassano sappaá¹-igho, yaá¹ƒ sotaá¹ƒ nissÄ• ya sad uppajji vÄ• uppajjati vÄ• uppajjissati \Be 159/ vÄ• uppajje vÄ• ... pe ... yaá¹ƒ sotaá¹ƒ niss Ä• rabbha sotasamphassajÄ• vedanÄ• ... pe ... saÃ±Ã±Ä• ... pe ... cetanÄ• ... pe ... sotav uppajji vÄ• uppajjati vÄ• uppajjissati vÄ• uppajje vÄ• ... pe ... yaá¹ƒ sotaá¹ƒ nissÄ• ya sad sotasamphasso uppajji vÄ• uppajjati vÄ• uppajjissati vÄ• uppajje vÄ• ... pe ... yaá¹ƒ sotaá saddÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• sotasamphassajÄ• vedanÄ• ... pe ... saÃ±Ã±Ä• ... pe ... cetanÄ• ... sotaviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ uppajji vÄ• uppajjati vÄ• uppajjissati vÄ• uppajje vÄ• , sotaá¹ƒ peta petaá¹ƒ sotadhÄ• tu pesÄ• sotindriyaá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ loko \Se 199/ peso dvÄ• rÄ• pesÄ• sam petaá¹ƒ khettaá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ vatthuá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ orimaá¹ƒ tÄ«raá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ suÃ±Ã±o gÄ• mo p rÅ«paá¹ƒ sotÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ.

<604> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ghÄ• nÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ? yaá¹ƒ ghÄ• naá¹ƒ catunnaá¹ƒ mah pasÄ• do attabhÄ• vapariyÄ• panno anidassano sappaá¹-igho, yena ghÄ• nena anidassane anidassanaá¹ƒ sappaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ ghÄ• yi vÄ• ghÄ• yati vÄ• ghÄ• yissati vÄ• ghÄ• ye vÄ• , ghÄ• nÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ ghÄ• nadhÄ• tu pesÄ• ghÄ• nindriyaá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ loko peso dv
paá¹‡á¸• araá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ khettaá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ vatthuá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ orimaá¹ƒ tÄ«raá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ suÃ idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ghÄ• nÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ.

<605> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ghÄ• nÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ? yaá¹ƒ ghÄ• naá¹ƒ catunnaá¹ƒ mah pasÄ• do attabhÄ• vapariyÄ• panno anidassano sappaá¹-igho, yamhi ghÄ• namhi anidassa anidassano sappaá¹-igho paá¹-ihaÃ±Ã±i vÄ• paá¹-ihaÃ±Ã±ati vÄ• paá¹-ihaÃ±Ã±issati vÄ• ghÄ• naá¹ƒ \Ne 173/ petaá¹ƒ ghÄ• nÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ ghÄ• nadhÄ• tu pesÄ• ghÄ• nin dvÄ• rÄ• pesÄ• samuddo peso paá¹‡á¸• araá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ khettaá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ vatthuá¹ƒ petaá petaá¹ƒ suÃ±Ã±o gÄ• mo peso --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ghÄ• nÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ.

<606> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ghÄ• nÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ? yaá¹ƒ ghÄ• naá¹ƒ catunnaá¹ƒ mah pasÄ• do attabhÄ• vapariyÄ• panno anidassano sappaá¹-igho, yaá¹ƒ ghÄ• naá¹ƒ anidassan gandhamhi anidassanamhi sappaá¹-ighamhi paá¹-ihaÃ±Ã±i vÄ• paá¹-ihaÃ±Ã±ati vÄ• paá¹-paá¹-ihaÃ±Ã±e vÄ• , ghÄ• naá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ ghÄ• nÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ \Ee 137/ ghÄ• nadhÄ petaá¹ƒ loko peso dvÄ• rÄ• pesÄ• samuddo \Se 200/ peso \Be 160/ paá¹‡á¸• araá¹ƒ petaá vatthuá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ orimaá¹ƒ tÄ«raá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ suÃ±Ã±o gÄ• mopeso --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá

<607> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ghÄ• nÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ? yaá¹ƒ ghÄ• naá¹ƒ catunnaá¹ƒ mah pasÄ• do attabhÄ• vapariyÄ• panno anidassano sappaá¹-igho, yaá¹ƒ ghÄ• naá¹ƒ nissÄ• ya ghÄ• nasamphasso uppajji vÄ• uppajjati vÄ• uppajjissati vÄ• uppajje vÄ• ... pe ... yaá¹ƒ g gandhaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha ghÄ• nasamphassajÄ• vedanÄ• ... pe ... saÃ±Ã±Ä• ... pe ... cetanÄ ghÄ• naviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ uppajji vÄ• uppajjati vÄ• uppajjissati vÄ• uppajje vÄ• ... pe ... y nissÄ• ya gandhÄ• rammaá¹‡o ghÄ• nasamphasso uppajji vÄ• uppajjati vÄ• uppajjissati v yaá¹ƒ ghÄ• naá¹ƒ nissÄ• ya gandhÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• ghÄ• nasamphassajÄ• vedanÄ• ... pe
... pe ... ghÄ• naviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ uppajji vÄ• uppajjati vÄ• uppajjissati vÄ• uppajje vÄ• , ghÄ• nÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ ghÄ• nadhÄ• tu pesÄ• ghÄ• nindriyaá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ loko peso dv
paá¹‡á¸• araá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ khettaá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ vatthuá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ orimaá¹ƒ tÄ«raá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ su idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ghÄ• nÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ.

<608> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ jivhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ? yÄ• jivhÄ• catunnaá¹ƒ mahÄ• bhÅ«tÄ attabhÄ• vapariyÄ• panno anidassano sappaá¹-igho, yÄ• ya jivhÄ• ya anidassanÄ• ya sapp anidassanaá¹ƒ sappaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ sÄ• yi vÄ• sÄ• yati vÄ• sÄ• yissati vÄ• sÄ• ye vÄ• , jivhÄ
petaá¹ƒ jivhÄ• dhÄ• tu pesÄ• jivhindriyaá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ loko peso dvÄ• rÄ• pesÄ• samuddo p
petaá¹ƒ khettaá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ vatthuá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ orimaá¹ƒ tÄ«raá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ suÃ±Ã±o gÄ• mo p rÅ«paá¹ƒ jivhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ.

<609> katamaá¹ƒ \Ne 174/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ jivhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ? yÄ• jivhÄ• catunnaá¹ƒ mahÄ pasÄ• do attabhÄ• vapariyÄ• panno anidassano sappaá¹-igho, yÄ• ya jivhÄ• ya anidassanÄ anidassano sappaá¹-igho paá¹-ihaÃ±Ã±i vÄ• paá¹-ihaÃ±Ã±ati vÄ• paá¹-ihaÃ±Ã±issati vÄ•
pesÄ• jivhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ jivhÄ• dhÄ• tu pesÄ• jivhindriyaá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ loko peso dvÄ
paá¹‡á¸• araá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ khettaá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ vatthuá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ orimaá¹ƒ tÄ«raá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ su idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ jivhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ.

<610> katamaá¹ƒ \Ee 138/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ jivhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ? yÄ• jivhÄ• catunnaá¹ƒ mahÄ
pasÄ• do attabhÄ• vapariyÄ• panno anidassano sappaá¹-igho, yÄ• \Be 161/ jivhÄ• anidas anidassanamhi sappaá¹-ighamhi paá¹-ihaÃ±Ã±i vÄ• paá¹-ihaÃ±Ã±ati vÄ• paá¹-ihaÃ±Ã±iss jivhÄ• pesÄ• jivhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ jivhÄ• dhÄ• tu pesÄ• jivhindriyaá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ loko pe
peso paá¹‡á¸• araá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ khettaá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ vatthuá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ orimaá¹ƒ tÄ«raá¹ƒ petaá
--- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ jivhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ.

<611> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ jivhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ? yÄ• jivhÄ• catunnaá¹ƒ mahÄ• bhÅ«tÄ attabhÄ• vapariyÄ• panno anidassano sappaá¹-igho, yaá¹ƒ jivhaá¹ƒ nissÄ• ya rasaá¹ƒ Ä• ra uppajji vÄ• uppajjati vÄ• uppajjissati vÄ• uppajje vÄ• ... pe ... yaá¹ƒ jivhaá¹ƒ nissÄ• ya ras jivhÄ• samphassajÄ• vedanÄ• ... pe ... saÃ±Ã±Ä• ... pe ... cetanÄ• ... pe ... jivhÄ• viÃ±Ã±
uppajji vÄ• uppajjati vÄ• uppajjissati vÄ• uppajje vÄ• ... pe ... yaá¹ƒ jivhaá¹ƒ nissÄ• ya ras jivhÄ• samphasso uppajji vÄ• uppajjati vÄ• uppajjissati vÄ• uppajje vÄ• ... pe ... yaá¹ƒ jivh rasÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• jivhÄ• samphassajÄ• vedanÄ• ... pe ... saÃ±Ã±Ä• ... pe ... cetanÄ• .. jivhÄ• viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ uppajji vÄ• uppajjati vÄ• uppajjissati vÄ• uppajje vÄ• , jivhÄ• pe
petaá¹ƒ jivhÄ• dhÄ• tu pesÄ• jivhindriyaá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ loko peso dvÄ• rÄ• pesÄ• samuddo p khettaá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ vatthuá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ orimaá¹ƒ tÄ«raá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ suÃ±Ã±o gÄ• mo peso --- id jivhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ.

<612> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ kÄ• yÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ? yo kÄ• yo catunnaá¹ƒ mahÄ• bhÅ«tÄ attabhÄ• vapariyÄ• panno anidassano sappaá¹-igho, yena kÄ• yena anidassanena sappaá¹ anidassanasappaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ \Ne 175/ phusi vÄ• phusati vÄ• phusissati vÄ• phuse vÄ• , kÄ petaá¹ƒ kÄ• yadhÄ• tu pesÄ• kÄ• yindriyaá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ loko peso dvÄ• rÄ• pesÄ• samuddo
khettaá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ vatthuá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ orimaá¹ƒ tÄ«raá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ suÃ±Ã±o gÄ• mo peso --- id kÄ• yÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ.

<613> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ kÄ• yÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ? yo kÄ• yo catunnaá¹ƒ mahÄ• bhÅ«tÄ
attabhÄ• vapariyÄ• panno anidassano sappaá¹-igho, yamhi kÄ• yamhi anidassanamhi sapp anidassano sappaá¹-igho paá¹-ihaÃ±Ã±i vÄ• paá¹-ihaÃ±Ã±ati vÄ• paá¹-ihaÃ±Ã±issati \Ee 1 vÄ• , kÄ• yo peso kÄ• yÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ kÄ• yadhÄ• tu pesÄ• kÄ• yindriyaá¹ƒ \Se 203 pesÄ• samuddo peso paá¹‡á¸• araá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ khettaá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ \Be 162/ vatthuá¹ƒ petaá¹ petaá¹ƒ suÃ±Ã±o gÄ• mo peso --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ kÄ• yÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ.

<614> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ kÄ• yÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ? yo kÄ• yo catunnaá¹ƒ mahÄ• bhÅ«tÄ
attabhÄ• vapariyÄ• panno anidassano sappaá¹-igho, yo kÄ• yo anidassano sappaá¹-igho ph anidassanamhi sappaá¹-ighamhi paá¹-ihaÃ±Ã±i vÄ• paá¹-ihaÃ±Ã±ati vÄ• paá¹-ihaÃ±Ã±iss
kÄ• yo peso kÄ• yÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ kÄ• yadhÄ• tu pesÄ• kÄ• yindriyaá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ loko

peso paá¹‡á¸• araá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ khettaá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ vatthuá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ orimaá¹ƒ tÄ«raá¹ƒ petaá
--- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ kÄ• yÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ.

<615> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ kÄ• yÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ? yo kÄ• yo catunnaá¹ƒ mahÄ• bhÅ«tÄ attabhÄ• vapariyÄ• panno anidassano sappaá¹-igho, yaá¹ƒ kÄ• yaá¹ƒ nissÄ• ya phoá¹-á¹-ha kÄ• yasamphasso uppajji vÄ• uppajjati vÄ• uppajjissati vÄ• uppajje vÄ• ... pe ... yaá¹ƒ kÄ phoá¹-á¹-habbaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kÄ• yasamphassajÄ• vedanÄ• ... pe ... saÃ±Ã±Ä• ... pe ... c kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ uppajji vÄ• uppajjati vÄ• uppajjissati vÄ• uppajje vÄ• ... pe ... ya phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• rammaá¹‡o kÄ• yasamphasso uppajji vÄ• uppajjati vÄ• uppajjissati vÄ• yaá¹ƒ kÄ• yaá¹ƒ nissÄ• ya phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• kÄ• yasamphassajÄ• vedanÄ• cetanÄ• ... pe ... kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ uppajji vÄ• uppajjati vÄ• uppajjissati \Se 204/ vÄ peso kÄ• yÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ kÄ• yadhÄ• tu pesÄ• kÄ• yindriyaá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ loko peso d
peso paá¹‡á¸• araá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ khettaá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ vatthuá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ orimaá¹ƒ tÄ«raá¹ƒ petaá
--- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ kÄ• yÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ.

<616> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ? yaá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ catunnaá¹ƒ mahÄ• b
vaá¹‡á¹‡anibhÄ• sanidassanaá¹ƒ sappaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ nÄ«laá¹ƒ pÄ«takaá¹ƒ lohitakaá¹ƒ odÄ• t maÃ±jiá¹-á¹-hakaá¹ƒ {maÃ±jeá¹-á¹-hakaá¹ƒ (Ce Se) } hari harivaá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ ambaá¹…kurava rassaá¹ƒ aá¹‡uá¹ƒ thÅ«laá¹ƒ vaá¹-á¹-aá¹ƒ parimaá¹‡á¸• alaá¹ƒ caturaá¹ƒsaá¹ƒ {caturassaá¹ chaá¸·aá¹ƒsaá¹ƒ aá¹-á¹-haá¹ƒsaá¹ƒ soá¸·asaá¹ƒsaá¹ƒ ninnaá¹ƒ thalaá¹ƒ chÄ• yÄ• Ä• tapo Ä mahikÄ• dhÅ«mo rajo candamaá¹‡á¸• alassa vaá¹‡á¹‡anibhÄ• sÅ«riyamaá¹‡á¸• alassa {s vaá¹‡á¹‡anibhÄ• tÄ• rakarÅ«pÄ• naá¹ƒ \Be 163/ vaá¹‡á¹‡anibhÄ• Ä• dÄ• samaá¹‡á¸• ala maá¹‡isaá¹…khamuttÄ• veá¸·uriyassa vaá¹‡á¹‡anibhÄ• jÄ• tarÅ«parajatassa vaá¹‡á¹‡anib atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ catunnaá¹ƒ mahÄ• bhÅ«tÄ• naá¹ƒ upÄ• dÄ• ya vaá¹‡á¹‡anibhÄ• sanidassa rÅ«paá¹ƒ sanidassanaá¹ƒ sappaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ cakkhunÄ• anidassanena sappaá¹-ighena pass vÄ• passe vÄ• , rÅ«paá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ rÅ«padhÄ• tu pesÄ• --- idaá rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ.

<617> katamaá¹ƒ \Ee 140/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ? yaá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ catunnaá¹ƒ
upÄ• dÄ• ya vaá¹‡á¹‡anibhÄ• sanidassanaá¹ƒ sappaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ nÄ«laá¹ƒ pÄ«takaá¹ƒ lohita
kÄ• á¸·akaá¹ƒ maÃ±jiá¹-á¹-hakaá¹ƒ hari harivaá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ ambaá¹…kuravaá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ dÄ«g thÅ«laá¹ƒ vaá¹-á¹-aá¹ƒ parimaá¹‡á¸• alaá¹ƒ caturaá¹ƒsaá¹ƒ chaá¸·aá¹ƒsaá¹ƒ aá¹-á¹-haá¹ƒsa ninnaá¹ƒ thalaá¹ƒ chÄ• yÄ• Ä• tapo Ä• loko andhakÄ• ro \Se 205/ abbhÄ• mahikÄ• dhÅ«
vaá¹‡á¹‡anibhÄ• sÅ«riyamaá¹‡á¸• alassa vaá¹‡á¹‡anibhÄ• tÄ• rakarÅ«pÄ• naá¹ƒ vaá¹‡á¹
vaá¹‡á¹‡anibhÄ• maá¹‡isaá¹…khamuttÄ• veá¸·uriyassa vaá¹‡á¹‡anibhÄ• jÄ• tarÅ«parajat
vÄ• panaÃ±Ã±ampi atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ catunnaá¹ƒ mahÄ• bhÅ«tÄ• naá¹ƒ upÄ• dÄ• ya vaá¹‡á¹
sappaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ, yamhi rÅ«pamhi sanidassanamhi sappaá¹-ighamhi cakkhuá¹ƒ anidassana
paá¹-ihaÃ±Ã±i vÄ• paá¹-ihaÃ±Ã±ati vÄ• paá¹-ihaÃ±Ã±issati vÄ• paá¹-ihaÃ±Ã±e vÄ• , rÅ«p

rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ rÅ«padhÄ• tu pesÄ• --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ

<618> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ? yaá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ catunnaá¹ƒ mahÄ• b
vaá¹‡á¹‡anibhÄ• sanidassanaá¹ƒ sappaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ nÄ«laá¹ƒ pÄ«takaá¹ƒ lohitakaá¹ƒ odÄ• t maÃ±jiá¹-á¹-hakaá¹ƒ hari harivaá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ ambaá¹…kuravaá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ dÄ«ghaá¹ƒ rassaá¹ƒ vaá¹-á¹-aá¹ƒ parimaá¹‡á¸• alaá¹ƒ caturaá¹ƒsaá¹ƒ chaá¸·aá¹ƒsaá¹ƒ aá¹-á¹-haá¹ƒsaá¹ƒ soá¸·a thalaá¹ƒ chÄ• yÄ• Ä• tapo Ä• loko andhakÄ• ro abbhÄ• mahikÄ• dhÅ«mo rajo candamaá sÅ«riyamaá¹‡á¸• alassa \Ne 177/ vaá¹‡á¹‡anibhÄ• tÄ• rakarÅ«pÄ• naá¹ƒ vaá¹‡á¹‡anibhÄ•
vaá¹‡á¹‡anibhÄ• maá¹‡isaá¹…khamuttÄ• veá¸·uriyassa vaá¹‡á¹‡anibhÄ• jÄ• tarÅ«parajat
vÄ• panaÃ±Ã±ampi atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ catunnaá¹ƒ mahÄ• bhÅ«tÄ• naá¹ƒ upÄ• dÄ• ya vaá¹‡á¹
sappaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ, yaá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ sanidassanaá¹ƒ sappaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ cakkhumhi anidassanan
paá¹-ihaÃ±Ã±i vÄ• paá¹-ihaÃ±Ã±ati vÄ• paá¹-ihaÃ±Ã±issati vÄ• paá¹-ihaÃ±Ã±e vÄ• , rÅ«p
rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ rÅ«padhÄ• tu pesÄ• --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ

<619> katamaá¹ƒ \Be 164/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ? yaá¹ƒ \Se 206/ rÅ«paá¹ƒ cat
upÄ• dÄ• ya vaá¹‡á¹‡anibhÄ• sanidassanaá¹ƒ sappaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ nÄ«laá¹ƒ pÄ«takaá¹ƒ lohita
kÄ• á¸·akaá¹ƒ maÃ±jiá¹-á¹-hakaá¹ƒ hari harivaá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ ambaá¹…kuravaá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ dÄ«g
thÅ«laá¹ƒ vaá¹-á¹-aá¹ƒ parimaá¹‡á¸• alaá¹ƒ caturaá¹ƒsaá¹ƒ chaá¸·aá¹ƒsaá¹ƒ aá¹-á¹-haá¹ƒsa ninnaá¹ƒ thalaá¹ƒ chÄ• yÄ• Ä• tapo Ä• loko andhakÄ• ro abbhÄ• mahikÄ• dhÅ«mo rajo c vaá¹‡á¹‡anibhÄ• sÅ«riyamaá¹‡á¸• alassa vaá¹‡á¹‡anibhÄ• tÄ• rakarÅ«pÄ• naá¹ƒ vaá¹‡á¹
vaá¹‡á¹‡anibhÄ• maá¹‡isaá¹…khamuttÄ• veá¸·uriyassa vaá¹‡á¹‡anibhÄ• jÄ• tarÅ«parajat
vÄ• panaÃ±Ã±ampi atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ catunnaá¹ƒ mahÄ• bhÅ«tÄ• naá¹ƒ upÄ• dÄ• ya vaá¹‡á¹ sappaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ, yaá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha cakkhuá¹ƒ nissÄ• ya cakkhusamphasso uppajj uppajjissati vÄ• uppajje vÄ• ... pe ... yaá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha cakkhuá¹ƒ nissÄ• ya cakkh
... pe ... saÃ±Ã±Ä• ... pe ... cetanÄ• ... pe ... cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ uppajji vÄ• uppajjat vÄ• uppajje vÄ• ... pe ... yaá¹ƒ rÅ«pÄ• rammaá¹‡o cakkhuá¹ƒ nissÄ• ya cakkhusamphasso uppajjissati vÄ• uppajje vÄ• ... pe ... yaá¹ƒ rÅ«pÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• cakkhuá¹ƒ nissÄ• ya cakk
... pe ... saÃ±Ã±Ä• ... pe ... cetanÄ• ... pe ... cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ uppajji vÄ• uppajjat
vÄ• uppajje vÄ• , rÅ«paá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ rÅ«padhÄ• tu pesÄ• --- idaá¹ƒ
rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ.

<620> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ saddÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ? yo saddo catunnaá¹ƒ mahÄ• bhÅ«tÄ•
anidassano sappaá¹-igho bherisaddo mudiá¹…gasaddo saá¹…khasaddo paá¹‡avasaddo gÄ•
sammasaddo pÄ• á¹‡isaddo sattÄ• naá¹ƒ nigghosasaddo dhÄ• tÅ«naá¹ƒ sannighÄ• tasadd
manussasaddo amanussasaddo, yo vÄ• panaÃ±Ã±opi atthi saddo catunnaá¹ƒ mahÄ• bhÅ«
sappaá¹-igho, yaá¹ƒ saddaá¹ƒ anidassanaá¹ƒ sappaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ sotena anidassanena sappa 178/ suá¹‡Ä• ti vÄ• suá¹‡issati vÄ• suá¹‡e vÄ• , saddo peso saddÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ sa taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ saddÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ.

<621> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ saddÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ? yo \Ee 141/ saddo catunnaá¹ƒ mahÄ
anidassano sappaá¹-igho bherisaddo mudiá¹…gasaddo saá¹…khasaddo paá¹‡avasaddo gÄ
sammasaddo pÄ• á¹‡isaddo sattÄ• naá¹ƒ nigghosasaddo dhÄ• tÅ«naá¹ƒ sannighÄ• tasadd
manussasaddo amanussasaddo, yo vÄ• panaÃ±Ã±opi atthi saddo catunnaá¹ƒ mahÄ• bhÅ« anidassano sappaá¹-igho, yamhi saddamhi anidassanamhi sappaá¹-ighamhi sotaá¹ƒ anidas paá¹-ihaÃ±Ã±i vÄ• paá¹-ihaÃ±Ã±ati vÄ• paá¹-ihaÃ±Ã±issati vÄ• paá¹-ihaÃ±Ã±e vÄ• , sadd petaá¹ƒ saddadhÄ• tu pesÄ• --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ saddÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ.

<622> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ saddÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ? yo saddo catunnaá¹ƒ mahÄ• bhÅ«tÄ
sappaá¹-igho bherisaddo mudiá¹…gasaddo saá¹…khasaddo paá¹‡avasaddo gÄ«tasaddo vÄ
pÄ• á¹‡isaddo sattÄ• naá¹ƒ nigghosasaddo dhÄ• tÅ«naá¹ƒ sannighÄ• tasaddo vÄ• tasaddo
manussasaddo amanussasaddo, yo vÄ• panaÃ±Ã±opi atthi saddo catunnaá¹ƒ mahÄ• bhÅ« sappaá¹-igho, yo saddo anidassano sappaá¹-igho sotamhi anidassanamhi sappaá¹-ighamhi paá¹-ihaÃ±Ã±ati vÄ• paá¹-ihaÃ±Ã±issati vÄ• paá¹-ihaÃ±Ã±e vÄ• , saddo peso saddÄ• yata pesÄ• --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ saddÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ.

<623> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ saddÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ? yo saddo catunnaá¹ƒ mahÄ• bhÅ«tÄ
sappaá¹-igho bherisaddo mudiá¹…gasaddo saá¹…khasaddo paá¹‡avasaddo gÄ«tasaddo vÄ
pÄ• á¹‡isaddo sattÄ• naá¹ƒ nigghosasaddo dhÄ• tÅ«naá¹ƒ sannighÄ• tasaddo vÄ• tasaddo amanussasaddo, yo vÄ• panaÃ±Ã±opi atthi saddo catunnaá¹ƒ mahÄ• bhÅ«tÄ• naá¹ƒ upÄ• yaá¹ƒ saddaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha sotaá¹ƒ nissÄ• ya sotasamphasso uppajji vÄ• uppajjati vÄ• upp
... pe ... yaá¹ƒ saddaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha sotaá¹ƒ nissÄ• ya sotasamphassajÄ• vedanÄ• ... pe ...
cetanÄ• ... pe ... sotaviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ uppajji vÄ• uppajjati vÄ• uppajjissati vÄ• uppajje
saddÄ• rammaá¹‡o sotaá¹ƒ nissÄ• ya sotasamphasso uppajji vÄ• uppajjati vÄ• uppajjissat
... yaá¹ƒ saddÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• \Ne 179/ sotaá¹ƒ nissÄ• ya sotasamphassajÄ• vedanÄ• ... p cetanÄ• ... pe ... sotaviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ uppajji vÄ• uppajjati vÄ• uppajjissati vÄ• uppajje
saddÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ saddadhÄ• tu pesÄ• --- idaá¹ƒ \Se 209/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ saddÄ•

<624> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ gandhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ? yo gandho catunnaá¹ƒ mahÄ• bhÅ«
sappaá¹-igho mÅ«lagandho sÄ• ragandho tacagandho pattagandho pupphagandho phalaga sugandho duggandho \Be 166/, yo vÄ• panaÃ±Ã±opi atthi gandho catunnaá¹ƒ mahÄ• bhÅ« sappaá¹-igho, yaá¹ƒ gandhaá¹ƒ anidassanaá¹ƒ sappaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ ghÄ• nena anidassanena s ghÄ• yati vÄ• ghÄ• yissati vÄ• ghÄ• ye vÄ• , gandho peso gandhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ ga taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ gandhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ.

<625> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ gandhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ? yo gandho catunnaá¹ƒ mahÄ• bhÅ«
sappaá¹-igho mÅ«lagandho sÄ• ragandho tacagandho pattagandho pupphagandho phalaga

sugandho duggandho, yo vÄ• panaÃ±Ã±opi atthi gandho catunnaá¹ƒ mahÄ• bhÅ«tÄ• naá¹ sappaá¹-igho, yamhi gandhamhi anidassanamhi sappaá¹-ighamhi ghÄ• naá¹ƒ anidassanaá¹ paá¹-ihaÃ±Ã±i vÄ• paá¹-ihaÃ±Ã±ati vÄ• paá¹-ihaÃ±Ã±issati vÄ• paá¹-ihaÃ±Ã±e \Ee 142/ v gandhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ gandhadhÄ• tu pesÄ• --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ gandhÄ• yatan

<626> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ gandhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ? yo gandho catunnaá¹ƒ mahÄ• bhÅ«
sappaá¹-igho mÅ«lagandho sÄ• ragandho tacagandho pattagandho pupphagandho phalaga
sugandho duggandho, yo vÄ• panaÃ±Ã±opi atthi gandho catunnaá¹ƒ mahÄ• bhÅ«tÄ• naá¹ sappaá¹-igho, yo \Se 210/ gandho anidassano sappaá¹-igho ghÄ• namhi anidassanamhi sa vÄ• paá¹-ihaÃ±Ã±ati vÄ• paá¹-ihaÃ±Ã±issati vÄ• paá¹-ihaÃ±Ã±e vÄ• , gandho peso gandh gandhadhÄ• tu pesÄ• --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ gandhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ.

<627> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ gandhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ? yo gandho catunnaá¹ƒ mahÄ• bhÅ«
sappaá¹-igho mÅ«lagandho sÄ• ragandho tacagandho pattagandho pupphagandho phalaga
sugandho duggandho, yo vÄ• panaÃ±Ã±opi atthi gandho catunnaá¹ƒ mahÄ• bhÅ«tÄ• naá¹ sappaá¹-igho, yaá¹ƒ gandhaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha ghÄ• naá¹ƒ nissÄ• ya ghÄ• nasamphasso uppaj uppajjissati vÄ• uppajje vÄ• ... pe ... yaá¹ƒ gandhaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha ghÄ• naá¹ƒ nissÄ• ya gh ... pe ... saÃ±Ã±Ä• ... pe ... cetanÄ• ... pe ... ghÄ• naviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ uppajji vÄ• uppajja vÄ• uppajje vÄ• ... pe ... yaá¹ƒ gandhÄ• rammaá¹‡o ghÄ• naá¹ƒ nissÄ• ya ghÄ• nasampha uppajjissati \Be 167/ vÄ• uppajje vÄ• ... pe ... yaá¹ƒ gandhÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• ghÄ• naá¹ƒ nis vedanÄ• ... pe ... saÃ±Ã±Ä• ... pe ... cetanÄ• ... pe ... ghÄ• naviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ uppajji vÄ uppajjissati vÄ• uppajje vÄ• , gandho peso gandhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ gandhadhÄ• tu pes rÅ«paá¹ƒ gandhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ.

<628> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ rasÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ? yo raso catunnaá¹ƒ mahÄ• bhÅ«tÄ• na sappaá¹-igho mÅ«laraso khandharaso tacaraso pattaraso puppharaso \Se 211/ phalaraso a tittakaá¹ƒ kaá¹-ukaá¹ƒ loá¹‡ikaá¹ƒ khÄ• rikaá¹ƒ lambilaá¹ƒ {lapilakaá¹ƒ (Ce) } kasÄ• vo sÄ• panaÃ±Ã±opi atthi raso catunnaá¹ƒ mahÄ• bhÅ«tÄ• naá¹ƒ upÄ• dÄ• ya anidassano sappaá anidassanaá¹ƒ sappaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ jivhÄ• ya anidassanÄ• ya sappaá¹-ighÄ• ya sÄ• yi vÄ• sÄ• sÄ• ye vÄ• , raso peso rasÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ rasadhÄ• tu pesÄ• --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá

<629> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ rasÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ? yo raso catunnaá¹ƒ mahÄ• bhÅ«tÄ• na
sappaá¹-igho mÅ«laraso khandharaso tacaraso pattaraso puppharaso phalaraso ambilaá¹ƒ kaá¹-ukaá¹ƒ loá¹‡ikaá¹ƒ khÄ• rikaá¹ƒ lambilaá¹ƒ kasÄ• vo sÄ• du asÄ• du, yo vÄ• panaÃ±Ã mahÄ• bhÅ«tÄ• naá¹ƒ upÄ• dÄ• ya anidassano sappaá¹-igho, yamhi rasamhi anidassanam anidassanÄ• sappaá¹-ighÄ• paá¹-ihaÃ±Ã±i vÄ• paá¹-ihaÃ±Ã±ati vÄ• paá¹-ihaÃ±Ã±issati v peso rasÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ rasadhÄ• tu pesÄ• --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ rasÄ• yatanaá¹

<630> katamaá¹ƒ \Ee 143/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ rasÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ? yo raso catunnaá¹ƒ mahÄ• bh
anidassano sappaá¹-igho mÅ«laraso khandharaso tacaraso pattaraso puppharaso phalaras
tittakaá¹ƒ kaá¹-ukaá¹ƒ loá¹‡ikaá¹ƒ khÄ• rikaá¹ƒ lambilaá¹ƒ kasÄ• vo sÄ• du asÄ• du, yo vÄ•
catunnaá¹ƒ mahÄ• bhÅ«tÄ• naá¹ƒ upÄ• dÄ• ya anidassano sappaá¹-igho, yo raso anidassa 181/ anidassanÄ• ya sappaá¹-ighÄ• ya paá¹-ihaÃ±Ã±i vÄ• paá¹-ihaÃ±Ã±ati vÄ• paá¹-ihaÃ±
paá¹-ihaÃ±Ã±e vÄ• , raso peso rasÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ rasadhÄ• tu pesÄ• --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ

<631> katamaá¹ƒ \Be 168/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ rasÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ? yo raso catunnaá¹ƒ mahÄ• bh
anidassano sappaá¹-igho mÅ«laraso khandharaso tacaraso pattaraso puppharaso phalaras
tittakaá¹ƒ kaá¹-ukaá¹ƒ loá¹‡ikaá¹ƒ khÄ• rikaá¹ƒ lambilaá¹ƒ kasÄ• vo sÄ• du asÄ• du, yo vÄ• catunnaá¹ƒ mahÄ• bhÅ«tÄ• naá¹ƒ upÄ• dÄ• ya anidassano sappaá¹-igho, yaá¹ƒ rasaá¹ƒ Ä• jivhÄ• samphasso uppajji vÄ• uppajjati vÄ• uppajjissati vÄ• uppajje vÄ• ... pe ... yaá¹ƒ ras jivhaá¹ƒ nissÄ• ya jivhÄ• samphassajÄ• vedanÄ• ... pe ... saÃ±Ã±Ä• ... pe ... cetanÄ• ... p jivhÄ• viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ uppajji vÄ• uppajjati vÄ• uppajjissati vÄ• uppajje vÄ• ... pe ... ya jivhaá¹ƒ nissÄ• ya jivhÄ• samphasso uppajji vÄ• uppajjati vÄ• uppajjissati vÄ• uppajje vÄ• rasÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• jivhaá¹ƒ nissÄ• ya jivhÄ• samphassajÄ• vedanÄ• ... pe ... saÃ±Ã±Ä• jivhÄ• viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ uppajji vÄ• uppajjati vÄ• uppajjissati vÄ• uppajje vÄ• , raso peso rasadhÄ• tu pesÄ• --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ rasÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ.

<632> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ itthindriyaá¹ƒ? yaá¹ƒ itthiyÄ• itthiliá¹…gaá¹ƒ itthinimittaá¹
itthÄ• kappo itthattaá¹ƒ itthibhÄ• vo {itthittaá¹ƒ itthÄ«bhÄ• vo (Se) } --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ

<633> katamaá¹ƒ \Se 213/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ purisindriyaá¹ƒ? yaá¹ƒ purisassa purisaliá¹…gaá
purisakuttaá¹ƒ purisÄ• kappo purisattaá¹ƒ purisabhÄ• vo --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ purisindr

<634> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ jÄ«vitindriyaá¹ƒ? yo tesaá¹ƒ rÅ«pÄ«naá¹ƒ dhammÄ• naá
yÄ• panÄ• iriyanÄ• vattanÄ• pÄ• lanÄ• jÄ«vitaá¹ƒ jÄ«vitindriyaá¹ƒ --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá

<635> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±atti? yÄ• kusalacittassa vÄ• akusalacittas
vÄ• abhikkamantassa vÄ• paá¹-ikkamantassa vÄ• Ä• lokentassa vÄ• vilokentassa vÄ• s pasÄ• rentassa vÄ• kÄ• yassa thambhanÄ• santhambhanÄ• santhambhitattaá¹ƒ viÃ±Ã±a viÃ±Ã±Ä• pitattaá¹ƒ --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±atti.

<636> katamaá¹ƒ \Ne 182/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ vacÄ«viÃ±Ã±atti? yÄ• kusalacittassa vÄ• akus
abyÄ• katacittassa vÄ• vÄ• cÄ• girÄ• byappatho udÄ«raá¹‡aá¹ƒ ghoso ghosakammaá¹ƒ v ayaá¹ƒ vuccati vÄ• cÄ• . yÄ• tÄ• ya vÄ• cÄ• ya viÃ±Ã±atti viÃ±Ã±Ä• panÄ• viÃ±Ã±Ä• pitat rÅ«paá¹ƒ vacÄ«viÃ±Ã±atti.

<637> katamaá¹ƒ \Be 169/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ Ä• kÄ• sadhÄ• tu? yo Ä• kÄ• so Ä• kÄ• sagataá
vivaragataá¹ƒ asamphuá¹-á¹-haá¹ƒ catÅ«hi mahÄ• bhÅ«tehi --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ Ä• kÄ

<638> katamaá¹ƒ \Se 214/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ rÅ«passa lahutÄ• ? yÄ• rÅ«passa lahutÄ• lahu adandhanatÄ• avitthanatÄ• --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ rÅ«passa lahutÄ• .

<639> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ rÅ«passa mudutÄ• ? yÄ• rÅ«passa mudutÄ• maddavat
--- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ rÅ«passa mudutÄ• .

<640> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ rÅ«passa kammaÃ±Ã±atÄ• ? yÄ• rÅ«passa kammaÃ±Ã
kammaÃ±Ã±abhÄ• vo --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ rÅ«passa kammaÃ±Ã±atÄ• .

<641> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ rÅ«passa upacayo? yo Ä• yatanÄ• naá¹ƒ Ä• cayo, so rÅ« taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ rÅ«passa upacayo.

<642> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ rÅ«passa santati? yo rÅ«passa upacayo, sÄ• rÅ«passa rÅ«paá¹ƒ rÅ«passa santati.

<643> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ rÅ«passa jaratÄ• ? yÄ• rÅ«passa jarÄ• jÄ«raá¹‡atÄ• kl
valittacatÄ• Ä• yuno saá¹ƒhÄ• ni indriyÄ• naá¹ƒ paripÄ• ko --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ rÅ«pa

<644> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ rÅ«passa aniccatÄ• ? yo rÅ«passa khayo vayo bhedo pa
antaradhÄ• naá¹ƒ --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ rÅ«passa aniccatÄ• .

<645> katamaá¹ƒ \Ne 183/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ kabaá¸·Ä«kÄ• ro Ä• hÄ• ro? odano kummÄ• so khÄ«raá¹ƒ dadhi sappi navanÄ«taá¹ƒ telaá¹ƒ madhu phÄ• á¹‡itaá¹ƒ, yaá¹ƒ vÄ• panaÃ±Ã±a yamhi janapade tesaá¹ƒ tesaá¹ƒ \Se 215/ sattÄ• naá¹ƒ mukhÄ• siyaá¹ƒ dantavikhÄ• danaá¹ kucchivitthambhanaá¹ƒ, yÄ• ya ojÄ• ya sattÄ• yÄ• penti --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ kabaá¸·Ä idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ upÄ• dÄ• .

upÄ• dÄ• bhÄ• janÄ«yaá¹ƒ.

rÅ«pakaá¹‡á¸• e paá¹-hamabhÄ• á¹‡avÄ• ro.

<646> katamaá¹ƒ \Be 170/ \Ee 145/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ no upÄ• dÄ• ? phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatana

<647> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ? pathavÄ«dhÄ• tu tejodhÄ• t
mudukaá¹ƒ saá¹‡haá¹ƒ pharusaá¹ƒ sukhasamphassaá¹ƒ dukkhasamphassaá¹ƒ garukaá¹ƒ l phoá¹-á¹-habbaá¹ƒ anidassanaá¹ƒ sappaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ kÄ• yena anidassanena sappaá¹-ighena phusissati vÄ• phuse vÄ• phoá¹-á¹-habbo peso phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ phoá¹-idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ.

<648> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ? pathavÄ«dhÄ• tu tejodhÄ• t
mudukaá¹ƒ saá¹‡haá¹ƒ pharusaá¹ƒ sukhasamphassaá¹ƒ dukkhasamphassaá¹ƒ garukaá¹ƒ l phoá¹-á¹-habbamhi anidassanamhi sappaá¹-ighamhi kÄ• yo anidassano sappaá¹-igho paá¹-paá¹-ihaÃ±Ã±ati vÄ• paá¹-ihaÃ±Ã±issati vÄ• paá¹-ihaÃ±Ã±e vÄ• , phoá¹-á¹-habbo peso ph petaá¹ƒ phoá¹-á¹-habbadhÄ• tu pesÄ• --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatanaá¹

<649> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ? pathavÄ«dhÄ• tu tejodhÄ• t
mudukaá¹ƒ saá¹‡haá¹ƒ pharusaá¹ƒ sukhasamphassaá¹ƒ dukkhasamphassaá¹ƒ garukaá¹ƒ l anidassano sappaá¹-igho kÄ• yamhi anidassanamhi \Se 216/ sappaá¹-ighamhi paá¹-ihaÃ±Ã paá¹-ihaÃ±Ã±issati vÄ• paá¹-ihaÃ±Ã±e vÄ• , phoá¹-á¹-habbo peso phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatana phoá¹-á¹-habbadhÄ• tu pesÄ• --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ.

<650> katamaá¹ƒ \Ne 184/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ? pathavÄ«dhÄ• tu t kakkhaá¸·aá¹ƒ mudukaá¹ƒ saá¹‡haá¹ƒ pharusaá¹ƒ sukhasamphassaá¹ƒ dukkhasamphassa phoá¹-á¹-habbaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kÄ• yaá¹ƒ nissÄ• ya kÄ• yasamphasso uppajji vÄ• uppajjati v vÄ• ... pe ... yaá¹ƒ phoá¹-á¹-habbaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kÄ• yaá¹ƒ nissÄ• ya kÄ• yasamphassajÄ• saÃ±Ã±Ä• ... pe ... cetanÄ• ... pe ... kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ uppajji vÄ• uppajjati vÄ• up vÄ• ... pe ... yaá¹ƒ phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• rammaá¹‡o kÄ• yaá¹ƒ nissÄ• ya kÄ• yasamphasso up uppajjissati vÄ• uppajje vÄ• ... pe ... yaá¹ƒ phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• kÄ• yaá¹ƒ nissÄ vedanÄ• ... pe ... saÃ±Ã±Ä• ... pe ... cetanÄ• ... pe ... kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ uppajji vÄ• uppajjissati vÄ• uppajje vÄ• , phoá¹-á¹-habbo peso phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ petaá¹ƒ pho
--- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ.

<651> katamaá¹ƒ \Be 171/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ Ä• podhÄ• tu? yaá¹ƒ \Ee 146/ Ä• po Ä• pogataá bandhanattaá¹ƒ rÅ«passa --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ Ä• podhÄ• tu.

idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ no upÄ• dÄ• .

<652> katamaá¹ƒ \Se 217/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ upÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ? cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ sotÄ• y jivhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ kÄ• yÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ itthindriyaá¹ƒ purisindriyaá¹ƒ jÄ«vitindriyaá¹ƒ, yaá¹ƒ vÄ• rÅ«paá¹ƒ kammassa katattÄ• rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ gandhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ rasÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ phoá

Ä• kÄ• sadhÄ• tu Ä• podhÄ• tu rÅ«passa upacayo rÅ«passa santati kabaá¸·Ä«kÄ• ro Ä• hÄ upÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ.

<653> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ anupÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ? saddÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±a lahutÄ• rÅ«passa mudutÄ• rÅ«passa kammaÃ±Ã±atÄ• rÅ«passa jaratÄ• rÅ«passa anicc
atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ na kammassa katattÄ• rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ gandhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ rasÄ• yatanaá
Ä• kÄ• sadhÄ• tu Ä• podhÄ• tu rÅ«passa upacayo rÅ«passa santati kabaá¸·Ä«kÄ• ro Ä• hÄ
anupÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ.

<654> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ upÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡upÄ• dÄ• niyaá¹ƒ? cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... p itthindriyaá¹ƒ \Ne 185/ purisindriyaá¹ƒ jÄ«vitindriyaá¹ƒ, yaá¹ƒ vÄ• panaÃ±Ã±ampi atthi rÅ«p katattÄ• rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ gandhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ rasÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatanaá¹
rÅ«passa upacayo rÅ«passa santati kabaá¸·Ä«kÄ• ro Ä• hÄ• ro --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ up

<655> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ anupÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡upÄ• dÄ• niyaá¹ƒ? saddÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ kÄ
rÅ«passa lahutÄ• rÅ«passa mudutÄ• rÅ«passa kammaÃ±Ã±atÄ• rÅ«passa jaratÄ• rÅ«pa
panaÃ±Ã±ampi atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ na kammassa katattÄ• , rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ gandhÄ• yatanaá phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ \Se 218/ Ä• kÄ• sadhÄ• tu Ä• podhÄ• tu rÅ«passa upacayo rÅ« Ä• hÄ• ro --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ anupÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡upÄ• dÄ• niyaá¹ƒ.

<656> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ sanidassanaá¹ƒ? rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«p

<657> katamaá¹ƒ \Be 172/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ anidassanaá¹ƒ? cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... kab idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ anidassanaá¹ƒ.

<658> katamaá¹ƒ \Ee 147/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ sappaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ? cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ sotÄ• yata
jivhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ kÄ• yÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ saddÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ gandhÄ• yatanaá phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ sappaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ.

<659> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ appaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ? itthindriyaá¹ƒ ... pe ... kabaá¸·Ä«kÄ• ro Ä taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ appaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ.

<660> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ indriyaá¹ƒ? cakkhundriyaá¹ƒ sotindriyaá¹ƒ ghÄ• nindriyaá
kÄ• yindriyaá¹ƒ itthindriyaá¹ƒ purisindriyaá¹ƒ jÄ«vitindriyaá¹ƒ --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ indriy

<661> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ na indriyaá¹ƒ? rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... kabaá¸·Ä«kÄ• r
taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ na indriyaá¹ƒ.

<662> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ mahÄ• bhÅ«taá¹ƒ? phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ Ä• podhÄ mahÄ• bhÅ«taá¹ƒ.

<663> katamaá¹ƒ \Ne 186/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ na mahÄ• bhÅ«taá¹ƒ? cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe
--- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ na mahÄ• bhÅ«taá¹ƒ.

<664> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ viÃ±Ã±atti? kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±atti vacÄ«viÃ±Ã±atti --- idaá¹ƒ t viÃ±Ã±atti.

<665> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ na viÃ±Ã±atti? cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... kabaá¸·Ä«kÄ• taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ na viÃ±Ã±atti.

<666> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ cittasamuá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ? kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±atti vacÄ«viÃ±Ã
panaÃ±Ã±ampi atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ cittajaá¹ƒ cittahetukaá¹ƒ cittasamuá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ rÅ«pÄ• ya
gandhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ rasÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ Ä• kÄ• sadhÄ• tu Ä• podh
mudutÄ• rÅ«passa kammaÃ±Ã±atÄ• rÅ«passa upacayo rÅ«passa santati kabaá¸·Ä«kÄ• r rÅ«paá¹ƒ cittasamuá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ.

<667> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ na cittasamuá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ? cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ..
itthindriyaá¹ƒ purisindriyaá¹ƒ jÄ«vitindriyaá¹ƒ rÅ«passa jaratÄ• rÅ«passa aniccatÄ• , yaá¹ƒ atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ na cittajaá¹ƒ na cittahetukaá¹ƒ na cittasamuá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ 173/ gandhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ \Ee 148/ rasÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ Ä• kÄ• sadh lahutÄ• rÅ«passa mudutÄ• rÅ«passa kammaÃ±Ã±atÄ• rÅ«passa upacayo rÅ«passa sant idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ na cittasamuá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ.

<668> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ cittasahabhu? kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±atti vacÄ«viÃ±Ã±atti --- idaá¹ cittasahabhu.

<669> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ na cittasahabhu? cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... kabaá¸·Ä«k taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ na cittasahabhu.

<670> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ cittÄ• nuparivatti? kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±atti vacÄ«viÃ±Ã±atti --- id cittÄ• nuparivatti.

<671> katamaá¹ƒ \Ne 187/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ na cittÄ• nuparivatti? cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe .
Ä• hÄ• ro --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ na cittÄ• nuparivatti.

<672> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ? cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... kÄ• yÄ• yatana rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ.

<673> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ? rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... kabaá¸·Ä«kÄ• ro rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ.

<674> katamaá¹ƒ \Se 220/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ oá¸·Ä• rikaá¹ƒ? cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... pho
--- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ oá¸·Ä• rikaá¹ƒ.

<675> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ sukhumaá¹ƒ? itthindriyaá¹ƒ ... pe ... kabaá¸·Ä«kÄ• ro Ä• rÅ«paá¹ƒ sukhumaá¹ƒ.

<676> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ dÅ«re? itthindriyaá¹ƒ ... pe ... kabaá¸·Ä«kÄ• ro Ä• hÄ• ro rÅ«paá¹ƒ dÅ«re.

<677> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ santike? cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• ya rÅ«paá¹ƒ santike.

<678> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ cakkhusamphassassa vatthu? cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ --- idaá cakkhusamphassassa vatthu.

<679> katamaá¹ƒ \Be 174/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ cakkhusamphassassa na vatthu? sotÄ• yatanaá kabaá¸·Ä«kÄ• ro Ä• hÄ• ro --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ cakkhusamphassassa na vatthu.

<680> katamaá¹ƒ \Ee 149/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ cakkhusamphassajÄ• ya vedanÄ• ya ... pe ... sa cetanÄ• ya \Ne 188/ ... pe ... cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡assa vatthu? cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ --- idaá¹ƒ cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡assa vatthu.

<681> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡assa na vatthu? sotÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ...
Ä• hÄ• ro --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡assa na vatthu.

<682> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ sotasamphassassa ... pe ... ghÄ• nasamphassassa ... pe
... pe ... kÄ• yasamphassassa vatthu? kÄ• yÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ kÄ• yas

<683> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ kÄ• yasamphassassa na vatthu? cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... p Ä• hÄ• ro --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ kÄ• yasamphassassa na vatthu.

<684> katamaá¹ƒ \Se 221/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ kÄ• yasamphassajÄ• ya vedanÄ• ya ... pe ... sa cetanÄ• ya ... pe ... kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡assa vatthu? kÄ• yÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ« kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡assa vatthu.

<685> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡assa na vatthu? cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ Ä• hÄ• ro --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡assa na vatthu.

<686> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ cakkhusamphassassa Ä• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ? rÅ«pÄ• yatana cakkhusamphassassa Ä• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ.

<687> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ cakkhusamphassassa na Ä• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ? cakkhÄ• ya kabaá¸·Ä«kÄ• ro Ä• hÄ• ro --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ cakkhusamphassassa na Ä• rammaá¹

<688> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ cakkhusamphassajÄ• ya vedanÄ• ya ... pe ... saÃ±Ã±Ä• pe ... cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡assa Ä• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ? rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«pa Ä• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ.

<689> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡assa na Ä• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ? cakkhÄ kabaá¸·Ä«kÄ• ro Ä• hÄ• ro --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡assa na Ä• ramm

<690> katamaá¹ƒ \Be 175/ \Ne 189/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ sotasamphassassa ... pe ... ghÄ• nasa pe ... jivhÄ• samphassassa ... pe ... kÄ• yasamphassassa Ä• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ? phoá¹-á¹-hab taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ kÄ• yasamphassassa Ä• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ.

<691> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ kÄ• yasamphassassa na Ä• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ? cakkhÄ• ya kabaá¸·Ä«kÄ• ro Ä• hÄ• ro --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ kÄ• yasamphassassa na Ä• rammaá¹‡

<692> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ kÄ• yasamphassajÄ• ya vedanÄ• ya ... pe ... saÃ±Ã±Ä• y pe ... \Se 222/ kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡assa Ä• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ? phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ --- kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡assa Ä• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ.

<693> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡assa na Ä• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ? cakkhÄ•
kabaá¸·Ä«kÄ• ro Ä• hÄ• ro --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡assa na Ä• ramma

<694> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ? yaá¹ƒ cakkhu catunnaá¹ƒ mahÄ• bh
... pe ... suÃ±Ã±o gÄ• mo peso --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ.

<695> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ na cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ? sotÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... kabaá¸· idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ na cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ.

<696> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ sotÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... ghÄ• nÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... jivh
... kÄ• yÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ? yo kÄ• yo catunnaá¹ƒ mahÄ• bhÅ«tÄ• naá¹ƒ upÄ• dÄ• ya pasÄ• do idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ kÄ• yÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ.

<697> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ na kÄ• yÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ? cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... kabaá idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ na kÄ• yÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ.

<698> katamaá¹ƒ \Ne 190/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ? yaá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ catunnaá¹ƒ
upÄ• dÄ• ya vaá¹‡á¹‡anibhÄ• ... pe ... rÅ«padhÄ• tu pesÄ• --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ rÅ«p

<699> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ na rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ? cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... kabaá idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ na rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ.

<700> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ saddÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... gandhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ \Ee 151/ .
... pe ... phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ? pathavÄ«dhÄ• tu ... pe ... phoá¹-á¹-habbadhÄ• tu pesÄ rÅ«paá¹ƒ phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ.

<701> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ na phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ \Se 223/? cakkhÄ• yatana kabaá¸·Ä«kÄ• ro Ä• hÄ• ro --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ na phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ.

<702> katamaá¹ƒ \Be 176/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ cakkhudhÄ• tu? cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ --- idaá¹ƒ ta cakkhudhÄ• tu.

<703> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ na cakkhudhÄ• tu? sotÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... kabaá¸·Ä«kÄ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ na cakkhudhÄ• tu.

<704> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ sotadhÄ• tu ... pe ... ghÄ• nadhÄ• tu ... pe ... jivhÄ• dhÄ• kÄ• yadhÄ• tu? kÄ• yÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ kÄ• yadhÄ• tu.

<705> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ na kÄ• yadhÄ• tu? cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... kabaá¸·Ä« taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ na kÄ• yadhÄ• tu.

<706> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ rÅ«padhÄ• tu? rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá

<707> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ na rÅ«padhÄ• tu? cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... kabaá¸·Ä« taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ na rÅ«padhÄ• tu.

<708> katamaá¹ƒ \Ne 191/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ saddadhÄ• tu ... pe ... gandhadhÄ• tu ... pe ... ra phoá¹-á¹-habbadhÄ• tu? phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ phoá¹-á¹-hab

<709> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ na phoá¹-á¹-habbadhÄ• tu? cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... k
--- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ na phoá¹-á¹-habbadhÄ• tu.

<710> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ cakkhundriyaá¹ƒ? yaá¹ƒ cakkhu catunnaá¹ƒ mahÄ• bhÅ«
... pe ... suÃ±Ã±o gÄ• mo peso --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ cakkhundriyaá¹ƒ.

<711> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ na cakkhundriyaá¹ƒ? sotÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... kabaá¸·Ä« idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ na cakkhundriyaá¹ƒ.

<712> katamaá¹ƒ \Se 224/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ sotindriyaá¹ƒ ... pe ... ghÄ• nindriyaá¹ƒ ... pe ... j
... pe ... kÄ• yindriyaá¹ƒ? yo kÄ• yo catunnaá¹ƒ mahÄ• bhÅ«tÄ• naá¹ƒ upÄ• dÄ• ya pasÄ• c peso --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ kÄ• yindriyaá¹ƒ.

<713> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ na kÄ• yindriyaá¹ƒ? cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... kabaá¸·Ä idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ na kÄ• yindriyaá¹ƒ.

<714> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ itthindriyaá¹ƒ? yaá¹ƒ \Ee 152/ itthiyÄ• itthiliá¹…gaá¹ƒ itth itthikuttaá¹ƒ itthÄ• kappo itthattaá¹ƒ itthibhÄ• vo --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ itthindriyaá¹ƒ.

<715> katamaá¹ƒ \Be 177/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ na itthindriyaá¹ƒ? cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... ka
--- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ na itthindriyaá¹ƒ.

<716> katamaá¹ƒ \Ne 192/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ purisindriyaá¹ƒ? yaá¹ƒ purisassa purisaliá¹…gaá
purisakuttaá¹ƒ purisÄ• kappo purisattaá¹ƒ purisabhÄ• vo --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ purisindr

<717> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ na purisindriyaá¹ƒ? cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... kabaá¸·Ä idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ na purisindriyaá¹ƒ.

<718> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ jÄ«vitindriyaá¹ƒ? yo tesaá¹ƒ rÅ«pÄ«naá¹ƒ dhammÄ• naá
yÄ• panÄ• iriyanÄ• vattanÄ• pÄ• lanÄ• jÄ«vitaá¹ƒ jÄ«vitindriyaá¹ƒ --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá

<719> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ na jÄ«vitindriyaá¹ƒ? cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... kabaá¸·Ä idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ na jÄ«vitindriyaá¹ƒ.

<720> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±atti? yÄ• kusalacittassa vÄ• akusalacittas

vÄ• abhikkamantassa vÄ• paá¹-ikkamantassa vÄ• Ä• lokentassa vÄ• vilokentassa vÄ• s pasÄ• rentassa vÄ• kÄ• yassa thambhanÄ• santhambhanÄ• santhambhitattaá¹ƒ viÃ±Ã±a viÃ±Ã±Ä• pitattaá¹ƒ --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±atti.

<721> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ na kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±atti? cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... kabaá¸ idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ na kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±atti.

<722> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ vacÄ«viÃ±Ã±atti? yÄ• kusalacittassa vÄ• akusalacittass vÄ• vÄ• cÄ• girÄ• byappatho udÄ«raá¹‡aá¹ƒ ghoso ghosakammaá¹ƒ vÄ• cÄ• vacÄ«bhed tÄ• ya vÄ• cÄ• ya viÃ±Ã±atti viÃ±Ã±Ä• panÄ• viÃ±Ã±Ä• pitattaá¹ƒ --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹

<723> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ na vacÄ«viÃ±Ã±atti? cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... kabaá¸· idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ na vacÄ«viÃ±Ã±atti.

<724> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ Ä• kÄ• sadhÄ• tu? yo Ä• kÄ• so Ä• kÄ• sagataá¹ƒ aghaá
vivaragataá¹ƒ asamphuá¹-á¹-haá¹ƒ catÅ«hi mahÄ• bhÅ«tehi --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ Ä• kÄ

<725> katamaá¹ƒ \Be 178/ \Ne 193/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ na Ä• kÄ• sadhÄ• tu? cakkhÄ• yatana kabaá¸·Ä«kÄ• ro Ä• hÄ• ro --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ na Ä• kÄ• sadhÄ• tu.

<726> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ Ä• podhÄ• tu? yaá¹ƒ Ä• po Ä• pogataá¹ƒ sineho sinehag rÅ«passa --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ Ä• podhÄ• tu.

<727> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ na Ä• podhÄ• tu? cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... kabaá¸·Ä« taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ na Ä• podhÄ• tu.

<728> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ rÅ«passa lahutÄ• ? yÄ• rÅ«passa lahutÄ• lahupariá¹‡Ä avitthanatÄ• --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ rÅ«passa lahutÄ• \Se 226/.

<729> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ rÅ«passa na lahutÄ• ? cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... kabaá idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ rÅ«passa na lahutÄ• .

<730> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ rÅ«passa mudutÄ• ? yÄ• rÅ«passa mudutÄ• maddavat
--- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ rÅ«passa mudutÄ• .

<731> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ rÅ«passa na mudutÄ• ? cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... kaba idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ rÅ«passa na mudutÄ• .

<732> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ rÅ«passa kammaÃ±Ã±atÄ• ? yÄ• rÅ«passa kammaÃ±Ã
kammaÃ±Ã±abhÄ• vo --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ rÅ«passa kammaÃ±Ã±atÄ• .

<733> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ rÅ«passa na kammaÃ±Ã±atÄ• ? cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... p
--- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ rÅ«passa na kammaÃ±Ã±atÄ• .

<734> katamaá¹ƒ \Ne 194/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ rÅ«passa upacayo? yo Ä• yatanÄ• naá¹ƒ Ä• ca idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ rÅ«passa upacayo.

<735> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ rÅ«passa na upacayo? cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... kaba idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ rÅ«passa na upacayo.

<736> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ rÅ«passa santati? yo rÅ«passa upacayo, sÄ• rÅ«passa
rÅ«paá¹ƒ rÅ«passa santati.

<737> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ rÅ«passa na santati? cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... kabaá¸ idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ rÅ«passa na santati.

<738> katamaá¹ƒ \Be 179/ \Ee 154/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ rÅ«passa jaratÄ• ? yÄ• rÅ«passa jarÄ khaá¹‡á¸• iccaá¹ƒ pÄ• liccaá¹ƒ valittacatÄ• Ä• yuno saá¹ƒhÄ• ni indriyÄ• naá¹ƒ paripÄ• ko rÅ«paá¹ƒ rÅ«passa jaratÄ• .

<739> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ rÅ«passa na jaratÄ• ? cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... kabaá idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ rÅ«passa na jaratÄ• .

<740> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ rÅ«passa aniccatÄ• ? yo rÅ«passa khayo vayo bhedo pa
antaradhÄ• naá¹ƒ --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ rÅ«passa aniccatÄ• .

<741> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ rÅ«passa na aniccatÄ• ? cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... kab idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ rÅ«passa na aniccatÄ• .

<742> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ kabaá¸·Ä«kÄ• ro Ä• hÄ• ro? odano kummÄ• so sattu ma sappi navanÄ«taá¹ƒ telaá¹ƒ madhu phÄ• á¹‡itaá¹ƒ, yaá¹ƒ vÄ• panaÃ±Ã±ampi atthi rÅ«paá tesaá¹ƒ tesaá¹ƒ sattÄ• naá¹ƒ mukhÄ• siyaá¹ƒ dantavikhÄ• danaá¹ƒ galajjhoharaá¹‡Ä«yaá¹ƒ yÄ• ya ojÄ• ya sattÄ• yÄ• penti --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ kabaá¸·Ä«kÄ• ro Ä• hÄ• ro.

<743> katamaá¹ƒ \Ne 195/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ na kabaá¸·Ä«kÄ• ro Ä• hÄ• ro? cakkhÄ• yatana aniccatÄ• --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ na kabaá¸·Ä«kÄ• ro Ä• hÄ• ro.

evaá¹ƒ duvidhena rÅ«pasaá¹…gaho.

dukaniddeso.

tikaniddeso

<744> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ upÄ• dÄ• ? cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... kÄ• taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ upÄ• dÄ• .

<745> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ upÄ• dÄ• ? rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... kabaá idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ upÄ• dÄ• .

<746> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ no upÄ• dÄ• ? phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ \S taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ no upÄ• dÄ• .

<747> katamaá¹ƒ \Be 180/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ upÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ? cakkhÄ• yatan kÄ• yÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ upÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ.

<748> katamaá¹ƒ \Ee 155/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ upÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ? itthindriyaá¹ƒ pu jÄ«vitindriyaá¹ƒ, yaá¹ƒ vÄ• panaÃ±Ã±ampi atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ kammassa katattÄ• rÅ«pÄ• yata rasÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ Ä• kÄ• sadhÄ• tu Ä• podhÄ• tu rÅ«passa upac kabaá¸·Ä«kÄ• ro Ä• hÄ• ro --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ upÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ.

<749> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ anupÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ? saddÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ kÄ• rÅ«passa \Ne 196/ lahutÄ• rÅ«passa mudutÄ• rÅ«passa kammaÃ±Ã±atÄ• rÅ«passa jarat vÄ• panaÃ±Ã±ampi atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ na kammassa katattÄ• rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ gandhÄ• yata phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ Ä• kÄ• sadhÄ• tu Ä• podhÄ• tu rÅ«passa upacayo rÅ«passa sa idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ anupÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ.

<750> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ upÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡upÄ• dÄ• niyaá¹ƒ. cakkhÄ• ya kÄ• yÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ upÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡upÄ• dÄ• niyaá¹ƒ.

<751> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ upÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡upÄ• dÄ• niyaá¹ƒ? itthindriyaá jÄ«vitindriyaá¹ƒ, yaá¹ƒ vÄ• panaÃ±Ã±ampi atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ kammassa katattÄ• rÅ«pÄ• yata rasÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ Ä• kÄ• sadhÄ• tu Ä• podhÄ• tu rÅ«passa upac kabaá¸·Ä«kÄ• ro Ä• hÄ• ro --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ upÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡upÄ• dÄ• ni

<752> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ anupÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡upÄ• dÄ• niyaá¹ƒ \Se 229/? kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±atti vacÄ«viÃ±Ã±atti rÅ«passa lahutÄ• rÅ«passa mudutÄ• rÅ«passa kamma rÅ«passa aniccatÄ• , yaá¹ƒ vÄ• panaÃ±Ã±ampi atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ na kammassa katattÄ• rÅ« gandhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ rasÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ Ä• kÄ• sadhÄ• tu Ä• podh santati kabaá¸·Ä«kÄ• ro Ä• hÄ• ro --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ anupÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡up

<753> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ anidassanaá¹ƒ? cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ anidassanaá¹ƒ.

<754> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ sanidassanaá¹ƒ? rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ --- idaá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ sanidassanaá¹ƒ.

<755> katamaá¹ƒ \Be 181/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ anidassanaá¹ƒ? saddÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ kabaá¸·Ä«kÄ• ro Ä• hÄ• ro --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ anidassanaá¹ƒ.

<756> katamaá¹ƒ \Ne 197/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ sappaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ? cakkhÄ• yatanaá kÄ• yÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ sappaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ.

<757> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ sappaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ? rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ sappaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ.

<758> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ appaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ? itthindriyaá¹ƒ ... pe ... kabaá --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ appaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ.

<759> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ indriyaá¹ƒ? cakkhundriyaá¹ƒ ... pe ... kÄ• yin taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ indriyaá¹ƒ.

<760> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ indriyaá¹ƒ? itthindriyaá¹ƒ purisindriyaá¹ƒ jÄ«v idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ indriyaá¹ƒ.

<761> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ na indriyaá¹ƒ? rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... kab Ä• hÄ• ro --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ na indriyaá¹ƒ.

<762> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ na mahÄ• bhÅ«taá¹ƒ? cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ .. --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ na mahÄ• bhÅ«taá¹ƒ.

<763> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ mahÄ• bhÅ«taá¹ƒ? phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatanaá taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ mahÄ• bhÅ«taá¹ƒ.

<764> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ na mahÄ• bhÅ«taá¹ƒ? rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... p Ä• hÄ• ro --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ na mahÄ• bhÅ«taá¹ƒ.

<765> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ na viÃ±Ã±atti? cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... k idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ na viÃ±Ã±atti?

<766> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ viÃ±Ã±atti? kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±atti vacÄ«viÃ±Ã±at rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ viÃ±Ã±atti.

<767> katamaá¹ƒ \Ne 198/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ na viÃ±Ã±atti? rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ...
Ä• hÄ• ro --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ na viÃ±Ã±atti.

<768> katamaá¹ƒ \Be 182/ \Ee 157/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ na cittasamuá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá
... pe ... kÄ• yÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ na cittasamuá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá

<769> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ cittasamuá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ? kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±atti
panaÃ±Ã±ampi atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ cittajaá¹ƒ cittahetukaá¹ƒ cittasamuá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ rÅ«pÄ• ya
gandhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ rasÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ Ä• kÄ• sadhÄ• tu Ä• podh
mudutÄ• rÅ«passa kammaÃ±Ã±atÄ• rÅ«passa upacayo rÅ«passa santati kabaá¸·Ä«kÄ• r rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ cittasamuá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ.

<770> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ na cittasamuá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ? itthindriyaá¹ƒ p jÄ«vitindriyaá¹ƒ rÅ«passa jaratÄ• rÅ«passa aniccatÄ• , yaá¹ƒ \Se 231/ vÄ• panaÃ±Ã±amp cittajaá¹ƒ na cittahetukaá¹ƒ na cittasamuá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ saddÄ• yatanaá rasÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ Ä• kÄ• sadhÄ• tu Ä• podhÄ• tu rÅ«passa lahu kammaÃ±Ã±atÄ• rÅ«passa upacayo rÅ«passa santati kabaá¸·Ä«kÄ• ro Ä• hÄ• ro --- idaá¹ƒ cittasamuá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ.

<771> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ na cittasahabhu? cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe .
idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ na cittasahabhu.

<772> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ cittasahabhu? kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±atti vacÄ«viÃ±Ã± rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ cittasahabhu.

<773> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ na cittasahabhu? rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ...
--- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ na cittasahabhu?

<774> katamaá¹ƒ \Ne 199/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ na cittÄ• nuparivatti? cakkhÄ• yata kÄ• yÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ na cittÄ• nuparivatti.

<775> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ cittÄ• nuparivatti? kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±atti vacÄ«viÃ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ cittÄ• nuparivatti.

<776> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ na cittÄ• nuparivatti? rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe Ä• hÄ• ro --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ na cittÄ• nuparivatti.

<777> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ oá¸·Ä• rikaá¹ƒ? cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ \Ee 158/
kÄ• yÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ oá¸·Ä• rikaá¹ƒ.

<778> katamaá¹ƒ \Be 183/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ oá¸·Ä• rikaá¹ƒ? rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ .. phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ oá¸·Ä• rikaá¹ƒ.

<779> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ sukhumaá¹ƒ? itthindriyaá¹ƒ ... pe ... kabaá¸·Ä Ä• hÄ• ro --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ sukhumaá¹ƒ.

<780> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ santike? cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... kÄ• yÄ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ santike.

<781> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ dÅ«re? itthindriyaá¹ƒ ... pe ... kabaá¸·Ä«kÄ• r taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ dÅ«re.

<782> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ santike? rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... phoá¹-á¹-idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ santike.

<783> katamaá¹ƒ \Ne 200/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ cakkhusamphassassa na vatthu? rÅ kabaá¸·Ä«kÄ• ro Ä• hÄ• ro --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ cakkhusamphassassa na v

<784> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ cakkhusamphassassa vatthu? cakkhÄ• yata rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ cakkhusamphassassa vatthu.

<785> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ cakkhusamphassassa na vatthu? sotÄ• yata kÄ• yÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ cakkhusamphassassa na vatthu.

<786> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ cakkhusamphassajÄ• ya vedanÄ• ya ... pe .. cetanÄ• ya ... pe ... cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡assa na vatthu? rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... kabaá¸· idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡assa na vatthu.

<787> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡assa vatthu? cakkhÄ• y rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡assa vatthu.

<788> katamaá¹ƒ \Ee 159/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡assa na vatthu
... kÄ• yÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡assa na va

<789> katamaá¹ƒ \Se 233/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ sotasamphassassa ... pe ... ghÄ• na jivhÄ• samphassassa ... pe ... kÄ• yasamphassassa na vatthu? rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... k
--- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ kÄ• yasamphassassa na vatthu.

<790> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ kÄ• yasamphassassa vatthu? kÄ• yÄ• yatan rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ kÄ• yasamphassassa vatthu.

<791> katamaá¹ƒ \Be 184/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ kÄ• yasamphassassa na vatthu? ca
... jivhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ kÄ• yasamphassassa na vatthu.

<792> katamaá¹ƒ \Ne 201/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ kÄ• yasamphassajÄ• ya vedanÄ• y
... cetanÄ• ya ... pe ... kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡assa na vatthu? rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... kabaá idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡assa na vatthu.

<793> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡assa vatthu? kÄ• yÄ• ya rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡assa vatthu.

<794> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡assa na vatthu? cakkhÄ jivhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡assa na vatthu.

<795> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ cakkhusamphassassa na Ä• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ
... kÄ• yÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ cakkhusamphassassa na Ä• ra

<796> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ cakkhusamphassassa Ä• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ? rÅ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ cakkhusamphassassa Ä• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ.

<797> katamaá¹ƒ \Ee 160/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ cakkhusamphassassa na Ä• ramma pe ... \Se 234/ kabaá¸·Ä«kÄ• ro Ä• hÄ• ro --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ cakkhusam Ä• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ.

<798> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ cakkhusamphassajÄ• ya vedanÄ• ya ... pe .
cetanÄ• ya ... pe ... cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡assa na Ä• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ? cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡assa na Ä• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ.

<799> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡assa Ä• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ?
taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡assa Ä• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ.

<800> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡assa na Ä• rammaá¹‡aá
kabaá¸·Ä«kÄ• ro Ä• hÄ• ro --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡assa

<801> katamaá¹ƒ \Ne 202/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ sotasamphassassa ... pe ... ghÄ• n
... jivhÄ• samphassassa ... pe ... kÄ• yasamphassassa na Ä• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ? cakkhÄ• yata kÄ• yÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ kÄ• yasamphassassa na Ä• ramm

<802> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ kÄ• yasamphassassa Ä• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ? ph idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ kÄ• yasamphassassa Ä• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ.

<803> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ kÄ• yasamphassassa na Ä• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ?
kabaá¸·Ä«kÄ• ro Ä• hÄ• ro --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ kÄ• yasamphassassa na Ä <804> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ kÄ• yasamphassajÄ• ya vedanÄ• ya ... pe .. cetanÄ• ya ... pe ... kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡assa na Ä• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ? cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... p kÄ• yÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡assa na Ä• ra <805> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡assa Ä• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ?

161/ --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡assa Ä• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ.

<806> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡assa na Ä• rammaá¹‡aá
kabaá¸·Ä«kÄ• ro Ä• hÄ• ro --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡assa r <807> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ na cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ? rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ...

Ä• hÄ• ro --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ na cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ.

<808> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ? yaá¹ƒ cakkhu catunnaá
upÄ• dÄ• ya pasÄ• do ... pe ... suÃ±Ã±o gÄ• mo peso --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹

<809> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ na cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ? sotÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... p
--- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ na cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ.

<810> katamaá¹ƒ \Ne 203/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ na sotÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... na ghÄ
... na jivhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... na kÄ• yÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ? rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... kabaá¸·Ä« idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ na kÄ• yÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ.

<811> katamaá¹ƒ \Be 186/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ kÄ• yÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ? yo kÄ• yo catu
upÄ• dÄ• ya pasÄ• do ... pe ... suÃ±Ã±o gÄ• mo peso --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹

<812> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ na kÄ• yÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ? cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ .
--- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ na kÄ• yÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ.

<813> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ na rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ? cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ..
\Se 236/ --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ na rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ.

<814> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ? yaá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ catunnaá
upÄ• dÄ• ya vaá¹‡á¹‡anibhÄ• ... pe ... rÅ«padhÄ• tu pesÄ• --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ•

<815> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ na rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ? saddÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... p Ä• hÄ• ro --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ na rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ.

<816> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ na saddÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... \Ee 162/ na ga pe ... na rasÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... na phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ? cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe
--- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ na phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ.

<817> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ? pathavÄ«dhÄ•
phoá¹-á¹-habbadhÄ• tu pesÄ• --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatan

<818> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ na phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ? rÅ«pÄ• yata
kabaá¸·Ä«kÄ• ro Ä• hÄ• ro --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ na phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatan

<819> katamaá¹ƒ \Ne 204/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ na cakkhudhÄ• tu? rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá Ä• hÄ• ro --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ na cakkhudhÄ• tu.

<820> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ cakkhudhÄ• tu? cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ --- idaá ajjhattikaá¹ƒ cakkhudhÄ• tu.

<821> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ na cakkhudhÄ• tu? sotÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ...
idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ na cakkhudhÄ• tu.

<822> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ na sotadhÄ• tu ... pe ... na ghÄ• nadhÄ• tu ..
... pe ... na kÄ• yadhÄ• tu? rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... kabaá¸·Ä«kÄ• ro Ä• hÄ• ro --- idaá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ na kÄ• yadhÄ• tu.

<823> katamaá¹ƒ \Be 187/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ \Se 237/ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ kÄ• yadhÄ• tu? kÄ• yÄ• y rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ kÄ• yadhÄ• tu.

<824> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ na kÄ• yadhÄ• tu? cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ na kÄ• yadhÄ• tu.

<825> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ na rÅ«padhÄ• tu? cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ na rÅ«padhÄ• tu.

<826> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ rÅ«padhÄ• tu? rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ --- idaá¹ƒ t rÅ«padhÄ• tu.

<827> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ na rÅ«padhÄ• tu? saddÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ...
--- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ na rÅ«padhÄ• tu.

<828> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ na saddadhÄ• tu ... pe ... \Ee 163/ na gandh rasadhÄ• tu \Ne 205/ ... pe ... na phoá¹-á¹-habbadhÄ• tu? cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... kÄ• y taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ na phoá¹-á¹-habbadhÄ• tu.

<829> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ phoá¹-á¹-habbadhÄ• tu? phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• ya rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ phoá¹-á¹-habbadhÄ• tu.

<830> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ na phoá¹-á¹-habbadhÄ• tu? rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹
Ä• hÄ• ro --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ na phoá¹-á¹-habbadhÄ• tu.

<831> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ na cakkhundriyaá¹ƒ? rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe
Ä• hÄ• ro --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ na cakkhundriyaá¹ƒ.

<832> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ cakkhundriyaá¹ƒ? yaá¹ƒ cakkhu catunnaá¹ƒ
upÄ• dÄ• ya pasÄ• do ... pe ... suÃ±Ã±o gÄ• mo peso --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹
<833> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ na cakkhundriyaá¹ƒ? sotÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe
--- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ na cakkhundriyaá¹ƒ.

<834> katamaá¹ƒ \Se 238/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ na sotindriyaá¹ƒ ... pe ... na ghÄ• ni na jivhindriyaá¹ƒ ... pe ... na kÄ• yindriyaá¹ƒ? rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... kabaá¸·Ä«kÄ• ro Ä taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ na kÄ• yindriyaá¹ƒ.

<835> katamaá¹ƒ \Be 188/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ kÄ• yindriyaá¹ƒ? yo kÄ• yo catunna
upÄ• dÄ• ya pasÄ• do ... pe ... suÃ±Ã±o gÄ• mo peso --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹

<836> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ na kÄ• yindriyaá¹ƒ? cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... p
--- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ na kÄ• yindriyaá¹ƒ.

<837> katamaá¹ƒ \Ne 206/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ na itthindriyaá¹ƒ? cakkhÄ• yatanaá kÄ• yÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ na itthindriyaá¹ƒ.

<838> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ itthindriyaá¹ƒ? yaá¹ƒ itthiyÄ• itthiliá¹…gaá¹ƒ
itthikuttaá¹ƒ itthÄ• kappo itthattaá¹ƒ itthibhÄ• vo --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ itthind

<839> katamaá¹ƒ \Ee 164/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ na itthindriyaá¹ƒ? rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ kabaá¸·Ä«kÄ• ro Ä• hÄ• ro --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ na itthindriyaá¹ƒ.

<840> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ na purisindriyaá¹ƒ? cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe
--- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ na purisindriyaá¹ƒ.

<841> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ purisindriyaá¹ƒ? yaá¹ƒ purisassa purisaliá¹…
purisakuttaá¹ƒ purisÄ• kappo purisattaá¹ƒ purisabhÄ• vo --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá <842> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ na purisindriyaá¹ƒ? rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe .

Ä• hÄ• ro --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ na purisindriyaá¹ƒ.

<843> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ na jÄ«vitindriyaá¹ƒ? cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... p
\Se 239/ --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ na jÄ«vitindriyaá¹ƒ.

<844> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ jÄ«vitindriyaá¹ƒ? yo tesaá¹ƒ rÅ«pÄ«naá¹ƒ dh yapanÄ• yÄ• panÄ• iriyanÄ• vattanÄ• pÄ• lanÄ• jÄ«vitaá¹ƒ jÄ«vitindriyaá¹ƒ --- idaá¹ƒ taá jÄ«vitindriyaá¹ƒ.

<845> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ na jÄ«vitindriyaá¹ƒ? rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe
Ä• hÄ• ro --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ na jÄ«vitindriyaá¹ƒ.

<846> katamaá¹ƒ \Ne 207/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ na kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±atti? cakkhÄ• yata kÄ• yÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ na kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±atti.

<847> katamaá¹ƒ \Be 189/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±atti? yÄ• kusalacittas vÄ• abyÄ• katacittassa vÄ• abhikkamantassa vÄ• paá¹-ikkamantassa vÄ• Ä• lokentassa samiÃ±jentassa vÄ• pasÄ• rentassa vÄ• kÄ• yassa thambhanÄ• santhambhanÄ• santha viÃ±Ã±Ä• panÄ• viÃ±Ã±Ä• pitattaá¹ƒ --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±at

<848> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ na kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±atti? rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe Ä• hÄ• ro --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ na kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±atti.

<849> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ na vacÄ«viÃ±Ã±atti? cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... p
--- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ na vacÄ«viÃ±Ã±atti.

<850> katamaá¹ƒ \Ee 165/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ vacÄ«viÃ±Ã±atti? yÄ• kusalacittass vÄ• abyÄ• katacittassa vÄ• vÄ• cÄ• girÄ• byappatho udÄ«raá¹‡aá¹ƒ dhoso ghosakamma vuccati vÄ• cÄ• . yÄ• tÄ• ya vÄ• cÄ• ya viÃ±Ã±atti viÃ±Ã±Ä• panÄ• viÃ±Ã±Ä• pitattaá¹ƒ -- bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ vacÄ«viÃ±Ã±atti \Se 240/.

<851> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ na vacÄ«viÃ±Ã±atti? rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe
Ä• hÄ• ro --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ na vacÄ«viÃ±Ã±atti.

<852> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ na Ä• kÄ• sadhÄ• tu? cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ...
--- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ na Ä• kÄ• sadhÄ• tu.

<853> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ Ä• kÄ• sadhÄ• tu? yo Ä• kÄ• so Ä• kÄ• saga vivaragataá¹ƒ asamphuá¹-á¹-haá¹ƒ catÅ«hi mahÄ• bhÅ«tehi --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• h

<854> katamaá¹ƒ \Ne 208/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ na Ä• kÄ• sadhÄ• tu? rÅ«pÄ• yatan kabaá¸·Ä«kÄ• ro Ä• hÄ• ro --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ na Ä• kÄ• sadhÄ• tu.

<855> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ na Ä• podhÄ• tu? cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ na Ä• podhÄ• tu.

<856> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ Ä• podhÄ• tu? yaá¹ƒ Ä• po Ä• pogataá¹ƒ sin bandhanattaá¹ƒ rÅ«passa --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ Ä• podhÄ• tu.

<857> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ na Ä• podhÄ• tu? rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ...
--- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ na Ä• podhÄ• tu.

<858> katamaá¹ƒ \Be 190/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ rÅ«passa na lahutÄ• ? cakkhÄ• yat kÄ• yÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ rÅ«passa na lahutÄ• .

<859> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ rÅ«passa lahutÄ• ? yÄ• rÅ«passa lahutÄ• la adandhanatÄ• avitthanatÄ• --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ rÅ«passa lahutÄ• .

<860> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ rÅ«passa na lahutÄ• ? rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... p Ä• hÄ• ro --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ rÅ«passa na lahutÄ• .

<861> katamaá¹ƒ \Se 241/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ rÅ«passa na mudutÄ• ? cakkhÄ• y kÄ• yÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ rÅ«passa na mudutÄ• .

<862> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ rÅ«passa mudutÄ• ? yÄ• \Ee 166/ rÅ«passa akakkhaá¸·atÄ• akathinatÄ• --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ rÅ«passa mudutÄ• .

<863> katamaá¹ƒ \Ne 209/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ rÅ«passa na mudutÄ• ? rÅ«pÄ• yat kabaá¸·Ä«kÄ• ro Ä• hÄ• ro --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ rÅ«passa na mudutÄ• .

<864> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ rÅ«passa na kammaÃ±Ã±atÄ• ? cakkhÄ• ya kÄ• yÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ rÅ«passa na kammaÃ±Ã±atÄ• .

<865> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ rÅ«passa kammaÃ±Ã±atÄ• ? yÄ• rÅ«passa kammaÃ±Ã±abhÄ• vo --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ rÅ«passa kammaÃ±Ã±atÄ• .

<866> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ rÅ«passa na kammaÃ±Ã±atÄ• ? rÅ«pÄ• yata
kabaá¸·Ä«kÄ• ro Ä• hÄ• ro --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ rÅ«passa na kammaÃ±Ã± <867> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ rÅ«passa na upacayo? cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ .

--- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ rÅ«passa na upacayo.

<868> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ rÅ«passa upacayo? yo Ä• yatanÄ• naá¹ƒ Ä• idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ rÅ«passa upacayo.

<869> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ rÅ«passa na upacayo? rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ...
Ä• hÄ• ro --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ rÅ«passa na upacayo.

<870> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ rÅ«passa na santati? cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ...
--- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ rÅ«passa na santati.

<871> katamaá¹ƒ \Se 242/ \Be 191/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ rÅ«passa santati? yo rÅ«p rÅ«passa santati --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ rÅ«passa santati.

<872> katamaá¹ƒ \Ne 210/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ rÅ«passa na santati? rÅ«pÄ• yatana kabaá¸·Ä«kÄ• ro Ä• hÄ• ro --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ rÅ«passa na santati.

<873> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ rÅ«passa na jaratÄ• ? cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ..
--- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ rÅ«passa na jaratÄ• .

<874> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ rÅ«passa jaratÄ• ? yÄ• rÅ«passa jarÄ• jÄ«r pÄ• liccaá¹ƒ valittacatÄ• Ä• yuno saá¹ƒhÄ• ni indriyÄ• naá¹ƒ paripÄ• ko --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ« rÅ«passa jaratÄ• .

<875> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ rÅ«passa na jaratÄ• ? rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... p
Ä• hÄ• ro --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ rÅ«passa na jaratÄ• .

<876> katamaá¹ƒ \Ee 167/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ rÅ«passa na aniccatÄ• ? cakkhÄ• y kÄ• yÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ rÅ«passa na aniccatÄ• .

<877> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ rÅ«passa aniccatÄ• ? yo rÅ«passa khayo va aniccatÄ• antaradhÄ• naá¹ƒ --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ rÅ«passa aniccatÄ• .

<878> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ rÅ«passa na aniccatÄ• ? rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ .
Ä• hÄ• ro --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ rÅ«passa na aniccatÄ• .

<879> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ na kabaá¸·Ä«kÄ• ro Ä• hÄ• ro? cakkhÄ• yat kÄ• yÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ ajjhattikaá¹ƒ na kabaá¸·Ä«kÄ• ro Ä• hÄ• ro \Se

<880> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ kabaá¸·Ä«kÄ• ro Ä• hÄ• ro? odano kummÄ•
khÄ«raá¹ƒ dadhi sappi navanÄ«taá¹ƒ telaá¹ƒ madhu phÄ• á¹‡itaá¹ƒ, yaá¹ƒ vÄ• panaÃ±Ã±a yamhi \Ne 211/ janapade tesaá¹ƒ tesaá¹ƒ sattÄ• naá¹ƒ mukhÄ• siyaá¹ƒ dantavikhÄ• danaá¹ kucchivitthambhanaá¹ƒ yÄ• ya ojÄ• ya sattÄ• yÄ• penti --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá Ä• hÄ• ro.

<881> katamaá¹ƒ \Be 192/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ na kabaá¸·Ä«kÄ• ro Ä• hÄ• ro? rÅ«
rÅ«passa aniccatÄ• --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ bÄ• hiraá¹ƒ na kabaá¸·Ä«kÄ• ro Ä• hÄ• ro.

evaá¹ƒ tividhena rÅ«pasaá¹…gaho.

tikaniddeso.

catukkaá¹ƒ

<882> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ upÄ• dÄ• upÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ? cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe itthindriyaá¹ƒ purisindriyaá¹ƒ jÄ«vitindriyaá¹ƒ, yaá¹ƒ vÄ• panaÃ±Ã±ampi atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ kam rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ gandhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ rasÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ Ä• kÄ• sadhÄ• tu rÅ«passa upacay Ä• hÄ• ro --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ upÄ• dÄ• upÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ.

<883> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ upÄ• dÄ• anupÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ? saddÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ kÄ•
rÅ«passa lahutÄ• rÅ«passa mudutÄ• rÅ«passa kammaÃ±Ã±atÄ• rÅ«passa jaratÄ• rÅ«pa
panaÃ±Ã±ampi atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ na kammassa katattÄ• \Ee 168/ rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ gandhÄ•
Ä• kÄ• sadhÄ• tu rÅ«passa upacayo rÅ«passa santati kabaá¸·Ä«kÄ• ro Ä• hÄ• ro --- idaá¹ƒ
anupÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ.

<884> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ no upÄ• dÄ• upÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ? kammassa katattÄ• pl Ä• podhÄ• tu --- idaá¹ƒ \Se 244/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ no upÄ• dÄ• upÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ.

<885> katamaá¹ƒ \Ne 212/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ no upÄ• dÄ• anupÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ? na kammas
phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ Ä• podhÄ• tu --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ no upÄ• dÄ• anupÄ• di

<886> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ upÄ• dÄ• upÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡upÄ• dÄ• niyaá¹ƒ? cakkhÄ• yata kÄ• yÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ, itthindriyaá¹ƒ purisindriyaá¹ƒ jÄ«vitindriyaá¹ƒ, yaá¹ƒ vÄ• panaÃ±Ã±amp kammassa katattÄ• rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ gandhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ rasÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ Ä• kÄ• sadhÄ•
santati kabaá¸·Ä«kÄ• ro Ä• hÄ• ro --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ upÄ• dÄ• upÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡upÄ• d

<887> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ upÄ• dÄ• anupÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡upÄ• dÄ• niyaá¹ƒ? saddÄ• ya
vacÄ«viÃ±Ã±atti rÅ«passa lahutÄ• rÅ«passa mudutÄ• rÅ«passa kammaÃ±Ã±atÄ• rÅ«pas aniccatÄ• , yaá¹ƒ vÄ• panaÃ±Ã±ampi atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ na kammassa katattÄ• rÅ«pÄ• yatana rasÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ Ä• kÄ• sadhÄ• tu rÅ«passa upacayo rÅ«passa santati kabaá¸·Ä«kÄ• ro Ä• rÅ«paá¹ƒ upÄ• dÄ• anupÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡upÄ• dÄ• niyaá¹ƒ.

<888> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ no upÄ• dÄ• upÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡upÄ• dÄ• niyaá¹ƒ? kammass

phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ Ä• podhÄ• tu --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ no upÄ• dÄ• upÄ• diá¹‡

<889> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ no upÄ• dÄ• anupÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡upÄ• dÄ• niyaá¹ƒ? na kam
phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ Ä• podhÄ• tu --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ no upÄ• dÄ• anupÄ• di

<890> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ upÄ• dÄ• sappaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ? cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ upÄ• dÄ• sappaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ.

<891> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ upÄ• dÄ• \Se 245/ appaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ? itthindriyaá¹ƒ ... pe .
Ä• hÄ• ro --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ upÄ• dÄ• appaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ.

<892> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ no upÄ• dÄ• sappaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ? phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatana no upÄ• dÄ• sappaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ.

<893> katamaá¹ƒ \Ee 169/ \Ne 213/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ no upÄ• dÄ• appaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ? Ä• podh rÅ«paá¹ƒ no upÄ• dÄ• appaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ.

<894> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ upÄ• dÄ• oá¸·Ä• rikaá¹ƒ? cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... ra taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ upÄ• dÄ• oá¸·Ä• rikaá¹ƒ.

<895> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ upÄ• dÄ• sukhumaá¹ƒ itthindriyaá¹ƒ ... pe ... kabaá¸·Ä«k taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ upÄ• dÄ• sukhumaá¹ƒ.

<896> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ no upÄ• dÄ• oá¸·Ä• rikaá¹ƒ? phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatanaá¹ no upÄ• dÄ• oá¸·Ä• rikaá¹ƒ.

<897> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ no upÄ• dÄ• sukhumaá¹ƒ? Ä• podhÄ• tu --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ sukhumaá¹ƒ.

<898> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ upÄ• dÄ• dÅ«re? itthindriyaá¹ƒ ... pe ... kabaá¸·Ä«kÄ• ro taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ upÄ• dÄ• dÅ«re.

<899> katamaá¹ƒ \Be 194/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ upÄ• dÄ• santike? cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ upÄ• dÄ• santike.

<900> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ no upÄ• dÄ• dÅ«re? Ä• podhÄ• tu --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«pa

<901> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ no upÄ• dÄ• santike? phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ --- ida

upÄ• dÄ• santike.

<902> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ upÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ sanidassanaá¹ƒ? kammassa katattÄ• taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ upÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ sanidassanaá¹ƒ.

<903> katamaá¹ƒ \Ne 214/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ upÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ anidassanaá¹ƒ? cakkhÄ• yat kÄ• yÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ, itthindriyaá¹ƒ purisindriyaá¹ƒ jÄ«vitindriyaá¹ƒ, yaá¹ƒ vÄ• panaÃ±Ã±amp kammassa katattÄ• \Se 246/ gandhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ rasÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatana rÅ«passa upacayo rÅ«passa santati kabaá¸·Ä«kÄ• ro Ä• hÄ• ro --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ up anidassanaá¹ƒ.

<904> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ anupÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ sanidassanaá¹ƒ? na kammassa kat idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ anupÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ sanidassanaá¹ƒ.

<905> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ anupÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ anidassanaá¹ƒ? saddÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ vacÄ«viÃ±Ã±atti rÅ«passa lahutÄ• rÅ«passa mudutÄ• rÅ«passa kammaÃ±Ã±atÄ• rÅ«pas \Ee 170/, yaá¹ƒ vÄ• panaÃ±Ã±ampi atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ na kammassa katattÄ• gandhÄ• yatana phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ Ä• kÄ• sadhÄ• tu Ä• podhÄ• tu rÅ«passa upacayo rÅ«passa sa idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ anupÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ anidassanaá¹ƒ.

<906> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ upÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ sappaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ? cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ yaá¹ƒ vÄ• panaÃ±Ã±ampi atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ kammassa katattÄ• rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ gandhÄ• y phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ upÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ sappaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ.

<907> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ upÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ appaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ? itthindriyaá¹ƒ purisin jÄ«vitindriyaá¹ƒ, yaá¹ƒ vÄ• panaÃ±Ã±ampi atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ kammassa katattÄ• Ä• kÄ• sadh upacayo rÅ«passa santati kabaá¸·Ä«kÄ• ro Ä• hÄ• ro --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ upÄ• diá¹‡á

<908> katamaá¹ƒ \Be 195/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ anupÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ sappaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ? saddÄ• panaÃ±Ã±ampi atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ na kammassa katattÄ• rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ gandhÄ• yatanaá phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ anupÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ sappaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ

<909> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ anupÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ appaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ? kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±atti v rÅ«passa lahutÄ• rÅ«passa mudutÄ• rÅ«passa kammaÃ±Ã±atÄ• rÅ«passa jaratÄ• rÅ«pa panaÃ±Ã±ampi \Ne 215/ atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ na kammassa katattÄ• Ä• kÄ• sadhÄ• tu Ä• podhÄ santati kabaá¸·Ä«kÄ• ro Ä• hÄ• ro --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ anupÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ appaá¹-ig

<910> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ upÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ mahÄ• bhÅ«taá¹ƒ? kammassa katattÄ

Ä• podhÄ• tu --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ upÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ mahÄ• bhÅ«taá¹ƒ.

<911> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ upÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ na mahÄ• bhÅ«taá¹ƒ? cakkhÄ• yatan
kÄ• yÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ itthindriyaá¹ƒ purisindriyaá¹ƒ jÄ«vitindriyaá¹ƒ, yaá¹ƒ vÄ• panaÃ±Ã±ampi
kammassa katattÄ• rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ gandhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ rasÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ Ä• kÄ• sadhÄ•
santati kabaá¸·Ä«kÄ• ro Ä• hÄ• ro --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ upÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ na mahÄ• b

<912> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ anupÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ mahÄ• bhÅ«taá¹ƒ? na kammassa k
phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ Ä• podhÄ• tu --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ anupÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ ma

<913> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ anupÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ na mahÄ• bhÅ«taá¹ƒ? saddÄ• yata
vacÄ«viÃ±Ã±atti rÅ«passa lahutÄ• rÅ«passa mudutÄ• rÅ«passa kammaÃ±Ã±atÄ• rÅ«pas yaá¹ƒ vÄ• panaÃ±Ã±ampi atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ na kammassa katattÄ• rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ gandhÄ
Ä• kÄ• sadhÄ• tu rÅ«passa upacayo rÅ«passa santati kabaá¸·Ä«kÄ• ro Ä• hÄ• ro --- idaá¹ƒ anupÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ na mahÄ• bhÅ«taá¹ƒ.

<914> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ upÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ oá¸·Ä• rikaá¹ƒ? cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... yaá¹ƒ vÄ• panaÃ±Ã±ampi atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ kammassa katattÄ• rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ \Se 248/ g rasÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ upÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ oá

<915> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ upÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ sukhumaá¹ƒ? itthindriyaá¹ƒ purisindriy yaá¹ƒ vÄ• panaÃ±Ã±ampi atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ kammassa katattÄ• Ä• kÄ• sadhÄ• tu Ä• podhÄ•
rÅ«passa santati kabaá¸·Ä«kÄ• ro Ä• hÄ• ro --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ upÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ su

<916> katamaá¹ƒ \Ne 216/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ anupÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ oá¸·Ä• rikaá¹ƒ? saddÄ• ya panaÃ±Ã±ampi atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ na kammassa katattÄ• rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ gandhÄ• yatanaá¹ phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ anupÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ oá¸·Ä• rikaá¹ƒ.

<917> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ anupÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ sukhumaá¹ƒ? kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±atti vac
lahutÄ• rÅ«passa mudutÄ• rÅ«passa kammaÃ±Ã±atÄ• rÅ«passa jaratÄ• rÅ«passa anicc
atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ na kammassa katattÄ• Ä• kÄ• sadhÄ• tu Ä• podhÄ• tu rÅ«passa upacayo r Ä• hÄ• ro --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ anupÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ sukhumaá¹ƒ.

<918> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ upÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ dÅ«re? itthindriyaá¹ƒ purisindriyaá¹ƒ j vÄ• panaÃ±Ã±ampi atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ kammassa katattÄ• Ä• kÄ• sadhÄ• tu Ä• podhÄ• tu rÅ« kabaá¸·Ä«kÄ• ro Ä• hÄ• ro --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ upÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ dÅ«re.

<919> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ upÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ santike? cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... k

vÄ• panaÃ±Ã±ampi atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ kammassa katattÄ• rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ gandhÄ• yatana phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ upÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ santike.

<920> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ anupÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ dÅ«re? kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±atti \Se 249/ v lahutÄ• rÅ«passa mudutÄ• rÅ«passa \Ee 172/ kammaÃ±Ã±atÄ• rÅ«passa jaratÄ• rÅ«pas
panaÃ±Ã±ampi atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ na kammassa katattÄ• Ä• kÄ• sadhÄ• tu Ä• podhÄ• tu rÅ«p kabaá¸·Ä«kÄ• ro Ä• hÄ• ro --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ anupÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ dÅ«re.

<921> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ anupÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ santike? saddÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ, yaá¹ƒ v rÅ«paá¹ƒ na kammassa katattÄ• rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ gandhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ rasÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ph idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ anupÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ santike.

<922> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ upÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡upÄ• dÄ• niyaá¹ƒ sanidassanaá¹ƒ? kamma
--- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ upÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡upÄ• dÄ• niyaá¹ƒ sanidassanaá¹ƒ.

<923> katamaá¹ƒ \Be 197/ \Ne 217/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ upÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡upÄ• dÄ• niyaá¹ƒ anidas
... pe ... kÄ• yÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ, itthindriyaá¹ƒ purisindriyaá¹ƒ jÄ«vitindriyaá¹ƒ, yaá¹ƒ vÄ• panaÃ rÅ«paá¹ƒ kammassa katattÄ• gandhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ rasÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatana rÅ«passa upacayo rÅ«passa santati kabaá¸·Ä«kÄ• ro Ä• hÄ• ro --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ up anidassanaá¹ƒ.

<924> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ anupÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡upÄ• dÄ• niyaá¹ƒ sanidassanaá¹ƒ? na k rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ anupÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡upÄ• dÄ• niyaá¹ƒ sanidassana

<925> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ anupÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡upÄ• dÄ• niyaá¹ƒ anidassanaá¹ƒ? saddÄ
vacÄ«viÃ±Ã±atti rÅ«passa lahutÄ• rÅ«passa mudutÄ• rÅ«passa kammaÃ±Ã±atÄ• rÅ«pas yaá¹ƒ vÄ• panaÃ±Ã±ampi atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ na kammassa katattÄ• gandhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ rasÄ• phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ Ä• kÄ• sadhÄ• tu Ä• podhÄ• tu \Se 250/ rÅ«passa upacayo rÅ« Ä• hÄ• ro --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ anupÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡upÄ• dÄ• niyaá¹ƒ anidassanaá¹ƒ.

<926> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ upÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡upÄ• dÄ• niyaá¹ƒ sappaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ? cakkhÄ
kÄ• yÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ, yaá¹ƒ vÄ• panaÃ±Ã±ampi atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ kammassa katattÄ• rÅ«pÄ• y 173/ rasÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ upÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡up sappaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ.

<927> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ upÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡upÄ• dÄ• niyaá¹ƒ appaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ? itthindri jÄ«vitindriyaá¹ƒ, yaá¹ƒ vÄ• panaÃ±Ã±ampi atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ kammassa katattÄ• Ä• kÄ• sadh upacayo rÅ«passa santati kabaá¸·Ä«kÄ• ro Ä• hÄ• ro --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ upÄ• diá¹‡á appaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ.

<928> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ anupÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡upÄ• dÄ• niyaá¹ƒ sappaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ? sad
panaÃ±Ã±ampi atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ na kammassa katattÄ• rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ gandhÄ• yatanaá
phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ anupÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡upÄ• dÄ• niyaá¹ƒ sap

<929> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ anupÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡upÄ• dÄ• niyaá¹ƒ appaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ? kÄ• y
rÅ«passa lahutÄ• rÅ«passa mudutÄ• rÅ«passa kammaÃ±Ã±atÄ• rÅ«passa jaratÄ• rÅ«pa 218/ panaÃ±Ã±ampi atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ na kammassa katattÄ• Ä• kÄ• sadhÄ• tu Ä• podhÄ• tu
santati kabaá¸·Ä«kÄ• ro Ä• hÄ• ro --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ anupÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡upÄ• dÄ• niya

<930> katamaá¹ƒ \Be 198/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ upÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡upÄ• dÄ• niyaá¹ƒ mahÄ• bhÅ«taá phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ Ä• podhÄ• tu --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ upÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡upÄ• dÄ• 251/.

<931> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ upÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡upÄ• dÄ• niyaá¹ƒ na mahÄ• bhÅ«taá¹ƒ? ca
kÄ• yÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ itthindriyaá¹ƒ purisindriyaá¹ƒ jÄ«vitindriyaá¹ƒ, yaá¹ƒ vÄ• panaÃ±Ã±ampi
kammassa katattÄ• rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ gandhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ rasÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ Ä• kÄ• sadhÄ•
santati kabaá¸·Ä«kÄ• ro Ä• hÄ• ro --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ upÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡upÄ• dÄ• niyaá¹ƒ

<932> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ anupÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡upÄ• dÄ• niyaá¹ƒ mahÄ• bhÅ«taá¹ƒ? na
phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ Ä• podhÄ• tu --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ anupÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡upÄ• d <933> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ anupÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡upÄ• dÄ• niyaá¹ƒ na mahÄ• bhÅ«taá¹ƒ?

kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±atti vacÄ«viÃ±Ã±atti rÅ«passa lahutÄ• rÅ«passa mudutÄ• rÅ«passa kamma rÅ«passa aniccatÄ• , yaá¹ƒ vÄ• panaÃ±Ã±ampi atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ na kammassa katattÄ• rÅ« gandhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ rasÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ Ä• kÄ• sadhÄ• tu rÅ«passa upacayo rÅ«passa santati idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ anupÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡upÄ• dÄ• niyaá¹ƒ na mahÄ• bhÅ«taá¹ƒ.

<934> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ upÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡upÄ• dÄ• niyaá¹ƒ oá¸·Ä• rikaá¹ƒ? cakkhÄ•
kÄ• yÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ, yaá¹ƒ vÄ• panaÃ±Ã±ampi atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ kammassa katattÄ• rÅ«pÄ• y
rasÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ upÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡upÄ• d

<935> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ upÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡upÄ• dÄ• niyaá¹ƒ sukhumaá¹ƒ? itthindriyaá
jÄ«vitindriyaá¹ƒ, yaá¹ƒ vÄ• panaÃ±Ã±ampi atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ kammassa katattÄ• Ä• kÄ• sadh upacayo rÅ«passa santati kabaá¸·Ä«kÄ• ro Ä• hÄ• ro --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ upÄ• diá¹‡á sukhumaá¹ƒ.

<936> katamaá¹ƒ \Ne 219/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ anupÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡upÄ• dÄ• niyaá¹ƒ oá¸·Ä• rikaá¹ vÄ• panaÃ±Ã±ampi atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ na kammassa katattÄ• rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ gandhÄ• yata phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ anupÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡upÄ• dÄ• niyaá¹ƒ oá¸

<937> katamaá¹ƒ \Be 199/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ anupÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡upÄ• dÄ• niyaá¹ƒ sukhumaá¹ƒ?
vacÄ«viÃ±Ã±atti rÅ«passa lahutÄ• rÅ«passa mudutÄ• rÅ«passa kammaÃ±Ã±atÄ• rÅ«pas yaá¹ƒ vÄ• panaÃ±Ã±ampi atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ na kammassa katattÄ• Ä• kÄ• sadhÄ• tu Ä• podh
santati kabaá¸·Ä«kÄ• ro Ä• hÄ• ro --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ anupÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡upÄ• dÄ• niya

<938> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ upÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡upÄ• dÄ• niyaá¹ƒ dÅ«re? itthindriyaá¹ƒ pur
jÄ«vitindriyaá¹ƒ, yaá¹ƒ vÄ• panaÃ±Ã±ampi atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ kammassa katattÄ• Ä• kÄ• sadh
upacayo rÅ«passa santati kabaá¸·Ä«kÄ• ro Ä• hÄ• ro --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ upÄ• diá¹‡á

<939> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ upÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡upÄ• dÄ• niyaá¹ƒ santike cakkhÄ• yatanaá
kÄ• yÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ, yaá¹ƒ vÄ• panaÃ±Ã±ampi atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ kammassa katattÄ• rÅ«pÄ• y
rasÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ upÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡upÄ• d

<940> katamaá¹ƒ \Ee 175/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ anupÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡upÄ• dÄ• niyaá¹ƒ dÅ«re? kÄ• y
rÅ«passa lahutÄ• rÅ«passa mudutÄ• rÅ«passa kammaÃ±Ã±atÄ• rÅ«passa jaratÄ• rÅ«pa
panaÃ±Ã±ampi atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ na kammassa katattÄ• Ä• kÄ• sadhÄ• tu Ä• podhÄ• tu rÅ«p
\Se 253/ kabaá¸·Ä«kÄ• ro Ä• hÄ• ro --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ anupÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡upÄ• dÄ• niy

<941> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ anupÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡upÄ• dÄ• niyaá¹ƒ santike? saddÄ• yatan
atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ na kammassa katattÄ• rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ gandhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ rasÄ• yatanaá
--- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ anupÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡upÄ• dÄ• niyaá¹ƒ santike.

<942> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ sappaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ indriyaá¹ƒ? cakkhundriyaá¹ƒ ... pe ... kÄ idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ sappaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ indriyaá¹ƒ.

<943> katamaá¹ƒ \Ne 220/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ sappaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ na indriyaá¹ƒ? rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ sappaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ na indriyaá¹ƒ.

<944> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ appaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ indriyaá¹ƒ? itthindriyaá¹ƒ purisindriyaá¹ƒ idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ appaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ indriyaá¹ƒ.

<945> katamaá¹ƒ \Be 200/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ appaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ na indriyaá¹ƒ? kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±atti
... kabaá¸·Ä«kÄ• ro Ä• hÄ• ro --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ appaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ na indriyaá¹ƒ.

<946> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ sappaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ mahÄ• bhÅ«taá¹ƒ? phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• ya rÅ«paá¹ƒ sappaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ mahÄ• bhÅ«taá¹ƒ.

<947> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ sappaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ na mahÄ• bhÅ«taá¹ƒ? cakkhÄ• yatanaá
--- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ sappaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ na mahÄ• bhÅ«taá¹ƒ.

<948> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ appaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ mahÄ• bhÅ«taá¹ƒ? Ä• podhÄ• tu --- idaá appaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ mahÄ• bhÅ«taá¹ƒ.

<949> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ appaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ na mahÄ• bhÅ«taá¹ƒ? itthindriyaá¹ƒ ... pe
Ä• hÄ• ro --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ appaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ na mahÄ• bhÅ«taá¹ƒ.

<950> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ indriyaá¹ƒ oá¸·Ä• rikaá¹ƒ? cakkhundriyaá¹ƒ ... pe ... kÄ• y taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ indriyaá¹ƒ oá¸·Ä• rikaá¹ƒ.

<951> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ indriyaá¹ƒ sukhumaá¹ƒ? itthindriyaá¹ƒ \Ee 176/ purisindri jÄ«vitindriyaá¹ƒ --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ indriyaá¹ƒ \Se 254/ sukhumaá¹ƒ.

<952> katamaá¹ƒ \Ne 221/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ na indriyaá¹ƒ oá¸·Ä• rikaá¹ƒ? rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ na indriyaá¹ƒ oá¸·Ä• rikaá¹ƒ.

<953> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ na indriyaá¹ƒ sukhumaá¹ƒ? kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±atti vacÄ«viÃ±Ã kabaá¸·Ä«kÄ• ro Ä• hÄ• ro --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ na indriyaá¹ƒ sukhumaá¹ƒ.

<954> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ indriyaá¹ƒ dÅ«re? itthindriyaá¹ƒ purisindriyaá¹ƒ jÄ«vitindr taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ indriyaá¹ƒ dÅ«re.

<955> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ indriyaá¹ƒ santike? cakkhundriyaá¹ƒ ... pe ... kÄ• yindriya rÅ«paá¹ƒ indriyaá¹ƒ santike.

<956> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ na indriyaá¹ƒ dÅ«re? kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±atti vacÄ«viÃ±Ã±atti .
Ä• hÄ• ro --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ na indriyaá¹ƒ dÅ«re.

<957> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ na indriyaá¹ƒ santike? rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... phoá¹-á idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ na indriyaá¹ƒ santike.

<958> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ mahÄ• bhÅ«taá¹ƒ oá¸·Ä• rikaá¹ƒ? phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatan rÅ«paá¹ƒ mahÄ• bhÅ«taá¹ƒ oá¸·Ä• rikaá¹ƒ.

<959> katamaá¹ƒ \Be 201/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ mahÄ• bhÅ«taá¹ƒ sukhumaá¹ƒ? Ä• podhÄ• tu -- mahÄ• bhÅ«taá¹ƒ sukhumaá¹ƒ.

<960> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ na mahÄ• bhÅ«taá¹ƒ oá¸·Ä• rikaá¹ƒ? cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ
--- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ na mahÄ• bhÅ«taá¹ƒ oá¸·Ä• rikaá¹ƒ.

<961> katamaá¹ƒ \Ne 222/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ na mahÄ• bhÅ«taá¹ƒ sukhumaá¹ƒ? itthindriyaá¹ kabaá¸·Ä«kÄ• ro Ä• hÄ• ro --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ na mahÄ• bhÅ«taá¹ƒ sukhumaá¹ƒ.

<962> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ mahÄ• bhÅ«taá¹ƒ dÅ«re? Ä• podhÄ• tu --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ r dÅ«re.

<963> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ mahÄ• bhÅ«taá¹ƒ santike? phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ -- mahÄ• bhÅ«taá¹ƒ santike.

<964> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ na mahÄ• bhÅ«taá¹ƒ dÅ«re? itthindriyaá¹ƒ ... pe ... \Se 2 Ä• hÄ• ro --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ na mahÄ• bhÅ«taá¹ƒ dÅ«re.

<965> katamaá¹ƒ \Ee 177/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ na mahÄ• bhÅ«taá¹ƒ santike? cakkhÄ• yatanaá
--- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ na mahÄ• bhÅ«taá¹ƒ santike.

<966> rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ diá¹-á¹-haá¹ƒ, saddÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ sutaá¹ƒ, gandhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ras
phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ mutaá¹ƒ, sabbaá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ manasÄ• viÃ±Ã±Ä• taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá

evaá¹ƒ catubbidhena rÅ«pasaá¹…gaho.

catukkaá¹ƒ.

paÃ±cakaá¹ƒ

<967> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ pathavÄ«dhÄ• tu? yaá¹ƒ kakkhaá¸·aá¹ƒ kharagataá¹ƒ {kh kakkhaá¸·attaá¹ƒ kakkhaá¸·abhÄ• vo ajjhattaá¹ƒ vÄ• bahiddhÄ• vÄ• upÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ vÄ
--- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ pathavÄ«dhÄ• tu.

<968> katamaá¹ƒ \Ne 223/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ Ä• podhÄ• tu? yaá¹ƒ Ä• po Ä• pogataá¹ƒ sineh bandhanattaá¹ƒ rÅ«passa ajjhattaá¹ƒ vÄ• bahiddhÄ• vÄ• upÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ vÄ• anupÄ• taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ Ä• podhÄ• tu.

<969> katamaá¹ƒ \Be 202/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ tejodhÄ• tu? yaá¹ƒ tejo tejogataá¹ƒ usmÄ• usm usumagataá¹ƒ ajjhattaá¹ƒ vÄ• bahiddhÄ• vÄ• upÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ vÄ• anupÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡aá rÅ«paá¹ƒ tejodhÄ• tu.

<970> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ vÄ• yodhÄ• tu? yaá¹ƒ vÄ• yo vÄ• yogataá¹ƒ thambhitatta
bahiddhÄ• vÄ• upÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ vÄ• anupÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ vÄ• --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹

<971> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ upÄ• dÄ• ? cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... kabaá¸·Ä«kÄ• ro rÅ«paá¹ƒ upÄ• dÄ• .

evaá¹ƒ paÃ±cavidhena rÅ«pasaá¹…gaho.

paÃ±cakaá¹ƒ.

chakkaá¹ƒ

<972> rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ \Se 256/ cakkhuviÃ±Ã±eyyaá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ, saddÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ sota gandhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ghÄ• naviÃ±Ã±eyyaá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ, rasÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ jivhÄ• viÃ±Ã±eyyaá phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±eyyaá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ, sabbaá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ manoviÃ±

evaá¹ƒ chabbidhena rÅ«pasaá¹…gaho.

chakkaá¹ƒ.

sattakaá¹ƒ

<973> rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ \Ee 178/ \Ne 224/ cakkhuviÃ±Ã±eyyaá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ, saddÄ• yatan rÅ«paá¹ƒ, gandhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ghÄ• naviÃ±Ã±eyyaá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ, rasÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ jivhÄ• viÃ phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±eyyaá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ, rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ saddÄ• yata rasÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ manodhÄ• tuviÃ±Ã±eyyaá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ, sabbaá manoviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡adhÄ• tuviÃ±Ã±eyyaá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ.

evaá¹ƒ sattavidhena rÅ«pasaá¹…gaho.

sattakaá¹ƒ.

aá¹-á¹-hakaá¹ƒ

<974> rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ \Be 203/ cakkhuviÃ±Ã±eyyaá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ, saddÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ sota
gandhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ghÄ• naviÃ±Ã±eyyaá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ, rasÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ jivhÄ• viÃ±Ã±eyyaá phoá¹-á¹-habbo sukhasamphasso kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±eyyaá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ, amanÄ• piyo phoá¹-á¹-h kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±eyyaá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ, rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ saddÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ gandhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ r phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ manodhÄ• tuviÃ±Ã±eyyaá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ, sabbaá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ manoviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡adhÄ• tuviÃ±Ã±eyyaá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ.

evaá¹ƒ aá¹-á¹-havidhena rÅ«pasaá¹…gaho.

aá¹-á¹-hakaá¹ƒ.

navakaá¹ƒ

<975> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ cakkhundriyaá¹ƒ? yaá¹ƒ cakkhu catunnaá¹ƒ mahÄ• bhÅ«
... pe ... suÃ±Ã±o gÄ• mo peso --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ cakkhundriyaá¹ƒ \Se 257/.

<976> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ sotindriyaá¹ƒ ... pe ... ghÄ• nindriyaá¹ƒ ... pe ... jivhindriya kÄ• yindriyaá¹ƒ \Ne 225/ ... pe ... itthindriyaá¹ƒ ... pe ... purisindriyaá¹ƒ ... pe ... jÄ«vitindriyaá tesaá¹ƒ rÅ«pÄ«naá¹ƒ dhammÄ• naá¹ƒ Ä• yu á¹-hiti yapanÄ• yÄ• panÄ• iriyanÄ• vattanÄ• jÄ«vitindriyaá¹ƒ --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ jÄ«vitindriyaá¹ƒ.

<977> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ na indriyaá¹ƒ? rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... kabaá¸·Ä«kÄ• r
taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ na indriyaá¹ƒ.

evaá¹ƒ navavidhena rÅ«pasaá¹…gaho.

navakaá¹ƒ.

dasakaá¹ƒ

<978> katamaá¹ƒ \Ee 179/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ cakkhundriyaá¹ƒ? yaá¹ƒ cakkhu catunnaá¹ƒ mah pasÄ• do ... pe ... suÃ±Ã±o gÄ• mo peso --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ cakkhundriyaá¹ƒ.

<979> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ sotindriyaá¹ƒ ... pe ... ghÄ• nindriyaá¹ƒ ... pe ... jivhindriya kÄ• yindriyaá¹ƒ ... pe ... itthindriyaá¹ƒ ... pe ... purisindriyaá¹ƒ ... pe ... jÄ«vitindriyaá¹ƒ? yo te rÅ«pÄ«naá¹ƒ dhammÄ• naá¹ƒ \Be 204/ Ä• yu á¹-hiti yapanÄ• yÄ• panÄ• iriyanÄ• vattanÄ jÄ«vitindriyaá¹ƒ --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ jÄ«vitindriyaá¹ƒ.

<980> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ na indriyaá¹ƒ sappaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ? rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe .
phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ na indriyaá¹ƒ sappaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ.

<981> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ na indriyaá¹ƒ appaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ? kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±atti ... pe ... l Ä• hÄ• ro --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ na indriyaá¹ƒ appaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ.

evaá¹ƒ dasavidhena rÅ«pasaá¹…gaho.

dasakaá¹ƒ.

ekÄ• dasakaá¹ƒ

<982> katamaá¹ƒ \Ne 226/ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ? yaá¹ƒ cakkhu catunnaá¹ƒ r pasÄ• do ... pe ... suÃ±Ã±o gÄ• mo peso --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ \Se 2

<983> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ sotÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... ghÄ• nÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... jivh
... kÄ• yÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... saddÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... gandhÄ
... rasÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ? pathavÄ«dhÄ• tu ... pe ... phoá¹-á¹
--- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ.

<984> katamaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ anidassanaá¹ƒ appaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ dhammÄ• yatanapariyÄ• pe ... kabaá¸·Ä«kÄ• ro Ä• hÄ• ro --- idaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ anidassanaá¹ƒ appaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ dhammÄ• yatanapariyÄ• pannaá¹ƒ.

evaá¹ƒ ekÄ• dasavidhena rÅ«pasaá¹…gaho.

ekÄ• dasakaá¹ƒ.

aá¹-á¹-hamabhÄ• á¹‡avÄ• ro.

rÅ«pavibhatti.

rÅ«pakaá¹‡á¸• aá¹ƒ niá¹-á¹-hitaá¹ƒ.

3. nikkhepakaá¹‡á¸• aá¹ƒ

tikanikkhepaá¹ƒ

<985> katame \Se 259/ \Be 205/ \Ee 180/ \Ne 227/ dhammÄ• kusalÄ• ? tÄ«á¹‡i kusalamÅ amoho; taá¹ƒsampayutto vedanÄ• kkhandho, saÃ±Ã±Ä• kkhandho, saá¹…khÄ• rakkhandho taá¹ƒsamuá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ kÄ• yakammaá¹ƒ, vacÄ«kammaá¹ƒ, manokammaá¹ƒ --- ime dha

<986> katame dhammÄ• akusalÄ• ? tÄ«á¹‡i akusalamÅ«lÄ• ni --- lobho, doso, moho; tade taá¹ƒsampayutto vedanÄ• kkhandho, saÃ±Ã±Ä• kkhandho, saá¹…khÄ• rakkhandho, viÃ±Ã
taá¹ƒsamuá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ kÄ• yakammaá¹ƒ, vacÄ«kammaá¹ƒ, manokammaá¹ƒ --- ime dha

<987> katame dhammÄ• abyÄ• katÄ• ? kusalÄ• kusalÄ• naá¹ƒ dhammÄ• naá¹ƒ vipÄ• kÄ arÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• , apariyÄ• pannÄ• ; vedanÄ• kkhandho, saÃ±Ã±Ä• kkhandho, saá¹…khÄ ye ca dhammÄ• kiriyÄ• neva kusalÄ• nÄ• kusalÄ• na ca kammavipÄ• kÄ• ; sabbaÃ±ca r
--- ime dhammÄ• abyÄ• katÄ• .

<988> katame dhammÄ• sukhÄ• ya vedanÄ• ya sampayuttÄ• ? sukhabhÅ«miyaá¹ƒ kÄ• m apariyÄ• panne, sukhaá¹ƒ vedanaá¹ƒ á¹-hapetvÄ• ; taá¹ƒsampayutto saÃ±Ã±Ä• kkhandho, viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho --- ime dhammÄ• sukhÄ• ya vedanÄ• ya sampayuttÄ• .

<989> katame dhammÄ• dukkhÄ• ya vedanÄ• ya sampayuttÄ• ? dukkhabhÅ«miyaá¹ƒ kÄ
228/ á¹-hapetvÄ• ; taá¹ƒsampayutto saÃ±Ã±Ä• kkhandho, saá¹…khÄ• rakkhandho, viÃ±Ã± dukkhÄ• ya vedanÄ• ya sampayuttÄ• \Se 260/.

<990> katame dhammÄ• adukkhamasukhÄ• ya vedanÄ• ya sampayuttÄ• ? adukkhamasu rÅ«pÄ• vacare, arÅ«pÄ• vacare, apariyÄ• panne, adukkhamasukhaá¹ƒ vedanaá¹ƒ á¹-hapet saÃ±Ã±Ä• kkhandho, saá¹…khÄ• rakkhandho, viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho --- ime dhammÄ• sampayuttÄ• .

<991> katame \Be 206/ dhammÄ• vipÄ• kÄ• ? kusalÄ• kusalÄ• naá¹ƒ dhammÄ• naá¹ƒ vip rÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• , arÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• , apariyÄ• pannÄ• ; vedanÄ• kkhandho ... pe ... viÃ±Ã± vipÄ• kÄ• .

<992> katame \Ee 181/ dhammÄ• vipÄ• kadhammadhammÄ• ? kusalÄ• kusalÄ• dhamm arÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• , apariyÄ• pannÄ• ; vedanÄ• kkhandho ... pe ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho vipÄ• kadhammadhammÄ• .

<993> katame dhammÄ• nevavipÄ• kanavipÄ• kadhammadhammÄ• ? ye ca dhammÄ• k kammavipÄ• kÄ• , sabbaÃ±ca rÅ«paá¹ƒ, asaá¹…khatÄ• ca dhÄ• tu --- ime dhammÄ• neva

<994> katame dhammÄ• upÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡upÄ• dÄ• niyÄ• ? sÄ• savÄ• kusalÄ• kusalÄ• naá
kÄ• mÄ• vacarÄ• , rÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• , arÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• ; vedanÄ• kkhandho ... pe ... viÃ±Ã± kammassa katattÄ• --- ime dhammÄ• upÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡upÄ• dÄ• niyÄ• .

<995> katame dhammÄ• anupÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡upÄ• dÄ• niyÄ• ? sÄ• savÄ• kusalÄ• kusalÄ• c rÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• , arÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• ; vedanÄ• kkhandho ... pe ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho; y kusalÄ• nÄ• kusalÄ• na ca kammavipÄ• kÄ• ; yaÃ±ca rÅ«paá¹ƒ na kammassa \Se 261/ ka anupÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡upÄ• dÄ• niyÄ• .

<996> katame \Ne 229/ dhammÄ• anupÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡aanupÄ• dÄ• niyÄ• ? apariyÄ• pannÄ• asaá¹…khatÄ• ca dhÄ• tu --- ime dhammÄ• anupÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡aanupÄ• dÄ• niyÄ• .

<997> katame dhammÄ• saá¹ƒkiliá¹-á¹-hasaá¹ƒkilesikÄ• ? tÄ«á¹‡i akusalamÅ«lÄ• ni --- lo tadekaá¹-á¹-hÄ• ca kilesÄ• ; taá¹ƒsampayutto vedanÄ• kkhandho ... pe ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akk
taá¹ƒsamuá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ kÄ• yakammaá¹ƒ, vacÄ«kammaá¹ƒ, manokammaá¹ƒ --- ime dha saá¹ƒkiliá¹-á¹-hasaá¹ƒkilesikÄ• .

<998> katame dhammÄ• asaá¹ƒkiliá¹-á¹-hasaá¹ƒkilesikÄ• ? sÄ• savÄ• kusalÄ• byÄ• katÄ rÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• , arÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• ; rÅ«pakkhandho, vedanÄ• kkhandho \Be 207/, saÃ±Ã± viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho --- ime dhammÄ• asaá¹ƒkiliá¹-á¹-hasaá¹ƒkilesikÄ• .

<999> katame dhammÄ• asaá¹ƒkiliá¹-á¹-haasaá¹ƒkilesikÄ• ? apariyÄ• pannÄ• maggÄ• c asaá¹…khatÄ• ca dhÄ• tu --- ime dhammÄ• asaá¹ƒkiliá¹-á¹-haasaá¹ƒkilesikÄ• .

<1000> katame dhammÄ• savitakkasavicÄ• rÄ• ? savitakkasavicÄ• rabhÅ«miyaá¹ƒ kÄ• m apariyÄ• panne \Ee 182/, vitakkavicÄ• re á¹-hapetvÄ• ; taá¹ƒsampayutto vedanÄ• kkhandho viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho --- ime dhammÄ• savitakkasavicÄ• rÄ• .

<1001> katame dhammÄ• avitakkavicÄ• ramattÄ• ? avitakkavicÄ• ramattabhÅ«miyaá¹ƒ rÅ vicÄ• raá¹ƒ á¹-hapetvÄ• ; taá¹ƒsampayutto vedanÄ• kkhandho ... pe ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhan avitakkavicÄ• ramattÄ• .

<1002> katame dhammÄ• avitakkaavicÄ• rÄ• ? avitakkaavicÄ• rabhÅ«miyaá¹ƒ kÄ• mÄ• v arÅ«pÄ• vacare, apariyÄ• panne; vedanÄ• kkhandho ... pe ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho; sab asaá¹…khatÄ• ca dhÄ• tu --- ime dhammÄ• avitakkaavicÄ• rÄ• .

<1003> katame dhammÄ• pÄ«tisahagatÄ• ? pÄ«tibhÅ«miyaá¹ƒ kÄ• mÄ• vacare, rÅ«pÄ• v
pÄ«tiá¹ƒ á¹-hapetvÄ• ; taá¹ƒsampayutto vedanÄ• kkhandho ... pe ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandh pÄ«tisahagatÄ• .

<1004> katame dhammÄ• sukhasahagatÄ• ? sukhabhÅ«miyaá¹ƒ kÄ• mÄ• vacare, rÅ«pÄ•
á¹-hapetvÄ• ; taá¹ƒsampayutto saÃ±Ã±Ä• kkhandho, saá¹…khÄ• rakkhandho, viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹ sukhasahagatÄ• .

<1005> katame dhammÄ• upekkhÄ• sahagatÄ• ? upekkhÄ• bhÅ«miyaá¹ƒ kÄ• mÄ• vacar
apariyÄ• panne, upekkhaá¹ƒ á¹-hapetvÄ• ; taá¹ƒsampayutto saÃ±Ã±Ä• kkhandho, saá¹…kh viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho --- ime dhammÄ• upekkhÄ• sahagatÄ• .

<1006> katame dhammÄ• dassanena pahÄ• tabbÄ• ? tÄ«á¹‡i saá¹ƒyojanÄ• ni --- sakkÄ• sÄ«labbataparÄ• mÄ• so.

<1007> tattha \Be 208/ katamÄ• sakkÄ• yadiá¹-á¹-hi? idha assutavÄ• puthujjano ariyÄ• na
ariyadhammassa akovido ariyadhamme avinÄ«to sappurisÄ• naá¹ƒ adassÄ• vÄ« sappurisa sappurisadhamme avinÄ«to rÅ«paá¹ƒ attato samanupassati, rÅ«pavantaá¹ƒ vÄ• attÄ• naá¹ rÅ«pasmiá¹ƒ vÄ• attÄ• naá¹ƒ. vedanaá¹ƒ attato samanupassati, vedanÄ• vantaá¹ƒ vÄ• att vedanaá¹ƒ, vedanÄ• ya vÄ• attÄ• naá¹ƒ. saÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ attato samanupassati, saÃ±Ã±Ä• va vÄ• saÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ, saÃ±Ã±Ä• ya \Se 263/ vÄ• attÄ• naá¹ƒ. saá¹…khÄ• re attato \Ee 183/ sa saá¹…khÄ• ravantaá¹ƒ vÄ• attÄ• naá¹ƒ, attani vÄ• saá¹…khÄ• re, saá¹…khÄ• resu vÄ• a attato samanupassati, viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡avantaá¹ƒ vÄ• attÄ• naá¹ƒ, attani vÄ• viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá attÄ• naá¹ƒ. yÄ• evarÅ«pÄ• diá¹-á¹-hi diá¹-á¹-higataá¹ƒ diá¹-á¹-higahanaá¹ƒ diá¹-á¹-hikantÄ diá¹-á¹-hivisÅ«kÄ• yikaá¹ƒ {diá¹-á¹-hivisÅ«kÄ• yitaá¹ƒ (Ce) } diá¹-á¹-hivipphanditaá¹ƒ diá¹-á¹
gÄ• ho paá¹-iggÄ• ho abhiniveso parÄ• mÄ• so kummaggo micchÄ• patho micchattaá¹ƒ titt --- ayaá¹ƒ vuccati sakkÄ• yadiá¹-á¹-hi.

<1008> tattha katamÄ• vicikicchÄ• ? satthari kaá¹…khati vicikicchati, dhamme kaá¹…khati kaá¹…khati vicikicchati, sikkhÄ• ya kaá¹…khati vicikicchati, pubbante kaá¹…khati \Ne 231/ v aparante kaá¹…khati vicikicchati, pubbantÄ• parante kaá¹…khati vicikicchati, idappaccayatÄ
paá¹-iccasamuppannesu dhammesu kaá¹…khati vicikicchati. yÄ• evarÅ«pÄ• kaá¹…khÄ•
kaá¹…khÄ• yitattaá¹ƒ vimati vicikicchÄ• dveá¸·hakaá¹ƒ dvedhÄ• patho saá¹ƒsayo anekaá¹
parisappanÄ• apariyogÄ• hanÄ• thambhitattaá¹ƒ cittassa manovilekho --- ayaá¹ƒ vuccati v

<1009> tattha katamo sÄ«labbataparÄ• mÄ• so? ito bahiddhÄ• samaá¹‡abrÄ• hmaá¹‡Ä• suddhi, sÄ«labbatena suddhÄ«â€™ ti yÄ• evarÅ«pÄ• diá¹-á¹-hi diá¹-á¹-higataá¹ƒ diá¹-á¹-hi
diá¹-á¹-hikantÄ• ro diá¹-á¹-hivisÅ«kÄ• yikaá¹ƒ diá¹-á¹-hivipphanditaá¹ƒ diá¹-á¹-hisaá¹ƒyojana
paá¹-iggÄ• ho abhiniveso parÄ• mÄ• so kummaggo micchÄ• patho micchattaá¹ƒ titthÄ• yata ayaá¹ƒ \Se 264/ vuccati sÄ«labbataparÄ• mÄ• so.

<1010> imÄ• ni \Be 209/ tÄ«á¹‡i saá¹ƒyojanÄ• ni; tadekaá¹-á¹-hÄ• ca kilesÄ• ; taá¹ƒsampa
... pe ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho; taá¹ƒsamuá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ kÄ• yakammaá¹ƒ vacÄ«kamm dhammÄ• dassanena pahÄ• tabbÄ• .

<1011> katame dhammÄ• bhÄ• vanÄ• ya pahÄ• tabbÄ• ? avaseso lobho, doso, moho; ta taá¹ƒsampayutto vedanÄ• kkhandho ... pe ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho; taá¹ƒsamuá¹-á¹-hÄ• vacÄ«kammaá¹ƒ, manokammaá¹ƒ --- ime dhammÄ• bhÄ• vanÄ• ya pahÄ• tabbÄ• .

<1012> katame dhammÄ• neva dassanena na bhÄ• vanÄ• ya pahÄ• tabbÄ• ? kusalÄ• by rÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• , arÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• , apariyÄ• pannÄ• ; vedanÄ• kkhandho ... pe ... viÃ±Ã±
sabbaÃ±ca rÅ«paá¹ƒ, asaá¹…khatÄ• ca dhÄ• tu --- ime dhammÄ• neva dassanena na bh

<1013> katame dhammÄ• dassanena pahÄ• tabbahetukÄ• ? tÄ«á¹‡i saá¹ƒyojanÄ• ni --- s vicikicchÄ• , sÄ«labbataparÄ• mÄ• so.

<1014> tattha katamÄ• sakkÄ• yadiá¹-á¹-hi ... pe ... ayaá¹ƒ vuccati sakkÄ• yadiá¹-á¹-hi.

<1015> tattha \Ne 232/ katamÄ• vicikicchÄ• ... pe ... ayaá¹ƒ vuccati vicikicchÄ• .

<1016> tattha katamo sÄ«labbataparÄ• mÄ• so ... pe ... ayaá¹ƒ vuccati sÄ«labbataparÄ• m

<1017> imÄ• ni tÄ«á¹‡i saá¹ƒyojanÄ• ni; tadekaá¹-á¹-hÄ• ca kilesÄ• ; taá¹ƒsampayutto ve
viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho; taá¹ƒsamuá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ kÄ• yakammaá¹ƒ, vacÄ«kammaá¹ƒ, m dassanena pahÄ• tabbahetukÄ• . tÄ«á¹‡i saá¹ƒyojanÄ• ni --- sakkÄ• yadiá¹-á¹-hi, vicikicchÄ \Se 265/ --- ime dhammÄ• dassanena pahÄ• tabbÄ• . tadekaá¹-á¹-ho lobho, doso, moho --- pahÄ• tabbahetÅ«. tadekaá¹-á¹-hÄ• ca kilesÄ• ; taá¹ƒsampayutto vedanÄ• kkhandho ... pe taá¹ƒsamuá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ kÄ• yakammaá¹ƒ, vacÄ«kammaá¹ƒ, manokammaá¹ƒ --- ime dha pahÄ• tabbahetukÄ• .

<1018> katame dhammÄ• bhÄ• vanÄ• ya pahÄ• tabbahetukÄ• ? avaseso lobho, doso, mo
pahÄ• tabbahetÅ«. tadekaá¹-á¹-hÄ• \Be 210/ ca kilesÄ• ; taá¹ƒsampayutto vedanÄ• kkhand
viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho; taá¹ƒsamuá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ kÄ• yakammaá¹ƒ, vacÄ«kammaá¹ƒ, m bhÄ• vanÄ• ya pahÄ• tabbahetukÄ• .

<1019> katame dhammÄ• neva dassanena na bhÄ• vanÄ• ya pahÄ• tabbahetukÄ• ? te d
kusalÄ• kusalÄ• byÄ• katÄ• dhammÄ• kÄ• mÄ• vacarÄ• rÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• , arÅ«pÄ• vaca saÃ±Ã±Ä• kkhandho, saá¹…khÄ• rakkhandho, viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho; sabbaÃ±ca rÅ«pa ime dhammÄ• neva dassanena na bhÄ• vanÄ• ya pahÄ• tabbahetukÄ• .

<1020> katame dhammÄ• Ä• cayagÄ• mino? sÄ• savÄ• kusalÄ• kusalÄ• dhammÄ• kÄ•
arÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• ; vedanÄ• kkhandho ... pe ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho --- ime dhammÄ• Ä

<1021> katame dhammÄ• apacayagÄ• mino? cattÄ• ro maggÄ• apariyÄ• pannÄ• --- ime

<1022> katame \Ne 233/ dhammÄ• neva Ä• cayagÄ• mi na apacayagÄ• mino? kusalÄ• ku kÄ• mÄ• vacarÄ• , rÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• , arÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• , apariyÄ• pannÄ• \Se 266/; vedanÄ
viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho; ye ca dhammÄ• kiriyÄ• neva kusalÄ• nÄ• kusalÄ• na ca kamm asaá¹…khatÄ• ca dhÄ• tu --- ime dhammÄ• neva Ä• cayagÄ• mi na apacayagÄ• mino.

<1023> katame dhammÄ• sekkhÄ• ? cattÄ• ro maggÄ• apariyÄ• pannÄ• , heá¹-á¹-himÄ•
--- ime dhammÄ• sekkhÄ• .

<1024> katame \Ee 185/ dhammÄ• asekkhÄ• ? upariá¹-á¹-himaá¹ƒ {uparimaá¹ƒ (Se) } aral dhammÄ• asekkhÄ• .

<1025> katame dhammÄ• nevasekkhanÄ• sekkhÄ• ? te dhamme á¹-hapetvÄ• , avasesÄ•
kÄ• mÄ• vacarÄ• , rÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• , arÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• ; vedanÄ• kkhandho ... pe ... viÃ±Ã± rÅ«paá¹ƒ, asaá¹…khatÄ• ca dhÄ• tu --- ime dhammÄ• nevasekkhanÄ• sekkhÄ• .

<1026> katame \Be 211/ dhammÄ• parittÄ• ? sabbeva kÄ• mÄ• vacarÄ• kusalÄ• kusalÄ•
... pe ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho --- ime dhammÄ• parittÄ• .

<1027> katame dhammÄ• mahaggatÄ• ? rÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• , arÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• , kusalÄ• by
... pe ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho --- ime dhammÄ• mahaggatÄ• .

<1028> katame dhammÄ• appamÄ• á¹‡Ä• ? apariyÄ• pannÄ• maggÄ• ca, maggaphalÄ• ime dhammÄ• appamÄ• á¹‡Ä• .

<1029> katame dhammÄ• parittÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• ? paritte dhamme Ä• rabbha ye uppajjanti ime dhammÄ• parittÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• .

<1030> katame dhammÄ• mahaggatÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• ? mahaggate dhamme Ä• rabbha ye dhammÄ• --- ime dhammÄ• mahaggatÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• .

<1031> katame dhammÄ• appamÄ• á¹‡Ä• rammaá¹‡Ä• ? appamÄ• á¹‡e dhamme Ä• rab dhammÄ• --- ime dhammÄ• appamÄ• á¹‡Ä• rammaá¹‡Ä• .

<1032> katame \Ne 234/ dhammÄ• hÄ«nÄ• ? tÄ«á¹‡i akusalamÅ«lÄ• ni --- lobho, doso, m kilesÄ• ; taá¹ƒsampayutto vedanÄ• kkhandho ... pe ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho; taá¹ƒsamuá kÄ• yakammaá¹ƒ, vacÄ«kammaá¹ƒ, manokammaá¹ƒ --- ime dhammÄ• hÄ«nÄ• .

<1033> katame dhammÄ• majjhimÄ• ? sÄ• savÄ• kusalÄ• byÄ• katÄ• dhammÄ• kÄ• m arÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• , rÅ«pakkhandho ... pe ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho --- ime dhammÄ• majj

<1034> katame dhammÄ• paá¹‡Ä«tÄ• ? apariyÄ• pannÄ• maggÄ• ca, maggaphalÄ• ni c dhammÄ• paá¹‡Ä«tÄ• .

<1035> katame \Ee 186/ dhammÄ• micchattaniyatÄ• ? paÃ±ca kammÄ• ni Ä• nantarikÄ• micchÄ• diá¹-á¹-hiniyatÄ• --- ime dhammÄ• micchattaniyatÄ• .

<1036> katame dhammÄ• sammattaniyatÄ• ? cattÄ• ro maggÄ• apariyÄ• pannÄ• --- ime

<1037> katame \Be 212/ dhammÄ• aniyatÄ• ? te dhamme á¹-hapetvÄ• , avasesÄ• kusalÄ
kÄ• mÄ• vacarÄ• , rÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• , arÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• , apariyÄ• pannÄ• ; vedanÄ• kkhand sabbaÃ±ca rÅ«paá¹ƒ, asaá¹…khatÄ• ca dhÄ• tu --- ime dhammÄ• aniyatÄ• .

<1038> katame dhammÄ• maggÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• ? ariyamaggaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha ye uppajjanti dhammÄ• maggÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• .

<1039> katame \Se 268/ dhammÄ• maggahetukÄ• ? ariyamaggasamaá¹…gissa maggaá¹ taá¹ƒsampayutto vedanÄ• kkhandho ... pe ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho --- ime dhammÄ• ma ariyamaggasamaá¹…gissa \Ne 235/ sammÄ• diá¹-á¹-hi maggo ceva hetu ca, sammÄ• diá¹-á taá¹ƒsampayutto vedanÄ• kkhandho ... pe ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho --- ime dhammÄ• ma
ariyamaggasamaá¹…gissa alobho, adoso, amoho --- ime dhammÄ• maggahetÅ«. taá¹ƒsam
... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho --- ime dhammÄ• maggahetukÄ• .

<1040> katame dhammÄ• maggÄ• dhipatino? ariyamaggaá¹ƒ adhipatiá¹ƒ karitvÄ• ye upp dhammÄ• --- ime dhammÄ• maggÄ• dhipatino. ariyamaggasamaá¹…gissa vÄ«maá¹ƒsÄ• bhÄ• vayantassa vÄ«maá¹ƒsaá¹ƒ á¹-hapetvÄ• ; taá¹ƒsampayutto vedanÄ• kkhandho ... pe ime dhammÄ• maggÄ• dhipatino.

<1041> katame dhammÄ• uppannÄ• ? ye dhammÄ• jÄ• tÄ• bhÅ«tÄ• saÃ±jÄ• tÄ• nibba uppannÄ• samuppannÄ• uá¹-á¹-hitÄ• samuá¹-á¹-hitÄ• uppannÄ• uppannaá¹ƒsena saá¹.

(bahÅ«su) }, vedanÄ• , saÃ±Ã±Ä• , saá¹…khÄ• rÄ• , viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ --- ime dhammÄ• u

<1042> katame dhammÄ• anuppannÄ• ? ye dhammÄ• ajÄ• tÄ• abhÅ«tÄ• asaÃ±jÄ• tÄ• apÄ• tubhÅ«tÄ• \Ee 187/ anuppannÄ• asamuppannÄ• anuá¹-á¹-hitÄ• asamuá¹-á¹-hitÄ• a saá¹…gahitÄ• , rÅ«paá¹ƒ, vedanÄ• , saÃ±Ã±Ä• , saá¹…khÄ• rÄ• , viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ --- ime

<1043> katame \Se 269/ dhammÄ• uppÄ• dino? kusalÄ• kusalÄ• naá¹ƒ dhammÄ• naá¹ƒ a kÄ• mÄ• vacarÄ• , rÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• , arÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• , apariyÄ• pannÄ• ; vedanÄ• kkhand yaÃ±ca rÅ«paá¹ƒ kammassa katattÄ• uppajjissati --- ime dhammÄ• uppÄ• dino.

<1044> katame \Be 213/ dhammÄ• atÄ«tÄ• ? ye dhammÄ• atÄ«tÄ• niruddhÄ• vigatÄ• v abbhatthaá¹…gatÄ• uppajjitvÄ• vigatÄ• atÄ«tÄ• atÄ«taá¹ƒsena saá¹…gahitÄ• , rÅ«paá¹ƒ saá¹…khÄ• rÄ• , viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ --- ime dhammÄ• atÄ«tÄ• .

<1045> katame dhammÄ• anÄ• gatÄ• ? ye dhammÄ• ajÄ• tÄ• abhÅ«tÄ• asaÃ±jÄ• tÄ• apÄ• tubhÅ«tÄ• anuppannÄ• asamuppannÄ• anuá¹-á¹-hitÄ• asamuá¹-á¹-hitÄ• anÄ• gatÄ rÅ«paá¹ƒ, vedanÄ• , saÃ±Ã±Ä• , saá¹…khÄ• rÄ• , viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ --- ime dhammÄ• anÄ

<1046> katame dhammÄ• paccuppannÄ• ? ye dhammÄ• jÄ• tÄ• bhÅ«tÄ• saÃ±jÄ• tÄ• n uppannÄ• samuppannÄ• uá¹-á¹-hitÄ• samuá¹-á¹-hitÄ• paccuppannÄ• paccuppannaá¹ƒs vedanÄ• , saÃ±Ã±Ä• , saá¹…khÄ• rÄ• , viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ --- ime dhammÄ• paccuppannÄ

<1047> katame dhammÄ• atÄ«tÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• ? atÄ«te dhamme Ä• rabbha ye uppajjant dhammÄ• atÄ«tÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• .

<1048> katame dhammÄ• anÄ• gatÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• ? anÄ• gate dhamme Ä• rabbha ye up dhammÄ• --- ime dhammÄ• anÄ• gatÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• .

<1049> katame dhammÄ• paccuppannÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• ? paccuppanne dhamme Ä• rabbh dhammÄ• --- ime dhammÄ• paccuppannÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• .

<1050> katame dhammÄ• ajjhattÄ• ? ye dhammÄ• tesaá¹ƒ tesaá¹ƒ sattÄ• naá¹ƒ ajjhattaá pÄ• á¹-ipuggalikÄ• upÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡Ä• , rÅ«paá¹ƒ, vedanÄ• , saÃ±Ã±Ä• , saá¹…khÄ• rÄ• , viÃ ajjhattÄ• .

<1051> katame dhammÄ• bahiddhÄ• ? ye dhammÄ• tesaá¹ƒ tesaá¹ƒ parasattÄ• naá¹ƒ pa 188/ paccattaá¹ƒ niyatÄ• pÄ• á¹-ipuggalikÄ• upÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡Ä• , rÅ«paá¹ƒ, vedanÄ• , saÃ±Ã viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ --- ime dhammÄ• bahiddhÄ• .

<1052> katame dhammÄ• ajjhattabahiddhÄ• ? tadubhayaá¹ƒ --- ime dhammÄ• ajjhattaba

<1053> katame dhammÄ• ajjhattÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• ? ajjhatte dhamme Ä• rabbha ye uppajja ime dhammÄ• ajjhattÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• .

<1054> katame \Be 214/ \Ne 237/ dhammÄ• bahiddhÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• ? bahiddhÄ• dhamm cittacetasikÄ• dhammÄ• --- ime dhammÄ• bahiddhÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• .

<1055> katame dhammÄ• ajjhattabahiddhÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• ? ajjhattabahiddhÄ• dhamme Ä cittacetasikÄ• dhammÄ• --- ime dhammÄ• ajjhattabahiddhÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• .

<1056> katame dhammÄ• sanidassanasappaá¹-ighÄ• ? rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ --- ime dhamm

<1057> katame dhammÄ• anidassanasappaá¹-ighÄ• ? cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ, sotÄ• yatanaá jivhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ, kÄ• yÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ, saddÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ, gandhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ \Se 271/, rasÄ phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ --- ime dhammÄ• anidassanasappaá¹-ighÄ• .

<1058> katame dhammÄ• anidassanaappaá¹-ighÄ• ? vedanÄ• kkhandho, saÃ±Ã±Ä• kkha viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho; yaÃ±ca rÅ«paá¹ƒ anidassanaá¹ƒ appaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ dhammÄ• yatan ca dhÄ• tu --- ime dhammÄ• anidassanaappaá¹-ighÄ• .

tikaá¹ƒ.

dukanikkhepaá¹ƒ

hetugocchakaá¹ƒ

<1059> katame dhammÄ• hetÅ«? tayo kusalahetÅ«, tayo akusalahetÅ«, tayo abyÄ• katah cha rÅ«pÄ• vacarahetÅ«, cha arÅ«pÄ• vacarahetÅ«, cha apariyÄ• pannahetÅ«.

<1060> tattha katame tayo kusalahetÅ«? alobho, adoso, amoho.

<1061> tattha \Ne 238/ katamo alobho? yo alobho alubbhanÄ• alubbhitattaá¹ƒ asÄ• rÄ• go asÄ• rajjitattaá¹ƒ anabhijjhÄ• alobho kusalamÅ«laá¹ƒ --- ayaá¹ƒ vuccati alobho.

<1062> tattha \Be 215/ katamo adoso? yo \Ee 189/ adoso adussanÄ• adussitattaá¹ƒ metti
mettÄ• yitattaá¹ƒ anuddÄ• anuddÄ• yanÄ• anudÄ• yitattaá¹ƒ hitesitÄ• anukampÄ• abyÄ•

kusalamÅ«laá¹ƒ --- ayaá¹ƒ vuccati adoso.

<1063> tattha katamo amoho? dukkhe Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ, dukkhasamudaye Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ, duk dukkhanirodhagÄ• miniyÄ• paá¹-ipadÄ• ya Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ, pubbante Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ, aparant pubbantÄ• parante Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ, idappaccayatÄ• paá¹-iccasamuppannesu dhammesu Ã± paÃ±Ã±Ä• \Se 272/ pajÄ• nanÄ• vicayo pavicayo dhammavicayo sallakkhaá¹‡Ä• upalakk
paá¹‡á¸• iccaá¹ƒ kosallaá¹ƒ nepuÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ vebhabyÄ• cintÄ• upaparikkhÄ• bhÅ«rÄ« med
sampajaÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ patodo paÃ±Ã±Ä• paÃ±Ã±indriyaá¹ƒ paÃ±Ã±Ä• balaá¹ƒ paÃ±Ã±Ä• satt
paÃ±Ã±Ä• Ä• loko paÃ±Ã±Ä• obhÄ• so paÃ±Ã±Ä• pajjoto paÃ±Ã±Ä• ratanaá¹ƒ amoho dha ayaá¹ƒ vuccati amoho.

ime tayo kusalahetÅ«.

<1064> tattha katame tayo akusalahetÅ«? lobho, doso, moho.

<1065> tattha katamo lobho? yo rÄ• go sÄ• rÄ• go anunayo anurodho nandÄ« nandÄ«rÄ•
sÄ• rÄ• go icchÄ• mucchÄ• ajjhosÄ• naá¹ƒ gedho paligedho saá¹…go paá¹…ko ejÄ• mÄ• {sibbanÄ« (Ce) } jÄ• linÄ« saritÄ• visattikÄ• suttaá¹ƒ visaá¹-Ä• Ä• yÅ«hinÄ« {Ä• yÅ«hanÄ paá¹‡idhi bhavanetti vanaá¹ƒ vanatho santhavo sineho apekkhÄ• paá¹-ibandhu Ä• sÄ• Ä• {Ä• siá¹ƒsanÄ• Ä• siá¹ƒsitattaá¹ƒ (Ce Se) } rÅ«pÄ• sÄ• saddÄ• sÄ• gandhÄ• sÄ• rasÄ• s lÄ• bhÄ• sÄ• dhanÄ• sÄ• puttÄ• sÄ• jÄ«vitÄ• sÄ• jappÄ• pajappÄ• abhijappÄ• jappÄ• loluppÄ• yanÄ• loluppÄ• yitattaá¹ƒ pucchaÃ±jikatÄ• {puÃ±cikatÄ• (Se) pucchikatÄ• (Ce) adhammarÄ• go visamalobho nikanti nikÄ• manÄ• patthanÄ• pihanÄ• sampatthanÄ• kÄ• vibhavataá¹‡hÄ• rÅ«pataá¹‡hÄ• arÅ«pataá¹‡hÄ• nirodhataá¹‡hÄ• rÅ«pataá¹‡hÄ• sadda 216/ rasataá¹‡hÄ• phoá¹-á¹-habbataá¹‡hÄ• dhammataá¹‡hÄ• \Se 273/ ogho yogo gantho nÄ«varaá¹‡aá¹ƒ chÄ• danaá¹ƒ bandhanaá¹ƒ upakkileso anusayo pariyuá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ latÄ dukkhamÅ«laá¹ƒ dukkhanidÄ• naá¹ƒ \Ne 239/ dukkhappabhavo mÄ• rapÄ• so mÄ• rabaá¸· taá¹‡hÄ• jÄ• laá¹ƒ taá¹‡hÄ• gaddulaá¹ƒ taá¹‡hÄ• samuddo abhijjhÄ• lobho akusalamÅ«laá

<1066> tattha \Ee 190/ katamo doso? anatthaá¹ƒ me acarÄ«ti Ä• ghÄ• to jÄ• yati, anatthaá jÄ• yati, anatthaá¹ƒ me carissatÄ«ti Ä• ghÄ• to jÄ• yati, piyassa me manÄ• passa anatthaá¹ anatthaá¹ƒ carati ... pe ... anatthaá¹ƒ carissatÄ«ti Ä• ghÄ• to jÄ• yati, appiyassa me amanÄ•
... pe ... atthaá¹ƒ carati ... pe ... atthaá¹ƒ carissatÄ«ti Ä• ghÄ• to jÄ• yati, aá¹-á¹-hÄ• ne vÄ• jÄ• yati. yo evarÅ«po cittassa Ä• ghÄ• to paá¹-ighÄ• to paá¹-ighaá¹ƒ paá¹-ivirodho kopo pak padoso sampadoso cittassa byÄ• patti manopadoso kodho kujjhanÄ• kujjhitattaá¹ƒ doso du byÄ• patti byÄ• pajjanÄ• byÄ• pajjitattaá¹ƒ virodho paá¹-ivirodho caá¹‡á¸• ikkaá¹ƒ asuropo
--- ayaá¹ƒ vuccati doso.

<1067> tattha katamo moho? dukkhe aÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ, dukkhasamudaye aÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá
aÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ, dukkhanirodhagÄ• miniyÄ• paá¹-ipadÄ• ya aÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ, pubbante
aÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ, pubbantÄ• parante aÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ, idappaccayatÄ• paá¹-iccasamupp yaá¹ƒ evarÅ«paá¹ƒ aÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ adassanaá¹ƒ anabhisamayo \Se 274/ ananubodho as asaá¹ƒgÄ• hanÄ• apariyogÄ• hanÄ• asamapekkhanÄ• apaccavekkhaá¹‡Ä• apaccakkhal asampajaÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ moho pamoho sammoho avijjÄ• avijjogho avijjÄ• yogo avijjÄ• nusayo a avijjÄ• laá¹…gÄ« moho akusalamÅ«laá¹ƒ --- ayaá¹ƒ vuccati moho.

ime tayo akusalahetÅ«.

<1068> tattha katame tayo abyÄ• katahetÅ«? kusalÄ• naá¹ƒ vÄ• dhammÄ• naá¹ƒ vipÄ• ka dhammesu alobho adoso amoho --- ime tayo abyÄ• katahetÅ«.

<1069> tattha \Be 217/ katame nava kÄ• mÄ• vacarahetÅ«? tayo kusalahetÅ«, tayo akusal abyÄ• katahetÅ« --- ime nava kÄ• mÄ• vacarahetÅ«.

<1070> tattha \Ne 240/ katame cha rÅ«pÄ• vacarahetÅ«? tayo kusalahetÅ«, tayo abyÄ• ka rÅ«pÄ• vacarahetÅ«.

<1071> tattha katame cha arÅ«pÄ• vacarahetÅ«? tayo \Ee 191/ kusalahetÅ«, tayo abyÄ• k arÅ«pÄ• vacarahetÅ«.

<1072> tattha katame cha apariyÄ• pannahetÅ«? tayo kusalahetÅ«, tayo abyÄ• katahetÅ« apariyÄ• pannahetÅ«.

<1073> tattha katame tayo kusalahetÅ«? alobho, adoso, amoho.

<1074> tattha katamo alobho? yo alobho alubbhanÄ• alubbhitattaá¹ƒ asÄ• rÄ• go asÄ• raj anabhijjhÄ• alobho kusalamÅ«laá¹ƒ --- ayaá¹ƒ vuccati alobho.

<1075> tattha katamo adoso? yo adoso adussanÄ• adussitattaá¹ƒ ... pe ... abyÄ• pÄ• do a kusalamÅ«laá¹ƒ --- ayaá¹ƒ vuccati adoso.

<1076> tattha katamo amoho \Se 275/? dukkhe Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ, dukkhasamudaye Ã±Ä• á¹‡ Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ, dukkhanirodhagÄ• miniyÄ• paá¹-ipadÄ• ya Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ, pubbante Ã±Ä• á pubbantÄ• parante Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ, idappaccayatÄ• paá¹-iccasamuppannesu dhammesu Ã± paÃ±Ã±Ä• pajÄ• nanÄ• vicayo pavicayo dhammavicayo sallakkhaá¹‡Ä• upalakkhaá¹‡Ä•
paá¹‡á¸• iccaá¹ƒ kosallaá¹ƒ nepuÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ vebhabyÄ• cintÄ• upaparikkhÄ• bhÅ«rÄ« med

sampajaÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ patodo paÃ±Ã±Ä• paÃ±Ã±indriyaá¹ƒ paÃ±Ã±Ä• balaá¹ƒ paÃ±Ã±Ä• satt
paÃ±Ã±Ä• Ä• loko paÃ±Ã±Ä• obhÄ• so paÃ±Ã±Ä• pajjoto paÃ±Ã±Ä• ratanaá¹ƒ amoho dha dhammavicayasambojjhaá¹…go maggaá¹…gaá¹ƒ maggapariyÄ• pannaá¹ƒ --- ayaá¹ƒ vucca

ime tayo kusalahetÅ«.

<1077> tattha \Be 218/ \Ne 241/ katame tayo abyÄ• katahetÅ«? kusalÄ• naá¹ƒ dhammÄ• n
amoho --- ime tayo abyÄ• katahetÅ«. ime cha apariyÄ• pannahetÅ« --- ime dhammÄ• hetÅ

<1078> katame dhammÄ• na hetÅ«? te dhamme á¹-hapetvÄ• , avasesÄ• kusalÄ• kusalÄ
kÄ• mÄ• vacarÄ• , rÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• , arÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• , apariyÄ• pannÄ• ; vedanÄ• kkhand sabbaÃ±ca rÅ«paá¹ƒ, asaá¹…khatÄ• ca dhÄ• tu --- ime dhammÄ• na hetÅ«.

<1079> katame dhammÄ• sahetukÄ• ? tehi dhammehi ye dhammÄ• sahetukÄ• vedanÄ• viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho --- ime dhammÄ• sahetukÄ• \Se 276/.

<1080> katame dhammÄ• ahetukÄ• ? tehi dhammehi ye dhammÄ• ahetukÄ• vedanÄ• kh viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho, sabbaÃ±ca rÅ«paá¹ƒ, asaá¹…khatÄ• ca dhÄ• tu --- ime dhammÄ

<1081> katame \Ee 192/ dhammÄ• hetusampayuttÄ• ? tehi dhammehi ye dhammÄ• sam
... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho --- ime dhammÄ• hetusampayuttÄ• .

<1082> katame dhammÄ• hetuvippayuttÄ• ? tehi dhammehi ye dhammÄ• vippayuttÄ• ve
viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho, sabbaÃ±ca rÅ«paá¹ƒ, asaá¹…khatÄ• ca dhÄ• tu --- ime dhammÄ

<1083> katame dhammÄ• hetÅ« ceva sahetukÄ• ca? lobho mohena hetu ceva sahetuko sahetuko ca, doso mohena hetu ceva sahetuko ca, moho dosena hetu ceva sahetuko ca; al aÃ±Ã±amaÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ hetÅ« ceva sahetukÄ• ca --- ime dhammÄ• hetÅ« ceva sahetukÄ• c <1084> katame dhammÄ• sahetukÄ• ceva na ca hetÅ«? tehi dhammehi ye dhammÄ• sa

á¹-hapetvÄ• , vedanÄ• kkhandho ... pe ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho --- ime dhammÄ• sahet

<1085> katame \Be 219/ dhammÄ• hetÅ« ceva hetusampayuttÄ• ca? lobho mohena hetu lobhena hetu ceva hetusampayutto ca, doso mohena hetu ceva hetusampayutto ca, moho d hetusampayutto ca; alobho adoso amoho \Se 277/, te aÃ±Ã±amaÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ hetÅ« ceva hetu dhammÄ• hetÅ« ceva hetusampayuttÄ• ca.

<1086> katame dhammÄ• hetusampayuttÄ• ceva na ca hetÅ«? tehi dhammehi ye dhamm

á¹-hapetvÄ• , vedanÄ• kkhandho ... pe ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho --- ime dhammÄ• hetusa

<1087> katame dhammÄ• na hetÅ« sahetukÄ• ? tehi dhammehi ye dhammÄ• na hetÅ« s
... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho --- ime dhammÄ• na hetÅ« sahetukÄ• .

<1088> katame dhammÄ• na hetÅ« ahetukÄ• ? tehi dhammehi ye dhammÄ• na hetÅ« ah
... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho, sabbaÃ±ca rÅ«paá¹ƒ, asaá¹…khatÄ• ca dhÄ• tu --- ime dhamm

cÅ«á¸·antaradukaá¹ƒ

<1089> katame dhammÄ• sappaccayÄ• ? paÃ±cakkhandhÄ• --- rÅ«pakkhandho, vedanÄ 193/, saá¹…khÄ• rakkhandho, viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho --- ime dhammÄ• sappaccayÄ• .

<1090> katame dhammÄ• appaccayÄ• ? asaá¹…khatÄ• dhÄ• tu --- ime dhammÄ• appac

<1091> katame dhammÄ• saá¹…khatÄ• ? yeva te dhammÄ• sappaccayÄ• , teva te dham

<1092> katame \Ne 243/ dhammÄ• asaá¹…khatÄ• ? yo eva so dhammo appaccayo, so ev

<1093> katame dhammÄ• sanidassanÄ• ? rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ --- ime dhammÄ• sanidassa

<1094> katame \Be 220/ dhammÄ• anidassanÄ• ? cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... phoá¹-á¹-ha vedanÄ• kkhandho ... pe ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho, yaÃ±ca rÅ«paá¹ƒ anidassanaá¹ƒ appa dhammÄ• yatanapariyÄ• pannaá¹ƒ, asaá¹…khatÄ• ca dhÄ• tu --- ime dhammÄ• anidassan

<1095> katame dhammÄ• sappaá¹-ighÄ• ? cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• y sappaá¹-ighÄ• .

<1096> katame dhammÄ• appaá¹-ighÄ• ? vedanÄ• kkhandho ... pe ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkha anidassanaá¹ƒ appaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ dhammÄ• yatanapariyÄ• pannaá¹ƒ, asaá¹…khatÄ• ca dhÄ• appaá¹-ighÄ• .

<1097> katame dhammÄ• rÅ«pino? cattÄ• ro ca mahÄ• bhÅ«tÄ• catunnaÃ±ca mahÄ• bh ime dhammÄ• rÅ«pino.

<1098> katame dhammÄ• arÅ«pino? vedanÄ• kkhandho ... pe ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho ime dhammÄ• arÅ«pino.

<1099> katame dhammÄ• lokiyÄ• ? sÄ• savÄ• kusalÄ• kusalÄ• byÄ• katÄ• dhammÄ• k arÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• , rÅ«pakkhandho ... pe ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho --- ime dhammÄ• lokiy <1100> katame dhammÄ• lokuttarÄ• ? apariyÄ• pannÄ• maggÄ• ca, maggaphalÄ• ni ca.

dhammÄ• lokuttarÄ• .

<1101> katame dhammÄ• kenaci viÃ±Ã±eyyÄ• , kenaci na viÃ±Ã±eyyÄ• ? ye \Ee 194/ te 244/, na te dhammÄ• sotaviÃ±Ã±eyyÄ• ; ye vÄ• pana te dhammÄ• sotaviÃ±Ã±eyyÄ• , na ye te dhammÄ• cakkhuviÃ±Ã±eyyÄ• , na te dhammÄ• ghÄ• naviÃ±Ã±eyyÄ• ; ye vÄ• pana te dhammÄ• cakkhuviÃ±Ã±eyyÄ• . ye te \Se 279/ dhammÄ• cakkhuviÃ±Ã±eyyÄ• , na te d vÄ• pana te dhammÄ• jivhÄ• viÃ±Ã±eyyÄ• , na te dhammÄ• cakkhuviÃ±Ã±eyyÄ• . ye te dhammÄ• kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±eyyÄ• ; ye vÄ• pana te dhammÄ• kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±eyyÄ• , na te dha dhammÄ• sotaviÃ±Ã±eyyÄ• , na te dhammÄ• ghÄ• naviÃ±Ã±eyyÄ• ; ye vÄ• pana te dha dhammÄ• sotaviÃ±Ã±eyyÄ• . ye te dhammÄ• sotaviÃ±Ã±eyyÄ• , na te dhammÄ• jivhÄ• v dhammÄ• \Be 221/ jivhÄ• viÃ±Ã±eyyÄ• , na te dhammÄ• sotaviÃ±Ã±eyyÄ• . ye te dhamm
dhammÄ• kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±eyyÄ• ; ye vÄ• pana te dhammÄ• kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±eyyÄ• na te dha sotaviÃ±Ã±eyyÄ• , na te dhammÄ• cakkhuviÃ±Ã±eyyÄ• ; ye vÄ• pana te dhammÄ• cakk sotaviÃ±Ã±eyyÄ• . ye te dhammÄ• ghÄ• naviÃ±Ã±eyyÄ• , na te dhammÄ• jivhÄ• viÃ±Ã±e jivhÄ• viÃ±Ã±eyyÄ• , na te dhammÄ• ghÄ• naviÃ±Ã±eyyÄ• . ye te dhammÄ• ghÄ• naviÃ± kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±eyyÄ• ; ye vÄ• pana te dhammÄ• kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±eyyÄ• , na te dhammÄ• gh ghÄ• naviÃ±Ã±eyyÄ• , na te dhammÄ• cakkhuviÃ±Ã±eyyÄ• ; ye vÄ• pana te dhammÄ• c ghÄ• naviÃ±Ã±eyyÄ• . ye \Se 280/ te dhammÄ• ghÄ• naviÃ±Ã±eyyÄ• , na te dhammÄ• so dhammÄ• sotaviÃ±Ã±eyyÄ• , na te dhammÄ• ghÄ• naviÃ±Ã±eyyÄ• . ye te dhammÄ• jivh kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±eyyÄ• ; ye vÄ• pana te dhammÄ• kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±eyyÄ• , na te dhammÄ• jivh jivhÄ• viÃ±Ã±eyyÄ• , na te dhammÄ• cakkhuviÃ±Ã±eyyÄ• ; ye vÄ• pana te dhammÄ• cak jivhÄ• viÃ±Ã±eyyÄ• . ye te dhammÄ• jivhÄ• viÃ±Ã±eyyÄ• , na te dhammÄ• sotaviÃ±Ã±ey sotaviÃ±Ã±eyyÄ• , na te dhammÄ• jivhÄ• viÃ±Ã±eyyÄ• . ye te dhammÄ• jivhÄ• viÃ±Ã±ey ghÄ• naviÃ±Ã±eyyÄ• ; ye vÄ• pana te dhammÄ• ghÄ• naviÃ±Ã±eyyÄ• , na te dhammÄ• j kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±eyyÄ• , na te dhammÄ• cakkhuviÃ±Ã±eyyÄ• ; ye vÄ• pana te dhammÄ• cak kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±eyyÄ• . ye te dhammÄ• kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±eyyÄ• , na te dhammÄ• sotaviÃ±Ã±ey dhammÄ• sotaviÃ±Ã±eyyÄ• , na te dhammÄ• kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±eyyÄ• . ye te dhammÄ• kÄ• y ghÄ• naviÃ±Ã±eyyÄ• ; ye vÄ• pana te dhammÄ• ghÄ• naviÃ±Ã±eyyÄ• , na te dhammÄ• I kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±eyyÄ• , na te dhammÄ• \Ne 245/ jivhÄ• viÃ±Ã±eyyÄ• ; ye vÄ• pana te dham dhammÄ• kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±eyyÄ• . ime dhammÄ• kenaci viÃ±Ã±eyyÄ• kenaci na viÃ±Ã±eyy

Ä• savagocchakaá¹ƒ

<1102> katame \Se 281/ dhammÄ• Ä• savÄ• ? cattÄ• ro Ä• savÄ• --- kÄ• mÄ• savo, bhav avijjÄ• savo.

<1103> tattha \Be 222/ katamo kÄ• mÄ• savo? yo kÄ• mesu kÄ• macchando kÄ• marÄ• go kÄ• masineho kÄ• mapariá¸·Ä• ho kÄ• mamucchÄ• kÄ• majjhosÄ• naá¹ƒ --- ayaá¹ƒ vuccat

<1104> tattha katamo bhavÄ• savo? yo bhavesu bhavachando {bhavacchando (Ce Se) } b bhavataá¹‡hÄ• bhavasineho bhavapariá¸·Ä• ho bhavamucchÄ• bhavajjhosÄ• naá¹ƒ --- aya

<1105> tattha katamo diá¹-á¹-hÄ• savo? sassato lokoti vÄ• , asassato lokoti vÄ• , antavÄ• lokoti vÄ• , taá¹ƒ jÄ«vaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ sarÄ«ranti vÄ• , aÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ jÄ«vaá¹ƒ aÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ sarÄ«ran paraá¹ƒ maraá¹‡Ä• ti vÄ• , na hoti tathÄ• gato paraá¹ƒ maraá¹‡Ä• ti vÄ• , hoti ca na ca hoti maraá¹‡Ä• ti vÄ• , neva hoti na na hoti tathÄ• gato paraá¹ƒ maraá¹‡Ä• ti vÄ• ; yÄ• evarÅ«p
diá¹-á¹-higataá¹ƒ diá¹-á¹-higahanaá¹ƒ diá¹-á¹-hikantÄ• ro diá¹-á¹-hivisÅ«kÄ• yikaá¹ƒ diá¹-á¹-h diá¹-á¹-hisaá¹ƒyojanaá¹ƒ gÄ• ho paá¹-iggÄ• ho abhiniveso parÄ• mÄ• so kummaggo micchÄ titthÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ vipariyÄ• saggÄ• ho --- ayaá¹ƒ vuccati diá¹-á¹-hÄ• savo. sabbÄ• pi micchÄ diá¹-á¹-hÄ• savo.

<1106> tattha katamo avijjÄ• savo? dukkhe aÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ, dukkhasamudaye aÃ±Ã±Ä• aÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ, dukkhanirodhagÄ• miniyÄ• paá¹-ipadÄ• ya aÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ \Se 282/, p aparante aÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ, pubbantÄ• parante aÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ, idappaccayatÄ• paá¹-ico aÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ: yaá¹ƒ evarÅ«paá¹ƒ aÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ adassanaá¹ƒ anabhisamayo anan
asaá¹ƒgÄ• hanÄ• apariyogÄ• hanÄ• asamapekkhanÄ• apaccavekkhaá¹‡Ä• apaccakkhal asampajaÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ \Ne 246/ moho pamoho sammoho avijjÄ• avijjogho avijjÄ• yogo avijjÄ• avijjÄ• pariyuá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ avijjÄ• laá¹…gÄ« moho akusalamÅ«laá¹ƒ --- ayaá¹ƒ vuccati av ime dhammÄ• Ä• savÄ• .

<1107> katame dhammÄ• no Ä• savÄ• ? te dhamme á¹-hapetvÄ• avasesÄ• kusalÄ• kus kÄ• mÄ• vacarÄ• , rÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• , arÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• , apariyÄ• pannÄ• \Be 223/ vedanÄ
viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho; sabbaÃ±ca rÅ«paá¹ƒ asaá¹…khatÄ• ca dhÄ• tu --- ime dhammÄ•

<1108> katame dhammÄ• sÄ• savÄ• ? kusalÄ• kusalÄ• byÄ• katÄ• dhammÄ• kÄ• mÄ• rÅ«pakkhandho ... pe ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho --- ime dhammÄ• sÄ• savÄ• .

<1109> katame dhammÄ• anÄ• savÄ• ? apariyÄ• pannÄ• maggÄ• ca maggaphalÄ• ni ca dhammÄ• anÄ• savÄ• .

<1110> katame dhammÄ• Ä• savasampayuttÄ• ? tehi dhammehi ye dhammÄ• sampayut viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho --- ime dhammÄ• \Se 283/ Ä• savasampayuttÄ• .

<1111> katame dhammÄ• Ä• savavippayuttÄ• ? tehi dhammehi ye dhammÄ• vippayuttÄ•
viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho; sabbaÃ±ca rÅ«paá¹ƒ, asaá¹…khatÄ• ca dhÄ• tu --- ime dhammÄ

<1112> katame dhammÄ• Ä• savÄ• ceva sÄ• savÄ• ca? teyeva Ä• savÄ• Ä• savÄ• cev

<1113> katame dhammÄ• sÄ• savÄ• ceva no ca Ä• savÄ• ? tehi dhammehi ye dhammÄ• avasesÄ• sÄ• savÄ• kusalÄ• kusalÄ• byÄ• katÄ• dhammÄ• kÄ• mÄ• vacarÄ• , rÅ«pÄ• v rÅ«pakkhandho ... pe ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho --- ime dhammÄ• sÄ• savÄ• ceva no ca

<1114> katame dhammÄ• Ä• savÄ• ceva Ä• savasampayuttÄ• ca? kÄ• mÄ• savo avijjÄ• Ä• savasampayutto ca, avijjÄ• savo kÄ• mÄ• savena Ä• savo ceva Ä• savasampayutto ca, ceva Ä• savasampayutto ca, avijjÄ• savo bhavÄ• savena Ä• savo ceva Ä• savasampayutto avijjÄ• savena Ä• savo ceva Ä• savasampayutto ca, avijjÄ• savo \Ee 197/ diá¹-á¹-hÄ• saven Ä• savasampayutto ca --- ime dhammÄ• Ä• savÄ• ceva Ä• savasampayuttÄ• ca.

<1115> katame \Be 224/ dhammÄ• Ä• savasampayuttÄ• ceva no ca Ä• savÄ• ? tehi dhar
dhamme á¹-hapetvÄ• vedanÄ• kkhandho ... pe ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho --- ime dhammÄ ca Ä• savÄ• .

<1116> katame \Se 284/ dhammÄ• Ä• savavippayuttÄ• sÄ• savÄ• ? tehi dhammehi ye dh
kusalÄ• kusalÄ• byÄ• katÄ• dhammÄ• kÄ• mÄ• vacarÄ• , rÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• , arÅ«pÄ• vaca viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho --- ime dhammÄ• Ä• savavippayuttÄ• sÄ• savÄ• .

<1117> katame dhammÄ• Ä• savavippayuttÄ• anÄ• savÄ• ? apariyÄ• pannÄ• maggÄ• c ca dhÄ• tu --- ime dhammÄ• Ä• savavippayuttÄ• anÄ• savÄ• .

nikkhepakaá¹‡á¸• e paá¹-hamabhÄ• á¹‡avÄ• ro.

saá¹ƒyojanagocchakaá¹ƒ

<1118> katame dhammÄ• saá¹ƒyojanÄ• ? dasa saá¹ƒyojanÄ• ni --- kÄ• marÄ• gasaá¹ƒyo \Ne 248/, mÄ• nasaá¹ƒyojanaá¹ƒ, diá¹-á¹-hisaá¹ƒyojanaá¹ƒ, vicikicchÄ• saá¹ƒyojanaá¹ƒ, sÄ«labbataparÄ• mÄ• sasaá¹ƒyojanaá¹ƒ, bhavarÄ• gasaá¹ƒyojanaá¹ƒ, issÄ• saá¹ƒyojanaá¹ avijjÄ• saá¹ƒyojanaá¹ƒ.

<1119> tattha katamaá¹ƒ kÄ• marÄ• gasaá¹ƒyojanaá¹ƒ? yo kÄ• mesu kÄ• macchando kÄ• kÄ• mataá¹‡hÄ• kÄ• masineho kÄ• mapariá¸·Ä• ho kÄ• mamucchÄ• kÄ• majjhosÄ• naá¹ƒ kÄ• marÄ• gasaá¹ƒyojanaá¹ƒ.

<1120> tattha katamaá¹ƒ paá¹-ighasaá¹ƒyojanaá¹ƒ? anatthaá¹ƒ me acarÄ«ti Ä• ghÄ• to jÄ• caratÄ«ti Ä• ghÄ• to jÄ• yati, anatthaá¹ƒ me carissatÄ«ti Ä• ghÄ• to jÄ• yati, piyassa me ma
acari ... pe ... anatthaá¹ƒ carati ... pe ... anatthaá¹ƒ carissatÄ«ti Ä• ghÄ• to jÄ• yati, appiyass amanÄ• passa atthaá¹ƒ acari ... pe ... atthaá¹ƒ carati ... pe ... atthaá¹ƒ carissatÄ«ti Ä• ghÄ• jÄ• yati, aá¹-á¹-hÄ• ne vÄ• pana \Se 285/ Ä• ghÄ• to jÄ• yati. yo evarÅ«po cittassa Ä• ghÄ• paá¹-ighaá¹ƒ paá¹-ivirodho kopo pakopo sampakopo doso padoso sampadoso cittassa byÄ• kujjhanÄ• kujjhitattaá¹ƒ doso dussanÄ• dussitattaá¹ƒ byÄ• patti byÄ• pajjanÄ• byÄ• pajjita paá¹-ivirodho caá¹‡á¸• ikkaá¹ƒ asuropo anattamanatÄ• cittassa --- idaá¹ƒ vuccati paá¹-igha

<1121> tattha katamaá¹ƒ mÄ• nasaá¹ƒyojanaá¹ƒ? seyyohamasmÄ«ti mÄ• no, sadisohama \Ee 198/ mÄ• no. yo evarÅ«po mÄ• no maÃ±Ã±anÄ• maÃ±Ã±itattaá¹ƒ unnati unnamo {uá¹ dhajo sampaggÄ• ho ketukamyatÄ• cittassa --- idaá¹ƒ vuccati mÄ• nasaá¹ƒyojanaá¹ƒ.

<1122> tattha katamaá¹ƒ diá¹-á¹-hisaá¹ƒyojanaá¹ƒ? sassato lokoti vÄ• , asassato lokoti vÄ•
vÄ• , anantavÄ• lokoti vÄ• , taá¹ƒ jÄ«vaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ sarÄ«ranti vÄ• , aÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ jÄ«vaá¹ƒ aÃ± hoti tathÄ• gato paraá¹ƒ maraá¹‡Ä• ti vÄ• , na hoti tathÄ• gato paraá¹ƒ maraá¹‡Ä• ti vÄ• , h
tathÄ• gato paraá¹ƒ maraá¹‡Ä• ti vÄ• , neva hoti na na hoti tathÄ• gato paraá¹ƒ maraá¹‡Ä•
diá¹-á¹-hi diá¹-á¹-higataá¹ƒ diá¹-á¹-higahanaá¹ƒ diá¹-á¹-hikantÄ• ro diá¹-á¹-hivisÅ«kÄ• yikaá¹ diá¹-á¹-hivipphanditaá¹ƒ diá¹-á¹-hisaá¹ƒyojanaá¹ƒ gÄ• ho paá¹-iggÄ• ho abhiniveso parÄ• m micchÄ• patho micchattaá¹ƒ \Ne 249/ titthÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ vipariyÄ• saggÄ• ho --- idaá¹ƒ vucca diá¹-á¹-hisaá¹ƒyojanaá¹ƒ. á¹-hapetvÄ• sÄ«labbataparÄ• mÄ• sasaá¹ƒyojanaá¹ƒ sabbÄ• pi diá¹-á¹-hisaá¹ƒyojanaá¹ƒ.

<1123> tattha katamaá¹ƒ vicikicchÄ• saá¹ƒyojanaá¹ƒ? satthari kaá¹…khati vicikicchati, dha
vicikicchati, saá¹…ghe kaá¹…khati vicikicchati, sikkhÄ• ya kaá¹…khati vicikicchati, pubbante vicikicchati, aparante kaá¹…khati vicikicchati, pubbantÄ• parante kaá¹…khati vicikicchati, ida
paá¹-iccasamuppannesu dhammesu kaá¹…khati vicikicchati: yÄ• evarÅ«pÄ• kaá¹…khÄ•
kaá¹…khÄ• yitattaá¹ƒ vimati vicikicchÄ• dveá¸·hakaá¹ƒ dvedhÄ• patho saá¹ƒsayo anekaá¹
parisappanÄ• apariyogÄ• hanÄ• thambhitattaá¹ƒ cittassa manovilekho --- idaá¹ƒ vuccati vicikicchÄ• saá¹ƒyojanaá¹ƒ.

<1124> tattha \Be 226/ katamaá¹ƒ sÄ«labbataparÄ• mÄ• sasaá¹ƒyojanaá¹ƒ? ito bahiddhÄ• sÄ«lena suddhi vatena suddhi sÄ«labbatena suddhÄ«ti; yÄ• evarÅ«pÄ• diá¹-á¹-hi diá¹-á¹-h diá¹-á¹-higahanaá¹ƒ diá¹-á¹-hikantÄ• ro diá¹-á¹-hivisÅ«kÄ• yikaá¹ƒ diá¹-á¹-hivipphanditaá¹ƒ

diá¹-á¹-hisaá¹ƒyojanaá¹ƒ gÄ• ho patiá¹-á¹-hÄ• ho abhiniveso parÄ• mÄ• so kummaggo micc titthÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ vipariyÄ• saggÄ• ho --- idaá¹ƒ vuccati sÄ«labbataparÄ• mÄ• sasaá¹ƒyojan

<1125> tattha katamaá¹ƒ bhavarÄ• gasaá¹ƒyojanaá¹ƒ? yo bhavesu bhavachando bhavarÄ bhavasineho bhavapariá¸·Ä• ho bhavamucchÄ• bhavajjhosÄ• naá¹ƒ --- idaá¹ƒ vuccati bhav

<1126> tattha katamaá¹ƒ issÄ• saá¹ƒyojanaá¹ƒ? yÄ• paralÄ• bhasakkÄ• ragarukÄ• ramÄ• issÄ• yanÄ• \Ee 199/ issÄ• yitattaá¹ƒ usÅ«yÄ• usÅ«yanÄ• \Se 287/ usÅ«yitattaá¹ƒ {ussuy ussuyitattaá¹ƒ (Katthaci) } --- idaá¹ƒ vuccati issÄ• saá¹ƒyojanaá¹ƒ.

<1127> tattha katamaá¹ƒ macchariyasaá¹ƒyojanaá¹ƒ? paÃ±ca macchariyÄ• ni --- Ä• vÄ• sa kulamacchariyaá¹ƒ, lÄ• bhamacchariyaá¹ƒ, vaá¹‡á¹‡amacchariyaá¹ƒ, dhammamacchariyaá maccheraá¹ƒ maccharÄ• yanÄ• maccharÄ• yitattaá¹ƒ vevicchaá¹ƒ kadariyaá¹ƒ kaá¹-ukaÃ± cittassa --- idaá¹ƒ vuccati macchariyasaá¹ƒyojanaá¹ƒ.

<1128> tattha \Ne 250/ katamaá¹ƒ avijjÄ• saá¹ƒyojanaá¹ƒ? dukkhe aÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ, dukk
dukkhanirodhe aÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ, dukkhanirodhagÄ• miniyÄ• paá¹-ipadÄ• ya aÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡
aparante aÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ, pubbantÄ• parante aÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ, idappaccayatÄ• paá¹-ic
aÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ: yaá¹ƒ evarÅ«paá¹ƒ aÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ adassanaá¹ƒ anabhisamayo anan
asaá¹ƒgÄ• hanÄ• apariyogÄ• hanÄ• asamapekkhanÄ• apaccavekkhaá¹‡Ä• apaccakkhal
asampajaÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ moho pamoho sammoho avijjÄ• avijjogho avijjÄ• yogo avijjÄ• nusayo a avijjÄ• laá¹…gÄ« moho akusalamÅ«laá¹ƒ --- idaá¹ƒ vuccati avijjÄ• saá¹ƒyojanaá¹ƒ.

ime dhammÄ• saá¹ƒyojanÄ• .

<1129> katame \Be 227/ dhammÄ• no saá¹ƒyojanÄ• ? te dhamme á¹-hapetvÄ• avasesÄ•
dhammÄ• kÄ• mÄ• vacarÄ• , rÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• , arÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• , apariyÄ• pannÄ• ; veda
viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho; sabbaÃ±ca rÅ«paá¹ƒ, asaá¹…khatÄ• ca dhÄ• tu --- ime dhammÄ

<1130> katame \Se 288/ dhammÄ• saá¹ƒyojaniyÄ• ? sÄ• savÄ• kusalÄ• kusalÄ• byÄ• ka
rÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• , arÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• ; rÅ«pakkhandho ... pe ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho --- im

<1131> katame dhammÄ• asaá¹ƒyojaniyÄ• ? apariyÄ• pannÄ• maggÄ• ca, maggaphalÄ ime dhammÄ• asaá¹ƒyojaniyÄ• .

<1132> katame dhammÄ• saá¹ƒyojanasampayuttÄ• ? tehi dhammehi ye dhammÄ• samp viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho --- ime dhammÄ• saá¹ƒyojanasampayuttÄ• .

<1133> katame dhammÄ• saá¹ƒyojanavippayuttÄ• ? tehi dhammehi ye dhammÄ• vippayu
viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho; sabbaÃ±ca rÅ«paá¹ƒ, asaá¹…khatÄ• ca dhÄ• tu --- ime dhammÄ

<1134> katame \Ee 200/ \Ne 251/ dhammÄ• saá¹ƒyojanÄ• ceva saá¹ƒyojaniyÄ• ca? tÄ• saá¹ƒyojanÄ• ceva saá¹ƒyojaniyÄ• ca.

<1135> katame dhammÄ• saá¹ƒyojaniyÄ• ceva no ca saá¹ƒyojanÄ• ? tehi dhammehi ye d
dhamme á¹-hapetvÄ• avasesÄ• sÄ• savÄ• kusalÄ• kusalÄ• byÄ• katÄ• dhammÄ• kÄ• m arÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• ; rÅ«pakkhandho ... pe ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho --- ime dhammÄ• saá saá¹ƒyojanÄ• .

<1136> katame dhammÄ• saá¹ƒyojanÄ• ceva saá¹ƒyojanasampayuttÄ• ca? kÄ• marÄ• g avijjÄ• saá¹ƒyojanena saá¹ƒyojanaÃ±ceva saá¹ƒyojanasampayuttaÃ±ca, avijjÄ• saá¹ƒyojan kÄ• marÄ• gasaá¹ƒyojanena saá¹ƒyojanaÃ±ceva \Se 289/ saá¹ƒyojanasampayuttaÃ±ca, pa
avijjÄ• saá¹ƒyojanena saá¹ƒyojanaÃ±ceva saá¹ƒyojanasampayuttaÃ±ca, avijjÄ• saá¹ƒyojan saá¹ƒyojanaÃ±ceva \Be 228/ saá¹ƒyojanasampayuttaÃ±ca, mÄ• nasaá¹ƒyojanaá¹ƒ avijjÄ• s saá¹ƒyojanaÃ±ceva saá¹ƒyojanasampayuttaÃ±ca, avijjÄ• saá¹ƒyojanaá¹ƒ mÄ• nasaá¹ƒyoja saá¹ƒyojanasampayuttaÃ±ca, diá¹-á¹-hisaá¹ƒyojanaá¹ƒ avijjÄ• saá¹ƒyojanena saá¹ƒyojanaÃ saá¹ƒyojanasampayuttaÃ±ca, avijjÄ• saá¹ƒyojanaá¹ƒ diá¹-á¹-hisaá¹ƒyojanena saá¹ƒyojanaÃ saá¹ƒyojanasampayuttaÃ±ca, vicikicchÄ• saá¹ƒyojanaá¹ƒ avijjÄ• saá¹ƒyojanena saá¹ƒyojan saá¹ƒyojanasampayuttaÃ±ca, avijjÄ• saá¹ƒyojanaá¹ƒ vicikicchÄ• saá¹ƒyojanena saá¹ƒyojan saá¹ƒyojanasampayuttaÃ±ca, sÄ«labbataparÄ• mÄ• sasaá¹ƒyojanaá¹ƒ avijjÄ• saá¹ƒyojane saá¹ƒyojanasampayuttaÃ±ca, avijjÄ• saá¹ƒyojanaá¹ƒ sÄ«labbataparÄ• mÄ• sasaá¹ƒyojane saá¹ƒyojanasampayuttaÃ±ca, bhavarÄ• gasaá¹ƒyojanaá¹ƒ avijjÄ• saá¹ƒyojanena saá¹ƒyoja saá¹ƒyojanasampayuttaÃ±ca, avijjÄ• saá¹ƒyojanaá¹ƒ bhavarÄ• gasaá¹ƒyojanena saá¹ƒyoja saá¹ƒyojanasampayuttaÃ±ca, issÄ• saá¹ƒyojanaá¹ƒ avijjÄ• saá¹ƒyojanena saá¹ƒyojanaÃ±c saá¹ƒyojanasampayuttaÃ±ca, avijjÄ• saá¹ƒyojanaá¹ƒ issÄ• saá¹ƒyojanena saá¹ƒyojanaÃ±c saá¹ƒyojanasampayuttaÃ±ca, macchariyasaá¹ƒyojanaá¹ƒ avijjÄ• saá¹ƒyojanena saá¹ƒyojan saá¹ƒyojanasampayuttaÃ±ca, avijjÄ• saá¹ƒyojanaá¹ƒ macchariyasaá¹ƒyojanena \Se 290/ sa saá¹ƒyojanasampayuttaÃ±ca --- ime dhammÄ• saá¹ƒyojanÄ• ceva saá¹ƒyojanasampayutt

<1137> katame \Ee 201/ dhammÄ• saá¹ƒyojanasampayuttÄ• ceva no ca saá¹ƒyojanÄ• ?
252/ sampayuttÄ• , te dhamme á¹-hapetvÄ• vedanÄ• kkhandho ... pe ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkh saá¹ƒyojanasampayuttÄ• ceva no ca saá¹ƒyojanÄ• .

<1138> katame dhammÄ• saá¹ƒyojanavippayuttÄ• saá¹ƒyojaniyÄ• ? tehi dhammehi ye dh
kusalÄ• kusalÄ• byÄ• katÄ• dhammÄ• kÄ• mÄ• vacarÄ• , rÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• , arÅ«pÄ• vaca viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho --- ime dhammÄ• saá¹ƒyojanavippayuttÄ• saá¹ƒyojaniyÄ• .

<1139> katame dhammÄ• saá¹ƒyojanavippayuttÄ• asaá¹ƒyojaniyÄ• ? apariyÄ• pannÄ• n asaá¹…khatÄ• ca dhÄ• tu --- ime dhammÄ• saá¹ƒyojanavippayuttÄ• asaá¹ƒyojaniyÄ• .

ganthagocchakaá¹ƒ

<1140> katame \Be 229/ dhammÄ• ganthÄ• ? cattÄ• ro ganthÄ• --- abhijjhÄ• kÄ• yagant sÄ«labbataparÄ• mÄ• so kÄ• yagantho, idaá¹ƒ saccÄ• bhiniveso kÄ• yagantho.

<1141> tattha katamo abhijjhÄ• kÄ• yagantho? yo rÄ• go sÄ• rÄ• go anunayo anurodho n
sÄ• rÄ• go icchÄ• mucchÄ• ajjhosÄ• naá¹ƒ gedho paligedho saá¹…go paá¹…ko ejÄ• mÄ jÄ• linÄ« saritÄ• visattikÄ• suttaá¹ƒ \Se 291/ visaá¹-Ä• Ä• yÅ«hinÄ« dutiyÄ• paá¹‡idhi bha vanatho santhavo sineho apekkhÄ• paá¹-ibandhu Ä• sÄ• Ä• sisanÄ• Ä• sisitattaá¹ƒ rÅ«pÄ rasÄ• sÄ• phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• sÄ• lÄ• bhÄ• sÄ• dhanÄ• sÄ• puttÄ• sÄ• jÄ«vitÄ• sÄ• jappÄ jappanÄ• jappitattaá¹ƒ loluppaá¹ƒ loluppÄ• yanÄ• loluppÄ• yitattaá¹ƒ pucchaÃ±jikatÄ• sÄ visamalobho nikanti nikÄ• manÄ• patthanÄ• pihanÄ• sampatthanÄ• kÄ• mataá¹‡hÄ• bha rÅ«pataá¹‡hÄ• arÅ«pataá¹‡hÄ• nirodhataá¹‡hÄ• rÅ«pataá¹‡hÄ• saddataá¹‡hÄ• gandha phoá¹-á¹-habbataá¹‡hÄ• dhammataá¹‡hÄ• ogho yogo gantho upÄ• dÄ• naá¹ƒ Ä• varaá¹‡a bandhanaá¹ƒ upakkileso anusayo pariyuá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ latÄ• vevicchaá¹ƒ dukkhamÅ«laá¹ dukkhappabhavo mÄ• rapÄ• so mÄ• rabaá¸·isaá¹ƒ mÄ• ravisayo taá¹‡hÄ• nadÄ« taá¹‡hÄ• taá¹‡hÄ• samuddo abhijjhÄ• lobho akusalamÅ«laá¹ƒ --- ayaá¹ƒ vuccati abhijjhÄ• kÄ• yaga

<1142> tattha \Ne 253/ katamo byÄ• pÄ• do kÄ• yagantho? anatthaá¹ƒ me acarÄ« ti Ä• gh caratÄ«ti Ä• ghÄ• to \Ee 202/ jÄ• yati, anatthaá¹ƒ me carissatÄ«ti Ä• ghÄ• to jÄ• yati, piyass anatthaá¹ƒ acari ... pe ... anatthaá¹ƒ carati ... pe ... anatthaá¹ƒ carissatÄ«ti Ä• ghÄ• to jÄ• ya me amanÄ• passa atthaá¹ƒ acari ... pe ... atthaá¹ƒ carati ... pe ... atthaá¹ƒ carissatÄ«ti Ä• gh aá¹-á¹-hÄ• ne vÄ• \Se 292/ pana Ä• ghÄ• to jÄ• yati. yo evarÅ«po cittassa Ä• ghÄ• to paá¹
paá¹-ivirodho kopo pakopo sampakopo doso padoso sampadoso cittassa byÄ• patti manopa kujjhitattaá¹ƒ doso dussanÄ• \Be 230/ dussitattaá¹ƒ byÄ• patti byÄ• pajjanÄ• byÄ• pajjitatt paá¹-ivirodho caá¹‡á¸• ikkaá¹ƒ asuropo anattamanatÄ• cittassa --- ayaá¹ƒ vuccati byÄ• pÄ•

<1143> tattha katamo sÄ«labbataparÄ• mÄ• so kÄ• yagantho? ito bahiddhÄ• samaá¹‡abr suddhi, vatena suddhi, sÄ«labbatena suddhÄ«ti: yÄ• evarÅ«pÄ• diá¹-á¹-hi diá¹-á¹-higataá¹
diá¹-á¹-hikantÄ• ro diá¹-á¹-hivisÅ«kÄ• yikaá¹ƒ diá¹-á¹-hivipphanditaá¹ƒ diá¹-á¹-hisaá¹ƒyojana
patiá¹-á¹-hÄ• ho abhiniveso parÄ• mÄ• so kummaggo micchÄ• patho micchattaá¹ƒ titthÄ• y
--- ayaá¹ƒ vuccati sÄ«labbataparÄ• mÄ• so kÄ• yagantho.

<1144> tattha katamo idaá¹ƒsaccÄ• bhiniveso kÄ• yagantho? sassato loko, idameva sacca asassato loko, idameva saccaá¹ƒ moghamaÃ±Ã±anti vÄ• ; antavÄ• loko, idameva saccaá¹ anantavÄ• loko, idameva saccaá¹ƒ moghamaÃ±Ã±anti vÄ• ; taá¹ƒ jÄ«vaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ sarÄ«raá moghamaÃ±Ã±anti vÄ• ; aÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ jÄ«vaá¹ƒ aÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ sarÄ«raá¹ƒ, idameva saccaá¹ƒ m tathÄ• gato paraá¹ƒ maraá¹‡Ä• , idameva saccaá¹ƒ moghamaÃ±Ã±anti vÄ• ; na hoti tathÄ• idameva saccaá¹ƒ moghamaÃ±Ã±anti vÄ• ; hoti ca na \Se 293/ ca hoti tathÄ• gato paraá¹ƒ saccaá¹ƒ moghamaÃ±Ã±anti vÄ• ; neva hoti na na hoti tathÄ• gato paraá¹ƒ maraá¹‡Ä• , ida moghamaÃ±Ã±anti vÄ• : yÄ• evarÅ«pÄ• diá¹-á¹-hi diá¹-á¹-higataá¹ƒ diá¹-á¹-higahanaá¹ƒ di diá¹-á¹-hivisÅ«kÄ• yikaá¹ƒ diá¹-á¹-hivipphanditaá¹ƒ diá¹-á¹-hisaá¹ƒyojanaá¹ƒ gÄ• ho patiá¹-á parÄ• mÄ• so kummaggo micchÄ• patho micchattaá¹ƒ titthÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ vipariyÄ• saggÄ• h idaá¹ƒsaccÄ• bhiniveso kÄ• yagantho. á¹-hapetvÄ• sÄ«labbataparÄ• mÄ• saá¹ƒ kÄ• yagan micchÄ• diá¹-á¹-hi idaá¹ƒsaccÄ• bhiniveso kÄ• yagantho.

ime dhammÄ• ganthÄ• .

<1145> katame \Ne 254/ dhammÄ• no ganthÄ• ? te \Ee 203/ dhamme á¹-hapetvÄ• avase
dhammÄ• kÄ• mÄ• vacarÄ• , rÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• , arÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• , apariyÄ• pannÄ• ; veda
viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho; sabbaÃ±ca rÅ«paá¹ƒ, asaá¹…khatÄ• ca dhÄ• tu --- ime dhammÄ

<1146> katame \Be 231/ dhammÄ• ganthaniyÄ• ? sÄ• savÄ• kusalÄ• kusalÄ• byÄ• katÄ•
rÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• , arÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• ; rÅ«pakkhandho ... pe ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho --- im

<1147> katame dhammÄ• aganthaniyÄ• ? apariyÄ• pannÄ• maggÄ• ca, maggaphalÄ• n ime dhammÄ• aganthaniyÄ• .

<1148> katame dhammÄ• ganthasampayuttÄ• ? tehi dhammehi ye dhammÄ• sampayuttÄ viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho --- ime dhammÄ• \Se 294/ ganthasampayuttÄ• .

<1149> katame dhammÄ• ganthavippayuttÄ• ? tehi dhammehi ye dhammÄ• vippayuttÄ•
viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho, sabbaÃ±ca rÅ«paá¹ƒ asaá¹…khatÄ• ca dhÄ• tu --- ime dhammÄ•

<1150> katame dhammÄ• ganthÄ• ceva ganthaniyÄ• ca? teva ganthÄ• ganthÄ• ceva g

<1151> katame dhammÄ• ganthaniyÄ• ceva no ca ganthÄ• ? tehi dhammehi ye dhammÄ á¹-hapetvÄ• avasesÄ• sÄ• savÄ• kusalÄ• kusalÄ• byÄ• katÄ• dhammÄ• kÄ• mÄ• vacar rÅ«pakkhandho ... pe ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho --- ime dhammÄ• ganthaniyÄ• ceva no c

<1152> katame dhammÄ• ganthÄ• ceva ganthasampayuttÄ• ca? sÄ«labbataparÄ• mÄ• abhijjhÄ• kÄ• yaganthena gantho ceva ganthasampayutto ca, abhijjhÄ• kÄ• yagantho sÄ«la kÄ• yaganthena gantho ceva ganthasampayutto ca, idaá¹ƒ saccÄ• bhiniveso kÄ• yagantho a \Ne 255/ ceva ganthasampayutto ca, abhijjhÄ• kÄ• yagantho idaá¹ƒ saccÄ• bhinivesena kÄ• ganthasampayutto ca --- ime dhammÄ• ganthÄ• ceva ganthasampayuttÄ• ca.

<1153> katame dhammÄ• ganthasampayuttÄ• ceva no ca ganthÄ• ? tehi \Ee 204/ dhamm dhamme á¹-hapetvÄ• vedanÄ• kkhandho ... pe ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho --- ime \Se 295/ceva no ca ganthÄ• .

<1154> katame \Be 232/ dhammÄ• ganthavippayuttÄ• ganthaniyÄ• ? tehi dhammehi ye d
kusalÄ• kusalÄ• byÄ• katÄ• dhammÄ• kÄ• mÄ• vacarÄ• , rÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• , arÅ«pÄ• vaca viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho --- ime dhammÄ• ganthavippayuttÄ• ganthaniyÄ• .

<1155> katame dhammÄ• ganthavippayuttÄ• aganthaniyÄ• ? apariyÄ• pannÄ• maggÄ• asaá¹…khatÄ• ca dhÄ• tu --- ime dhammÄ• ganthavippayuttÄ• aganthaniyÄ• .

oghagocchakaá¹ƒ

<1156> katame dhammÄ• oghÄ• ? cattÄ• ro oghÄ• ... pe ... ime dhammÄ• oghavippayut

yogagocchakaá¹ƒ

<1157> katame dhammÄ• yogÄ• ? cattÄ• ro yogÄ• ... pe ... ime dhammÄ• yogavippayutt

nÄ«varaá¹‡agocchakaá¹ƒ

<1158> katame dhammÄ• nÄ«varaá¹‡Ä• ? cha nÄ«varaá¹‡Ä• {nÄ«varaá¹‡Ä• ni (Se) } --- byÄ• pÄ• danÄ«varaá¹‡aá¹ƒ, thinamiddhanÄ«varaá¹‡aá¹ƒ, uddhaccakukkuccanÄ«varaá¹‡a avijjÄ• nÄ«varaá¹‡aá¹ƒ.

<1159> tattha \Ne 256/ katamaá¹ƒ kÄ• macchandanÄ«varaá¹‡aá¹ƒ? yo kÄ• mesu kÄ• mac
kÄ• mataá¹‡hÄ• kÄ• masineho kÄ• mapariá¸·Ä• ho kÄ• mamucchÄ• kÄ• majjhosÄ• naá¹ƒ kÄ• macchandanÄ«varaá¹‡aá¹ƒ.

<1160> tattha katamaá¹ƒ byÄ• pÄ• danÄ«varaá¹‡aá¹ƒ? anatthaá¹ƒ me acarÄ«ti Ä• ghÄ• to caratÄ«ti Ä• ghÄ• to jÄ• yati; anatthaá¹ƒ me carissatÄ«ti Ä• ghÄ• to jÄ• yati; piyassa me ma
acari ... pe ... anatthaá¹ƒ carati ... pe ... anatthaá¹ƒ carissatÄ«ti Ä• ghÄ• to jÄ• yati, appiyass amanÄ• passa atthaá¹ƒ acari ... pe ... atthaá¹ƒ carati ... pe ... \Se 296/ atthaá¹ƒ carissatÄ«ti jÄ• yati, aá¹-á¹-hÄ• ne vÄ• pana Ä• ghÄ• to jÄ• yati. yo evarÅ«po cittassa Ä• ghÄ• to paá¹-

paá¹-ivirodho kopo pakopo sampakopo doso padoso sampadoso cittassa byÄ• patti manopa kujjhitattaá¹ƒ doso dussanÄ• dussitattaá¹ƒ byÄ• patti byÄ• pajjanÄ• byÄ• pajjitattaá¹ƒ viro caá¹‡á¸• ikkaá¹ƒ asuropo anattamanatÄ• cittassa --- idaá¹ƒ vuccati byÄ• pÄ• danÄ«varaá¹‡

<1161> tattha katamaá¹ƒ thinamiddhanÄ«varaá¹‡aá¹ƒ? atthi thinaá¹ƒ, atthi middhaá¹ƒ.

<1162> tattha katamaá¹ƒ thinaá¹ƒ? yÄ• cittassa akallatÄ• akammaÃ±Ã±atÄ• olÄ«yanÄ•
lÄ«yanÄ• \Ee 205/ lÄ«yitattaá¹ƒ thinaá¹ƒ thiyanÄ• thiyitattaá¹ƒ cittassa --- idaá¹ƒ vuccati th

<1163> tattha katamaá¹ƒ middhaá¹ƒ? yÄ• kÄ• yassa akallatÄ• akammaÃ±Ã±atÄ• onÄ• h middhaá¹ƒ soppaá¹ƒ pacalÄ• yikÄ• soppaá¹ƒ supanÄ• supitattaá¹ƒ --- idaá¹ƒ vuccati midd thinaá¹ƒ, idaÃ±ca middhaá¹ƒ --- idaá¹ƒ vuccati thinamiddhanÄ«varaá¹‡aá¹ƒ.

<1164> tattha katamaá¹ƒ uddhaccakukkuccanÄ«varaá¹‡aá¹ƒ? atthi uddhaccaá¹ƒ, atthi kuk

<1165> tattha katamaá¹ƒ uddhaccaá¹ƒ? yaá¹ƒ cittassa uddhaccaá¹ƒ avÅ«pasamo cetaso v cittassa --- idaá¹ƒ vuccati uddhaccaá¹ƒ.

<1166> tattha \Ne 257/ katamaá¹ƒ kukkuccaá¹ƒ? akappiye kappiyasaÃ±Ã±itÄ• , kappiye ak vajjasaÃ±Ã±itÄ• , vajje avajjasaÃ±Ã±itÄ• . yaá¹ƒ evarÅ«paá¹ƒ kukkuccaá¹ƒ kukkuccÄ• yanÄ cetaso vippaá¹-isÄ• ro manovilekho \Se 297/ --- idaá¹ƒ vuccati kukkuccaá¹ƒ. iti idaÃ±ca udd kukkuccaá¹ƒ --- idaá¹ƒ vuccati uddhaccakukkuccanÄ«varaá¹‡aá¹ƒ.

<1167> tattha katamaá¹ƒ vicikicchÄ• nÄ«varaá¹‡aá¹ƒ? satthari kaá¹…khati vicikicchati, dha
vicikicchati, saá¹…ghe kaá¹…khati vicikicchati, sikkhÄ• ya kaá¹…khati vicikicchati, pubbante vicikicchati, aparante kaá¹…khati vicikicchati, pubbantÄ• parante \Be 234/ kaá¹…khati viciki idappaccayatÄ• paá¹-iccasamuppannesu dhammesu kaá¹…khati vicikicchati. yÄ• evarÅ«p kaá¹…khÄ• yitattaá¹ƒ vimati vicikicchÄ• dveá¸·hakaá¹ƒ dvedhÄ• patho saá¹ƒsayo anekaá¹ƒ
parisappanÄ• apariyogÄ• hanÄ• thambhitattaá¹ƒ cittassa manovilekho --- idaá¹ƒ vuccati vicikicchÄ• nÄ«varaá¹‡aá¹ƒ.

<1168> tattha katamaá¹ƒ avijjÄ• nÄ«varaá¹‡aá¹ƒ? dukkhe aÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ, dukkhasamu
dukkhanirodhe aÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ, dukkhanirodhagÄ• miniyÄ• paá¹-ipadÄ• ya aÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡
aparante aÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ, pubbantÄ• parante aÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ, idappaccayatÄ• paá¹-ic
aÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ: yaá¹ƒ evarÅ«paá¹ƒ aÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ adassanaá¹ƒ anabhisamayo anan
asaá¹ƒgÄ• hanÄ• apariyogÄ• hanÄ• asamapekkhanÄ• apaccavekkhaá¹‡Ä• apaccakkhal
asampajaÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ moho pamoho sammoho avijjÄ• avijjogho avijjÄ• yogo avijjÄ• nusayo a avijjÄ• laá¹…gÄ« moho akusalamÅ«laá¹ƒ --- idaá¹ƒ vuccati avijjÄ• nÄ«varaá¹‡aá¹ƒ.

ime dhammÄ• nÄ«varaá¹‡Ä• .

<1169> katame \Se 298/ \Ee 206/ dhammÄ• no nÄ«varaá¹‡Ä• ? te dhamme á¹-hapetvÄ• kusalÄ• kusalÄ• byÄ• katÄ• dhammÄ• kÄ• mÄ• vacarÄ• , rÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• , arÅ«pÄ• vaca ... pe ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho; sabbaÃ±ca rÅ«paá¹ƒ, asaá¹…khatÄ• ca dhÄ• tu --- ime d

<1170> katame \Ne 258/ dhammÄ• nÄ«varaá¹‡iyÄ• ? sÄ• savÄ• kusalÄ• kusalÄ• byÄ• ka rÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• , arÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• ; rÅ«pakkhandho ... pe ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho --- im

<1171> katame dhammÄ• anÄ«varaá¹‡iyÄ• ? apariyÄ• pannÄ• maggÄ• ca, maggaphalÄ ime dhammÄ• anÄ«varaá¹‡iyÄ• .

<1172> katame dhammÄ• nÄ«varaá¹‡asampayuttÄ• ? tehi dhammehi ye dhammÄ• samp viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho --- ime dhammÄ• nÄ«varaá¹‡asampayuttÄ• .

<1173> katame \Be 235/ dhammÄ• nÄ«varaá¹‡avippayuttÄ• ? tehi dhammehi ye dhammÄ ... pe ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho; sabbaÃ±ca rÅ«paá¹ƒ, asaá¹…khatÄ• ca dhÄ• tu --- ime d nÄ«varaá¹‡avippayuttÄ• .

<1174> katame dhammÄ• nÄ«varaá¹‡Ä• ceva nÄ«varaá¹‡iyÄ• ca? tÄ• neva nÄ«varaá¹‡ nÄ«varaá¹‡iyÄ• ca.

<1175> katame dhammÄ• nÄ«varaá¹‡iyÄ• ceva no ca nÄ«varaá¹‡Ä• ? tehi dhammehi ye dhamme á¹-hapetvÄ• avasesÄ• sÄ• savÄ• kusalÄ• kusalÄ• byÄ• katÄ• dhammÄ• kÄ• m arÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• ; rÅ«pakkhandho ... pe ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho --- ime dhammÄ• nÄ« nÄ«varaá¹‡Ä• .

<1176> katame \Se 299/ dhammÄ• nÄ«varaá¹‡Ä• ceva nÄ«varaá¹‡asampayuttÄ• ca? kÄ avijjÄ• nÄ«varaá¹‡ena nÄ«varaá¹‡aÃ±ceva nÄ«varaá¹‡asampayuttaÃ±ca, avijjÄ• nÄ«varaá kÄ• macchandanÄ«varaá¹‡ena nÄ«varaá¹‡aÃ±ceva nÄ«varaá¹‡asampayuttaÃ±ca, byÄ• pÄ avijjÄ• nÄ«varaá¹‡ena nÄ«varaá¹‡aÃ±ceva nÄ«varaá¹‡asampayuttaÃ±ca, avijjÄ• nÄ«varaá nÄ«varaá¹‡aÃ±ceva nÄ«varaá¹‡asampayuttaÃ±ca, thinamiddhanÄ«varaá¹‡aá¹ƒ avijjÄ• nÄ« nÄ«varaá¹‡asampayuttaÃ±ca, avijjÄ• nÄ«varaá¹‡aá¹ƒ thinamiddhanÄ«varaá¹‡ena nÄ«vara nÄ«varaá¹‡asampayuttaÃ±ca, uddhaccanÄ«varaá¹‡aá¹ƒ avijjÄ• nÄ«varaá¹‡ena nÄ«varaá¹ nÄ«varaá¹‡asampayuttaÃ±ca, avijjÄ• nÄ«varaá¹‡aá¹ƒ uddhaccanÄ«varaá¹‡ena nÄ«varaá¹ nÄ«varaá¹‡asampayuttaÃ±ca, kukkuccanÄ«varaá¹‡aá¹ƒ avijjÄ• nÄ«varaá¹‡ena nÄ«varaá¹‡ nÄ«varaá¹‡asampayuttaÃ±ca, avijjÄ• nÄ«varaá¹‡aá¹ƒ kukkuccanÄ«varaá¹‡ena nÄ«varaá¹‡

nÄ«varaá¹‡asampayuttaÃ±ca, vicikicchÄ• nÄ«varaá¹‡aá¹ƒ avijjÄ• nÄ«varaá¹‡ena nÄ«varaá nÄ«varaá¹‡asampayuttaÃ±ca, avijjÄ• nÄ«varaá¹‡aá¹ƒ vicikicchÄ• nÄ«varaá¹‡ena nÄ«varaá nÄ«varaá¹‡asampayuttaÃ±ca, kÄ• macchandanÄ«varaá¹‡aá¹ƒ uddhaccanÄ«varaá¹‡ena nÄ nÄ«varaá¹‡asampayuttaÃ±ca, uddhaccanÄ«varaá¹‡aá¹ƒ kÄ• macchandanÄ«varaá¹‡ena nÄ nÄ«varaá¹‡asampayuttaÃ±ca, byÄ• pÄ• danÄ«varaá¹‡aá¹ƒ uddhaccanÄ«varaá¹‡ena nÄ«va nÄ«varaá¹‡asampayuttaÃ±ca, uddhaccanÄ«varaá¹‡aá¹ƒ byÄ• pÄ• danÄ«varaá¹‡ena nÄ«va nÄ«varaá¹‡asampayuttaÃ±ca, thinamiddhanÄ«varaá¹‡aá¹ƒ uddhaccanÄ«varaá¹‡ena nÄ«va nÄ«varaá¹‡asampayuttaÃ±ca, uddhaccanÄ«varaá¹‡aá¹ƒ thinamiddhanÄ«varaá¹‡ena nÄ«va nÄ«varaá¹‡asampayuttaÃ±ca, kukkuccanÄ«varaá¹‡aá¹ƒ uddhaccanÄ«varaá¹‡ena nÄ«vara nÄ«varaá¹‡asampayuttaÃ±ca, uddhaccanÄ«varaá¹‡aá¹ƒ \Se 300/ kukkuccanÄ«varaá¹‡ena nÄ«varaá¹‡asampayuttaÃ±ca, vicikicchÄ• nÄ«varaá¹‡aá¹ƒ uddhaccanÄ«varaá¹‡ena nÄ«va nÄ«varaá¹‡asampayuttaÃ±ca, uddhaccanÄ«varaá¹‡aá¹ƒ vicikicchÄ• nÄ«varaá¹‡ena nÄ«va nÄ«varaá¹‡asampayuttaÃ±ca, avijjÄ• nÄ«varaá¹‡aá¹ƒ uddhaccanÄ«varaá¹‡ena nÄ«varaá¹‡ nÄ«varaá¹‡asampayuttaÃ±ca, uddhaccanÄ«varaá¹‡aá¹ƒ avijjÄ• nÄ«varaá¹‡ena nÄ«varaá¹‡ nÄ«varaá¹‡asampayuttaÃ±ca --- ime dhammÄ• nÄ«varaá¹‡Ä• ceva nÄ«varaá¹‡asampayu

<1177> katame dhammÄ• nÄ«varaá¹‡asampayuttÄ• ceva no ca nÄ«varaá¹‡Ä• ? tehi dha te dhamme á¹-hapetvÄ• vedanÄ• kkhandho ... pe ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho --- ime dham ceva no ca nÄ«varaá¹‡Ä• .

<1178> katame dhammÄ• nÄ«varaá¹‡avippayuttÄ• nÄ«varaá¹‡iyÄ• ? tehi dhammehi ye c kusalÄ• byÄ• katÄ• dhammÄ• kÄ• mÄ• vacarÄ• , rÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• , arÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• ; rÅ«
viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho --- ime dhammÄ• nÄ«varaá¹‡avippayuttÄ• nÄ«varaá¹‡iyÄ• .

<1179> katame dhammÄ• nÄ«varaá¹‡avippayuttÄ• anÄ«varaá¹‡iyÄ• ? apariyÄ• pannÄ• asaá¹…khatÄ• ca dhÄ• tu --- ime dhammÄ• nÄ«varaá¹‡avippayuttÄ• anÄ«varaá¹‡iyÄ• .

parÄ• mÄ• sagocchakaá¹ƒ

<1180> katame \Ee 208/ \Ne 260/ dhammÄ• parÄ• mÄ• sÄ• ? diá¹-á¹-hiparÄ• mÄ• so.

<1181> tattha katamo diá¹-á¹-hiparÄ• mÄ• so? sassato lokoti vÄ• , asassato lokoti vÄ• , an anantavÄ• lokoti vÄ• , taá¹ƒ jÄ«vaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ \Se 301/ sarÄ«ranti vÄ• , aÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ jÄ«vaá¹ƒ vÄ• , hoti tathÄ• gato paraá¹ƒ maraá¹‡Ä• ti vÄ• , na hoti tathÄ• gato paraá¹ƒ maraá¹‡Ä• ti v
tathÄ• gato paraá¹ƒ maraá¹‡Ä• ti vÄ• , neva hoti na na hoti tathÄ• gato paraá¹ƒ maraá¹‡Ä•
diá¹-á¹-hi diá¹-á¹-higataá¹ƒ diá¹-á¹-higahanaá¹ƒ diá¹-á¹-hikantÄ• ro diá¹-á¹-hivisÅ«kÄ• yikaá¹
diá¹-á¹-hivipphanditaá¹ƒ diá¹-á¹-hisaá¹ƒyojanaá¹ƒ gÄ• ho patiá¹-á¹-hÄ• ho abhiniveso parÄ• micchÄ• patho micchattaá¹ƒ titthÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ vipariyÄ• saggÄ• ho --- ayaá¹ƒ vuccati diá¹-á micchÄ• diá¹-á¹-hi diá¹-á¹-hiparÄ• mÄ• so.

ime dhammÄ• parÄ• mÄ• sÄ• .

<1182> katame \Be 237/ dhammÄ• no parÄ• mÄ• sÄ• ? te dhamme á¹-hapetvÄ• avasesÄ
kÄ• mÄ• vacarÄ• , rÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• , arÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• , apariyÄ• pannÄ• ; vedanÄ• kkhand sabbaÃ±ca rÅ«paá¹ƒ, asaá¹…khatÄ• ca dhÄ• tu --- ime dhammÄ• no parÄ• mÄ• sÄ• .

<1183> katame dhammÄ• parÄ• maá¹-á¹-hÄ• ? sÄ• savÄ• kusalÄ• kusalÄ• byÄ• katÄ• d
rÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• , arÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• ; rÅ«pakkhandho ... pe ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho --- im

<1184> katame dhammÄ• aparÄ• maá¹-á¹-hÄ• ? apariyÄ• pannÄ• maggÄ• ca, maggaph
--- ime dhammÄ• aparÄ• maá¹-á¹-hÄ• .

<1185> katame dhammÄ• parÄ• mÄ• sasampayuttÄ• ? tehi dhammehi ye dhammÄ• sam viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho --- ime dhammÄ• \Se 302/ parÄ• mÄ• sasampayuttÄ• .

<1186> katame \Ne 261/ dhammÄ• parÄ• mÄ• savippayuttÄ• ? tehi dhammehi ye dhamm
... pe ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho; sabbaÃ±ca rÅ«paá¹ƒ, asaá¹…khatÄ• ca dhÄ• tu --- ime d parÄ• mÄ• savippayuttÄ• .

<1187> katame dhammÄ• parÄ• mÄ• sÄ• ceva parÄ• maá¹-á¹-hÄ• ca? sveva parÄ• mÄ• ca.

<1188> katame dhammÄ• parÄ• maá¹-á¹-hÄ• ceva no ca parÄ• mÄ• sÄ• ? tehi dhammeh dhamme á¹-hapetvÄ• \Ee 209/ avasesÄ• sÄ• savÄ• kusalÄ• kusalÄ• byÄ• katÄ• dhamm arÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• ; rÅ«pakkhandho ... pe ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho --- ime dhammÄ• parÄ parÄ• mÄ• sÄ• .

<1189> katame dhammÄ• parÄ• mÄ• savippayuttÄ• parÄ• maá¹-á¹-hÄ• ? tehi dhammehi
kusalÄ• kusalÄ• byÄ• katÄ• dhammÄ• kÄ• mÄ• vacarÄ• , rÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• arÅ«pÄ• vaca viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho --- ime dhammÄ• parÄ• mÄ• savippayuttÄ• parÄ• maá¹-á¹-hÄ• .

<1190> katame dhammÄ• parÄ• mÄ• savippayuttÄ• aparÄ• maá¹-á¹-hÄ• ? apariyÄ• pann asaá¹…khatÄ• ca dhÄ• tu --- ime dhammÄ• parÄ• mÄ• savippayuttÄ• aparÄ• maá¹-á¹-hÄ

mahantaradukaá¹ƒ

<1191> katame \Be 238/ dhammÄ• sÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• ? vedanÄ• kkhandho, saÃ±Ã±Ä• kkh viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho --- ime dhammÄ• sÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• .

<1192> katame \Se 303/ dhammÄ• anÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• ? sabbaÃ±ca rÅ«paá¹ƒ, asaá¹…kha
anÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• .

<1193> katame \Ne 262/ dhammÄ• cittÄ• ? cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ, sotaviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá
jivhÄ• viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ, kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ, manodhÄ• tu, manoviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡adhÄ•

<1194> katame dhammÄ• no cittÄ• ? vedanÄ• kkhandho, saÃ±Ã±Ä• kkhandho, saá¹…khÄ asaá¹…khatÄ• ca dhÄ• tu --- ime dhammÄ• no cittÄ• .

<1195> katame dhammÄ• cetasikÄ• ? vedanÄ• kkhandho, saÃ±Ã±Ä• kkhandho, saá¹…kh cetasikÄ• .

<1196> katame dhammÄ• acetasikÄ• ? cittaÃ±ca, sabbaÃ±ca rÅ«paá¹ƒ, asaá¹…khatÄ• c acetasikÄ• .

<1197> katame dhammÄ• cittasampayuttÄ• ? vedanÄ• kkhandho, saÃ±Ã±Ä• kkhandho, s dhammÄ• cittasampayuttÄ• .

<1198> katame dhammÄ• cittavippayuttÄ• ? sabbaÃ±ca \Ee 210/ rÅ«paá¹ƒ, asaá¹…khatÄ cittavippayuttÄ• . cittaá¹ƒ na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- cittena sampayuttantipi, cittena vippayuttantipi.

<1199> katame dhammÄ• cittasaá¹ƒsaá¹-á¹-hÄ• ? vedanÄ• kkhandho, saÃ±Ã±Ä• kkhandh dhammÄ• cittasaá¹ƒsaá¹-á¹-hÄ• .

<1200> katame dhammÄ• cittavisaá¹ƒsaá¹-á¹-hÄ• ? sabbaÃ±ca rÅ«paá¹ƒ, asaá¹…khatÄ•
cittavisaá¹ƒsaá¹-á¹-hÄ• . cittaá¹ƒ na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- cittena saá¹ƒsaá¹-á¹-hantipi, cittena
visaá¹ƒsaá¹-á¹-hantipi.

<1201> katame \Se 304/ \Be 239/ dhammÄ• cittasamuá¹-á¹-hÄ• nÄ• ? vedanÄ• kkhandho saá¹…khÄ• rakkhandho; kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±atti vacÄ«viÃ±Ã±atti; yaá¹ƒ vÄ• panaÃ±Ã±ampi atth cittahetukaá¹ƒ cittasamuá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ saddÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ gandhÄ• yata phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ Ä• kÄ• sadhÄ• tu Ä• podhÄ• tu rÅ«passa lahutÄ• \Ne 263/ rÅ« kammaÃ±Ã±atÄ• rÅ«passa upacayo rÅ«passa santati kabaá¸·Ä«kÄ• ro Ä• hÄ• ro --- ime d

<1202> katame dhammÄ• no cittasamuá¹-á¹-hÄ• nÄ• ? cittaÃ±ca, avasesaÃ±ca rÅ«paá¹ƒ ime dhammÄ• no cittasamuá¹-á¹-hÄ• nÄ• .

<1203> katame dhammÄ• cittasahabhuno? vedanÄ• kkhandho, saÃ±Ã±Ä• kkhandho, saá kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±atti, vacÄ«viÃ±Ã±atti --- ime dhammÄ• cittasahabhuno.

<1204> katame dhammÄ• no cittasahabhuno? cittaÃ±ca, avasesaÃ±ca rÅ«paá¹ƒ, asaá¹…
dhammÄ• no cittasahabhuno.

<1205> katame dhammÄ• cittÄ• nuparivattino? vedanÄ• kkhandho, saÃ±Ã±Ä• kkhandho, kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±atti, vacÄ«viÃ±Ã±atti --- ime dhammÄ• cittÄ• nuparivattino.

<1206> katame dhammÄ• no cittÄ• nuparivattino? cittaÃ±ca, avasesaÃ±ca rÅ«paá¹ƒ, asaá dhammÄ• no cittÄ• nuparivattino.

<1207> katame dhammÄ• cittasaá¹ƒsaá¹-á¹-hasamuá¹-á¹-hÄ• nÄ• ? vedanÄ• kkhandho, s
saá¹…khÄ• rakkhandho --- ime dhammÄ• cittasaá¹ƒsaá¹-á¹-hasamuá¹-á¹-hÄ• nÄ• .

<1208> katame \Ee 211/ dhammÄ• no cittasaá¹ƒsaá¹-á¹-hasamuá¹-á¹-hÄ• nÄ• ? cittaÃ±ca asaá¹…khatÄ• ca dhÄ• tu --- ime dhammÄ• no cittasaá¹ƒsaá¹-á¹-hasamuá¹-á¹-hÄ• nÄ• .

<1209> katame \Se 305/ dhammÄ• cittasaá¹ƒsaá¹-á¹-hasamuá¹-á¹-hÄ• nasahabhuno? ve saÃ±Ã±Ä• kkhandho, saá¹…khÄ• rakkhandho --- ime dhammÄ• cittasaá¹ƒsaá¹-á¹-hasamua

<1210> katame \Ne 264/ dhammÄ• no cittasaá¹ƒsaá¹-á¹-hasamuá¹-á¹-hÄ• nasahabhuno?
rÅ«paá¹ƒ, asaá¹…khatÄ• ca dhÄ• tu --- ime dhammÄ• no cittasaá¹ƒsaá¹-á¹-hasamuá¹-á¹-h

<1211> katame dhammÄ• cittasaá¹ƒsaá¹-á¹-hasamuá¹-á¹-hÄ• nÄ• nuparivattino? vedanÄ•
saá¹…khÄ• rakkhandho --- ime dhammÄ• cittasaá¹ƒsaá¹-á¹-hasamuá¹-á¹-hÄ• nÄ• nupariva

<1212> katame \Be 240/ dhammÄ• no cittasaá¹ƒsaá¹-á¹-hasamuá¹-á¹-hÄ• nÄ• nuparivatti
rÅ«paá¹ƒ, asaá¹…khatÄ• ca dhÄ• tu --- ime dhammÄ• no cittasaá¹ƒsaá¹-á¹-hasamuá¹-á¹-h

<1213> katame dhammÄ• ajjhattikÄ• ? cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... manÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ --- i

<1214> katame dhammÄ• bÄ• hirÄ• ? rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... dhammÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ---

<1215> katame dhammÄ• upÄ• dÄ• ? cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... kabaá¸·Ä«kÄ• ro Ä• hÄ

<1216> katame dhammÄ• no upÄ• dÄ• ? vedanÄ• kkhandho, saÃ±Ã±Ä• kkhandho, saá¹…
viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho, cattÄ• ro ca mahÄ• bhÅ«tÄ• , asaá¹…khatÄ• ca dhÄ• tu --- ime d

<1217> katame dhammÄ• upÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡Ä• ? sÄ• savÄ• kusalÄ• kusalÄ• naá¹ƒ dhammÄ
rÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• , arÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• ; vedanÄ• kkhandho ... pe ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho; y katattÄ• --- ime dhammÄ• upÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡Ä• \Se 306/.

<1218> katame dhammÄ• anupÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡Ä• ? sÄ• savÄ• \Ee 212/ kusalÄ• kusalÄ• dha
rÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• , arÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• ; vedanÄ• kkhandho ... pe ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho; y kusalÄ• nÄ• kusalÄ• na ca kammavipÄ• kÄ• , yaÃ±ca rÅ«paá¹ƒ na kammassa katattÄ• , a maggaphalÄ• ni ca, asaá¹…khatÄ• ca dhÄ• tu --- ime dhammÄ• anupÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡Ä• .

upÄ• dÄ• nagocchakaá¹ƒ

<1219> katame \Ne 265/ dhammÄ• upÄ• dÄ• nÄ• ? cattÄ• ri upÄ• dÄ• nÄ• ni --- kÄ• mup sÄ«labbatupÄ• dÄ• naá¹ƒ, attavÄ• dupÄ• dÄ• naá¹ƒ {kÄ• mÅ«pÄ• dÄ• naá¹ƒ diá¹-á¹-hÅ«pÄ attavÄ• dÅ«pÄ• dÄ• naá¹ƒ (Ce) }.

<1220> tattha \Be 241/ katamaá¹ƒ kÄ• mupÄ• dÄ• naá¹ƒ? yo kÄ• mesu kÄ• macchando kÄ
kÄ• mataá¹‡hÄ• kÄ• masineho kÄ• mapariá¸·Ä• ho kÄ• mamucchÄ• kÄ• majjhosÄ• naá¹ƒ

<1221> tattha katamaá¹ƒ diá¹-á¹-hupÄ• dÄ• naá¹ƒ? natthi dinnaá¹ƒ, natthi yiá¹-á¹-haá¹ƒ, na
sukatadukkaá¹-Ä• naá¹ƒ kammÄ• naá¹ƒ phalaá¹ƒ vipÄ• ko, natthi ayaá¹ƒ loko, natthi paro lo natthi pitÄ• , natthi sattÄ• opapÄ• tikÄ• , natthi loke samaá¹‡abrÄ• hmaá¹‡Ä• sammaggatÄ sammÄ• paá¹-ipannÄ• , ye imaÃ±ca lokaá¹ƒ paraÃ±ca lokaá¹ƒ sayaá¹ƒ abhiÃ±Ã±Ä• sacch evarÅ«pÄ• diá¹-á¹-hi diá¹-á¹-higataá¹ƒ diá¹-á¹-higahanaá¹ƒ diá¹-á¹-hikantÄ• ro diá¹-á¹-hivisÅ
diá¹-á¹-hivipphanditaá¹ƒ diá¹-á¹-hisaá¹ƒyojanaá¹ƒ gÄ• ho patiá¹-á¹-hÄ• ho abhiniveso parÄ• micchÄ• patho micchattaá¹ƒ \Se 307/ titthÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ vipariyÄ• saggÄ• ho --- idaá¹ƒ vucca diá¹-á¹-hupÄ• dÄ• naá¹ƒ. á¹-hapetvÄ• sÄ«labbatupÄ• dÄ• naÃ±ca attavÄ• dupÄ• dÄ• naÃ± diá¹-á¹-hupÄ• dÄ• naá¹ƒ.

<1222> tattha katamaá¹ƒ sÄ«labbatupÄ• dÄ• naá¹ƒ? ito bahiddhÄ• samaá¹‡abrÄ• hmaá¹‡ suddhi, sÄ«labbatena suddhÄ«ti --- yÄ• evarÅ«pÄ• diá¹-á¹-hi diá¹-á¹-higataá¹ƒ diá¹-á¹-higa
diá¹-á¹-hikantÄ• ro diá¹-á¹-hivisÅ«kÄ• yikaá¹ƒ diá¹-á¹-hivipphanditaá¹ƒ diá¹-á¹-hisaá¹ƒyojana
patiá¹-á¹-hÄ• ho abhiniveso parÄ• mÄ• so kummaggo micchÄ• patho micchattaá¹ƒ titthÄ• y
--- idaá¹ƒ vuccati sÄ«labbatupÄ• dÄ• naá¹ƒ.

<1223> tattha katamaá¹ƒ attavÄ• dupÄ• dÄ• naá¹ƒ? idha assutavÄ• puthujjano ariyÄ• naá
akovido ariyadhamme avinÄ«to sappurisÄ• naá¹ƒ adassÄ• vÄ« sappurisadhammassa akov rÅ«paá¹ƒ attato samanupassati, rÅ«pavantaá¹ƒ vÄ• attÄ• naá¹ƒ, attani \Ee 213/ vÄ• rÅ«pa attÄ• naá¹ƒ. vedanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... saÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ ... pe ... saá¹…khÄ• re ... pe ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡a samanupassati, viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡avantaá¹ƒ vÄ• attÄ• naá¹ƒ, attani vÄ• viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ viÃ attÄ• naá¹ƒ. yÄ• evarÅ«pÄ• diá¹-á¹-hi diá¹-á¹-higataá¹ƒ diá¹-á¹-higahanaá¹ƒ \Se 308/ diá¹-á diá¹-á¹-hivisÅ«kÄ• yikaá¹ƒ \Ne 266/ diá¹-á¹-hivipphanditaá¹ƒ diá¹-á¹-hisaá¹ƒyojanaá¹ƒ gÄ• h abhiniveso parÄ• mÄ• so kummaggo micchÄ• patho micchattaá¹ƒ titthÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ vipariyÄ attavÄ• dupÄ• dÄ• naá¹ƒ.

ime dhammÄ• upÄ• dÄ• nÄ• .

<1224> katame \Be 242/ dhammÄ• no upÄ• dÄ• nÄ• ? te dhamme á¹-hapetvÄ• avasesÄ•
kÄ• mÄ• vacarÄ• , rÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• , arÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• , apariyÄ• pannÄ• ; vedanÄ• kkhand sabbaÃ±ca rÅ«paá¹ƒ, asaá¹…khatÄ• ca dhÄ• tu --- ime dhammÄ• no upÄ• dÄ• nÄ• .

<1225> katame dhammÄ• upÄ• dÄ• niyÄ• ? sÄ• savÄ• kusalÄ• kusalÄ• byÄ• katÄ• dha
arÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• ; rÅ«pakkhandho ... pe ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho --- ime dhammÄ• upÄ

<1226> katame dhammÄ• anupÄ• dÄ• niyÄ• ? apariyÄ• pannÄ• maggÄ• ca, maggaphal ime dhammÄ• anupÄ• dÄ• niyÄ• .

<1227> katame dhammÄ• upÄ• dÄ• nasampayuttÄ• ? tehi dhammehi ye dhammÄ• samp viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho --- ime dhammÄ• upÄ• dÄ• nasampayuttÄ• .

<1228> katame dhammÄ• upÄ• dÄ• navippayuttÄ• ? tehi dhammehi ye dhammÄ• vippay
viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho; sabbaÃ±ca rÅ«paá¹ƒ, asaá¹…khatÄ• ca dhÄ• tu --- ime dhammÄ

<1229> katame \Se 309/ dhammÄ• upÄ• dÄ• nÄ• ceva upÄ• dÄ• niyÄ• ca? tÄ• neva upÄ upÄ• dÄ• niyÄ• ca.

<1230> katame dhammÄ• upÄ• dÄ• niyÄ• ceva no ca upÄ• dÄ• nÄ• ? tehi dhammehi ye
dhamme á¹-hapetvÄ• avasesÄ• sÄ• savÄ• kusalÄ• kusalÄ• byÄ• katÄ• dhammÄ• kÄ• m
arÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• ; rÅ«pakkhandho ... pe ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho --- ime dhammÄ• upÄ upÄ• dÄ• nÄ• .

<1231> katame dhammÄ• upÄ• dÄ• nÄ• ceva upÄ• dÄ• nasampayuttÄ• ca? diá¹-á¹-hupÄ

upÄ• dÄ• naÃ±ceva upÄ• dÄ• nasampayuttaÃ±ca, kÄ• mupÄ• dÄ• naá¹ƒ diá¹-á¹-hupÄ• dÄ upÄ• dÄ• nasampayuttaÃ±ca, sÄ«labbatupÄ• dÄ• naá¹ƒ kÄ• mupÄ• dÄ• nena upÄ• dÄ• na kÄ• mupÄ• dÄ• naá¹ƒ sÄ«labbatupÄ• dÄ• nena upÄ• dÄ• naÃ±ceva upÄ• dÄ• nasampayu kÄ• mupÄ• dÄ• nena upÄ• dÄ• naÃ±ceva upÄ• dÄ• nasampayuttaÃ±ca, kÄ• mupÄ• dÄ• na upÄ• dÄ• nasampayuttaÃ±ca --- ime dhammÄ• upÄ• dÄ• nÄ• ceva upÄ• dÄ• nasampayu

<1232> katame dhammÄ• upÄ• dÄ• nasampayuttÄ• ceva no ca upÄ• dÄ• nÄ• ? tehi dha
dhamme á¹-hapetvÄ• vedanÄ• kkhandho ... pe ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho --- ime dhammÄ no ca upÄ• dÄ• nÄ• .

<1233> katame dhammÄ• upÄ• dÄ• navippayuttÄ• upÄ• dÄ• niyÄ• ? tehi dhammehi ye d kusalÄ• kusalÄ• byÄ• katÄ• dhammÄ• kÄ• mÄ• vacarÄ• \Se 310/, rÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• , arÅ«
... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho --- ime dhammÄ• upÄ• dÄ• navippayuttÄ• upÄ• dÄ• niyÄ• .

<1234> katame dhammÄ• upÄ• dÄ• navippayuttÄ• anupÄ• dÄ• niyÄ• ? apariyÄ• pannÄ• asaá¹…khatÄ• ca dhÄ• tu --- ime dhammÄ• upÄ• dÄ• navippayuttÄ• anupÄ• dÄ• niyÄ• .

nikkhepakaá¹‡á¸• e dutiyabhÄ• á¹‡avÄ• ro.

kilesagocchakaá¹ƒ

<1235> katame dhammÄ• kilesÄ• ? dasa kilesavatthÅ«ni --- lobho, doso, moho, mÄ• no, d thinaá¹ƒ, uddhaccaá¹ƒ, ahirÄ«kaá¹ƒ, anottappaá¹ƒ.

<1236> tattha \Ne 268/ katamo lobho? yo rÄ• go sÄ• rÄ• go anunayo anurodho nandÄ« na icchÄ• mucchÄ• ajjhosÄ• naá¹ƒ gedho paligedho saá¹…go paá¹…ko ejÄ• mÄ• yÄ• janik saritÄ• visattikÄ• suttaá¹ƒ visaá¹-Ä• Ä• yÅ«hinÄ« dutiyÄ• paá¹‡idhi bhavanetti vanaá¹ƒ va apekkhÄ• paá¹-ibandhu Ä• sÄ• Ä• sisanÄ• Ä• sisitattaá¹ƒ rÅ«pÄ• sÄ• saddÄ• sÄ• gandh phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• sÄ• lÄ• bhÄ• sÄ• dhanÄ• sÄ• puttÄ• sÄ• jÄ«vitÄ• sÄ• jappÄ• pajappÄ jappitattaá¹ƒ loluppaá¹ƒ loluppÄ• yanÄ• loluppÄ• yitattaá¹ƒ pucchaÃ±jikatÄ• sÄ• dhukamy visamalobho nikanti nikÄ• manÄ• patthanÄ• pihanÄ• sampatthanÄ• kÄ• mataá¹‡hÄ• bh
rÅ«pataá¹‡hÄ• arÅ«pataá¹‡hÄ• nirodhataá¹‡hÄ• rÅ«pataá¹‡hÄ• saddataá¹‡hÄ• gandha phoá¹-á¹-habbataá¹‡hÄ• \Ee 215/ dhammataá¹‡hÄ• ogho yogo gantho upÄ• dÄ• naá¹ƒ Ä• chÄ• danaá¹ƒ \Se 311/ bandhanaá¹ƒ upakkileso anusayo pariyuá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ latÄ• vevic dukkhanidÄ• naá¹ƒ dukkhappabhavo mÄ• rapÄ• so mÄ• rabaá¸·isaá¹ƒ mÄ• ravisayo taá¹‡h taá¹‡hÄ• gaddulaá¹ƒ taá¹‡hÄ• samuddo abhijjhÄ• lobho akusalamÅ«laá¹ƒ --- ayaá¹ƒ vucca

<1237> tattha katamo doso? anatthaá¹ƒ me acarÄ«ti Ä• ghÄ• to jÄ• yati, anatthaá¹ƒ me ca anatthaá¹ƒ me carissatÄ«ti Ä• ghÄ• to jÄ• yati, piyassa me manÄ• passa anatthaá¹ƒ acari ... carati ... pe ... anatthaá¹ƒ carissatÄ«ti Ä• ghÄ• to jÄ• yati, appiyassa me amanÄ• passa atth atthaá¹ƒ carati ... pe ... atthaá¹ƒ carissatÄ«ti Ä• ghÄ• to jÄ• yati, aá¹-á¹-hÄ• ne vÄ• pana Ä• evarÅ«po cittassa Ä• ghÄ• to paá¹-ighÄ• to paá¹-ighaá¹ƒ paá¹-ivirodho kopo pakopo sampa cittassa byÄ• patti manopadoso kodho kujjhanÄ• kujjhitattaá¹ƒ doso dussanÄ• dussitattaá byÄ• pajjanÄ• byÄ• pajjitattaá¹ƒ virodho paá¹-ivirodho caá¹‡á¸• ikkaá¹ƒ asuropo anattaman vuccati doso.

<1238> tattha katamo moho? dukkhe aÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ, dukkhasamudaye aÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá
aÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ, dukkhanirodhagÄ• miniyÄ• paá¹-ipadÄ• ya aÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ, pubbante
aÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ, pubbantÄ• parante aÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ, idappaccayatÄ• paá¹-iccasamupp \Se 312/. yaá¹ƒ evarÅ«paá¹ƒ aÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ adassanaá¹ƒ anabhisamayo ananubodho a asaá¹ƒgÄ• hanÄ• apariyogÄ• hanÄ• asamapekkhanÄ• apaccavekkhaá¹‡Ä• apaccakkhal asampajaÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ moho \Ne 269/ pamoho sammoho avijjÄ• avijjogho avijjÄ• yogo avijjÄ• avijjÄ• pariyuá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ avijjÄ• laá¹…gÄ« moho akusalamÅ«laá¹ƒ --- ayaá¹ƒ vuccati m

<1239> tattha \Be 245/ katamo mÄ• no? seyyohamasmÄ«ti mÄ• no, sadisohamasmÄ«ti m evarÅ«po mÄ• no maÃ±Ã±anÄ• maÃ±Ã±itattaá¹ƒ unnati unnamo dhajo sampaggÄ• ho ket vuccati mÄ• no.

<1240> tattha katamÄ• diá¹-á¹-hi? sassato lokoti vÄ• , asassato lokoti vÄ• , antavÄ• lokot
lokoti vÄ• , taá¹ƒ jÄ«vaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ sarÄ«ranti vÄ• , aÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ jÄ«vaá¹ƒ aÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ sarÄ«ran paraá¹ƒ maraá¹‡Ä• ti vÄ• , na hoti \Ee 216/ tathÄ• gato paraá¹ƒ maraá¹‡Ä• ti vÄ• , hoti ca n paraá¹ƒ maraá¹‡Ä• ti vÄ• , neva hoti na na hoti tathÄ• gato paraá¹ƒ maraá¹‡Ä• ti vÄ• : yÄ•
diá¹-á¹-higataá¹ƒ diá¹-á¹-higahanaá¹ƒ diá¹-á¹-hikantÄ• ro diá¹-á¹-hivisÅ«kÄ• yikaá¹ƒ diá¹-á¹-h
diá¹-á¹-hisaá¹ƒyojanaá¹ƒ gÄ• ho patiá¹-á¹-hÄ• ho abhiniveso parÄ• mÄ• so kummaggo micc titthÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ vipariyÄ• saggÄ• ho --- ayaá¹ƒ vuccati diá¹-á¹-hi. sabbÄ• pi micchÄ• diá¹-á <1241> tattha \Se 313/ katamÄ• vicikicchÄ• ? satthari kaá¹…khati vicikicchati, dhamme ka saá¹…ghe kaá¹…khati vicikicchati sikkhÄ• ya kaá¹…khati vicikicchati, pubbante kaá¹…khati kaá¹…khati vicikicchati, pubbantÄ• parante kaá¹…khati vicikicchati, idappaccayatÄ• paá¹-ic dhammesu kaá¹…khati vicikicchati: yÄ• evarÅ«pÄ• kaá¹…khÄ• kaá¹…khÄ• yanÄ• kaá¹…

vicikicchÄ• dveá¸·hakaá¹ƒ dvedhÄ• patho saá¹ƒsayo, anekaá¹ƒsaggÄ• ho Ä• sappanÄ• pa thambhitattaá¹ƒ cittassa manovilekho --- ayaá¹ƒ vuccati vicikicchÄ• .

<1242> tattha katamaá¹ƒ thinaá¹ƒ? yÄ• cittassa akallatÄ• akammaÃ±Ã±atÄ• olÄ«yanÄ• lÄ«yanÄ• lÄ«yitattaá¹ƒ thinaá¹ƒ thiyanÄ• thiyitattaá¹ƒ cittassa --- idaá¹ƒ vuccati thinaá¹ƒ.

<1243> tattha katamaá¹ƒ uddhaccaá¹ƒ? yaá¹ƒ cittassa uddhaccaá¹ƒ avÅ«pasamo cetaso v cittassa --- idaá¹ƒ vuccati uddhaccaá¹ƒ.

<1244> tattha \Ne 270/ katamaá¹ƒ ahirikaá¹ƒ? yaá¹ƒ na hirÄ«yati hiriyitabbena, na hirÄ«yat akusalÄ• naá¹ƒ dhammÄ• naá¹ƒ samÄ• pattiyÄ• --- idaá¹ƒ vuccati ahirikaá¹ƒ.

<1245> tattha \Be 246/ katamaá¹ƒ anottappaá¹ƒ? yaá¹ƒ na ottappati ottappitabbena, na ott akusalÄ• naá¹ƒ dhammÄ• naá¹ƒ samÄ• pattiyÄ• --- idaá¹ƒ vuccati anottappaá¹ƒ.

ime dhammÄ• kilesÄ• .

<1246> katame \Se 314/ dhammÄ• no kilesÄ• ? te dhamme á¹-hapetvÄ• avasesÄ• kusal
kÄ• mÄ• vacarÄ• , rÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• , arÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• , apariyÄ• pannÄ• ; vedanÄ• kkhand
viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho; sabbaÃ±ca rÅ«paá¹ƒ, asaá¹…khatÄ• ca dhÄ• tu --- ime dhammÄ

<1247> katame dhammÄ• saá¹ƒkilesikÄ• ? sÄ• savÄ• kusalÄ• kusalÄ• byÄ• katÄ• dham arÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• ; rÅ«pakkhandho ... pe ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho --- ime dhammÄ• saá¹

<1248> katame dhammÄ• asaá¹ƒkilesikÄ• ? apariyÄ• pannÄ• maggÄ• ca, maggaphalÄ• ime dhammÄ• asaá¹ƒkilesikÄ• .

<1249> katame dhammÄ• saá¹ƒkiliá¹-á¹-hÄ• ? tÄ«á¹‡i akusalamÅ«lÄ• ni --- lobho, doso, m kilesÄ• , taá¹ƒsampayutto vedanÄ• kkhandho ... pe ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho, taá¹ƒsamuâ kÄ• yakammaá¹ƒ, vacÄ«kammaá¹ƒ, manokammaá¹ƒ --- ime dhammÄ• saá¹ƒkiliá¹-á¹-hÄ• .

<1250> katame dhammÄ• asaá¹ƒkiliá¹-á¹-hÄ• ? kusalÄ• byÄ• katÄ• dhammÄ• kÄ• mÄ•
arÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• , apariyÄ• pannÄ• ; vedanÄ• kkhandho ... pe ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho;
asaá¹…khatÄ• ca dhÄ• tu --- ime dhammÄ• asaá¹ƒkiliá¹-á¹-hÄ• .

<1251> katame \Ne 271/ dhammÄ• kilesasampayuttÄ• ? tehi dhammehi ye dhammÄ• sar
... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho --- ime dhammÄ• kilesasampayuttÄ• .

<1252> katame dhammÄ• kilesavippayuttÄ• ? tehi dhammehi ye dhammÄ• vippayuttÄ• viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho \Se 315/; sabbaÃ±ca rÅ«paá¹ƒ, asaá¹…khatÄ• ca dhÄ• tu --- ime

<1253> katame \Be 247/ dhammÄ• kilesÄ• ceva saá¹ƒkilesikÄ• ca? teva kilesÄ• kilesÄ•

<1254> katame dhammÄ• saá¹ƒkilesikÄ• ceva no ca kilesÄ• ? tehi dhammehi ye dhamm

á¹-hapetvÄ• avasesÄ• sÄ• savÄ• kusalÄ• kusalÄ• byÄ• katÄ• dhammÄ• kÄ• mÄ• vacan rÅ«pakkhandho ... pe ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho --- ime dhammÄ• saá¹ƒkilesikÄ• ceva no

<1255> katame dhammÄ• kilesÄ• ceva saá¹ƒkiliá¹-á¹-hÄ• ca? teva kilesÄ• kilesÄ• ceva

<1256> katame dhammÄ• saá¹ƒkiliá¹-á¹-hÄ• ceva no ca kilesÄ• ? tehi dhammehi ye dhan
dhamme á¹-hapetvÄ• vedanÄ• kkhandho ... pe ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho --- ime dhammÄ ca kilesÄ• .

<1257> katame dhammÄ• kilesÄ• ceva kilesasampayuttÄ• ca? lobho mohena kileso ceva lobhena \Ee 218/ kileso ceva kilesasampayutto ca, doso mohena kileso ceva kilesasampayu kileso ceva kilesasampayutto ca, mÄ• no mohena kileso ceva kilesasampayutto ca, moho m kilesasampayutto ca, diá¹-á¹-hi mohena kileso ceva kilesasampayuttÄ• ca, moho diá¹-á¹-hiy kilesasampayutto ca \Se 316/, vicikicchÄ• mohena kileso ceva kilesasampayuttÄ• ca, moh kileso ceva kilesasampayutto ca, thinaá¹ƒ mohena kileso ceva kilesasampayuttaÃ±ca, moho kilesasampayutto ca, uddhaccaá¹ƒ mohena kileso ceva kilesasampayuttaÃ±ca, moho uddha kilesasampayutto ca, ahirikaá¹ƒ mohena kileso ceva kilesasampayuttaÃ±ca, moho ahirikena kilesasampayutto ca, anottappaá¹ƒ mohena kileso ceva kilesasampayuttaÃ±ca, moho anott kilesasampayutto ca, lobho uddhaccena \Be 248/ kileso ceva kilesasampayutto ca, uddhacc ceva kilesasampayuttaÃ±ca, doso uddhaccena kileso ceva kilesasampayutto ca, uddhaccaá kilesasampayuttaÃ±ca, moho uddhaccena kileso ceva kilesasampayutto ca, uddhaccaá¹ƒ m kilesasampayuttaÃ±ca, mÄ• no uddhaccena kileso ceva kilesasampayutto ca, uddhaccaá¹ƒ kilesasampayuttaÃ±ca, diá¹-á¹-hi uddhaccena kileso ceva kilesasampayuttÄ• ca, uddhacca ceva kilesasampayuttaÃ±ca, vicikicchÄ• uddhaccena kileso ceva kilesasampayuttÄ• ca, u kileso ceva kilesasampayuttaÃ±ca, thinaá¹ƒ uddhaccena kileso ceva kilesasampayuttaÃ±ca kileso ceva kilesasampayuttaÃ±ca, ahirikaá¹ƒ uddhaccena kileso ceva kilesasampayuttaÃ±c ahirikena \Se 317/ kileso ceva kilesasampayuttaÃ±ca, anottappaá¹ƒ uddhaccena kileso ceva uddhaccaá¹ƒ anottappena kileso ceva kilesasampayuttaÃ±ca, lobho ahirikena kileso ceva k ahirikaá¹ƒ lobhena kileso ceva kilesasampayuttaÃ±ca, doso ahirikena kileso ceva kilesasam ahirikaá¹ƒ dosena kileso ceva kilesasampayuttaÃ±ca, moho ahirikena kileso ceva kilesasam mohena kileso ceva kilesasampayuttaÃ±ca, mÄ• no ahirikena kileso ceva kilesasampayutto mÄ• nena kileso ceva kilesasampayuttaÃ±ca, diá¹-á¹-hi ahirikena kileso ceva kilesasampay diá¹-á¹-hiyÄ• kileso ceva kilesasampayuttaÃ±ca, vicikicchÄ• ahirikena kileso ceva kilesasa ahirikaá¹ƒ vicikicchÄ• ya kileso ceva kilesasampayuttaÃ±ca, thinaá¹ƒ ahirikena kileso ceva kilesasampayuttaÃ±ca, ahirikaá¹ƒ thinena kileso ceva kilesasampayuttaÃ±ca, uddhaccaá¹ƒ kilesasampayuttaÃ±ca, ahirikaá¹ƒ uddhaccena kileso ceva kilesasampayuttaÃ±ca, anottapp ceva kilesasampayuttaÃ±ca, ahirikaá¹ƒ anottappena kileso ceva kilesasampayuttaÃ±ca, lob ceva kilesasampayutto ca, anottappaá¹ƒ lobhena \Ne 273/ kileso ceva kilesasampayuttaÃ±c anottappena kileso ceva kilesasampayutto ca, anottappaá¹ƒ dosena kileso ceva kilesasamp anottappena \Se 318/ kileso ceva kilesasampayutto ca, anottappaá¹ƒ mohena kileso ceva k mÄ• no anottappena kileso ceva kilesasampayutto ca, anottappaá¹ƒ mÄ• nena kileso ceva diá¹-á¹-hi anottappena kileso ceva kilesasampayuttÄ• ca, anottappaá¹ƒ diá¹-á¹-hiyÄ• kileso kilesasampayuttaÃ±ca, vicikicchÄ• anottappena kileso ceva kilesasampayuttÄ• ca, anottap kileso ceva kilesasampayuttaÃ±ca, thinaá¹ƒ anottappena kileso ceva kilesasampayuttaÃ±ca kileso ceva kilesasampayuttaÃ±ca, uddhaccaá¹ƒ anottappena kileso ceva kilesasampayutta uddhaccena kileso ceva kilesasampayuttaÃ±ca, ahirikaá¹ƒ anottappena kileso ceva kilesasa anottappaá¹ƒ ahirikena kileso ceva kilesasampayuttaÃ±ca --- ime dhammÄ• kilesÄ• ceva k

<1258> katame dhammÄ• kilesasampayuttÄ• ceva no ca kilesÄ• ? tehi dhammehi ye dha á¹-hapetvÄ• vedanÄ• kkhandho ... pe ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho --- ime dhammÄ• kilesas kilesÄ• .

<1259> katame dhammÄ• kilesavippayuttÄ• saá¹ƒkilesikÄ• ? tehi dhammehi ye dhammÄ
kusalÄ• byÄ• katÄ• dhammÄ• kÄ• mÄ• vacarÄ• , rÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• , arÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• ; rÅ«
viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho --- ime dhammÄ• kilesavippayuttÄ• saá¹ƒkilesikÄ• .

<1260> katame dhammÄ• kilesavippayuttÄ• asaá¹ƒkilesikÄ• \Se 319/? apariyÄ• pannÄ• asaá¹…khatÄ• ca dhÄ• tu --- ime dhammÄ• kilesavippayuttÄ• asaá¹ƒkilesikÄ• .

piá¹-á¹-hidukaá¹ƒ

<1261> katame dhammÄ• dassanena pahÄ• tabbÄ• ? tÄ«á¹‡i saá¹ƒyojanÄ• ni --- sakkÄ• sÄ«labbataparÄ• mÄ• so.

<1262> tattha \Be 250/ \Ne 274/ katamÄ• sakkÄ• yadiá¹-á¹-hi? idha assutavÄ• puthujjano
ariyadhammassa akovido ariyadhamme avinÄ«to sappurisÄ• naá¹ƒ adassÄ• vÄ« sappurisa
sappurisadhamme avinÄ«to rÅ«paá¹ƒ attato samanupassati, rÅ«pavantaá¹ƒ vÄ• attÄ• naá¹ rÅ«pasmiá¹ƒ vÄ• attÄ• naá¹ƒ. vedanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... saÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ ... pe ... saá¹…khÄ• re ... pe
attato samanupassati, viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡avantaá¹ƒ vÄ• attÄ• naá¹ƒ, attani vÄ• viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá attÄ• naá¹ƒ. yÄ• evarÅ«pÄ• diá¹-á¹-hi diá¹-á¹-higataá¹ƒ ... pe ... vipariyÄ• saggÄ• ho --- ay sakkÄ• yadiá¹-á¹-hi.

<1263> tattha katamÄ• vicikicchÄ• ? satthari kaá¹…khati vicikicchati ... pe ... thambhitattaá
manovilekho --- ayaá¹ƒ vuccati vicikicchÄ• .

<1264> tattha katamo sÄ«labbataparÄ• mÄ• so? ito bahiddhÄ• samaá¹‡abrÄ• hmaá¹‡Ä•

suddhi sÄ«labbatena suddhÄ«ti --- yÄ• evarÅ«pÄ• diá¹-á¹-hi diá¹-á¹-higataá¹ƒ ... pe ... vipa ayaá¹ƒ vuccati sÄ«labbataparÄ• mÄ• so. imÄ• ni \Se 320/ tÄ«á¹‡i saá¹ƒyojanÄ• ni, tadekaá taá¹ƒsampayutto vedanÄ• kkhandho ... pe ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho, taá¹ƒsamuá¹-á¹-hÄ• vacÄ«kammaá¹ƒ manokammaá¹ƒ --- ime dhammÄ• dassanena pahÄ• tabbÄ• .

<1265> katame dhammÄ• na dassanena pahÄ• tabbÄ• ? te dhamme á¹-hapetvÄ• avases
dhammÄ• kÄ• mÄ• vacarÄ• , rÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• , arÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• , apariyÄ• pannÄ• ; veda
viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho, sabbaÃ±ca rÅ«paá¹ƒ, asaá¹…khatÄ• ca dhÄ• tu --- ime dhammÄ

<1266> katame dhammÄ• bhÄ• vanÄ• ya pahÄ• tabbÄ• ? avaseso lobho doso moho, tade
taá¹ƒsampayutto vedanÄ• kkhandho ... pe ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho, taá¹ƒsamuá¹-á¹-hÄ•
vacÄ«kammaá¹ƒ manokammaá¹ƒ --- ime dhammÄ• bhÄ• vanÄ• ya pahÄ• tabbÄ• .

<1267> katame \Ee 221/ dhammÄ• na bhÄ• vanÄ• ya pahÄ• tabbÄ• ? te dhamme á¹-hape
kusalÄ• kusalÄ• byÄ• katÄ• dhammÄ• kÄ• mÄ• vacarÄ• , rÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• , arÅ«pÄ• vaca \Ne 275/ ... pe ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho; sabbaÃ±ca rÅ«paá¹ƒ, asaá¹…khatÄ• ca dhÄ• tu bhÄ• vanÄ• ya pahÄ• tabbÄ• .

<1268> katame \Be 251/ dhammÄ• dassanena pahÄ• tabbahetukÄ• ? tÄ«á¹‡i saá¹ƒyojan vicikicchÄ• , sÄ«labbataparÄ• mÄ• so.

<1269> tattha katamÄ• sakkÄ• yadiá¹-á¹-hi? idha assutavÄ• puthujjano ariyÄ• naá¹ƒ adas
akovido ariyadhamme avinÄ«to sappurisÄ• naá¹ƒ adassÄ• vÄ« sappurisadhammassa akov \Se 321/ rÅ«paá¹ƒ attato samanupassati, rÅ«pavantaá¹ƒ vÄ• attÄ• naá¹ƒ, attani vÄ• rÅ«pa attÄ• naá¹ƒ. vedanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... saÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ ... pe ... saá¹…khÄ• re ... pe ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aa
samanupassati, viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡avantaá¹ƒ vÄ• attÄ• naá¹ƒ, attani vÄ• viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ, viÃ attÄ• naá¹ƒ. yÄ• evarÅ«pÄ• diá¹-á¹-hi diá¹-á¹-higataá¹ƒ ... pe ... vipariyÄ• saggÄ• ho --- aya sakkÄ• yadiá¹-á¹-hi.

<1270> tattha katamÄ• vicikicchÄ• ? satthari kaá¹…khati vicikicchati ... pe ... thambhitattaá
manovilekho --- ayaá¹ƒ vuccati vicikicchÄ• .

<1271> tattha katamo sÄ«labbataparÄ• mÄ• so? ito bahiddhÄ• samaá¹‡abrÄ• hmaá¹‡Ä•
suddhi sÄ«labbatena suddhÄ«ti --- yÄ• evarÅ«pÄ• diá¹-á¹-hi diá¹-á¹-higataá¹ƒ ... pe ... vipa ayaá¹ƒ vuccati sÄ«labbataparÄ• mÄ• so. imÄ• ni tÄ«á¹‡i saá¹ƒyojanÄ• ni, tadekaá¹-á¹-hÄ•
taá¹ƒsampayutto vedanÄ• kkhandho ... pe ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho, taá¹ƒsamuá¹-á¹-hÄ• vacÄ«kammaá¹ƒ, manokammaá¹ƒ --- ime dhammÄ• dassanena pahÄ• tabbahetukÄ• . tÄ«á sakkÄ• yadiá¹-á¹-hi, vicikicchÄ• , sÄ«labbataparÄ• mÄ• so --- ime dhammÄ• dassanena pa

lobho doso moho --- ime dhammÄ• dassanena pahÄ• tabbahetÅ«. tadekaá¹-á¹-hÄ• ca kile vedanÄ• kkhandho ... pe ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho, taá¹ƒsamuá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ kÄ• yakam manokammaá¹ƒ --- ime dhammÄ• dassanena pahÄ• tabbahetukÄ• .

<1272> katame dhammÄ• na dassanena pahÄ• tabbahetukÄ• ? te dhamme á¹-hapetvÄ• kusalÄ• kusalÄ• byÄ• katÄ• \Ne 276/ dhammÄ• kÄ• mÄ• vacarÄ• \Ee 222/, rÅ«pÄ• vacar
apariyÄ• pannÄ• ; vedanÄ• kkhandho ... pe ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho; sabbaÃ±ca rÅ«paá
--- ime dhammÄ• na dassanena pahÄ• tabbahetukÄ• .

<1273> katame dhammÄ• bhÄ• vanÄ• ya pahÄ• tabbahetukÄ• ? avaseso lobho doso moh
pahÄ• tabbahetÅ«. tadekaá¹-á¹-hÄ• \Be 252/ ca kilesÄ• , taá¹ƒsampayutto vedanÄ• kkhand
viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho, taá¹ƒsamuá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ kÄ• yakammaá¹ƒ, vacÄ«kammaá¹ƒ, m bhÄ• vanÄ• ya pahÄ• tabbahetukÄ• .

<1274> katame dhammÄ• na bhÄ• vanÄ• ya pahÄ• tabbahetukÄ• ? te dhamme á¹-hapetv
kusalÄ• kusalÄ• byÄ• katÄ• dhammÄ• kÄ• mÄ• vacarÄ• , rÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• , arÅ«pÄ• vaca
... pe ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho; sabbaÃ±ca rÅ«paá¹ƒ, asaá¹…khatÄ• ca dhÄ• tu --- ime d
pahÄ• tabbahetukÄ• .

<1275> katame dhammÄ• savitakkÄ• ? savitakkabhÅ«miyaá¹ƒ kÄ• mÄ• vacare rÅ«pÄ• va
á¹-hapetvÄ• , taá¹ƒsampayutto vedanÄ• kkhandho ... pe ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho --- ime

<1276> katame dhammÄ• avitakkÄ• ? avitakkabhÅ«miyaá¹ƒ kÄ• mÄ• vacare rÅ«pÄ• vaca vedanÄ• kkhandho ... pe ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho; vitakko ca, sabbaÃ±ca rÅ«paá¹ƒ, asaá ime dhammÄ• avitakkÄ• .

<1277> katame dhammÄ• savicÄ• rÄ• ? savicÄ• rabhÅ«miyaá¹ƒ kÄ• mÄ• vacare rÅ«pÄ• vicÄ• raá¹ƒ á¹-hapetvÄ• , taá¹ƒsampayutto vedanÄ• kkhandho, saÃ±Ã±Ä• kkhandho, saá¹…
viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho --- ime dhammÄ• savicÄ• rÄ• .

<1278> katame dhammÄ• avicÄ• rÄ• ? avicÄ• rabhÅ«miyaá¹ƒ kÄ• mÄ• vacare rÅ«pÄ• va apariyÄ• panne; vedanÄ• kkhandho ... pe ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho; vicÄ• ro ca, sabbaÃ± ca dhÄ• tu --- ime dhammÄ• avicÄ• rÄ• .

<1279> katame dhammÄ• sappÄ«tikÄ• ? sappÄ«tikabhÅ«miyaá¹ƒ kÄ• mÄ• vacare rÅ«pÄ
pÄ«tiá¹ƒ á¹-hapetvÄ• , taá¹ƒsampayutto vedanÄ• kkhandho ... pe ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandh sappÄ«tikÄ• .

<1280> katame dhammÄ• appÄ«tikÄ• ? appÄ«tikabhÅ«miyaá¹ƒ kÄ• mÄ• vacare rÅ«pÄ• v vedanÄ• kkhandho ... pe ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho; pÄ«ti ca, sabbaÃ±ca rÅ«paá¹ƒ, asaá¹ dhammÄ• appÄ«tikÄ• .

<1281> katame dhammÄ• pÄ«tisahagatÄ• ? pÄ«tibhÅ«miyaá¹ƒ kÄ• mÄ• vacare rÅ«pÄ• v
á¹-hapetvÄ• , taá¹ƒsampayutto vedanÄ• kkhandho ... pe ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho --- ime

<1282> katame \Be 253/ dhammÄ• na pÄ«tisahagatÄ• ? na pÄ«tibhÅ«miyaá¹ƒ kÄ• mÄ• v apariyÄ• panne; vedanÄ• kkhandho ... pe ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho; pÄ«ti ca, sabbaÃ±ca dhÄ• tu --- ime dhammÄ• na pÄ«tisahagatÄ• .

<1283> katame dhammÄ• sukhasahagatÄ• ? sukhabhÅ«miyaá¹ƒ kÄ• mÄ• vacare rÅ«pÄ•
á¹-hapetvÄ• , taá¹ƒsampayutto saÃ±Ã±Ä• kkhandho, saá¹…khÄ• rakkhandho, viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡ sukhasahagatÄ• .

<1284> katame dhammÄ• \Se 324/ na sukhasahagatÄ• ? na sukhabhÅ«miyaá¹ƒ kÄ• mÄ• apariyÄ• panne; vedanÄ• kkhandho ... pe ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho; sukhaÃ±ca, sabbaÃ± dhÄ• tu --- ime dhammÄ• na sukhasahagatÄ• .

<1285> katame dhammÄ• upekkhÄ• sahagatÄ• ? upekkhÄ• bhÅ«miyaá¹ƒ kÄ• mÄ• vacar
apariyÄ• panne, upekkhaá¹ƒ á¹-hapetvÄ• , taá¹ƒsampayutto saÃ±Ã±Ä• kkhandho, saá¹…kh
viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho --- ime dhammÄ• upekkhÄ• sahagatÄ• .

<1286> katame dhammÄ• na upekkhÄ• sahagatÄ• ? na upekkhÄ• bhÅ«miyaá¹ƒ kÄ• mÄ• vedanÄ• kkhandho ... pe ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho, upekkhÄ• ca, sabbaÃ±ca rÅ«paá¹ƒ, a ime dhammÄ• na upekkhÄ• sahagatÄ• .

<1287> katame dhammÄ• kÄ• mÄ• vacarÄ• ? heá¹-á¹-hato avicinirayaá¹ƒ pariyantaá¹ƒ ka paranimmitavasavattÄ« \Ee 224/ deve {paranimmitavasavattideve (Ce Katthaci) } anto karitv antare etthÄ• vacarÄ• ettha pariyÄ• pannÄ• khandhadhÄ• tu Ä• yatanÄ• , rÅ«paá¹ƒ vedan viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ --- ime dhammÄ• kÄ• mÄ• vacarÄ• .

<1288> katame dhammÄ• na kÄ• mÄ• vacarÄ• ? rÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• , arÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• , apa kÄ• mÄ• vacarÄ• .

<1289> katame dhammÄ• rÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• ? heá¹-á¹-hato brahmalokaá¹ƒ pariyantaá¹ƒ kar deve {akaniá¹-á¹-hadeve (Ce Katthaci) } anto karitvÄ• , yaá¹ƒ etasmiá¹ƒ antare etthÄ• vacar
pariyÄ• pannÄ• samÄ• pannassa vÄ• upapannassa vÄ• diá¹-á¹-hadhammasukhavihÄ• ris

{diá¹-á¹-hadhammasukhavihÄ• rassa (Katthaci) } vÄ• cittacetasikÄ• dhammÄ• --- ime dha 325/.

<1290> katame \Be 254/ dhammÄ• na rÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• ? kÄ• mÄ• vacarÄ• , arÅ«pÄ• vaca dhammÄ• na rÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• .

<1291> katame dhammÄ• arÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• ? heá¹-á¹-hato Ä• kÄ• sÄ• naÃ±cÄ• yatanupa uparito nevasaÃ±Ã±Ä• nÄ• saÃ±Ã±Ä• yatanupage deve anto karitvÄ• , yaá¹ƒ etasmiá¹ƒ ant
pariyÄ• pannÄ• samÄ• pannassa vÄ• upapannassa vÄ• diá¹-á¹-hadhammasukhavihÄ• ris ime dhammÄ• arÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• .

<1292> katame dhammÄ• na arÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• ? kÄ• mÄ• vacarÄ• , rÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• , apa arÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• .

<1293> katame \Ne 279/ dhammÄ• pariyÄ• pannÄ• ? sÄ• savÄ• kusalÄ• kusalÄ• byÄ• ka
rÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• , arÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• , rÅ«pakkhandho ... pe ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho --- im

<1294> katame dhammÄ• apariyÄ• pannÄ• ? maggÄ• ca, maggaphalÄ• ni ca, asaá¹…kh apariyÄ• pannÄ• .

<1295> katame dhammÄ• niyyÄ• nikÄ• ? cattÄ• ro maggÄ• apariyÄ• pannÄ• --- ime dha

<1296> katame dhammÄ• aniyyÄ• nikÄ• ? te dhamme á¹-hapetvÄ• avasesÄ• kusalÄ• ku
kÄ• mÄ• vacarÄ• , rÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• , arÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• , apariyÄ• pannÄ• ; vedanÄ• kkhand sabbaÃ±ca rÅ«paá¹ƒ, asaá¹…khatÄ• ca dhÄ• tu --- ime dhammÄ• aniyyÄ• nikÄ• .

<1297> katame \Ee 225/ dhammÄ• niyatÄ• ? paÃ±ca kammÄ• ni Ä• nantarikÄ• ni, yÄ• \S niyatÄ• , cattÄ• ro maggÄ• apariyÄ• pannÄ• --- ime dhammÄ• niyatÄ• .

<1298> katame dhammÄ• aniyatÄ• ? te dhamme á¹-hapetvÄ• avasesÄ• kusalÄ• kusalÄ•
rÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• , arÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• , apariyÄ• pannÄ• ; vedanÄ• kkhandho ... pe ... viÃ±Ã± rÅ«paá¹ƒ, asaá¹…khatÄ• ca dhÄ• tu --- ime dhammÄ• aniyatÄ• .

<1299> katame \Be 255/ dhammÄ• sauttarÄ• ? sÄ• savÄ• kusalÄ• kusalÄ• byÄ• katÄ• d
rÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• , arÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• ; rÅ«pakkhandho ... pe ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho --- im

<1300> katame dhammÄ• anuttarÄ• ? apariyÄ• pannÄ• maggÄ• ca, maggaphalÄ• ni ca, dhammÄ• anuttarÄ• .

<1301> katame dhammÄ• saraá¹‡Ä• ? tÄ«á¹‡i akusalamÅ«lÄ• ni lobho, doso, moho; tade
kilesÄ• , taá¹ƒsampayutto vedanÄ• kkhandho ... pe ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho, taá¹ƒsamuá kÄ• yakammaá¹ƒ, vacÄ«kammaá¹ƒ, manokammaá¹ƒ --- ime dhammÄ• saraá¹‡Ä• .

<1302> katame dhammÄ• araá¹‡Ä• ? kusalÄ• byÄ• katÄ• dhammÄ• kÄ• mÄ• vacarÄ• , apariyÄ• pannÄ• ; vedanÄ• kkhandho ... pe ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho, sabbaÃ±ca rÅ«paá
--- ime dhammÄ• araá¹‡Ä• .

abhidhammadukaá¹ƒ.

suttantikadukanikkhepaá¹ƒ

<1303> katame dhammÄ• vijjÄ• bhÄ• gino? vijjÄ• ya sampayuttakÄ• dhammÄ• --- ime d

<1304> katame dhammÄ• avijjÄ• bhÄ• gino? avijjÄ• ya \Se 327/ sampayuttakÄ• dhammÄ avijjÄ• bhÄ• gino.

<1305> katame dhammÄ• vijjÅ«pamÄ• ? heá¹-á¹-himesu tÄ«su ariyamaggesu paÃ±Ã±Ä•

<1306> katame dhammÄ• vajirÅ«pamÄ• ? upariá¹-á¹-hime \Ee 226/ arahattamagge paÃ±Ã vajirÅ«pamÄ• .

<1307> katame dhammÄ• bÄ• lÄ• ? ahirÄ«kaÃ±ca anottappaÃ±ca --- ime dhammÄ• bÄ• bÄ• lÄ• .

<1308> katame \Be 256/ \Ne 281/ dhammÄ• paá¹‡á¸• itÄ• ? hirÄ« ca ottappaÃ±ca --- ime sabbepi kusalÄ• dhammÄ• paá¹‡á¸• itÄ• .

<1309> katame dhammÄ• kaá¹‡hÄ• ? ahirÄ«kaÃ±ca anottappaÃ±ca --- ime dhammÄ• ka kaá¹‡hÄ• .

<1310> katame dhammÄ• sukkÄ• ? hirÄ« ca ottappaÃ±ca --- ime dhammÄ• sukkÄ• ? sab

<1311> katame dhammÄ• tapanÄ«yÄ• ? kÄ• yaduccaritaá¹ƒ, vacÄ«duccaritaá¹ƒ, manodu tapanÄ«yÄ• . sabbepi akusalÄ• dhammÄ• tapanÄ«yÄ• .

<1312> katame dhammÄ• atapanÄ«yÄ• ? kÄ• yasucaritaá¹ƒ, vacÄ«sucaritaá¹ƒ, manosuca atapanÄ«yÄ• . sabbepi kusalÄ• dhammÄ• atapanÄ«yÄ• .

<1313> katame dhammÄ• adhivacanÄ• ? yÄ• tesaá¹ƒ tesaá¹ƒ dhammÄ• naá¹ƒ saá¹…khÄ
nÄ• maá¹ƒ nÄ• makammaá¹ƒ nÄ• madheyyaá¹ƒ nirutti byaÃ±janaá¹ƒ abhilÄ• po --- ime dha dhammÄ• adhivacanapathÄ• .

<1314> katame \Se 328/ dhammÄ• nirutti? yÄ• tesaá¹ƒ tesaá¹ƒ dhammÄ• naá¹ƒ saá¹…kh vohÄ• ro nÄ• maá¹ƒ nÄ• makammaá¹ƒ nÄ• madheyyaá¹ƒ nirutti byaÃ±janaá¹ƒ abhilÄ• po -- dhammÄ• niruttipathÄ• .

<1315> katame dhammÄ• paÃ±Ã±atti? yÄ• tesaá¹ƒ tesaá¹ƒ dhammÄ• naá¹ƒ saá¹…khÄ•
nÄ• maá¹ƒ nÄ• makammaá¹ƒ nÄ• madheyyaá¹ƒ nirutti byaÃ±janaá¹ƒ abhilÄ• po --- ime dha dhammÄ• paÃ±Ã±attipathÄ• .

<1316> tattha \Ne 282/ katamaá¹ƒ nÄ• maá¹ƒ? vedanÄ• kkhandho, saÃ±Ã±Ä• kkhandho, s viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho, asaá¹…khatÄ• ca dhÄ• tu --- idaá¹ƒ vuccati nÄ• maá¹ƒ.

<1317> tattha \Ee 227/ katamaá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ? cattÄ• ro ca mahÄ• bhÅ«tÄ• , catunnaÃ±ca r rÅ«paá¹ƒ --- idaá¹ƒ vuccati rÅ«paá¹ƒ.

<1318> tattha katamÄ• avijjÄ• ? yaá¹ƒ aÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ adassanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... avijjÄ• laá¹ akusalamÅ«laá¹ƒ --- ayaá¹ƒ vuccati avijjÄ• .

<1319> tattha \Be 257/ katamÄ• bhavataá¹‡hÄ• ? yo bhavesu bhavachando ... pe ... bhava vuccati bhavataá¹‡hÄ• .

<1320> tattha katamÄ• bhavadiá¹-á¹-hi? bhavissati attÄ• ca loko cÄ• ti, yÄ• evarÅ«pÄ• c diá¹-á¹-higataá¹ƒ ... pe ... vipariyÄ• saggÄ• ho --- ayaá¹ƒ vuccati bhavadiá¹-á¹-hi.

<1321> tattha katamÄ• vibhavadiá¹-á¹-hi? na bhavissati attÄ• ca loko cÄ• ti, yÄ• evarÅ«p diá¹-á¹-higataá¹ƒ ... pe ... vipariyÄ• saggÄ• ho --- ayaá¹ƒ vuccati vibhavadiá¹-á¹-hi.

<1322> tattha \Se 329/ katamÄ• sassatadiá¹-á¹-hi? sassato attÄ• ca loko cÄ• ti, yÄ• evar diá¹-á¹-higataá¹ƒ ... pe ... vipariyÄ• saggÄ• ho --- ayaá¹ƒ vuccati sassatadiá¹-á¹-hi.

<1323> tattha katamÄ• ucchedadiá¹-á¹-hi? ucchijjissati attÄ• ca loko cÄ• ti, yÄ• evarÅ«pÄ diá¹-á¹-higataá¹ƒ ... pe ... vipariyÄ• saggÄ• ho --- ayaá¹ƒ vuccati ucchedadiá¹-á¹-hi.

<1324> tattha katamÄ• antavÄ• diá¹-á¹-hi? antavÄ• attÄ• ca loko cÄ• ti, yÄ• evarÅ«pÄ• diá¹-á¹-higataá¹ƒ ... pe ... vipariyÄ• saggÄ• ho --- ayaá¹ƒ vuccati antavÄ• diá¹-á¹-hi.

<1325> tattha \Ne 283/ katamÄ• anantavÄ• diá¹-á¹-hi? anantavÄ• attÄ• ca loko cÄ• ti, yÄ• diá¹-á¹-higataá¹ƒ ... pe ... vipariyÄ• saggÄ• ho --- ayaá¹ƒ vuccati anantavÄ• diá¹-á¹-hi.

<1326> tattha katamÄ• pubbantÄ• nudiá¹-á¹-hi? pubbantaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha yÄ• uppajjati diá¹ ... pe ... vipariyÄ• saggÄ• ho --- ayaá¹ƒ vuccati pubbantÄ• nudiá¹-á¹-hi.

<1327> tattha katamÄ• aparantÄ• nudiá¹-á¹-hi? aparantaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha yÄ• uppajjati diá¹- ... pe ... vipariyÄ• saggÄ• ho --- ayaá¹ƒ vuccati aparantÄ• nudiá¹-á¹-hi.

<1328> tattha katamaá¹ƒ ahirikaá¹ƒ? yaá¹ƒ na hirÄ«yati hiriyitabbena, na hirÄ«yati pÄ• pak akusalÄ• naá¹ƒ dhammÄ• naá¹ƒ samÄ• pattiyÄ• --- idaá¹ƒ vuccati ahirikaá¹ƒ.

<1329> tattha katamaá¹ƒ anottappaá¹ƒ? yaá¹ƒ \Ee 228/ na ottappati ottappitabbena, na ott akusalÄ• naá¹ƒ dhammÄ• naá¹ƒ samÄ• pattiyÄ• --- idaá¹ƒ vuccati anottappaá¹ƒ.

<1330> tattha \Se 330/ \Be 258/ katamÄ• hirÄ«? yaá¹ƒ hirÄ«yati hiriyitabbena, hirÄ«yati pÄ• akusalÄ• naá¹ƒ dhammÄ• naá¹ƒ samÄ• pattiyÄ• --- ayaá¹ƒ vuccati hirÄ«.

<1331> tattha katamaá¹ƒ ottappaá¹ƒ? yaá¹ƒ ottappati ottappitabbena, ottappati pÄ• pakÄ• dhammÄ• naá¹ƒ samÄ• pattiyÄ• --- idaá¹ƒ vuccati ottappaá¹ƒ.

<1332> tattha katamÄ• dovacassatÄ• ? sahadhammike vuccamÄ• ne dovacassÄ• yaá¹ƒ c vippaá¹-ikÅ«laggÄ• hitÄ• vipaccanÄ«kasÄ• tatÄ• anÄ• dariyaá¹ƒ anÄ• daratÄ• agÄ• rava vuccati dovacassatÄ• .

<1333> tattha katamÄ• pÄ• pamittatÄ• ? ye te puggalÄ• assaddhÄ• dussÄ«lÄ• appassu yÄ• tesaá¹ƒ sevanÄ• nisevanÄ• saá¹ƒsevanÄ• bhajanÄ• sambhajanÄ• bhatti sambhatti ayaá¹ƒ vuccati pÄ• pamittatÄ• .

<1334> tattha \Ne 284/ katamÄ• sovacassatÄ• ? sahadhammike vuccamÄ• ne sovacassÄ sovacassatÄ• appaá¹-ikÅ«laggÄ• hitÄ• avipaccanÄ«kasÄ• tatÄ• sagÄ• ravatÄ• sÄ• dariy sappaá¹-issavatÄ• --- ayaá¹ƒ vuccati sovacassatÄ• .

<1335> tattha katamÄ• kalyÄ• á¹‡amittatÄ• ? ye te puggalÄ• saddhÄ• sÄ«lavanto bahus paÃ±Ã±avanto, yÄ• tesaá¹ƒ sevanÄ• nisevanÄ• saá¹ƒsevanÄ• bhajanÄ• sambhajanÄ• taá¹ƒsampavaá¹…katÄ• --- ayaá¹ƒ vuccati kalyÄ• á¹‡amittatÄ• .

<1336> tattha katamÄ• Ä• pattikusalatÄ• ? paÃ±capi Ä• pattikkhandhÄ• Ä• pattiyo, sattap Ä• pattiyo. yÄ• tÄ• saá¹ƒ Ä• pattÄ«naá¹ƒ Ä• pattikusalatÄ• \Se 331/ paÃ±Ã±Ä• pajÄ• nan dhammavicayo sammÄ• diá¹-á¹-hi --- ayaá¹ƒ vuccati Ä• pattikusalatÄ• .

<1337> tattha katamÄ• Ä• pattivuá¹-á¹-hÄ• nakusalatÄ• ? yÄ• tÄ• hi Ä• pattÄ«hi vuá¹-á¹-h pajÄ• nanÄ• ... pe ... amoho dhammavicayo sammÄ• diá¹-á¹-hi --- ayaá¹ƒ vuccati Ä• pattivu

<1338> tattha \Be 259/ katamÄ• samÄ• pattikusalatÄ• ? atthi \Ee 229/ savitakkasavicÄ• rÄ avitakkavicÄ• ramattÄ• samÄ• patti, atthi avitakkaavicÄ• rÄ• samÄ• patti. yÄ• tÄ• saá¹ƒ s samÄ• pattikusalatÄ• paÃ±Ã±Ä• pajÄ• nanÄ• ... pe ... amoho dhammavicayo sammÄ• diá samÄ• pattikusalatÄ• .

<1339> tattha katamÄ• samÄ• pattivuá¹-á¹-hÄ• nakusalatÄ• ? yÄ• tÄ• hi samÄ• pattÄ«hi paÃ±Ã±Ä• pajÄ• nanÄ• ... pe ... amoho dhammavicayo sammÄ• diá¹-á¹-hi --- ayaá¹ƒ vucca samÄ• pattivuá¹-á¹-hÄ• nakusalatÄ• .

<1340> tattha katamÄ• dhÄ• tukusalatÄ• ? aá¹-á¹-hÄ• rasa dhÄ• tuyo cakkhudhÄ• tu rÅ«p cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡adhÄ• tu, sotadhÄ• tu saddadhÄ• tu sotaviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡adhÄ• tu, ghÄ• ghÄ• naviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡adhÄ• tu, jivhÄ• dhÄ• tu rasadhÄ• tu jivhÄ• viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡adhÄ• tu, kÄ kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡adhÄ• tu, manodhÄ• tu dhammadhÄ• tu \Ne 285/ manoviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡ad dhÄ• tukusalatÄ• paÃ±Ã±Ä• pajÄ• nanÄ• ... pe ... amoho dhammavicayo sammÄ• diá¹-á¹ dhÄ• tukusalatÄ• .

<1341> tattha katamÄ• manasikÄ• rakusalatÄ• ? yÄ• tÄ• saá¹ƒ dhÄ• tÅ«naá¹ƒ manasikÄ pajÄ• nanÄ• ... pe ... amoho dhammavicayo \Se 332/ sammÄ• diá¹-á¹-hi --- ayaá¹ƒ vuccati

<1342> tattha katamÄ• Ä• yatanakusalatÄ• ? dvÄ• dasÄ• yatanÄ• ni --- cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ sotÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ, saddÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ, ghÄ• nÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ, gandhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ, jivhÄ• yatana kÄ• yÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ, phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ, manÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ, dhammÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ. yÄ Ä• yatanakusalatÄ• paÃ±Ã±Ä• pajÄ• nanÄ• ... pe ... amoho dhammavicayo sammÄ• diá¹-Ä• yatanakusalatÄ• .

<1343> tattha katamÄ• paá¹-iccasamuppÄ• dakusalatÄ• ? avijjÄ• paccayÄ• saá¹…khÄ• r viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ, viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡apaccayÄ• nÄ• marÅ«paá¹ƒ, nÄ• marÅ«papaccayÄ• saá saá¸·Ä• yatanapaccayÄ• phasso, phassapaccayÄ• vedanÄ• , vedanÄ• paccayÄ• taá¹‡hÄ upÄ• dÄ• napaccayÄ• bhavo, bhavapaccayÄ• jÄ• ti, jÄ• tipaccayÄ• jarÄ• maraá¹‡aá¹ƒ sokaparidevadukkhadomanassupÄ• yÄ• sÄ• sambhavanti; evametassa \Be 260/ kevalassa hotÄ«ti. yÄ• tattha paÃ±Ã±Ä• pajÄ• nanÄ• ... pe ... amoho dhammavicayo sammÄ• diá¹-á paá¹-iccasamuppÄ• dakusalatÄ• .

<1344> tattha \Ee 230/ katamÄ• á¹-hÄ• nakusalatÄ• ? ye ye dhammÄ• yesaá¹ƒ yesaá¹ƒ c uppÄ• dÄ• ya {upÄ• dÄ• ya (Ce Katthaci) } taá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ á¹-hÄ• nanti, yÄ• tattha paÃ±Ã±Ä• dhammavicayo sammÄ• diá¹-á¹-hi --- ayaá¹ƒ vuccati á¹-hÄ• nakusalatÄ• .

<1345> tattha katamÄ• aá¹-á¹-hÄ• nakusalatÄ• ? ye ye dhammÄ• yesaá¹ƒ yesaá¹ƒ dham uppÄ• dÄ• ya taá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ aá¹-á¹-hÄ• nanti, yÄ• tattha paÃ±Ã±Ä• pajÄ• nanÄ• ... pe ... am sammÄ• diá¹-á¹-hi \Se 333/ --- ayaá¹ƒ vuccati aá¹-á¹-hÄ• nakusalatÄ• .

<1346> tattha \Ne 286/ katamo ajjavo? yÄ• ajjavatÄ• ajimhatÄ• avaá¹…katÄ• akuá¹-ilatÄ ajjavo.

<1347> tattha katamo maddavo? yÄ• mudutÄ• maddavatÄ• akakkhaá¸·atÄ• akathinatÄ• vuccati maddavo.

<1348> tattha katamÄ• khanti? yÄ• khanti khamanatÄ• adhivÄ• sanatÄ• acaá¹‡á¸• ikkaa cittassa --- ayaá¹ƒ vuccati khanti.

<1349> tattha katamaá¹ƒ soraccaá¹ƒ? yo kÄ• yiko avÄ«tikkamo, vÄ• casiko avÄ«tikkamo, avÄ«tikkamo --- idaá¹ƒ vuccati soraccaá¹ƒ. sabbopi sÄ«lasaá¹ƒvaro soraccaá¹ƒ.

<1350> tattha katamaá¹ƒ sÄ• khalyaá¹ƒ? yÄ• sÄ• vÄ• cÄ• aá¹‡á¸• akÄ• kakkasÄ• para kodhasÄ• mantÄ• asamÄ• dhisaá¹ƒvattanikÄ• , tathÄ• rÅ«piá¹ƒ vÄ• caá¹ƒ pahÄ• ya yÄ• s kaá¹‡á¹‡asukhÄ• pemanÄ«yÄ• hadayaá¹…gamÄ• porÄ« bahujanakantÄ• bahujanamanÄ bhÄ• sitÄ• hoti; yÄ• tattha saá¹‡havÄ• catÄ• sakhilavÄ• catÄ• apharusavÄ• catÄ• --- ida

<1351> tattha \Be 261/ katamo paá¹-isanthÄ• ro? dve paá¹-isanthÄ• rÄ• --- Ä• misapaá¹-is dhammapaá¹-isanthÄ• ro ca. idhekacco paá¹-isanthÄ• rako hoti Ä• misapaá¹-isanthÄ• rena vÄ• --- ayaá¹ƒ vuccati paá¹-isanthÄ• ro.

<1352> tattha katamÄ• indriyesu aguttadvÄ• ratÄ• ? idhekacco cakkhunÄ• \Se 334/ rÅ«pa hoti anubyaÃ±janaggÄ• hÄ«. yatvÄ• dhikaraá¹‡amenaá¹ƒ cakkhundriyaá¹ƒ \Ee 231/ asaá¹ƒ abhijjhÄ• domanassÄ• pÄ• pakÄ• akusalÄ• dhammÄ• anvÄ• ssaveyyuá¹ƒ, tassa saá¹ƒva rakkhati cakkhundriyaá¹ƒ, cakkhundriye na saá¹ƒvaraá¹ƒ Ä• pajjati. sotena saddaá¹ƒ sutvÄ• gandhaá¹ƒ ghÄ• yitvÄ• ... pe ... jivhÄ• ya rasaá¹ƒ sÄ• yitvÄ• ... pe ... kÄ• yena phoá¹-á¹-ha pe ... manasÄ• dhammaá¹ƒ viÃ±Ã±Ä• ya nimittaggÄ• hÄ« hoti anubyaÃ±janaggÄ• hÄ«. yat manindriyaá¹ƒ asaá¹ƒvutaá¹ƒ viharantaá¹ƒ abhijjhÄ• domanassÄ• pÄ• pakÄ• akusalÄ• dh saá¹ƒvarÄ• ya na paá¹-ipajjati, na rakkhati manindriyaá¹ƒ, manindriye na saá¹ƒvaraá¹ƒ Ä• p channaá¹ƒ indriyÄ• naá¹ƒ agutti agopanÄ• anÄ• rakkho asaá¹ƒvaro --- ayaá¹ƒ vuccati indri

<1353> tattha katamÄ• bhojane amattaÃ±Ã±utÄ• ? idhekacco appaá¹-isaá¹…khÄ• ayonis davÄ• ya madÄ• ya maá¹‡á¸• anÄ• ya vibhÅ«sanÄ• ya. yÄ• tattha asantuá¹-á¹-hitÄ• amat bhojane --- ayaá¹ƒ vuccati bhojane amattaÃ±Ã±utÄ• .

<1354> tattha katamÄ• indriyesu guttadvÄ• ratÄ• ? idhekacco cakkhunÄ• rÅ«paá¹ƒ disvÄ anubyaÃ±janaggÄ• hÄ«. yatvÄ• dhikaraá¹‡amenaá¹ƒ cakkhundriyaá¹ƒ asaá¹ƒvutaá¹ƒ vihar pÄ• pakÄ• akusalÄ• dhammÄ• anvÄ• ssaveyyuá¹ƒ, tassa saá¹ƒvarÄ• ya paá¹-ipajjati, rak cakkhundriye saá¹ƒvaraá¹ƒ Ä• pajjati. sotena saddaá¹ƒ sutvÄ• ... pe ... \Se 335/ ghÄ• nena
... pe ... jivhÄ• ya rasaá¹ƒ sÄ• yitvÄ• ... pe ... kÄ• yena phoá¹-á¹-habbaá¹ƒ phusitvÄ• ... pe dhammaá¹ƒ viÃ±Ã±Ä• ya na nimittaggÄ• hÄ« hoti nÄ• nubyaÃ±janaggÄ• hÄ«. yatvÄ• dhika asaá¹ƒvutaá¹ƒ viharantaá¹ƒ abhijjhÄ• domanassÄ• pÄ• pakÄ• akusalÄ• dhammÄ• anvÄ• paá¹-ipajjati, rakkhati manindriyaá¹ƒ, manindriye saá¹ƒvaraá¹ƒ Ä• pajjati. yÄ• imesaá¹ƒ cha gutti gopanÄ• Ä• rakkho saá¹ƒvaro --- ayaá¹ƒ vuccati indriyesu guttadvÄ• ratÄ• .

<1355> tattha \Be 262/ katamÄ• bhojane mattaÃ±Ã±utÄ• ? idhekacco paá¹-isaá¹…khÄ• y
--- neva davÄ• ya na madÄ• ya na maá¹‡á¸• anÄ• ya na vibhÅ«sanÄ• ya yÄ• vadeva imass vihiá¹ƒsÅ«paratiyÄ• brahmacariyÄ• nuggahÄ• ya \Ee 232/, iti purÄ• á¹‡aÃ±ca vedanaá¹ƒ p vedanaá¹ƒ na uppÄ• dessÄ• mi, yÄ• trÄ• ca me bhavissati anavajjatÄ• ca phÄ• suvihÄ• ro santuá¹-á¹-hitÄ• mattaÃ±Ã±utÄ• paá¹-isaá¹…khÄ• bhojane --- ayaá¹ƒ vuccati bhojane mat

<1356> tattha katamaá¹ƒ muá¹-á¹-hasaccaá¹ƒ? yÄ• asati ananussati appaá¹-issati asati as adhÄ• raá¹‡atÄ• pilÄ• panatÄ• sammusanatÄ• --- idaá¹ƒ vuccati muá¹-á¹-hasaccaá¹ƒ.

<1357> tattha \Ne 288/ katamaá¹ƒ asampajaÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ? yaá¹ƒ aÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ adassana avijjÄ• laá¹…gÄ« moho akusalamÅ«laá¹ƒ --- idaá¹ƒ vuccati asampajaÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ.

<1358> tattha katamÄ• sati? yÄ• sati anussati paá¹-issati sati saraá¹‡atÄ• dhÄ• raá¹‡atÄ asammusanatÄ• sati satindriyaá¹ƒ satibalaá¹ƒ \Se 336/ sammÄ• sati --- ayaá¹ƒ vuccati sati

<1359> tattha katamaá¹ƒ sampajaÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ? yÄ• paÃ±Ã±Ä• pajÄ• nanÄ• ... pe ... amoh sammÄ• diá¹-á¹-hi --- idaá¹ƒ vuccati sampajaÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ.

<1360> tattha katamaá¹ƒ paá¹-isaá¹…khÄ• nabalaá¹ƒ? yÄ• paÃ±Ã±Ä• pajÄ• nanÄ• ... pe sammÄ• diá¹-á¹-hi --- idaá¹ƒ vuccati paá¹-isaá¹…khÄ• nabalaá¹ƒ.

<1361> tattha katamaá¹ƒ bhÄ• vanÄ• balaá¹ƒ? yÄ• kusalÄ• naá¹ƒ dhammÄ• naá¹ƒ Ä• sev
--- idaá¹ƒ vuccati bhÄ• vanÄ• balaá¹ƒ. sattapi bojjhaá¹…gÄ• bhÄ• vanÄ• balaá¹ƒ.

<1362> tattha katamo samatho? yÄ• cittassa á¹-hiti ... pe ... sammÄ• samÄ• dhi --- ayaá¹ƒ

<1363> tattha katamÄ• vipassanÄ• ? yÄ• paÃ±Ã±Ä• pajÄ• nanÄ• ... pe ... amoho dham ayaá¹ƒ vuccati vipassanÄ• .

<1364> tattha \Be 263/ katamaá¹ƒ samathanimittaá¹ƒ? yÄ• cittassa á¹-hiti ... pe ... sammÄ vuccati samathanimittaá¹ƒ.

<1365> tattha katamaá¹ƒ paggÄ• hanimittaá¹ƒ? yo cetasiko vÄ«riyÄ• rambho ... pe ... sam vuccati paggÄ• hanimittaá¹ƒ.

<1366> tattha \Ne 289/ katamo paggÄ• ho? yo \Ee 233/ cetasiko vÄ«riyÄ• rambho ... pe ...
ayaá¹ƒ vuccati paggÄ• ho.

<1367> tattha katamo avikkhepo? yÄ• cittassa á¹-hiti ... pe ... sammÄ• samÄ• dhi --- ayaá

<1368> tattha katamÄ• sÄ«lavipatti? yo kÄ• yiko vÄ«tikkamo, vÄ• casiko vÄ«tikkamo \Se vÄ«tikkamo --- ayaá¹ƒ vuccati sÄ«lavipatti. sabbampi dussilyaá¹ƒ sÄ«lavipatti.

<1369> tattha katamÄ• diá¹-á¹-hivipatti? natthi dinnaá¹ƒ, natthi yiá¹-á¹-haá¹ƒ, natthi hutaá¹
sukatadukkaá¹-Ä• naá¹ƒ kammÄ• naá¹ƒ phalaá¹ƒ vipÄ• ko, natthi ayaá¹ƒ loko, natthi paro lo natthi pitÄ• , natthi sattÄ• opapÄ• tikÄ• , natthi loke samaá¹‡abrÄ• hmaá¹‡Ä• sammaggat imaÃ±ca lokaá¹ƒ paraÃ±ca lokaá¹ƒ sayaá¹ƒ abhiÃ±Ã±Ä• sacchikatvÄ• pavedentÄ«ti: yÄ• diá¹-á¹-higataá¹ƒ ... pe ... vipariyÄ• saggÄ• ho --- ayaá¹ƒ vuccati diá¹-á¹-hivipatti. sabbÄ• pi micchÄ• diá¹-á¹-hi diá¹-á¹-hivipatti.

<1370> tattha katamÄ• sÄ«lasampadÄ• ? yo kÄ• yiko avÄ«tikkamo, vÄ• casiko avÄ«tikka avÄ«tikkamo --- ayaá¹ƒ vuccati sÄ«lasampadÄ• . sabbopi sÄ«lasaá¹ƒvaro sÄ«lasampadÄ•

<1371> tattha katamÄ• diá¹-á¹-hisampadÄ• ? atthi dinnaá¹ƒ, atthi yiá¹-á¹-haá¹ƒ, atthi hutaá sukatadukkaá¹-Ä• naá¹ƒ kammÄ• naá¹ƒ phalaá¹ƒ vipÄ• ko, atthi ayaá¹ƒ loko, atthi paro loko pitÄ• , atthi sattÄ• opapÄ• tikÄ• , atthi loke samaá¹‡abrÄ• hmaá¹‡Ä• sammaggatÄ• samm lokaá¹ƒ paraÃ±ca lokaá¹ƒ sayaá¹ƒ abhiÃ±Ã±Ä• sacchikatvÄ• pavedentÄ«ti: yÄ• evarÅ«pÄ pe ... amoho dhammavicayo sammÄ• diá¹-á¹-hi --- ayaá¹ƒ vuccati diá¹-á¹-hisampadÄ• . sabb diá¹-á¹-hisampadÄ• .

<1372> tattha \Be 264/ \Ne 290/ katamÄ• sÄ«lavisuddhi? yo kÄ• yiko avÄ«tikkamo, vÄ• ca
kÄ• yikavÄ• casiko avÄ«tikkamo --- ayaá¹ƒ vuccati sÄ«lavisuddhi. sabbopi \Se 338/ sÄ«lasa

<1373> tattha katamÄ• diá¹-á¹-hivisuddhi? kammassakataÃ±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ saccÄ• nulomikaÃ Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ phalasamaá¹…gissa Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ.

<1374> __diá¹-á¹-hivisuddhi_ \Ee 234/ __kho panÄ• _ti --- yÄ• paÃ±Ã±Ä• pajÄ• nanÄ• ... dhammavicayo sammÄ• diá¹-á¹-hi.

<1375> __yathÄ• diá¹-á¹-hissa ca padhÄ• na_nti --- yo cetasiko vÄ«riyÄ• rambho ... pe ... s

<1376> __saá¹ƒvego_ti --- jÄ• tibhayaá¹ƒ jarÄ• bhayaá¹ƒ byÄ• dhibhayaá¹ƒ maraá¹‡abhay {saá¹ƒvejanÄ«yaá¹ƒ (Ce) } á¹-hÄ• nanti --- jÄ• ti jarÄ• byÄ• dhi maraá¹‡aá¹ƒ.

<1377> __saá¹ƒviggassa ca yoniso padhÄ• na_nti --- idha bhikkhu anuppannÄ• naá¹ƒ pÄ• dhammÄ• naá¹ƒ anuppÄ• dÄ• ya chandaá¹ƒ janeti vÄ• yamati vÄ«riyaá¹ƒ Ä• rabhati cittaá¹ uppannÄ• naá¹ƒ pÄ• pakÄ• naá¹ƒ akusalÄ• naá¹ƒ dhammÄ• naá¹ƒ pahÄ• nÄ• ya chandaá¹ Ä• rabhati cittaá¹ƒ paggaá¹‡hÄ• ti padahati, anuppannÄ• naá¹ƒ kusalÄ• naá¹ƒ dhammÄ• na janeti vÄ• yamati vÄ«riyaá¹ƒ Ä• rabhati cittaá¹ƒ paggaá¹‡hÄ• ti padahati, uppannÄ• naá¹ƒ k á¹-hitiyÄ• asammosÄ• ya bhiyyobhÄ• vÄ• ya vepullÄ• ya bhÄ• vanÄ• ya pÄ• ripÅ«riyÄ• ch vÄ«riyaá¹ƒ Ä• rabhati cittaá¹ƒ paggaá¹‡hÄ• ti padahati.

<1378> __asantuá¹-á¹-hitÄ• ca kusalesu dhammesÅ«_ti --- yÄ• kusalÄ• naá¹ƒ dhammÄ• asantuá¹-á¹-hassa bhiyyokamyatÄ• .

<1379> __appaá¹-ivÄ• nitÄ• ca padhÄ• nasmi_nti --- yÄ• kusalÄ• naá¹ƒ dhammÄ• naá¹ƒ
\Ne 291/ sÄ• taccakiriyatÄ• aá¹-á¹-hitakiriyatÄ• anolÄ«navuttitÄ• anikkhittachandatÄ• ani Ä• sevanÄ• \Se 339/ bhÄ• vanÄ• bahulÄ«kammaá¹ƒ.

<1380> __vijjÄ• _ti \Be 265/ --- tisso vijjÄ• --- pubbenivÄ• sÄ• nussati Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ vijjÄ• cutÅ«papÄ• te Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ vijjÄ• , Ä• savÄ• naá¹ƒ khaye Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ vijjÄ• .

<1381> __vimuttÄ«_ti --- dve vimuttiyo --- cittassa {cittassa ca (Ce Se) } adhimutti, nibbÄ• n

<1382> __khaye Ã±Ä• á¹‡a_nti --- maggasamaá¹…gissa Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ.

<1383> __anuppÄ• de Ã±Ä• á¹‡a_nti --- phalasamaá¹…gissa Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ.

nikkhepakaá¹‡á¸• aá¹ƒ niá¹-á¹-hitaá¹ƒ.

4. aá¹-á¹-hakathÄ• kaá¹‡á¸• aá¹ƒ

tikaatthuddhÄ• ro

<1384> katame \Se 340/ \Be 266/ \Ne 292/ dhammÄ• kusalÄ• ? catÅ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kusa kusalÄ• .

<1385> katame dhammÄ• akusalÄ• ? dvÄ• dasa akusalacittuppÄ• dÄ• --- ime dhammÄ•

<1386> katame dhammÄ• abyÄ• katÄ• ? catÅ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su vipÄ• ko, tÄ«su bhÅ«mÄ«s nibbÄ• naÃ±ca --- ime dhammÄ• abyÄ• katÄ• .

<1387> katame \Ee 235/ dhammÄ• sukhÄ• ya vedanÄ• ya sampayuttÄ• ? kÄ• mÄ• vacara somanassasahagatacittuppÄ• dÄ• , akusalato cattÄ• ro kÄ• mÄ• vacarakusalassa vipÄ• ka rÅ«pÄ• vacaratikacatukkajjhÄ• nÄ• kusalato ca vipÄ• kato ca kiriyato ca, lokuttaratikacatuk
vipÄ• kato ca, etthuppannaá¹ƒ sukhaá¹ƒ vedanaá¹ƒ á¹-hapetvÄ• --- ime dhammÄ• sukhÄ•

<1388> katame dhammÄ• dukkhÄ• ya vedanÄ• ya sampayuttÄ• ? dve domanassasahaga kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ, etthuppannaá¹ƒ dukkhaá¹ƒ vedanaá¹ƒ á¹-hapetvÄ• --- ime dham sampayuttÄ• .

<1389> katame \Ne 293/ dhammÄ• adukkhamasukhÄ• ya vedanÄ• ya sampayuttÄ• ? kÄ• upekkhÄ• sahagatacittuppÄ• dÄ• , akusalato cha, kÄ• mÄ• vacarakusalassa vipÄ• kato das kiriyato cha, rÅ«pÄ• vacaraá¹ƒ catutthaá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ kusalato ca vipÄ• kato ca kiriyato ca, arÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• kusalato ca vipÄ• kato ca kiriyato ca, lokuttaraá¹ƒ catutthaá¹ƒ \Se 341/ jh vipÄ• kato ca, etthuppannaá¹ƒ adukkhamasukhaá¹ƒ vedanaá¹ƒ á¹-hapetvÄ• --- ime dhamm vedanÄ• ya sampayuttÄ• . tisso ca vedanÄ• , rÅ«paÃ±ca, nibbÄ• naÃ±ca --- ime \Be 267/ d sukhÄ• ya vedanÄ• ya sampayuttÄ• tipi, dukkhÄ• ya vedanÄ• ya sampayuttÄ• tipi, ya veda

<1390> katame dhammÄ• vipÄ• kÄ• ? catÅ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su vipÄ• ko --- ime dhammÄ• vi

<1391> katame dhammÄ• vipÄ• kadhammadhammÄ• ? catÅ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kusalaá¹ƒ a vipÄ• kadhammadhammÄ• .

<1392> katame dhammÄ• nevavipÄ• kanavipÄ• kadhammadhammÄ• ? tÄ«su bhÅ«mÄ«s nibbÄ• naÃ±ca --- ime dhammÄ• nevavipÄ• kanavipÄ• kadhammadhammÄ• .

<1393> katame \Ne 294/ dhammÄ• upÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡upÄ• dÄ• niyÄ• ? tÄ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su vip katattÄ• --- ime dhammÄ• upÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡upÄ• dÄ• niyÄ• .

<1394> katame dhammÄ• anupÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡upÄ• dÄ• niyÄ• ? tÄ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kusalaá¹ƒ kiriyÄ• byÄ• kataá¹ƒ \Ee 236/, yaÃ±ca rÅ«paá¹ƒ na kammassa katattÄ• --- ime dhammÄ• a <1395> katame dhammÄ• anupÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡aanupÄ• dÄ• niyÄ• ? cattÄ• ro maggÄ• apariy sÄ• maÃ±Ã±aphalÄ• ni, nibbÄ• naÃ±ca --- ime dhammÄ• anupÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡aanupÄ• dÄ• niy

<1396> katame dhammÄ• saá¹ƒkiliá¹-á¹-hasaá¹ƒkilesikÄ• ? dvÄ• dasÄ• kusalacittuppÄ• d saá¹ƒkiliá¹-á¹-hasaá¹ƒkilesikÄ• .

<1397> katame dhammÄ• asaá¹ƒkiliá¹-á¹-hasaá¹ƒkilesikÄ• ? tÄ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kusalaá¹ƒ tÄ«su \Se 342/ bhÅ«mÄ«su kiriyÄ• byÄ• kataá¹ƒ, sabbaÃ±ca rÅ«paá¹ƒ --- ime dhammÄ• asaá¹ƒkiliá¹-á¹-hasaá¹ƒkilesikÄ• .

<1398> katame dhammÄ• asaá¹ƒkiliá¹-á¹-haasaá¹ƒkilesikÄ• ? cattÄ• ro maggÄ• apariyÄ• sÄ• maÃ±Ã±aphalÄ• ni, nibbÄ• naÃ±ca --- ime dhammÄ• asaá¹ƒkiliá¹-á¹-haasaá¹ƒkilesikÄ•

<1399> katame dhammÄ• savitakkasavicÄ• rÄ• ? kÄ• mÄ• vacaraá¹ƒ kusalaá¹ƒ, akusalaá vipÄ• kato ekÄ• dasa cittuppÄ• dÄ• , akusalassa vipÄ• kato dve, kiriyato ekÄ• dasa, rÅ«pÄ• jhÄ• naá¹ƒ \Be 268/ kusalato ca vipÄ• kato ca kiriyato ca, lokuttaraá¹ƒ paá¹-hamaá¹ƒ jhÄ• n vipÄ• kato ca, etthuppanne vitakkavicÄ• re á¹-hapetvÄ• --- ime dhammÄ• savitakkasavicÄ

<1400> katame dhammÄ• avitakkavicÄ• ramattÄ• ? rÅ«pÄ• vacarapaÃ±cakanaye dutiyaá vipÄ• kato ca kiriyato ca, lokuttarapaÃ±cakanaye dutiyaá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ kusalato ca vipÄ• ka vicÄ• raá¹ƒ á¹-hapetvÄ• , vitakko ca --- ime dhammÄ• avitakkavicÄ• ramattÄ• .

<1401> katame dhammÄ• avitakkaavicÄ• rÄ• ? dvepaÃ±caviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡Ä• ni, rÅ«pÄ• va vipÄ• kato ca kiriyato ca, cattÄ• ro Ä• ruppÄ• kusalato ca vipÄ• kato ca kiriyato ca lokuttara kusalato ca vipÄ• kato ca paÃ±cakanaye dutiye jhÄ• ne {dutiyajjhÄ• ne (Ce) }, uppanno ca nibbÄ• naÃ±ca --- ime dhammÄ• avitakkaavicÄ• rÄ• . vitakkasahajÄ• to vicÄ• ro na vattab avitakkavicÄ• ramattotipi, avitakkaavicÄ• rotipi.

<1402> katame \Se 343/ dhammÄ• pÄ«tisahagatÄ• ? kÄ• mÄ• vacarakusalato cattÄ• ro s \Ne 295/ \Ee 237/, akusalato cattÄ• ro, kÄ• mÄ• vacarakusalassa vipÄ• kato paÃ±ca, kiriyat rÅ«pÄ• vacaradukatikajjhÄ• nÄ• kusalato ca vipÄ• kato ca kiriyato ca, lokuttaradukatikajjhÄ vipÄ• kato ca, etthuppannaá¹ƒ pÄ«tiá¹ƒ á¹-hapetvÄ• --- ime dhammÄ• pÄ«tisahagatÄ• .

<1403> katame dhammÄ• sukhasahagatÄ• ? kÄ• mÄ• vacarakusalato cattÄ• ro somanas
cattÄ• ro, kÄ• mÄ• vacarakusalassa vipÄ• kato cha, kiriyato paÃ±ca, rÅ«pÄ• vacaratikacatu vipÄ• kato ca kiriyato ca, lokuttaratikacatukkajjhÄ• nÄ• kusalato ca vipÄ• kato ca, etthuppa á¹-hapetvÄ• --- ime dhammÄ• sukhasahagatÄ• .

<1404> katame dhammÄ• upekkhÄ• sahagatÄ• ? kÄ• mÄ• vacarakusalato cattÄ• ro upek akusalato cha, kÄ• mÄ• vacarakusalassa \Be 269/ vipÄ• kato dasa, akusalassa vipÄ• kato rÅ«pÄ• vacaraá¹ƒ catutthaá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ kusalato ca vipÄ• kato ca kiriyato ca, cattÄ• ro Ä•
vipÄ• kato ca kiriyato ca, lokuttaraá¹ƒ catutthaá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ kusalato ca vipÄ• kato ca, etth upekkhaá¹ƒ á¹-hapetvÄ• --- ime dhammÄ• upekkhÄ• sahagatÄ• . pÄ«ti na pÄ«tisahagatÄ• upekkhÄ• sahagatÄ• . sukhaá¹ƒ na sukhasahagataá¹ƒ, siyÄ• pÄ«tisahagataá¹ƒ, na upekkh vattabbaá¹ƒ pÄ«tisahagatanti. dve domanassasahagatacittuppÄ• dÄ• , dukkhasahagatakÄ• vedanÄ• upekkhÄ• \Se 344/, rÅ«paÃ±ca nibbÄ• naÃ±ca --- ime dhammÄ• na vattabbÄ• sukhasahagatÄ• tipi, upekkhÄ• sahagatÄ• tipi.

<1405> katame dhammÄ• dassanena pahÄ• tabbÄ• ? cattÄ• ro diá¹-á¹-higatasampayuttac vicikicchÄ• sahagato cittuppÄ• do --- ime dhammÄ• dassanena pahÄ• tabbÄ• .

<1406> katame dhammÄ• bhÄ• vanÄ• ya pahÄ• tabbÄ• ? uddhaccasahagato cittuppÄ• d pahÄ• tabbÄ• . cattÄ• ro diá¹-á¹-higatavippayuttÄ• lobhasahagatacittuppÄ• dÄ• , dve doma
--- ime dhammÄ• siyÄ• dassanena pahÄ• tabbÄ• siyÄ• bhÄ• vanÄ• ya pahÄ• tabbÄ• .

<1407> katame \Ne 296/ dhammÄ• neva dassanena na bhÄ• vanÄ• ya pahÄ• tabbÄ• ? ca
kusalaá¹ƒ, catÅ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su vipÄ• ko, tÄ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kiriyÄ• byÄ• kataá¹ƒ, rÅ«paÃ± dhammÄ• neva dassanena na bhÄ• vanÄ• ya pahÄ• tabbÄ• .

<1408> katame dhammÄ• dassanena pahÄ• tabbahetukÄ• ? cattÄ• ro diá¹-á¹-higatasamp vicikicchÄ• sahagato cittuppÄ• do, etthuppannaá¹ƒ mohaá¹ƒ á¹-hapetvÄ• --- ime dhammÄ•
pahÄ• tabbahetukÄ• .

<1409> katame dhammÄ• bhÄ• vanÄ• ya pahÄ• tabbahetukÄ• ? uddhaccasahagato cittu á¹-hapetvÄ• --- ime dhammÄ• bhÄ• vanÄ• ya pahÄ• tabbahetukÄ• . cattÄ• ro diá¹-á¹-higat lobhasahagatacittuppÄ• dÄ• , dve domanassasahagatacittuppÄ• dÄ• --- ime dhammÄ• siy pahÄ• tabbahetukÄ• , siyÄ• bhÄ• vanÄ• ya pahÄ• tabbahetukÄ• .

<1410> katame \Be 270/ dhammÄ• neva dassanena na \Se 345/ bhÄ• vanÄ• ya pahÄ• tab moho, uddhaccasahagato moho, catÅ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kusalaá¹ƒ, catÅ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su vipÄ kiriyÄ• byÄ• kataá¹ƒ, rÅ«paÃ±ca, nibbÄ• naÃ±ca --- ime dhammÄ• neva dassanena na bhÄ

<1411> katame dhammÄ• Ä• cayagÄ• mino? tÄ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kusalaá¹ƒ, akusalaá¹ƒ ---

<1412> katame dhammÄ• apacayagÄ• mino? cattÄ• ro maggÄ• apariyÄ• pannÄ• --- ime

<1413> katame dhammÄ• nevÄ• cayagÄ• minÄ• pacayagÄ• mino? catÅ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kiriyÄ• byÄ• kataá¹ƒ, rÅ«paÃ±ca, nibbÄ• naÃ±ca --- ime dhammÄ• nevÄ• cayagÄ• minÄ• p

<1414> katame \Ne 297/ dhammÄ• sekkhÄ• ? cattÄ• ro maggÄ• apariyÄ• pannÄ• , heá¹-sÄ• maÃ±Ã±aphalÄ• ni --- ime dhammÄ• sekkhÄ• .

<1415> katame dhammÄ• asekkhÄ• ? upariá¹-á¹-himaá¹ƒ arahattaphalaá¹ƒ --- ime dhamm

<1416> katame dhammÄ• nevasekkhanÄ• sekkhÄ• ? tÄ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kusalaá¹ƒ, akusa tÄ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kiriyÄ• byÄ• kataá¹ƒ, rÅ«paÃ±ca, nibbÄ• naÃ±ca --- ime dhammÄ• neva

<1417> katame dhammÄ• parittÄ• ? kÄ• mÄ• vacarakusalaá¹ƒ \Ee 239/, akusalaá¹ƒ, sabb kÄ• mÄ• vacarakiriyÄ• byÄ• kataá¹ƒ, sabbaÃ±ca rÅ«paá¹ƒ --- ime dhammÄ• parittÄ• .

<1418> katame dhammÄ• mahaggatÄ• ? rÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• , arÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• , kusalÄ• by

<1419> katame dhammÄ• appamÄ• á¹‡Ä• ? cattÄ• ro \Se 346/ maggÄ• apariyÄ• pannÄ• nibbÄ• naÃ±ca --- ime dhammÄ• appamÄ• á¹‡Ä• .

<1420> katame \Be 271/ dhammÄ• parittÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• ? sabbo kÄ• mÄ• vacarassa vipÄ kiriyÄ• hetukamanoviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡adhÄ• tu somanassasahagatÄ• --- ime dhammÄ• parittÄ•

<1421> katame dhammÄ• mahaggatÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• ? viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aÃ±cÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ, n ime dhammÄ• mahaggatÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• .

<1422> katame dhammÄ• appamÄ• á¹‡Ä• rammaá¹‡Ä• ? cattÄ• ro maggÄ• apariyÄ• pan
--- ime dhammÄ• appamÄ• á¹‡Ä• rammaá¹‡Ä• . kÄ• mÄ• vacarakusalato cattÄ• ro Ã±Ä• á cattÄ• ro Ã±Ä• á¹‡avippayuttacittuppÄ• dÄ• , sabbaá¹ƒ akusalaá¹ƒ --- ime dhammÄ• siyÄ• mahaggatÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• , na appamÄ• á¹‡Ä• rammaá¹‡Ä• , siyÄ• na vattabbÄ• parittÄ• mahaggatÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• tipi. kÄ• mÄ• vacarakusalato cattÄ• ro Ã±Ä• á¹‡asampayuttacittu Ã±Ä• á¹‡asampayuttacittuppÄ• dÄ• , rÅ«pÄ• vacaraá¹ƒ catutthaá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ kusalato ca kiriyÄ• hetukamanoviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡adhÄ• tu upekkhÄ• sahagatÄ• --- ime dhammÄ• siyÄ• p mahaggatÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• , siyÄ• appamÄ• á¹‡Ä• rammaá¹‡Ä• , siyÄ• na vattabbÄ• paritt mahaggatÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• tipi, appamÄ• á¹‡Ä• rammaá¹‡Ä• tipi. rÅ«pÄ• vacaratikacatukkaj kiriyato ca, catutthassa jhÄ• nassa vipÄ• ko, Ä• kÄ• sÄ• naÃ±cÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ \Se 347/, Ä• ki dhammÄ• na vattabbÄ• parittÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• tipi, mahaggatÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• tipi, appamÄ• nibbÄ• naÃ±ca anÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• .

<1423> katame dhammÄ• hÄ«nÄ• ? dvÄ• dasa akusalacittuppÄ• dÄ• --- ime dhammÄ• h

<1424> katame dhammÄ• majjhimÄ• ? tÄ«su \Ee 240/ bhÅ«mÄ«su kusalaá¹ƒ, tÄ«su bhÅ« kiriyÄ• byÄ• kataá¹ƒ, sabbaÃ±ca rÅ«paá¹ƒ --- ime dhammÄ• majjhimÄ• .

<1425> katame dhammÄ• paá¹‡Ä«tÄ• ? cattÄ• ro maggÄ• apariyÄ• pannÄ• , cattÄ• ri ca nibbÄ• naÃ±ca --- ime dhammÄ• paá¹‡Ä«tÄ• .

<1426> katame dhammÄ• micchattaniyatÄ• ? cattÄ• ro diá¹-á¹-higatasampayuttacittuppÄ•
domanassasahagatacittuppÄ• dÄ• --- ime dhammÄ• siyÄ• micchattaniyatÄ• , siyÄ• aniya

<1427> katame \Be 272/ dhammÄ• sammattaniyatÄ• ? cattÄ• ro maggÄ• apariyÄ• pannÄ sammattaniyatÄ• .

<1428> katame dhammÄ• aniyatÄ• ? cattÄ• ro diá¹-á¹-higatavippayuttalobhasahagatacittu
vicikicchÄ• sahagato cittuppÄ• do, uddhaccasahagato cittuppÄ• do, tÄ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kus
vipÄ• ko, tÄ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kiriyÄ• byÄ• kataá¹ƒ, rÅ«paÃ±ca, nibbÄ• naÃ±ca --- ime dham

<1429> katame \Ne 299/ dhammÄ• maggÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• ? kÄ• mÄ• vacarakusalato cattÄ
Ã±Ä• á¹‡asampayuttacittuppÄ• dÄ• , kiriyato cattÄ• ro Ã±Ä• á¹‡asampayuttacittuppÄ• dÄ• maggÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• , na maggahetukÄ• ; siyÄ• maggÄ• dhipatino, siyÄ• na vattabbÄ• m maggÄ• dhipatinotipi \Se 348/. cattÄ• ro ariyamaggÄ• na maggÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• , maggahet siyÄ• na vattabbÄ• maggÄ• dhipatinoti. rÅ«pÄ• vacaracatutthaá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ kusalato ca kiriyÄ• hetukamanoviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡adhÄ• tu upekkhÄ• sahagatÄ• --- ime dhammÄ• siyÄ• m na maggÄ• dhipatino; siyÄ• na vattabbÄ• maggÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• ti. kÄ• mÄ• vacarakusalat Ã±Ä• á¹‡avippayuttacittuppÄ• dÄ• , sabbaá¹ƒ akusalaá¹ƒ, sabbo kÄ• mÄ• vacarassa vipÄ• rÅ«pÄ• vacaratikacatukkajjhÄ• nÄ• kusalato ca vipÄ• kato ca kiriyato ca, catutthassa jhÄ• n

Ä• ruppÄ• kusalato ca vipÄ• kato ca kiriyato ca, cattÄ• ri ca sÄ• maÃ±Ã±aphalÄ• ni --- ime maggÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• tipi, maggahetukÄ• tipi, maggÄ• dhipatinotipi. rÅ«paÃ±ca nibbÄ• naÃ

<1430> katame dhammÄ• uppannÄ• ? catÅ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su vipÄ• ko, yaÃ±ca rÅ«paá¹ƒ k dhammÄ• siyÄ• uppannÄ• , siyÄ• uppÄ• dino; na vattabbÄ• anuppannÄ• ti. catÅ«su bhÅ tÄ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kiriyÄ• byÄ• kataá¹ƒ, yaÃ±ca rÅ«paá¹ƒ na kammassa katattÄ• --- ime d anuppannÄ• , na vattabbÄ• uppÄ• dinoti. nibbÄ• naá¹ƒ na vattabbaá¹ƒ uppannantipi, anup

<1431> nibbÄ• naá¹ƒ á¹-hapetvÄ• sabbe dhammÄ• siyÄ• atÄ«tÄ• , siyÄ• anÄ• gatÄ• , s na vattabbaá¹ƒ atÄ«tantipi, anÄ• gatantipi \Se 349/, paccuppannantipi.

<1432> katame \Be 273/ dhammÄ• atÄ«tÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• ? viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aÃ±cÄ• yatanaá nevasaÃ±Ã±Ä• nÄ• saÃ±Ã±Ä• yatanaá¹ƒ --- ime dhammÄ• atÄ«tÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• .

<1433> niyogÄ• anÄ• gatÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• natthi.

<1434> katame dhammÄ• paccuppannÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• ? dvepaÃ±caviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡Ä• ni, ti ime dhammÄ• paccuppannÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• . kÄ• mÄ• vacarakusalassa vipÄ• kato dasa cit manoviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡adhÄ• tu upekkhÄ• sahagatÄ• , kiriyÄ• hetukamanoviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡adhÄ• dhammÄ• siyÄ• atÄ«tÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• , siyÄ• anÄ• gatÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• , siyÄ• paccuppan kÄ• mÄ• vacarakusalaá¹ƒ, akusalaá¹ƒ, kiriyato nava cittuppÄ• dÄ• , rÅ«pÄ• vacaraá¹ƒ catu ca kiriyato ca --- ime dhammÄ• siyÄ• atÄ«tÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• , siyÄ• anÄ• gatÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä paccuppannÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• ; siyÄ• na vattabbÄ• atÄ«tÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• tipi, anÄ• gatÄ• ra paccuppannÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• tipi. rÅ«pÄ• vacaratikacatukkajjhÄ• nÄ• kusalato ca vipÄ• kato jhÄ• nassa vipÄ• ko, Ä• kÄ• sÄ• naÃ±cÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ, Ä• kiÃ±caÃ±Ã±Ä• yatanaá¹ƒ, cattÄ• r ca sÄ• maÃ±Ã±aphalÄ• ni --- ime dhammÄ• na vattabbÄ• atÄ«tÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• tipi, anÄ• paccuppannÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• tipi. rÅ«paÃ±ca nibbÄ• naÃ±ca anÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• .

<1435> anindriyabaddharÅ«paÃ±ca nibbÄ• naÃ±ca á¹-hapetvÄ• , sabbe dhammÄ• siyÄ• siyÄ• ajjhattabahiddhÄ• . anindriyabaddharÅ«paÃ±ca \Se 350/ nibbÄ• naÃ±ca bahiddhÄ• .

<1436> katame dhammÄ• ajjhattÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• ? viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aÃ±cÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ, nevas
ime dhammÄ• ajjhattÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• .

<1437> katame dhammÄ• bahiddhÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• ? rÅ«pÄ• vacaratikacatukkajjhÄ• nÄ• kiriyato ca, catutthassa jhÄ• nassa vipÄ• ko, Ä• kÄ• sÄ• naÃ±cÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ, cattÄ• ro mag ca sÄ• maÃ±Ã±aphalÄ• ni --- ime dhammÄ• bahiddhÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• . rÅ«paá¹ƒ á¹-hapetv kusalÄ• kusalÄ• byÄ• katÄ• dhammÄ• , rÅ«pÄ• vacaraá¹ƒ catutthaá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ kusalato

siyÄ• ajjhattÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• , siyÄ• \Be 274/ bahiddhÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• , siyÄ• ajjhattabahid Ä• kiÃ±caÃ±Ã±Ä• yatanaá¹ƒ na vattabbaá¹ƒ ajjhattÄ• rammaá¹‡antipi, bahiddhÄ• rammaá¹ ajjhattabahiddhÄ• rammaá¹‡antipi. rÅ«paÃ±ca nibbÄ• naÃ±ca anÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• .

<1438> katame dhammÄ• sanidassanasappaá¹-ighÄ• ? rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ --- ime dhamm

<1439> katame \Ne 301/ dhammÄ• anidassanasappaá¹-ighÄ• ? cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe
--- ime dhammÄ• anidassanasappaá¹-ighÄ• .

<1440> katame dhammÄ• anidassanaappaá¹-ighÄ• ? catÅ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kusalaá¹ƒ, aku vipÄ• ko, tÄ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kiriyÄ• byÄ• kataá¹ƒ, yaÃ±ca rÅ«paá¹ƒ anidassanaá¹ƒ appaá¹ dhammÄ• yatanapariyÄ• pannaá¹ƒ, nibbÄ• naÃ±ca --- ime dhammÄ• anidassanaappaá¹-ig tikaá¹ƒ.

dukaatthuddhÄ• ro

hetugocchakaá¹ƒ

<1441> katame \Se 351/ dhammÄ• hetÅ«? tayo kusalahetÅ«, tayo akusalahetÅ«, tayo aby kusalahetu, adoso kusalahetu, catÅ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kusalesu uppajjanti. amoho kusalahetu cattÄ• ro Ã±Ä• á¹‡avippayutte cittuppÄ• de á¹-hapetvÄ• , catÅ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kusalesu up lobho aá¹-á¹-hasu lobhasahagatesu cittuppÄ• desu uppajjati. doso dvÄ«su domanassasaha uppajjati. moho sabbÄ• kusalesu uppajjati.

alobho vipÄ• kahetu adoso vipÄ• kahetu, kÄ• mÄ• vacarassa vipÄ• kato ahetuke cittuppÄ• bhÅ«mÄ«su vipÄ• kesu uppajjanti. amoho vipÄ• kahetu, kÄ• mÄ• vacarassa vipÄ• kato ahe á¹-hapetvÄ• , cattÄ• ro Ã±Ä• á¹‡avippayutte cittuppÄ• de á¹-hapetvÄ• , catÅ«su bhÅ«mÄ«s alobho \Ne 302/ kiriyahetu adoso kiriyahetu, kÄ• mÄ• vacarakiriyato ahetuke cittuppÄ• de á bhÅ«mÄ«su kiriyesu uppajjanti \Ee 243/. amoho kiriyahetu, kÄ• mÄ• vacarakiriyato ahetuke á¹-hapetvÄ• , cattÄ• ro Ã±Ä• á¹‡avippayutte cittuppÄ• de á¹-hapetvÄ• , tÄ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su dhammÄ• hetÅ«.

<1442> katame dhammÄ• na hetÅ«? á¹-hapetvÄ• hetÅ«, catÅ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kusalaá¹ƒ
vipÄ• ko, tÄ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kiriyÄ• byÄ• kataá¹ƒ, rÅ«paÃ±ca, nibbÄ• naÃ±ca --- ime dham

<1443> katame dhammÄ• sahetukÄ• ? vicikicchÄ• sahagataá¹ƒ uddhaccasahagataá¹ƒ mo akusalaá¹ƒ, catÅ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kusalaá¹ƒ, kÄ• mÄ• vacarassa \Se 352/ vipÄ• kato ahetuk
catÅ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su vipÄ• ko, kÄ• mÄ• vacarakiriyato ahetuke cittuppÄ• de á¹-hapetvÄ• tÄ kiriyÄ• byÄ• kataá¹ƒ --- ime dhammÄ• sahetukÄ• .

<1444> katame dhammÄ• ahetukÄ• ? vicikicchÄ• sahagato moho, uddhaccasahagato mo tisso ca manodhÄ• tuyo, paÃ±ca ca ahetukamanoviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡adhÄ• tuyo, rÅ«paÃ±ca, nib ahetukÄ• .

<1445> katame dhammÄ• hetusampayuttÄ• ? vicikicchÄ• sahagataá¹ƒ uddhaccasahagata avasesaá¹ƒ akusalaá¹ƒ, catÅ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kusalaá¹ƒ, kÄ• mÄ• vacarassa vipÄ• kato ahe
catÅ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su vipÄ• ko, kÄ• mÄ• vacarakiriyato ahetuke cittuppÄ• de á¹-hapetvÄ• tÄ kiriyÄ• byÄ• kataá¹ƒ --- ime dhammÄ• hetusampayuttÄ• .

<1446> katame dhammÄ• hetuvippayuttÄ• ? vicikicchÄ• sahagato moho, uddhaccasahaga dvepaÃ±caviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡Ä• ni tisso ca manodhÄ• tuyo paÃ±ca ca ahetukamanoviÃ±Ã±Ä• á nibbÄ• naÃ±ca --- ime dhammÄ• hetuvippayuttÄ• .

<1447> katame \Be 276/ \Ne 303/ dhammÄ• hetÅ« ceva sahetukÄ• ca? yattha dve tayo h ime dhammÄ• hetÅ« ceva sahetukÄ• ca.

<1448> katame dhammÄ• sahetukÄ• ceva na ca hetÅ«? catÅ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kusalaá¹ƒ, vipÄ• kato ahetuke cittuppÄ• de á¹-hapetvÄ• catÅ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su \Se 353/ vipÄ• ko, kÄ• m cittuppÄ• de á¹-hapetvÄ• tÄ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kiriyÄ• byÄ• kataá¹ƒ, etthuppanne hetÅ« á¹-ha sahetukÄ• ceva na ca hetÅ«. ahetukÄ• dhammÄ• na vattabbÄ• --- hetÅ« ceva sahetukÄ• ca hetÅ«tipi.

<1449> katame \Ee 244/ dhammÄ• hetÅ« ceva hetusampayuttÄ• ca? yattha dve tayo hetu
dhammÄ• hetÅ« ceva hetusampayuttÄ• ca.

<1450> katame dhammÄ• hetusampayuttÄ• ceva na ca hetÅ«? catÅ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kus kÄ• mÄ• vacarassa vipÄ• kato ahetuke cittuppÄ• de á¹-hapetvÄ• catÅ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su vipÄ ahetuke cittuppÄ• de á¹-hapetvÄ• tÄ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kiriyÄ• byÄ• kataá¹ƒ, etthuppanne he dhammÄ• hetusampayuttÄ• ceva na ca hetÅ«. hetuvippayuttÄ• dhammÄ• na vattabbÄ• cÄ• tipi, hetusampayuttÄ• ceva na ca hetÅ«tipi.

<1451> katame dhammÄ• na hetÅ« sahetukÄ• ? catÅ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kusalaá¹ƒ, akusala ahetuke cittuppÄ• de á¹-hapetvÄ• catÅ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su vipÄ• ko, kÄ• mÄ• vacarakiriyato a á¹-hapetvÄ• tÄ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kiriyÄ• byÄ• kataá¹ƒ, etthuppanne hetÅ« á¹-hapetvÄ• --- in sahetukÄ• .

<1452> katame dhammÄ• na hetÅ« ahetukÄ• ? dvepaÃ±caviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡Ä• ni, tisso ca ma ahetukamanoviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡adhÄ• tuyo, rÅ«paÃ±ca, nibbÄ• naÃ±ca --- ime dhammÄ• na he dhammÄ• na vattabbÄ• --- na hetÅ« sahetukÄ• tipi, na hetÅ« ahetukÄ• tipi.

cÅ«á¸·antaradukaá¹ƒ

<1453> katame \Be 277/ \Ne 304/ dhammÄ• sappaccayÄ• ? catÅ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kusalaá
bhÅ«mÄ«su vipÄ• ko, tÄ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kiriyÄ• byÄ• kataá¹ƒ, sabbaÃ±ca rÅ«paá¹ƒ --- ime

<1454> katame dhammÄ• appaccayÄ• ? nibbÄ• naá¹ƒ --- ime dhammÄ• appaccayÄ• .

<1455> katame dhammÄ• saá¹…khatÄ• ? catÅ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kusalaá¹ƒ, akusalaá¹ƒ, ca bhÅ«mÄ«su kiriyÄ• byÄ• kataá¹ƒ, sabbaÃ±ca rÅ«paá¹ƒ --- ime dhammÄ• saá¹…khatÄ• .

<1456> katame dhammÄ• asaá¹…khatÄ• ? nibbÄ• naá¹ƒ --- ime dhammÄ• asaá¹…khatÄ

<1457> katame dhammÄ• sanidassanÄ• ? rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ --- ime dhammÄ• sanidassa

<1458> katame dhammÄ• anidassanÄ• ? cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ \Ee 245/ ... pe ... phoá¹-á¹-ha bhÅ«mÄ«su kusalaá¹ƒ, akusalaá¹ƒ, catÅ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su vipÄ• ko, tÄ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kiriyÄ rÅ«paá¹ƒ anidassanaá¹ƒ appaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ dhammÄ• yatanapariyÄ• pannaá¹ƒ, nibbÄ• naÃ±c

<1459> katame dhammÄ• sappaá¹-ighÄ• ? cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• y
sappaá¹-ighÄ• .

<1460> katame dhammÄ• appaá¹-ighÄ• ? catÅ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kusalaá¹ƒ, akusalaá¹ƒ, ca bhÅ«mÄ«su kiriyÄ• byÄ• kataá¹ƒ, yaÃ±ca rÅ«paá¹ƒ anidassanaá¹ƒ appaá¹-ighaá¹ƒ dhamm nibbÄ• naÃ±ca \Se 355/ --- ime dhammÄ• appaá¹-ighÄ• .

<1461> katame dhammÄ• rÅ«pino? cattÄ• ro ca mahÄ• bhÅ«tÄ• , catunnaÃ±ca mahÄ• bh ime dhammÄ• rÅ«pino.

<1462> katame \Ne 305/ dhammÄ• arÅ«pino? catÅ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kusalaá¹ƒ, akusalaá¹ƒ tÄ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kiriyÄ• byÄ• kataá¹ƒ, nibbÄ• naÃ±ca --- ime dhammÄ• arÅ«pino.

<1463> katame \Be 278/ dhammÄ• lokiyÄ• ? tÄ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kusalaá¹ƒ, akusalaá¹ƒ, tÄ bhÅ«mÄ«su kiriyÄ• byÄ• kataá¹ƒ, sabbaÃ±ca rÅ«paá¹ƒ --- ime dhammÄ• lokiyÄ• .

<1464> katame dhammÄ• lokuttarÄ• ? cattÄ• ro maggÄ• apariyÄ• pannÄ• , cattÄ• ri ca s nibbÄ• naÃ±ca --- ime dhammÄ• lokuttarÄ• . sabbe {sabbeva (Se) } dhammÄ• kenaci viÃ± viÃ±Ã±eyyÄ• .

Ä• savagocchakaá¹ƒ

<1465> katame dhammÄ• Ä• savÄ• ? cattÄ• ro Ä• savÄ• --- kÄ• mÄ• savo, bhavÄ• savo kÄ• mÄ• savo aá¹-á¹-hasu lobhasahagatesu cittuppÄ• desu uppajjati bhavÄ• savo catÅ«su diá¹-á¹-higatavippayuttalobhasahagatesu cittuppÄ• desu uppajjati diá¹-á¹-hÄ• savo catÅ«su diá¹-á¹-higatasampayuttesu cittuppÄ• desu uppajjati. avijjÄ• savo sabbÄ• kusalesu uppajjati Ä• savÄ• .

<1466> katame dhammÄ• no Ä• savÄ• ? á¹-hapetvÄ• Ä• save avasesaá¹ƒ akusalaá¹ƒ, ca 246/, catÅ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su vipÄ• ko, tÄ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kiriyÄ• byÄ• kataá¹ƒ, rÅ«paÃ±ca, n dhammÄ• no Ä• savÄ• .

<1467> katame dhammÄ• sÄ• savÄ• ? tÄ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kusalaá¹ƒ, akusalaá¹ƒ, tÄ«su b bhÅ«mÄ«su kiriyÄ• byÄ• kataá¹ƒ, sabbaÃ±ca rÅ«paá¹ƒ --- ime dhammÄ• sÄ• savÄ• .

<1468> katame dhammÄ• anÄ• savÄ• ? cattÄ• ro maggÄ• apariyÄ• pannÄ• , cattÄ• ri ca
--- ime dhammÄ• anÄ• savÄ• .

<1469> katame \Ne 306/ dhammÄ• Ä• savasampayuttÄ• ? dve domanassasahagatacittup á¹-hapetvÄ• , vicikicchÄ• sahagataá¹ƒ uddhaccasahagataá¹ƒ mohaá¹ƒ á¹-hapetvÄ• , avase dhammÄ• Ä• savasampayuttÄ• .

<1470> katame \Be 279/ dhammÄ• Ä• savavippayuttÄ• ? dvÄ«su domanassasahagatesu vicikicchÄ• sahagato moho, uddhaccasahagato moho, catÅ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kusalaá¹ƒ, catÅ bhÅ«mÄ«su kiriyÄ• byÄ• kataá¹ƒ, rÅ«paÃ±ca, nibbÄ• naÃ±ca --- ime dhammÄ• Ä• savavip

<1471> katame dhammÄ• Ä• savÄ• ceva sÄ• savÄ• ca? teva Ä• savÄ• Ä• savÄ• ceva

<1472> katame dhammÄ• sÄ• savÄ• ceva no ca Ä• savÄ• ? á¹-hapetvÄ• Ä• save, avase kusalaá¹ƒ, tÄ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su vipÄ• ko, tÄ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kiriyÄ• byÄ• kataá¹ƒ, sabbaÃ±ca sÄ• savÄ• ceva no ca Ä• savÄ• . anÄ• savÄ• dhammÄ• na vattabbÄ• --- Ä• savÄ• ceva no ca Ä• savÄ• tipi.

<1473> katame \Se 357/ dhammÄ• Ä• savÄ• ceva Ä• savasampayuttÄ• ca? yattha dve t --- ime dhammÄ• Ä• savÄ• ceva Ä• savasampayuttÄ• ca.

<1474> katame dhammÄ• Ä• savasampayuttÄ• ceva no ca Ä• savÄ• ? á¹-hapetvÄ• Ä• s dhammÄ• Ä• savasampayuttÄ• ceva no ca Ä• savÄ• . Ä• savavippayuttÄ• dhammÄ• na Ä• savasampayuttÄ• cÄ• tipi, Ä• savasampayuttÄ• ceva no ca Ä• savÄ• tipi.

<1475> katame dhammÄ• Ä• savavippayuttÄ• sÄ• savÄ• ? dvÄ«su domanassasahagates vicikicchÄ• sahagato moho, uddhaccasahagato moho, tÄ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su \Ne 307/ \Ee 247
vipÄ• ko, tÄ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kiriyÄ• byÄ• kataá¹ƒ, sabbaÃ±ca rÅ«paá¹ƒ --- ime dhammÄ• Ä

<1476> katame dhammÄ• Ä• savavippayuttÄ• anÄ• savÄ• ? cattÄ• ro maggÄ• apariyÄ• sÄ• maÃ±Ã±aphalÄ• ni, nibbÄ• naÃ±ca --- ime dhammÄ• Ä• savavippayuttÄ• anÄ• savÄ• vattabbÄ• --- Ä• savavippayuttÄ• sÄ• savÄ• tipi, Ä• savavippayuttÄ• anÄ• savÄ• tipi.

saá¹ƒyojanagocchakaá¹ƒ

<1477> katame \Be 280/ dhammÄ• saá¹ƒyojanÄ• ? dasa saá¹ƒyojanÄ• ni --- kÄ• marÄ• g paá¹-ighasaá¹ƒyojanaá¹ƒ, mÄ• nasaá¹ƒyojanaá¹ƒ, diá¹-á¹-hisaá¹ƒyojanaá¹ƒ, vicikicchÄ• saá sÄ«labbataparÄ• mÄ• sasaá¹ƒyojanaá¹ƒ, bhavarÄ• gasaá¹ƒyojanaá¹ƒ, issÄ• saá¹ƒyojanaá avijjÄ• saá¹ƒyojanaá¹ƒ. kÄ• marÄ• gasaá¹ƒyojanaá¹ƒ aá¹-á¹-hasu \Se 358/ lobhasahagates paá¹-ighasaá¹ƒyojanaá¹ƒ dvÄ«su domanassasahagatesu cittuppÄ• desu uppajjati. mÄ• nas diá¹-á¹-higatavippayuttalobhasahagatesu cittuppÄ• desu uppajjati. diá¹-á¹-hisaá¹ƒyojanaá¹ƒ diá¹-á¹-higatasampayuttesu cittuppÄ• desu uppajjati. vicikicchÄ• saá¹ƒyojanaá¹ƒ vicikicchÄ• cittuppÄ• desu uppajjati. sÄ«labbataparÄ• mÄ• sasaá¹ƒyojanaá¹ƒ catÅ«su diá¹-á¹-higatasa uppajjati. bhavarÄ• gasaá¹ƒyojanaá¹ƒ catÅ«su diá¹-á¹-higatavippayuttalobhasahagatesu cit issÄ• saá¹ƒyojanaÃ±ca macchariyasaá¹ƒyojanaÃ±ca dvÄ«su domanassasahagatesu cittup avijjÄ• saá¹ƒyojanaá¹ƒ sabbÄ• kusalesu uppajjati --- ime dhammÄ• saá¹ƒyojanÄ• .

<1478> katame dhammÄ• no saá¹ƒyojanÄ• . á¹-hapetvÄ• saá¹ƒyojane avasesaá¹ƒ akusa
kusalaá¹ƒ, catÅ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su vipÄ• ko, tÄ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kiriyÄ• byÄ• kataá¹ƒ, rÅ«paÃ± dhammÄ• no saá¹ƒyojanÄ• .

<1479> katame dhammÄ• saá¹ƒyojaniyÄ• ? tÄ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kusalaá¹ƒ, akusalaá¹ƒ, tÄ« bhÅ«mÄ«su kiriyÄ• byÄ• kataá¹ƒ, sabbaÃ±ca rÅ«paá¹ƒ --- ime dhammÄ• saá¹ƒyojaniyÄ• .

<1480> katame \Ne 308/ dhammÄ• asaá¹ƒyojaniyÄ• ? cattÄ• ro maggÄ• apariyÄ• pannÄ sÄ• maÃ±Ã±aphalÄ• ni, nibbÄ• naÃ±ca --- ime dhammÄ• asaá¹ƒyojaniyÄ• .

<1481> katame dhammÄ• saá¹ƒyojanasampayuttÄ• ? uddhaccasahagataá¹ƒ \Ee 248/ mo akusalaá¹ƒ --- ime dhammÄ• saá¹ƒyojanasampayuttÄ• .

<1482> katame \Se 359/ dhammÄ• saá¹ƒyojanavippayuttÄ• ? uddhaccasahagato moho, c catÅ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su vipÄ• ko, tÄ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kiriyÄ• byÄ• kataá¹ƒ, rÅ«paÃ±ca, nibbÄ• saá¹ƒyojanavippayuttÄ• .

<1483> katame dhammÄ• saá¹ƒyojanÄ• ceva saá¹ƒyojaniyÄ• ca? tÄ• neva saá¹ƒyojanÄ saá¹ƒyojaniyÄ• ca.

<1484> katame \Be 281/ dhammÄ• saá¹ƒyojaniyÄ• ceva no ca saá¹ƒyojanÄ• ? á¹-hapetv
akusalaá¹ƒ, tÄ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kusalaá¹ƒ, tÄ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su vipÄ• ko, tÄ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su k rÅ«paá¹ƒ --- ime dhammÄ• saá¹ƒyojaniyÄ• ceva no ca saá¹ƒyojanÄ• . asaá¹ƒyojaniyÄ• dh saá¹ƒyojanÄ• ceva saá¹ƒyojaniyÄ• cÄ• tipi, saá¹ƒyojaniyÄ• ceva no ca saá¹ƒyojanÄ• tipi.

<1485> katame dhammÄ• saá¹ƒyojanÄ• ceva saá¹ƒyojanasampayuttÄ• ca? yattha dve t uppajjanti --- ime dhammÄ• saá¹ƒyojanÄ• ceva saá¹ƒyojanasampayuttÄ• ca.

<1486> katame dhammÄ• saá¹ƒyojanasampayuttÄ• ceva no ca saá¹ƒyojanÄ• ? á¹-hapetv
akusalaá¹ƒ --- ime dhammÄ• saá¹ƒyojanasampayuttÄ• ceva no ca saá¹ƒyojanÄ• . saá¹ƒyo vattabbÄ• --- saá¹ƒyojanÄ• ceva saá¹ƒyojanasampayuttÄ• cÄ• tipi, saá¹ƒyojanasampayut saá¹ƒyojanÄ• tipi.

<1487> katame dhammÄ• saá¹ƒyojanavippayuttÄ• saá¹ƒyojaniyÄ• ? uddhaccasahagato m kusalaá¹ƒ, tÄ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su vipÄ• ko, tÄ«su \Se 360/ bhÅ«mÄ«su kiriyÄ• byÄ• kataá¹ƒ, s dhammÄ• saá¹ƒyojanavippayuttÄ• saá¹ƒyojaniyÄ• .

<1488> katame dhammÄ• saá¹ƒyojanavippayuttÄ• asaá¹ƒyojaniyÄ• ? cattÄ• ro maggÄ• sÄ• maÃ±Ã±aphalÄ• ni, nibbÄ• naÃ±ca --- ime dhammÄ• saá¹ƒyojanavippayuttÄ• asaá¹ƒy saá¹ƒyojanasampayuttÄ• dhammÄ• na vattabbÄ• --- saá¹ƒyojanavippayuttÄ• saá¹ƒyojan saá¹ƒyojanavippayuttÄ• asaá¹ƒyojaniyÄ• tipi.

ganthagocchakaá¹ƒ

<1489> katame dhammÄ• ganthÄ• ? cattÄ• ro \Ee 249/ ganthÄ• --- abhijjhÄ• kÄ• yaganth

sÄ«labbataparÄ• mÄ• so kÄ• yagantho, idaá¹ƒ saccÄ• bhiniveso kÄ• yagantho. abhijjhÄ• kÄ lobhasahagatesu \Be 282/ cittuppÄ• desu uppajjati. byÄ• pÄ• do kÄ• yagantho dvÄ«su dom cittuppÄ• desu uppajjati. sÄ«labbataparÄ• mÄ• so kÄ• yagantho ca idaá¹ƒ saccÄ• bhiniveso diá¹-á¹-higatasampayuttesu cittuppÄ• desu uppajjanti --- ime dhammÄ• ganthÄ• .

<1490> katame dhammÄ• no ganthÄ• ? á¹-hapetvÄ• ganthe, avasesaá¹ƒ akusalaá¹ƒ, cat catÅ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su vipÄ• ko, tÄ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kiriyÄ• byÄ• kataá¹ƒ, rÅ«paÃ±ca, nibbÄ• ganthÄ• .

<1491> katame dhammÄ• ganthaniyÄ• ? tÄ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kusalaá¹ƒ, akusalaá¹ƒ, tÄ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kiriyÄ• byÄ• kataá¹ƒ, sabbaÃ±ca rÅ«paá¹ƒ --- ime dhammÄ• ganthaniyÄ• .

<1492> katame dhammÄ• aganthaniyÄ• ? cattÄ• ro maggÄ• \Se 361/ apariyÄ• pannÄ• , nibbÄ• naÃ±ca --- ime dhammÄ• aganthaniyÄ• .

<1493> katame dhammÄ• ganthasampayuttÄ• ? cattÄ• ro diá¹-á¹-higatasampayuttacittupp diá¹-á¹-higatavippayuttalobhasahagatacittuppÄ• dÄ• , etthuppannaá¹ƒ lobhaá¹ƒ á¹-hapetvÄ• domanassasahagatacittuppÄ• dÄ• , etthuppannaá¹ƒ paá¹-ighaá¹ƒ á¹-hapetvÄ• --- ime dhan

<1494> katame dhammÄ• ganthavippayuttÄ• ? catÅ«su diá¹-á¹-higatavippayuttalobhasaha uppanno lobho, dvÄ«su domanassasahagatesu cittuppÄ• desu uppannaá¹ƒ paá¹-ighaá¹ƒ, v cittuppÄ• do, uddhaccasahagato cittuppÄ• do, catÅ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kusalaá¹ƒ, catÅ«su bh bhÅ«mÄ«su kiriyÄ• byÄ• kataá¹ƒ, rÅ«paÃ±ca, nibbÄ• naÃ±ca --- ime dhammÄ• ganthavipp

<1495> katame dhammÄ• ganthÄ• ceva ganthaniyÄ• ca? teva ganthÄ• ganthÄ• ceva g

<1496> katame dhammÄ• ganthaniyÄ• ceva no ca ganthÄ• ? á¹-hapetvÄ• ganthe avases
bhÅ«mÄ«su kusalaá¹ƒ, tÄ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su vipÄ• ko, tÄ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kiriyÄ• byÄ• kataá¹ dhammÄ• ganthaniyÄ• ceva no ca ganthÄ• . aganthaniyÄ• \Ee 250/ dhammÄ• na vattabl ganthaniyÄ• cÄ• tipi, ganthaniyÄ• ceva no ca ganthÄ• tipi.

<1497> katame \Be 283/ dhammÄ• ganthÄ• ceva ganthasampayuttÄ• ca? yattha diá¹-á¹-uppajjanti --- ime dhammÄ• ganthÄ• ceva ganthasampayuttÄ• \Se 362/ ca.

<1498> katame dhammÄ• ganthasampayuttÄ• ceva no ca ganthÄ• ? aá¹-á¹-ha lobhasaha domanassasahagatacittuppÄ• dÄ• , etthuppanne ganthe á¹-hapetvÄ• --- ime dhammÄ• ga ganthÄ• . ganthavippayuttÄ• dhammÄ• na vattabbÄ• --- ganthÄ• ceva ganthasampayuttÄ ceva no ca ganthÄ• tipi.

<1499> katame dhammÄ• ganthavippayuttÄ• ganthaniyÄ• ? catÅ«su diá¹-á¹-higatavippay cittuppÄ• desu uppanno lobho, dvÄ«su domanassasahagatesu cittuppÄ• desu uppannaá¹ƒ vicikicchÄ• sahagato cittuppÄ• do, uddhaccasahagato cittuppÄ• do, tÄ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kus
bhÅ«mÄ«su vipÄ• ko, tÄ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kiriyÄ• byÄ• kataá¹ƒ, sabbaÃ±ca rÅ«paá¹ƒ --- ime ganthaniyÄ• .

<1500> katame dhammÄ• ganthavippayuttÄ• aganthaniyÄ• ? cattÄ• ro maggÄ• apariyÄ• sÄ• maÃ±Ã±aphalÄ• ni, nibbÄ• naÃ±ca --- ime dhammÄ• ganthavippayuttÄ• aganthaniyÄ vattabbÄ• --- ganthavippayuttÄ• ganthaniyÄ• tipi, ganthavippayuttÄ• aganthaniyÄ• tipi.

oghagocchakaá¹ƒ

<1501> katame dhammÄ• oghÄ• ... pe ....

yogagocchakaá¹ƒ

<1502> katame dhammÄ• yogÄ• ... pe ....

nÄ«varaá¹‡agocchakaá¹ƒ

<1503> katame dhammÄ• nÄ«varaá¹‡Ä• ? cha nÄ«varaá¹‡Ä• --- kÄ• macchandanÄ«vara thinamiddhanÄ«varaá¹‡aá¹ƒ, uddhaccakukkuccanÄ«varaá¹‡aá¹ƒ, vicikicchÄ• nÄ«varaá¹‡aá \Be 284/. kÄ• macchandanÄ«varaá¹‡aá¹ƒ aá¹-á¹-hasu lobhasahagatesu cittuppÄ• desu \Se byÄ• pÄ• danÄ«varaá¹‡aá¹ƒ dvÄ«su domanassasahagatesu cittuppÄ• desu uppajjati, thina sasaá¹…khÄ• rikesu akusalesu uppajjati, uddhaccanÄ«varaá¹‡aá¹ƒ uddhaccasahagatesu c kukkuccanÄ«varaá¹‡aá¹ƒ dvÄ«su domanassasahagatesu cittuppÄ• desu uppajjati, vicikicch vicikicchÄ• sahagatesu cittuppÄ• desu uppajjati, avijjÄ• nÄ«varaá¹‡aá¹ƒ \Ee 251/ sabbÄ• ku dhammÄ• nÄ«varaá¹‡Ä• .

<1504> katame dhammÄ• no nÄ«varaá¹‡Ä• ? á¹-hapetvÄ• nÄ«varaá¹‡e avasesaá¹ƒ akus
kusalaá¹ƒ, catÅ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su vipÄ• ko, tÄ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kiriyÄ• byÄ• kataá¹ƒ, rÅ«paÃ±
dhammÄ• no nÄ«varaá¹‡Ä• .

<1505> katame \Ne 312/ dhammÄ• nÄ«varaá¹‡iyÄ• ? tÄ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kusalaá¹ƒ, akusa vipÄ• ko, tÄ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kiriyÄ• byÄ• kataá¹ƒ, sabbaÃ±ca rÅ«paá¹ƒ --- ime dhammÄ• n

<1506> katame dhammÄ• anÄ«varaá¹‡iyÄ• ? cattÄ• ro maggÄ• apariyÄ• pannÄ• , cattÄ• nibbÄ• naÃ±ca --- ime dhammÄ• anÄ«varaá¹‡iyÄ• .

<1507> katame dhammÄ• nÄ«varaá¹‡asampayuttÄ• ? dvÄ• dasa akusalacittuppÄ• dÄ• - nÄ«varaá¹‡asampayuttÄ• .

<1508> katame dhammÄ• nÄ«varaá¹‡avippayuttÄ• ? catÅ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kusalaá¹ƒ, cat bhÅ«mÄ«su kiriyÄ• byÄ• kataá¹ƒ, rÅ«paÃ±ca, nibbÄ• naÃ±ca --- ime dhammÄ• nÄ«varaá¹

<1509> katame dhammÄ• nÄ«varaá¹‡Ä• ceva nÄ«varaá¹‡iyÄ• ca? tÄ• neva nÄ«varaá¹‡ nÄ«varaá¹‡iyÄ• ca.

<1510> katame dhammÄ• nÄ«varaá¹‡iyÄ• ceva no ca nÄ«varaá¹‡Ä• ? á¹-hapetvÄ• nÄ« tÄ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kusalaá¹ƒ, tÄ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su vipÄ• ko, tÄ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kiriyÄ• byÄ• ime dhammÄ• nÄ«varaá¹‡iyÄ• ceva no ca nÄ«varaá¹‡Ä• . anÄ«varaá¹‡iyÄ• dhammÄ• n nÄ«varaá¹‡iyÄ• cÄ• tipi, nÄ«varaá¹‡iyÄ• ceva no ca nÄ«varaá¹‡Ä• tipi.

<1511> katame \Be 285/ dhammÄ• nÄ«varaá¹‡Ä• ceva nÄ«varaá¹‡asampayuttÄ• ca? ya ekato uppajjanti --- ime dhammÄ• nÄ«varaá¹‡Ä• ceva nÄ«varaá¹‡asampayuttÄ• ca.

<1512> katame dhammÄ• nÄ«varaá¹‡asampayuttÄ• ceva no ca nÄ«varaá¹‡Ä• ? á¹-hape akusalaá¹ƒ --- ime dhammÄ• nÄ«varaá¹‡asampayuttÄ• ceva no ca nÄ«varaá¹‡Ä• . nÄ«va vattabbÄ• --- nÄ«varaá¹‡Ä• ceva nÄ«varaá¹‡asampayuttÄ• \Ee 252/ cÄ• tipi, nÄ«varaá¹‡ nÄ«varaá¹‡Ä• tipi.

<1513> katame \Ne 313/ dhammÄ• nÄ«varaá¹‡avippayuttÄ• nÄ«varaá¹‡iyÄ• ? tÄ«su bhÅ
bhÅ«mÄ«su vipÄ• ko, tÄ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kiriyÄ• byÄ• kataá¹ƒ, sabbaÃ±ca rÅ«paá¹ƒ --- ime nÄ«varaá¹‡avippayuttÄ• nÄ«varaá¹‡iyÄ• .

<1514> katame dhammÄ• nÄ«varaá¹‡avippayuttÄ• anÄ«varaá¹‡iyÄ• ? cattÄ• ro maggÄ• sÄ• maÃ±Ã±aphalÄ• ni, nibbÄ• naÃ±ca --- ime dhammÄ• nÄ«varaá¹‡avippayuttÄ• anÄ«va nÄ«varaá¹‡asampayuttÄ• dhammÄ• na vattabbÄ• --- nÄ«varaá¹‡avippayuttÄ• nÄ«varaá nÄ«varaá¹‡avippayuttÄ• anÄ«varaá¹‡iyÄ• tipi.

parÄ• mÄ• sagocchakaá¹ƒ

<1515> katame \Se 365/ dhammÄ• parÄ• mÄ• sÄ• ? diá¹-á¹-hiparÄ• mÄ• so catÅ«su diá¹ cittuppÄ• desu uppajjati --- ime dhammÄ• parÄ• mÄ• sÄ• .

<1516> katame dhammÄ• no parÄ• mÄ• sÄ• ? á¹-hapetvÄ• parÄ• mÄ• saá¹ƒ avasesaá¹ƒ
kusalaá¹ƒ, catÅ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su vipÄ• ko, tÄ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kiriyÄ• byÄ• kataá¹ƒ, rÅ«paÃ± dhammÄ• no parÄ• mÄ• sÄ• .

<1517> katame dhammÄ• parÄ• maá¹-á¹-hÄ• ? tÄ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kusalaá¹ƒ, akusalaá¹ƒ bhÅ«mÄ«su kiriyÄ• byÄ• kataá¹ƒ, sabbaÃ±ca rÅ«paá¹ƒ --- ime dhammÄ• parÄ• maá¹-á¹-h

<1518> katame \Be 286/ dhammÄ• aparÄ• maá¹-á¹-hÄ• ? cattÄ• ro maggÄ• apariyÄ• par sÄ• maÃ±Ã±aphalÄ• ni nibbÄ• naÃ±ca --- ime dhammÄ• aparÄ• maá¹-á¹-hÄ• .

<1519> katame dhammÄ• parÄ• mÄ• sasampayuttÄ• ? cattÄ• ro diá¹-á¹-higatasampayutta parÄ• mÄ• saá¹ƒ á¹-hapetvÄ• --- ime dhammÄ• parÄ• mÄ• sasampayuttÄ• .

<1520> katame dhammÄ• parÄ• mÄ• savippayuttÄ• ? cattÄ• ro diá¹-á¹-higatavippayuttalo 314/, dve domanassasahagatacittuppÄ• dÄ• , vicikicchÄ• sahagato cittuppÄ• do, uddhacca catÅ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kusalaá¹ƒ, catÅ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su vipÄ• ko, tÄ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kiriyÄ• b nibbÄ• naÃ±ca --- ime dhammÄ• parÄ• mÄ• savippayuttÄ• . parÄ• mÄ• so na vattabbo --- parÄ• mÄ• savippayuttotipi.

<1521> katame dhammÄ• parÄ• mÄ• sÄ• ceva parÄ• maá¹-á¹-hÄ• ca? so \Ee 253/ eva p ceva parÄ• maá¹-á¹-ho ca.

<1522> katame dhammÄ• parÄ• maá¹-á¹-hÄ• ceva no ca parÄ• mÄ• sÄ• ? á¹-hapetvÄ• p
akusalaá¹ƒ, tÄ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kusalaá¹ƒ, tÄ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su vipÄ• ko, tÄ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su k rÅ«paá¹ƒ --- ime dhammÄ• parÄ• maá¹-á¹-hÄ• ceva no ca parÄ• mÄ• sÄ• . aparÄ• maá¹-á parÄ• mÄ• sÄ• ceva parÄ• maá¹-á¹-hÄ• cÄ• tipi, parÄ• maá¹-á¹-hÄ• ceva no ca parÄ• mÄ

<1523> katame dhammÄ• parÄ• mÄ• savippayuttÄ• parÄ• maá¹-á¹-hÄ• ? cattÄ• ro
diá¹-á¹-higatavippayuttalobhasahagatacittuppÄ• dÄ• , dve domanassasahagatacittuppÄ• dÄ cittuppÄ• do, uddhaccasahagato cittuppÄ• do, tÄ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kusalaá¹ƒ, tÄ«su bhÅ«mÄ kiriyÄ• byÄ• kataá¹ƒ, sabbaÃ±ca rÅ«paá¹ƒ --- ime dhammÄ• parÄ• mÄ• savippayuttÄ• par

<1524> katame dhammÄ• parÄ• mÄ• savippayuttÄ• aparÄ• maá¹-á¹-hÄ• ? cattÄ• ro mag sÄ• maÃ±Ã±aphalÄ• ni, nibbÄ• naÃ±ca --- ime dhammÄ• parÄ• mÄ• savippayuttÄ• aparÄ parÄ• mÄ• sasampayuttÄ• ca dhammÄ• na vattabbÄ• --- parÄ• mÄ• savippayuttÄ• parÄ parÄ• mÄ• savippayuttÄ• aparÄ• maá¹-á¹-hÄ• tipi.

mahantaradukaá¹ƒ

<1525> katame \Be 287/ dhammÄ• sÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• ? catÅ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kusalaá¹ƒ, al vipÄ• ko, tÄ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kiriyÄ• byÄ• kataá¹ƒ --- ime dhammÄ• sÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• .

<1526> katame \Ne 315/ dhammÄ• anÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• ? rÅ«paÃ±ca, nibbÄ• naÃ±ca --- im
anÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• .

<1527> katame dhammÄ• cittÄ• ? cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ, sotaviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ, ghÄ•
jivhÄ• viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ, kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ, manodhÄ• tu, manoviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡adhÄ•

<1528> katame dhammÄ• no cittÄ• ? vedanÄ• kkhandho, saÃ±Ã±Ä• kkhandho, saá¹…khÅ nibbÄ• naÃ±ca --- ime dhammÄ• no cittÄ• .

<1529> katame dhammÄ• cetasikÄ• ? vedanÄ• kkhandho, saÃ±Ã±Ä• kkhandho, saá¹…kh
cetasikÄ• .

<1530> katame dhammÄ• acetasikÄ• ? cittaÃ±ca, rÅ«paÃ±ca, nibbÄ• naÃ±ca --- ime dha

<1531> katame \Ee 254/ dhammÄ• cittasampayuttÄ• ? vedanÄ• kkhandho, saÃ±Ã±Ä• kkh ime dhammÄ• cittasampayuttÄ• .

<1532> katame dhammÄ• cittavippayuttÄ• ? rÅ«paÃ±ca, nibbÄ• naÃ±ca --- ime dhammÄ• vattabbaá¹ƒ --- cittena sampayuttantipi, cittena vippayuttantipi.

<1533> katame dhammÄ• cittasaá¹ƒsaá¹-á¹-hÄ• ? vedanÄ• kkhandho, saÃ±Ã±Ä• kkhandl dhammÄ• cittasaá¹ƒsaá¹-á¹-hÄ• .

<1534> katame dhammÄ• cittavisaá¹ƒsaá¹-á¹-hÄ• ? rÅ«paÃ±ca, nibbÄ• naÃ±ca --- ime dh
cittavisaá¹ƒsaá¹-á¹-hÄ• . cittaá¹ƒ na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- cittena saá¹ƒsaá¹-á¹-hantipi, cittena
visaá¹ƒsaá¹-á¹-hantipi.

<1535> katame dhammÄ• cittasamuá¹-á¹-hÄ• nÄ• ? vedanÄ• kkhandho, saÃ±Ã±Ä• kkhan kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±atti, vacÄ«viÃ±Ã±atti, yaá¹ƒ vÄ• panaÃ±Ã±ampi atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ cittajaá¹ƒ citta cittasamuá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ \Ne 316/ --- rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ saddÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ gandhÄ• yatana phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ Ä• kÄ• sadhÄ• tu Ä• podhÄ• tu rÅ«passa lahutÄ• rÅ«passa mu rÅ«passa upacayo rÅ«passa santati kabaá¸·Ä«kÄ• ro Ä• hÄ• ro --- ime dhammÄ• cittasam

<1536> katame dhammÄ• no cittasamuá¹-á¹-hÄ• nÄ• ? cittaÃ±ca, avasesaÃ±ca rÅ«paá¹ƒ

no cittasamuá¹-á¹-hÄ• nÄ• .

<1537> katame dhammÄ• cittasahabhuno? vedanÄ• kkhandho, saÃ±Ã±Ä• kkhandho, saá kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±atti, vacÄ«viÃ±Ã±atti --- ime dhammÄ• cittasahabhuno.

<1538> katame dhammÄ• no cittasahabhuno? cittaÃ±ca, avasesaÃ±ca rÅ«paá¹ƒ, nibbÄ• cittasahabhuno.

<1539> katame dhammÄ• cittÄ• nuparivattino? vedanÄ• kkhandho, saÃ±Ã±Ä• kkhandho, kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±atti, vacÄ«viÃ±Ã±atti --- ime dhammÄ• cittÄ• nuparivattino.

<1540> katame dhammÄ• no cittÄ• nuparivattino? cittaÃ±ca, avasesaÃ±ca rÅ«paá¹ƒ, nibb no cittÄ• nuparivattino.

<1541> katame dhammÄ• cittasaá¹ƒsaá¹-á¹-hasamuá¹-á¹-hÄ• nÄ• ? vedanÄ• kkhandho \B saá¹…khÄ• rakkhandho --- ime dhammÄ• cittasaá¹ƒsaá¹-á¹-hasamuá¹-á¹-hÄ• nÄ• .

<1542> katame dhammÄ• no cittasaá¹ƒsaá¹-á¹-hasamuá¹-á¹-hÄ• nÄ• ? cittaÃ±ca, rÅ«paÃ dhammÄ• no cittasaá¹ƒsaá¹-á¹-hasamuá¹-á¹-hÄ• nÄ• .

<1543> katame dhammÄ• cittasaá¹ƒsaá¹-á¹-hasamuá¹-á¹-hÄ• nasahabhuno? vedanÄ• kk saá¹…khÄ• rakkhandho --- ime dhammÄ• cittasaá¹ƒsaá¹-á¹-hasamuá¹-á¹-hÄ• nasahabhun <1544> katame \Ne 317/ dhammÄ• no cittasaá¹ƒsaá¹-á¹-hasamuá¹-á¹-hÄ• nasahabhuno?

369/, nibbÄ• naÃ±ca --- ime dhammÄ• no cittasaá¹ƒsaá¹-á¹-hasamuá¹-á¹-hÄ• nasahabhun

<1545> katame dhammÄ• cittasaá¹ƒsaá¹-á¹-hasamuá¹-á¹-hÄ• nÄ• nuparivattino? vedanÄ•
saá¹…khÄ• rakkhandho --- ime dhammÄ• cittasaá¹ƒsaá¹-á¹-hasamuá¹-á¹-hÄ• nÄ• nupariva

<1546> katame \Be 289/ dhammÄ• no cittasaá¹ƒsaá¹-á¹-hasamuá¹-á¹-hÄ• nÄ• nuparivatti nibbÄ• naÃ±ca --- ime dhammÄ• no cittasaá¹ƒsaá¹-á¹-hasamuá¹-á¹-hÄ• nÄ• nuparivattino.

<1547> katame dhammÄ• ajjhattikÄ• ? cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... manÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ --- im

<1548> katame dhammÄ• bÄ• hirÄ• ? rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... dhammÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ---

<1549> katame dhammÄ• upÄ• dÄ• ? cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... kabaá¸·Ä«kÄ• ro Ä• hÄ

<1550> katame dhammÄ• no upÄ• dÄ• ? catÅ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kusalaá¹ƒ, akusalaá¹ƒ, cat bhÅ«mÄ«su kiriyÄ• byÄ• kataá¹ƒ, cattÄ• ro ca mahÄ• bhÅ«tÄ• , nibbÄ• naÃ±ca --- ime dha

<1551> katame dhammÄ• upÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡Ä• ? tÄ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su vipÄ• ko, yaÃ±ca rÅ«paá dhammÄ• upÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡Ä• .

<1552> katame dhammÄ• anupÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡Ä• ? tÄ«su \Ee 256/ bhÅ«mÄ«su kusalaá¹ƒ, ak kiriyÄ• byÄ• kataá¹ƒ, yaÃ±ca rÅ«paá¹ƒ na kammassa katattÄ• , cattÄ• ro maggÄ• apariyÄ• sÄ• maÃ±Ã±aphalÄ• ni, nibbÄ• naÃ±ca --- ime dhammÄ• anupÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡Ä• .

upÄ• dÄ• nagocchakaá¹ƒ

<1553> katame \Ne 318/ dhammÄ• upÄ• dÄ• nÄ• ? cattÄ• ri upÄ• dÄ• nÄ• ni --- kÄ• mup
diá¹-á¹-hupÄ• dÄ• naá¹ƒ, sÄ«labbatupÄ• dÄ• naá¹ƒ, attavÄ• dupÄ• dÄ• naá¹ƒ. kÄ• mupÄ• lobhasahagatesu cittuppÄ• desu uppajjati. diá¹-á¹-hupÄ• dÄ• naÃ±ca sÄ«labbatupÄ• dÄ• n catÅ«su diá¹-á¹-higatasampayuttesu cittuppÄ• desu uppajjanti --- ime dhammÄ• upÄ• dÄ•

<1554> katame dhammÄ• no upÄ• dÄ• nÄ• ? á¹-hapetvÄ• upÄ• dÄ• ne avasesaá¹ƒ akus
kusalaá¹ƒ, catÅ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su vipÄ• ko, tÄ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kiriyÄ• byÄ• kataá¹ƒ, rÅ«paÃ± dhammÄ• no upÄ• dÄ• nÄ• .

<1555> katame \Be 290/ dhammÄ• upÄ• dÄ• niyÄ• ? tÄ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kusalaá¹ƒ, akusa
tÄ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kiriyÄ• byÄ• kataá¹ƒ, sabbaÃ±ca rÅ«paá¹ƒ --- ime dhammÄ• upÄ• dÄ•

<1556> katame dhammÄ• anupÄ• dÄ• niyÄ• ? cattÄ• ro maggÄ• apariyÄ• pannÄ• , cattÄ nibbÄ• naÃ±ca --- ime dhammÄ• anupÄ• dÄ• niyÄ• .

<1557> katame dhammÄ• upÄ• dÄ• nasampayuttÄ• ? cattÄ• ro diá¹-á¹-higatasampayuttal cattÄ• ro diá¹-á¹-higatavippayuttalobhasahagatacittuppÄ• dÄ• , etthuppannaá¹ƒ lobhaá¹ƒ á¹ dhammÄ• upÄ• dÄ• nasampayuttÄ• .

<1558> katame dhammÄ• upÄ• dÄ• navippayuttÄ• ? catÅ«su diá¹-á¹-higatavippayuttalobh uppanno lobho, dve domanassasahagatacittuppÄ• dÄ• , vicikicchÄ• sahagato cittuppÄ• do, cittuppÄ• do, catÅ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kusalaá¹ƒ, catÅ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su vipÄ• ko, tÄ«su bhÅ«m rÅ«paÃ±ca, nibbÄ• naÃ±ca --- ime dhammÄ• \Se 371/ upÄ• dÄ• navippayuttÄ• .

<1559> katame dhammÄ• upÄ• dÄ• nÄ• ceva upÄ• dÄ• niyÄ• ca? tÄ• neva upÄ• dÄ• n

<1560> katame \Ne 319/ dhammÄ• upÄ• dÄ• niyÄ• ceva no ca upÄ• dÄ• nÄ• ? á¹-hapetv
akusalaá¹ƒ, tÄ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kusalaá¹ƒ, tÄ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su vipÄ• ko, tÄ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su k rÅ«paá¹ƒ --- ime dhammÄ• upÄ• dÄ• niyÄ• ceva no ca upÄ• dÄ• nÄ• \Ee 257/. anupÄ• dÄ upÄ• dÄ• nÄ• ceva upÄ• dÄ• niyÄ• cÄ• tipi, upÄ• dÄ• niyÄ• ceva no ca upÄ• dÄ• nÄ• tip

<1561> katame dhammÄ• upÄ• dÄ• nÄ• ceva upÄ• dÄ• nasampayuttÄ• ca? yattha diá¹---- ime dhammÄ• upÄ• dÄ• nÄ• ceva upÄ• dÄ• nasampayuttÄ• ca.

<1562> katame dhammÄ• upÄ• dÄ• nasampayuttÄ• ceva no ca upÄ• dÄ• nÄ• ? aá¹-á¹-h etthuppanne upÄ• dÄ• ne á¹-hapetvÄ• --- ime dhammÄ• upÄ• dÄ• nasampayuttÄ• ceva n upÄ• dÄ• navippayuttÄ• dhammÄ• na vattabbÄ• --- upÄ• dÄ• nÄ• ceva upÄ• dÄ• nasam upÄ• dÄ• nasampayuttÄ• ceva no ca upÄ• dÄ• nÄ• tipi.

<1563> katame \Be 291/ dhammÄ• upÄ• dÄ• navippayuttÄ• upÄ• dÄ• niyÄ• ? catÅ«su diá¹-á¹-higatavippayuttalobhasahagatesu cittuppÄ• desu uppanno lobho, dve domanassasa
vicikicchÄ• sahagato cittuppÄ• do, uddhaccasahagato cittuppÄ• do, tÄ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kus vipÄ• ko, tÄ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kiriyÄ• byÄ• kataá¹ƒ, sabbaÃ±ca rÅ«paá¹ƒ --- ime dhammÄ• u upÄ• dÄ• niyÄ• .

<1564> katame dhammÄ• upÄ• dÄ• navippayuttÄ• anupÄ• dÄ• niyÄ• ? cattÄ• ro maggÄ• sÄ• maÃ±Ã±aphalÄ• ni, nibbÄ• naÃ±ca --- ime dhammÄ• upÄ• dÄ• navippayuttÄ• anupÄ• dhammÄ• na vattabbÄ• --- upÄ• dÄ• navippayuttÄ• upÄ• dÄ• niyÄ• tipi, upÄ• dÄ• navipp

kilesagocchakaá¹ƒ

<1565> katame dhammÄ• kilesÄ• ? dasa kilesavatthÅ«ni --- lobho, doso, moho, mÄ• no, d thinaá¹ƒ, uddhaccaá¹ƒ, ahirikaá¹ƒ, anottappaá¹ƒ. lobho aá¹-á¹-hasu lobhasahagatesu cittupp uppajjati. doso dvÄ«su domanassasahagatesu cittuppÄ• desu uppajjati. moho sabbÄ• kusa catÅ«su diá¹-á¹-higatavippayuttalobhasahagatesu cittuppÄ• desu uppajjati. diá¹-á¹-hi catÅ«s diá¹-á¹-higatasampayuttesu cittuppÄ• desu uppajjati. vicikicchÄ• vicikicchÄ• sahagatesu cit thinaá¹ƒ sasaá¹…khÄ• rikesu akusalesu uppajjati. uddhaccaÃ±ca ahirikaÃ±ca anottappaÃ±c uppajjanti --- ime dhammÄ• kilesÄ• .

<1566> katame dhammÄ• no kilesÄ• ? á¹-hapetvÄ• \Ee 258/ kilese avasesaá¹ƒ akusalaá¹
kusalaá¹ƒ, catÅ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su vipÄ• ko, tÄ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kiriyÄ• byÄ• kataá¹ƒ, rÅ«paÃ± dhammÄ• no kilesÄ• .

<1567> katame dhammÄ• saá¹ƒkilesikÄ• ? tÄ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kusalaá¹ƒ, akusalaá¹ƒ, tÄ«s bhÅ«mÄ«su kiriyÄ• byÄ• kataá¹ƒ sabbaÃ±ca rÅ«paá¹ƒ --- ime \Se 373/ dhammÄ• saá¹ƒkile

<1568> katame dhammÄ• asaá¹ƒkilesikÄ• ? cattÄ• ro maggÄ• apariyÄ• pannÄ• , cattÄ• r nibbÄ• naÃ±ca --- ime dhammÄ• asaá¹ƒkilesikÄ• .

<1569> katame \Be 292/ dhammÄ• saá¹ƒkiliá¹-á¹-hÄ• ? dvÄ• dasa akusalacittuppÄ• dÄ• - saá¹ƒkiliá¹-á¹-hÄ• .

<1570> katame dhammÄ• asaá¹ƒkiliá¹-á¹-hÄ• ? catÅ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kusalaá¹ƒ, catÅ«su b bhÅ«mÄ«su kiriyÄ• byÄ• kataá¹ƒ, rÅ«paÃ±ca, nibbÄ• naÃ±ca --- ime dhammÄ• asaá¹ƒkiliá

<1571> katame dhammÄ• kilesasampayuttÄ• ? dvÄ• dasa akusalacittuppÄ• dÄ• --- ime d

<1572> katame dhammÄ• kilesavippayuttÄ• ? catÅ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kusalaá¹ƒ, catÅ«su bh bhÅ«mÄ«su kiriyÄ• byÄ• kataá¹ƒ, rÅ«paÃ±ca, nibbÄ• naÃ±ca --- ime dhammÄ• kilesavippa

<1573> katame \Ne 321/ dhammÄ• kilesÄ• ceva saá¹ƒkilesikÄ• ca? teva kilesÄ• kilesÄ•

<1574> katame dhammÄ• saá¹ƒkilesikÄ• ceva no ca kilesÄ• ? á¹-hapetvÄ• kilese avases
bhÅ«mÄ«su kusalaá¹ƒ, tÄ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su vipÄ• ko, tÄ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kiriyÄ• byÄ• kataá¹ dhammÄ• saá¹ƒkilesikÄ• ceva no ca kilesÄ• . asaá¹ƒkilesikÄ• dhammÄ• na vattabbÄ• -- saá¹ƒkilesikÄ• cÄ• tipi, saá¹ƒkilesikÄ• ceva no ca kilesÄ• tipi.

<1575> katame dhammÄ• kilesÄ• ceva saá¹ƒkiliá¹-á¹-hÄ• ca? teva kilesÄ• kilesÄ• ceva

<1576> katame dhammÄ• saá¹ƒkiliá¹-á¹-hÄ• ceva no ca kilesÄ• ? á¹-hapetvÄ• kilese ava dhammÄ• saá¹ƒkiliá¹-á¹-hÄ• ceva no ca kilesÄ• \Se 374/. asaá¹ƒkiliá¹-á¹-hÄ• dhammÄ• n ceva saá¹ƒkiliá¹-á¹-hÄ• cÄ• tipi, saá¹ƒkiliá¹-á¹-hÄ• ceva no ca kilesÄ• tipi.

<1577> katame \Ee 259/ dhammÄ• kilesÄ• ceva kilesasampayuttÄ• ca? yattha dve tayo
--- ime dhammÄ• kilesÄ• ceva kilesasampayuttÄ• ca.

<1578> katame \Be 293/ dhammÄ• kilesasampayuttÄ• ceva no ca kilesÄ• ? á¹-hapetvÄ•
--- ime dhammÄ• kilesasampayuttÄ• ceva no ca kilesÄ• . kilesavippayuttÄ• dhammÄ• na kilesasampayuttÄ• cÄ• tipi, kilesasampayuttÄ• ceva no ca kilesÄ• tipi.

<1579> katame dhammÄ• kilesavippayuttÄ• saá¹ƒkilesikÄ• ? tÄ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kusalaá¹
tÄ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kiriyÄ• byÄ• kataá¹ƒ, sabbaÃ±ca rÅ«paá¹ƒ --- ime dhammÄ• kilesavippa

<1580> katame dhammÄ• kilesavippayuttÄ• asaá¹ƒkilesikÄ• ? cattÄ• ro maggÄ• apariyÄ sÄ• maÃ±Ã±aphalÄ• ni, nibbÄ• naÃ±ca --- ime dhammÄ• kilesavippayuttÄ• asaá¹ƒkilesikÄ na vattabbÄ• --- kilesavippayuttÄ• saá¹ƒkilesikÄ• tipi, kilesavippayuttÄ• asaá¹ƒkilesikÄ• tip

piá¹-á¹-hidukaá¹ƒ

<1581> katame dhammÄ• dassanena pahÄ• tabbÄ• ? cattÄ• ro diá¹-á¹-higatasampayuttac
vicikicchÄ• sahagato cittuppÄ• do --- ime dhammÄ• dassanena pahÄ• tabbÄ• . cattÄ• ro
diá¹-á¹-higatavippayuttalobhasahagatacittuppÄ• dÄ• , dve domanassasahagatacittuppÄ• dÄ siyÄ• dassanena pahÄ• tabbÄ• , siyÄ• na dassanena pahÄ• tabbÄ• .

<1582> katame dhammÄ• na dassanena pahÄ• tabbÄ• ? uddhaccasahagato cittuppÄ• do catÅ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su vipÄ• ko, tÄ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kiriyÄ• byÄ• kataá¹ƒ, rÅ«paÃ±ca, nibbÄ• dassanena pahÄ• tabbÄ• .

<1583> katame dhammÄ• bhÄ• vanÄ• ya pahÄ• tabbÄ• ? uddhaccasahagato cittuppÄ• do pahÄ• tabbÄ• . cattÄ• ro diá¹-á¹-higatavippayuttalobhasahagatacittuppÄ• dÄ• , dve domana ime dhammÄ• siyÄ• bhÄ• vanÄ• ya pahÄ• tabbÄ• , siyÄ• na bhÄ• vanÄ• ya pahÄ• tabbÄ

<1584> katame \Be 294/ dhammÄ• na bhÄ• vanÄ• ya pahÄ• tabbÄ• ? cattÄ• ro diá¹-á¹-hig vicikicchÄ• sahagato cittuppÄ• do, catÅ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kusalaá¹ƒ, catÅ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su vip kiriyÄ• byÄ• kataá¹ƒ, rÅ«paÃ±ca, nibbÄ• naÃ±ca --- ime dhammÄ• na bhÄ• vanÄ• ya pahÄ

<1585> katame \Ee 260/ dhammÄ• dassanena pahÄ• tabbahetukÄ• ? cattÄ• ro diá¹-á¹-hig
vicikicchÄ• sahagato cittuppÄ• do, etthuppannaá¹ƒ mohaá¹ƒ á¹-hapetvÄ• --- ime dhammÄ•
pahÄ• tabbahetukÄ• . cattÄ• ro diá¹-á¹-higatavippayuttalobhasahagatacittuppÄ• dÄ• , dve domanassasahagatacittuppÄ• dÄ• --- ime dhammÄ• siyÄ• dassanena pahÄ• tabbahetukÄ pahÄ• tabbahetukÄ• .

<1586> katame \Ne 323/ dhammÄ• na dassanena pahÄ• tabbahetukÄ• ? vicikicchÄ• saha cittuppÄ• do, catÅ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kusalaá¹ƒ, catÅ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su vipÄ• ko, tÄ«su \Se 376 kiriyÄ• byÄ• kataá¹ƒ, rÅ«paÃ±ca, nibbÄ• naÃ±ca --- ime dhammÄ• na dassanena pahÄ• ta

<1587> katame dhammÄ• bhÄ• vanÄ• ya pahÄ• tabbahetukÄ• ? uddhaccasahagato cittup á¹-hapetvÄ• --- ime dhammÄ• bhÄ• vanÄ• ya pahÄ• tabbahetukÄ• . cattÄ• ro
diá¹-á¹-higatavippayuttalobhasahagatacittuppÄ• dÄ• , dve domanassasahagatacittuppÄ• dÄ bhÄ• vanÄ• ya pahÄ• tabbahetukÄ• , siyÄ• na bhÄ• vanÄ• ya pahÄ• tabbahetukÄ• .

<1588> katame dhammÄ• na bhÄ• vanÄ• ya pahÄ• tabbahetukÄ• ? cattÄ• ro diá¹-á¹-higat vicikicchÄ• sahagato cittuppÄ• do, uddhaccasahagato moho, catÅ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kusalaá
vipÄ• ko, tÄ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kiriyÄ• byÄ• kataá¹ƒ, rÅ«paÃ±ca, nibbÄ• naÃ±ca --- ime dham
pahÄ• tabbahetukÄ• .

<1589> katame dhammÄ• savitakkÄ• ? kÄ• mÄ• vacarakusalaá¹ƒ, akusalaá¹ƒ, kÄ• mÄ• v cittuppÄ• dÄ• , akusalassa vipÄ• kato dve, kiriyato ekÄ• dasa, rÅ«pÄ• vacaraá¹ƒ paá¹-hama vipÄ• kato ca kiriyato ca lokuttaraá¹ƒ paá¹-hamaá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ kusalato ca vipÄ• kato ca, e vitakkaá¹ƒ á¹-hapetvÄ• --- ime dhammÄ• savitakkÄ• .

<1590> katame \Be 295/ dhammÄ• avitakkÄ• ? dvepaÃ±caviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡Ä• ni, rÅ«pÄ• vac ca vipÄ• kato ca kiriyato ca, cattÄ• ro arÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• kusalato ca vipÄ• kato ca kiriyato c lokuttaratikacatukkajjhÄ• nÄ• \Se 377/ kusalato ca vipÄ• kato ca, vitakko ca, rÅ«paÃ±ca, ni dhammÄ• avitakkÄ• .

<1591> katame dhammÄ• savicÄ• rÄ• ? kÄ• mÄ• vacarakusalaá¹ƒ \Ee 261/, akusalaá¹ƒ, k ekÄ• dasa cittuppÄ• dÄ• , akusalassa vipÄ• kato dve kiriyato ekÄ• dasa, rÅ«pÄ• vacaraeka vipÄ• kato ca kiriyato ca, lokuttaraekakadukajjhÄ• nÄ• kusalato ca vipÄ• kato ca, etthuppan á¹-hapetvÄ• --- ime dhammÄ• savicÄ• rÄ• .

<1592> katame \Ne 324/ dhammÄ• avicÄ• rÄ• ? dvepaÃ±caviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡Ä• ni, rÅ«pÄ• va vipÄ• kato ca kiriyato ca, cattÄ• ro Ä• ruppÄ• kusalato ca vipÄ• kato ca kiriyato ca, lokuttar kusalato ca vipÄ• kato ca, vicÄ• ro ca, rÅ«paÃ±ca, nibbÄ• naÃ±ca --- ime dhammÄ• avicÄ•

<1593> katame dhammÄ• sappÄ«tikÄ• ? kÄ• mÄ• vacarakusalato cattÄ• ro somanassasa cattÄ• ro, kÄ• mÄ• vacarakusalassa vipÄ• kato paÃ±ca, kiriyato paÃ±ca, rÅ«pÄ• vacaraduk vipÄ• kato ca kiriyato ca, lokuttaradukatikajjhÄ• nÄ• kusalato ca vipÄ• kato ca, etthuppanna á¹-hapetvÄ• --- ime dhammÄ• sappÄ«tikÄ• .

<1594> katame dhammÄ• appÄ«tikÄ• ? kÄ• mÄ• vacarakusalato cattÄ• ro upekkhÄ• saha aá¹-á¹-ha, kÄ• mÄ• vacarakusalassa vipÄ• kato ekÄ• dasa, akusalassa vipÄ• kato satta, kir rÅ«pÄ• vacaradukadukajjhÄ• nÄ• kusalato \Se 378/ ca vipÄ• kato ca kiriyato ca, cattÄ• ro vipÄ• kato ca kiriyato ca, lokuttaradukadukajjhÄ• nÄ• kusalato ca vipÄ• kato ca pÄ«ti ca, rÅ
--- ime dhammÄ• appÄ«tikÄ• .

<1595> katame \Be 296/ dhammÄ• pÄ«tisahagatÄ• ? kÄ• mÄ• vacarakusalato cattÄ• ro s akusalato cattÄ• ro, kÄ• mÄ• vacarakusalassa vipÄ• kato paÃ±ca, kiriyato paÃ±ca, rÅ«pÄ• kusalato ca vipÄ• kato ca kiriyato ca, lokuttaradukatikajjhÄ• nÄ• kusalato ca vipÄ• kato ca, pÄ«tiá¹ƒ á¹-hapetvÄ• --- ime dhammÄ• pÄ«tisahagatÄ• .

<1596> katame dhammÄ• na pÄ«tisahagatÄ• ? kÄ• mÄ• vacarakusalato cattÄ• ro upekkh akusalato aá¹-á¹-ha, kÄ• mÄ• vacarakusalassa vipÄ• kato ekÄ• dasa, akusalassa vipÄ• kat rÅ«pÄ• vacaradukadukajjhÄ• nÄ• kusalato ca vipÄ• kato ca kiriyato ca, cattÄ• ro Ä• ruppÄ vipÄ• kato ca kiriyato ca, lokuttaradukadukajjhÄ• nÄ• \Ne 325/ kusalato ca vipÄ• kato ca, p nibbÄ• naÃ±ca --- ime dhammÄ• na pÄ«tisahagatÄ• .

<1597> katame dhammÄ• sukhasahagatÄ• ? kÄ• mÄ• vacarakusalato cattÄ• ro somanas
cattÄ• ro, kÄ• mÄ• vacarakusalassa vipÄ• kato cha, kiriyato paÃ±ca, rÅ«pÄ• vacaratikacatu vipÄ• kato ca kiriyato ca lokuttaratikacatukkajjhÄ• nÄ• kusalato ca vipÄ• kato ca, etthuppar á¹-hapetvÄ• --- ime dhammÄ• \Se 379/ sukhasahagatÄ• .

<1598> katame dhammÄ• na sukhasahagatÄ• ? kÄ• mÄ• vacarakusalato cattÄ• ro upekk akusalato aá¹-á¹-ha, kÄ• mÄ• vacarakusalassa vipÄ• kato dasa, akusalassa vipÄ• kato satt
rÅ«pÄ• vacaraá¹ƒ catutthaá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ kusalato ca vipÄ• kato ca kiriyato ca, cattÄ• ro Ä• vipÄ• kato ca kiriyato ca lokuttaraá¹ƒ catutthaá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ kusalato ca vipÄ• kato ca, sukh nibbÄ• naÃ±ca --- ime dhammÄ• na sukhasahagatÄ• .

<1599> katame dhammÄ• upekkhÄ• sahagatÄ• ? kÄ• mÄ• vacarakusalato cattÄ• ro upek akusalato cha, kÄ• mÄ• vacarakusalassa vipÄ• kato dasa, akusalassa vipÄ• kato cha, kiriya
rÅ«pÄ• vacaraá¹ƒ catutthaá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ kusalato ca vipÄ• kato ca kiriyato ca, cattÄ• ro Ä•
vipÄ• kato ca kiriyato ca, lokuttaraá¹ƒ catutthaá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ kusalato ca vipÄ• kato ca, etth upekkhaá¹ƒ á¹-hapetvÄ• --- ime dhammÄ• upekkhÄ• sahagatÄ• .

<1600> katame dhammÄ• na upekkhÄ• sahagatÄ• ? kÄ• mÄ• vacarakusalato cattÄ• ro so akusalato cha, kÄ• mÄ• vacarakusalassa vipÄ• kato cha, akusalassa vipÄ• kato eko, kiriyat
rÅ«pÄ• vacaratikacatukkajjhÄ• nÄ• kusalato ca vipÄ• kato ca kiriyato ca, lokuttaratikacatuk
vipÄ• kato ca, upekkhÄ• ca, rÅ«paÃ±ca, nibbÄ• naÃ±ca --- ime dhammÄ• na upekkhÄ• sa

<1601> katame \Ne 326/ dhammÄ• kÄ• mÄ• vacarÄ• ? kÄ• mÄ• vacarakusalaá¹ƒ, akusala kÄ• mÄ• vacarassa vipÄ• ko, kÄ• mÄ• vacarakiriyÄ• byÄ• kataá¹ƒ, sabbaÃ±ca rÅ«paá¹ƒ ---

<1602> katame dhammÄ• na kÄ• mÄ• vacarÄ• ? rÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• \Ee 263/, arÅ«pÄ• vaca dhammÄ• na kÄ• mÄ• vacarÄ• .

<1603> katame dhammÄ• rÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• ? rÅ«pÄ• vacaracatukkapaÃ±cakajjhÄ• nÄ• ku

--- ime dhammÄ• rÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• .

<1604> katame dhammÄ• na rÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• ? kÄ• mÄ• vacarÄ• , arÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• , apa rÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• .

<1605> katame dhammÄ• arÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• ? cattÄ• ro Ä• ruppÄ• kusalato ca vipÄ• kato arÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• .

<1606> katame dhammÄ• na arÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• ? kÄ• mÄ• vacarÄ• , rÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• , apa
arÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• .

<1607> katame dhammÄ• pariyÄ• pannÄ• ? tÄ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kusalaá¹ƒ, akusalaá¹ƒ, tÄ bhÅ«mÄ«su kiriyÄ• byÄ• kataá¹ƒ, sabbaÃ±ca rÅ«paá¹ƒ --- ime dhammÄ• pariyÄ• pannÄ• .

<1608> katame dhammÄ• apariyÄ• pannÄ• ? cattÄ• ro maggÄ• apariyÄ• pannÄ• , cattÄ• nibbÄ• naÃ±ca --- ime dhammÄ• apariyÄ• pannÄ• .

<1609> katame \Be 298/ dhammÄ• niyyÄ• nikÄ• ? cattÄ• ro maggÄ• apariyÄ• pannÄ• ---

<1610> katame dhammÄ• aniyyÄ• nikÄ• ? tÄ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kusalaá¹ƒ, akusalaá¹ƒ, catÅ
vipÄ• ko, tÄ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kiriyÄ• byÄ• kataá¹ƒ, rÅ«paÃ±ca, nibbÄ• naÃ±ca --- ime dham

<1611> katame \Se 381/ dhammÄ• niyatÄ• ? cattÄ• ro diá¹-á¹-higatasampayuttacittuppÄ• domanassasahagatacittuppÄ• dÄ• --- ime dhammÄ• siyÄ• niyatÄ• siyÄ• aniyatÄ• . cattÄ ime dhammÄ• niyatÄ• .

<1612> katame dhammÄ• aniyatÄ• ? cattÄ• ro diá¹-á¹-higatavippayuttalobhasahagatacittu
vicikicchÄ• sahagato cittuppÄ• do, uddhaccasahagato cittuppÄ• do, tÄ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kus
vipÄ• ko, tÄ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kiriyÄ• byÄ• kataá¹ƒ, rÅ«paÃ±ca, nibbÄ• naÃ±ca --- ime dham

<1613> katame dhammÄ• sauttarÄ• ? tÄ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kusalaá¹ƒ, akusalaá¹ƒ, tÄ«su bh 264/ bhÅ«mÄ«su kiriyÄ• byÄ• kataá¹ƒ, sabbaÃ±ca rÅ«paá¹ƒ --- ime dhammÄ• sauttarÄ• .

<1614> katame dhammÄ• anuttarÄ• ? cattÄ• ro maggÄ• apariyÄ• pannÄ• , cattÄ• ri ca sA
--- ime dhammÄ• anuttarÄ• .

<1615> katame dhammÄ• saraá¹‡Ä• ? dvÄ• dasa akusalacittuppÄ• dÄ• --- ime dhammÄ•

<1616> katame dhammÄ• araá¹‡Ä• ? catÅ«su bhÅ«mÄ«su kusalaá¹ƒ, catÅ«su bhÅ«mÄ« kiriyÄ• byÄ• kataá¹ƒ, rÅ«paÃ±ca, nibbÄ• naÃ±ca --- ime dhammÄ• araá¹‡Ä• .

atthuddhÄ• ro niá¹-á¹-hito.

dhammasaá¹…gaá¹‡Ä«pakaraá¹‡aá¹ƒ niá¹-á¹-hitaá¹ƒ.

Doing Mrs. Pierce (I was forced to help the girls' injured coach) byalwayswantedto©

All characters are 18 or older.

Mrs. Pierce was a real piece of work. That's all there was to it. She was the girls' softball coa reason they had been the most winning team in county history but that didn't change the fac real bitch. All the girls hated Mrs. Pierce, partly because of her nasty temper but mostly beca cutting, condescending remarks but each member of the team played their very best to avoi of her ridicule.

The girls weren't the only ones scared of Mrs. Pierce; us guys were afraid of her too. Nobod dressed down by that little dynamo, and I do mean undressed. By the time she finished with like you'd been stripped naked and your poor, frightened little willy, looking like it had been s arctic waters for months, would be on display for all to see. Nope, nobody wanted to cross M that's why I was scared out of my wits after I left Coach's office.

"Emerson," he had yelled as we all started for the showers. "Come see me when you're don "Can't you get someone else, Coach?" I had pleaded after he made my assignment known.

"Of course I can," he retorted, fixing me with his steely glare. "But I'm sending you!"

"Right, Coach," I backed down immediately.

"Saturday morning. Here's the address." He held out a wrinkled piece of paper torn from the coffee-stained pad. "Be there at nine sharp."

I read the address scrawled on the scruffy piece of paper.

"Don't let me down, Paul," Coach added in a softer tone. "The school needs Mrs. Pierce in t if both the teams are to win five years in a row. It'll be pretty hard for anyone to match that re

"I won't Coach," I promised.

"Make sure you don't," his parting warning sounded ominous.

Before I reached the door, he said, "She's not as bad as they make her out to be."

I didn't believe that for a second and Coach's lopsided smile wasn't encouraging either. I op walked down the hall, my heart filled with dread.

- -

As I walked down the tree-lined avenue, I checked the numbers on each house. The leaves color despite the warmth imparted by the still strong sun. I was almost there, at Mrs. Pierce's injures herself and I have to do chores for her? It wasn't fair. I knew I couldn't be forced to bu wanted to stay on the team, I had to do Coach's bidding and keep quiet about it. There it wa rambling rancher on a large lot with shrubs lining the curved walkway to the front door and fl bordering the house itself. I walked up to the door, careful not to tread on the grass, vacillati ringing the bell and knocking on the door. Which would be least disturbing? I pressed the do at the series of clanging chimes my tentative touch had set off. The door opened and she wa managing to appear haughty and aloof despite her diminutive frame.

"Yes?" she inquired, one hand holding the partially open door.

"I'm Paul," I said, pausing to await her recognition of who I was and why I was there but her didn't change.

"Uh... Coach sent me."

"Oh yes, of course. I'll meet you out back. There's a gate around the side." Mrs. Pierce wave and then abruptly closed the door.

I stared at the door for a few seconds, then shuffled around the side of the house, unlatched walked into the back yard. There was a swimming pool filled with sparkling turquoise water i large yard rimmed with tall hedges and flower gardens, nicely set off by a large willow tree a a picnic table set under the shade of its drooping branches. I stopped to survey the beauty o the front of the property, although nice, hadn't prepared me for. This had to be the nicest yar street, by far. Mrs. Pierce appeared through the French doors at the rear of the house and w across the cement patio favoring her right heel. That was the only evidence of her injury that walked to the far side of the pool and stopped, ignoring me as she surveyed the flower gard behind her and quietly waited for her to acknowledge my presence.

"Do you think you can mow the lawn without scarring the edges or blowing grass on the flow

"I'll be careful," I replied. The last thing I needed was for her to complain to Coach. "It's a ver yard," I added, sucking up and trying to provide assurance that I meant it when I said I'd be

"I won't let my husband do it. He doesn't understand the commitment required to achieve a l meticulous you have to be at every step, and the constant diligence, so... well, he doesn't ap Nor, I suppose, do you, so if you can't do it, just say so before you ruin it."

Mrs. Pierce turned and fixed her gaze on me. It seemed now that she was the taller person.
shuffled my feet.

"I can do it."

"All right, but remember, doing a job properly is better than getting it done quickly."

I nodded.

"You'll find everything you need in the shed," she said, dismissively, waving her hand toward of the yard as she brushed by me. I turned to watch her go. I meant to fix her with an evil ey wasn't looking but that changed as she walked away. Even with a slight limp, her shapely le Mrs. Pierce may be a bitch but she was a damn good looking one. Despite her age, her bod of years and years of fine-tuned, proper physical exercise. The twin lines from the side of he corners of her mouth indicated her true age but her body exuded youthful strength. The girls team said there wasn't a single position Mrs. Pierce couldn't play better than any girl in the le believed it watching those tight shorts track back to the house and only tore my eyes away w saw my reflection in the glass door.

It took me way longer than I thought to finish the lawn. I was petrified of accidentally lowering unevenly over the edges along the garden in order not to scar the grass. Thankfully, I was s as I shut the mower off, Mrs. Pierce appeared. She strode purposely to the edge of the gras the house. As I gathered the electric cord, I watched her, admiring her legs, a crazy thing to if she caught me scoping her body. Coach would understand but he'd have my ass anyway.

Mrs Pierce walked around the edge of the yard. I put the mower away and followed her for t yard about a dozen feet back. As she scrutinized the edge of the grass, I perused her taut le tight yet supple butt. At the opposite end of the yard, and not before, Mrs. Pierce turned to m

"You did a fine job. You should be pleased," she said. "Come back after lunch and we'll see gardening."

I guess I wasn't going to get a cold drink, let alone any lunch, or even a thank you. Oh, well.
off leaving than trying to eat in her domineering presence. I watched her walk to the house b before she entered in case she turned around to impart further instructions. I felt ridiculous w because the front of my shorts kept swelling up. Come on, man, I chided myself. She's over was too scared to get an erection while I was in her yard looking at her PE-teacher butt. Tha

- -

After lunch, I walked directly into the back yard without announcing myself. Mrs. Pierce was cushioned lounge in the back yard, one of two set on the patio at the end of the pool neares head end was raised up about a foot or so allowing Mrs. Pierce to lay comfortably yet still re or look at her garden. I walked up quietly and stood several feet away behind and to one sid her to notice I was there but soon realized she must be sleeping. About to cough to announc stopped myself, afraid of her wrath if she didn't want to be disturbed. I thought about creepin knocking on the gate but in the end just stood there.

Mrs. Pierce was wearing a tank top and a pair of shorts that were neither tight nor loose arou tanned and bare midriff bristled with tiny reddish blonde hairs a little lighter than the color of shoulder-length hair. She had obviously never had children, at least, none that could conque her abs. Her breasts sat proudly upon her chest, falling slightly to the sides but sweeping up tank top in a very pleasing manner. Her left arm was stretched up and bent back to allow he behind her head, a posture which pushed the nipple on that side nicely into the tank top in s whose dim outline I could discern underneath.

Mrs. Pierce's right leg was bent so that the sole of her foot fit snugly under the calf of her lef parted thighs were covered in a sprinkling of fine hairs similar to that visible on her stomach more brightly in the sun. I stared long enough to notice that their distribution became more s legs approached their natural juncture. My eyes had just traveled up onto the swollen front o shorts when she spoke without turning to look at me.

"It's alright. I'm not sleeping."

"Oh, I... uh..."

"Come around here where I can see you," Mrs. Pierce gestured for me to walk in front of the

She regarded me with a faint smile for several long seconds and I began to blush, realizing s aware of my presence for some time and perhaps knew I had been looking at her. Thankfull the garden just as my cheeks began to glow.

"I think we should start down there in the corner, in case you mess up."

Mrs. Pierce got up awkwardly and stood, favoring her heel more than she had in the mornin the end of the yard and I followed. When we got to the corner, she told me what to do. There garden tools already there. She bent to retrieve the appropriate tool and handed it to me, the toward her chair but stumbled after two steps. Quickly, I stepped forward and grabbed her, o her flailing arm and the other circling around her waist to keep her from falling. Regaining he angrily flung my hands away.

"I'm fine," she barked.

Mrs. Pierce took two more steps and fell to one knee. I waited, unmoving. She held one arm

"Help me up, please," she said, tersely.

I took the offered hand and braced the other under her elbow, pulling her up.

"Perhaps, I do need a little help," she said, her admission surprising the hell out of me.

We started walking but she quickly stopped.

"Actually, bring my chair over here. I'll need to give you instructions."

I brought the lounge and Mrs. Pierce set herself down, carefully keeping her right heel eleva ground. I turned around and got to work. The afternoon whiled away with me working and M periodically giving instructions, but less and less often as time wore on. I was acutely consci attention and tried my best to work around the flowers without disturbing a single petal.

About every half hour, Mrs. Pierce got up and I moved her chair a few feet farther along so s enough to see what I was doing. On the third move, she was napping. Still on my knees, I to at her. Her knees were drawn up and held tightly together, blocking my view of her face and which was good should she suddenly open her eyes. However, though her knees were held feet were spaced as widely as they could be while remaining on the lounge cushion, offering view of the back of Mrs. Pierce's well-muscled thighs. Something in my shorts began to stir, mouse.

Mrs. Pierce had slid down in the lounge, forcing her shorts tightly against her legs and pelvis the outline of her panty legs under the shorts and the form of her mature pussy pressing aga restraining material. The tip of my tongue slipped through my lips and my cock grew an inch my shorts. I imagined myself hovering over her, looking down while those puffy panties — s the shorts had disappeared — strained upward to meet my bulging loins.

"That should be enough for today. You've done a fine job."

Her voice shocked me back to reality. Mrs. Pierce was looking at me through her open legs, parted without my awareness. My face flushed red.

"I can do more if you want," I protested.

"Nonsense. You've worked so hard your face is red."

Mrs. Pierce struggled to get up and I leapt to my feet to help her.

"Thank you, Paul."

The sound of my name on her lips sent a shiver through me.

"Can you help me to the house?"

This time, Mrs. Pierce didn't object when I slipped my arm around her waist. I paused at the she indicated that I should help her right into the house. She guided me toward a large stuff living room near the front door. The place was elegantly furnished. Very tasteful, even to my eyes. I knew my mom would like it and that meant it was very good.

"Can you come again next week?" she asked.

"I can come over tomorrow, if you like." I hoped I didn't sound too eager.

"No, my husband is home tomorrow," she said, as if that fact required no further explanation

I was strangely disappointed having to wait a whole week to work for this so-called "bitch".

"Well, I could come over Wednesday afternoon. My classes are over at noon and I think Coa skipped practice."

"That's very thoughtful but you shouldn't skip practice."

"Coach says I don't need any more practice," I said proudly.

Mrs. Pierce smiled.

"Well then, ok, Paul."

This time my name had a throaty sound to it. All the way home, I replayed that sound over a
I had to adjust my shorts several times but in the end gave up, allowing my erection to bulge down my right leg. Why did they think she was such a bitch? For that matter, why had I thou she was this overly tough little woman running rough shod over the girls. She looked fit in he wear but not sexy but in her own backyard she could be soft and yielding, feminine and sexy wait until Wednesday.

- -

Wednesday couldn't come soon enough. If it had been any longer, I would have worn my pe was waiting on the lounge which was situated right where I'd left off on Saturday. There was looked like lemonade beside a glass with a lime in it on a small round glass-topped table . W I noticed that there was an extra glass on the table but it was empty.

Mrs. Pierce was wearing a halter top. One of her legs was stretched out and the foot of the o beside its knee, holding its own bent knee up against which a magazine was pressed.

"Good afternoon, Paul," she said as I approached.

I acknowledged her greeting but quickly knelt down to begin gardening when further convers forthcoming. I shifted to the right after fifteen minutes and turned to look back at Mrs. Pierce was directly in front of her and that, as on Saturday, I could probably look at her legs withou forgot that one leg was stretched out straight which meant the coveted display wouldn't be a Pierce would be able to see me anyway.

Fortunately, Mrs. Pierce had lifted that leg up too and both knees were now together and wo unprotected view of the back of her thighs if her feet weren't placed demurely together in fro Disappointed, I returned to gardening. Five minutes later, I turned to sneak another look. Bir

Mrs. Pierce's feet were now braced on the corners of the lounge, leaving the back of her thig
My scrotum was wrapped in pleasant tingles as soon as I noticed that the shorts worn on Sa replaced by a short skirt which wasn't long enough to cover Mrs. Pierce's panties with her le that. They were pale blue and didn't match the green skirt that was supposed to cover them.

Recovering from my initial surprise, I moved my trowel in the dirt to make it sound like I was but kept my eyes on those out-of-place panties. As I watched, Mrs. Pierce's right hand appe scratched across the bottom of her thigh. I stared as the flesh of her leg rippled back and for the scratching fingers and stiffened when her hand began stroking up her leg. At the unders
Mrs. Pierce's fingers retraced their path down her leg, paused, and then repeated the long, c

I was mesmerized. Mrs. Pierce continued stroking the back of her thigh and I completely forg the trowel around in the garden to make it sound like I was working. I almost managed to lift eyes off her legs when her knees suddenly moved to one side... almost, but not quite.

"Would you like a break?" Mrs. Pierce asked. Then, in response to my blank look, "For a drin

"Oh, yes," I stammered, fixing my gaze on the pitcher.

"Pour yourself a glass, then," she said, continuing to scratch the underside of her thigh. I cra the other side of the table and poured myself a glass while I watched Mrs. Pierce who was lo magazine and paying no attention to me. I almost choked when I took the first gulp to quenc gin and tonic!

Mrs. Pierce continued stroking her leg and ignoring me. I drank more slowly and watched he leaned forward onto her magazine as she stroked and her breast pushed around the outside then I noticed that there were no telltale signs of a bra under Mrs. Pierce's halter. When she slightly on the upstroke, the nipple poked into the cotton halter top, registering its presence t eyes.

"That feels so good," Mrs. Pierce said, thankfully keeping her owns eyes on her leg. "Ever si haven't been able to exercise and my muscles have tightened up. This seems to help."

I nodded, and gulped another mouthful of gin and tonic. It went down smoothly this time.

"Except my fingers aren't strong enough to knead the muscles very well, especially on my ca Mrs. Pierce's muscular calves. I couldn't believe her fingers weren't as strong as her legs. W back, Mrs. Pierce was looking right at me.

"Do you think you could help?"

"Help?" I said, lamely.

"Yes. Do you think you could massage my leg muscles?"

I looked at her legs, then at my hands, dusty with the dirt from the garden.

"Don't worry about that. I'm not afraid of a little dirt like my husband."

Mrs. Pierce lifted the back of the lounge up and forward, then eased it back until it was flat. S onto her side and then onto her stomach, placing her head on crossed arms.

"When you finish your drink, you can rub my legs."

"What about the garden?" I asked, stupidly.

"You can do that later. It would be better to do my legs before Mr. Pierce gets home."

So with that, I quickly downed the rest of the drink and moved in front of the table, beside the the lounge and next to Mrs. Pierce's legs. Tentatively, I placed my right hand on the back of

"That's it," Mrs. Pierce said. "Start at the bottom."

I rubbed the first six inches of leg above her foot.

"Massage it," Mrs. Pierce said. "Make the muscle work."

So I started massaging Mrs. Pierce's leg, slowly working my way up until I was squeezing an muscles of her entire right calf. Mrs. Pierce rewarded my effort with encouraging sounds and confidence that I moved to her right leg without prompting and received similarly pleased so on that leg too. Mrs. Pierce kept her eyes closed the whole time I worked on her legs so I ca her knees to admire the back of her taut thighs as I let my fingers automatically find the mus calves.

When Mrs. Pierce had first turned around on the lounge, the little skirt had ridden up her leg were too close together for the pale blue panties to show. As I worked her lower legs I tried t apart, and succeeded, but Mrs. Pierce's knees stayed together, thwarting my plan. Slowly, I less strenuously, allowing my fingers to stroke more than massage, similar to the way she h leg herself. My eyes and mind kept wandering under Mrs. Pierce's skirt and my strokes beca like light caresses. I was startled when she spoke.

"Go higher," she whispered.

"Pardon me?" I replied, not sure what she meant, moving my hands to the upper part of her "Work the muscles above my knees," Mrs. Pierce whispered.

I slid my hands onto the back of Mrs. Pierce's knees and then above, onto her lower thighs. contentedly and her knees relaxed, creating a gap between her legs. A narrow band of pale appeared through the hem of her skirt. I started massaging Mrs. Pierce's thighs, near her kn started near her ankles with her calves.

I took my time working my way higher, leery of making a mistake, of taking a liberty beyond Eventually, I tried to move her legs further apart and this time they responded to my urges. A of panty now greeted my eyes, encouraging me to deliver the best massage I could manage Mrs. Pierce's entire body but especially on her red hair and the side of her freckled face whic contentedly serene. That is, when I wasn't staring lovingly at her sleek thighs and peeking u her panties. After a long while my fingers were kneading the most tender part of the inside o thighs. They even ventured into what I would have thought would be a forbidden area under skirt, near the blue panties, in my mind responding to the invitation implied by her yielding fle

Suddenly, Mrs. Pierce lifted up on her elbows and looked at me over her shoulders past her hands when rigid, freezing on her thighs upon the entrance to her skirt.

"Oh my," she said, looking at the back of her skirt. "It's a good thing Mr. Pierce didn't come h

I instinctively jerked my head toward the back of the house and Mrs. Pierce laughed.

"Don't panic. He's not due home for a while yet. You did such a good job, I got a little carried you don't mind?" she purred.

I shook my head. Not in the least, I tried to say but the words wouldn't form in my throat.

"Maybe you should let me turn around now," Mrs. Pierce smiled, looking at my hands still ins thighs.

"Oh... of course," I yanked my hands away from her legs as if they were burning.

Mrs. Pierce laughed and turned around on the lounge. She picked up the pitcher and toppec then mine. "Cheers," she said, setting the pitcher down, then picking up her glass and holdir picked up mine and clinked her glass. Mrs. Pierce sipped hers and looked at me. After I mat said, "I trust you don't have a loose tongue."

"No. Of course not, Mrs. Pierce," I assured her.

"Good. This is the kind of thing that could easily be misunderstood."

I nodded my understanding and took a large gulp of gin. I needed it.

"We have an understanding, then?"

I nodded.

Mrs. Pierce smiled and sipped her drink. As she did, her right knee slid up higher on the lour blue panties appeared under the green skirt. This time, it was the front of the pale blue panti
There was no way I couldn't look right at them. No way. When I came to my senses, I looked Pierce looking at me, amused.

"Drink up," she said.

She raised her glass to her lips in concert with me and took a small sip. Mrs. Pierce smiled a between her legs, then up her thighs and under her skirt, latching onto those sexy blue pant have overstayed their welcome because Mrs. Pierce prodded me again.

"You better finish your drink, Paul," she said, rolling my name around with a wonderful lilt. "M wouldn't like it if he found a minor drinking liquor in my back yard."

I took a bigger drink and Mrs. Pierce laughed softly but she moved her left leg, exposing mo drained my glass, all the while straining my eyes toward her skirt. Mrs. Pierce's light laughte last time as she got up. We walked back to the house and just before we got there Mr. Pierc his head through the glass doors.

"I'm home, dear," he said, ignoring me. "I'll be in my study until dinner."

Mrs. Pierce acknowledged her husband, asked him to wait a moment and then, in his prese

"Can you come again on Saturday?" she asked in an officious voice.

"Yes ma'am," I responded in kind.

- -

By the next Saturday, my little monkey had been spanked numerous times. I wasn't sure if M giving me the come on or just having fun teasing me. The more I thought about it, the more she was setting me up for a fall, waiting for me to do something inappropriate so she could g me off the team. Paranoia, what a wonderful thing. But that didn't stop me from fucking Mrs.
times, in my dreams.

Mrs. Pierce was sitting in the same place in the yard on the lounge. A pitcher and a single gl small table. I stopped beside her, ready to massage her legs. She was wearing shorts and a instead of a halter top that would show her bare midriff and a skirt that would let me... well, y was reading a magazine. Several more were piled beside the pitcher on the table.

"You're early," Mrs. Pierce admonished me. "Well, you can start gardening anyway."

Disappointed by her demeanor, I picked up the trowel and began weeding around the flower check out Mrs. Pierce's legs but her feet were always held demurely together, blocking any of her thighs. Damn!

She moved the lounge herself when I shifted further along the garden to stay behind me. I c again but the story was the same: a blocked view.

"I better see if Mr. Pierce needs anything. I'll be back in a minute."

Ah, so Mr. Pierce was home. I was both relieved to know the likely reason for her cool beha disappointed by her husband's presence. I surely wouldn't be doing any leg massaging now

I was so busy with my negative thoughts I didn't realize Mrs. Pierce had returned until she sa again though my ears had registered the patio door closing. Since she hadn't remarked on t of her husband I assumed, with regret, that he was still in the house. A few minutes later, an shift along the garden toward the house shrank the viewing angle from the patio doors suffic Pierce would have to step outside to see us and even then his view would be blocked by the chair. I shoveled a little dirt and then turned to look at Mrs. Pierce.

Mrs. Pierce had changed skirts! She was not wearing a black, knee-length pleated skirt that her knees on top of her thighs, was open across the bottom. It was loose and the rear hem c that I could see her lacy black panties without straining my neck. I put my hand on the groun and rested on it while I gazed at Mrs. Pierce's delicious thighs, easily seen through her wide legs. When she leaned her knees to one side to look at me, I brazenly didn't turn away to pr gardening.

"Would you like a drink, Paul?" she asked.

"There's only one glass," I said.

"You can use mine while you take a break," she replied, picking up her gin and tonic and ho
I took the drink and brought it to my lips. "Just don't let Mr. Pierce see you. He wouldn't appr giving alcohol to a minor."

Mrs. Pierce swung her knees back into place. He'd like it even less if he caught me staring a thought. I tipped my head back for a long, slow drink, my eyes remaining between Mrs. Pierc cool mix trickled down my throat, Mrs. Pierce's knees parted and a gap appeared between h staring at her panty-covered pussy, I corrected myself.

I took my time with the drink and Mrs. Pierce didn't make a single comment or motion to hur sound in the backyard was the swish Mrs. Pierce made as she flipped the pages in her mag the tiny hairs on her thighs under the shade of her skirt but there was enough light to notice of her pussy and the faint presence of a vertical groove running through the lower front of he hole is in there, I thought. Her cunt. I stifled a groan and twisted my hips to ease the pressur burgeoning cock. I swigged the rest of the gin and stretched my hand around Mrs. Pierce's k the glass.

"Would you like some more?" she asked.

"No thanks," I croaked. I was afraid if I kept looking up her skirt I'd pull my cock out and start in front of her.

Mrs. Pierce put the glass down and returned to her magazine. Flip... flip.

I didn't start gardening again. I meant to, but instead, I put my hand behind her foot and let it air near her ankle. I pulled my arm toward me until my fingers curled around the back of Mrs
She tensed, but said nothing. I moved my hand up and down and few inches, slowly, my fing on either side of her Achilles tendon. I was so nervous I could hardly breathe. Mrs. Pierce re and still. I moved my hand higher, slipping up until the muscle of her calf filled my palm.

"Mr. Pierce is still home," she spoke quietly without a hint of any other sanction in her voice.
rubbing the back of her calf but didn't reply. A minute later, Mrs. Pierce repeated her comme ignored her again, she said, "Did you hear me, Paul?"

"Yes," I replied quietly, letting my hand slip up her entire calf muscle and into the hollow beh
She allowed me several more full strokes before she queried me again.

"Paul?"

"He can't see even if he comes out," I said. "Not unless he comes all the way here."

"That's not the point," Mrs. Pierce replied, her voice beginning to assume its officious tone.

"Does this help your injury?" I asked. Before she could say anything, I added, "Doesn't it ma better?"

"Yes, but..."

"Why should you be in pain just because he's home. He could help, but he doesn't."

Mrs. Pierce didn't reply. I continued stroking the back of her leg, waiting for a tensing muscle signal her decision to get up and leave. Five strokes, ten, fifteen. The muscles in Mrs. Pierce to relax rather than tense up. Twenty strokes. Cautiously, I raised my left hand up and broug her knee. Telling myself not to do it, I ignored myself and moved my hand higher to connect of Mrs. Pierce's thigh and let my fingers curl around the bottom of her thigh muscles. I squee my hand higher, or rather downward, but further up her thigh.

The resigned but satisfied sigh was music to my ears. Within minutes, I was stroking the full Pierce's leg. I twisted her lower leg to pry her thighs wider, increasing the yawning gap of he panties. I was using the thumb of my left hand to rub the bottom of her thigh now, the finger onto the inner side of that thigh. My fingertips were reaching to within less than an inch from Mrs. Pierce's panties. Perhaps getting a little carried away, I leaned way over and ducked m skirt.

"I'm going now," Mr. Pierce's voice crashed into my reverie. I hadn't even heard the patio do

Mrs. Pierce's left hand slipped under her legs and grabbed my hair, holding my head in plac

"Do you want me to get you anything before I go?" Mr. Pierce yelled.

"No thanks, dear," Mrs. Pierce yelled back, her voice unsteady, unlike the firm grip she main hair.

"Has your young man left, then?" her husband asked.

He couldn't see me sitting on the grass in front of the lounge, hidden by the upright back of t the long skirt stretched across her bent knees covering my head and shoulders. In that mom ridiculously dangerous move of my short life. I let my left hand fall to the apex of Mrs. Pierce turning it over, let the back of my hand graze across the front of her panties.

Mrs. Pierce went rigid. Her legs started to close to clamp my hand in place but then widened began to sink between her knees, stretching it back to its previous taut state covering my up twisted my wrist, rubbing my knuckles back and forth across those puffy lace panties.

"Yes," Mrs. Pierce coughed, then more firmly, "Yes. He's gone."

If Mr. Pierce approached now, all hell would break loose.

"How's he working out?"

"Quite well," Mrs. Pierce replied.

I applied firmer pressure and was sure that the knuckle of my longest finger briefly penetrate groove I had spied when I first looked under Mrs. Pierce's skirt.

"Say what?" Mr. Pierce inquired.

"I said, yes, he's working out quite well."

I turned my hand around and cupped Mrs. Pierce's pussy, stretching my thumb over the bott into the base of her ass. Mrs. Pierce's hand tightened so hard I thought it would yank all my

"That's good. I'm off, then."

Mrs. Pierce's stomach muscles tensed and I imagined her nodding her head and waving her farewell to her husband. The patio door snapped shut and Mrs. Pierce's grip loosened on my her ankle and pushed my hand under her butt as I stretched further onto the lounge, bringing proximity to her musky panties. I grasped the rear waistband of the lace panties and pulled.
cleared her butt, I pulled them up to her knees with my left hand along her right leg and push left with my right. My face landed squarely on a moist pussy already pushing up to meet me.

"Ohhhh, God!" Mrs. Pierce cried, yanking my head onto her throbbing clit.

I grabbed Mrs. Pierce's thighs and slid my hands up to the underside of her knees, then use to grip her legs and shove them up and back onto her chest while she steered my face arou pussy.

"Eat me, you cocky little bastard," she cried, bucking her hips against my face.

I dropped my left hand beneath my chin and probed under my tongue, finding her hole and p two fingers into its wet, pulpy mass. Mrs. Pierce released my head and replaced my hand be my left hand fall to her stomach and stretched its thumb down to rub her clit while my tongue between her hairy lips. My fingers were now busy pushing in and out, finger fucking her hole as her churning hips were fucking my face. I had meant to just get her hot enough to fuck bu and held my head so firmly I kept eating her pussy. She really deserved a treat and I decide
I pulled out of her pussy and surrounded her clit with my mouth and sucked it for twenty sec pushed my rigid tongue as far into her cunt as I could and moved my head up and down, tor woman everyone mistakenly called a bitch. Thank you, Coach. Thank you, for this crappy as inwardly. The intensity of the morning's teasing was taking effect. Mrs. Pierce was moaning broken only by verbal encouragements.

"Yeah, Paul. That's it... like that... oh yeah, yeah."

I stuck my tongue deep and shook my head, rubbing my thumb rapidly across her swollen c so rapidly it started to hurt.

"Oh yeah... God yeah... eat it... eat it... Goooooddd, ohhhhhhhh, God, oh God, oh God!"

Mrs. Pierce's legs fell on either side of my head and she shoved my face off her pussy. She side to side, enjoying the rapture of her orgasm. I stood up and watched as a series of inten flitted across her face, expressing the variety of sensations a woman can experience while i such bliss. Eventually, her closed eyes tightened one final time and then relaxed. I pushed r released my aching cock.

Mrs. Pierce stopped twisting about. She was making a barely audible whimpering sound. I s and picked up her legs by the ankles, pushing them back until her knees were against her c gripped her legs under the knees and lined my cock up with her wet pussy. Her panties were across her knees. Mrs. Pierce opened her eyes when my tip nudged her nether lips. She did eyes gave neither permission nor denial. I pushed the purple helmet of my cock between he hole, and shoved my entire length inside her until my root collided with her rubbery lips. I ga shove and was rewarded with a satisfying grunt from Mrs. Pierce.

Mrs. Pierce watched me calmly as I fucked her. I started with long, slow strokes fully in and pausing to give her an extra shove, driving her ass firmly into the lounge. My strokes becam our fucking increased in speed but the length didn't change. I kept banging Mrs. Pierce with strokes, harder and harder. The only sound was our ragged breathing and the occasional m both of us, until the loud slap of merging thighs began filling the backyard.

It was a dangerous sound that could have carried beyond the hedges surrounding Mrs. Pier didn't try to abate it herself or signal me to slow down. On the contrary, she cranked her hips to meet my thrusts. SLAP,SLAP, SLAP. I was really pounding on her now. I had her legs pu butt was twisted almost straight up. My legs ached from stretching over the lounge but I wou fucked her until they fell off, it felt so good.

Never before had I felt a pussy like this. Sure, I hadn't had many but the few women, well gi been with didn't fuck like this. Mrs. Pierce was my first real woman. Just the expressions on looked at me, holding my eyes steadily with hers, made me want to really give it to her but n I lunged into her, I knew I couldn't best her. I knew I couldn't make her beg me to stop.

Suddenly, my hips took control and I started to really jack-hammer Mrs. Pierce. I tried to slo couldn't control myself, and that's when Mrs. Pierce smiled. A smile that turned into a quiet l tilted her head back, squeezing my cock tight, pulling my cum from deep inside me to hose laughing triumphantly.

She rubbed the back of my neck and tousled my hair for several minutes after I collapsed on she finally extricated herself, she pulled her panties up and smoothed her skirt down her leg

"Bring my drink upstairs before you go," she said.

As I watched Mrs. Pierce walk to the house, I realized hadn't even taken the time to undo he seen her tits and the way she carried herself away from me, I felt I never would.

- -

I knocked tentatively on the bedroom door.

"Come in. You don't need to knock for God's sake."

I pushed the door open and carried the glass and pitcher of gin and tonic into Mrs. Pierce's r standing in front of her dresser, fixing her make-up. She pointed to the bedside table on the bed from her. I put the glass down and refilled the glass.

"Would you like a drink before you go?" she asked.

I nodded.

"Well, then drink."

I lifted the glass to my lips and tipped it up enough for a small trickle to stream into my mouth Pierce's hands reached to the side of her hip and the pleated skirt slipped down her legs. He already unbuttoning the blouse when the glass pulled away from my lips. Mrs. Pierce smiled

"Drink all of it," she said.

I drank the gin while Mrs. Pierce unbuttoned the rest of her blouse and shucked it off. She w lacy, black bra that covered her nipples but allowed the skin of her breasts to show through.
panties had magically disappeared. Her pussy looked well-exercised from our recent exertio and Mrs. Pierce's tits bounced free, a little low slung but not too much. They were a nice size athletic woman and jutted off her chest, angled slightly to the side with nipples that stabbed

"You forgot to look at these in your haste. Do they meet your approval?" she smiled.

I nodded intensely.

"Well, then," she laughed. "Drink up."

Mrs. Pierce crawled onto the bed and lay prone on her back. She curled her left arm under h her red hair onto the pillow with her right. She seemed amused.

"Well, I know you can fuck. Let's see if you know how to make love."

The rapidity with which I shed my clothes intensified the amused expression on Mrs. Pierce' watched me, she opened her legs and beckoned me with a cock-stiffening come-on look bu the bed her legs clothes and she turned on her side to face me.

"Slow down, baby," she said in a throaty voice.

When I tried to pull her toward me she resisted, pushing on my chest. I lowered my face and tit to my mouth but she swept me my hand away and pulled back. I looked at her, perplexed back at me. I tried to capture her nipple in my mouth but was again pushed away. She appe but I was getting frustrated. When she pouted her lips in an exaggerated fashion, I got the id she wanted to make love, and that meant kissing. Well, I could do that for a few minutes.

I kissed her, and kept kissing her for what seemed an eternity. I tried to fondle her breasts b
When I tried to palm her pussy, my hand was pushed away. Grasping her leg behind the kn my hip so I could rub my cock on her pussy was a no-no too. Resigned, I stopped trying and her.

Later, much later, Mrs. Pierce grasped a handful of my hair and pulled my head away from h whispered, "Kiss me everywhere."

Finally! I trailed kisses down her cheek to her neck, then quickly made a beeline for her tits.
pushed my face away again.

"Not there. Not yet," she whispered hoarsely. "Kiss me everywhere but there and here," she briefly covered her pussy with it, then flung it away. "I'll let you know when I want you there."

So I did what she said. I kissed and sucked and nibbled Mrs. Pierce's entire body: shoulders underarms, sides, legs, feet, toes, and yes, even her ass. In fact, eventually I even tried to b own game. At first, whenever I came near her tits or pussy I kept approaching until her body but now I refrained from getting as close as she had allowed me to before. It pleased me to disappointment in the soft murmurs emitted in response to my caresses and I felt a transfer being denied to one deciding when to give. I began to enjoy this 'love-making' thing.

I loved the way Mrs. Pierce's body reacted to my touch. The way she shuddered when my to her pussy but not on it, indicating the sheer need underlying her anticipation brought rings o tingles up and down my cock, culminating in a shower of needle-pricking delight that covere
My own anticipation was almost overwhelming and I nearly came when I finally decided that and rolled Mrs. Pierce onto her back.

She raised her legs and opened them wide as I nestled between them, cocking her hips up
I paused to suck her nipple into my mouth at the exact instant that I slipped inside her. I didn home as it and her pussy urged me to do. Instead, I slid my shaft inside Mrs. Pierce's love tu as I could, even pulling up when she tried to impale her slippery cunt on my cock. I let her ni my lips and brought my mouth to her ear, chuckling in triumph at her need, now even greate marginally so.

"Make love to me, Paul," she gasped.

"I will," I groaned in response.

We moved slowly, straining constantly, writhing together, striving to keep as much skin conta Mrs. Pierce had lowered her legs soon after my entry and we were now aligned, my feet on pressing her thighs, our torsos twisting together and my arms wrapped around her shoulders kissing her feverishly.

I loved the feel of her, inside and out, loved her intensity, her sounds, her smell. I simply love with every motion and sound to convey my feeling. When it came, it was the longest orgasm
It sounds funny, but it lasted well beyond the point where my cock stop spurting inside her w it had no more to even seep inside her. When it was finally over, I rolled off her onto my bac sighed loudly, gasping for the breath we so desperately needed, more from the intensity of o exertion of it all.

"Wow," I gasped.

"Wow," she echoed my sentiment.

Mrs. Pierce rolled on top of me and kissed me quickly on the mouth.

"Which did you like better, the lounge or the bed. Tell me the truth."

"Um... the lounge."

She shrieked like a girl. "Oh, you brat," she cried, pummeling my the chest.

We stayed in bed for almost an hour after before getting a shower. Though I started to get h dress, I didn't try to start anything because anything that day would have been anticlimactic.
tenderly before exiting the bedroom and Mrs. Pierce walked me to the patio door, her arm a mine around her shoulder, where we kissed and made plans to meet again.

- -

Mrs. Pierce's injury healed by Christmas in time for her to take charge of spring training and again. Coach was ecstatic with the 'exceptional service' Mrs. Pierce told him I had provided.
good books.

The following fall I moved to attend college where I maintained a small, crappy apartment th when my mother came to visit me. The rest of the year, I lived with Mrs. Pierce who had follo new job after she left her husband, as we had planned that summer. The second year, I didn apartment, and by the next summer, Mrs. Pierce and I married, secretly, without my parents to the opposite coast after I finished college. I didn't mind signing a prenuptial agreement. Af nothing. Mrs. Pierce evidently had a fair amount of money from an inheritance. She didn't ne were quite happy and lived to be together.

Sex was mostly making love but on special occasions, Mrs. Pierce allowed me anything I wa she let me take her mouth and even tied her own hands behind her back to prevent them fro control of her face. I wished I could do her like that more often but it was all the more enjoya the act was special. She even adopted a haughty expression, knowing it would please me e spend all over it. As long as pain and debasement weren't involved, Mrs. Pierce was game, Year's Day, and one day a year that always came to me as a complete surprise.

The rest of the year, we make love the way Mrs. Pierce wanted to. Oh yeah, and that was a too. I had to call her Mrs. Pierce. I never used or even knew her first name. On those specia fucked her hard, squatting over her haunches and literally plunging my cock into her cunt, sh me, crying, "Don't you just love fucking Mrs. Pierce?"

Yes, I did. Indeed, I did.

There was one thing Mrs. Pierce would simply not do. Anal sex. It was four years before I ev an emphatic NO! Not then, not ever. I didn't broach the subject again.

Our sex had perhaps peeked by the sixth year but it was still pretty good, at least from my p twenty-five years old and she had to be about forty-five, though I never knew her exact age.
came as a complete surprise to me when I arrived home to find Mrs. Pierce waiting for me in with the door open, coat on, purse slung over her shoulder.

"I'm leaving, Paul. I wanted to tell you in person, rather than in a note, how wonderful it's bee in my own way, I'll always love you... but now our time is over."

With that, she stepped close to me and stretched up to kiss me quickly on my stunned lips, t me and walked briskly out the door and down the cement stairs to the taxi I hadn't noticed w with the motor running. I guess her bags were already in the trunk because she wasn't carry with her, nor did she come back for any. She was in the car by the time I ran down the stairs away before I could reach it to pull the door open. I never saw her again. Everything was ha lawyer. She had left me a small sum to get through the year even if I quit my job.

To say I was bewildered would be an enormous understatement. I mean, wouldn't you be? I sorry for myself for almost a year, running through all the stages of catastrophic loss. I searc for every memory, every scrap of sensation, the way she moved, laughed, and smelled. I dr missed indications of what was to come but could find no such previews. For hours each da in the over-stuffed chair in front of the fireplace or languishing in bed, eyes closed, dreaming recapture the fading sense of her skin which was always so amazingly soft and warm. The m in front of the tall, old-fashioned bedroom window, the morning light streaming past her nude combing out her red hair, turning toward with a seductive smile and saying, 'Let's stay home day?' Funny, but now that I thought about it, with all that intense focus on making love, Mrs.
told me she loved me, not even once, despite the thousands of times she heard it from me.

I was in the midst of deep depression one miserable fall day when I answered a persistent k Whoever it was ignored my repeated calls to 'go away'. A man in a uniform stood on the doo envelope. It wasn't a summons or anything ominous; it was too square-like for that. It looked invitation and it was, an invitation to a funeral for one of Mrs. Pierce's friends. After the man the black limo waiting at the curb, I shut the door and threw it into the fireplace but changed barely managed to retrieve it before it burst into flames.

Would she be there? The funeral was for the only close friend of hers that I knew of, the only known her before we moved here, and who had evidently known her before she came to tea to go.

- -

The funeral was very formal, kind of like large funerals I had seen in movies. Mr. Pearson wa wealthy man. Mrs. Pierce wasn't there and I didn't recognize anyone else. I tagged along to afterwards at his home mostly out of curiosity. I would have liked to talk to his widow to see Mrs. Pierce but I knew it wasn't appropriate. I was surprised by Mrs. Pearson. I had only see once a few years before and he had been about fifty then. Mrs. Pearson appeared to be abo most. Even in her long, black funeral dress it was apparent she had a lovely figure, enough cause a reaction in me for which I immediately berated myself. When she lifted her veil brief ceremony, I was struck by her beauty, a younger, brunette version of Mrs. Pierce.

I was standing at the edge of one of the large rooms in the house, mansion really, near the Pearson entered from the far end. She greeted several people as she passed through the ro solemn words with each. As she approached, I backed into the hallway so as not to impede past me with her head down, then turned after a few steps just as she was about to go up th

"It's Paul, isn't it?" she said through the veil.

"Why, yes," I stammered, surprised that she knew me.

"Thank you for coming. I didn't know you knew Peter... Mr. Pearson," she added in response expression. "Actually, I'm surprised Carol introduced you."

"I only met him briefly, by accident. I don't think we were meant to be introduced," I said.

Mrs. Pearson nodded, then turned to continue up the stairs.

"Did you say Carol?" I asked.

Mrs. Pearson turned back to me. "Yes. You were living together, weren't you?"

"Of course," I said. "Forgive me. I thought you meant someone else."

Mrs. Pearson regarded me carefully, one hand on the banister. It was impossible to imagine thinking since her face was still hidden by the black veil.

"Would you join me for a few minutes? Upstairs?"

She turned and ascended the stairs without waiting for my answer. I followed, admonishing eyes found her shapely bottom which simply couldn't be ignored as it swished from side to s revealing themselves with each step. Well, now I would have the opportunity to ask about M whereabouts. Or Carol, if that really was her first name. Almost seven years we lived togeth even know her name until today. Mrs. Pearson led me into a large room that turned out to b was surprising, given its size. She walked to a large dresser and removed her veil and head her head, freeing a thick, luxuriant mass of chocolate brown hair until it spilled evenly over h
She was truly beautiful.

"So, you didn't really know my husband, then, even though you lived with his sister for sever

His sister! Mr. Pearson was Mrs. Pierce's sister? I was speechless.

Mrs. Pearson chuckled. "I see you didn't know she had a brother. Their penchant for secrec overboard."

"I didn't even know her name was Carol," I mumbled, distracted, still struggling to get my mi
I'd just heard.

"What did you call her?" Mrs. Pearson asked, pulling her long dress up to her knee and lean side to remove a high heel. Her hair tumbled into the air as her face leaned to the side, mak even more apparent.

"I called her Mrs. Pierce," I said.

"Mrs. Pierce," Mrs. Pearson laughed out loud, leaning the other way to remove the other sh toward me. "You're serious?"

"Yes," I shrugged. "For seven years, I called her Mrs. Pierce. I never knew her first name un downstairs."

"Incredible," she said. "I hate to tell you, but her real name is Miss Pearson. She never marr

"No, that can't be. She was married to Mr. Pierce and then to me."

"Did you see the Marriage Certificate?"

"No. We were married in a private, civil ceremony in our home."

"Paul, you were never married, believe me, and she never married this Mr. Pierce either."

I scrutinized her face, looking for doubt, but I knew she was telling me the truth. This was un

"But how do you know my name? If you didn't even know I had met your husband. Please fo this day, but how did you know my name?"

"I've heard her say it many times."

"So you knew her well? She came here often?"

"Almost never. I only met her two or three times, accidently, like you met Peter."

"Then how did you hear her speak my name so many times."

Mrs. Pearson nodded to the door behind me. "Lock the door and I'll show you."

I locked the door and turned back to get my answers. I was angry, though I knew I had no re with her. Mrs. Pearson was standing in front of an overstuffed couch, pointing a remote at a mounted on the wall.

"Tell me, Mrs. Pearson. Why have you heard my name so often?" I said in a loud, demandin keep my frustration and anger hidden.

"Shhhh," she whispered. "Just wait and I'll show you. And my name is Karen, not Mrs. Pears

The screen sprang to life, mid-movie, as if it had been paused and was waiting to be started had been left, or at the start of a favorite segment. Mrs. Pierce was kneeling with her hands back, her bare bottom resting on her heels. A man was holding the top of her head with one his cock into her mouth with the other. He was thrusting his meat into her face, pulling her h a handful of hair. After a minute he withdrew, allowing her to gulp for air, saliva dripping from Mrs. Pierce looked up at the man dominating her.

"Happy Birthday, Paul."

Mrs. Pearson... Karen... turned and smiled at me. Behind her, on the screen, I was thrusting vigorously in and out of Mrs. Pierce's mouth.

"We have hours and hours of this, mostly boring, romantic love-making, but I love these sce with the real hard fucking. I've been an admirer of yours for years, Paul."

For not the first time that day, my mouth dropped open. I looked blankly at Karen, then at th behind her. Karen's hands reached up behind her head and I knew she was undoing the cla neck, that her hands, now lowering, were unzipping her funeral dress.

"Can you imagine what it would be like if every day was like that, Paul?"

I was still too stunned to react.

"Can you imagine dominating your woman like that, every day of the year?"

Karen reached down to grasp the sides of her long, black dress and pulled it up until the her knees. She turned and knelt on the overstuffed couch, then leaned forward until her head fe top. Her hands, still grasping the sides of her dress, pulled it up to her hips, exposing a sma pair of panties covering a luscious ass, deliciously emphasized by the dark stockings that e below it.

"My husband is dead," she whispered. "I need a strong man to look after me, Paul."

She looked back at the screen where I was still pumping Mrs. Pierce's face with full strokes cock.

"Do you think you can be strong like that, Paul. Can you be a man, all the time?"

I started shredding my clothes. Not shedding... shredding. I was desperate to get them off, t years of restraint, the careful, controlled lovemaking that Mrs. Pierce had forced upon me, m wanted. I needed to get rid of her, in one wild, senseless, abandoned fuck. Mrs. Pearson... laughing, goading me, begging me to split her with my pole.

I knelt behind her, my suit coat off, the shirt in shreds, my pants bunched on my knees, arou of which was still wearing its shoe. My hands found her panties and ripped them off to loud s delight. I grasped her hair in my left hand and tugged her head up as I leaned over her back hand guided my cock, nosing it through her cheeks in search of her slit.

"Shut up," I hissed.

"Make me," she husked.

I shoved into her, roughly, all the way, lifting her up on the back of the couch. Immediately, I slamming into her, huffing loudly, grasping her shoulders and banging her soft cheeks as ha didn't speak any more, we were both fucking our hearts out, shedding the past and finding o so fucking sexy, so earthy and heathen. This was real love, no control and no hurt, just pass harder, and harder, and harder.

"Oh yeah, oh yeah, oh yeah."

I pulled Karen's hair up and grasped it in both hands. I loved the way she looked, eyes close her whole body jolting with every thrust. I wanted this woman so much, I needed her to be m

Shit! I was coming already. It felt like molten lava shooting up my shaft, bursting from the he filling her. I could feel it, several squirts later, squeezing through the tight grip her lips held a post. I was kissing her, whispering inanely, "I love you, I love you," to this woman I'd only jus

You might think we would have been embarrassed after that, a little sheepish, that we woulc clothes without looking at each other again, but we didn't. I flopped onto the couch and Kare straightened her dress and calmly walked, the back of the dress still open, to the bathroom.
few moments later carrying a large comforter which she spread over me. She stooped to pic panties and tossed them onto a chair, then casually slipped the dress off her shoulders and over her hips. She watched me watch her remove her lacy black bra which seemed far too s the conservative dress now lying at her feet. Her breasts sprang free, bouncing with youthfu despite her ten years or so on me and I wished I had thought to grab them. I remembered, s forgotten to sample Mrs. Pierce's tits the first time I had fucked her too. Now nude except for stockings, Karen picked up the remote and slipped under the comforter.

She pointed the remote at the screen and said, "Let's start at the beginning. We've got lots o through."

Before the first minute had passed, I had those gorgeous tits in my hands, both of them, with through the circles formed by thumbs and forefingers leaving just a tiny bit to be licked and s

"I bet you can't make it fifteen minutes without fucking me again," she whispered.

She was right.

- -

I didn't even return to my apartment. Karen had some people bring my personal effects over was disposed of. Karen hired me as one of her staff but she explained it was only for pocket legally establish that I would never have a claim on her estate since I was considered an em living with her. It was an uncomfortable reminder of Mrs. Pierce — I still don't think of her as one that was easily erased by a very satisfying bout in bed.

Karen was everything she promised to be. Every day she was mine to have in whatever way the afternoon that I signed the paper recognizing myself as an employee, Karen said she fel to rest for awhile. After a couple of hours, I went upstairs to see if she was still sleeping. She bed alright, but curled up into a ball. Her knees were held tight to her chest by a belt wrappe back and thighs just under her knees. Her feet were similarly held tight to her bottom with a looped at each end around the balls of her feet and stretching around her back to make her Karen's arms were wrapped around her knees and another looped kimono belt secured her obviously assisted her to get into this awkward position but she was quite alone now, and ve

"Where have you been?" she panted. "I've been waiting for hours."

It didn't take me long to get rid of my clothes and crawl up on the bed. I manoeuvred the little front of my cock and plunged it inside her already wet pussy. As I leaned over her, pumping could smell her odor on her fingers and realized she'd been able to reach herself while she w me. The thought of her fingering herself while wantonly imagining my reaction when I found almost berserk. I fucked her so hard I kept rolling over onto my side and slipping out of her p released the ties holding her feet to her thighs. Holding her feet up, I steered her back onto began pumping her vigorously again.

She was like Mrs. Pierce in a way. She loved to either look intensely in my eyes while she g closed them tight and flung her head back, abandoned to the sensations percolating from he liked getting fucked. At least, she made all the appropriate sounds and motions one would e that loved a good-sized cock in her. I believed it. I don't think anyone could act that horny.

The next day, she had several interior design consultants in presenting some concepts for re wing of her home. She politely excused us to consider their suggestions privately for a few m into the opposite side of the house. As soon as we were on that side, she bent over a side ta back to pull her dress up. Within seconds, I had pulled her panties down and filled her from b ways away from the consultants but they may have wondered what the faint rattling was all a into my lover's backside and bounced the table off the wall.

I'm sure the staff also either heard or stumbled upon us when we spontaneously had sex in t grounds but discretely made themselves scarce. I gradually realized that I could have Karen any time I wanted to, but I also had to perform whenever she felt the need, which was often.
change from doing Mrs. Pierce where I had to pay my dues and satisfy her first through a lo love-making before seeking my own gratification. Fucking Karen was much better but very e

After three years, I was almost tired of it. In fact, I was getting bored with constant, spontane raucous sex after two years and only retained my interest after I discovered that Karen woul in the ass, something I had never done before. I was a little gun-shy to try after the vehemen attempt to get inside Mrs. Pierce's butt, which perhaps explains why I didn't try for so long w willing woman available to do my sexual bidding.

Anyway, one day I came home to find Karen on her knees on our bed. Her feet were tied to though her hands were free, a light lead attached to a collar around her neck was tied some headboard. Karen's head was lying sideways on a pillow and she watched me enter the roo clearly amusing to her since her smile grew as my face changed from surprise to confusion finally raging desire when I saw how greasy her buttocks were and then discovered the ring asshole. A butt plug.

"Be gentle," she said, speaking so hoarsely I could hardly understand those two simple word cherry, baby," she whispered, wiggling her butt.

I slipped my finger through the ring and tugged.

"Ooooohhhh... slowly, baby, slowly," she cried.

I relaxed and then tugged again.

"Ohhhh, yeah."

I twisted the plug around and pulled, then eased, then pulled. I played around like that for se but eventually it came out with a loud, wet plop. I held it up and looked at it, surprised by hov inside part was, then looked down at the gaping, dark hole it had left in Karen's ass. Why tha incredibly horny in an mere instant, I don't know, but it did. I grunted and got up on my feet, her ass, and steered my cock into this new, virgin territory for us both.

Holding her cheeks apart with my hands, I sank deep inside her. I loved the way she groane completely different kind of sound and I tried varying my strokes in many ways to pull that sa her lips as I fucked her ass. As with every other time we fucked, Karen seemed to absolutely with the novelty and Karen's primitive noises, I came very quickly.

Karen wanted it in the ass again that night and the next morning. It became her favorite way was rarely a week that we didn't do it at least three times that way. I hate to say it, but it beca boring for me.

And that's what ended our relationship. Karen was all about fucking and nothing else. One d I didn't have the courage to face Karen the way Mrs. Pierce had waited to see me. I didn't tru stay, or rather, I didn't underestimate Karen's ability to keep me.

Now, I'm seeking a relationship somewhere between Mrs. Pierce and Karen. It isn't easy. Th spoiled me too much to accept anyone ordinary. I yearn for the intense, writhing love-making experienced with Mrs. Pierce but also need the wild, abandoned fucking that Karen taught m also find young women, women my own age, boring. They act so confident and with it but th sophisticated or in control at all. I guess it shows in me because older woman seem to know I'm interested in them. I never lack for sex because these women don't play games, they jus
The only problem is finding one that is willing to change her life for me, and to be sure that th the right one, the perfect woman.

I haven't found her yet after two years of trying, but Lynn is close to filling the bill. At least, I t she is. I pulled her head up off my cock.

"Lynn, you've got to learn to keep your teeth back."

She nodded and pushed her face forward, enveloping the slippery helmet, eager to show me do it. Her lips slid down my shaft, pausing part way, and then proceeded after a short swallo taught her. I grabbed her hair and held her head firmly on my cock, then leaned forward and finger into her butt, pleased by the muffled grunt she emitted around my root.

"Are you sure your husband never fucks you here? I think it's ready for me already."

Dressing Room Slut (Chocolate Harlot in orgy with the band & Yolanda) bygeronimo_appleby©

Inspired by Chocolate Harlot. All pictures used have been reproduced with kind permission.

* * * * *

I unloaded the gear from the van, time was getting on, and there was a lot to do before the s roadie for an up and coming band and tonight was to be their biggest venue so far. I humpe drums, amps, lights etc into the hall that the boys were playing in that night. As I worked I wa early arrivals trickle in. They looked like the usual crowd, mostly teens and early twenties, bu smattering of older folks too. Ok, a couple of thirty something's had dared to show their time and being a little on the more mature side myself I was always looking out for available ladie audience that weren't cause for concern in matters legal.

The boys were in the changing room getting ready and I had just put the last of the gear into the hottie. She was with a bloke, as they usually were, and I presumed him to be her boyfrie petite, probably 5'2 in her bare feet, but she wasn't in her bare feet tonight. She was wearing pair of boots with lethal heels. The only way I can describe them is that they were made from leather, or PVC, with hooks and eyes and criss crossed laces up to about mid calf, and then the front up her shins to her knees. Two gleaming straps held the boots to her legs between the whole immediate effect of them was stunning. The boots gave this sensual beauty a dec air.

Next came a pair of hold up stockings, black of course, and I can say for definite that they w because the tops were clearly visible high up her legs. There was at least a 2 inch view of h thighs between her stocking tops and the totally inappropriate black leather mini skirt that ba her plump buttocks. The mini skirt was stretched tightly around the girl's broad hips, and she studded leather belt around her tiny waist.

Her hands and arms up to her elbows were sheathed in a pair of dark gloves made out of wh velvet. Finally, this ensemble was topped off by yet another studded leather creation. This ti a bra top that was covering her lovely round breasts. Breasts that jiggled enticingly as the gi energetically through the crowd.

I dragged my gaze further up and was treated to my first glimpse of her stunning, elfin featur very, very pretty with a cute little nose that sported a tiny ring through one side. She had a d wicked smile, and her eyes had a disconcerting directness that took my breath away. She ha about her. She managed to look like a naïve schoolgirl on one hand, yet maintained an aura sexuality on the other. A paradox of light and darkness combined like the contrast between l black stocking tops.

The girl's bare upper arms were decorated by superb artwork, and I noticed more tattoos hig
This lady certainly had the look; the complete effect of her dark clothing, creamy pale skin, a blonde hair was electrifying. I could feel the sexual draw of her from across the crowded hall every other red blooded male in the place could feel it too. Knowing the scene as I do; there few women in the place who were moist about the gusset when they spied the delicious crea confidently amongst them.

'Put your tongue away, Ricky boy,' a soft feminine voice whispered close to my ear.

I jumped with the surprise, pulled abruptly back from my admiring reverie. I turned my head smiling her sly smile. Yolanda was the wife of the drummer; she was quite a tasty lady herse Goth, and extremely filthy when it came to sex. She'd been around for quite a while and was age as me, late thirties, early forties, and was still a very striking and physically well maintain Yolanda was dressed in her usual attire of a flowing black dress, deathly white face and hea make up. Her hair was perfectly straight and perfectly black almost blue, the colouring of a c knew that under Yolanda's dress she would be wearing a pair of thigh high boots, laced at th she was very probably knickerless also.

I smiled to myself. It wasn't just my tongue that was hanging out. Yolanda would be lusting a bewitching girl herself. 'Fuck off Yolanda,' I grinned at her. 'You're fooling no one.'

'You know me so well,' Yolanda laughed quietly shaking her head. 'And I do believe I'm goin lovely little poppet between my thighs before the night's out, you mark my words Ricky boy.'

Yolanda turned her attention back to the girl, tracking the lissom creature's course through th gulped as the mental image of Yolanda's prophecy shot onto the screen of my mind's eye. I myself that I would stay as close to the drummer's wife as I could tonight. I wouldn't want to Yolanda was as good as her word, and she usually was.

Danny, Brian, Stefan and Nick hit the stage and gave a blistering performance. I made sure to do my job. Sorting a few minor problems with equipment and the likes, but all the time kee Yolanda, and making sure that I knew where the girl was all the time too.

As the boys lifted the roof off the hall, the girl really got into the music and was showing off s moves. Her boyfriend could only grin uncomfortably as a crowd of appreciative males gather beloved. Some of the young lads were a little too forthright for his liking, and I saw the man's darker and darker as men tried to chat up his stunning girlfriend.

I felt for him, I really did. I'd been there myself. Sometimes, having a beautiful woman on you a curse. You had to constantly look out for predatory males who wanted to steal her away w words and promises. Of course there was always the moment when you began to doubt her thought you detected some little lie, some obscure half truth, and when that happened it was ...Well, I thought to myself. Good luck mate, she's a fucking goddess. Make sure you treat h on to her.

I knew that the show was nearly over, and I saw Yolanda make her move. She walked over had formed around the girl and broke through its perimeter. The girl smiled as Yolanda leant into her ear, and then nodding, pointed to her boyfriend.

The band left the stage, and Yolanda led the girl away by the hand, the girl's boyfriend follow behind. I had things to do, ensuring the kit was secured and safe from any thieving toerags t be on the opportunistic lookout for equipment and instruments.

Once I was satisfied that everything was under control I went in search of Yolanda and her r found them with the boys in the dressing room. The atmosphere was loud and frenetic, typic successful night and the boys were on a high. They were laughing and showing off, perhaps normal and I had no doubt that their increased boisterousness was down to the presence of Yolanda had brought to them.

Yolanda was sat on her husband's lap. Her eyes were shining and I knew that she would be between her long, elegant thighs. She was wriggling against Danny's crotch, rubbing her but groin. In turn Danny had his hands under the long folds of Yolanda's dress, probably feeling moistening pussy.

The girl was sat on a small chair; her boyfriend stood expressionless in a corner. She had he almost demurely, and from my point of entry into the room I could see the whole expanse of right up to her buttocks. My cock twitched at the sight, she was an absolute wet dream in ph that chair, and I actually ached with lust.

'Hey, it's tricky Dicky!' Yolanda cried at my entrance. 'The gang's all here,' she continued ent
'It was a great show tonight boys,' Yolanda said to the band, lifting herself up from her husba walked slowly over to the girl and stood in a provocative pose in front of her. 'Now, if my sex has no objections...' Yolanda looked down at the puzzled girl. '...I think we should put on a lit you boys now.' Yolanda bent forward and kissed the girl lightly on the lips. She reached dow hand and stroked the girl's bare thigh above her stocking top.

There was no reaction from the girl at all at first. She sat in her chair and stared up at Yolan appeared to be complete and utter disbelief. Her boyfriend didn't respond either. I looked ov quickly, trying to gauge his reaction, but I guess he was as surprised as virtually everyone e
The band was stunned into absolute silence as well. They all knew about Yolanda's appetite her husband, but the speed with which Yolanda had escalated the situation had taken them was a few seconds ahead of everyone else since I'd been privy to Yolanda's comments just and so I was able to briefly observe the occupants of the room in those first unguarded mom

'Fucking hell,' I heard Stefan whisper when the girl responded to Yolanda's kiss. There had b moment when I thought the girl was going to go mental over the Sapphic kiss, but she lifted towards Yolanda and returned the pressure upon Yolanda's painted lips. Yolanda squeezed girl's thigh, and the girl uncrossed her legs allowing Yolanda to push her hand deep betwee

As they kissed Yolanda's stroked at her lovely friend's gusset and the girl's hands disappear mature woman's dress. They went on in this vein for a few seconds until Yolanda stepped b dress over her head. She was nude underneath, and I saw the girl's boyfriend's eyes grow w Yolanda's superb exposed body and kinky boots.

Yolanda looked towards the man at just the right time and smiled wickedly at his expression you see?' she asked, turning slowly around, allowing the man to see all of her body in detail was shaven and I saw the man's eyes flicker downwards as he drank in Yolanda's delightful

She strode across to the man where he stood frozen to the spot in his corner. She thrust her and incredibly shapely tits at him, 'Feel me if you like, go on.'

She lifted the man's unresponsive hands to her breasts and pressed them against her flesh.
woke up at that point, massaging Yolanda's body, squeezing and pawing her. Yolanda's nip stood out thickly. 'Mmmm,' she moaned as the man felt her. 'Suck my tits baby,' she invited, looked quickly over at his girlfriend.

'Don't you dare,' the girl hissed shaking her head. 'Don't you dare touch her any more.'

Yolanda laughed cruelly and looked at the girl. '...Or else what?' she questioned.

The girl was at a loss for words. What could she do?

Yolanda was enjoying her game, she was the centre of attention, which was her favourite pl tormented young man in an agony of indecision in front of her his hands still cupping her bre back to the girl and pulled her to her feet. 'Get up my sweet little thing,' Yolanda smiled. 'Dor your man to stick his cock in my mouth?'

'No' the girl said emphatically. 'He can watch me and you, but I don't want you to touch him.'
the girl again. She unclasped the bra top that covered the girl's cute, round tits and pulled th skirt up around her broad hips. The girl was wearing a tiny thong and Yolanda just took hold garment and tore it away, exposing the girls own shaven vulva.

'Fucking hell,' Stefan swore again. 'Look at that body.'

His words were a little unnecessary since all the band members and myself were doing exac devoured the girl's figure with our eyes, taking in the detail of her broad hips, narrow waist a globes. Her labia peeked shyly from the junction of her endearingly soft, almost chubby thigl see the glint of metal from what I assumed to be her pierced clit.

'Lick my cunt,' Yolanda commanded, sitting back in a soft chair that sat against one wall. Sh thighs to show her pink, pouting sex to the girl. The girl obeyed instantly and knelt between Y legs. Yolanda held herself open for the girl and looked up, smiling around at the shocked as 'Come on boys, don't be shy...'

Danny responded first and laughed and unzipped his jeans. 'Well lads,' he grinned. 'My wife

The other guys undressed and moved towards the two women. The girl's boyfriend just look loss as to how to react.

The girl was busy between Yolanda's legs, eagerly tonguing at the mature woman's sticky, c had a pierced tongue too, and I could see the stud brushing against Yolanda's hard clit.

'Ah, that's so good my little darling,' Yolanda sighed. 'Suck my clit baby. Suck it into your mo looked up at the group of naked and semi naked men that stood in varying degrees of arous

Danny,' she said to her husband, her voice breaking and husky. 'Come on baby, fuck my mo to.'

Danny pushed his thick cock at his wife's face. His big, blunt cock head pushed between Yo into her willing mouth. Danny fucked his hips jerkily as he fed his meat to his wife, holding he hands as his girth stretched her lips tightly around his shaft.

Yolanda pulled her face free of her husband's grip and looked at the girl's boyfriend again. 'Y she whispered at him, her lipstick ruined and smeared around her mouth, hair in disarray fro husband's fingers had combed through its dark strands.

The man blinked at Yolanda's words, still bemused. Yolanda pushed the lapping blonde awa thighs. She stood up and walked over to the only other clothed man in the room beside mys

'Don't,' the girl spoke up from where she knelt on the floor.

'Darling, don't be such a spoilsport,' Yolanda pouted. 'I want your boyfriend to fuck my mouth you've just sucked my clit, why can't he have some fun?'

'It's different,' the girl whispered. 'He likes the idea of me and another woman; it's kinky. But.
him... it's not on. ...I don't like it.'

'Surely a little blowjob won't do any harm,' Yolanda turned to the man again. She moved clos on the lips.

'I said NO!' the girl shouted. 'If you touch her...' her voice trailed into uncertainty.

'Or what?' Yolanda questioned harshly, reaching to unzip the man's jeans before she scoope free. 'What a yummy cock,' she said brightly and massaged the man's stiffening prick.

He groaned and looked at his pretty girlfriend helplessly. She stood and returned his look de

'If you let her suck your prick...' the girl whispered. '...I'm going to fuck all five of these men.'
threat hung heavy in the air.

Yolanda laughed, breaking the spell the girl's words had woven. 'What an exquisite idea dar boys will love it.'

Yolanda dropped to her knees in front of the trembling man; she stared straight into the girl's slowly moved her mouth closer and closer to the weeping head of his cock. She stopped, he from the big cock head and paused. She smiled cruelly at the girl and poked her tongue out man's cock. Yolanda's tongue looked shockingly pink in contrast to her pale face, and she fl lightly over the man's leaking slit in the helmet of his prick.

He made no effort to stop Yolanda, and the mature woman moved her lips around the tip of hard on it as she did so.

'You bastard...' the girls hissed, tears welling up in her eyes. She turned to the group of expe they looked back her waiting for some sort of signal. The girl looked at each of them and the back in the chair that Yolanda had sat in earlier and spread her stocking clad thighs. 'Well?'
voice hard and full of resolve. 'I said I'd do it, and by fuck I'm going to. I want all five of you to me. Teach HIM a lesson.' She gave her boyfriend a withering look, fire in her bewitching eye

'Fuck yeah!!' Brian shouted, and moved towards the girl. The other three followed quickly an band members surrounded the pretty one.

Hands moved all over the girl's body. Mauling at her soft, round tits, and searching down bet
The girl sat back and actually began to enjoy the feeling of being groped by several excited hold of Stefan's cock in her gloved hand and pulled him into her mouth.

'She's sucking my cock!' he said surprised. 'God, she's sucking my cock.' Stefan fucked his girl's mouth, just the same as Danny had one earlier when Yolanda had been sucking the dr

Brian knelt and pushed the girl's thighs wide. 'She's got her clit pierced,' he reported shortly began to tongue at the girl.

The girl began to moan around Stefan's shaft when she felt her opening and clit being licked on boys,' she sighed when Stefan pulled his saliva covered knob from the girl's mouth. 'Let r cocks.'

Danny took a quick glance at his wife as she knelt and sucked on the young man's dick. He sex and he was happy to let her indulge herself to her hearts content. Especially when he go little bitches like this one. He took Stefan's place and fed his prick to the girl, sighing with lus felt her tongue tickle the underside of his big domed helmet.

I stripped myself and saw the girl's hips begin to jerk convulsively as she grew more and mo walked over to Yolanda and pulled her to her feet. She grinned at me, 'Too much competitio boy?'

'I'll get there, Yolanda,' I said. 'But I thought the young man here could do with some help. Y a handful.'

She smiled at that and turned to the young guy. 'Get undressed, honey,' she said. 'I'm going here for a moment. When you're ready, come and stick that lovely cock into my cunt.'

The guy blinked at Yolanda's crude language, but did a she asked and began to strip. Yolan and took hold of the root of it right down low on the stalk. She wanked me into her mouth, lic dribbling over my cock head. Strands of her saliva clung to my prick when she pulled her he
The drool connected my prick to her mouth, the gooey strand breaking eventually as it stret wetly onto the slope of Yolanda's breasts.

The young guy hurried back once he was nude, and Yolanda knelt on her hands and knees, high and offering her pink, swollen sex to him. 'Stick it in baby,' she murmured and wiggled h side to side. The man knelt behind her and offered himself to Yolanda's slick opening. He pu and with a grunt slid into her body.

I moved to Yolanda's head and gave her my cock to suck once again. She opened her eyes standing thick and angry in front of her face. She dribbled and drooled around my cock, moa young guy upped his tempo as he fucked her. When I looked across at the group that was c girl, I could see that she was in a similar position to Yolanda, with Danny pumping his cock i behind, while Stefan and Nick both pushed their cocks at her mouth. She was gamely trying into her mouth at the same time, but eventually had to move her head between the two offer one first before transferring her attention to the other stiff member.

The guys took it in turns to fuck the delightfully slutty blonde. Each of them getting behind he their hard dicks into her bejewelled cunt. She was really getting to enjoy by now, and I could her cries and moans of pleasure.

'Oh God, boys,' she cried. 'Fuck your cocks into me. Come on, use my cunt, treat me like a s love it.'

Perhaps some of it was for her boyfriend's benefit. To make him realise that although he wa lovely, mature Yolanda, she was getting her fill of cock. The blonde's words were too much f have a go. I left Yolanda to the young guy and went over to the girl. She looked at me, her e with her approaching climax.

'Another big cock,' she groaned. 'Another one to fuck me.' She closed her eyes and bit her b buttocks were rippling as Brian rammed hard at her from behind. Her hanging tits were bour back with the force of Brian's fucking.

Then she exploded with her orgasm. The girl squealed and writhed when she came, totally i cocks that were being pressed against her cheeks. Her pretty pixie features were smeared b was leaking from the guys' cocks her cheeks, chin and even her forehead were covered with

I picked the girl up when Brian slid his long length out of her body, sitting her gently back in t chair. I lifted her legs and held them wide apart; her cunt gaped at me all pink and soggy and into her feeling her hot centre close around me. She was slippery with the other guys' pre cu arousal, and my cock squelched into her as I began to fuck.

The girl's boots swung uncontrolled as they hung in the air, her knees hooked around my ar into her hard and fast. The girl's breasts bounced wildly on her chest and I bent my head for uncomfortably so I could suck on her pebble like nipples. I savoured the rubbery teats and s as I pumped into the girl's slippery opening, and I felt my arousal grow too much to control.

'Fuck... oh fuck...' I groaned. 'I'm sorry you witch... you're too fucking sexy... oh God.' My ser from my prick and flooded the girl's cunt.

Her eyes opened wide when she felt me spitting my seed deep inside her. 'I can feel you do squealed. 'I can feel it pumping.' She arched her back and pushed her body down on my twi me deeper inside. Finally my cock stopped pumping and I pulled out of the girl, my shaft coa that the friction from our fucking had created.

Instantly Stefan was at her. He pushed inside and began to fuck in a frenzy. Cum was oozin Stefan invaded her body. I could see it dribbling down the crack of her arse when Stefan lifte in the same manner I had taken her. The girl was moaning, eyes closed and was shaking he side to side.

She squealed loudly and Stefan gave a guttural grunt, obviously adding his load of spunk to and pushed his prick hard into the girl, more stuff leaked from her around Stefan's shaft, and thickly down the girl's buttocks and stained the chair she was being well and truly fucked in.
brought the girl's boyfriend over to see what the fuss was about. He boggled at the sight of h girl as Stefan climbed off her and he saw her inflamed, oozing pussy. 'Look at your little slut, whispered. 'Isn't she just gorgeous... look at that lovely spunk leaking out of her.

Yolanda knelt and lapped at the cum that was trickling out of the girl. She licked for a few se moved to kiss the girl with a mouthful of spunk. When she withdrew, both her face and the g by mine and Stefan's offerings.

'Wank onto her boys,' Yolanda said lewdly. 'Cover her lovely tits with your jizz.'

Brian, Nick and Danny all laughed at Yolanda's instruction and moved close to the girl, wank cocks as they got close. The young guy moved behind Yolanda, and she bent at the waist s firm buttocks out at him, offering herself to his thick cock once more. He held her waist and his hard cock back inside her own tight cunt.

'That's it lads, give her a face full,' Yolanda sighed as her young lover thrust roughly into her

Brian and Nick came almost simultaneously. They both swore and arced thick gobs of spunl breasts and soft belly. More of the stuff spattered onto her skin, some of it gleaming wetly w her black hold up stockings.

She sat wantonly, her inner thighs awash with the 2 earlier deposits, her breasts and stomac covered too. Danny moved close and the girl reached out and took control of his prick. She very soon afterwards Danny's prick spat its load of gooey spunk. Danny's cum took the girl b hitting hit her flush in the face. Thick strings of his jizz clung to the girl's blonde hair, hung on flushed cheeks and stained the velvet of her gloves.

The picture of his girlfriend covered in other men's' spunk, and with more of the goo leaking proved too much for the young guy. He grunted heavily before pumping deep into Yolanda's holding her hips and swearing as he pumped his ardour into her.

Yolanda cried out with delight when she felt him erupting inside her. 'Yeah baby, fill me up.
boy, give it all to Yolanda,' she sighed deeply.

Yolanda moved quickly when the young man had pumped his last jet inside her. She went to sat, sprawled, spunk spattered and well used on the stained chair.

Yolanda picked up the girl's hand and slowly licked the semen from the material of the glove from the girl's breasts and then knelt to lap more of the cum from where it still oozed from th cunt.

Yolanda kissed the girl again, sharing the various deposits with the pretty blonde. Us men w fascination as the two women shared a filthy, cum smeared, but somehow tender kiss. Ther her coup de grace by climbing above the girl as she sat on the chair. Squatting above the gi her inner muscles so that the young guy's spunk dripped onto his girlfriend's upturned face.

'Fuck me, that's got to be one of the filthiest, most sexy things I've ever seen,' Brian muttere you're one lucky bastard to be with that woman. ...You too, mate,' he said to the young guy a afterthought. The man just shrugged his shoulders and grinned sheepishly. There were a fe get straight with his girlfriend, and he wasn't sure how things were going to be between then little escapade.

Drunk Step Mom (Son takes advantage of horny stepmother) bysexpotsimy©

My name is Steve and I am of 19 years. I stand 5'11" above the ground and have a good bu footballer. Most people enjoy my company and I get around well with both, boys and girls. M when I was 12 and my father sent me to a hostel. I studied there for 4 years after which I ag living with my father. Our relationship developed into a mature one and I started looking forw only as a father but also as a friend and a guide.

Three months back my father married a girl Betty. I say girl because she was just 24 and loo than that. She was very short and had a petite frame. At 5'3" she still looked like another hig student and could easily pass as one. But only a few days after the marriage, my father was to immediately leave for Britain.

I felt sad as my father caught his flight, but my animal instincts made me feel gleeful at the p being alone with my new mom. My mom was a very naïve and looked after me as her real s feelings towards her. I saw that she was still raw and youthful. I knew that though she was s was sure I wouldn't be able to get to fuck her easily. Hence, I decided to play with her and la into the bed. I hadn't formulated any proper strategy of how I was going to do this, hence de my instincts.

We had just returned from the airfield, when my mother suddenly burst out crying. She fell in weeping on my shoulders. Pulling her closer to myself I started caressing her back and foun any bra. "Calm down mom, its part of life. I now you must be sad but still you've got me." As gripped her tightly pushing her boobs against my chest. I felt them rising as she breathed. M transfixed on her cleavage, out of which the tops of her breasts were plainly visible.

She stopped crying and washed here face. Her expressions made it apparent that she was her ass near me she mumbled a sorry. Holding her hand, I said, " Come on, after all you are nineteen year old with a mother of twenty-four who could comfortably pass as his date, I tho
"Why don't you go to your room, let me fix today's dinner." I asked her aloud. Nodding she w

"Dinner's ready!" I called out to her. She appeared in the doorway wearing a white robe, whi the one given to her by my father. I soon realized that she was out of her mind, or who else translucent gown without a bra?

The outline of her perfect boobs was clearly visible, while her pink nipples could also be see thin fabric. As I sat down on the table, the robe parted revealing her left tit. I hastily sat down hide my erection. Lost in her thoughts she didn't pay the least attention to dress. This is the to enter her juicy cunt, my mind screamed. I smiled to myself, knowing that I could easily tric my rod to enter her pussy.

"You look bushed, mom," I spoke, " I am sure you could do with some wine. It will help your and you would loosen up relieving you of this anxiety." I got up before she could utter a sing walked over to the bar. Her tit still hung limply, while she stared at the ceiling. Taking her gla little wine into it, along with a liberal amount of a strong whiskey. I took the glass over to the

"Here have some." I said in the most affectionate and loving tone to her. She initially resiste finally able to persuade her to drink. Taking one big gulp she drained the contents of the gla mouth. Immediately I got another, which she drank without hesitation. Now I started serving within another three drinks she was completely smashed. Her eyelids drooped and she stutt breath and leaned back. This pulled her robe further apart exposing one of her breasts comp other hung in a tantalizing way.

"How about watching a movie?" I proposed. Nodding her head, she said, " put on an interes my room and came back with a hardcore, in which a mother fucks her son. I hadn't seen a h entire life. " I hope you can bear something hot and sizzling." I said giving her a questioning bear children, then this is just a movie," she answered, along with a sluttish smile. I switched and sat down on the floor, in front of the sofa. Mom came and sat down next to me, with her only partially.

"It's hot here, do you mind me loosening up a little" and with that she opened her robe gener tits were now peeking from the robe. She shifted a bit, which now almost completely bared h was chocking inside my pants, but I didn't do any thing to hide my erection, which was clearl also loosen up a bit," I told her as I removed my shirt and pants. I was now sitting in underw next to me in a negligee of a gown, with both her melons staring at my face.

"Can you please massage my legs a bit, especially my thighs as it has been a tiring day." Sh me with a motherly smile. Without waiting for a reply she spread her legs a little. "If you wan massaged, you'll have to do it my way." I told her. "It's fine with me" she answered, her moth giving way to sluttish one. As if waiting for that reply, I quickly removed her gown uncovering legs and then started pulling her panties down. I was on cloud nine; the world's most beautif incidentally she was my mother, was sitting next to me, completely nude, as if waiting for so cunt. "You must be feeling a little uncomfortable, maybe I'll give you company" I said as I pu underwear revealing my bulging penis. She gasped, with her eyes transfixed on my rod, whi placed my left hand on one of her thighs, while pushing the other towards her stunning cunt.

wide apart exposing her completely. Her pussy was hot and wet as I started probing her. Un herself she jumped on me, grabbing my penis.

"I am your mother, and I should direct you" she said in a passionate voice. Taking my penis licking it rolling her bitchy tongue all over it. Mad with lust I pulled her boobs and started mas pinching her nipples along with. She moaned with ecstasy as I started licking them, while I p cunt. Her breath became heavy, as my dick almost choke her. She sucked it as if in frenzy n in her mouth. Grabbing her pussy I started licking it as her moans became louder and loude butt and pulled it towards her kissing me wildly all over. Excited she drowned me in her juice honey out of her cunt.

"I want you in me right now" she ordered, pulling my cock towards her slit. Grabbing my dick it into her pussy. Clutching her butts I slammed my dick into her tight pussy, pulling her brea wanting to tear them apart. She cried and moaned simultaneously. I pushed my cock deepe pussy as she shouted to me to slow down. I squirted in her pussy filling it up with my semen she still lying in my arms.

Lifting her I took her to the bathroom and washed her, still staring at her beautiful body. I slid onto her and tucked her in the bed.

Next morning I didn't know whether she would remember anything or not. My pulse quickene down the stairs. "What happened lat night? I don't remember clearly." She asked me. "Nothi while watching TV and then I took you to your room." I said giving her a smile. "I must have mouse I believe, moreover I had some sweet dreams." She spoke. I smiled slyly as she star the kitchen.

THE DISCOURSE ON EFFACEMENT

Introduction

The Buddha's Discourse on Effacement (Sallekha Sutta; quoted as M. 8) is the eighth of the Collection of Middle Length Texts (Majjhima Nikaya). Its subject matter is closely connected with that of preceding text, The Simile of the Cloth (M. 7), these two discourses supplement each other in several ways.

The Simile of the Cloth speaks of sixteen defilements of social conduct as impeding the progress on higher stages of the path to deliverance. The present Discourse on Effacement widens the range to forty-four detrimental qualities of mind which must effaced. These include thirteen of the sixteen defilements in M. 7,* but they go beyond the realm of social ethics, extending also to the hindrances, the path factors, etc.; and special attention is given to the effacement of wrong views (Sec. 12, No. 44). This discourse supplements M. 7 also by dealing with the practical methods of effacement, from the very beginning with thought-arising (Sec. 13), on to avoidance (Sec. 14), etc.; and these methods apply as well to the purification from the sixteen defilements given in M. 7. On the other hand, the 7th discourse gives more details about the higher stages of progress that follow after the initial and partial purification.

*[Items 1-11 and 16 of list in Sec. 3 of M. 7.]

(Sec. 12) "Effacement" means the radical removal of detrimental qualities of mind. The forty-four Modes of Effacement (as we may call them) are enumerated in this discourse no less than five times, and the first formulation (in Sec. 12) is very significant: "Others will be harmful, we shall not be harmful here," and so forth through all the other items. This bespeaks of the Buddha's realistic outlook as befitting a world that cannot be improved by mere wishing nor by "preaching at it. " There is no use nor hope in waiting for our neighbour to change his ways. "Cleanup campaigns" should start at our own door, and then the neighbours may well be more responsive to our own example than to our preaching. Besides, if the aim is the radical effacement of mental defilements, we cannot afford to waste time and be deviated from our task by side-long glances at the behaviour of others. Here lurks, in addition, the danger of pride. Hence the //Sutta Nipata// (v. 918) warns that "though possessing many a virtue one should not compare oneself with others by deeming oneself better or equal or inferior." It is a virtue that squints" (Chungtze) that win deprive the progress on the path of the element of self-forgetting joyous spontaneity.

There is yet another reason for the injunction not to look to others' behaviour or misbehaviour, and this applies particularly to the defilements of social conduct mentioned in the Simile of the Cloth. It is quite human to feel disappointed if one's selflessness, kindliness, modesty, and so on, do not find much response in the behaviour of others. Such disappointment may well discourage a person not only from continuing to live according to his moral standard, but also from advancing further on the road to selflessness towards higher states of mental development. Such a person, after an initial disappointment, may easily be led to retire into the role of the "disgruntled moralist" as a respectable cloak for an egocentric life. Here we meet the limitations and risks of a morality solely motivated by the social response to it. To avoid such a blind alley on one's road of progress, it is important to make from the very beginning that "declaration of moral independence," which we may summarize thus: "Others may act, speak and think wrongly, but we shall act, speak and think rightly - thus effacement can be done."

(Sec. 13) But the Buddha, as a knower of the human heart, was well aware that such a single or even repeated resolve will not always be strong enough to stir people into action. Hence, as an encouragement to those who may feel disheartened by their failures, he speaks now of the importance of the "arising of thoughts" aiming at carrying out those acts of effacement. But again, these thoughts will not be effective unless they are regularly and systematically cultivated and are not allowed to lapse into oblivion. Then gradually they will be absorbed by our mind and heart, and we shall fully identify ourselves with those values. In that way these thoughts and aspirations will grow stronger and will be able to overcome the resistance of inertia and antagonistic forces, from within and without. The Master said: "To whatsoever one frequently gives attention and repeatedly reflects on, to that the mind will turn" (M. 19). The great German mystic of the Middle Ages, Meister Eckhart, goes even a step further by saying: "If you do not have the longing, have at least a longing for the longing."

(Sec. 14) Next to cultivating "the heart's resolve," the first direct step towards effacing the defilements is to know them, that is, the clear and honest confrontation with them in one's own mind, as we pointed out when considering the Simile of the Cloth (see the Introduction to it, p. 3). This will surely help in preventing their re-arising. But for strengthening and extending that effect, it is necessary to cultivate also the positive counterparts of those forty-four negative qualities, as taught in the instruction on avoidance. The Buddha's formulation in this section conveys the encouraging word that there actually exists such a road for avoiding or circumventing the wrong path. The Buddha said: "If it were not possible to give up what is evil, I would not tell you to give it up; if it were not possible to develop what is good, I would not tell you to develop it" (Ang. 2:2).

In the field of insight (//vipassana//), this method is called "abandoning by the opposite" (//tadangapahana//), but by extension we may apply this term also to the wider range of our present context.

(Sec. 15) Apart from its highest purpose, the cultivation of positive qualities of mind is, on any level, a road of progress, a "way that leads upwards." It brings results here and now, and leads to a favourable and happy rebirth. It will preserve and unfold what is best in us and prevent it from deterioration. Considering the fearful possibilities in man's own nature and in the realms of existence, this is no mean benefit of training the mind for the final effacement of defilements, even if the results remain modest for a long time.

(Sec. 16) For him who has advanced so far, there is now the warning in the text that he should not set himself up as a saviour of others while "there is still more to do" for him. At this stage, the disciple may have effected some partial effacement, but still the fires of greed, hatred and delusion are not quenched in him; or, to express it with the other metaphor here used, he is still immersed in the mire. Though his chances for freeing himself from that bog of samsara have improved, any wrong step, or just his negligence and lack of persevering effort, may cause a setback. Hence a determined effort should now be made for the final "quenching," for radical effacement.

(Secs. 1-11) This warning against an overestimation of one's position links up with the first sections of our text which we have still to consider. They likewise deal with the overrating of one's achievements, here in the fields of insight and meditative absorptions. Even initial steps in these fields may result in experiences having such a strong impact on the mind that it is psychologically understandable if they lead to overestimation. This does not necessarily mean overrating oneself through pride, but overrating the position of one's achievements on the path of progress. One may believe them to be complete in their field while they are only partial or to be final while they are only temporary suppressions.

(Sec. 3) If confronted with "wrong views on self and world," one will, at first sight, be inclined to believe that any trace of them in oneself can be eliminated by intellectual refutation, that is, by proving to one's own satisfaction that they are untenable. And if one has a firm conviction in the truth of the Dhamma, it will be easy to assume that one has discarded wrong views for good. In that overestimation one may even go as far as to believe that one has entirely overcome the first of the ten fetters, personality-belief, and hence is on the way to Stream-entry, or has even reached it. But this can never be achieved on the intellectual level alone, nor even on the first stages of insight-meditation, which in themselves are no mean achievement.

Misconceptions of self and world, which may be quite instinctive and un-philosophical, are deeply anchored in man's nature. They are rooted not only in his intellectual opinions (//ditthi//), but also in his cravings (//tanha//) and in his pride and self-assertion (//mana//). All these three roots of wrong attitudes identify the alleged self or ego with the five aggregates (//khandha//) comprising personality-and-environment. These wrong attitudes towards self and world may manifest themselves on various levels: as casual thought-arisings, as a habitual bias, and in words and deeds (see Note 8). Only if the self-identification with the actual "objects of wrong views," i.e. the five aggregates, is radically dissolved on the stage of Stream-entry, can it be said that wrong views of self and world have been totally eliminated, together with the bias towards them. As also craving and pride are involved in the formation of wrong views, efforts for their effacement have to be undertaken also on the level of ethical behaviour. Hence the ethical part of the forty-four Modes of Effacement has validity also for the removal of wrong views.

(Secs. 4-11) The eight meditative attainments lift the human consciousness to sublime heights of refinement; yet, in the case of each, the Buddha emphatically says that they are not states of effacement, as he understands them. They can effect only temporary subsidence of defilements, and if unsupported by mature virtue and insight, they cannot penetrate deep enough into the recesses of the mind for a radical removal of moral and intellectual defilements. It comes as a kind of anti-climax that after mentioning those sublime meditative attainments, the Buddha now speaks (in Sec. 12) of such quite "ordinary and earth-bound" ethical qualities as harmlessness, and ascribes to them, and not to the meditative absorptions, the capacity of leading to effacement. This juxtaposition implies, indeed, a very strong emphasis on the necessity of a sound ethical foundation for any spiritual progress. Often we find that mystic thought, in India and elsewhere, evolving a monastic system from wrongly interpreted unificatory meditative experience, has either ignored ethics or found it difficult to give it a convincing place and motivation in its system. The exultation of mystic experience also often leads the meditator to a premature feeling of having gone "beyond good and evil". Such developments illustrate the wisdom of the Buddha in insisting on a sound ethical basis instead of an exclusive reliance on mystic experience.

* * *

When examining closely the structure of this discourse, we find in it a repeated balancing of contrasting attitudes of mind and of complementary qualities required for progress on the path. Just now we have observed that meditative achievements have to be balanced with deeply rooted ethical virtues, which will also provide a link between the "lone meditator" and "common humanity." With the last of the forty-four Modes of Effacement the effacing of wrong views is taken up again, linking up with the beginning of the discourse and balancing the stress on ethical values in most of the other modes. In the phrasing of that last mode we note the stress laid on the overcoming of opinionatedness and tenacity. This points to the fact that, for the initial "loosening up" and final overcoming of wrong views, the following ethical modes are of decisive importance: amenability (34) and an increasing freedom from a domineering attitude (27), obstinacy (32) and arrogance (33).

The entire discourse seems to be designed to meet, in a very thorough manner, two opposite psychological obstacles on the path: discouragement in the face of its difficulties, and overrating of partial results. The first part of the discourse (Sees. 1-11) deals with the latter extreme, by stressing the limitations of initial and partial progress. But for meeting any discouragement caused by these warnings, the Compassionate Master speaks of the value of seemingly simple ethical virtues and stresses the importance of the heart's earnest resolve (Sec. 13) as the first step which anyone can take who is serious about treading the path of actual effacement.

These features of the discourse, without being stated explicitly, are inherent in its very structure. They will reveal themselves by a close scrutiny as here attempted, and particularly by the actual practice of the teachings concerned. The Buddha appears here as the great Teacher of the Middle Path and the incomparable guide of men's hearts, deeply concerned that those who tread the path may avoid the pitfalls of extreme emotional reactions and of one-sided emphasis on any single aspect of the threefold totality of training: in virtue, concentration and insight.

* * *

As in the preceding discourse, the rendering of the present one also has been chiefly based on Nanamoli Thera's manuscript translation. To a lesser extent use has been made of phrasings by Soma Thera and I. B. Horner; and for some passages the Editor's own version has been included.

The Discourse on Effacement
(Sallekha Sutta)

1. Thus have I heard. Once the Blessed One was staying at Savatthi, in Jeta's Grove, Anathapindika's monastery.

2. Then one evening the venerable Maha-Cunda[1] rose from meditative seclusion and went to the Blessed One. Having paid homage to him, he sat down at one side and spoke thus to the Blessed One:

3. "Venerable sir, there are these various views that arise in the world concerning self-doctrines or world-doctrines.[2] Does the abandoning and discarding of such views come about in a monk who is only at the beginning of his (meditative) reflections?"[3]

"Cunda, as to those several views that arise in the world concerning self-doctrines and world-doctrines, if (the object) in which [4] these views arise, in which they underlie and become active, [5] is seen with right wisdom [6] as it actually is, [7] thus: 'This is not mine, [8] this I am not, [9] this is not my self'[10] -then the abandoning of these views, their discarding, [11] takes place in him (who thus sees).

The Eight Attainments

4. "It may be, Cunda, that some monk, detached from sense-objects, detached from unsalutary ideas, enters into the first absorption that is born of detachment, accompanied by thought-conception and discursive thinking, and filled with rapture and joy, and he then might think: 'I am abiding in effacement.' But in the Noble One's discipline it is not these (attainments) that are called 'effacement'; in the Noble One's discipline they are called 'abidings in ease here and now.' [12]

5. "It may be that after the stilling of thought conception and discursive thinking, he gains the inner tranquillity and harmony of the second absorption that is free of thought-conception and discursive thinking, born of concentration and filled with rapture and joy; and he then might think: 'I am abiding in effacement.' But in the Noble One's discipline it is not these (attainments) that are called 'effacement'; in the Noble One's discipline they are caged 'abidings in ease here and now.'

6. "It may be that after the fading away of rapture, the monk dwells in equanimity, mindful and clearly aware, and he experiences a happiness in his body of which the Noble Ones say: 'Happily lives he who dwells in equanimity and is mindful!' -- that third absorption he wins; and he then might think: 'I am abiding in effacement.' But in the Noble One's discipline it is not these (attainments) that are called 'effacement'; in the Noble One's discipline they are called 'abidings in ease here and now.'

7. "It may be that with the abandoning of pleasure and pain, and with the previous disappearance of joy and grief, he enters upon and abides in the fourth absorption, which is beyond pleasure and pain and has purity of mindfulness due to equanimity; and he then might think: 'I am abiding in effacement.' But in the Noble One's discipline it is not these (attainments) that are called 'effacement'; in the Noble One's discipline they are called 'abidings in ease here and now.'

8. "It may be that, with the entire transcending of perceptions of corporeality,[13] with the disappearance of perceptions of sense-response,' [14] with non-attention to perceptions of variety, [15] thinking: 'Space is infinite,' some monk enters upon and abides in the sphere of infinite space; and he then might think: 'I am abiding in effacement.' But in the Noble One's discipline it is not these (attainments) that are called 'effacement'; in the Noble One's discipline they are called 'peaceful abidings.'

9. "It may be that by entirely transcending the sphere of infinite space, thinking: 'Consciousness is infinite,' some monk enters and abides in the sphere of infinite consciousness; and he then might think: 'I am abiding in effacement.' But in the Noble One's discipline it is not these (attainments) that are called 'effacement'; in the Noble One's discipline they are called 'peaceful abidings.'

10. "It may be that by entirely transcending the sphere of infinite consciousness, some monk enters and abides in the sphere of nothingness; and he then might think: I am abiding in effacement.' But in the Noble One's discipline it is not these (attainments) that are called 'effacement'; in the Noble One's discipline they are called 'peaceful abidings.'

11. "It may be that, by entirely transcending the sphere of nothingness, some monk enters and abides in the sphere of neither-perception-nor-non-perception; and he then might think: 'I am abiding in effacement.' But in the Noble One's discipline it is not these (attainments) that are called 'effacement'; in the Noble one's discipline they are called 'peaceful abidings.'

Effacement

12. "But herein, Cunda, effacement should be practised by you: [16]

(1) others will be harmful; we shall not be harmful here -- thus effacement can be done. [17]

(2) Others will kill living beings; we shall abstain from killing living beings here -- thus effacement can be done.

(3) Others will take what is not given; we shall abstain from taking what is not given here -- thus effacement can be done.

(4) Others will be unchaste; we shall be chaste here -- thus effacement can be done.

(5) Others will speak falsehood; we shall abstain from false speech here -- thus effacement can be done.

(6) Others win speak maliciously; we shall abstain from malicious speech here -- thus effacement can be done.

(7) Others will speak harshly; we shall abstain from harsh speech here -- thus effacement can be done.

(8) Others will gossip; we shall abstain from gossip here -- thus effacement can be done.

(9) Others will be covetous; we shall not be covetous here -- thus effacement can be done.

(10) Others will have thoughts of ill will; we shall not have thoughts of ill will here -- thus effacement can be done.

(11) Others will have wrong views; we shall have right view here -- thus effacement can be done.

(12) Others will have wrong intention; we shall have right intention here -- thus effacement can be done.

(13) Others will use wrong speech; we shall use right speech here -- thus effacement can be done.

(14) Others will commit wrong actions; we shall do right actions here -- thus effacement can be done.

(15) Others will have wrong livelihood; we shall have right livelihood here -- thus effacement can be done.

(16) Others will make wrong effort; we shall make right effort here -- thus effacement can be done.

(17) Others will have wrong mindfulness; we shall have right mindfulness here -- thus effacement can be done.

(18) Others will have wrong concentration; we shall have right concentration here -- thus effacement can be done.

(19) Others will have wrong knowledge; we shall have right knowledge here -- thus effacement can be done.

(20) Others will have wrong deliverance; we shall have right deliverance here -- thus effacement can be done.

(21) Others will be overcome by sloth and torpor; we shall be free from sloth and torpor here -- thus effacement can be done.

(22) Others will be agitated; we shall be unagitated here -- thus effacement can be done.

(23) Others will be doubting; we shall be free from doubt here -- thus effacement can be done.

(24) Others will be angry; we shall not be angry here -- thus effacement can be done.

(25) Others will be hostile; we shall not be hostile here -- thus effacement can be done.

(26) Others will denigrate; we shall not denigrate here -- thus effacement can be done.

(27) Others will be domineering; we shall not be domineering here -- thus effacement can be done.

(28) Others will be envious; we shall not be envious here -- thus effacement can be done.

(29) Others will be jealous; we shall not be jealous here -- thus effacement can be done.

(30) Others will be fraudulent; we shall not be fraudulent here -- thus effacement can be done.

(31) Others will be hypocrites; we shall not be hypocrites here -- thus effacement can be done.

(32) Others will be obstinate; we shall not be obstinate here -- thus effacement can be done.

(33) Others will be arrogant; we shall not be arrogant here -- thus effacement can be done.

(34) Others will be difficult to admonish; we shall be easy to admonish here -- thus effacement can be done.

(35) Others will have bad friends; we shag have noble friends here -- thus effacement can be done.

(36) Others will be negligent; we shall be heedful here -- thus effacement can be done.

(37) Others will be faithless; we shall be faithful here -- thus effacement can be done.

(38) Others will be shameless; we shall be shameful here -- thus effacement can be done.

(39) Others will be without conscience; we shall have conscience here -- thus effacement can be done.

(40) Others will have no learning; we shall be learned here -- thus effacement can be done.

(41) Others will be idle; we shall be energetic here -- thus effacement can be done.

(42) Others will be lacking in mindfulness; we shall be established in mindfulness here -- thus effacement can be done.

(43) Others will be without wisdom; we shag be endowed with wisdom -- thus effacement can be done.

(44) Others will misapprehend according to their individual views, hold on to them tenaciously and not easily discard them;[18] we shall not misapprehend according to individual views nor hold on to them tenaciously, but shall discard them with ease -- thus effacement can be done.

The Arising of Thought

13. "Cunda, I say that even the arising of a thought concerned with salutary things (and ideas)[19] is of great importance, not to speak of bodily acts and words conforming (to such thought).[20] Therefore, Cunda:

(1) The thought should be produced: 'Others will be harmful; we shall not be harmful here.'

(2) The thought should be produced: 'Others will kill living beings; we shall abstain from killing living beings here.'

(3)-(43) . . .

(44) The thought should be produced: 'Others will misapprehend according to their individual views, hold on to them tenaciously and not easily discard them; we shall not misapprehend according to individual views nor hold on to them tenaciously, but shag discard them with ease.'

Avoidance

14. "Suppose, Cunda, there were an uneven road and another even road by which to avoid it; and suppose there were an uneven ford and another even ford by which to avoid it. [21] So too:

(1) A person given to harmfulness has non-harming by which to avoid it.

(2) A person given to killing living beings has abstention from killing by which to avoid it.

(3) A person given to taking what is not given has abstention from taking what is not given by which to avoid it.

(4) A person given to unchastity has chastity by which to avoid it.

(5) A person given to false speech has abstention from false speech by which to avoid it.

(6) A person given to malicious speech has abstention from malicious speech by which to avoid it.

(7) A person given to harsh speech has abstention from harsh speech by which to avoid it.

(8) A person given to gossip has abstention from gossip by which to avoid it.

(9) A person given to covetousness has non-covetousness by which to avoid it.

(10) A person given to thoughts of ill will has non-ill will by which to avoid it.

(11) A person given to wrong view has right view by which to avoid it.

(12) A person given to wrong intention has right intention by which to avoid it.

(13) A person given to wrong speech has right speech by which to avoid it.

(14) A person given to wrong action has right action by which to avoid it.

(15) A person given to wrong livelihood has right livelihood by which to avoid it.

(16) A person given to wrong effort has right effort by which to avoid it.

(17) A person given to wrong mindfulness has right mindfulness by which to avoid it.

(18) A person given to wrong concentration has right concentration by which to avoid it.

(19) A person given to wrong knowledge has right knowledge by which to avoid it.

(20) A person given to wrong deliverance has right deliverance by which to avoid it.

(21) A person overcome by sloth and torpor has freedom from sloth and torpor by which to avoid it.

(22) A person given to agitation has non-agitation by which to avoid it.

(23) A person given to doubting has freedom from doubt by which to avoid it.

(24) A person given to anger has freedom from anger by which to avoid it.

(25) A person given to hostility has freedom from hostility by which to avoid it.

(26) A person given to denigrating has non-denigrating by which to avoid it.

(27) A person given to domineering has non-domineering by which to avoid it.

(28) A person given to envy has non-envy by which to avoid it.

(29) A person given to jealousy has non-jealousy by which to avoid it.

(30) A person given to fraud has non-fraud by which to avoid it.

(31) A person given to hypocrisy has non-hypocrisy by which to avoid it.

(32) A person given to obstinacy has non-obstinacy by which to avoid it.

(33) A person given to arrogance bas non-arrogance by which to avoid it.

(34) A person difficult to admonish has amenability by which to avoid it.

(35) A person given to making bad friends has making good friends by which to avoid it.

(36) A person given to negligence has heedfulness by which to avoid it.

(37) A person given to faithlessness has faith by which to avoid it.

(38) A person given to shamelessness has shame by which to avoid it.

(39) A person without conscience has conscience by which to avoid it.

(40) A person without learning has acquisition of great learning by which to avoid it.

(41) A person given to idleness has energetic endeavour by which to avoid it.

(42) A person without mindfulness has the establishment of mindfulness by which to avoid it.

(43) A person without wisdom has wisdom by which to avoid it.

(44) A person given to misapprehending according to his individual views, to holding on to them tenaciously and not discarding them easily, has non-misapprehension of individual views, non-holding on tenaciously and ease in discarding by which to avoid it.

The Way Upward

15. "Cunda, as all unsalutary states lead downward and all salutary states lead upward, even so, Cunda:

(1) A person given to harmfulness has harmlessness to lead him upward.[22]

(2) A person given to killing living beings bas abstention from killing to lead him upwards.

(3)-(43) . . .

(44) A person given to misapprehending according to his individual views, to holding on to them tenaciously and not discarding them easily, has non-misapprehension of individual views, non-holding on tenaciously and ease in discarding to lead him upward.

Quenching

16. "Cunda, it is impossible that one who is himself sunk in the mire[23] should pull out another who is sunk in the mire. But it is possible, Cunda, that one not sunk in the mire himself should pull out another who is sunk in the mire.

"It is not possible, Cunda, that one who is himself not restrained, not disciplined and not quenched (as to his passions), [24] should make others restrained and disciplined, should make them attain to the full quenching (of passions).[25] But it is possible, Cunda, that one who is himself restrained, disciplined and fully quenched (as to his passions) should make others restrained and disciplined, should make them attain to the full quenching (of passions). Even so, Cunda: [26]

(1) A person given to harmfulness has harmlessness by which to attain to the full quenching (of it).

(2) A person given to killing living beings has abstention from killing by which to attain to the full quenching (of it).

(3)-(43) . . .

(44) A person given to misapprehending according to his individual views, to holding on to them tenaciously and not discarding them easily, has non-misapprehension of individual views, non-holding on tenaciously and ease in discarding by which to attain the quenching (of them).

Conclusion

17. "Thus, Cunda, I have shown to you the instruction on effacement, I have shown to you the instruction on thought's arising, I have shown to you the instruction on avoidance, I have shown to you the instruction on the way upward, I have shown to you the instruction on quenching.

18. "What can be done for his disciples by a Master who seeks their welfare and has compassion and pity on them, that I have done for you, Cunda. [27] There are these roots of trees, there are empty places. Meditate, Cunda, do not delay, lest you later regret it. 'This is my message to you."

Thus spoke the Blessed One. Satisfied, the venerable Cunda rejoiced in the Blessed One's words.

* * *

The concluding verse added by the 'Theras of the First Council:

Deep like the ocean is this Suttanta on Effacement,
Dealing with forty-four items, showing them in five sections.

NOTES

1. Maha-Cunda Thera was the brother of the venerable Sariputta Thera.

2. //Self-doctrines or world-doctrines// (//atta-vada, lokavada//). According to Comy., this refers: (a) to the twenty types of personality-belief (//sakkaya-ditthi//), i.e. four for each of the five aggregates (//khandha//); (b) to eight wrong views about self and world, as being eternal, not eternal, both eternal and not eternal, neither eternal nor not eternal, and the same four alternatives concerning finite and infinite.

3. //In a monk who is only at the beginning of his (meditative) reflections// (//adim-eva manasikaroto//). Comy.: "This refers to one who is at the beginning of his insight-meditation (//vipassana-bhavana//) and has not yet attained to Stream-entry," when the fetter of personality-belief is finally eliminated. The beginner's insight-practice extends from the "discernment of mentality and corporeality" (//namarupa-pariccheda//) up to the "knowledge of rise and fall" (//udayabbaya-nana//), on which see //Path of Purification// (//Visuddhimagga//), Chs. XVIII, XX, XXI.

According to the Comy., the Thera's question concerns those who overrate the degree of their achievement, i.e. those who believe that, in their meditative practice, they have achieved this or that result while actually they have not. Overestimation (//abhimana//), in that sense, "does not arise in ignorant common people (//bala-puthujjana//) who are entirely engrossed in worldly life, nor does it arise in Noble Disciples (//ariya-savaka//); because in a Stream-winner the overestimation does not arise that he is a Once-returner, etc. Self-overestimation can occur only in one who actually practises (meditation) and has temporarily subdued the defilements by way of tranquillity or insight. Maha-Cunda Thera, being an Arahat, was no self-overrater himself, but in formulating his question, he put himself in the place of one who is; or, as others say, there may have been such "self-overraters" among his pupils, and for conveying to them the Buddha's reply, he put his question.

4. //(The object) in which// (//yattha//). Comy.: //yattha// (where) = //yasmim arammane//. The object, or basis, the five aggregates, because all false views on self and world can refer only to the five aggregates to one of them. See //Discourse on the Snake Simile// (Wheel No. 47/48), p. 8, and //Anatta and Nibbana//, by Nyanaponika Thera (Wheel No. 11), p. 18 (quotation).

5. //In which these views arise// (//yattha uppajjanti//), i.e. arise for the first time, without having occurred earlier (Comy.).

//Underlie// (//anusenti//), i.e. habitually occur (cf. //anusaya//, "tendency," which may be latent or active). Comy.: "This refers to views which, having been indulged in repeatedly, have become strong and have not been removed." Sub.Comy.: "By ultimate elimination (//samuccheda-vinaya-vasena//)."

//Become active// (//samudacaranti//). Comy.: "Wrong views have arrived at the (action-) doors of body and speech," i.e. which have found expression in words and deeds.

6. //With right wisdom// (//sammappannaya//). Comy.: "With insight-wisdom, ending with the knowledge pertaining to the path of Stream-entry."

7. //As it actually is// (//yatha-bhutam//). Comy.: "Because the five aggregates exist only in that manner (i.e. as something 'that is not mine,' etc.). But if conceived in the way 'It is mine,' etc., it simply does not exist (//n'ev'atthi//)."

8. //This is not mine//: hereby craving (//tanha//) is rejected.

9. //This I am not//: this refers to the rejection of conceit (//mana//).

10. //This is not my self//: this refers to the rejection of false views (//ditthi//).

11. //Abandoning . . . discarding// (//pahanam . . . patinissaggo//). Comy.: "Both terms are synonymous with the ultimate eradication of wrong views, taking place at Stream-entry when the fetter of personality belief is destroyed."

12. Now the Buddha speaks, on his own, of another type of "self-overrater," i.e. of those who have realized any of the eight meditative attainments (//samapatti//) and believe that this signifies true "effacement" (//sallekha//).

The common meaning of //sallekha//* is austere practice or asceticism; but in the Buddha's usage it is the radical "effacing" or removal of the defilements.

*[//Sallekha// (= //sam-lekha//) is derived from the verbal root //likh//, to scratch; hence //likhati// (a) to scratch in, to write; (b) to scratch off, to remove: //samlikhati//, "to remove fully." An interesting parallel is "//ascesis//," derived from the Greek //askeuein//, to scratch. The rendering by "effacement" is Nanamoli Thera's; Soma Thera has "cancelling"; I. B. Horner, "expunging."]

The eight stages of meditation given here in the discourse, consist of the four fine-material absorptions (//rupajjhana/) and the four immaterial absorptions (/arupajjhana//). Comy. says that these meditative attainments "are in common with the ascetics outside (the Buddha's Dispensation)."

Comy.: "The overrater's meditative absorption is neither 'effacement' nor is it the 'path of practice for effacement' (//sallekha-patipada//). And why not? Because that jhana is not used by him as a basis for insight; that is, after rising from jhana he does not scrutinise the (physical and mental) formations" (see //Visuddhimagga// transl. by Nanamoli, Ch. XVIII, 3). His jhana produces only one-pointedness of mind, and is, as our text says, an "abiding in ease here and now."

13. "By '//perceptions of corporeality//' (//rupasanna//) are meant the absorptions of the fine-material sphere (//rupajjhana//) as well as those things that are their objects" (//Visuddhimagga//).

14. //Perceptions of sense-response// (lit. resistance, //patigha-sanna//) are perceptions arisen through the impact of the physical sense bases (eye, etc.) and their objects.

15. //Perceptions of variety// (//nanatta-sanna//) are perceptions that arise in a variety of fields, or various perceptions in various fields. This refers to all perceptions belonging to the sense sphere (//kamavacara//).

16. Comy.: "Now, the Blessed One shows in forty-four ways where effacement should be practised. But why are harmlessness and the other states regarded as effacement, unlike the eight meditative attainments? Because they are a basis for the supramundane (//lokuttara-padaka//); while, for outsiders, the eight attainments are merely a basis for (continuing) the round of existence (//vatta-padaka//), (because by non-Buddhists they are practised for the sake of rebirth in higher worlds). But in the Buddha's Dispensation, even the Going for Refuge is a basis for the supramundane.

Sub.Comy.: "If one, wishing to overcome the suffering of samsara, goes with joyful confidence for refuge to the Triple Gem, then this Refuge will be for him a supporting condition for higher virtue, etc. (i.e. higher mentality and higher wisdom), and it may gradually lead him to the attainment of the path of understanding (//dassana-magga//; i.e. Stream-entry)."

The Forty-four Ways of Effacement

(1) //Harmful and harmless// are not attached to a group of standard doctrinal categories as most of the other qualities are. On "harmlessness" see Note 17.

(2)-(11) are the courses of action (//kammapatha//), unsalutary (//akusala//) and salutary (//kusala//), referring to body (2-4), speech (5-8) and mind (9-11).

(12)-(18) are the last seven factors of the eightfold path (wrong and right), also called the eight states of wrongness or rightness (//micchatta, sammatta//). The first path factor, right (or wrong) view, is not separately mentioned, being identical with (11).

(19)-(20) are often added to the eightfold path.

(21)-(23) are the last three of the five hindrances (//nivarana//); the first two are identical with (9) and (10), and therefore not repeated here.

(24)-(33) are ten of the sixteen defilements (//upakkilesa//) mentioned in M.7 (Simile of the Cloth).

(34)-(36) are called in the Commentary the miscellaneous factors (//pakinnaka//).

(37)-(43) are the seven "good qualities" (//saddhamma//), mentioned in M. 53. Comy.: "In this connection they are mentioned as forming the complete equipment required for insight (//vipassana-sambharo paripuro//)."

(44) is unattached to any group of terms. (See Note 18).

17. Comy.: "Harmlessness is called 'effacement,' because it effaces harmfulness, i.e. it cuts it off (//chindati//). This method of explanation applies to all other terms."

Sub.Comy.: "But why is harmlessness (or nonviolence, //ahimsa//) mentioned at the very beginning? Because it is the root of all virtues; harmlessness, namely, is a synonym of compassion. Especially, it is the root-cause of morality because it makes one refrain from immorality which has as its characteristic mark the harming of others. Just as the killing of living beings has the harming of others as its mark, so also the taking away of others' property; for 'robbing a man's wealth is worse than stabbing him.'* Similarly, chastity removes the cause for the pains of child bearing, etc., and there is hardly a need to mention the harm done by adultery.

*[This is given in Pali as direct speech or quote; perhaps it was a common adage.]

"Obvious is also the harm done to others by deception, by causing dissension and by backbiting. The mark of harming others is also attached to gossip because it takes away what is beneficial and causes to arise what is not beneficial; to covetousness, as it causes one to take what is not given; to ill will, as it causes killing, etc.; to wrong views, as they are the cause of all that is un-beneficial. One who holds wrong views may, in the conviction of acting righteously, kill living beings and incite others to do likewise. There is nothing to say about other (and lesser immoral acts induced by false views).

"Harmlessness (i.e. the principle of non-violence) has the characteristic mark of making one refrain from immorality which, on its part, has the mark of harming. Hence harmlessness is an especially strong productive cause of morality; and morality, again, is the basis for concentration of mind, while concentration is the basis for wisdom. In that way harmlessness (non-violence) is the root of all virtues.

"Furthermore, in the case of the highest type of men (//uttamapurisa//) who have noble aspirations, who act considerately and wisely, also their mental concentration and their wisdom, just as their morality, is conducive to the weal and happiness of others. In that way, too, compassion is the root of all virtues, and therefore it has been mentioned at the beginning.

"Now, (after harmlessness), the salutary courses of action (//kusala-kammapatha//; 2-11) are to show that these states are produced by harmlessness. Then follow the eight states of rightness (11-18) to show that they must be brought about by basing them on morality, which is the root of these virtues. Now the separation from the hindrances (21-23, and 16, 17) is included to indicate that this is the primary task for one intent on purifying (his practice of) the eightfold path. Then follows the cleansing from the defilements (24-33) to indicate that effacement is accomplished by giving up anger (24), etc. And the cleansing from the defilements will be successful when aided by amenability to advice, noble friendship and heedful diligence (34-36).

"Now the seven noble qualities (37-43) are included to show that they will come to perfection in him who is endowed with amenability and the other (two factors); and that they, on their part, after having strengthened insight, will lead to the paths of sanctitude. (See end of Note 16.)

"Finally, the passage on 'misapprehending according to one's individual views,' etc. (44) is meant to indicate that for such a one (i.e. for one bent on effacement) that wrong attitude is an obstacle to the attainment of the supramundane virtues and is, therefore, to be avoided totally. This passage on misapprehending (about which see Note 18) is also meant to show that one who, by the right conduct here described, is in the process of attaining one of the paths of sanctitude, win be led to the acme of effacement (by this last-mentioned threefold way of effacement).

"In this manner should be understood the purpose of stating these forty-four modes of effacement as well as the order in which they appear in the discourse."

18. Comy.: "A single wrong view (or wrong attitude), which is an obstacle for the supramundane qualities and hence does not lead to emancipation, is here described in three aspects:

(a) //Others will misapprehend according to their individual views// (//sanditthi-paramasi//). Sub.Comy.: //sa(m)// = //attano//, one's own. //Paramasi// means setting aside the actual nature of a thing, one conceives it differently (//sabhavam atikkamitva parato amasana//).

(b) Hold on tenaciously (//adhanaggahi//). Sub. Comy.: //adhana// = //dalha//, tight, firm.

(c) Discards not easily. Comy.: "There are those who can discard their views on seeing a convincing reason. But others, even if shown many reasons, cannot give up their views; and of them it is said that they 'do not discard easily.' It refers to those who cling firmly to a subjective view that has occurred to them, believing 'only this is the truth.' Even if the Buddhas or others show them reasons, they do not relinquish their views. Such people, whatever idea they conceive, be it in accordance with Dhamma or not, will say: 'So it has been told by our teacher. So we have learned it'; and they will withdraw into themselves like a turtle drawing its limbs into its shell. They hold on to their views with the tight grip of a crocodile and do not let go."

19. //Salutary//: //kusala//, also translated by wholesome, profitable, skilful. There salutary things, says Sub. Comy., are the modes of effacement mentioned.

20. Sub.Comy.: "For those who cannot take up, by actual application, the practice of effacement, even the arising of a thought (//cittuppado//), i.e. an inclination for it, is of great importance.

Comy. says that a salutary thought is of great importance as it leads entirely to weal and happiness, and as it is the cause for the subsequent actions conforming to it. Examples are given beginning with the intention to give almsfood to monks, up to the aspiration for Buddhahood. The Sub.Comy., however, says that in some cases the importance is not in the thought itself but only in the actual execution of it. This certainly applies to the intention to give alms, etc. But in the efforts for effacing the defilements, the formation of a mental attitude directed towards it, in other words, the heart's resolve, is certainly an important factor.

This section of the discourse has been condensed in the present translation. But he who has chosen the path of effacement as his way of practice (//patipada//) is well advised to repeat all forty-four items, linking them with his heart's earnest resolve. Also, the last two sections of the discourse have been condensed.

21. Comy.: "//Parikkamana// (lit. going around, circumventing) has the meaning of 'avoiding' (//parivajjana//). For the avoiding of harmfulness there is the ready road of harmlessness, walking on which one may easily experience felicity among humans or deities, or one may cross over (by that ford) from this world (to the other shore, Nibbana). The same method of explanation applies to the other sentences."

22. Comy.: "The meaning is this: Any unsalutary states of mind, whether they produce rebirth or not, and whether, in a given rebirth, they produce kamma results or not -- all, because of their type, i.e. by being unsalutary, lead downwards (to lower worlds). They are just like that because, on the occasion of their yielding a kamma result, that result will be undesirable and unpleasant.

"Any salutary states of mind, whether they produce rebirth or not, and whether, in a given rebirth, they produce kamma results or not -- all, because of their type, lead upwards. They are just like that because, on the occasion of their yielding a kamma result, that result will be desirable and pleasant.

"The connection (in the discourse, between the general principle stated first, and its specific application to the forty-four cases) is as follows: just as unsalutary states lead downwards, so it is with that one state of harmfulness for him who is harmful. Just as all salutary states lead upwards, so it is with that one state of harmlessness for him who is harmless."

23. Comy.: "In the Noble One's discipline, the 'mire' is a name for the five sense desires."

24. //Not fully quenched// (//aparinibbuto//) Comy.: "with defilements not extinguished (//anibbuta-kilesa//)."

25. Comy.: "There may be those who object that this is not correct because some come to penetration of the Dhamma (//dhammabhisamaya//, i.e. Stream-entry) after listening to an exposition of the Teaching by monks or nuns, male or female lay followers, who are still worldlings (//puthujjana//; i.e. have not attained to any of the paths of sanctitude). Hence one who is still in the mire can pull out others. (Reply:) This should not be understood in that way. It is the Blessed One who here does the pulling out.

"Suppose there is a king who sends a letter to the border region, and the people there, unable to read it by themselves, have the letter read to them by another able to do it. Having learned of the contents, they respond with respect, knowing it as the king's order. But they do not think that it is the letter reader's order; he will receive praise only for his smooth and fluent reading of the letter. Similarly, even if preachers of the ability of Sariputta Thera expound the Dhamma, still they are just like readers of a letter written by another. Their sermon should truly be attributed to the Blessed One, like the decree to the king. The preachers, however, receive their limited praise, just because they expound the Dhamma with a smooth and fluent diction. Hence that statement in the discourse is correct."

26. For the connection between the modes of effacement and the preceding simile, Comy. gives two alterative explanations:

(a) Just as one who is not sunk in the mire himself can pull others out of it, similarly he who is harmless himself can quench another's harmful volition.

(b) Just as only he who has quenched his own passions can help one who has not quenched them, similarly only a volition of harmlessness can quench a harmful volition.

27. Comy.: "So far goes a compassionate teacher's task namely, the correct exposition of his teaching; that, namely, the practice (according to the teaching; //patipatti//), is the task of the disciples."

HOUSEHOLDER SERIES

by Jack Kornfield

6. The Eightfold Path: Right Effort

~~~~~~

The next three steps of the Eightfold Path have to do more with inner work of meditation than outer work of Right Livelihood and Right Speech, and so forth. The next step is called Right Effort. It's very important in understanding spiritual practice.

Ramana Maharshi, the great Indian master, one of the greatest ever, and certainly in the last century or so, said:

> Enlightenment is not your birthright.
> Those who succeed do so only through proper effort.

It was an amazing thing for him to say because he became fully enlightened at seventeen years old when he went to his uncle's house and said, "I wonder what it would be like to die. I think I'll try it." And he laid down on the floor and died, and then came back somehow. It's hard to know whether he physically died, but it seemed like he died, and he came back with a very different perspective on life. Nevertheless, he taught for many, many years, and even he said this.

One day Nasrudin went to the market with a recipe for some kind of liver and kidney pie, or something like that, and he bought the meat. He had the recipe in one hand and he took the stuff for his pie in the other hand. And a huge raven or crow saw him walking home and swooped down from a tree nearby and grabbed the meat out of his hand and flew off with it. And Nasrudin shook his head and said, "It won't do you any good. You don't have the recipe."
~~~~~~

It gets kind of reversed for us. Most of us, especially living in California, as we do, are overburdened with spiritual recipes. How many Dharma talks, how many spiritual books, how many retreats, how many good therapy things, how many //sesshins//, and how many whatever have you had? You have the recipe. Like all the people sitting under the bodhi tree with the Dalai Lama, and the pilgrims who had come from miles and miles on foot from the high Himalayas to be with the Dalai Lama in Bodhgaya, he said, "Okay, you're here, and you think you're very fortunate because you have the blessings of being under this bodhi tree where the Buddha was enlightened, with all these famous lamas, and the Dalai Lama himself, and you have the teachings, the sacred meditations, and mantras, and all these things. It won't do you any good. The only thing that makes it work is if you take the trouble to practice it. All the rest of it is very nice, and you might as well watch Dallas or something like that. It's not so different. Maybe you would learn more from Dallas, I don't know. At least it wouldn't be pretentiously spiritual." So the answer is "effort."

Effort is central in our spiritual practice. Traditionally, there are four kinds of effort that are talked about. The effort to deal with unskillful things has two parts. First, the effort to abandon that which is unskillful, and that means abandoning our grasping, our fear, our hatred, or our anger. It doesn't mean judging oneself or resisting it. It means learning skillful means not to be so caught up in things, not to be so attached. Then, the effort to maintain their absence, once you're figured out how to let go of them some. It's like Mark Twain and smoking. You all heard that. When someone asked if he had ever stopped smoking, he said, "Sure, it was easy. I've done it thousands of times." The second effort is the effort to maintain that abandonment in some fashion.

The other two traditional definitions of Right Effort have to do with that which is skillful; the effort to develop or cultivate or nourish that which is skillful within ourselves, and then the effort to maintain or sustain it, so that in some fashion it stays with us.

This is from the //Dhammapada://

> One person on the battlefield conquers an army > of a thousand persons, > Another conquers himself,
> and that is greater.
> Conquer yourself and not others, > discipline yourself,
> and thereupon learn freedom.

So it's the effort of learning how to cultivate or generate that which is skillful -- which means awareness, loving-kindness, or caring for the world around you, or living more in the present, the effort to abandon the habits, the fears of things that we get caught in that create suffering and that keeps us in the muck, and the effort to sustain them. This is wonderful because it's a teaching that can apply very much to our daily life; it's not just a retreat teaching. It's small habits and all the little pieces. Our life is made up of little activities, little pieces, little habits, and little ways. And we can begin to work with the way we drive our car, the way that we relate to people at work, or the way we eat, what we choose to eat, and how we set about eating -- to make those things more conscious. To make our approach to these bear the fruit of greater awareness, greater attention, of more caring, of more kindness.

Think now for just a moment: what are a few things in your own life that could well be served by bringing a little more of this effort, this effort to pay attention, or the effort to let go and abandon? What little things do you do that you could use in some way to wake up more, to awaken?

Fundamentally, the meaning for Right Effort can be expressed in a simple way: it's the effort to be aware, the effort to see clearly, to pay attention. That's Right Effort. One Zen master was asked, "Would you give me the essence of the teachings?" He wrote down,

"attention". Then the person said, "Fine. Now would you give me the whole teachings, the commentary, and how I should undertake it?" He wrote down, "Attention, attention." The person said, "Isn't there anything else?" And he said, 'Attention, attention, attention. That is it, to be present, to see clearly."

Right Effort isn't so much the effort to make the world a different place, as it is the effort to understand the nature of this world, of our body, our mind, this life.

Why is it hard to make the Right Effort, why is it hard to pay attention? It's hard for different reasons. It's hard because we sometimes don't want to see. You know, this idea of "Be Here Now," and so forth, it sounds good,.It's not so good. It isn't, because what happens when you're here now? Has anybody looked? What do you have to be here now with? Pain, boredom, fear, loneliness, pleasure, joy, beautiful sunsets, wonderful tastes, horrible experiences, people being born, people dying, light, dark, up, down, parking your car on the wrong side of the street, getting your car towed; all those things. For if you live here, it means that you have to be open to what Zorba called "The whole catastrophe." Sometimes we don't want that.

Right effort is the effort to see clearly. This world is crazed. There's war, there's prejudice, there's political prisoners, there's all this kind of suffering that we need to remember living in Marin, because it's really kind of a ghetto that we live in, and we forget how incredibly fortunate we are.

I had a letter today from someone I know . She's kind of middle-aged and very poor, and just gets by doing some sewing, and her husband works in a gas station. They live in Florida. They are related to some people I know. They've had a very hard life. She has some kind of progressive degenerative disease. They do not live in such a nice neighborhood, and their house was broken into, and the few things of any value that they had were just stolen. I thought, "God, here I live in such a nice place, and have nice things, and I leave the front door open most of the time, and don't worry about it," and we forget what blessings we have. We forget about the sorrow and the struggle in the world. Part of the effort is to really wake up and to look at ourselves and at the world around us, and to be conscious of it, not to be just asleep.

My teacher Achaan Chah said there are two basic ways of practice. One way of practice is to be comfortable. And it's valuable. You can sit a little and get yourself quiet. You keep the precepts, so you don't harm people, and they start to like you. You say "Om" at dinner. You chant a little before you eat. And everything becomes nicer in your life. It becomes more comfortable and more pleasant because you live a good life and you're peaceful. The other way to approach spiritual practice is not to be involved in trying to be comfortable, but rather to be free or liberated. And that way of practice has nothing whatsoever to do with comfort. Comfort may come and it may not. Sometimes it may be terribly uncomfortable, but its goal or its direction is not comfort; its goal is freedom. It's a wonderful thing, and it's a real legacy of the Buddha.

Right Effort means we really need to start to pay attention, and to see how fortunate we are, and to begin to see the laws that govern the world within which we live.

Another friend of mine just called me this week and said her husband who is in his mid-forties has advanced lung cancer; he just found out about it a few days earlier. Then she called about four days after that. She asked me what was the lesson in that. She said, "You're a teacher. Tell me what the lesson is." I don't know what the lesson is. I said, "I don't know. Call me later, maybe I can think of one." And she called back. If you trust people they generally find out what the lesson is anyway. She said, "I know what the lesson is." I said, "What?" And she said, "The lesson is to love people while you have them, when they're here." It was so sweet and so touching because it came from a place where she really, really knew it. It's to take care with what we have that's beautiful, and nourish it; and that which isn't, to abandon it.

I'll read you a passage from Nisargadatta Maharaj, the old bidi wallah who I studied with in Bombay; wonderful old teacher. He sold little Indian cigarettes on the street corner, and he was fully enlightened somehow at the same time. He had these classes. He died a couple of years ago. He was a wonderful old man.

Someone asks:

> What can truth or reality gain by all our practice?

He uses truth and love interchangeably. He says:

> Nothing whatsoever, of course. But it is in the nature of truth or love, cosmic consciousness, whatever you want to call it, to express itself, to affirm itself, to overcome difficulties. Once you've understood that the world is love in action, consciousness or love in action, you will look at it quite differently. But first your attitude to suffering must change. Suffering is primarily a call for attention, which itself is a movement of love. More than happiness, love wants growth, the widening and deepening of awareness and consciousness and being. Whatever prevents that becomes a cause of pain, and love does not shirk from pain.

That's an amazing thing to say, that love doesn't shirk from pain, that what loves wants is not pleasure. You live in Marin, you know about pleasure. It's wonderful, but it gets boring after awhile. It does! There is something deeper or higher, that's richer, that is our capacity, or our birthright, or our deepest need. I don't know what it is, but it is different than just pleasure.

What does it mean to make Right Effort? We've touched this, or we want that, or we want to discover or open. There are two different approaches or styles to effort. I've practiced with them both, and I'll put them out, and you can listen and see which works better for you.

One is the Rinzai approach, using Zen terminology, where there is enlightenment, and it's a goal, and you work very hard - you literally bust your ass on your cushion or whatever you do to get to //satori// or //kensho // or enlightenment, and you really make an effort directed to this goal.

One of the ways of practice in the Theravada tradition that I'd done in the Sun Lun Monastery was to sit without moving a minimum of four sittings a day of two hours. The first hour was heavy breathing, where you sat and did as full and deep breathing as you were capable of for an hour. And the //sayadaw// was sort of like a football coach, and he would come around and say, "Harder, more." And you concentrate on it. You get very concentrated in an hour. If you were sleepy it woke you up; if you had thoughts it kind of blasted them out of your head; and by the end of an hour you were very present. Then the next hour you continued to sit without moving, and used that concentration just to be with what your experience was. It was very powerful.

Or the kind of effort in the Mahasi Monastery where I practiced where you sit and walk l5 or l6 hours a day, or l8 if you can. You sleep for four hours and you eat a little bit. You sit motionless, you don't move, and the sittings are shorter, 45 minutes or an hour, and you don't make a a movement without paying attention to it. Lift your hand, blink your eyes, "blinking, turning, moving." You pay attention to every single little thing. Why do that? It sounds so hard. It is, it is very, very hard. And if you start to do it, all the defilements, all the desires, all the fears, all the reasons that you keep yourself spaced out and in fantasy, and don't want to pay attention, they all come at once. Like this wall. And you just sit, and you just walk, and you do it. The purpose is to dissolve the sense of solidity of the world. If you pay attention that carefully, and that fully, or that deeply with concentration -- that's next week's talk on Right Concentration -- you begin to see that what's solid is not solid, and that what seems as "I" or "body and mind together" starts to dissolve into all these little parts. There are the four physical elements, the different mood states, and consciousness, hearing, seeing, smelling, and tasting. And that's all there is! And it takes the whole show apart, but it takes a powerful concentration and a sustained attention to do it. It really is going through fire. There's even a physical transformation.

There's a book I read recently by Ireena Tweedy called "Chasm of Fire". She's this old Sufi lady who worked with this master in India. She talked about her experiences, more in the Kensho metaphor, but it's not so different. It's really sitting through the fire and letting your body, your desires, and your fears, just burn through you, and you just sit. After awhile your attachments to things change and you become much more detached from this that we take to be ourselves, this physical body. And you become more detached from the fears and feelings, and all of those things. You start with that detachment; then you see it as it operates, clearly, because you're not so incredibly identified with "I, me, mine, my body, my mind." It's very powerful!

Suzaki-roshi teaches Zen //sesshin// in a very strict fashion. Or Chan Hsun Hua who runs Gold Mountain Temple. He used to have 49-day chant //sesshins// in San Francisco. You sit for 49 days, and you sleep sitting up, you sleep in your place. I never wanted to do it. I've thought about it. For some people it's terrible because they're already tight and they do it and it just drives them crazy, it makes them tighter; and it doesn't bring any enlightenment at all; it just brings pain. But for some people it's a way of practice, the effort to concentrate, the effort to pay attention, to bring yourself back -- again, and again, and again. It's not the effort of tensing your body, but it's the willingness to sit with anything, and keep bringing your mind back, or to walk with anything, to really do that.

Gurdjieff says:

> If a person gives way to all their desires, or panders to them, there will be no inner struggle in them, no friction, no fire. But if for the sake of attaining liberation, they struggle with their habits that hinder them, they'll create a fire which will gradually transform their inner world into a single whole.

That's one way of undertaking practice. And when you look at how powerful our habits are, and how much we go to sleep, and how much the world really needs somebody to have the courage to say "no" or "stop" or "wake up" or "live differently," it becomes very compelling. I know that you're not on retreat, that we live in busy household lives -- but the same spirit, this kind which is just half of the effort I'll talk about, can be brought to your daily life. It can be the effort to do whatever it happens to be in your life that you know is really going to make a difference. So one can bring that effort, and it's a wonderful thing to do. And if you learn to do it -- it takes practice - it's really empowering; it brings a certain inner strength with it as well.

The other approach to Right Effort is actually a bridge between these two that would be nice to read about. Someone recently gave me this book called ""Peace Pilgrim." It's about this woman who walked around the country for 20 years wearing her blue jogging suit that said "Peace Pilgrim" on it, carrying a toothbrush. She spoke about peace, that you had to make yourself peaceful and the world peaceful. She never took food unless it was offered to her. She fasted otherwise. And she never took rides until much later in her life. She just walked and talked about peace. And this is her story, and it's a fantastic book.

She said:

> During my earlier spiritual growth period -- The ten years that she was getting prepared to do her peace walk -- I desired to know and do God's will for me. Spiritual growth is not easily attained, you know, but it is well worth the effort. It takes time, just as any growth takes time. One should rejoice at small gains, and not be impatient, as impatience hampers growth.
>
> The path of gradual relinquishment of things hindering spiritual progress is a difficult path, but only when relinquishment is complete do the rewards really come fully. The path of quick relinquishment is an easy path, for it brings immediate blessings, and when God fills your life or the truth fills your life, the gifts overflow and bless all that you touch.

What she said is very beautiful. It takes time, just as any growth takes time, and it's not easily attained but well worth the effort. If you do a lot of it, you get a lot of reward; if you do it slowly, which most of us do, then it's a little more frustrating because a lot of the reward comes when you're much, much freer. It's the way it goes. What can you do? It's still worth it. It talks about both these kinds of effort, that if you're willing to make the effort to really do a lot, or let go of a lot, or transform your life, then tremendous fruits can come. You can change how you live this week, how you relate, or you can take it slower.

The other kind of effort is not goal-oriented, to get to //kensho//, or //satori//, or enlightenment, or dissolve the world, transcend yourself; it's the Soto Zen approach. It's the approach that says that you're already enlightened. And that is enlightenment; it's not something else. It's just what's here. And the only thing that blocks our enlightenment is all these thoughts that say, "This isn't enough; I want it different." If you could just live with things as they are; that's all; this is it.

Krishnamurti speaks about it very beautifully when he said:

It's the truth which liberates and not your effort to be free.

"All year I'm going to get this, and be that, and now I'll be --" I remember when the first interesting meditation practice experiences started to come, I got very excited, and my mind started to fill with thoughts again. There were these lights and things, and I thought, "Gee, this is really exciting," because I started to think about what I'd do when I was enlightened, who I would go visit and what I would say. It's like that ego, that part of us that wants to take it as a kind of a merit badge or something that you can wear; or a degree. And it's not that at all. It's to live with things as they are, to see them clearly, directly, and truly in each moment.

Ramana Maharshi said:

> There are two paths to awakening. One is that of self-inquiry, where you look to see.

The main koan is, "Who am I?" or " What am I?" And you do it through awareness; or through whatever training that you can, to discover and investigate the body and mind. And the other is the path of surrender, where you say, "Not my will but thine." It's actually the same if you really look at it. "Okay, in this moment I'll be aware of what's here without trying to change it and just see what it is." In that awareness you start to see the truth of it -- that it's impermanent -- that it's not "I, me, mine"; that it's not self; that we're not separate; then it begins to reveal its nature.

This way of effort then is the effort more of surrender, of letting go, rather than trying to attain something. It's surrender to be in each moment in a balanced way.

Don Juan says:

> If one is to succeed in anything, the success must come gently. With a great deal of effort. but with no stress or obsession.

So it's rather the effort to be here again and again and again, and to truly see that things arise and that they pass away; that they're born; that they die; that we don't own anything; that none of it is ours. Our thoughts, do you control your thoughts? Does anybody here have control of their thoughts? We think that they're ours. Or our bodies. We do a little better at that, but not very well, if you look at it.

There's something I want to read. I've been reading all these books on early child development and labor and whatever. It's from a book that I've come to appreciate very much called "Whole Child, Whole Parent." If anyone is looking for a spiritual guide to parenting, it's the best that I've found. It's called "Zen and the Art of Throwing a Ball." It gives a much more Taoist sense, instead of making the effort to come back again and again and dissolve the world. This is the way of effort which finds the Tao within our movement, the way that we live.

The self -- the self-centered sense of us -- knows that freedom has something to do with law and order but thinks that order must be brought about by will power. The child shows us that, on the contrary, freedom comes through subservience to existing order, to the Dharma, through conscious alignment with it. The self knows that freedom has something to do with pleasure, but it thinks it means feeling good and being above the law is what pleasure is.

The child shows us that this pleasure is really spontaneity and that it too is a by-product of absolute compliance or obedience to the law or the dharma.

Here's a story:

> Once I heard a father marvel, "How did he learn to throw that ball so far? I didn't teach him. When did he learn to do this? I didn't even see him do it? Why did he do it? No one in our family is particularly interested in baseball, and yet he did."
>
> Everything that father thought might have been a hindrance. had it actually been present. The family's interest in baseball or someone watching him, or anything.
>
> Somewhere along the way, in the throwing of a ball, the child had conceived of a possibility of freedom. Perhaps it first came through watching someone else, perhaps once in flinging a ball, he had let it fly and surprised himself. At any rate, some freedom had been encountered and was now a possibility in his consciousness.
>
> After that, as long as he remained unself-conscious -- which means undivided -- he was able to give his undivided attention to the possibility of which he had conceived. Through his pure desire for freedom in the sense of possibility, certain laws were given the opportunity to gain power over the child. Aiming himself toward a conscious possibility he became subservient to it. And then through the child's receptive and devoted consciousness the underlying force of being, itself, organized and energized and utilized and coordinated everything in the child to express himself in the form of freedom to throw the ball so beautifully.

He must have practiced for hours on end, expending tremendous effort but little strain because his interest in seeing what was possible carried him along, confident that what he could conceive of was possible and could be realized if he went at it. Sometimes the ball fell short but he did not infer that he lacked power. Sometimes the ball went wild, but he did not infer that the thing was impossible or that there was no predictability and all was chaotic.

Whatever seemed too hard only showed him that he had not yet discovered the knack. Whatever appeared chaotic only suggested that the order and his oneness with it had not yet been discerned. Sometimes his shoulder hurt, but the very hurt became a guide, directing him into better alignment with the hidden force he did not doubt. He looked at everything for what is and what isn't, and everything taught him, until he could throw the ball far, fast, accurately and with remarkable ease.

And he wasn't proud. He wasn't too pleased, and he didn't feel triumphant. He felt grateful. And he didn't feel powerful, he felt surer. And he felt free and was freer.

It was never that he had his way with the ball, rather through his undistracted, absolutely focused, unselfconscious attention, the invisible laws of physics had their way with him. through the total submission of himself to the invisible laws, he found both dominion and spontaneity which he rightfully experienced as > true freedom and joy.

What a wonderful way to learn. It speaks to this other meaning of effort, and it also speaks to a kind of secret about the first kind of effort, which I've used a lot in practice, and gained from in some ways. And that is, in the end you have to let go. No matter how much effort you make and where it takes you, it doesn't take you all the way, because it's not your effort that makes you free but your discovery of what's true about yourself, and life, and its changing nature and the laws of it; that you come into harmony with it, that you become free. It can be big things. It can be a big //satori// and a big awakening. Sometimes you get hit over the head by someone near you getting cancer or a near car accident, or it can be little things, like a child, where you just begin to take your life as a discovery, and you start to see what are the laws that operate that make people happy, make them unhappy, what are the laws that operate that make war and make harmony or peace between people.

I got a letter recently from someone who had been in one of these classes asking about the question of enlightenment. We talk so much about precepts and following them, and Right Speech and Right Action, what about enlightenment, where does it fit, or is this just a system of ethical conduct? Is this Buddhism? The Buddha said it quite explicitly a number of times in one very beautiful //sutra//. He said:

> The reason for my teaching is not for merit or good deeds or good karma, or concentration, or rapture, or bliss, or even insight. None of these is the reason that I teach, but the sure heart's release. This and this alone is the reason for the teaching of a Buddha.

All the other things are secondary to it, secondary to what that child experienced with the ball or what the old bidi wallah talked about of the movement of love. It's not compelled by pleasure, not by precepts, not by success or failure, but by learning to grow, learning to open, learning the laws of the world, learning to connect. There is enlightenment, there is freedom, it's true, it's absolutely true; and you can experience it; you can come to that.

It says in the //Dhammapada// that:

> To live one day and taste very deeply the meaning of impermanence is better than living l00 years and not to touch it.

Why could that be so? Because to taste that, even for a moment, is that you see what's true about life and you start to live out of that truth more fully. You become free, which is what we all want most deeply. . I ask you a few questions. Think about Right Effort for a moment. Where are you making too much effort in your life? What things do you do where it's too tight and too hard? You need to learn balance. Can you think of them? Where do you try too hard or grasp too much? Where do you make too little effort in your life? Where are you lazy or habitual? What aspects of your life could be ennobled or awakened with more effort? Think about them. Which ones? Where is your life too internal? Where do you shy away out of fear from the world of events and circumstances around you? Where is your life too external, or you don't sit enough, you don't take enough silence? You don't listen inside to your heart, to what you care about, make it inform your life.

To listen in this way inside is to discover the laws like throwing the ball of Right Effort in your life. Where do you miss the mark? Practice a little more. What takes more effort, what takes a little less? What takes more solitude? What takes more giving, and loving, and serving?

You actually know the answers to those things. They come pretty easily to us. We just forget to ask, or we don't want to ask because it means, "Ugh, I have to rearrange my life yet again in some fashion or other." But it doesn't really matter, because that's the game. Everything gets rearranged anyway. Either you can rearrange it or you can wait for it to be rearranged. It's also the game; to grow. So you can stall it for awhile. If you really drag your feet, you can; but it's not as interesting.

I'll close with my question to my teacher Achaan Chaa.

> I still have very many thoughts, my mind wanders a lot, even though I'm trying to be mindful.

He said:

> Don't worry about this, try to keep your mind in the present. Whatever there is that arises in the mind or the heart, just watch it, let go of it. Don't even wish to be rid of thought, then the mind will reach a natural state, no discriminating between good and bad, hot and cold, fast and slow, no "me" and no "you", no self at all, just what there is.
>
> When you walk, no need to do anything special, simply walk and see what there is. No need to go to a cave or cling to isolation. Wherever you are, know yourself by being natural and watching. If doubts arise, watch them come and go. It's very simple. Hold on to nothing.
>
> It's as though you're walking down a road, periodically you run into obstacles. When you meet difficulties, see them and overcome them by letting go. Don't think about the obstacles you've passed already, don't worry about the ones you haven't seen yet. Stay in the present. Don't worry about the length of the road or a destination either.
>
> Everything is changing. Whatever you pass, do not cling to it, and eventually the mind will reach its natural balance where practice becomes automatic and effort becomes effortless. All things will come and go of themselves.
>
> Sitting hours on end is not necessary. Some people think that the longer you sit the wiser you must be. I've seen chickens sit on their nests for days on end.

Wisdom comes from being mindful in all postures. Your practice should begin as you awaken in the morning and continue until you fall asleep. What is important is only that you keep aware, whether you're working or sitting or going to the bathroom.

Each person has their own natural pace. Some of you will die at age fifty, some at age sixty-five, and some at age ninety. Don't think or worry about this. Try to be mindful and let things take their natural course. Then your mind will become quieter and quieter in any surroundings, like a still forest pool. All kinds of wonderful, rare animals will come and drink at the pool. You will see clearly the nature of all things in the world. Many wonderful strange things come and go, but you will be still. This is the happiness of the Buddha.

* * * * * * * *

DISTRIBUTION AGREEMENT
~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

TITLE OF WORK: The Eightfold Path for the Householder: Ten Talks (Transcribed from audio tape)
FILENAME: JKHOLDER.ZIP
AUTHOR: Jack Kornfield
AUTHOR'S ADDRESS: Spirit Rock Meditation Center
PO Box 909
Woodacre, CA 94973
PUBLISHER'S ADDRESS: N/A
COPYRIGHT HOLDER: Jack Kornfield (1995)
DATE OF PUBLICATION: 1995
RIGHTS AND RESTRICTIONS: See paragraph below.
DATE OF DHARMANET DISTRIBUTION: February, 1995
ORIGIN SITE: Access to Insight BBS, Pepperell MA * (508) 433-5847 (96:903/1)
~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

The copyright holder retains all rights to this work and hereby grants electronic distribution rights to DharmaNet International. This work may be freely copied and redistributed electronically, provided that the file contents (including this Agreement) are not altered in any way and that it is distributed at no cost to the recipient. You may make printed copies of this work for your personal use; further distribution of printed copies requires permission from the copyright holder. If this work is used by a teacher in a class, or is quoted in a review, the publisher shall be notified of such use. See the title page of this work for any additional rights and restrictions that may apply.

It is the spirit of dana, freely offered generosity, which has kept the entire Buddhist tradition alive for more than 2,500 years. If you find this work of value, please consider sending a donation to the author or publisher, so that these works may continue to be made available. May your generosity contribute to the happiness of all beings everywhere.

DharmaNet International, P.O. Box 4951, Berkeley, CA 94704-4951

[end]

Meditation on the Elements

//(A translation of a text by Ven. Ledi Sayadaw followed by an explanation by Sayagyi U Chit Tin)//

1. There is in this body of mine: the earth group[1], the water group, the fire group, the wind group, and the consciousness group.

2. What is the group of earth in this [body of mine]? It is: hair of the head, body hair, nails, teeth, skin, flesh, sinews, bones, bone marrow, liver, midriff, spleen, lungs, intestines, entrails, stomach, excrement, and the brain.[2] These are to be called the earth group.

3. What is the group of water in this [body of mine]? It is bile, phlegm, pus, blood, sweat, fat, tears, grease, saliva, mucus, oil of the joints, and urine. These are to be called the water group.

4. What is the group of fire in this [body of mine]? It is burning, warmth, digestion, and ageing. These are to be called the fire group.

5. What is the group of wind (motion) in this [body of mine]? Winds that go up, winds that go down, winds in the abdomen, winds in the belly, winds that shoot through all the limbs, the in-breath, and the out-breath. These are to be called the wind group.

6. What is the group of consciousness in this [body of mine]? Eye consciousness, ear consciousness, nose consciousness, tongue consciousness, body (contact) consciousness, and mental [objects] consciousness. These are to be called the consciousness group.

7. In the group of the hair of the head, the action that is hard is named earth; the action that is cohesion is named water; the action that is heat is named fire; the action that is support is named wind; colour, odour, taste, and nutritive essence are thereby derived; all conditioned mental states are dependently originated, without a self, without a soul, empty, and void; they are subject to destruction, subject to falling away, and subject to fading away; because of destruction they are impermanent; because they fall away they are misery; because they are without substance they are without a self.

8. Similarly, [the same should be understood for] the groups of body hair, nails, teeth, skin, flesh, sinews, bones, bone marrow, liver, midriff, spleen, lungs, intestines, entrails, stomach, excrement, and the brain.

9. In the group of the bile, the action that is hard is named earth; the action that is cohesion is named water; the action that is heat is named fire; the action that is support is named wind; colour, odour, taste, and nutritive essence are derived; all these conditioned mental states are dependently originated, without a self, without a soul, empty, and void; they are subject to destruction, subject to falling away, and subject to fading away; because of destruction they are impermanent; because they fall away they are misery; because they are without substance they are without a self.

10. Similarly, [the same should be understood for] the groups of phlegm, pus, blood, sweat, fat, tears, grease, saliva, mucus, oil of the joints, and urine.

11. In the group of burning, the action that is hard is named earth; the action that is cohesion is named water; the action that is heat is named fire; the action that is support is named wind; colour, odour, taste, and nutritive essence are derived; all these conditioned mental states are dependently originated, without a self, without a soul, empty, and void; they are subject to destruction, subject to falling away, and subject to fading away; because of destruction they are impermanent; because they fall away they are misery; because they are without substance they are without a self.

12. Similarly, [the same should be understood for] the groups of warmth, digestion, and ageing.

13. In the group of winds that go up, the action that is hard is named earth; the action that is cohesion is named water; the action that is heat is named fire; the action that is support is named wind; colour, odour, taste, and nutritive essence are derived; all these conditioned mental states are dependently originated, without a self, without a soul, empty, and void; they are subject to destruction, subject to falling away, and subject to fading away; because of destruction they are impermanent; because they fall away they are misery; because they are without substance they are without a self.

14. Similarly, [the same should be understood for] the groups of winds that go down, winds in the abdomen, winds in the belly, winds that shoot through all the limbs, the in-breath, and the out-breath.

15. In the group of the eye consciousness, there are the four aggregates: (1) sensation is the aggregate of sensations, (2) perception is the aggregate of perceptions, (3) volitional thought is the aggregate of formations, (4) consciousness is the aggregate of consciousness. All these conditioned mental states are dependently originated, without a self, without a soul, empty, and void; they are subject to destruction, subject to falling away, and subject to fading away; because of destruction they are impermanent; because they fall away they are misery; because they are without substance they are without a self.

16. Similarly, [the same should be understood for] the groups of ear consciousness, nose consciousness, tongue consciousness, body (contact) consciousness, and mental (objects) consciousness.

17. Thus, in this body of mine, these forty-eight aspects, the group of (physical) elements, the group of (mental) states, [all of these] are dependently originated, without a self, without a soul, empty, and void; they are subject to destruction, subject to falling away, subject to fading away, and subject to destruction; because of destruction they are impermanent; because they fall away they are misery; because they are without substance they are without a self.

The text above is a translation of a Pali text by Venerable Ledi

Sayadaw. Details of this meditation subject are found in numerous texts in the Pali Canon[3] and in Ashin Buddhaghosa's Visuddhimagga.[4] Two discourses given by the Buddha to his son, Venerable Rahula, are especially pertinent to understanding how to meditate on the four elements and on the consciousness group. In "The Great Exhortation to Rahula,"[5] the Buddha instructs Ven. Rahula to meditate on the four elements. In "The Shorter Exhortation to Rahula,"[6] he teaches him how to observe the senses and the states of consciousness associated with them.

The first discourse to Ven. Rahula is of particular interest to meditators in the tradition of Sayagyi U Ba Khin as it shows how meditation on the four elements can be an aid to mindfulness of breathing and insight meditation. According to the commentary, Ven. Rahula was eighteen when the Buddha gave this discourse. It seems that as Ven. Rahula was following the Buddha going out on the alms round one morning, he thought to himself, "I am handsome like my father, the Blessed One. The Buddha's form is beautiful, and mine is similar to his." The Buddha read Ven. Rahula's thoughts and decided to reprove him. This he did in an indirect way, but Ven. Rahula was able to understand immediately as soon as a hint was given to him.

The Buddha's reproach was in the form of a meditation subject. He instructed Ven. Rahula to dissociate himself from all material form (rupa) by saying to himself with reference to all material forms: "This is not mine, I am not this, this is not my self." The Buddha, therefore, was giving his son a meditation subject that was directly related to his lack of understanding, and the method given was directly related to developing insight into the lack of a permanent self (anatta). Ven. Rahula asked the Buddha if only material form was to be seen in this way, so the Buddha enlarged on his first instruction by saying that the same was true for all five of the aggregates that sustain renewed existence: material forms (rupa), sensations (vedana), perceptions (sanna), mental formations (sankhara), and consciousness (vinnana).

Ven. Rahula decided that, after being given such instructions by the Buddha, he should not continue on the alms round but begin to meditate immediately. As he sat meditating, Ven. Sariputta came by. The commentary says that when the chief disciples resided in the same monastery as the Buddha, they always waited until he went out before they went on their alms round. Ven. Sariputta had ordained Ven. Rahula and was therefore one of his teachers. Seeing him seated in the cross-legged position and not being aware that the Buddha had already given a meditation subject, Ven. Sariputta told his pupil to develop mindfulness of breathing (anapana-sati).

Ven. Rahula now had two different sets of instructions, and he was not able to make any progress. That evening, he went to the Buddha for more details on how to proceed. He simply asked how mindfulness of breathing was to be developed. The Buddha did not tell Ven. Rahula to go back to the original instructions he had been given. Instead, he gave a discourse in which he showed him how to use meditation on the elements, the four divine abidings, contemplation of impurity,[7] and the perception of impermanence as preparation for mindfulness of breathing. He said that contemplation of the elements[8] will lead to the same realization that he had told Ven. Rahula to work for that morning: "This is not mine, I am not this, this is not my self." In this way, he would be repulsed by each of the elements and detached from them.

The Buddha instructs Ven. Rahula to develop detachment with respect to agreeable and disagreeable sensory impressions by considering the indifference of the elements to anything with which they come into contact whether it be clean or unclean, faeces or urine or spittle or pus or blood. The earth is not troubled or worried or disgusted by any of these, nor is water or fire or wind or space. In this way, the Buddha gave a more detailed way to meditate on mind (sensations, perceptions, mental formations, consciousness) and body.

The next meditation subjects explained by the Buddha will help eliminate harmful mental states: loving kindness will eliminate ill will, compassion will eliminate harming, sympathetic joy will eliminate aversion, equanimity will eliminate repugnance, contemplation of impurity will eliminate sensual desire, and the perception of impermanence will eliminate egotism. After explaining all these types of meditation, the Buddha then instructs Ven. Rahula in mindfulness of breathing in great detail, including attaining the absorption states (jhanas).

We can see, then, that contemplation of the elements as given in Ven. Ledi Sayadaw's text may be helpful for meditators who also develop concentration through mindfulness of breathing and insight through knowing impermanence (anicca).

Ashin Buddhaghosa gives a long explanation of how to meditate on the parts of the body and on the elements in the Visuddhimagga.[9] He begins his description of meditating on the parts of the body by saying that this meditation subject, which helps to develop insight, is only available during the period in which a Buddha's Teachings are available. This is no doubt because one of the main elements in observing the body is learning to appreciate the lack of a permanent, controlling self. In his first discussion of meditating on the parts of the body, Ashin Buddhaghosa includes seeing them as repulsive. When he discusses the inclusion of the parts of the body in the meditation on the four great elements, however, they are not to be seen as repulsive but should be experienced as having the various characteristics of the four great elements: solidity, cohesion, heat, and support. For meditation students who have already made some progress in developing concentration and insight, it will not be necessary to develop any further an appreciation of the repulsive nature of the parts of the body. But the appreciation of the temporary coming together of the four great elements in the various parts of the body can be used in connection with appreciating their impermanence. None of these four elements exists independently of the other three. The parts of the body associated with each element possess that element as the predominant characteristic, but all four will be present to a greater or lesser extent.

Many of Ashin Buddhaghosa's instructions for the meditator will be of use no matter which technique is being followed, so we will give some of them here. Ashin Buddhaghosa makes it clear that the meditator must find the method that helps him progress. Someone may know all the Pali Canon but will still need to simply repeat the names of the parts of the body in order to keep the attention on them and to gain insight into their true nature. It is clear from what he says that theoretical knowledge is no substitute for practice. He gives many ways of investigating the parts of the body -- by colour, shape, direction, location, limiting what is similar and dissimilar -- but these are less useful for us. His insistence on the importance of repetition is valid for all meditation practice, however, as this is the way to make the meditation subject become familiar and to keep the mind from running away. Ashin Buddhaghosa is speaking of repeating the names of the parts of the body, but repetition can also include repeating the task at hand.

Ashin Buddhaghosa then gives ten types of skill to be developed by the meditator:

First, the proper order should be followed. In a general way, each technique has an order in which things are to be done, and we should be careful to respect the right order. If we do not, he says, we will be exhausted by skipping around, like someone trying to go up a ladder two rungs at a time.

Second and third, the meditator should not go too fast or too slow. If we are in too big a hurry, we will be like a man who never notices the way even though he has made a long journey a hundred times and constantly has to ask directions. If we are too slow, we will resemble a man who wastes so much time on a journey it takes him two or three days rather than one.

Fourth, we must avoid distractions, otherwise, we will be like a man going along a narrow ledge on a high cliff. If he does not pay attention, he may fall.

Fifth, we should not get hung up on concepts; we should rather develop true understanding. Concepts, or mere intellectual understanding, are like a sign to show where a water hole can be found in a forest -- it is only necessary in the beginning; once a clear path has been worn to it, everyone will be able to find it without the sign.

Sixth, we should know when to leave aside any aspect of our meditation that is not clear. For this aspect, the similes given in the Visuddhimagga are more pertinent to meditating on the repulsive aspects of the body.

Seventh, we should understand that every part of our practice is important for fixing our attention (appana).

The last three points are based on the instructions given in three discourses in the Pali Canon. In the first discourse,[10] the Buddha tells the bhikkhus that it is important, when meditating, to keep concentration, effort, and equanimity in proper balance. If only concentration is developed, there will be a tendency to idleness. If there is too much effort, there will be a tendency to agitation. If equanimity is over emphasized, right concentration may not be attained. The Buddha compares this balancing with the way a goldsmith will heat crude gold and blow on it from time to time, sprinkle water on it from time to time, and examine it from time to time. If he overdoes any one of these, he will not properly prepare his gold.

The second discourse of the Buddha deals with attaining supreme coolness (i.e., Nibbana).[11] He says the meditator should be intent on six things: on restraining the mind when necessary, on exerting the mind when necessary, on gladdening the mind when necessary, on observing the mind with indifference when necessary, on the supreme [goal], and on delighting in Nibbana.

The third discourse by the Buddha[12] deals with knowing the right time to develop the Factors of Awakening. When the mind is sluggish, the factors of tranquility, concentration, and equanimity should not be developed. When the mind is sluggish, the factors of investigating mental states, energy, and rapture should be developed. When the mind is elated, the opposite is true. The factor of mindfulness can be developed at all times, however.

The Buddha's discourse to Ven. Rahula discussed above does not go into detail about the senses. In "The Shorter Exhortation," given to his son when Ven. Rahula was twenty-one, the Buddha instructs him in contemplation of the various aspects of the six senses: sight, hearing, smell, taste, touch, and mental activity. This meditation subject was given because the Buddha realized that Ven. Rahula was mature in his understanding and ready for the highest attainment, Arahatship.

The Buddha gives three things to be realized concerning every aspect of the senses: each aspect is impermanent (anicca), misery (dukkha), and must be considered as, "This is not mine, I am not this, this is not my self" (in other words, anatta, no-self). The various aspects to be considered include the sense organ (the eye, ear, nose, tongue, body, mind), the object perceived by the sense organs (material forms, sounds, smells, tastes, tangible objects, mental objects), the types of consciousness arising from the coming together of the sense organ with an object, the associated mental consciousness, and the four mental aggregates that are the result of this, namely sensations, perceptions, mental formations, and consciousness. When all this is understood correctly, it will lead to turning away, to being dispassionate, and to freedom. Realizing that freedom has been attained will come at the highest stage of development, when the meditator knows, "Birth is destroyed; the holy life has been fulfilled; what should be done has been done; there is no future life after this."

Truth Will Triumph!

Sayagyi U Chit Tin

FOOTNOTES:

[1] The word `group' has different meanings in this text. 1) Under the headings of the four physical elements the component parts of the body are grouped according to their predominant physical quality. E.g., hair, body hair etc. are in the earth group as their predominant quality is solidity. Under the heading of consciousness group the six types of consciousness based on the six sense organs are grouped. 2) The component parts of the body become groups themselves when they are seen as consisting of all four elements. E.g., though the hair is mainly hard, it also contains the characteristics of the other three elements. 3) The six types of consciousness become groups themselves when they are seen as consisting of the four mental aggregates. 4) Finally, all four physical elements are seen as one group and all the mental states are seen as one group.

[2] The texts in the Pali canon do not specifically mention the brain in this enumeration, but Ashin Buddhaghosa says it should be considered as included with bone marrow (//Path of Purification//, Chapter VIII, S 44).

[3] For example: Majjhima-nikaya, suttas no. 28 and no. 140 (//Middle Length Sayings// I 230-238, III 287-289).

[4] //The Path of Purification//, Chapter VIII, SS42-114; Chapter XI, SS27-117; Chapter XIV, SS37-57.

[5] Majjhima-nikaya sutta no. 62 (//Middle Length Sayings// II 91-97). Translated by Narada Thera and Bhikkhu Mahinda in //The Wheel//, no. 33, pp. 19-33 with information from the commentary in the notes.

[6] Majjhima-nikaya sutta no. 147 (//Middle Length Sayings// III 328-330). Translated by Nyanaponika Thera in The Wheel, no. 33, pp. 33-39 with information from the commentary in the notes.

[7] This is the contemplation of the decomposition of a corpse and is more appropriate for monks than for lay people.

[8] In this discourse, the Buddha includes the fifth element of space (akasa) in addition to the four elements of earth (//pathavi//), water (//apo//), fire (//tejo//), and wind (//vayo//).

[9] For meditating on the parts of the body, see //The Path of Purification//, Chapter VIII, SS42-144, in the second on "Mindfulness Occupied with the Body." For meditating on the four elements, see Chapter XI, SS27-117.

[10] Anguttara-nikaya I 256-258 (//Gradual Sayings// I 235f.).

[11] Anguttara-nikaya III 435 (//Gradual Sayings// III 304).

[12] Samyutta-nikaya V 113-115 (//Kindred Sayings// V 95ff.). Ashin Buddhaghosa mentions one sutta, but the instructions are in two suttas.

Copyright by Sayagyi U Ba Khin Memorial Trust, United Kingdom
address as below
registered charity no 280134

For a course schedule for the forthcoming Vipassana Meditation courses in our Centres, and an application form please request for info in USA at CIS: IMC-USA, 74163,2452 or any other country at CIS: IMC-UK, 100330,3304

Worldwide Contact Addresses in the Tradition of Sayagyi U Ba Khin
~~~~~~

AUSTRIA: International Meditation Centre, A-9064 St. Michael/Gurk 6, Austria;Tel: +43 4224 2820, Fax: +43 4224 28204

EASTERN AUSTRALIA: International Meditation Centre, Lot 2 Cessnock Road, Sunshine NSW 2264, Australia;
Tel: +61 49 705 433, Fax: +61 49 705 749

UNITED KINGDOM: International Meditation Centre, Splatts House, Heddington, Calne, Wiltshire SN11 OPE, England;
Tel: +44 380 850 238, Fax: +44 380 850 833,
Email: CIS, IMC-UK,100330,3304

USA (East Coast): International Meditation Centre, 438 Bankard Road, Westminster MD 21158, USA;
Tel: +1 410 346 7889, Fax: +1 410 346 7133;
Email: CIS, IMC-USA, 74163,2452

WESTERN AUSTRALIA: International Meditation Centre, Lot 78 Jacoby Street, Mahogany Creek WA 6072, Australia;
Tel: +61 9 295 2644, Fax: +61 9 295 3435

CANADA: IMC-Canada, 336 Sandowne Drive, Waterloo, Ontario, N2K 1V8, Canada; Tel: +1 519 747 4762, Fax: +1 519 725 2781
~~~~~~

GERMANY: Sayagyi U Ba Khin Gesellschaft, Christaweg 16, 79114 Freiburg, Germany, Tel: +49 761 465 42, Fax: +49 761 465 92

JAPAN: Sayagyi U Ba Khin Memorial Trust, Komatsuri-Cho 923, Kishiwada-Shi, Osaka-Fu, 596 Japan, Tel: +81 724 45 0057

THE NETHERLANDS: Sayagyi U Ba Khin Stichting, Oudegracht 124, 3511 AW Utrecht, The Netherlands,
Tel: +31 30 311 445, Fax: +31 30 340 612

SINGAPORE: Sayagyi U Ba Khin Memorial Association, 9 Penang Road #07-12, Park Mall, Singapore 0923
Tel: +65 338 6911, Fax: +65 336 7211

SWITZERLAND: Sayagyi U Ba Khin Gesellschaft, Greyerzstrasse 35, 3013 Bern, Switzerland;Tel: +41 31 415 233, Fax: +41 61 691 8049;
Email: CIS, 100256,3576

USA (West Coast): IMC-USA, 77 Kensington Rd., San Anselmo, CA 94960.
Tel: +1 415 459 3117, Fax: +1 415 346 7133

BELGIUM: Address as for the Netherlands, Tel: +32 2414 1756

DENMARK: Contact Address: Mr. Peter Drost-Nissen, Strandboulevarden 117, 3th, 2100 Kopenhagen, Denmark. Tel: 031 425 636

ITALY: Contact address: Mr. Renzo Fedele, Via Euganea 94, 35033 Bresseo PD, Italy. Tel: +39 49 9900 752

DISTRIBUTION AGREEMENT

TITLE OF WORK: Meditation on the Elements
FILENAME: ELEMENTS.ZIP
AUTHOR: Sayagyi U Chit Tin (includes text by Ven. Ledi Sayadaw)
AUTHOR'S ADDRESS: n/a

PUBLISHER'S ADDRESS: International Meditation Centre, Splatts House, Heddington, Calne, Wiltshire SN11 OPE, England
COPYRIGHT HOLDER: The Sayagyi U Ba Khin Memorial Trust, U.K.
DATE OF PUBLICATION: 1994
DATE OF DHARMANET DISTRIBUTION: 1994
ORIGIN SITE: BODY DHARMA * Richmond CA 510/234-9431 DharmaNet (96:101/33)

The copyright holder retains all rights to this work and hereby grants electronic distribution rights to DharmaNet International. This work may be freely copied and redistributed electronically, provided that the file contents (including this Agreement) are not altered in any way and that it is distributed at no cost to the recipient. You may make printed copies of this work for your personal use; further distribution of printed copies requires permission from the copyright holder. If this work is used by a teacher in a class, or is quoted in a review, the publisher shall be notified of such use. See the title page of this work for any additional rights or restrictions that may apply.

DharmaNet International, P.O. Box 4951, Berkeley, CA 94704-4951

End Notes

Becoming (bhava): States of sensuality, form, & formlessness that can develop from craving & clinging, and provide the condition for birth on both the internal & external levels.

Binding (vana): Related terms (cf. nibbana--nibbuta) would be vivata, open; sanvuta, closed, restrained, tied up; & parivuta, surrounded. See PTS Dictionary, *Varati and *Vunati.

Brahman: The Brahmans of India have long maintained that they, by their birth, are worthy of the highest respect. Buddhism borrowed the term Brahman to apply to those who have attained the goal, to show that respect is earned not by birth, race, or caste, but by spiritual attainment.

Effluent (asava): Four qualities--sensuality, views, becoming & ignorance--that 'flow out' of the mind and create the flood (ogha) of the round of death & rebirth.

Factors of Awakening (sambojjhanga): The seven qualities, developed through jhana, that lead the mind to Awakening are (1) mindfulness, (2) investigation of phenomena, (3) energy, (4) rapture, (5) serenity, (6) concentration, & (7) equanimity.

Fetters (sanyojana): The ten Fetters that bind the mind to the round of death & rebirth are (1) self-identity views, (2) grasping at precepts & practices, (3) doubt, (4) sensual passion, (5) irritation, (6) passion for form, (7) passion for formlessness, (8) conceit, (9) restlessness, & (10) ignorance.

Hindrances (nivarana): The Five Hindrances that prevent the mind from gaining concentration are (1) sensual desire, (2) ill will, (3) sloth & torpor, (4) restlessness & anxiety, and (5) doubt.

Mara: The personification of evil & temptation.

Naga: A term commonly used to refer to strong, stately & heroic animals, such as elephants & magical serpents. In Buddhism, it is also used to refer to those who have attained the goal.

Stress (dukkha): Dukkha, which is traditionally translated in the Commentaries as, 'that which is hard to bear,' is notorious for having no truly adequate equivalent in English, but 'stress'--in its basic sense as a strain on body or mind--seems to be as close as English can get. In the Pali Canon, dukkha applies both to physical & to mental phenomena, ranging from the intense stress of acute anguish or pain to the innate burdensomeness of even the most subtle mental or physical fabrications.

Such (tadi): An adjective to describe one who has attained the goal. It indicates that the person's state is indefinable but not subject to change or influences of any sort.

Tathagata: Literally, 'one who has become real (tatha-agata),' an epithet used in ancient India for a person who has attained the highest religious goal. In Buddhism, it usually refers specifically to the Buddha, although occasionally it also refers to any of his disciples who have attained the Buddhist goal.

Bibliography

Blair, Chauncey J. Heat in the Rig Veda and Atharva Veda. (New Haven: American Oriental Society, 1961.)

Buddhaghosa, Bhadantacariya. The Path of Purification, trans. by Bhikkhu Nanamoli. (Kandy: Buddhist Publication Society, 1975.)

Collins, Steven. Selfless Persons: Imagery and Thought in Theravada Buddhism. (Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1982.)

Ergardt, Jan T. Faith and Knowledge in Early Buddhism. (Leiden: E. J. Brill, 1977.)

Gonda, Jan. Some Observations on the Relations between 'Gods' and 'Powers' in the Veda, a propos of the Phrase, sunuh sahasah. (s'Gravenhage: Mouton & Co., 1957.)

Griffith, Ralph (trans.). The Hymns of the Rig Veda. (Varanasi: The Chowkhamba Sanskrit Series Office, 1963.)

Jayatilleke, K. N. Early Buddhist Theory of Knowledge. (London: George Allen & Unwin Ltd., 1963.)

Johansson, Rune E. A. The Psychology of Nirvana. (London: George Allen & Unwin Ltd.,1969.)

Knipe, David M. In the Image of Fire: The Vedic Experiences of Heat. (Delhi: Motilal Barnasidass, 1975.)

Nanananda, Bhikkhu. Concept and Reality in Early Buddhist Thought. (Kandy: Buddhist Publication Society, 1971.)

_____. The Magic of the Mind: An Exposition of the Kalakarama Sutta. (Kandy: Buddhist Publication Society, 1974.)

Nyanaponika Thera. Anatta and Nibbana: Egolessness and Deliverance. (Kandy: Buddhist Publication Society, 1971.)

O'Flaherty, Wendy Doniger. The Rig Veda: An Anthology. (Harmondsworth: Penguin Books Ltd., 1984.)

Pali Text Society's Pali-English Dictionary. Ed. T. W. Rhys Davids and W. Stede. (London: Routledge & Kegan Paul Ltd., 1972.)

Panikkar, Raimundo. The Vedic Experience. (Berkeley: University of California Press, 1977.)

Radhakrishnan, S. (ed. & trans.). The Principal Upanisads. (London: George Allen & Unwin, 1953.)

Warder, A. K. Outline of Indian Philosophy. (Delhi: Motilal Barnasidass, 1971.)

[This document can be acquired from a sub-directory coombspapers via anonymous FTP an on the node COOMBS.ANU.EDU.AU]The document's ftp filename and the full directory path thecoombspapers top level INDEX file][This version: 16 July 1993]----------DOCUMENT TITLE: Emmei
Jikku Kannon Gyo [Enmei Jukku Kannon Gyo]OTHER TITLES: Ten Verse Kannon Sutra Of LifeProlonging Kannon SutraAUTHOR: ?TRANSLATION/TRANSCRIPTION: Eido Shimano
Academic Discussion Forum<BUDDHA-L%ULKYVM.BITNET@ULKYVM.LOUISVILLE.EDU
Breedon<breedon%kekvax.hepnet%Lbl.Bitnet>DATE: 9 Jun 1993THIS ARCHIVE DATE: 16 1993KEYWORDS/ABSTRACT: Zen Buddhist sutra in Japanese & EnglishDATA FORMAT:
ascii----------EMMEI JIKKU KANNON
GYO----------KANZEON NAMU BUTSUYO
U IN YO BUTSU U ENBU PO SOEN JO RAKU GA JOCHO NEN KANZEON BO NEN KANZ
SHINKanzeon! Salutation and devotion to Buddha! We are one with BuddhaIn cause and ef Buddhas and to Buddha, Dharama and Sangha.Our True Nature isEternal, Joyous, Selfless chant every morning Kanzeon, with Nen! Nen, Nen arises from Mind.Nen, Nen is not separa Mind.----------end of file

CORRECTIONS

In preparing this electronic edition for DharmaNet, some minor changes and corrections were made to the original text. These include capitalizations, changing the spellings of certain words from British to American English and adapting punctuation and style to conform more closely to the //Chicago Manual of Style (13th edition)// guidelines.

* * * * * * * *

FORWARD (paragraph 1):
"number of world cicles" -> "number of world cycles"
^

PREFACE (paragraph 5):
"1. to the degree wich suffices" -> "... which suffices"
^

SOME ASPECTS OF THE TEN PERFECTIONS (paragraph 2):
"and are untained by craving" -> "... untainted by craving"
^

Wavering thoughts about: (paragraph 3):
"discontent if they ceas " -> "... if they cease"
^

"3) reninciation avoids indulgence" -> "renunciation ..."
^

10) equanimity dispells attraction:
"evenly under vatying circumstances" -> "... varying circumstances"
^

INTRODUCTION (paragraph 1):
"the donor shoul bear in" -> "the donor should bear in"
^

PREFACE TO THE PERFECTION OF GENEROSITY (paragraph 3):
"guve with spontaneity" -> "give with spontaneity"
  ^

PREFACE TO THE PERFECTION OF GENEROSITY (paragraph 5):
"takne into consideration, of course" -> "taken into ..."
    ~

The importance of generosity (paragraph 6):
"Eveyone who does not become an Arahat" -> "Everyone ..."
    ^

Gifts to the Sangha (paragraph 3):
"gift to result in the greates benefit" -> "... greatest benefit"
                                ^

Types of gifts (paragraph 1):
"2. wordly giving" -> "... worldly giving"
       ^

Akitti's Generosity (paragraph 1):
"So he renounced wordly life" -> "... worldly life"
                    ^

Akitti's Generosity (paragraph 1):
"for all whi wished to take" -> "for all who wished to take"
           ^

The Greatest Abandonings... (paragraph 1):
"mentioned as the greates " -> "mentioned as the greatest"
                        ^

The Greatest Abandonings... (paragraph 1):
"Purification substitues abandoning" -> Purification substitutes ..."
                    ^

The Greatest Abandonings... (paragraph 1):

"substitues life (jivita)" -> "substitutes..."
^

The Greatest Abandonings... (paragraph 1):
"risk of loosing one's life" -> "risk of losing one's life"
^

TYPES OF GIFTS BY PAIRS (#1, paragraph 3):
"point of biew of recollection" -> "point of view of recollection"
^

TYPES OF GIFTS BY PAIRS (#4, paragraph 2)
"future wordly or heavenly pleasures" -> "future worldly ..."
^

TYPES OF GIFTS BY PAIRS (#12, paragraph 1)
"craving for wordly pleasures" -> "craving for worldly pleasures"
^

TYPES OF GIFTS BY PAIRS (#12, paragraph 1)
"desire for wordly pleasures" -> "desire for worldly pleasures"
^

7 Types of Gifts to the Sangha (paragraph 1):
"affors to give to all" -> "afford to give to all"
^

7 Types of Gifts to the Sangha (paragraph 3):
"monks were lexx inclined to pride" -> "... less inclined to pride"
^^

The example of Ugga (paragraph 3):
"he kept in mid the Community" -> "he kept in mind..."
^

TYPES OF GIFTS BY THREES (paragraph 5):
"wheras desire for" -> "whereas desire for"
^

The example of Darubhandaka (paragraph 1):
"gift which it is painful of difficult" -> "... painful or difficult"
^

TYPES OF GIFTS BY FIVE (paragraph 2):
"verse concluding this descritption" -> "... this description"
^

TYPES OF GIFTS BY FIVE (paragraph 10):
"(Asaddha-dada)" -> "(Asaddha-dana)"
^

TYPES OF GIFTS BY GROUPS OF EIGHT (paragraph 11):
"and 2. wordly giving" -> "... worldly giving"
^

TYPES OF GIFTS BY GROUPS OF EIGHT (paragraph 35):
"The distinction between the fact that gifts ity, " -> added missing text
???

TYPES OF GIFTS BY GROUPS OF NINE (paragraph 1):
"it is wrong for another person tp persuade" -> "... to persuade"
^

TYPES OF GIFTS BY GROUPS OF NINE (paragraph 2):
"exiation involving forfeiture" -> "expiation involving ..."
^

The example of Velukantaki (paragraph 1):
"She invited them, ans after the meal" -> "... and after the meal"
^

The example of Velukantaki (paragraph 2):
"mind and intention). 3)" -> "... mind and intention), 3)"
^

THE GOOD RESULTS OF GIFTS (example 4):

"The Middla Lentgth Sayings" -> "... The Middle Length Sayings"
^ ^

[end]

CORRECTIONS

In preparing this electronic edition for DharmaNet, some minor changes and corrections were made to the original text. These include capitalizations, changing the spellings of certain words from British to American English and adapting punctuation and style to conform more closely to the //Chicago Manual of Style (13th edition)// guidelines.

* * * * * * * *

INTRODUCTION (paragraph 1):
"stage between acqiring" -> "stage between acquiring"
^

1. The meaning of patience (paragraph 1):
"against them in your heatr" -> against them in your heart
~

"joy, and exultion" -> joy, and exultation
^
"leading to possessivness" -> leading to possessiveness
^

1. The meaning of patience (paragraph 3)
"incosistent with the commentaries" -> inconsistent...
^

6. The Bodhisattva as teacher... (paragraph 1):
"you highness," -> your highness
^

8. The nine causes of anger (7 - 9):
"relation to enemies, thinging" -> ... thinking
^

8. The nine causes of anger (paragraph 2):
"excretement in his hand" -> excrement...

^^

8. The nine causes of angr (paragraph 2):
"and onlyl covers himself" -> and only...
^

[end]

CORRECTIONS

In preparing this electronic edition for DharmaNet, some minor changes and corrections were made to the original text. These include changing the spellings of certain words from British to American English and adapting punctuation and style to conform more closely to the Chicago Manual of Style (13th edition) guidelines.

In addition, the following changes were made to the text (the symbol "---->" reads "was changed to"):

p.6, line 4 up:
in other words, that what ----> in other words, that which

p.7, line 5:
(nominative: //antta//) ----> (nominative: //anatta//)

p. 7, line 7 up:
"With regarded to corporality ----> "With regard to corporality

p. 8, line 3:
sabbe sakhara anicca ----> sabbe sankhara anicca

p. 8, line 5:
all factors existence ----> all factors existent

p. 11, middle:
but on the other hand ----> on the other hand

p. 12, line 6 up:
which could or act ----> which could act

p. 12, line 2-3 up:
from that what ----> from that which

* * * * * * * *

Alterations deliberately made to the original text ~~~~~~~~~~~~ ~~~~~~~~~~~~~~ ~~~~~~~~~~ Part II, Text 2 (c), first paragraph: "give occassion for covetous" ----> "give occasion covetous" Part II, Text 2 (c), paragraph beginning, "And it should be achieved through mindfulness", second sentence: "convetousness" ----> covetousness.

CORRECTIONS

In preparing this electronic edition for DharmaNet, some minor changes and corrections were made to the original text. These include changing the spellings of certain words from British to American English and adapting punctuation and style to conform more closely to the Chicago Manual of Style (13th edition) guidelines.

In addition, the following changes were made to the text (the symbol "---->" reads "was changed to"):

p.7, line 6 up:
which is difficult obtain ----> which is difficult to obtain p.12, line 2 up (in footnote):

like a strangling vine overgrow ----> like a strangling vine overgrows

p.13, line 8 down: Enlightenments ----> Enlightenment

p.21, first line of Dhammapada verse: living being ----> living beings

p.29, line 4 up: passive states of ----> passive state of p.30, last line, middle paragraph: Breath in ----> Breathe in p.59, line 3: (see the Discourse on p.65)

----> (see the Discourse to Visakha, below)

* * * * * * * *

CORRECTIONS

In preparing this electronic edition for DharmaNet, some minor changes and corrections were made to the original text. These include changing the spellings of certain words from British to American English and adapting punctuation and style to conform more closely to the Chicago Manual of Style (13th edition) guidelines.

* * * * * * * *

CORRECTIONS

In preparing this electronic edition for DharmaNet, some minor changes and corrections were made to the original text. These include changing the spellings of certain words from British to American English and adapting punctuation and style to conform more closely to the Chicago Manual of Style (13th edition) guidelines.

* * * * * * * *

CORRECTIONS

In preparing this electronic edition for DharmaNet, some minor changes and corrections were made to the original text. These include changing the spellings of certain words from British to American English and adapting punctuation and style to conform more closely to the Chicago Manual of Style (13th edition) guidelines.

In addition, the following changes were made ("---->" means "was changed to"):

1. p.5, line 6 up:
   King Suddhodana's son also the name
   ----> King Suddhodana's son also. The name

2. p.9, line 11 up:
   strength. And not only towards his horses but towards
   -----> <DELETE ENTIRE LINE>

3. p.9, line 4-5 up:
   and when he was quite to others as far as he could,
   <DOES NOT MAKE SENSE, BUT LEFT //stet//>

4. p. 24, line 15:
   never hear anything and pleasant sounds
   ----> never hear anything but the pleasant sounds

5. p 108, last 5 lines:
   The King thought it was very strange that none of his messengers had come back with any answer, and ask Yasodhara his son's wife, to try what she could do to get an answer from Him, and bring Him to Kapilavatthu.

   ----> The King thought it was very strange that none of his messengers had come back with any answer. He asked Yasodhara, his son's wife, to try do what she could to get an answer from Him, and to bring Him to Kapilavatthu.

6. p 118, middle:

try to trap in Him what He said

----> try to trap Him in what He said

7. p 152, line 3 up:

feel very sure they would get if they asked for it

----> feel very sure they would not get if they asked for it

8. p 154, line 9-10:

and Devadatta became his obedient and devoted supporter

----> and the Prince became his obedient and devoted supporter

* * * * * * * *

CORRECTIONS

In preparing this electronic edition for DharmaNet, some minor changes and corrections were made to the original text. These include changing the spellings of certain words from British to American English and adapting punctuation and style to conform more closely to the Chicago Manual of Style (13th edition) guidelines.

In addition, the following changes were made ("---->" means "was changed to"):

1. p.11, line 3 up: origin or and of the universe
   ----> origin of the universe

* * * * * * * *

CORRECTIONS

In preparing this electronic edition for DharmaNet, some minor changes and corrections were made to the original text. These include changing the spellings of certain words from British to American English and adapting punctuation and style to conform more closely to the Chicago Manual of Style (13th edition) guidelines.

In addition, the following changes were made to the text (the symbol "---->" reads "was changed to"):

p. 13, line 7 up:
turn attention other ----> turn attention to other

p. 14, line 2 up: Diving ----> Divine

p. 16, middle:
so there is no question of the three roots
----> there is no question of the three roots

p. 16, line 3 up: Copmassion ----> Compassion

p. 23, paragraph 1, line 3 up: who has a already ---- who has already

* * * * * * * *

CORRECTIONS

In preparing this electronic edition for DharmaNet, some minor changes and corrections were made to the original text. These include changing the spellings of certain words from British to American English and adapting punctuation and style to conform more closely to the Chicago Manual of Style (13th edition) guidelines.

* * * * * * * *

CORRECTIONS

In preparing this electronic edition for DharmaNet, some minor changes and corrections were made to the original text. These include changing the spellings of certain words from British to American English and adapting punctuation and style to conform more closely to the Chicago Manual of Style (13th edition) guidelines.

ERRATA
~~~~~~

The following changes were deliberately made to the original text in preparing this edition:

1. VYAGGHAP.TXT, in the "Conditions of Worldy Progress":
   fire would not burn it, water would not carry it away, ill-disposed heirs remove it.
  CHANGED TO fire would not burn it, water would not carry it away, NOR ill-disposed heirs remove it.

2. VYAGGHAP.TXT, in the "Conditions of Worldy Progress":
   debauchery, drunkenness, gambling, friendship, companionship and intimacy with evil-doers.
  CHANGED TO
   (i) Debauchery, (ii) drunkenness, (iii) gambling, (iv) friendship, companionship and intimacy with evil-doers.

   (Similar change two paragraphs later)
~~~~~~

CORRECTIONS

In preparing this electronic edition for DharmaNet, some minor changes and corrections were made to the original text. These include changing the spellings of certain words from British to American English and adapting punctuation and style to conform more closely to the Chicago Manual of Style (13th edition) guidelines.

In addition, the following changes were made to the text (the symbol "---->" reads "was changed to"):

p.1, line 1 of verse:
No doing any kind of evil ----> Not doing any kind of evil

p.8, line 8:
Thus origin of suffering ----> The origin of suffering

p.8, 4th paragraph:
right livelihood; right mindfulness ----> right livelihood; right effort, right mindfulness

Throughout the text, references to the Nikayas were made consistent by abbreviating them as follows:

Anguttara Nikaya ----> AN Majjhima Nikaya ----> MN
Samyutta Nikaya ----> SN

* * * * * * * *

CORRECTIONS

In preparing this electronic edition for DharmaNet, some minor changes and corrections were made to the original text. These include changing the spellings of certain words from British to American English and adapting punctuation and style to conform more closely to the Chicago Manual of Style (13th edition) guidelines.

In addition, the following changes were made to the text (the symbol "---->" reads "was changed to"):

p.i (Preface), footnote:
one and half miles ----> one and one-half miles & over quarter mile ----> over one-quarter mile

p.13, line 8 up:
then to trust ----> than to trust

p.20, middle:
Master Eckehart ----> Meister Eckehart

p. 27, line 7:
Gotamo, the Buddha ----> Gotama, the Buddha

p. 36, middle:
Gotamo Buddho ----> Gotama Buddha

p. 55, line 8 down:
Lord and Master Gotamo ----> Lord and Master Gotama

p. 55, last line:
hardly 3:4 meter ----> hardly 3X4 meters

* * * * * * * *

CORRECTIONS

In preparing this electronic edition for DharmaNet, some minor changes and corrections were made to the original text. These include changing the spellings of certain words from British to American English and adapting punctuation and style to conform more closely to the Chicago Manual of Style (13th edition) guidelines.

In addition, the following changes were made to the text (the symbol "---->" reads "was changed to"):

p.3 -- Note from the Transcriber (Joe Crea):
The footnote marked [*] should appear after the quotation on line 5, since the reference to Kindred Sayings V. p.93 only applies to this sentence and not to a discussion of the Seven Bojjhangas. In fact, at Kindred Sayings V. p. 93, //Dhamma-vicaya// is translated as "Norm-investigation" rather than "investigation of Dhamma". (personal note by JWC).

p.5, line 9:
wandered on this long road ---> wandered on this long, long road [per actual text of KS V. p. 365]

p.14, lines 3,4, and 9: STET
Note from transcriber: The actual text of KS III reads "the self" rather than "self" in these lines.

p. 23, line 5 up:
salytanam ----> salayatanam

p. 23, line 2 up:
salytana ----> salayatana

p. 34, line 23-14:
neutral feeling of body or of mind Sankhara mental volitions
---> neutral feeling of body or of mind. Sankhara is mental volitions

p. 49, middle:

(K.S., V, p. 6) ---> (K.S., V, p. 55)

p. 50, line 17:

body, and also in feeling ---> body, ... and also in feeling

p. 52, middle:

(K.S., V, pp 34-5) ---> (K.S., V, pp. 84-5)

p. 54, line 3 up:

(Majjhima Nikaya 117) ----> STET

But the quoted passage could not be located in this sutta.

* * * * * * * *

CORRECTIONS

In preparing this electronic edition for DharmaNet, some minor changes and corrections were made to the original text. These include changing the spellings of certain words from British to American English and adapting punctuation and style to conform more closely to the Chicago Manual of Style (13th edition) guidelines.

In addition, the following changes were made to the text (the symbol "---->" reads "was changed to"):

p. 4, paragraph 2, line 6: "fust" ----> "just"

p. 8, par. 5, line 2: "exists" ----> "exist"

p. 11, par. 1, line 1: "elephoant" ----> "elephant"

p. 13, par. 5, line 4: "Jaysena" ----> "Jayasena"

Alterations deliberately made to the original text
~~~~~~~~~~~~ ~~~~~~~~~~~~~~ ~~~~~ ~~ ~~~ ~~~~~~~~~ ~~~~

Part II, Text 2 (c), first paragraph: "give occassion for covetous" ----> "give occasion for covetous"

Part II, Text 2 (c), paragraph beginning, "And it should be achieved through mindfulness", second sentence: "convetousness" ----> covetousness.
~~~~~~~~~~~~

CORRECTIONS

In preparing this electronic edition for DharmaNet, some minor changes and corrections were made to the original text. These include changing the spellings of certain words from British to American English and adapting punctuation and style to conform more closely to the Chicago Manual of Style (13th edition) guidelines.

In addition, the following changes were made to the text (the symbol "---->" reads "was changed to"):

p.4, line 7:
I would rather do is seeking ----> I would rather do is seek

* * * * * * * *

CORRECTIONS

In preparing this electronic edition for DharmaNet, some minor changes and corrections were made to the original text. These include changing the spellings of certain words from British to American English and adapting punctuation and style to conform more closely to the Chicago Manual of Style (13th edition) guidelines.

* * * * * * * *

Words that were americanized in the DharmaNet edition:

patronising utilise recognise civilise behaviour favour manoeuver fulfil labour endeavour practising recognise centre honour calibre mechanised industrialised

CORRECTIONS

In preparing this electronic edition for DharmaNet, some minor changes and corrections were made to the original text. These include changing the spellings of certain words from British to American English and adapting punctuation and style to conform more closely to the Chicago Manual of Style (13th edition) guidelines.

In addition, the following changes were made to the text (the symbol "---->" reads "was changed to"):

p. 10, line 7: the Paccekabuddha's bowl and filled with mud
----> the Paccekabuddha's bowl and filled it with mud

[end]

CORRECTIONS

In preparing this electronic edition for DharmaNet, some minor changes and corrections were made to the original text. These include changing the spellings of certain words from British to American English and adapting punctuation and style to conform more closely to the Chicago Manual of Style (13th edition) guidelines.

In addition, the following changes were made to the text (the symbol "---->" reads "was changed to"):

p. 8, middle:
gladness, sadness, or mental (indifferent) feeling
----> gladness, sadness, or neutral (indifferent) feeling

* * * * * * * *

CORRECTIONS

In preparing this electronic edition for DharmaNet, some minor changes and corrections were made to the original text. These include changing the spellings of certain words from British to American English and adapting punctuation and style to conform more closely to the Chicago Manual of Style (13th edition) guidelines.

In addition, the following changes were made to the text (the symbol "---->" reads "was changed to"):

p. 4, middle:
suttamaya-panna ----> sutamaya-panna

* * * * * * * *

CORRECTIONS

In preparing this electronic edition for DharmaNet, some minor changes and corrections were made to the original text. These include changing the spellings of certain words from British to American English and adapting punctuation and style to conform more closely to the Chicago Manual of Style (13th edition) guidelines.

In addition, the following changes were made to the text:

p.6: Change:

> Sometimes I ignore support or help offered by my relatives, sometimes their tears even shed because of my activities do I ignore, I, being a person of such type, why should I not ignore that foolish man's deed?
>
> To:
>
> Sometimes I ignore support or help offered by my relatives; sometimes their tears even shed because of my activities. Being a person of such type myself, why should I not therefore ignore that foolish man's deed?

* * * * * * * *

CORRECTIONS

In preparing this electronic edition for DharmaNet, some minor changes and corrections were made to the original text. These include changing the spellings of certain words from British to American English and adapting punctuation and style to conform more closely to the Chicago Manual of Style (13th edition) guidelines.

[end]

CORRECTIONS

In preparing this electronic edition for DharmaNet, some minor changes and corrections were made to the original text. These include changing the spellings of certain words from British to American English and adapting punctuation and style to conform more closely to the Chicago Manual of Style (13th edition) guidelines.

In addition, the following changes were made ("---->" means "was changed to"):

1. p.49, first paragraph:
   like when family planning ----> as when family planning

2. p.65, third stanza from bottom:
   but hell can be expect? ----> but hell can he expect?

3. p.69, next to last line:
   Bhikkhu Dhammapla ----> Bhikkhu Dhammapala

* * * * * * * *

BPS Newsletter Cover Essay #1 (Summer 1985)

A NEW UNDERTAKING

by Bhikkhu Bodhi

This year has been a time for the BPS to initiate new undertakings. Having outgrown our home of the last twenty years, we recently moved into spacious new quarters equipped with the larger facilities our expanding work requires. Another new undertaking inspired by our growth is the issuing of this newsletter, to accompany each of our future mailings. The newsletter gives expression to our wish to establish closer contact with you -- our members, readers and friends. In these columns we will be providing you with information concerning our activities and publications, as well as book reviews, news notices and short Buddhist essays.

Perhaps we can best begin this regular essay column by exploring the purpose which guides our work at the BPS today. Put quite simply, that purpose is to offer to the world the teaching of the Buddha as set forth in the oldest collection of Buddhist scriptures, the Pali Canon. However, we do not aim merely at providing objective factual accounts of the Buddha's teachings of interest solely to Oriental scholars and their students. Our purpose, we candidly admit, is advocative and prescriptive: we are convinced that the Dhamma communicates a message which is still very much alive and relevant, and through our publications we seek to make that message widely known.

In line with this aim it is essential for us that the Dhamma be addressed not only to its original and primary task of indicating the timeless path to deliverance, but also to those vexing existential problems posed by the particular circumstances of our age. Prominent among these is the widespread moral and spiritual deterioration evident in so many spheres of human life. For increasing numbers of people both East and West, cynicism, skepticism and a narrow fixation on material goals have toppled traditional views and values without offering any satisfactory alternatives to replace them. Thus, while our sciences unlock the most obscure secrets of nature and yield its powers to our control, we find ourselves beset with a sense of inner poverty, destitute of those fundamental guiding principles which can give a deeper and richer meaning to our lives.

At the root of our current spiritual disorder lies a distorted conception of value which locates the ultimate end of human activity in the satisfaction of personal desire. Tacitly accepted and adhered to without reflective awareness, this thesis has become the dominant working basis for contemporary civilization. Mobilizing individuals, ethnic groups and nations alike, it draws them into an enervating chase after the achievement of power, wealth and pleasure, and pits them against one another in a struggle for supremacy marked either by cool suspicion or by vehement hate. Given a creed of self-fulfillment in an age of declining moral vigor, it is not astonishing that in the midst of plenty we witness all around us a frantic search for instant gratification and a rising tide of destructiveness unconstrained by even the least human sympathy.

To remedy this disturbing situation, moralistic preaching will not suffice, nor can much be expected from economic, social and political reforms isolated from more fundamental changes. For at its core our crisis is a crisis of consciousness. Its real origins go deeper than our institutions, deeper than our cultural norms, deeper than our avowed motives and goals. Its origins lie in the hidden strata of the mind, in the breeding place of those tumultuous emotional and volitional forces which the Buddha summed up in the three "roots of evil" -- greed, hatred and delusion.

What is most crucial, therefore, if there is to be any change in the direction of the world, is a change in those who make up the world, that is, in ourselves. To achieve our own genuine welfare and effectively promote the welfare of others, we require the acumen to distinguish clearly what is truly in our interest and what may be immediately pleasurable but ultimately harmful; and we require too the stamina to undertake the work of liberating our minds from the bonds of greed, hatred and delusion. Admittedly, the number of those who will see the need for inward change and make the appropriate effort will always be small. However, the difficulty does not annul the necessity. For those of clear vision who are responsive to the call of the good there can be no choice but to take up the long hard task of self-transformation.

If the work of inner cultivation is to come to full fruition, it must begin with and be guided by correct understanding, by that discernment of the true nature of existence which is called in the language of the Dhamma "right view." The unfailing pointer which the Buddha has provided for right view is the teaching of the Four Noble Truths. It is this perspective of the Four Noble Truths, with the light it sheds on the perplexing relationship between desire, happiness and suffering, which may be the most important contribution the Dhamma can make towards dispelling the rampant confusion of our time. In contrast to the whole world, which stands on the assumption that happiness is to be achieved through the satisfaction of desire, the Buddha teaches that the entire enterprise aimed at appeasing desire is doomed to futility, that the pursuit of desire leads not to happiness but to suffering. In the teaching of the Enlightened One the way to genuine and unshakable happiness lies in the restraint and mastery of desire. It is only by training ourselves to resist the lure of pleasure and power, to abandon the quest for self-aggrandizement, and to relinquish our hold on our attachments, that we can find for ourselves the indestructible peace of deliverance. And it is only thus that we can act with true compassion for the benefit of others, for the good, welfare and happiness of the world.

* * * * * * * *

BPS Newsletter Cover Essay #2 (Autumn 1985)

TWO FACES OF THE DHAMMA

by Bhikkhu Bodhi

On first encounter Buddhism confronts us as a paradox. Intellectually, it appears a freethinker's delight: sober, realistic, undogmatic, almost scientific in its outlook and method. But if we come into contact with the living Dhamma from within, we soon discover that it has another side which seems the antithesis of all our rationalistic presuppositions. We still don't meet rigid creeds or random speculation, but we do come upon religious ideals of renunciation, contemplation and devotion; a body of doctrines dealing with matters transcending sense perception and thought; and -_ perhaps most disconcerting -_ a program of training in which faith figures as a cardinal virtue, doubt as a hindrance, barrier and fetter.

When we try to determine our own relationship with the Dhamma, eventually we find ourselves challenged to make sense out of its two seemingly irreconcilable faces: the empiricist face turned to the world, telling us to investigate and verify things for ourselves, and the religious face turned to the Beyond, advising us to dispel our doubts and place trust in the Teacher and his Teaching.

One way we can resolve this dilemma is by accepting only one face of the Dhamma as authentic and rejecting the other as spurious or superfluous. Thus, with traditional Buddhist pietism, we can embrace the religious side of faith and devotion, but shy off from the hard-headed world-view and the task of critical inquiry; or, with modern Buddhist apologetics, we can extol the Dhamma's empiricism and resemblance to science, but stumble embarrassingly over the religious side. Yet reflection on what a genuine Buddhist spirituality truly requires, makes it clear that both faces of the Dhamma are equally authentic and that both must be taken into account. If we fail to do so, not only do we risk adopting a lopsided view of the teaching, but our own involvement with the Dhamma is likely to be hampered by partiality and conflicting attitudes.

The problem remains, however, of bringing together the two faces of the Dhamma without sidling into self-contradiction. The key, we suggest, to achieving this reconciliation, and thus to securing the internal consistency of our own perspective and practice, lies in considering two fundamental points: first, the guiding //purpose// of the Dhamma; and second, the //strategy// it employs to achieve that purpose. The //purpose// is the attainment of deliverance from suffering. The Dhamma does not aim at providing us with factual information about the world, and thus, despite a compatibility with science, its goals and concerns are necessarily different from those of the latter. Primarily and essentially, the Dhamma is a path to spiritual emancipation, to liberation from the round of repeated birth, death and suffering. Offered to us as the irreplaceable means of deliverance, the Dhamma does not seek mere intellectual assent, but commands a response that is bound to be fully religious. It addresses us at the bedrock of our being, and there it awakens the faith, devotion and commitment appropriate when the final goal of our existence is at stake.

But for Buddhism faith and devotion are only spurs which impel us to enter and persevere along the path; by themselves they cannot ensure deliverance. The primary cause of bondage and suffering, the Buddha teaches, is ignorance regarding the true nature of existence; hence in the Buddhist //strategy// of liberation the primary instrument must be wisdom, the knowledge and vision of things as they really are. Investigation and critical inquiry, cool and uncommitted, constitute the first step towards wisdom, enabling us to resolve our doubts and gain a conceptual grasp of the truths upon which our deliverance depends. But doubt and questioning cannot continue indefinitely. Once we have decided that the Dhamma is to be our vehicle to spiritual freedom, we have to step on board: we must leave our hesitancy behind and enter the course of training which will lead us from faith to liberating vision.

For those who approach the Dhamma in quest of intellectual or emotional gratification, inevitably it will show two faces, and one will always remain a puzzle. But if we are prepared to approach the Dhamma on its own terms, as the way to release from suffering, there will not be two faces at all. Instead we will see what was there from the start: the single face of Dhamma which, like any other face, presents two complementary sides.

* * * * * * * *

BPS Newsletter Cover Essay #3 (Winter 1985)

VISION AND ROUTINE

by Bhikkhu Bodhi

All human activity can be viewed as an interplay between two contrary but equally essential factors -- vision and repetitive routine. Vision is the creative element in activity, whose presence ensures that over and above the settled conditions pressing down upon us from the past we still enjoy a margin of openness to the future, a freedom to discern more meaningful ends and to discover more efficient ways to achieve them. Repetitive routine, in contrast, provides the conservative element in activity. It is the principle that accounts for the persistence of the past in the present, and that enables the successful achievements of the present to be preserved intact and faithfully transmitted to the future.

Though pulling in opposite directions -- the one towards change, the other towards stability -- vision and routine intermesh in a variety of ways and every course of action can be found to participate to some extent in both. For any particular action to be both meaningful and effective the attainment of a healthy balance between the two is necessary. When one factor prevails at the expense of the other, the consequences are invariably undesirable. If we are bound to a repetitive cycle of work that deprives us of our freedom to inquire and understand, we soon bog down, crippled by the chains of routine. If we are spurred to act by elevating ideals but lack the discipline to implement them, eventually we find ourselves wallowing in dreams or exhausting our energies on frivolous pursuits. It is only when accustomed routines are infused from within by vision that they become springboards to discovery rather than deadening ruts. And it is only when inspired vision gives birth to a course of repeatable actions that we can bring our ideals down from the ethereal sphere of imagination to the somber realm of fact. It took a flash of genius for Michelangelo to behold the figure of David invisible in a shapeless block of stone; but it required years of prior training, and countless blows with hammer and chisel, to work the miracle that would leave us a masterpiece of art.

These reflections concerning the relationship between vision and routine apply with equal validity to the practice of the Buddhist path. Like all other human activities, the treading of the way to the cessation of suffering requires that the intelligent grasp of new disclosures of truth be fused with the patient and stabilizing discipline of repetition. The factor of vision enters the path under the heading of right view -- as the understanding of the undistorted truths concerning our existence and as the continued penetration of those same truths through deepening contemplation and reflection. The factor of repetition enters the path as the onerous task imposed by the practice itself: the need to undertake specific modes of training and to cultivate them diligently in the prescribed sequence until they yield their fruit. The course of spiritual growth along the Buddhist path might in fact be conceived as an alternating succession of stages in which, during one phase, the element of vision is dominant, during the next the element of routine. It is a flash of vision that opens our inner eye to the essential meaning of the Dhamma, gradual training that makes our insight secure, and again the urge for still more vision that propels the practice forward to its culmination in final knowledge.

Though the emphasis may alternate from phase to phase, ultimate success in the development of the path always hinges upon balancing vision with routine in such a way that each can make its maximal contribution. However, because our minds are keyed to fix upon the new and distinctive, in our practice we are prone to place a one-sided emphasis on vision at the expense of repetitive routine. Thus we are elated by expectations concerning the stages of the path far beyond our reach, while at the same time we tend to neglect the lower stages -- dull and drab, but far more urgent and immediate -- lying just beneath our feet. To adopt this attitude, however, is to forget the crucial fact that vision always operates upon a groundwork of previously established routine and must in turn give rise to new patterns of routine adequate to the attainment of its intended aim. Thus if we are to close the gap between ideal and actuality -- between the envisaged aim of striving and the lived experience of our everyday lives -- it is necessary for us to pay greater heed to the task of repetition. Every wholesome thought, every pure intention, every effort to train the mind represents a potential for growth along the Noble Eightfold Path. But to be converted from a mere potential into an active power leading to the end of suffering, the fleeting wholesome thought-formations must be repeated, fostered and cultivated, made into enduring qualities of our being. Feeble in their individuality, when their forces are consolidated by repetition they acquire a strength that is invincible

The key to development along the Buddhist path is repetitive routine guided by inspirational vision. It is the insight into final freedom -- the peace and purity of a liberated mind -- that uplifts us and impels us to overcome our limits. But it is by repetition -- the methodical cultivation of wholesome practices -- that we cover the distance separating us from the goal and draw ever closer to deliverance.

* * * * * * * *

BPS Newsletter Cover Essay #4 (Summer 1986)

PURIFICATION OF MIND

by Bhikkhu Bodhi

An ancient maxim found in the //Dhammapada// sums up the practice of the Buddha's teaching in three simple guidelines to training: to abstain from all evil, to cultivate good, and to purify one's mind. These three principles form a graded sequence of steps progressing from the outward and preparatory to the inward and essential . Each step leads naturally into the one that follows it, and the culmination of the three in purification of mind makes it plain that the heart of Buddhist practice is to be found here.

Purification of mind as understood in the Buddha's teaching is the sustained endeavor to cleanse the mind of defilements, those dark unwholesome mental forces which run beneath the surface stream of consciousness vitiating our thinking, values, attitudes, and actions. The chief among the defilements are the three that the Buddha has termed the "roots of evil" -- greed, hatred, and delusion -- from which emerge their numerous offshoots and variants: anger and cruelty, avarice and envy, conceit and arrogance, hypocrisy and vanity, the multitude of erroneous views.

Contemporary attitudes do not look favorably upon such notions as defilement and purity, and on first encounter they may strike us as throwbacks to an outdated moralism, valid perhaps in an era when prudery and taboo were dominant, but having no claims upon us emancipated torchbearers of modernity. Admittedly, we do not all wallow in the mire of gross materialism and many among us seek our enlightenments and spiritual highs, but we want them on our own terms, and as heirs of the new freedom we believe they are to be won through an unbridled quest for experience without any special need for introspection, personal change, or self-control.

However, in the Buddha's teaching the criterion of genuine enlightenment lies precisely in purity of mind. The purpose of all insight and enlightened understanding is to liberate the mind from the defilements, and Nibbana itself, the goal of the teaching, is defined quite clearly as freedom from greed, hatred, and delusion. From the perspective of the Dhamma defilement and purity are not mere postulates of a rigid authoritarian moralism but real and solid facts essential to a correct understanding of the human situation in the world.

As facts of lived experience, defilement and purity pose a vital distinction having a crucial significance for those who seek deliverance from suffering. They represent the two points between which the path to liberation unfolds -- the former its problematic and starting point, the latter its resolution and end. The defilements, the Buddha declares, lie at the bottom of all human suffering. Burning within as lust and craving, as rage and resentment, they lay to waste hearts, lives, hopes, and civilizations, and drive us blind and thirsty through the round of birth and death. The Buddha describes the defilements as bonds, fetters, hindrances, and knots; thence the path to unbonding, release, and liberation, to untying the knots, is at the same time a discipline aimed at inward cleansing.

The work of purification must be undertaken in the same place where the defilements arise, in the mind itself, and the main method the Dhamma offers for purifying the mind is meditation. Meditation, in the Buddhist training, is neither a quest for self-effusive ecstasies nor a technique of home-applied psychotherapy, but a carefully devised method of mental development -- theoretically precise and practically efficient -- for attaining inner purity and spiritual freedom. The principal tools of Buddhist meditation are the core wholesome mental factors of energy, mindfulness, concentration, and understanding. But in the systematic practice of meditation, these are strengthened and yoked together in a program of self-purification which aims at extirpating the defilements root and branch so that not even the subtlest unwholesome stirrings remain.

Since all defiled states of consciousness are born from ignorance the most deeply embedded defilement, the final and ultimate purification of mind is to be accomplished through the instrumentality of wisdom, the knowledge and vision of things as they really are. Wisdom, however, does not arise through chance or random good intentions, but only in a purified mind. Thus in order for wisdom to come forth and accomplish the ultimate purification through the eradication of defilements, we first have to create a space for it by developing a provisional purification of mind -- a purification which, though temporary and vulnerable, is still indispensable as a foundation for the emergence of all liberative insight.

The achievement of this preparatory purification of mind begins with the challenge of self-understanding. To eliminate defilements we must first learn to know them, to detect them at work infiltrating and dominating our everyday thoughts and lives. For countless eons we have acted on the spur of greed, hatred, and delusion, and thus the work of self-purification cannot be executed hastily, in obedience to our demand for quick results. The task requires patience, care, and persistence -- and the Buddha's crystal clear instructions. For every defilement the Buddha in his compassion has given us the antidote, the method to emerge from it and vanquish it. By learning these principles and applying them properly, we can gradually wear away the most stubborn inner stains and reach the end of suffering, the "taintless liberation of the mind."

* * * * * * * *

BPS Newsletter Cover Essay #5 (Winter 1986)

THE CASE FOR STUDY

by Bhikkhu Bodhi

The recent upsurge of interest in Buddhism, both East and West, has been marked by a vigorous practical orientation and a drive to discover the peace and freedom to which the practice of Dhamma leads. This zeal for practice, however, has often been accompanied by another trait which may not be so fruitful, namely, a tendency to neglect or even belittle the methodical study of the Buddha's teachings. The arguments offered in defense of this attitude have already become familiar currency among us. It is said, for example, that study is concerned with words and concepts, not with realities; that it leads only to learning, not to wisdom; that it can change only our ideas but fails to touch us at the deeper levels of our lives. To clinch the case the testimony of the Buddha himself is enlisted, with his famous remarks that to learn much without practicing is like counting the cows of others or like carrying a raft on one's head instead of using it to cross the stream.

This contention, to be sure, has its aspect of truth, but also suffers from a one-sided emphasis which may actually thwart rather than aid our progress on the Buddhist path. It is certainly true that learning without practice is fruitless, but the other side of the issue also should be considered. Should a person gather cows if he knows nothing about how to take care of them? Should he try to cross a rough and dangerous river without knowing how to operate a raft? The Buddha himself insisted that his followers learn and transmit the Dhamma both in the letter and the spirit, but rather than appealing to traditional formulations, let us inquire ourselves into the value and function of Dhamma study.

The point at issue, it must be stressed, is not study as an academic discipline or the accumulation of a wealth of learning, but the acquisition of a sound and solid working knowledge of the basic Buddhist doctrines. Now to see why this is so essential, we must recall that the entire practice of the proper Buddhist path develops out of the act through which we enter the path -- the going for refuge to the Triple Gem. If we have taken this step honestly, with correct motivation, it implies that we have acknowledged our need for spiritual guidance and have entrusted ourselves to the Buddha as our guide and to his teaching as our vehicle of guidance. By taking refuge in the Dhamma we accept not merely a technique of meditation that we can use at liberty for our own self-appointed purposes, but a profound and comprehensive teaching on the true nature of the human condition, a teaching designed to awaken in us a perception of this truth as the means for reaching the full and final end of suffering. The liberation offered by the Dhamma comes, not from simply practicing meditation in the context of our own preconceptions and desires, but from practicing upon the groundwork of the right understanding and right intentions communicated to us by the Buddha.

This cognitive character of the Buddhist path elevates doctrinal study and intellectual inquiry to a position of great importance. Though the knowledge that frees the mind from bondage emerges only from intuitive insight and not from a mass of doctrinal facts, genuine insight always develops on the basis of a preliminary conceptual grasp of the basic principles essential to right understanding, in the absence of which its growth will inevitably be obstructed. The study and systematic reflection through which we arrive at this preparatory right view necessarily involve concepts and ideas. But before we hasten to dismiss Dhamma study as being therefore only a worthless tangle of verbiage, let us consider that concepts and ideas are our indispensable tools of understanding and communication. Concepts, however, can be valid and invalid tools of understanding; ideas can be fruitful or useless, capable of bringing immense benefit or of entailing enormous harm. The object of studying the Dhamma as part of our spiritual quest is to learn to comprehend our experience correctly: to be able to distinguish the valid from the invalid, the true from the false, the wholesome from the unwholesome.

It is only by making a thorough and careful investigation that we will be in a position to reject what is detrimental to our growth and to apply ourselves with confidence to cultivating what is truly beneficial. Without having reached this preliminary conceptual clarification, without having succeeded in "straightening out our views," there can indeed be the earnest practice of Buddhist meditation techniques, but there will not be the practice of the meditation pertaining to the integral Noble Eightfold Path. And while such free-based meditation may bring its practitioners the mundane benefits of greater calm, awareness and equanimity, lacking the guidance of right view and the driving power of right motivation, it is questionable whether it can lead to the penetrative realization of the Dhamma, or to its final goal, the complete cessation of suffering.

It is almost impossible to give a single word of counsel on the subject of study applicable to all followers of the Dhamma. Needs and interests vary so greatly from one person to another that each will have to strike the balance between study and practice that suits his or her own disposition. But without hesitation it can be said that all who earnestly endeavor to live by the Buddha's teaching will find their practice strengthened by the methodical study of his Dhamma. Such an undertaking, of course, will not be easy, but it is just through facing and surmounting the challenges we meet that our understanding will ripen and mature in the higher wisdom.

* * * * * * * *

BPS Newsletter Cover Essay #6 (Spring 1987)

DHAMMA WITHOUT REBIRTH?

by Bhikkhu Bodhi

In line with the present-day stress on the need for religious teachings to be personally relevant and directly verifiable, in certain Dhamma circles the time-honored Buddhist doctrine of rebirth has come up for severe re-examination. Although only a few contemporary Buddhist thinkers still go so far as to suggest that this doctrine be scrapped as "unscientific," another opinion has been gaining ground to the effect that whether or not rebirth itself be a fact, the //doctrine// of rebirth has no essential bearings on the practice of Dhamma and thence no claim to an assured place in the Buddhist teachings. The Dhamma, it is said, is concerned solely with the here and now, with helping us to resolve our personal hangups through increased self-awareness and inner honesty. All the rest of Buddhism we can now let go as the religious trappings of an ancient culture utterly inappropriate for the Dhamma of our technological age.

If we suspend our own predilections for the moment and instead go directly to our sources, we come upon the indisputable fact that the Buddha himself taught rebirth and taught it as a basic tenet of his teaching. Viewed in their totality, the Buddha's discourses show us that far from being a mere concession to the outlook prevalent in his time or an Asiatic cultural contrivance, the doctrine of rebirth has tremendous implications for the entire course of Dhamma practice, affecting both the aim with which the practice is taken up and the motivation with which it is followed through to completion.

The aim of the Buddhist path is liberation from suffering, and the Buddha makes it abundantly clear that the suffering from which liberation is needed is the suffering of bondage to samsara, the round of repeated birth and death. To be sure, the Dhamma does have an aspect which is directly visible and personally verifiable. By direct inspection of our own experience we can see that sorrow, tension, fear and grief always arise from our greed, aversion and ignorance, and thus can be eliminated with the removal of those defilements. The importance of this directly visible side of Dhamma practice cannot be underestimated, as it serves to confirm our confidence in the liberating efficacy of the Buddhist path. However, to downplay the doctrine of rebirth and explain the entire import of the Dhamma as the amelioration of mental suffering through enhanced self-awareness is to deprive the Dhamma of those wider perspectives from which it derives its full breadth and profundity. By doing so one seriously risks reducing it in the end to little more than a sophisticated ancient system of humanistic psychotherapy.

The Buddha himself has clearly indicated that the root problem of human existence is not simply the fact that we are vulnerable to sorrow, grief and fear, but that we tie ourselves through our egoistic clinging to a constantly self-regenerating pattern of birth, aging, sickness and death within which we undergo the more specific forms of mental affliction. He has also shown that the primary danger in the defilements is their causal role in sustaining the round of rebirths. As long as they remain unabandoned in the deep strata of the mind, they drag us through the round of becoming in which we shed a flood of tears "greater than the waters of the ocean." When these points are carefully considered, we then see that the practice of Dhamma does not aim at providing us with a comfortable reconciliation with our present personalities and our situation in the world, but at initiating a far-reaching inner transformation which will issue in our deliverance from the cycle of worldly existence in its entirety.

Admittedly, for most of us the primary motivation for entering upon the path of Dhamma has been a gnawing sense of dissatisfaction with the routine course of our unenlightened lives rather than a keen perception of the dangers in the round of rebirths. However, if we are going to follow the Dhamma through to its end and tap its full potential for conferring peace and higher wisdom, it is necessary for the motivation of our practice to mature beyond that which originally induced us to enter the path. Our underlying motivation must grow towards those essential truths disclosed to us by the Buddha and, encompassing those truths, must use them to nourish its own capacity to lead us towards the realization of the goal.

Our motivation acquires the requisite maturity by the cultivation of right view, the first factor of the Noble Eightfold Path, which as explained by the Buddha includes an understanding of the principles of kamma and rebirth as fundamental to the structure of our existence. Though contemplating the moment is the key to the development of insight meditation, it would be an erroneous extreme to hold that the practice of Dhamma consists wholly in maintaining mindfulness of the present. The Buddhist path stresses the role of wisdom as the instrument of deliverance, and wisdom must comprise not only a penetration of the moment in its vertical depths, but a comprehension of the past and future horizons within which our present existence unfolds. To take full cognizance of the principle of rebirth will give us that panoramic perspective from which we can survey our lives in their broader context and total network of relationships. This will spur us on in our own pursuit of the path and will reveal the profound significance of the goal towards which our practice points, the end of the cycle of rebirths as mind's final liberation from suffering.

* * * * * * * *

BPS Newsletter Cover Essay #7 (Summer-Fall 1987)

TAKING STOCK OF ONESELF

by Bhikkhu Bodhi

Though in principle the Buddhist path leads straight and unerringly from bondage to freedom, when we apply it to ourselves it often seems to take a tortuous route as imposed by the twists and turns of our own contorted mental topography. Unless we have exceptionally mature wholesome roots, we cannot expect to approach the goal "as the crow flies," soaring unhindered through the quick and blissful skyways of the jhanas and higher insights. Instead we must be prepared to tread the path at ground level, moving slowly, steadily and cautiously through the winding mountain roads of our own minds. We begin at the inevitable point of departure -- with the unique constellation of personal qualities, habits and potentials that we bring with us into the practice. Our ingrained defilements and obstinate delusions, as well as our hidden reserves of goodness, inner strength and wisdom -- these are at once the material out of which the practice is forged, the terrain to be passed through, and the vehicle that takes us to our destination.

Confidence in the Buddhist path is a prerequisite for persisting on this journey. Yet it often happens that though we may be fully convinced of the liberating efficacy of the Dhamma, we stumble along perplexed as to how we can apply the Dhamma fruitfully to ourselves. One major step towards reaping the benefits of Dhamma practice consists in making an honest assessment of one's own character. If we are to utilize effectively the methods the Buddha has taught for overcoming the mind's defilements, we first must take stock of those particular defilements that are prevalent in our individual makeup. It will not suffice for us to sit back and console ourselves with the thought that the path leads infallibly to the end of greed, hate and delusion. For the path to be effective in our own practice, we have to become familiar with our own persistent greeds, hates and delusions as they crop up in the round of daily life. Without this honest confrontation with ourselves, all our other pursuits of Dhamma may be to no avail and can actually lead us astray. Though we may gain extensive knowledge of the Buddhist scriptures, clarify our view and sharpen our powers of thought, invest so many hours on the meditation cushion and walkway, if we do not attend to the blemishes in our characters, these other achievements, far from extricating the defilements, may instead only go to reinforce them.

Yet, though honest self-assessment is one of the most vital steps in Dhamma practice, it is also one of the most difficult. What makes it so difficult is the radically new perspective that must be adopted to undertake an investigation of oneself and the dense barriers that must be penetrated to arrive at truthful self-understanding. In attempting to assess ourselves we are no longer observing an external entity which we can treat as an adventitious object to be evaluated in terms of our subjective purposes. We are observing instead the seat of observation itself, that most elusive center from which we gaze out upon the world, and we are doing so in a mode which casts all its motives and projects in a critical light. To enter this domain of inquiry is to run smack up against our very sense of personal identity, and thus to have to pierce the thick screens of delusion and blind emotivity which keep that sense of identity intact.

Normally, in subservience to our need to confirm to ourselves our uniqueness and irreplaceable importance, we proceed to construct mental pictures -- indeed, a picture gallery -- of what we imagine ourselves to be. The self-image that emerges from these pictures becomes simultaneously a mainstay which we cling to in order to maintain our self-esteem and a standpoint from which we orient ourselves towards others and launch our projects in the world. To secure its tenuous status the mind employs a variety of tactics "behind the back" of our conscious awareness. It throws up blinders which keep out disturbing information, it flatters us with fantasied projections, it drives us to manipulate people and situations in ways that will seem to validate our tacit assumptions about our virtues and identity.

All these projects born of the quest to substantiate our sense of identity only increase our suffering. The more we lock ourselves into the images we form of ourselves, the more we alienate ourselves from others and close off our access to liberating truth. Thence release from suffering requires that we gradually discard our delusive self-images through rigorous examination of our minds.

The venerable Sariputta, in the Discourse on No Blemishes (Majjh. 5), stresses the role of honest self-assessment as a prerequisite of spiritual growth. He points out that just as a dirty bronze bowl, deposited in a dusty place and utterly neglected, only becomes dirtier and dustier, so if we fail to recognize the blemishes of our minds we will not make any effort to eliminate them, but will continue to harbor greed, hate and delusion and will die with a corrupted mind. And just as a dirty bronze bowl which is cleaned and polished will in time become bright and radiant, so if we recognize the blemishes of our minds we will arouse our energy to purify them, and having purged ourselves of blemishes we will die with an undefiled mind. The task of self-knowledge is always a difficult one, but it is only by knowing our minds that we will be able to shape them, and it is only by shaping our minds that we can liberate them.

* * * * * * * *

BPS Newsletter Cover Essay #8 (Winter 1987)

THE BALANCED WAY

by Bhikkhu Bodhi

Like a bird in flight borne by its two wings, the practice of Dhamma is sustained by two contrasting qualities whose balanced development is essential to straight and steady progress. These two qualities are renunciation and compassion. As a doctrine of renunciation the Dhamma points out that the path to liberation is a personal course of training that centers on the gradual control and mastery of desire, the root cause of suffering. As a teaching of compassion the Dhamma bids us to avoid harming others, to act for their welfare, and to help realize the Buddha's own great resolve to offer the world the way to the Deathless.

Considered in isolation, renunciation and compassion have inverse logics that at times seem to point us in opposite directions. The one steers us to greater solitude aimed at personal purification, the other to increased involvement with others issuing in beneficent action. Yet, despite their differences, renunciation and compassion nurture each other in dynamic interplay throughout the practice of the path, from its elementary steps of moral discipline to its culmination in liberating wisdom. The synthesis of the two, their balanced fusion, is expressed most perfectly in the figure of the Fully Enlightened One, who is at once the embodiment of complete renunciation and of all-embracing compassion.

Both renunciation and compassion share a common root in the encounter with suffering. The one represents our response to suffering confronted in our own individual experience, the other our response to suffering witnessed in the lives of others. Our spontaneous reactions, however, are only the seeds of these higher qualities, not their substance. To acquire the capacity to sustain our practice of Dhamma, renunciation and compassion must be methodically cultivated, and this requires an ongoing process of reflection which transmutes our initial stirrings into full-fledged spiritual virtues.

The framework within which this reflection is to be exercised is the teaching of the Four Noble Truths, which thus provides the common doctrinal matrix for both renunciation and compassion. Renunciation develops out of our innate urge to avoid suffering and pain. But whereas this urge, prior to reflection, leads to an anxious withdrawal from particular situations perceived as personally threatening, reflection reveals the basic danger to lie in our existential situation itself -- in being bound by ignorance and craving to a world which is inherently fearsome, deceptive and unreliable. Thence the governing motive behind the act of renunciation is the longing for spiritual freedom, coupled with the recognition that self-purification is an inward task most easily accomplished when we distance ourselves from the outer circumstances that nourish our unwholesome tendencies.

Compassion develops out of our spontaneous feelings of sympathy with others. However, as a spiritual virtue compassion cannot be equated with a sentimental effusion of emotion, nor does it necessarily imply a dictum to lose oneself in altruistic activity. Though compassion surely includes emotional empathy and often does express itself in action, it comes to full maturity only when guided by wisdom and tempered by detachment. Wisdom enables us to see beyond the adventitious misfortunes with which living beings may be temporarily afflicted to the deep and hidden dimensions of suffering inseparable from conditioned existence. As a profound and comprehensive understanding of the Four Noble Truths, wisdom discloses to us the wide range, diverse gradations, and subtle roots of the suffering to which our fellow beings are enmeshed, as well as the means to lead them to irreversible release from suffering. Thence the directives of spontaneous sympathy and mature compassion are often contradictory, and only the latter are fully trustworthy as guides to beneficent action effective in the highest degree. Though often the judicious exercise of compassion will require us to act or speak up, sometimes it may well enjoin us to retreat into silence and solitude as the course most conducive to the long-range good of others as well as of ourselves.

In our attempt to follow the Dhamma, one or the other of these twin cardinal virtues will have to be given prominence, depending on our temperament and circumstances. However, for monk and householder alike, success in developing the path requires that both receive due attention and that deficiencies in either gradually be remedied. Over time we will find that the two, though tending in different directions, eventually are mutually reinforcing. Compassion impels us towards greater renunciation, as we see how our own greed and attachment make us a danger to others. And renunciation impels us towards greater compassion, since the relinquishing of craving enables us to exchange the narrow perspectives of the ego for the wider perspectives of a mind of boundless sympathy. Held together in this mutually strengthening tension, renunciation and compassion contribute to the wholesome balance of the Buddhist path and to the completeness of its final fruit.

* * * * * * * *

BPS Newsletter Cover Essay #9 (Spring 1988)

A LOOK AT THE KALAMA SUTTA

by Bhikkhu Bodhi

In this issue of the newsletter we have combined the feature essay with the "Sutta Study" column as we take a fresh look at an often quoted discourse of the Buddha, the Kalama Sutta. The discourse -- found in translation in Wheel No. 8 -- has been described as "the Buddha's Charter of Free Inquiry," and though the discourse certainly does counter the decrees of dogmatism and blind faith with a vigorous call for free investigation, it is problematic whether the sutta can support all the positions that have been ascribed to it. On the basis of a single passage, quoted out of context, the Buddha has been made out to be a pragmatic empiricist who dismisses all doctrine and faith, and whose Dhamma is simply a freethinker's kit to truth which invites each one to accept and reject whatever he likes.

But does the Kalama Sutta really justify such views? Or do we meet in these claims just another set of variations on that egregious old tendency to interpret the Dhamma according to whatever notions are congenial to oneself -- or to those to whom one is preaching? Let us take as careful a look at the Kalama Sutta as the limited space allotted to this essay will allow, remembering that in order to understand the Buddha's utterances correctly it is essential to take account of his own intentions in making them.

The passage that has been cited so often runs as follows: "Come, Kalamas. Do not go upon what has been acquired by repeated hearing, nor upon tradition, nor upon rumor, nor upon scripture, nor upon surmise, nor upon axiom, nor upon specious reasoning, nor upon bias towards a notion pondered over, nor upon another's seeming ability, nor upon the consideration 'The monk is our teacher.' When you yourselves know: 'These things are bad, blamable, censured by the wise; undertaken and observed, these things lead to harm and ill,' abandon them... When you yourselves know: 'These things are good, blameless, praised by the wise; undertaken and observed, these things lead to benefit and happiness,' enter on and abide in them."

Now this passage, like everything else spoken by the Buddha, has been stated in a specific context -- with a particular audience and situation in view -- and thus must be understood in relation to that context. The Kalamas, citizens of the town of Kesaputta, had been visited by religious teachers of divergent views, each of whom would propound his own doctrines and tear down the doctrines of his predecessors. This left the Kalamas perplexed, and thus when "the recluse Gotama," reputed to be an Awakened One, arrived in their township, they approached him in the hope that he might be able to dispel their confusion. From the subsequent development of the sutta, it is clear that the issues that perplexed them were the reality of rebirth and kammic retribution for good and evil deeds.

The Buddha begins by assuring the Kalamas that under such circumstances it is proper for them to doubt, an assurance which encourages free inquiry. He next speaks the passage quoted above, advising the Kalamas to abandon those things they know for themselves to be bad and to undertake those things they know for themselves to be good. This advice can be dangerous if given to those whose ethical sense is undeveloped, and we can thus assume that the Buddha regarded the Kalamas as people of refined moral sensitivity. In any case he did not leave them wholly to their own resources, but by questioning them led them to see that greed, hate and delusion, being conducive to harm and suffering for oneself and others, are to be abandoned, and their opposites, being beneficial to all, are to be developed.

The Buddha next explains that a "noble disciple, devoid of covetousness and ill will, undeluded" dwells pervading the world with boundless loving-kindness, compassion, appreciative joy and equanimity. Thus purified of hate and malice, he enjoys here and now four "solaces": If there is an afterlife and kammic result, then he will undergo a pleasant rebirth, while if there is none he still lives happily here and now; if evil results befall an evil-doer, then no evil will befall him, and if evil results do not befall an evil-doer, then he is purified anyway. With this the Kalamas express their appreciation of the Buddha's discourse and go for refuge to the Triple Gem.

Now does the Kalama Sutta suggest, as is often held, that a follower of the Buddhist path can dispense with all faith and doctrine, that he should make his own personal experience the criterion for judging the Buddha's utterances and for rejecting what cannot be squared with it? It is true the Buddha does not ask the Kalamas to accept anything he says out of confidence in himself, but let us note one important point: the Kalamas, at the start of the discourse, were not the Buddha's disciples. They approached him merely as a counselor who might help dispel their doubts, but they did not come to him as the Tathagata, the Truth-finder, who might show them the way to spiritual progress and to final liberation.

Thus, because the Kalamas had not yet come to accept the Buddha in terms of his unique mission, as the discloser of the liberating truth, it would not have been in place for him to expound to them the Dhamma unique to his own Dispensation: such teachings as the Four Noble Truths, the three characteristics, and the methods of contemplation based upon them. These teachings are specifically intended for those who have accepted the Buddha as their guide to deliverance, and in the suttas he expounds them only to those who "have gained faith in the Tathagata" and who possess the perspective necessary to grasp them and apply them. The Kalamas, however, at the start of the discourse are not yet fertile soil for him to sow the seeds of his liberating message. Still confused by the conflicting claims to which they have been exposed, they are not yet clear even about the groundwork of morality.

Nevertheless, after advising the Kalamas not to rely upon established tradition, abstract reasoning, and charismatic gurus, the Buddha proposes to them a teaching that is immediately verifiable and capable of laying a firm foundation for a life of moral discipline and mental purification . He shows that whether or not there be another life after death, a life of moral restraint and of love and compassion for all beings brings its own intrinsic rewards here and now, a happiness and sense of inward security far superior to the fragile pleasures that can be won by violating moral principles and indulging the mind's desires. For those who are not concerned to look further, who are not prepared to adopt any convictions about a future life and worlds beyond the present one, such a teaching will ensure their present welfare and their safe passage to a pleasant rebirth -- provided they do not fall into the wrong view of denying an afterlife and kammic causation.

However, for those whose vision is capable of widening to encompass the broader horizons of our existence. this teaching given to the Kalamas points beyond its immediate implications to the very core of the Dhamma. For the three states brought forth for examination by the Buddha -- greed, hate and delusion -- are not merely grounds of wrong conduct or moral stains upon the mind. Within his teaching's own framework they are the root defilements -- the primary causes of all bondage and suffering -- and the entire practice of the Dhamma can be viewed as the task of eradicating these evil roots by developing to perfection their antidotes -- dispassion, kindness and wisdom.

Thus the discourse to the Kalamas offers an acid test for gaining confidence in the Dhamma as a viable doctrine of deliverance. We begin with an immediately verifiable teaching whose validity can be attested by anyone with the moral integrity to follow it through to its conclusions, namely, that the defilements cause harm and suffering both personal and social, that their removal brings peace and happiness, and that the practices taught by the Buddha are effective means for achieving their removal. By putting this teaching to a personal test, with only a provisional trust in the Buddha as one's collateral, one eventually arrives at a firmer, experientially grounded confidence in the liberating and purifying power of the Dhamma. This increased confidence in the teaching brings along a deepened faith in the Buddha as teacher, and thus disposes one to accept on trust those principles he enunciates that are relevant to the quest for awakening, even when they lie beyond one's own capacity for verification. This, in fact, marks the acquisition of right view, in its preliminary role as the forerunner of the entire Noble Eightfold Path.

Partly in reaction to dogmatic religion, partly in subservience to the reigning paradigm of objective scientific knowledge, it has become fashionable to hold, by appeal to the Kalama Sutta, that the Buddha's teaching dispenses with faith and formulated doctrine and asks us to accept only what we can personally verify. This interpretation of the sutta, however, forgets that the advice the Buddha gave the Kalamas was contingent upon the understanding that they were not yet prepared to place faith in him and his doctrine; it also forgets that the sutta omits, for that very reason, all mention of right view and of the entire perspective that opens up when right view is acquired. It offers instead the most reasonable counsel on wholesome living possible when the issue of ultimate beliefs has been put into brackets.

What can be justly maintained is that those aspects of the Buddha's teaching that come within the purview of our ordinary experience can be personally confirmed within experience, and that this confirmation provides a sound basis for placing faith in those aspects of the teaching that necessarily transcend ordinary experience. Faith in the Buddha's teaching is never regarded as an end in itself nor as a sufficient guarantee of liberation, but only as the starting point for an evolving process of inner transformation that comes to fulfillment in personal insight. But in order for this insight to exercise a truly liberative function, it must unfold in the context of an accurate grasp of the essential truths concerning our situation in the world and the domain where deliverance is to be sought. These truths have been imparted to us by the Buddha out of his own profound comprehension of the human condition. To accept them in trust after careful consideration is to set foot on a journey which transforms faith into wisdom, confidence into certainty, and culminates in liberation from suffering.

* * * * * * * *

BPS Newsletter Cover Essay #10 (Summer-Fall 1988)

A STATEMENT OF CONSCIENCE

by Bhikkhu Bodhi

"All beings tremble at the rod" says the Buddha, yet today the ominous rod of terrorism has become one of the gravest problems that we face. No longer is the terrorist threat reserved for the vulnerable public figure or the outspoken adversary. With their lightning speed and global reach, our modern media of communication have given the terrorist cadres a tremendous new power to intimidate whole populations. Far too often the victims of their hits are the helpless and innocent, struck down in a symbolic show of hate.

This appalling increase in terrorist violence pierces the moral consciousness at its core, leaving behind painful and persisting wounds. For those of us who reside in Sri Lanka the problem becomes ever more acute as we witness the tide of terrorism sweep across this traditional homeland of the Dhamma. It is no longer possible for us to immerse ourselves in the comfortable routines of our familiar world. Instead we must struggle in anguish and hope to deal with this frightful menace in our midst -- to understand it and to confront it in a manner worthy of our Buddhist heritage.

It cannot be disputed that the worldwide rise of terrorism springs from complex causes of a political, economic and social character, which must be tackled by any adequate solution to the problem. At the same time, however, we have to insist that terrorism also has a deeper underlying human dimension that can only be ignored at our peril. If we probe beneath the burning issues of political ideology and ethnic grievances around which the terrorist forces rally, we will discover at its epicenter those same malignant drives that, in less virulent form, motivate so much ordinary human conduct.

As the vital dynamism from which terrorism springs we will find //greed//, a rapacious lust for power and domination. We will find //hate//, smoldering within as cold resentment or whipped up into a frenzy of destruction. And we will find //delusion//, a collective paranoia instilled by inflammatory ideologies or the blind submergence of the individual in the group. These are the hidden human roots of terrorism; fed by personal frustration and social discontent, they yield as their fruits the violence that surrounds us.

As we grapple with the problem of terrorism, asking ourselves what we can contribute to stem its rising tide, we may find an answer closer to home than we imagine. Let us first note that the spread of terrorism is not so much a macabre deviation from prevailing norms as an extreme manifestation of a wholesale decline in human fellow feeling. This lack of empathy and sensitivity to others can already be discerned in the everyday functioning of society -- in the spreading disease of corruption, apathy and selfishness infecting the social organism. Add to this a frantic search for a sense of belonging through the rediscovery of ethnic roots, and the result is a potentially very explosive mixture.

If this much is recognized, we may then see that one of the most effective counter-measures we can apply in our individual capacity against the growth of terrorism lies very much within our reach. Simply put, it consists in reaffirming to ourselves -- and teaching by precept and example -- those fundamental ethical values upon which a harmonious and peaceful society is founded. This reaffirmation of genuine moral values -- of compassion, honesty, truthfulness, tolerance and respect for others -- will sound a thunderous statement of conscience. Whether made audibly or privately to oneself, it will raise a note of protest against the moral negligence from which terrorism draws its sustenance, acclaiming our confidence in the power of the good.

While we should not cherish unrealistic expectations about our ability to reshape the world, we also should not lose sight of our responsibility to counter prevalent trends. Nor should we discount our ability to make an impact. The clear and decisive commitment to ethical values has a quiet potency that can effect important changes both outwardly and inwardly. While subtly altering the interpersonal aspects of our lives, within our hearts it will fortify those two mental factors that the Buddha called the guardians of the world -- shame and moral dread -- the former the innate repugnance towards evil, the latter the fear of its consequences.

Above all, we must reaffirm the need to rise above the limiting perspectives of the self-centered point of view in which so many today have become entrenched. Recognizing that every community, and the world as a whole, is ultimately harmed by the struggle of each faction to secure its individual ends, we must stand up for the development of a sense of humane responsibility that will transcend divisive loyalties. The lesson that we must learn and teach is that embedded in the ancient maxim taught by the Buddha: "Considering others as oneself, do not hurt them or cause them harm." To recognize others as being essentially the same as oneself and to feel their wish for happiness as one's own, this is the only effective means we can propose to build the peaceful society for which we yearn.

* * * * * * * *

BPS Newsletter Cover Essay #11 (Winter 1988)

THE VITAL LINK

by Bhikkhu Bodhi

At the same time that Buddhism has begun to gain a firm foothold in the West, its fate in its traditional Asian homelands has been moving, sadly, in the opposite direction, towards atrophy and decline. Already in several Asian Buddhist countries Buddhism has been forcibly suppressed, while even in those countries which have preserved their political integrity the Dhamma no longer occupies the same sovereign place in people's hearts that it held in an earlier era. Although devotional piety and a sense of Buddhist personal identity still remain strong, throughout the breadth of Buddhist Asia cultural and ideological forces of great power have been unleashed which daily challenge the hegemony of the Dhamma as the key to meaning and value for those who profess it as their refuge.

Among the changes taking place in current patterns of thinking, perhaps the most detrimental to the Dhamma has been the rise to prominence of a materialistic world view which focuses upon the present life as the only field for all human endeavor. This world view need not be assented to intellectually, with full awareness of its implications, for it to become a major determinant of our attitudes and conduct. Often a curious ambivalence prevails in our minds, where with one part of the mind we profess our confidence in the lofty principles of the Dhamma, while with the other we think and act as if the present life were the sole occasion for human happiness and the achievement of worldly success were the true mark of the accomplished individual.

The rapid spread of the materialistic world view has in turn brought about a far-ranging secularization of values that invades every nook and cranny of our lives. This transformation of values gives precedence to goals and attitudes diametrically opposed to those advocated by the Dhamma, and under its impact the scales have tipped far away even from a reasonable balance between material and spiritual goods. Now we see acquisitiveness replacing contentment as the reigning ideal, competition taking the place of cooperation, fast efficiency the place of compassionate concern, and selfish indulgence the place of abstinence and self-control.

The attempt to live simultaneously by two conflicting sets of principles -- those being ushered in by secular materialism and those grounded in the Dhamma -- generates a tension that contains within it a seed of very destructive potential. Often the tension is only dimly felt by those in the older generation, who accept the new outlook and values without clearly perceiving the challenge they pose to traditional Buddhist ideals. It is when the contradiction is pushed down to the next generation, to the Buddhist youth of today, that the inherent incompatibility of the two perspectives comes into the open as a clearcut choice between two alternative philosophies of life -- one proposing a hierarchy of values which culminates in the spiritual and sanctions restraint and renunciation, the other holding up the indulgence and gratification of personal desire as the highest conceivable goal. Since the latter appeals to strong and deep-seated human drives, it is hardly puzzling that so many young people today have turned away from the guidance of the Dhamma to pursue the new paths to instant pleasure opened up by the consumer society or, in their frustration at missed opportunities, to take to the path of violence.

Since it is the younger generation that forms the vital link in the continuity of Buddhism, connecting its past with its future, it is of paramount importance that the Buddhist youth of today should retain their fidelity to the Dhamma. The Dhamma should be for them not merely a symbol of cultural and ethnic identity, not merely a focus point of sentimental piety, but above all a path to be taken to heart, personally applied, and adhered to in those critical choices between present expediency and long-range spiritual gain. The problem, however, is precisely how to inspire the young to look to the Dhamma as their guide and infallible refuge.

It must be stressed that our present dilemma goes far deeper than a breakdown of moral standards, and thus that it cannot be easily rectified by pious preaching and moral exhortation. If conduct deviating from the Dhamma has become widespread among today's youth, this is because the Buddhist vision has ceased to be meaningful to them, and it has ceased to be meaningful not because it has lost its relevance but because it is not being presented in ways which highlight its timeless and ever-immediate relevance.

The most urgent task facing those concerned with the preservation of Buddhism must be the attempt to communicate to the young the central vision at the heart of the Dhamma, the vision from which all the specific doctrines and practices of Buddhism issue forth. This does not require a mastery of the technical details of the Dhamma, but it does require that we ourselves understand the Dhamma's essence and are actively striving to make that understanding the foundation of our lives. Both by precept and example we must show that true freedom is to be found not in uncontrolled license, but in the control and mastery of desire; that true happiness lies not in a proliferation of goods, but in peace and contentment; that our relations with others are most rewarding when they are governed not by conflict and competition, but by kindness and compassion; and that true security is to be achieved not by the acquisition of wealth and power, but by the conquest of self with all its ambitions and conceits.

* * * * * * * *

BPS Newsletter Cover Essay #12 (Spring 1989)

A REMEDY FOR DESPAIR

by Bhikkhu Bodhi

Most of us live in the cramped cold cages of our private projects, frantically struggling to stake out our own little comfortable place in the sun. Driven in circles by anxious yearnings and beckoning desires, we rarely ever glance aside to see how our neighbor is faring, and when we do it is usually only to assure ourselves that he is not trying to encroach upon our own domain or to find some means by which we might extend our dominion over his.

Occasionally, however, it somehow happens that we manage to detach ourselves from our obsessive pursuits long enough to arrive at a wider clearing. Here our focus of concern undergoes a remarkable shift. Lifted above our habitual fixation on myopic goals, we are brought to realize that we share our journey from birth to death with countless other beings who, like ourselves, are each intent on a quest for the good.

This realization, which often topples our egocentric notions of the good, broadens and deepens our capacity for empathy. By breaking down the walls of self-concern it allows us to experience, with a particularly inward intimacy, the desire all beings cherish to be free from harm and to find an inviolable happiness and security. Nevertheless, to the extent that this flowering of empathy is not a mere emotional effusion but is accompanied by a facility for accurate observation, it can easily turn into a chute plunging us down from our new-found freedom into a chasm of anguish and despair.

For when, with eyes unhindered by emotively tinged blinkers, we turn to contemplate the wide expanse of the world, we find ourselves gazing into a mass of suffering that is vertiginous in its volume and ghastly in its intensity. The guarantor of our complacency is the dumb thoughtless glee with which we acquiesce in our daily ration of sensual excitation and ego-enhancing kudos. Let us raise our heads a little higher and cast our eyes about, and we behold a world steeped in pain where the ills inherent in the normal life-cycle are compounded still more by the harshness of nature, the grim irony of accident, and the cruelty of human beings.

As we grope about for a handle to prevent ourselves from plummeting down into the pits of despondency, we may find the support we need in a theme taught for frequent recollection by the Buddha: "Beings are the owners of their kamma, the heirs of their kamma; they are molded, formed and upheld by their kamma, and they inherit the results of their own good and bad deeds." Often enough this reflection has been proposed as a means to help us adjust to the vicissitudes in our personal fortunes: to accept gain and loss, success and failure, pleasure and pain, with a mind that remains unperturbed. This same theme. however, can also serve a wider purpose, offering us succor when we contemplate the immeasurably greater suffering in which the multitudes of our fellow beings are embroiled.

Confronted with a world that is ridden with conflict, violence, exploitation and destruction, we feel compelled to find some way to make sense out of their evil consequences, to be able to see in calamity and devastation something more than regrettable but senseless quirks of fate. The Buddha's teaching on kamma and its fruit gives us the key to decipher the otherwise unintelligible stream of events. It instructs us to recognize in the diverse fortunes of living beings, not caprice or accident, but the operation of a principle of moral equilibrium which ensures that ultimately a perfect balance obtains between the happiness and suffering beings undergo and the ethical quality of their intentional actions

Contemplation on the operation of kamma is not a cold and calculated expedient for justifying a stoical resignation to the status quo. The pathways of kamma are labyrinthine in their complexity, and acceptance of this causal order does not preclude a battle against human avarice, brutality and stupidity or stifle beneficent action intended to prevent unwholesome deeds from finding the opportunity to ripen. Deep reflection on kammic retribution does, however, brace us against the shocks of calamity and disappointment by opening up to our vision the stubborn unwieldiness of a world ruled by greed, hate and delusion, and the deep hidden lawfulness connecting its turbulent undercurrents with the back-and-forth swing of surface events. While on the one hand this contemplation awakens a sense of urgency, a drive to escape the repetitive round of deed and result, on the other it issues in equanimity, an unruffled inner poise founded upon a realistic grasp of our existential plight

Genuine equanimity, which is far from callous indifference, sustains us in our journey through the rapids of samsara. Bestowing upon us courage and endurance, it enables us to meet the fluctuations of fortune without being shaken by them, and to look into the face of the world's sufferings without being shattered by them.

* * * * * * * *

BPS Newsletter Cover Essay #13 (Summer-Fall 1989)

THE PROBLEM OF CONFLICT

by Bhikkhu Bodhi

It is one of the bitterest ironies of human life that although virtually all human beings cherish a desire to live in peace, we continually find ourselves embroiled in conflict, pitted against others in relationships marred by tension, distrust or open hostility. This irony is particularly poignant because it is immediately evident to us that cordial, harmonious relations with others are a necessary condition for our own genuine happiness. Not only do such relations allow us to pursue undisturbed the goals we consider essential to our personal fulfillment, but they bring us the deeper joy of meaningful communion with our fellow human beings. Contentious living, in contrast, is always intrinsically painful, involving a hardening of our subjective armor, a tightening of the knots of anger and hate. Indeed, whatever the outcome of conflict may be -- whether victory or defeat -- the result itself is ultimately detrimental for both victor and victim alike.

Nevertheless, although harmonious living promises such rich blessings while discordant relations entail so much harm and misery, for the most part our lives -- and the lives of those around us -- are entangled in a raveled net of quarrels and disputes. Conflict may simmer within as silent suspicion and resentment or it may explode into violent rage and devastation. It may implicate us at the level of personal relationships, or as members of an ethnic group, a political party, a social class or a nation. But in one or another of its many manifestations, the presence of conflict in our lives seems inescapable. Peace and harmony hover in the distance as beautiful dreams for a summer's night or noble ideals to which we pledge formal allegiance. But when reality knocks and dreams are dispelled, we find ourselves drawn, usually against our better judgment, into an arena where the pleasures that we seek exact as their price the hard cash of struggle and contention.

The teachings of the Buddha, while framed around the goal of individual deliverance from suffering, are also expounded for the purpose of instructing us in how we can live in harmony with others. Such harmony is desirable not only as a source of satisfaction in itself, but also because it is a prerequisite for treading the path to the higher freedom. The final peace of enlightenment can arise only in a mind that is at peace with others, and the mind can only be at peace with others when we are actively committed to a course of training that enables us to extricate the roots of conflict that lie buried deep within our hearts.

Once, in ancient India, Sakka the ruler of the gods came to the Buddha and asked: "By what bonds are people bound whereby, though they wish to live in peace, without hate and hostility, they yet live in conflict, with hate and hostility." The Master replied: "It is the bonds of envy and avarice that so bind people that, though they wish to live in peace, they live in conflict, with hate and hostility." If we trace external conflicts back to their source, we will find that they originate not in wealth, position or possessions, but in the mind itself. They spring up because we envy others for the qualities they possess which we desire for ourselves, and because we are driven by an unquenchable avarice to extend the boundaries of what we can label "mine."

Envy and avarice in turn are grounded in two more fundamental psychological conditions. Envy arises because we identify things as "I," because we perpetually seek to establish a personal identity for ourselves internally and to project that identity outward for others to recognize and accept. Avarice arises because we appropriate: we attempt to carve out a territory for ourselves and to furnish that territory with possessions that will titillate our greed and sense of self-importance.

Conflict being thus rooted in envy and avarice, it follows that the path to non-conflict must be a course of relinquishment, of removing the constrictive thoughts and desires that pivot around the notions of "I" and "mine," the drives to identify and to possess. This course reaches consummation with the full maturity of wisdom, with insight into the empty, egoless nature of all phenomena; for it is this insight which exposes the hollowness of the notions of "I" and "mine" that underlie envy and avarice. However, although the final liberation from clinging may lie far away, the path leading to it is a gradual one, growing out of simpler, more basic steps that lie very close to our feet.

Two such necessary steps are changes in attitude with the power to transmute envy and avarice. One is altruistic joy (//mudita//), the ability to view the success of others with the same gladness we experience at our own success. The other is generosity (//caga//), the readiness to give and to relinquish. The former is the specific antidote for envy, the latter the antidote for avarice. What is common to both is a lifting of the sense of identity from its narrow fixation on the self, and a broadening of it to encompass others who share our desire to be happy and free from suffering.

As private individuals we cannot hope to resolve by our will the larger patterns of conflict that engulf the societies and nations to which we belong. We live in a world that thrives on conflict, and in which the forces that nurture conflict are pervasive; obstinate and terribly powerful. But as followers of the Enlightened One what we can do and must do is to testify by our conduct to the supremacy of peace: to avoid words and actions that engender animosity, to heal divisions, to demonstrate the value of harmony and concord. The model we must emulate is that provided by the Master in his description of the true disciple: "He is one who unites the divided, who promotes friendships, enjoys concord, rejoices in concord, delights in concord, and who speaks words that promote concord."

* * * * * * * *

BPS Newsletter Cover Essay #14 (Winter 1989)

THE QUEST FOR MEANING

by Bhikkhu Bodhi

However much the modern world may pride itself on its triumphs over the follies and foibles of the past, it appears that the progress we credit ourselves with has been bought at a price so steep as to throw into question the worth of our achievements. This price has been nothing less than the shared conviction that our lives are endowed with ultimate meaning. Though in earlier ages men and women lived in a space populated largely by figments of the collective imagination, they could still claim a precious asset that we sorely lack: a firm and buoyant belief that their everyday lives were encompassed by a penumbra of enduring significance stemming from their relation to a transcendent goal.

Present-day attitudes, however, molded by scientific reductionism and technocratic audacity, have combined forces to sweep away from our minds even the faint suspicion that our lives may possess any deeper meaning than material prosperity and technological innovation. For an increasing number of people today the consequence of this militancy has been a pervasive sense of meaninglessness. Cut loose from our moorings in a living spiritual tradition, we find ourselves adrift on a sea of confusion where all values seem arbitrary and relative. We float aimlessly along the waves of caprice, without any supreme purpose to serve as the polestar for our ideals, as the wellspring for inspired thought and action.

But just as little as nature can tolerate a vacuum, so humankind can little tolerate a complete loss of meaning. Thence, to escape the plunge into the abyss of meaninglessness, we grasp after flotsam, attempting to immerse ourselves in distractions. We pursue pleasure and power, seek to augment our wealth and status, surround ourselves with contraptions, invest our hopes in personal relationships that only conceal our own inner poverty. At the same time, however, that our absorption in distractions helps us to cope with the psychological void, it also stifles in us a deeper and still more insistent need -- the longing for a peace and freedom that does not depend upon external contingencies.

One of the great blessings of the Buddha's teaching is the remedy it can offer for the problem of meaninglessness so widespread in human life today. The Dhamma can serve as a source of meaning primarily because it provides us with the two requisites of a meaningful life: an ultimate goal for which to live, and a clearcut but flexible set of instructions by which we can advance towards that goal from whatever station in life we start from.

In the Buddha's teaching the quest for ultimate meaning does not begin, as in the theistic religions, with propositions about a supernatural scheme of salvation to be assented to in faith. It begins, rather, by focusing upon an experiential problem right at the crux of human existence. The problem, of course, is the problem of suffering, the boundaries of which are shown to extend beyond our immediate subjection to pain, misery and sorrow, and to encompass all that is conditioned precisely because of its impermanence, its vulnerability, its lack of abiding substance.

The goal of the teaching, the unconditioned element which is Nibbana, then comes to have a decisive bearing upon our vital concerns because it is apprehended as the cessation of suffering. Though in its own nature it defies all the limiting categories of conceptual thought, as the cessation of suffering Nibbana provides the final answer to our innermost yearnings for an imperishable peace, for complete freedom from sorrow, anxiety and distress. The way that the quest for this goal intersects with the course of our everyday life is made plain by the Buddha's analysis of the cause of suffering. The cause of suffering, the Buddha holds, lies within ourself, in our selfish craving conjoined with blinding ignorance, in the three evil roots that taint our normal engagement with the world: greed, hate and delusion. Thence the freedom from suffering that we seek lies in the eradication of these three roots.

To orient our life towards the goal of deliverance from suffering requires that we tread the path that leads to and merges with the goal. This path is the Noble Eightfold Path, which brings an end to suffering and bondage by enabling us to extricate the causes of suffering embedded in our hearts. We begin the path exactly where we are, in the midst of error and defilement, and by clarifying our views, transforming our attitudes, and purifying our minds, we advance by stages towards the direct realization of the ultimate good.

If the goal towards which the path points lies beyond the pale of conditioned existence, to walk the eightfold path is to discover within the confines of conditioned existence dimensions of meaning previously unknown. This richness of meaning stems from a twofold source. One is the recognition that the following of the path brings a diminishment of suffering for ourselves as well as others, and at the same time an enhancement of joy, mental equipoise and peace. The other source of meaning is the conviction that the values we are pursuing are not merely subjective and arbitrary, but are grounded in an absolutely objective order, in the very nature of things.

As we embark on the way to the end of suffering, the final goal no longer appears merely as a distant shore but becomes refracted in our experience as the challenge of overcoming the unwholesome roots, and of assisting our fellow beings to do the same. This challenge, the task of actualizing our own good and the good of others, becomes at the same time life's inner core of meaning: to transmute greed into generosity and relinquishment, to replace hate with love and compassion, and to dispel delusion with the light of liberative wisdom.

* * * * * * * *

BPS Newsletter Cover Essay #15 (Spring 1990)

THE SEARCH FOR SECURITY

by Bhikkhu Bodhi

It may be a truism of psychology that the desire for happiness is the most fundamental human drive, but it is important to note that this desire generally operates within the bounds set by another drive just as deep and pervasive. This other drive is the need for security. However insistent the raw itch for pleasure and gain may be, it is usually held in check by a cautious concern for our personal safety. We only feel at ease when we are sealed off from manifest danger, comfortably at home with ourselves and with our world, snugly tucked into familiar territory where everything seems friendly and dependable.

When we come across the Buddha's teaching and begin to take that teaching seriously, we often find that it provokes in us disturbing waves of disquietude. This feeling arises from a clash -- a sensed incompatibility -- between the picture of the world that we hold to as the essential basis for our normal sense of security and the new perspectives on existence opened up to us by the Dhamma. We may try to shun the vistas that trouble us, we may pick and choose from the Dhamma what we like; but to the extent that we are prepared to take the teaching in earnest -- on its own terms rather than on ours -- we may discover that the insights which the Buddha wants to impart to us can be quite unsettling in their impact.

The first noble truth was never intended to be a comfortable truth;

indeed, it is the discomforting quality of this truth that makes it noble. It tells us frankly that the routinely placid and predictable surface of our everyday lives is extremely fragile -- a shared delusion with which we lull ourselves and each other into a false sense of security. Just beneath the surface, hidden from view, turbulent currents are stirring which at any time can break the surface calm. From the moment we are born we are sliding towards old age and death, susceptible to various diseases and accidents that may hasten our arrival at the appointed end. Driven by our desires we wander from life to life across the sand dunes of samsara, elated by our rises, shaken by our falls. The very stuff of our lives consists of nothing more than a conglomeration of five "heaps" of psychophysical processes, without any permanence or substance. Perhaps the Buddha's most poignant statement on the human condition is his image of a man being swept along by a mountain torrent: he grasps for safety at the grasses along the banks only to find that they break off just as he takes hold of them.

However, though the Buddha begins by drawing our attention to the uncertainty that encompasses us even in the midst of comfort and enjoyment, he by no means ends there. The discourse on suffering is expounded, not to lead us to despair, but to awaken us from our complacent slumbers and to set us moving in the direction where our ultimate welfare can be found. Far from undercutting our need to feel secure, the Buddha's teaching unfolds from that very same need, turning it into a sustained inquiry into what genuine security actually means.

Ordinarily, our benighted attempts to achieve security are governed by a myopic but imperious self-interest oriented around the standpoint of self. We assume that we possess a solid core of individual being, an inherently existent ego, and thus our varied plans and projects take shape as so many maneuvers to ward off threats to the self and promote its dominance in the overall scheme of things. The Buddha turns this whole point of view on its head by pointing out that anxiety is the dark twin of ego. He declares that all attempts to secure the interests of the ego necessarily arise out of clinging, and that the very act of clinging paves the way for our downfall when the object to which we hold perishes, as it must by its very nature.

The Buddha maintains that the way to true security lies precisely in the abolition of clinging. When all clinging has been uprooted, when all notions of "I" and "mine" have lost their obsessive sting, we will have no more fear, no more worry, no more anxious concern. Touched by the fluctuations of worldly events the mind remains stable, "sorrowless, stainless and secure" (Sn. 268).

While ultimate security lies only in the unconditioned, in Nibbana "the supreme security from bondage" (//anuttara yogakkhema//), as we wend our way through the rough terrain of our mundane lives we have available a provisional source of security that will help us deal effectively with the dangers and difficulties that beset us. This provisional security lies in firmly committing ourselves to the Dhamma as our source of solace and guidance, as our incomparable refuge. The word "dhamma" itself means that which upholds and supports. The Buddha's teaching is called the Dhamma because it upholds those who live by it: it wards off the dangers to which we would be exposed if we were to flout it, it sustains us in our endeavor for the final good if we revere it and make it the foundation of our lives.

The Dhamma provides protection, not by any mystical blessing or downpour of saving grace, but by indicating the sure and certain guidelines that enable us to protect ourselves. Beneath the apparent randomness of visible events there runs an invisible but indomitable law which ensures that all goodness finds its due recompense. To act counter to this law is to invite disaster. To act in harmony with it is to tap its reserves of energy, to yoke them to one's spiritual growth, and to make oneself a channel of help for others who likewise roam in search of a refuge.

The essential counsel that the Buddha gives us to secure our self-protection is to shun all evil, to practice the good, and to purify our minds. By the pursuit of non-violence, honesty, righteousness and truth we weave around ourselves an impenetrable net of virtue that ensures our well being even in the midst of violence and commotion. By cultivating the good we sow the seeds of wholesome qualities that will come to maturity as we continue on our path throughout the samsaric journey. And by purifying our minds of greed, hatred and delusion by mindfulness and diligent effort we will find for ourselves an island that no flood can overwhelm -- the island of the Deathless.

* * * * * * * *

BPS Newsletter Cover Essay #16 (Summer-Fall 1990)

SELF-TRANSFORMATION

by Bhikkhu Bodhi

It is perhaps symptomatic of the "fallen" nature of the ordinary human condition that few of us pass the full extent of our lives comfortably reconciled to our natural selves. Even in the midst of prosperity and success, grinding notes of discontent trouble our days and disturbing dreams come to haunt our sleep. As long as our eyes remain coated with dust we incline to locate the cause of our discontent outside ourselves -- in spouse, neighbor or job, in implacable fate or fluky chance. But when the dust drops off and our eyes open, we soon find that the real cause lies within.

When we discover how deeply the cause of our unhappiness is lodged in the mind, the realization dawns that cosmetic changes will not be anywhere near enough, that a fundamental internal transformation is required. This desire for a transformed personality, for the emergence of a new man from the ashes of the old, is one of the perennial lures of the human heart. From ancient times it has been a potent wellspring of the spiritual quest, and even in the secular, life-affirming culture of our own cosmopolitan age this longing has not totally disappeared.

While such concepts as redemption, salvation and deliverance may no longer characterize the transformation that is sought, the urge for a radical reshaping of the personality persists as strong as ever, appearing in guises that are compatible with the secular worldview.

Where previously this urge sought fulfillment in the temple, ashram and monastery, it now resorts to new venues: the office of the psychoanalyst, the weekend workshop, the panoply of newly spawned therapies and cults. However, despite the change of scene and conceptual framework, the basic pattern remains the same. Disgruntled with the ruts of our ingrained habits, we long to exchange all that is dense and constrictive in our personalities for a new, lighter, freer mode of being.

Self-transformation is also a fundamental goal of the Buddha's teaching, an essential part of his program for liberation from suffering. The Dhamma was never intended for those who are already perfect saints. It is addressed to fallible human beings beset with all the shortcomings typical of unpolished human nature: conduct that is fickle and impulsive, minds that are tainted by greed, anger and selfishness, views that are distorted and habits that lead to harm for oneself and others. The purpose of the teaching is to transform such people -- ourselves -- into "accomplished ones": into those whose every action is pure, whose minds are calm and composed, whose wisdom has fathomed the deepest truths and whose conduct is always marked by a compassionate concern for others and for the welfare of the world.

Between these two poles of the teaching -- the flawed and knotted personality that we bring with us as raw material into the training, and the fully liberated personality that emerges in the end -- there lies a gradual process of self-transformation governed by highly specific guidelines. This transformation is effected by the twin aspects of the path: abandoning (//pahana//), the removal from the mind of all that is harmful and unwholesome, and development (//bhavana//), the cultivation of qualities that are wholesome, pure and purifying.

What distinguishes the Buddha's program for self-transformation from the multitude of other systems proposing a similar end is the contribution made by another principle with which it is invariably conjoined. This is the principle of self-transcendence, the endeavor to relinquish all attempts to establish a sense of solid personal identity. In the Buddhist training the aim of transforming the personality must be complemented by a parallel effort to overcome all identification with the elements that constitute our phenomenal being. The teaching of //anatta// or not-self is not so much a philosophical thesis calling for intellectual assent as a prescription for self-transcendence. It maintains that our ongoing attempt to establish a sense of identity by taking our personalities to be "I" and "mine" is in actuality a project born out of clinging, a project that at the same time lies at the root of our suffering. If, therefore, we seek to be free from suffering, we cannot stop with the transformation of the personality into some sublime and elevated mode as the final goal. What is needed, rather, is a transformation that brings about the removal of clinging, and with it, the removal of all tendencies to self-affirmation.

It is important to stress this transcendent aspect of the Dhamma because, in our own time when "immanent" secular values are ascendent, the temptation is great to let this aspect drop out of sight. If we assume that the worth of a practice consists solely in its ability to yield concrete this-worldly results, we may incline to view the Dhamma simply as a means of refining and healing the divided personality, leading in the end to a renewed affirmation of our mundane selves and our situation in the world. Such an approach, however, would ignore the Buddha's insistence that all the elements of our personal existence are impermanent, unsatisfactory and not self, and his counsel that we should learn to distance ourselves from such things and ultimately to discard them.

In the proper practice of the Dhamma both principles, that of self-transformation and that of self-transcendence, are equally crucial. The principle of self-transformation alone is blind, leading at best to an ennobled personality but not to a liberated one. The principle of self-transcendence alone is barren, leading to a cold ascetic withdrawal devoid of the potential for enlightenment. It is only when these two complementary principles work in harmony, blended and balanced in the course of training, that they can bridge the gap between the actual and ideal and bring to a fruitful conclusion the quest for the end of suffering.

Of the two principles, that of self-transcendence claims primacy both at the beginning of the path and at the end. For it is this principle that gives direction to the process of self-transformation, revealing the goal towards which a transformation of the personality should lead and the nature of the changes required to bring the goal within our reach. However, the Buddhist path is not a perpendicular ascent to be scaled with picks, ropes and studded boots, but a step-by-step training which unfolds in a natural progression. Thus the abrupt challenge of self-transcendence -- the relinquishing of all points of attachment -- is met and mastered by the gradual process of self-transformation. By moral discipline, mental purification and the development of insight, we advance by stages from our original condition of bondage to the domain of untrammeled freedom.

* * * * * * * *

BPS Newsletter Cover Essay #17 (Winter 1990-91)

A NOTE ON OPENNESS

by Bhikkhu Bodhi

The sudden entry into general circulation of a familiar term with a new ambience of meaning often has a significance that goes beyond mere philological curiosity. Since language is molded by thought at a level prior to and more basic than that of deliberate design, such changes in linguistic currency may well signal deeper changes taking place in the mental make-up of those who use the term. They can be seen as barometric indicators of transformations in the sphere of consciousness -- in our patterns of thinking, in our attitudes, in our goals.

If there is one term that might be chosen to characterize the intellectual and moral climate of the present day, it would be the word "openness." This seemingly colorless word has come to mark the fulfillment of the centuries-long struggle against the oppressive weight of established tradition in so many diverse departments of human concern. Its three syllables are a hymn of victory for the triumph of the empirical method over formulated dogma as the key to knowledge, for the primacy of individual conscience over prescribed morality in the domain of ethics, and in our private lives, for the replacement of the reign of the superego by a new-found liberty to explore the subterranean channels of impulse and desire in whatever direction they might lead.

Perhaps most importantly, the notion of openness also points to a particular attitude towards experience, an attitude which has quietly permeated our culture so thoroughly that it now seems almost an innate human disposition. Briefly, this attitude might be described as a soft and affable affirmation of experience in its totality, coupled with a pliant receptivity to its full range of forms. This attitude, it must be stressed, only rarely solidifies into a consciously held conviction; more typically it lingers in the background of the mind as an unverbalized intuition, a fluid and shifting orientation towards the world. Historically rooted in the widespread decline of belief structures centered upon a transcendent goal of human life and an objectively grounded scale of values, the philosophy of openness takes all truth to be relative, all values personal and subjective. Thus it holds that our task in life is to open ourselves as fully as we can to the unfolding miracle of existence and to celebrate its infinite possibilities.

The spread of this attitude through the general culture has left its stamp on current interpretations of Buddhism as well. We thus find that for many of today's Buddhist teachers the Dhamma is essentially a method for arriving at the consummation of all that the notion of openness implies. From this perspective Buddhism is not a doctrine with its own distinct body of tenets, not a discipline guiding us to a supramundane goal, but a tool for opening to the here and now. The most basic flaw at the bottom of human suffering, it is held, is our tendency to close ourselves off from experience, to lock ourselves with our concepts and judgments into a limited compartment of reality. By developing through meditation a non-discriminating "choiceless" awareness which allows whatever arises to hold its ground, we are enabled to break through our constraints and merge with the stream of events, to dance with the "ten thousand things" -- accepting them all yet without clinging to them.

While the advocates of openness are usually adroit in assimilating their principles to the classical Dhamma, a careful examination would reveal gaping differences between the two. Here I want to focus only on some crucial differences in their respective orientations towards experience. It should be noted at once that whereas the school of openness bids us to drop our discriminations, judgments and restraints in order to immerse ourselves in the dynamic flow of immediate experience, the Buddha prescribes an attitude towards experience that arises from carefully wrought judgments, employs precise discriminations, and issues in detachment and restraint. This attitude, the classical Buddhist counterfoil to the modern program of openness, might be summed up by one word found everywhere in the ancient texts. That word is heedfulness (//appamada//).

Heedfulness denotes an attitude of critical scrutiny directed towards one's own mind both in its internal movement and in its reactions to external affairs. The term suggests diligent effort and acute attentiveness, and it further sounds a note of moral caution and care. It thus implies, as the Buddha intended it to imply, that we are constantly exposed to danger -- a danger born from within that becomes ever more imminent to the degree that we allow heedfulness to slip and we slide into its opposite: into heedlessness or negligence (//pamada//).

Such caution is necessary because deeds have consequences that extend beyond themselves. Whereas the school of openness tends to subordinate concern with the consequential aspect of action to a stress on abiding in the present moment, the classical Dhamma taught by the Buddha asks us to recognize that all willed actions, even our fleeting thoughts and impulses, are seeds with roots buried deep in the mind's beginningless past and with the potency to generate results in the distant horizons of the future. These long-range consequences of action are of enormous importance to us; for however far they might lie from our vision now, when the time comes for our deeds to ripen, it is we ourselves who must experience their fruits. As these fruits are invariably determined by the moral quality of our actions, diligent self-examination -- that is, heedfulness -- is urgently needed so that we may restrain ourselves from those deeds that seem pleasant but bear painful results, and so that we may apply ourselves to those deeds that may be difficult but yield long-term benefits.

The mode of thinking based on openness rejects duality as a product of discrimination and deluded concepts. It tacitly presupposes that existence as such is ultimately benign; that beyond our deluded concepts, the rich and vivid diversity of forms has a single taste, a taste that is sweet. In contrast, the attitude of heedfulness is grounded upon the view that existence is textured through and through by dualities that are profound and inescapably real. The world bears testimony to this vision in the contrast between the charming, delightful surfaces of things and their underlying hollowness and inadequacy; our minds bear testimony in the ongoing contest between the wholesome mental factors and the unwholesome ones, between the upward urge for purification and the downward pull of the defilements. That this duality is not trivial is seen by the consequences: the one leads to Nibbana, the state of deliverance, the Deathless, while the other leads back into the round of repeated birth, samsara, which is also the realm of Mara, the Lord of Death.

To practice heedfulness is to take full account of these dualities with their profound implications. The heedful person does not aim at a choiceless awareness open to existence in its totality, for to open oneself thus is to risk making oneself vulnerable to just those elements in oneself that keep one bound to the realm of Mara. The awareness developed through heedfulness is built upon a choice -- a well-considered choice to abandon those qualities one understands to be detrimental and to develop in their place those qualities one understands to be beneficial, the states that lead to purity and peace.

Both in our outer involvements in the world and in the mind's internal procession of thought, imagination and emotion, there continually spreads before us a forked road. One branch of this fork beckons with the promise of pleasure and satisfaction but in the end leads to pain and bondage; the other, steep and difficult to climb, leads upward to enlightenment and liberation. To discard discrimination and judgment for an easy-going openness to the world is to blur the important distinction between these two quite different paths. To be heedful is to be aware of the dichotomy, and to strive to avoid the one and pursue the other. As the Buddha reminds us, heedfulness is the path to the Deathless, heedlessness is the path of Death.

* * * * * * * *

BPS Newsletter Cover Essay #18 (Spring 1991)

LAYING DOWN THE ROD

by Bhikkhu Bodhi

The textbooks of history come into our hands bound in decorative covers and set in crisp clear types. To the discerning reader, however, their glossy pages are stained with blood and wet with streams of tears. The story of man's sojourn on this planet has generally not been a very pretty one. For sure, deeds of virtue and flashes of the sublime light up the tale like meteorites shooting across the night time sky. But the pageant of events that the records spell out for us unfolds according to a repeated pattern in which the dominant motifs are greed and ambition, deceit and distrust, aggression, destruction and revenge.

Each age, when the dust of its own battles clears, tends to see itself as standing at the threshold of a new era in which peace and harmony will at last prevail. This appears to be particularly true of our own time, with its high ideals and great expectations aroused by dramatic shifts in international relations. It would be ingenuous, however, to think that a package solution to the tensions inherent in human coexistence can be devised as easily as a solution to a problem in data management. To cherish the dream that we have arrived at the brink of a new world order in which all conflict, in obedience to our good intentions, will be relegated to the past is to lose sight of the grim obstinacy of those deep dark drives that stir in the human heart: the defilements of greed, hatred and delusion. It is these drives that have brought us into this world of strife and suffering, and it is these same drives that keep the wheel of history turning, erupting periodically in orgies of senseless violence.

Like any other stream, the stream of mundane existence inevitably flows in the direction of least resistance: downwards. The task the Buddha sets before us is not the impossible one of reversing the direction of the flow, but the feasible one of crossing the stream, of arriving safely at the far shore where we will be free from the dangers that beset us as we are swept along by the stream. To cross the stream requires a struggle, not against the current itself, but against the forces that carry us down the current, a struggle against the defilements lodged in the depths of our own minds.

Though violence, either overt or subtle, may hold sway over the world in which we are afloat, the Buddha's path to freedom requires of us that we make a total break with prevailing norms. Thus one of the essential steps in our endeavor to reach the abode of safety is to "lay down the rod," to put away violence, aggression and harmfulness towards all living beings. In the Buddha's teaching the "laying down of the rod" is not merely an ethical principle, a prescription for right action. It is a comprehensive strategy of self-training that spans all stages of the Buddhist path, enabling us to subdue our inclinations towards ill will, animosity and cruelty.

The key to developing a mind of harmlessness is found in the ancient maxim stated in the Dhammapada: "Putting oneself in the place of another, one should not slay or incite others to slay." The reason we should avoid harming others is because all living beings, in their innermost nature, share the same essential concern for their own well being and happiness When we look into our own minds, we can immediately see with intuitive certainty that the fundamental desire at the root of our being is the desire to be well and happy, to be free from all harm, danger and distress. We see at once that we wish to live, not to die; that we wish to be happy, not to suffer; that we wish to pursue our goals freely, without hindrance and obstruction by others.

When we see that this wish for well being and happiness is the most basic desire at the root of our own being, by a simple imaginative projection we can then recognize, again with intuitive certainty, that the same fundamental desire animates the minds of all other living beings as well. Just as we wish to be well, so every other being wishes to be well; just as we wish to be happy, so every other being wishes to be happy; just as we wish to pursue our goals freely, so all other beings wish to pursue their goals freely, without hindrance and obstruction.

This fundamental identity of aim that we share with all other beings has implications for each stage of the threefold Buddhist training in morality, mental purification and wisdom. Since all other beings, like ourselves, are intent on their welfare and happiness, by putting ourselves in their place we can recognize the need to regulate our conduct by principles of restraint that hold in check all harmful bodily and verbal deeds. Because afflictive deeds originate from the mind, from thoughts of animosity and cruelty, it becomes necessary for us to purify our minds of these taints through the practice of concentration, developing as their specific antidotes the "divine abodes" of lovingkindness and compassion. And because all defiled thoughts tending towards harm for others arise from roots lodged deep in the recesses of the mind, we need to undertake the development of wisdom, which alone can extricate the hidden roots of evil.

Since the state of the world is a manifestation and reflection of the minds of its inhabitants, the achievement of a permanent universal peace would require nothing short of a radical and widespread transformation in the minds of these inhabitants -- a beautiful but unrealistic fantasy. What lies within the scope of real possibility is the attainment of a lasting individual peace within ourselves, a peace that comes with the fulfillment of the Buddha's threefold training. This internal peace, however, will not remain locked up in our hearts. Overflowing its source, it will radiate outwards, exercising a gentle and uplifting influence upon the lives of those who come within its range. As the old Indian adage says, one can never make the earth safe for one's feet by sweeping away all thorns and gravel, but if one wears a pair of shoes one's feet will be comfortable everywhere. One can never be free from enmity by eliminating all one's foes, but if one strikes down one thing -- the thought of hate -- one will see no enemies anywhere.

* * * * * * * *

BPS Newsletter Cover Essay #19 (Summer-Fall 1991)

AN AUSPICIOUS MONTH

by Bhikkhu Bodhi

During the month of July two of the BPS's guiding lights since its inception passed important milestones in their lives. One of these is Ven. Nyanaponika Mahathera -- our cofounder, long-term president and editor, and current patron -- who on 21 July reached his ninetieth birthday. Fortunately, despite weak legs and impaired vision, Ven. Nyanaponika has enjoyed general good health, and thus was able to welcome the many visitors who called on him that day to pay their respects and to express to him their gratitude for his lucid exposition of the Dhamma and selfless service to the spread of the teachings over an illustrious career of so many years.

To commemorate the occasion the management and staff of the Buddhist Publication Society held an alms offering and felicitation meeting at the Mahathera's residence, the Forest Hermitage in the Udawattakele Forest Reserve near Kandy. After the meal offering, speaking on behalf of the BPS Board of Management, Mr. Harilal Wickremeratne announced to the Mahathera that as a token of our appreciation for him, the BPS has established a scholarship fund at the University of Peradeniya to be called "The Ven. Nyanaponika Mahathera Scholarship Fund for Postgraduate Research into Theravada Buddhism." The scholarship, to be generated by the interest earned from a fixed deposit set up in a commercial bank in Kandy, is to be awarded to a scholar selected by the University for postgraduate studies in the philosophy, ethics, or literature of Theravada

Buddhism.

Felicitation for Ven. Nyanaponika was especially prominent in his native Germany, the land he left so long ago in order to embrace the monk's life here in Sri Lanka. The University of Konstanz, in its Buddhist Modernism series, has issued a volume of writings, talks, texts, photos, and other documents to mark the Mahathera's completion of his ninth decade. The book, compiled by Professor Detlof Kantowsky, is entitled //Nicht derselbe und nicht ein anderer// ("Neither the same nor another"), the famous line from the //Milindapanha// which Ven. Nyanaponika quoted to the editor when reviewing photographs of himself as a boy and as a young man. (For ordering information inquire from: Prof. Detlof Kantowsky, Universitat Konstanz, Postfach 5560, D-7750 Konstanz 1, Germany.)

In Sri Lanka, his adopted home, Ven. Nyanaponika was recently accorded special honor when the Prime Minister's office selected him as one of a hundred "outstanding Sri Lankans" whose image is to be preserved in bronze in a planned national Hall of Fame. Accordingly, in late June Mr. Harold Peiris of the Ministry of Finance, who is in charge of the project, came to Kandy with the talented sculptor, Mr. Sarath Chandrajiva, to fashion a bust of the Mahathera. The clay model the sculptor molded in less than two hours was strikingly faithful to Ven. Nyanaponika's features, and was used to create on the spot a plaster-of-paris mold from which the finished bust is to be cast out of bronze. The bust will be exhibited temporarily in the national art gallery in Colombo, along with those of the other nominees, until a permanent exhibition hall is built for them.

The other guiding light of the BPS to achieve distinction this past July is Ven. Piyadassi Mahathera, the editor of our Sinhala Damsak Series and author of numerous BPS titles both in English and Sinhala. By unanimous acclamation, in appreciation of his indefatigable services to the Buddha-Sasana, the Mahanayaka Theras of the Sangha Council of the Amarapura Nikaya selected Ven. Piyadassi to be appointed as a Sangha Nayaka Thera -- a leading elder of the Order -- with the honorary designation //Vishvakirti Sri Sasanasobhana//, "universally famous glorious ornament of the Teaching." On 18 July at a ceremony held at his alma mater, Nalanda College in Colombo, the new Nayaka Thera received his formal notice of appointment from Prime Minister D.B. Wijetunga before a large gathering led by the Mahanayaka Theras and President Ranasingha Premadasa. Although such honors rest lightly on the shoulders of a monk like Ven. Piyadassi, it is gratifying to us at the BPS to see this "glorious ornament" of our own Society receive the recognition he so rightly deserves.

At the age of 90 Ven. Nyanaponika is now in his 55th year in the Sangha; at the age of 77 Ven. Piyadassi is now in his 58th year. An inveterate traveler and preacher, Ven. Piyadassi has circled the globe twelve times and at home can be scheduled to give three or four sermons a day -- sometimes on one side of the island in the morning and on the other side in the evening. Ven. Nyanaponika, in contrast, has remained almost consistently in Sri Lanka since his arrival here in 1936; yet from the quietude of his hermitage, through the agency of his publications, he has sent his words of wisdom and consolation to the far corners of the earth, translated into more than half a dozen languages.

May these two great elders, who have both in their different ways toiled selflessly for the welfare of the many, enjoy abundant good health and happiness. And may they be with us, as noble friends and advisors for a long time yet to come!

* * * * * * * *

BPS Newsletter Cover Essay #20 (Winter 1991-92)

THE NOBILITY OF THE TRUTHS

by Bhikkhu Bodhi

The most common and widely known formulation of the Buddha's teaching is that which the Buddha himself announced in the First Sermon at Benares, the formula of the Four Noble Truths. The Buddha declares that these truths convey in a nutshell all the essential information that we need to set out on the path to liberation. He says that just as the elephant's footprint, by reason of its great size, contains the footprints of all other animals, so the Four Noble Truths, by reason of their comprehensiveness, contain within themselves all wholesome and beneficial teachings. However, while many expositors of Buddhism have devoted attention to explaining the actual content of the four truths, only rarely is any consideration given to the reason why they are designated //noble// truths. Yet it is just this descriptive word "noble" that reveals to us why the Buddha chose to cast his teaching into this specific format, and it is this same term that allows us to experience, even from afar, the unique flavor that pervades the entire doctrine and discipline of the Enlightened One.

The word "noble," or //ariya//, is used by the Buddha to designate a particular type of person, the type of person which it is the aim of his teaching to create. In the discourses the Buddha classifies human beings into two broad categories. On one side there are the //puthujjanas//, the worldlings, those belonging to the multitude, whose eyes are still covered with the dust of defilements and delusion. On the other side there are the //ariyans//, the noble ones, the spiritual elite, who obtain this status not from birth, social station or ecclesiastical authority but from their inward nobility of character.

These two general types are not separated from each other by an impassable chasm, each confined to a tightly sealed compartment. A series of gradations can be discerned rising up from the darkest level of the blind worldling trapped in the dungeon of egotism and self-assertion, through the stage of the virtuous worldling in whom the seeds of wisdom are beginning to sprout, and further through the intermediate stages of noble disciples to the perfected individual at the apex of the entire scale of human development. This is the Arahant, the liberated one, who has absorbed the purifying vision of truth so deeply that all his defilements have been extinguished, and with them, all liability to suffering.

While the path from bondage to deliverance, from worldliness to spiritual nobility, is a graded path involving gradual practice and gradual progress, it is not a uniform continuum. Progress occurs in discrete steps, and at a certain point -- the point separating the status of a worldling from that of a noble one -- a break is reached which must be crossed, not by simply taking another step forward, but by making a leap, by jumping across from the near side to the further shore. This decisive event in the inner development of the practitioner, this radical leap that propels the disciple from the domain and lineage of the worldling to the domain and lineage of the noble ones, occurs precisely through the penetration of the Four Noble Truths. This discloses to us the critical reason why the four truths revealed by the Buddha are called noble truths. They are noble truths because when we have penetrated them through to the core, when we have grasped their real import and implications, we cast off the status of the worldling and acquire the status of a noble one, drawn out from the faceless crowd into the community of the Blessed One's disciples united by a unique and unshakable vision.

Prior to the penetration of the truths, however well endowed we may be with spiritual virtues, we are not yet on secure ground. We are not immune from regression, not yet assured of deliverance, not invincible in our striving on the path. The virtues of a worldling are tenuous virtues. They may wax or they may wane, they may flourish or decline, and in correspondence with their degree of strength we may rise or fall in our movement through the cycle of becoming. When our virtues are replete we may rise upwards and dwell in bliss among the gods; when our virtues decline or our merit is exhausted we may sink again to miserable depths.

But with the penetration of the truths we leap across the gulf that separates us from the ranks of the noble ones. The eye of Dhamma has been opened, the vision of truth stands revealed, and though the decisive victory has not yet been won, the path to the final goal lies at our feet and the supreme security from bondage hovers on the horizon. One who has comprehended the truths has changed lineage, crossed over from the domain of the worldlings to the domain of the noble ones. Such a disciple is incapable of regression to the ranks of the worldling, incapable of losing the vision of truth that has flashed before his inner eye. Progress towards the final goal, the complete eradication of ignorance and craving, may be slow or rapid; it may occur easily or result from an uphill battle. But however long it may take, with whatever degree of facility one may advance, one thing is certain: such a disciple who has seen with immaculate clarity the Four Noble Truths can never slide backwards, can never lose the status of a noble one, and is bound to reach the final fruit of Arahantship in a maximum of seven lives.

The reason why the penetration of the Four Noble Truths can confer this immutable nobility of spirit is implied by the four tasks the noble truths impose on us. By taking these tasks as our challenge in life -- our challenge as followers of the Enlightened One -- from whatever station of development we find ourselves beginning at, we can gradually advance towards the infallible penetration of the noble ones.

The first noble truth, the truth of suffering, is to be fully understood: the task it assigns us is that of full understanding. A hallmark of the noble ones is that they do not flow along thoughtlessly with the stream of life, but endeavor to comprehend existence from within, as honestly and thoroughly as possible. For us, too, it is necessary to reflect upon the nature of our life. We must attempt to fathom the deep significance of an existence bounded on one side by birth and on the other by death, and subject in between to all the types of suffering detailed by the Buddha in his discourses.

The second noble truth, of the origin or cause of suffering, implies the task of abandonment. A noble one is such because he has initiated the process of eliminating the defilements at the root of suffering, and we too, if we aspire to reach the plane of the noble ones, must be prepared to withstand the seductive lure of the defilements. While the eradication of craving can come only with the supramundane realizations, even in the mundane course of our daily life we can learn to restrain the coarser manifestation of defilements, and by keen self-observation can gradually loosen their grip upon our hearts.

The third noble truth, the cessation of suffering, implies the task of realization. Although Nibbana, the extinction of suffering, can only be personally realized by the noble ones, the confidence we place in the Dhamma as our guideline to life shows us what we should select as our final aspiration, as our ultimate ground of value. Once we have grasped the fact that all conditioned things in the world, being impermanent and insubstantial, can never give us total satisfaction, we can then lift our aim to the unconditioned element, Nibbana the Deathless, and make that aspiration the pole around which we order our everyday choices and concerns.

Finally, the fourth noble truth, the Noble Eightfold Path, assigns us the task of development. The noble ones have reached their status by developing the eightfold path, and while only the noble ones are assured of never deviating from the path, the Buddha's teaching gives us the meticulous instructions that we need to tread the path culminating in the plane of the noble ones. This is the path that gives birth to vision, that gives birth to knowledge, that leads to higher comprehension, enlightenment and Nibbana, the crowning attainment of nobility.

* * * * * * * *

BPS Newsletter Cover Essay #21 (Spring 1992)

REFUGE IN THE BUDDHA

by Bhikkhu Bodhi

The first step in entering the Buddhist path is going for refuge to the Triple Gem, and the first of the three gems that we approach as refuge is the Buddha, the Enlightened One. Because the act of going for refuge to the Buddha marks the beginning of a new chapter in our life, it is worth our while to repeatedly pause and reflect upon the significance of this momentous step. Too often we are prone to take our first steps for granted. Yet it is only if we review these steps from time to time in a deepening awareness of their implications that we can be sure the following steps we take will bring us closer to our desired destination.

The going for refuge to the Buddha is not a single action which occurs only once and is then completed with absolute finality. It is, or should be, a continually evolving process which matures in tandem with our practice and understanding of the Dhamma. To go for refuge does not imply that at the outset we already possess a clear grasp of the dangers that make a refuge necessary or of the goal towards which we aspire. Comprehension of these matters grows gradually over time. But to the extent that we have actually gone for refuge with sincere intent, we should make an earnest effort to sharpen and deepen our understanding of the objects to which we have turned as the basis for our deliverance.

In going for refuge to the Buddha it is most essential at the outset to clarify our conception of what a Buddha is and how he functions as a refuge. If such clarification is lacking, our sense of refuge can easily become tainted by erroneous views. We may ascribe to the Buddha a status he never claimed for himself, as when we regard him as the incarnation of a god, as the emanation of the Absolute, or as a personal savior. On the other hand, we may detract from the exalted status to which the Buddha is properly entitled, as when we regard him simply as a benevolent sage, as an unusually astute Asiatic philosopher, or as a genius of meditative technology.

A correct view of the Buddha's nature would see him in terms of the title he assigned to himself: as a Fully Self-Enlightened One (//samma sambuddha//). He is self-enlightened because he has awakened to the essential truths of existence entirely on his own, without a teacher or guide. He is fully enlightened because he has comprehended these truths completely, in all their ramifications and implications. And as a Buddha he has not only fathomed these truths himself, but has also taught them to the world so that others may awaken from the long sleep of ignorance and attain the fruits of liberation.

Taking refuge in the Buddha is an act anchored in a particular historical individual: the recluse Gotama, the scion of the Sakyan clan, who lived and taught in the Ganges valley in the fifth century B.C. When we take refuge in the Buddha, we rely upon this historical individual and the body of instruction that stems from him. It is important to stress this point in view of the fashionable notion that taking refuge in the Buddha means that we take refuge in "the Buddha-mind within ourselves" or in "the universal principle of enlightenment." Such ideas, allowed to go unchecked, can lead to the belief that anything we contrive in the flights of our imagination can qualify as true Dhamma. To the contrary, the Buddhist tradition insists that when we go for refuge to the Buddha, we place ourselves under the guidance of one who is distinctly different from ourselves, one who has scaled heights that we have barely begun to glimpse.

But when we rely upon the recluse Gotama as our refuge, we do not apprehend him merely as a particular individual, a wise and sensible sage. We apprehend him rather as a Buddha. It is his Buddhahood -- his possession of the full range of excellent qualities that come with perfect enlightenment -- that makes the recluse Gotama a refuge. In any cosmic epoch, a Buddha is that being who first breaks through the dark mass of ignorance encompassing the world and rediscovers the lost path to Nibbana, the cessation of suffering. He is the pioneer, the trailblazer, who discovers the path and proclaims the path so that others, by following his tracks, may extinguish their ignorance, arrive at true wisdom, and break the fetters that tie them to the round of repeated birth and death.

For the refuge in the Buddha to be genuine, it must be accompanied by a commitment to the Buddha as an incomparable teacher, as unexcelled and unsurpassed. Strictly speaking, the historical Buddha is not unique since there have been earlier Fully Enlightened Ones who have arisen in past epochs and there will be others who will arise in future epochs as well. But in any one world system it is impossible for a second Buddha to arise while the teaching of another Buddha is still extant, and thus in terms of human history we are justified in regarding the Buddha as a unique teacher, unequalled by any other spiritual teacher known to humanity. It is this readiness to recognize the Buddha as "the unsurpassed trainer of persons to be tamed, the teacher of gods and humans" that is the hallmark of an authentic act of taking refuge in the Buddha.

The Buddha serves as a refuge by teaching the Dhamma. The actual and final refuge, embedded within the Dhamma as refuge, is Nibbana, "the deathless element free from clinging, the sorrowless state that is void of stain" (Itiv. 51). The Dhamma as refuge comprises the final goal, the path that leads to that goal, and the body of teachings that explain the practice of the path. The Buddha as refuge has no capacity to grant us liberation by an act of will. He proclaims the path to be traveled and the principles to be understood. The actual work of walking the path is then left to us, his disciples.

The proper response to the Buddha as refuge is trust and confidence. Trust is required because the doctrine taught by the Buddha runs counter to our innate understanding of ourselves and our natural orientation towards the world. To accept this teaching thus tends to arouse an inner resistance, even to provoke a rebellion against the changes it requires us to make in the way we lead our lives. But when we place trust in the Buddha we open ourselves to his guidance. By going to him for refuge we show that we are prepared to recognize that our inherent tendencies to self-affirmation and grasping are in truth the cause of our suffering. And we are ready to accept his counsel that to become free from suffering, these tendencies must be controlled and eliminated.

Confidence in the Buddha as our refuge is initially awakened when we contemplate his sublime virtues and his excellent teaching. It grows through our undertaking of the training. At first our confidence in the Buddha may be hesitant, punctured by doubts and perplexity. But as we apply ourselves to the practice of his path, we find that our defilements gradually lessen, that wholesome qualities increase, and with this comes a growing sense of freedom, peace and joy. This experience confirms our initial trust, disposing us to advance a few steps further. When at last we see the truth of the Dhamma for ourselves, the refuge in the Buddha becomes inviolable. Confidence then becomes conviction, the conviction that the Blessed One is "the speaker, the proclaimer, the bringer of the good, the giver of the Deathless, the lord of the Dhamma, the Tathagata."

* * * * * * * *

BPS Newsletter Cover Essay #22 (Winter 1992-93)

THE FIVE SPIRITUAL FACULTIES

by Bhikkhu Bodhi

The practice of the Buddha's teaching is most commonly depicted by the image of a journey, the eight factors of the Noble Eightfold Path constituting the royal roadway along which the disciple must travel. The Buddhist scriptures, however, illustrate the quest for liberation in a variety of other ways, each of which throws a different spotlight on the nature of the practice. Although the alternative formulations inevitably draw upon the same basic set of mental factors as those that enter into the eightfold path, they structure these factors around a different "root metaphor" -- an image which evokes its own particular range of associations and highlights different aspects of the endeavor to reach the cessation of suffering.

One of the groups of factors given special prominence in the Suttas included by the Buddha among the thirty-seven requisites of enlightenment is the five spiritual faculties: the faculties of faith, energy, mindfulness, concentration and wisdom. The term //indriya//, faculties, applied to this group as a whole is derived from the name of the ancient Vedic god Indra, ruler of the devas, and the term accordingly suggests the divine-like quality of control and domination. The five faculties are so designated because they exercise control in their own specific compartments of the spiritual life. As the god Indra vanquished the demons and attained supremacy among the gods, so each of the five faculties is called upon to subdue a particular mental disability and to marshal the corresponding potency of mind towards the breakthrough to final enlightenment.

The notion of faculty is partly akin to the ancient Greek conception of the virtues. Like the virtues, the faculties are active powers which coordinate and canalize our natural energies, directing them towards the achievement of an inward harmony and balance essential to our true happiness and peace. Since the faculties are to serve as agents of inward control, this implies that apart from their restraining influence our nature is not under our own control. Left to itself without the guidance of a superior source of instruction, the mind is a prey to forces that swell up from within itself, dark forces which hold us in subjection and prevent us from attaining our own highest welfare and genuine good. These forces are the defilements (//kilesa//). As long as we live and act under their dominion we are not our own masters but passive pawns, driven by our blind desires into courses of conduct that promise fulfillment but in the end lead only to misery and bondage. True freedom necessarily involves the attainment of inner autonomy, the strength to withstand the pushes and pulls of our appetites, and this is accomplished precisely by the development of the five spiritual faculties.

The qualities that exercise the function of faculties are of humble origin, appearing initially in mundane roles in the course of our everyday lives. In these humble guises they manifest as trustful confidence in higher values, as vigorous effort towards the good, as attentive awareness, as focused concentration, and as intelligent understanding. The Buddha's teaching does not implant these dispositions into the mind from scratch but harnesses those pre-existent capacities of our nature towards a supramundane goal -- towards the realization of the Unconditioned -- thereby conferring upon them a transcendental significance. By assigning them a task that reveals their immense potential, and by guiding them along a track that can bring that potential to fulfillment, the Dhamma transforms these commonplace mental factors into spiritual faculties, mighty instruments in the quest for liberation that can fathom the profoundest laws of existence and unlock the doors to the Deathless.

In the practice of the Dhamma each of these faculties has simultaneously to perform its own specific function and to harmonize with the other faculties to establish the balance needed for clear comprehension. The five come to fullest maturity in the contemplative development of insight, the direct road to awakening. In this process the faculty of faith provides the element of inspiration and aspiration which steers the mind away from the quagmire of doubt and settles it with serene trust in the Triple Gem as the supreme basis of deliverance. The faculty of energy kindles the fire of sustained endeavor that burns up obstructions and brings to maturity the factors that ripen in awakening. The faculty of mindfulness contributes clear awareness, the antidote to carelessness and the prerequisite of penetration. The faculty of concentration holds the beam of attention steadily focused on the rise and fall of bodily and mental events, calm and composed. And the faculty of wisdom, which the Buddha calls the crowning virtue among all the requisites of enlightenment, drives away the darkness of ignorance and lights up the true characteristics of phenomena.

Just as much as the five faculties, considered individually, each perform their own unique tasks in their respective domains, as a group they accomplish the collective task of establishing inner balance and harmony. To achieve this balanced striving the faculties are divided into two pairs in each of which each member must counter the undesirable tendency inherent in the other, thus enabling it to actualize its fullest potential. The faculties of faith and wisdom form one pair, aimed at balancing the capacities for devotion and comprehension; the faculties of energy and concentration form a second pair aimed at balancing the capacities for active exertion and calm recollection. Above the complementary pairs stands the faculty of mindfulness, which protects the mind from extremes and ensures that the members of each pair hold one another in a mutually restraining, mutually enriching tension.

Born of humble origins in everyday functions of the mind, through the Dhamma the five faculties acquire a transcendent destiny. When they are developed and regularly cultivated, says the Master, "they lead to the Deathless, are bound for the Deathless, culminate in the Deathless."

* * * * * * * *

BPS Newsletter Cover Essay #23 (Spring 1993)

THE GUARDIANS OF THE WORLD

by Bhikkhu Bodhi

Like the Roman god Janus, every person faces simultaneously in two opposite directions. With one face of our consciousness we gaze in upon ourselves and become aware of ourselves as individuals motivated by a deep urge to avoid suffering and to secure our own well-being and happiness. With the other face we gaze out upon the world and discover that our lives are thoroughly relational, that we exist as nodes in a vast net of relationships with other beings whose fate is tied up with our own. Because of the relational structure of our existence, we are engaged in a perpetual two-way interaction with the world: the influence of the world presses in upon ourselves, shaping and altering our own attitudes and dispositions, while our own attitudes and dispositions flow out into the world, a force that affects the lives of others for better or for worse.

This seamless interconnection between the inner and outer domains acquires a particular urgency for us today owing to the rampant deterioration in ethical standards that sweeps across the globe. Such moral decline is as widespread in those societies which enjoy a comfortable measure of stability and prosperity as it is in those countries where poverty and desperation make moral infringements an integral aspect of the struggle for survival. Of course we should not indulge in pastel-colored fantasies about the past, imagining that we lived in a Garden of Eden until the invention of the steam engine. The driving forces of the human heart have remained fairly constant through the ages, and the toll they have taken in human misery surpasses calculation. But what we find today is a strange paradox that would be interesting if it were not sinister: while there appears to be a much wider verbal acknowledgment of the primacy of moral and human values, there is at the same time more blatant disregard for the lines of conduct such values imply. This undermining of traditional ethical values is in part a result of the internationalization of commerce and the global penetration of virtually all media of communication. Vested interests, in quest of wider loops of power and expanding profits, mount a sustained campaign aimed at exploiting our moral vulnerability. This campaign proceeds at full pace, invading every nook and corner of our lives, with little regard for the long-term consequences for the individual and society. The results are evident in the problems that we face, problems that respect no national boundaries: rising crime rates, spreading drug addiction, ecological devastation, child labor and prostitution, smuggling and pornography, the decline of the family as the unit of loving trust and moral education.

The Buddha's teaching at its core is a doctrine of liberation that provides us with the tools for cutting through the fetters that keep us bound to this world of suffering, the round of repeated births. Although the quest for liberation by practice of the Dhamma depends on individual effort, this quest necessarily takes place within a social environment and is thus subject to all the influences, helpful or harmful, imposed upon us by that environment. The Buddhist training unfolds in the three stages of morality, concentration and wisdom, each the foundation for the other: purified moral conduct facilitates the attainment of purified concentration, and the concentrated mind facilitates the attainment of liberating wisdom. The basis of the entire Buddhist training is thus purified conduct, and firm adherence to the code of training rules one has undertaken -- the Five Precepts in the case of a lay Buddhist -- is the necessary means for safeguarding the purity of one's conduct. Living as we do in an era when we are provoked through every available channel to deviate from the norms of rectitude, and when social unrest, economic hardships, and political conflict further fuel volatile emotions, the need for extra protection becomes especially imperative: protection for oneself, protection for the world.

The Buddha points to two mental qualities as the underlying safeguards of morality, thus as the protectors of both the individual and society as a whole. These two qualities are called in Pali //hiri// and //ottappa//. //Hiri// is an innate sense of shame over moral transgression; //ottappa// is moral dread, fear of the results of wrongdoing. The Buddha calls these two states the bright guardians of the world (//sukka lokapala//). He gives them this designation because as long as these two states prevail in people's hearts the moral standards of the world remain intact, while when their influence wanes the human world falls into unabashed promiscuity and violence, becoming almost indistinguishable from the animal realm (Itiv. 42).

While moral shame and fear of wrongdoing are united in the common task of protecting the mind from moral defilement, they differ in their individual characteristics and modes of operation. //Hiri//, the sense of shame, has an internal reference; it is rooted in self-respect and induces us to shrink from wrongdoing out of a feeling of personal honor. //Ottappa//, fear of wrongdoing, has an external orientation. It is the voice of conscience that warns us of the dire consequences of moral transgression: blame and punishment by others, the painful kammic results of evil deeds, the impediment to our desire for liberation from suffering. Acariya Buddhaghosa illustrates the difference between the two with the simile of an iron rod smeared with excrement at one end and heated to a glow at the other end: //hiri// is like one's disgust at grabbing the rod in the place where it is smeared with excrement, //ottappa// is like one's fear of grabbing it in the place where it is red hot.

In the present-day world, with its secularization of all values, such notions as shame and fear of wrong are bound to appear antiquated, relics from a puritanical past when superstition and dogma manacled our rights to uninhibited self-expression. Yet the Buddha's stress on the importance of //hiri// and //ottappa// was based on a deep insight into the different potentialities of human nature. He saw that the path to deliverance is a struggle against the current, and that if we are to unfold the mind's capacities for wisdom, purity and peace, then we need to keep the powderkeg of the defilements under the watchful eyes of diligent sentinels.

The project of self-cultivation, which the Buddha proclaims as the means to liberation from suffering, requires that we keep a critical watch over the movements of our minds, both on occasions when they motivate bodily and verbal deeds and when they remain inwardly absorbed with their own preoccupations. To exercise such self-scrutiny is an aspect of heedfulness (//appamada//), which the Buddha states is the path to the Deathless. In the practice of self-examination, the sense of shame and fear of wrongdoing play a crucial role. The sense of shame spurs us to overcome unwholesome mental states because we recognize that such states are blemishes on our character. They detract from the inward loftiness of character to be fashioned by the practice of the Dhamma, the stature of the ariyans or noble ones, who shine resplendent like lotus flowers upon the lake of the world. Fear of wrongdoing bids us to retreat from morally risky thoughts and actions because we recognize that such deeds are seeds with the potency to yield fruits, fruits that inevitably will be bitter. The Buddha asserts that whatever evil arises springs from a lack of shame and fear of wrong, while all virtuous deeds spring from the sense of shame and fear of wrong.

By cultivating within ourselves the qualities of moral shame and fear of wrongdoing we not only accelerate our own progress along the path to deliverance, but also contribute our share towards the protection of the world. Given the intricate interconnections that hold between all living forms, to make the sense of shame and fear of wrong the guardians of our own minds is to make ourselves guardians of the world. As the roots of morality, these two qualities sustain the entire efficacy of the Buddha's liberating path; as the safeguards of personal decency, they at the same time preserve the dignity of the human race.

* * * * * * * *

BPS Newsletter Cover Essay #24 (Summer-Fall 1993)

TOLERANCE AND DIVERSITY

by Bhikkhu Bodhi

Today all the major religions of the world must respond to a double challenge. On one side is the challenge of secularism, a trend which has swept across the globe, battering against the most ancient strongholds of the sacred and turning all man's movements towards the Beyond into a forlorn gesture, poignant but devoid of sense. On the other side is the meeting of the great religions with each other. As the most far-flung nations and cultures merge into a single global community, the representatives of humankind's spiritual quest have been brought together in an encounter of unprecedented intimacy, an encounter so close that it leaves no room for retreat. Thus at one and the same time each major religion faces, in the amphitheater of world opinion, all the other religions of the earth, as well as the vast numbers of people who regard all claims to possess the Great Answer with a skeptical frown or an indifferent yawn.

In this situation, any religion which is to emerge as more than a relic from humanity's adolescence must be able to deal, in a convincing and meaningful manner, with both sides of the challenge. On the one hand it must contain the swelling tide of secularism, by keeping alive the intuition that no amount of technological mastery over external nature, no degree of proficiency in providing for humanity's mundane needs, can bring complete repose to the human spirit, can still the thirst for a truth and value that transcends the boundaries of contingency. On the other hand, each religion must find some way of disentangling the conflicting claims that all religions make to understand our place in the grand scheme of things and to hold the key to our salvation. While remaining faithful to its own most fundamental principles, a religion must be able to address the striking differences between its own tenets and those of other creeds, doing so in a manner that is at once honest yet humble, perspicacious yet unimposing.

In this brief essay I wish to sketch the outline of an appropriate Buddhist response to the second challenge. Since Buddhism has always professed to offer a "middle way" in resolving the intellectual and ethical dilemmas of the spiritual life, we may find that the key to our present problematic also lies in discovering the response that best exemplifies the middle way. As has often been noted, the middle way is not a compromise between the extremes but a way that rises above them, avoiding the pitfalls into which they lead. Therefore, in seeking the proper Buddhist approach to the problem of the diversity of creeds, we might begin by pinpointing the extremes which the middle way must avoid.

The first extreme is a retreat into fundamentalism, the adoption of an aggressive affirmation of one's own beliefs coupled with a proselytizing zeal towards those who still stand outside the chosen circle of one's co-religionists. While this response !o the challenge of diversity has assumed alarming proportions in the folds of the great monotheistic religions, Christianity and Islam, it is not one towards which Buddhism has a ready affinity, for the ethical guidelines of the Dhamma naturally tend to foster an attitude of benign tolerance towards other religions and their followers. Though there is no guarantee against the rise of a militant fundamentalism from within Buddhism's own ranks, the Buddha's teachings can offer no sanctification, not even a remote one, for such a malignant development.

For Buddhists the more alluring alternative is the second extreme. This extreme, which purchases tolerance at the price of integrity, might be called the thesis of spiritual universalism: the view that all the great religions, at their core, espouse essentially the same truth, clothed merely in different modes of expression. Such a thesis could not, of course, be maintained in regard to the formal creeds of the major religions, which differ so widely that it would require a strenuous exercise in word-twisting to bring them into accord. The universalist position is arrived at instead by an indirect route. Its advocates argue that we must distinguish between the outward face of a religion -- its explicit beliefs and exoteric practices -- and its inner nucleus of experiential realization. On the basis of this distinction, they then insist, we will find that beneath the markedly different outward faces of the great religions, at their heart -- in respect of the spiritual experiences from which they emerge and the ultimate goal to which they lead -- they are substantially identical. Thus the major religions differ simply in so far as they are different means, different expedients, to the same liberative experience, which may be indiscriminately designated "enlightenment," or "redemption," or "God-realization," since these different terms merely highlight different aspects of the same goal. As the famous maxim puts it: the roads up the mountain are many, but the moonlight at the top is one. From this point of view, the Buddha Dhamma is only one more variant on the "perennial philosophy" underlying all the mature expressions of mall's spiritual quest. It may stand out by its elegant simplicity, its clarity and directness; but a unique and unrepeated revelation of truth it harbors not.

On first consideration the adoption of such a view may seem to be an indispensable stepping-stone to religious tolerance, and to insist that doctrinal differences are not merely verbal but real and important may appear to border on bigotry. Thus those who embrace Buddhism in reaction against the doctrinaire narrowness of the monotheistic religions may find in such a view -- so soft and accommodating -- a welcome respite from the insistence on privileged access to truth typical of those religions. However, an unbiased study of the Buddha's own discourses would show quite plainly that the universalist thesis does not have the endorsement of the Awakened One himself. To the contrary, the Buddha repeatedly proclaims that the path to the supreme goal of the holy life is made known only in his own teaching, and therefore that the attainment of that goal -- final deliverance from suffering -- can be achieved only from within his own dispensation. The best known instance of this claim is the Buddha's assertion, on the eve of his Parinibbana, that only in his dispensation are the four grades of enlightened persons to be found, that the other sects are devoid of true ascetics, those who have reached the planes of liberation.

The Buddha's restriction of final emancipation to his own dispensation does not spring from a narrow dogmatism or a lack of good will, but rests upon an utterly precise determination of the nature of the final goal and of the means that must be implemented to reach it. This goal is neither an everlasting afterlife in a heaven nor some nebulously conceived state of spiritual illumination, but the Nibbana element with no residue remaining, release from the cycle of repeated birth and death. This goal is effected by the utter destruction of the mind's defilements -- greed, aversion and delusion -- all the way down to their subtlest levels of latency. The eradication of the defilements can be achieved only by insight into the true nature of phenomena, which means that the attainment of Nibbana depends upon the direct experiential insight into all conditioned phenomena, internal and external, as stamped with the "three characteristics of existence": impermanence, suffering, and non-selfness. What the Buddha maintains, as the ground for his assertion that his teaching offers the sole means to final release from suffering, is that the knowledge of the true nature of phenomena, in its exactitude and completeness, is accessible only in his teaching. This is so because, theoretically, the principles that define this knowledge are unique to his teaching and contradictory in vital respects to the basic tenets of other creeds; and because, practically, this teaching alone reveals, in its perfection and purity, the means of generating this liberative knowledge as a matter of immediate personal experience. This means is the Noble Eightfold Path which, as an integrated system of spiritual training, cannot be found outside the dispensation of a Fully Enlightened One.

Surprisingly, this exclusivistic stance of Buddhism in regard to the prospects for final emancipation has never engendered a policy of intolerance on the part of Buddhists towards the adherents of other religions. To the contrary, throughout its long history, Buddhism has displayed a thoroughgoing tolerance and genial good will towards the many religions with which it has come into contact. It has maintained this tolerance simultaneously with its deep conviction that the doctrine of the Buddha offers the unique and unsurpassable way to release from the ills inherent in conditioned existence. For Buddhism, religious tolerance is not achieved by reducing all religions to a common denominator, nor by explaining away formidable differences in thought and practice as accidents of historical development. From the Buddhist point of view, to make tolerance contingent upon whitewashing discrepancies would not be to exercise genuine tolerance at all; for such an approach can "tolerate" differences only by diluting them so completely that they no longer make a difference. True tolerance in religion involves the capacity to admit differences as real and fundamental, even as profound and unbridgeable, yet at the same time to respect the rights of those who follow a religion different from one's own (or no religion at all) to continue to do so without resentment, disadvantage or hindrance.

Buddhist tolerance springs from the recognition that the dispositions and spiritual needs of human beings are too vastly diverse to be encompassed by any single teaching, and thus that these needs will naturally find expression in a wide variety of religious forms. The non-Buddhist systems will not be able to lead their adherents to the final goal of the Buddha's Dhamma, but that they never proposed to do in the first place. For Buddhism, acceptance of the idea of the beginningless round of rebirths implies that it would be utterly unrealistic to expect more than a small number of people to be drawn towards a spiritual path aimed at complete liberation. The overwhelming majority, even of those who seek deliverance from earthly woes, will aim at securing a favorable mode of existence within the round, even while misconceiving this to be the ultimate goal of the religious quest.

To the extent that a religion proposes sound ethical principles and can promote to some degree the development of wholesome qualities such as love, generosity, detachment and compassion, it will merit in this respect the approbation of Buddhists. These principles advocated by outside religious systems will also conduce to rebirth in the realms of bliss -- the heavens and the divine abodes. Buddhism by no means claims to have unique access to these realms, but holds that the paths that lead to them have been articulated, with varying degrees of clarity, in many of the great spiritual traditions of humanity. While the Buddhist will disagree with the belief structures of other religions to the extent that they deviate from the Buddha's Dhamma, he will respect them to the extent that they enjoin virtues and standards of conduct that promote spiritual development and the harmonious integration of human beings with each other and with the world.

* * * * * * * *

BPS Newsletter Cover Essay #25 (Winter 1993-94)

FROM VIEWS TO VISION

by Bhikkhu Bodhi

The Buddha's teaching repeatedly cautions us about the dangers in clinging -- in clinging to possessions, clinging to pleasures, clinging to people, clinging to views. The Buddha sounds such words of warning because he discerns in clinging a potent cause of suffering, and he thus advises us that the price we must pay to arrive at the "far shore" of liberation is the relinquishment of every type of clinging. In a move that at first glance may even seem self-destructive on the part of a religious founder, the Buddha says that we should not cling even to his teachings, that even the wholesome principles of the Dhamma have to be treated like the makeshift raft used to carry us across the stream.

Such astringent words of advice can easily be misconstrued, and if misconstrued the consequences may be even more bitter than if we simply disregard them. One particular misinterpretation into which newcomers to the Dhamma (and some veterans too!) are especially prone to fall is to hold that the Buddha's counsel to transcend all views means that even the doctrines of Buddhism are ultimately of no vital importance. For these doctrines too, it is said, are merely views, intellectual constructs, filaments of thought, which may have been meaningful in the context of ancient Indian cosmology but have no binding claims on us today. After all, aren't the words and phrases of the Buddhist texts simply that -- words and phrases -- and aren't we admonished to get beyond words and phrases in order to arrive at direct experience, the only thing that really counts? And doesn't the Buddha enjoin us in the Kalama Sutta to judge things for ourselves and to let our own experience be the criterion for deciding what we will accept?

Such an approach to the Dhamma may be sweet to chew upon and easy to digest, but we also need to beware of its effect upon our total spiritual organism. Too often this kind of slippery reasoning provides simply a convenient excuse for adhering, at a subtle level of the mind, to ideas which are fundamentally antithetical to the Dhamma. We hang on to such ideas, not because they are truly edifying, but in order to protect ourselves from the radical challenge with which the Buddha's message confronts us. In effect, such claims, though apparently aimed at safeguarding living experience from the encroachment of stodgy intellectualism, may be in reality a clever intellectual ploy for refusing to examine cherished assumptions -- assumptions we cherish primarily because they shield deep-rooted desires we do not want to expose to the tonic influence of the Dhamma.

When we approach the Buddha's teachings, we should bear in mind that its vast array of doctrines have not been devised as elaborate exercises in philosophical sleight of hand. They are propounded because they constitute right view, and right view stands at the head of the Noble Eightfold Path, the chisel to be used to cut away the dross of wrong views and confused thoughts that impede the light of wisdom from illumining our minds. In the present-day world, far more than in the ancient Ganges Valley, wrong views have gained widespread currency and assumed more baneful forms than earlier epochs ever could have imagined. Today they are no longer the province of a few eccentric philosophers and their cliques. They have become, rather, a major determinant of cultural and social attitudes, a molder of the moral spirit of the age, a driving force behind economic empires and international relations. Under such circumstances, right view is our candle against the dark, our compass in the desert, our isle above the flood. Without a clear understanding of the truths enunciated by right view, and without a keen awareness of the areas where these truths collide with popular opinion, it is only too easy to stumble in the dark, to get stranded among the sand dunes, to be swept away from one's position above the deluge.

Both right view and wrong view, though cognitive in character, do not remain locked up in a purely cognitive space of their own. Our views exercise an enormously potent influence upon all areas of our lives, and the Buddha, in his genius, recognized this when he placed right view and wrong view respectively at the beginning of the good and evil pathways of life. Views flow out and interlock with the practical dimension of our lives at many levels: they determine our values, they give birth to our goals and aspirations, they guide our choices in morally difficult dilemmas. Wrong view promotes wrong intentions, wrong modes of conduct, leads us in pursuit of a deceptive type of freedom. It draws us towards the freedom of license, by which we feel justified in casting off moral restraint for the sake of satisfying transient but harmful impulses. Though we may then pride ourselves on our spontaneity and creativity, may convince ourselves that we have discovered our true individuality, one with clear sight will see that this freedom is only a more subtle bondage to the chains of craving and delusion.

Right view, even in its elementary form, as a recognition of the moral law of kamma, the capacity of our deeds to bring results, becomes our gentle guide towards true freedom. And when it matures into an accurate grasp of the three signs of existence, of dependent arising, of the Four Noble Truths, it then becomes our navigator up the mountain slope of final deliverance. It will lead us to right intentions, to virtuous conduct, to mental purification, and to the cloudless peak of unobstructed vision. Although we must eventually learn to let go of this guide in order to stand confidently on our own feet, without its astute eye and willing hand we would only meander in the foothills oblivious to the peak.

The attainment of right view is not simply a matter of assenting to a particular roster of doctrinal formulas or of skill in juggling an impressive array of cryptic Pali terms. The attainment of right view is at its core essentially a matter of understanding -- of understanding in a deeply personal way the vital truths of existence upon which our lives devolve. Right view aims at the big picture. It seeks to comprehend our place in the total scheme of things and to discern the laws that govern the unfolding of our lives for better or for worse. The ground of right view is the Perfect Enlightenment of the Buddha, and by striving to rectify our view we seek nothing less than to align our own understanding of the nature of existence with that of the Buddha's Enlightenment. Right view may begin with concepts and propositional knowledge but it does not end with them. Through study, deep reflection and meditative development it gradually becomes transmuted into wisdom, the wisdom of insight that can cut asunder the beginningless fetters of the mind.

* * * * * * * *

ASSOCIATION WITH THE WISE

by Bhikkhu Bodhi

BPS Newsletter Cover Essay #26 (1st Mailing 1994)

Copyright 1994 Buddhist Publication Society

* * *

DharmaNet Edition 1994

This electronic edition is offered for free distribution
via DharmaNet by arrangement with the publisher.

DharmaNet International
P.O. Box 4951, Berkeley CA 94704-4951

* * *

The Mahamangala Sutta, the Great Discourse on Blessings, is one of the most popular Buddhist suttas, included in all the standard repertories of Pali devotional chants. The sutta begins when a deity of stunning beauty, having descended to earth in the stillness of the night, approaches the Blessed One in the Jeta Grove and asks about the way to the highest blessings. In the very first stanza of his reply the Buddha states that the highest blessing comes from avoiding fools and associating with the wise (//asevana ca balanam, panditanan ca sevana//). Since the rest of the sutta goes on to sketch all the different aspects of human felicity, both mundane and spiritual, the assignment of association with the wise to the opening stanza serves to emphasize a key point: that progress along the path of the Dhamma hinges on making the right choices in our friendships.

Contrary to certain psychological theories, the human mind is not a hermetically sealed chamber enclosing a personality unalterably shaped by biology and infantile experience. Rather, throughout life it remains a highly malleable entity continually remolding itself in response to its social interactions. Far from coming to our personal relationships with a fixed and immutable character, our regular and repeated social contacts implicate us in a constant process of psychological osmosis that offers precious opportunities for growth and transformation. Like living cells engaged in a chemical dialogue with their colleagues, our minds transmit and receive a steady barrage of messages and suggestions that may work profound changes even at levels below the threshold of awareness.

Particularly critical to our spiritual progress is our selection of friends and companions, who can have the most decisive impact upon our personal destiny. It is because he perceived how susceptible our minds can be to the influence of our companions that the Buddha repeatedly stressed the value of good friendship (//kalyanamittata//) in the spiritual life. The Buddha states that he sees no other thing that is so much responsible for the arising of unwholesome qualities in a person as bad friendship, nothing so helpful for the arising of wholesome qualities as good friendship (AN I.vii,10; I.viii,1). Again, he says that he sees no other external factor that leads to so much harm as bad friendship, and no other external factor that leads to so much benefit as good friendship (AN I.x,13,14). It is through the influence of a good friend that a disciple is led along the Noble Eightfold Path to release from all suffering (SN 45:2).

Good friendship, in Buddhism, means considerably more than associating with people that one finds amenable and who share one's interests. It means in effect seeking out wise companions to whom one can look for guidance and instruction. The task of the noble friend is not only to provide companionship in the treading of the way. The truly wise and compassionate friend is one who, with understanding and sympathy of heart, is ready to criticize and admonish, to point out one's faults, to exhort and encourage, perceiving that the final end of such friendship is growth in the Dhamma. The Buddha succinctly expresses the proper response of a disciple to such a good friend in a verse of the Dhammapada: "If one finds a person who points out one's faults and who reproves one, one should follow such a wise and sagacious counselor as one would a guide to hidden treasure" (Dhp. 76).

Association with the wise becomes so crucial to spiritual development because the example and advice of a noble-minded counselor is often the decisive factor that awakens and nurtures the unfolding of our own untapped spiritual potential. The uncultivated mind harbors a vast diversity of unrealized possibilities, ranging from the depths of selfishness, egotism and aggressivity to the heights of wisdom, self-sacrifice and compassion. The task confronting us, as followers of the Dhamma, is to keep the unwholesome tendencies in check and to foster the growth of the wholesome tendencies, the qualities that lead to awakening, to freedom and purification. However, our internal tendencies do not mature and decline in a vacuum. They are subject to the constant impact of the broader environment, and among the most powerful of these influences is the company we keep, the people we look upon as teachers, advisors and friends. Such people silently speak to the hidden potentials of our own being, potentials that will either unfold or wither under their influence.

In our pursuit of the Dhamma it therefore becomes essential for us to choose as our guides and companions those who represent, at least in part, the noble qualities we seek to internalize by the practice of the Dhamma. This is especially necessary in the early stages of our spiritual development, when our virtuous aspirations are still fresh and tender, vulnerable to being undermined by inward irresolution or by discouragement from acquaintances who do not share our ideals. In this early phase our mind resembles a chameleon, which alters its color according to its background. Just as this remarkable lizard turns green when in the grass and brown when on the ground, so we become fools when we associate with fools and sages when we associate with sages. Internal changes do not generally occur suddenly; but slowly, by increments so slight that we ourselves may not be aware of them, our characters undergo a metamorphosis that in the end may prove to be dramatically significant.

If we associate closely with those who are addicted to the pursuit of sense pleasures, power, riches and fame, we should not imagine that we will remain immune from those addictions: in time our own minds will gradually incline to these same ends. If we associate closely with those who, while not given up to moral recklessness, live their lives comfortably adjusted to mundane routines, we too will remain stuck in the ruts of the commonplace. If we aspire for the highest -- for the peaks of transcendent wisdom and liberation -- then we must enter into association with those who represent the highest. Even if we are not so fortunate as to find companions who have already scaled the heights, we can well count ourselves blessed if we cross paths with a few spiritual friends who share our ideals and who make earnest efforts to nurture the noble qualities of the Dhamma in their hearts.

When we raise the question how to recognize good friends, how to distinguish good advisors from bad advisors, the Buddha offers us crystal-clear advice. In the Shorter Discourse on a Full-Moon Night (MN 110) he explains the difference between the companionship of the bad person and the companionship of the good person. The bad person chooses as friends and companions those who are without faith, whose conduct is marked by an absence of shame and moral dread, who have no knowledge of spiritual teachings, who are lazy and unmindful, and who are devoid of wisdom. As a consequence of choosing such bad friends as his advisors, the bad person plans and acts for his own harm, for the harm of others, and the harm of both, and he meets with sorrow and misery.

In contrast, the Buddha continues, the good person chooses as friends and companions those who have faith, who exhibit a sense of shame and moral dread, who are learned in the Dhamma, energetic in cultivation of the mind, mindful, and possessed of wisdom. Resorting to such good friends, looking to them as mentors and guides, the good person pursues these same qualities as his own ideals and absorbs them into his character. Thus, while drawing ever closer to deliverance himself, he becomes in turn a beacon light for others. Such a one is able to offer those who still wander in the dark an inspiring model to emulate, and a wise friend to turn to for guidance and advice.

* * * * * * * *

THE BUDDHIST PUBLICATION SOCIETY

The BPS is an approved charity dedicated to making known the Teaching of the Buddha, which has a vital message for people of all creeds. Founded in 1958, the BPS has published a wide variety of books and booklets covering a great range of topics. Its publications include accurate annotated translations of the Buddha's discourses, standard reference works, as well as original contemporary expositions of Buddhist thought and practice. These works present Buddhism as it truly is -- a dynamic force which has influenced receptive minds for the past 2500 years and is still as relevant today as it was when it first arose. A full list of our publications will be sent upon request with an enclosure of U.S. $1.00 or its equivalent to cover air mail postage. Write to:

The Hony. Secretary
BUDDHIST PUBLICATION SOCIETY
P.O. Box 61
54, Sangharaja Mawatha
Kandy Sri Lanka

or

The Barre Center for Buddhist Studies
Lockwood Road
Barre, MA 01005
Tel: (508) 355-2347

* * * * * * * *

DISTRIBUTION AGREEMENT
~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~
~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

TITLE OF WORK: Association with the Wise (BPS Newsletter Cover Essay, No. 26, 1st Mailing 1994)
FILENAME: ESSAY_26.ZIP
AUTHOR: Bhikkhu Bodhi
AUTHOR'S ADDRESS: Buddhist Publication Society
P.O. Box 61
54, Sangharaja Mawatha
Kandy, Sri Lanka
PUBLISHER'S ADDRESS: <same>
COPYRIGHT HOLDER: Buddhist Publication Society (1994)
DATE OF PUBLICATION: 1994
RIGHTS AND RESTRICTIONS: See paragraph below.
DATE OF DHARMANET DISTRIBUTION: December 1994
ORIGIN SITE: Access to Insight BBS, Pepperell MA * (508) 433-5847 (96:903/1)

The copyright holder retains all rights to this work and hereby grants electronic distribution rights to DharmaNet International. This work may be freely copied and redistributed electronically, provided that the file contents (including this Agreement) are not altered in any way and that it is distributed at no cost to the recipient. You may make printed copies of this work for your personal use; further distribution of printed copies requires permission from the copyright holder. If this work is used by a teacher in a class, or is quoted in a review, the publisher shall be notified of such use. See the title page of this work for any additional rights and restrictions that may apply.

It is the spirit of dana, freely offered generosity, which has kept the entire Buddhist tradition alive for more than 2,500 years. If you find this work of value, please consider sending a donation to the author or publisher, so that these works may continue to be made available. May your generosity contribute to the happiness of all beings everywhere.

DharmaNet International, P.O. Box 4951, Berkeley, CA 94704-4951

[end]

DHAMMA & NON-DUALITY (Part I)*

by Bhikkhu Bodhi

BPS Newsletter Cover Essay #27 (2nd Mailing 1994)

Copyright 1994 Buddhist Publication Society

* * *

DharmaNet Edition 1994

This electronic edition is offered for free distribution
via DharmaNet by arrangement with the publisher.

DharmaNet International
P.O. Box 4951, Berkeley CA 94704-4951

* * *

One of the most challenging issues facing Theravada Buddhism in recent years has been the encounter between classical Theravada vipassana meditation and the "non-dualistic" contemplative traditions best represented by Advaita Vedanta and Mahayana Buddhism. Responses to this encounter have spanned the extremes, ranging from vehement confrontation all the way to attempts at synthesis and hybridization. While the present essay cannot pretend to illuminate all the intricate and subtle problems involved in this sometimes volatile dialogue, I hope it may contribute a few sparks of light from a canonically oriented Theravada perspective.

My first preliminary remark would be to insist that a system of meditative practice does not constitute a self-contained discipline. Any authentic system of spiritual practice is always found embedded within a conceptual matrix that defines the problems the practice is intended to solve and the goal towards which it is directed. Hence the merging of techniques grounded in incompatible conceptual frameworks is fraught with risk. Although such mergers may appease a predilection for experimentation or eclecticism, it seems likely that their long-term effect will be to create a certain "cognitive dissonance" that will reverberate through the deeper levels of the psyche and stir up even greater confusion.

My second remark would be to point out simply that non-dualistic spiritual traditions are far from consistent with each other, but comprise, rather, a wide variety of views profoundly different and inevitably colored by the broader conceptual contours of the philosophies which encompass them.

For the Vedanta, non-duality (//advaita//) means the absence of an ultimate distinction between the Atman, the innermost self, and Brahman, the divine reality, the underlying ground of the world. From the standpoint of the highest realization, only one ultimate reality exists -- which is simultaneously Atman and Brahman -- and the aim of the spiritual quest is to know that one's own true self, the Atman, is the timeless reality which is Being, Awareness, Bliss. Since all schools of Buddhism reject the idea of the Atman, none can accept the non-dualism of Vedanta. From the perspective of the Theravada tradition, any quest for the discovery of selfhood, whether as a permanent individual self or as an absolute universal self, would have to be dismissed as a delusion, a metaphysical blunder born from a failure to properly comprehend the nature of concrete experience. According to the Pali Suttas, the individual being is merely a complex unity of the five aggregates, which are all stamped with the three marks of impermanence, suffering, and selflessness. Any postulation of selfhood in regard to this compound of transient, conditioned phenomena is an instance of "personality view" (//sakkayaditthi//), the most basic fetter that binds beings to the round of rebirths. The attainment of liberation, for Buddhism, does not come to pass by the realization of a true self or absolute "1," but through the dissolution of even the subtlest sense of selfhood in relation to the five aggregates, "the abolition of all I-making, mine-making, and underlying tendencies to conceit."

The Mahayana schools, despite their great differences, concur in upholding a thesis that, from the Theravada point of view, borders on the outrageous. This is the claim that there is no ultimate difference between samsara and Nirvana, defilement and purity, ignorance and enlightenment. For the Mahayana, the enlightenment which the Buddhist path is designed to awaken consists precisely in the realization of this non-dualistic perspective. The validity of conventional dualities is denied because the ultimate nature of all phenomena is emptiness, the lack of any substantial or intrinsic reality, and hence in their emptiness all the diverse, apparently opposed phenomena posited by mainstream Buddhist doctrine finally coincide: "All dharmas have one nature, which is no-nature."

The teaching of the Buddha as found in the Pali Canon does not endorse a philosophy of non-dualism of any variety, nor, I would add, can a non-dualistic perspective be found lying implicit within the Buddha's discourses. At the same time, however, I would not maintain that the Pali Suttas propose dual//ism//, the positing of duality as a metaphysical hypothesis aimed at intellectual assent. I would characterize the Buddha's intent in the Canon as primarily pragmatic rather than speculative, though I would also qualify this by saying that this pragmatism does not operate in a philosophical void but finds its grounding in the nature of actuality as the Buddha penetrated it in his enlightenment. In contrast to the non-dualistic systems, the Buddha's approach does not aim at the discovery of a unifying principle behind or beneath our experience of the world. Instead it takes the concrete fact of living experience, with all its buzzing confusion of contrasts and tensions, as its starting point and framework, within which it attempts to diagnose the central problem at the core of human existence and to offer a way to its solution. Hence the polestar of the Buddhist path is not a final unity but the extinction of suffering, which brings the resolution of the existential dilemma at its most fundamental level.

When we investigate our experience exactly as it presents itself, we find that it is permeated by a number of critically important dualities with profound implications for the spiritual quest. The Buddha's teaching, as recorded in the Pali Suttas, fixes our attention unflinchingly upon these dualities and treats their acknowledgment as the indispensable basis for any honest search for liberating wisdom. It is precisely these antitheses -- of good and evil, suffering and happiness, wisdom and ignorance -- that make the quest for enlightenment and deliverance such a vitally crucial concern.

At the peak of the pairs of opposites stands the duality of the conditioned and the Unconditioned: samsara as the round of repeated birth and death wherein all is impermanent, subject to change, and liable to suffering, and Nibbana as the state of final deliverance, the unborn, ageless, and deathless. Although Nibbana, even in the early texts, is definitely cast as an ultimate reality and not merely as an ethical or psychological state, there is not the least insinuation that this reality is metaphysically indistinguishable at some profound level from its manifest opposite, samsara. To the contrary, the Buddha's repeated lesson is that samsara is the realm of suffering governed by greed, hatred, and delusion, wherein we have shed tears greater than the waters of the ocean, while Nibbana is irreversible release from samsara, to be attained by demolishing greed, hatred, and delusion, and by relinquishing all conditioned existence.

Thus the Theravada makes the antithesis of samsara and Nibbana the starting point of the entire quest for deliverance. Even more, it treats this antithesis as determinative of the final goal, which is precisely the transcendence of samsara and the attainment of liberation in Nibbana. Where Theravada differs significantly from the Mahayana schools, which also start with the duality of samsara and Nirvana, is in its refusal to regard this polarity as a mere preparatory lesson tailored for those with blunt faculties, to be eventually superseded by some higher realization of non-duality. From the standpoint of the Pali Suttas, even for the Buddha and the Arahants suffering and its cessation, samsara and Nibbana, remain distinct.

Spiritual seekers still exploring the different contemplative traditions commonly assume that the highest spiritual teaching must be one which posits a metaphysical unity as the philosophical foundation and final goal of the quest for enlightenment. Taking this assumption to be axiomatic, they may then conclude that the Pali Buddhist teaching, with its insistence on the sober assessment of dualities, is deficient or provisional, requiring fulfillment by a nondualistic realization. For those of such a bent, the dissolution of dualities in a final unity will always appear more profound and complete.

However, it is just this assumption that I would challenge. I would assert, by reference to the Buddha's own original teaching, that profundity and completeness need not be bought at the price of distinctions, that they can be achieved at the highest level while preserving intact the dualities and diversity so strikingly evident to mature reflection on the world. I would add, moreover, that the teaching which insists on recognizing real dualities as they are is finally more satisfactory. The reason it is more satisfactory, despite its denial of the mind's yearning for a comprehensive unity, is because it takes account of another factor which overrides in importance the quest for unity. This "something else" is the need to remain grounded in actuality.

Where I think the teaching of the Buddha, as preserved in the Theravada tradition, surpasses all other attempts to resolve the spiritual dilemmas of humanity is in its persistent refusal to sacrifice actuality for unity. The Buddha's Dhamma does not point us towards an all-embracing absolute in which the tensions of daily existence dissolve in metaphysical oneness or inscrutable emptiness. It points us, rather, towards actuality as the final sphere of comprehension, towards things as they really are (//yathabhuta//). Above all, it points us towards the Four Noble Truths of suffering, its origin, its cessation, and the way to its cessation as the liberating proclamation of things as they really are. These four truths, the Buddha declares, are //noble// truths, and what makes them noble truths is precisely that they are actual, undeviating, invariable (//tatha//, //avitatha//, //anannatha//). It is the failure to face the actuality of these truths that has caused us to wander for so long through the long course of samsara. It is by penetrating these truths exactly as they are that one can reach the true consummation of the spiritual quest: making an end to suffering.

* Part II of this essay will appear in the next BPS Newsletter.

* * * * * * * *

THE BUDDHIST PUBLICATION SOCIETY

The BPS is an approved charity dedicated to making known the Teaching of the Buddha, which has a vital message for people of all creeds. Founded in 1958, the BPS has published a wide variety of books and booklets covering a great range of topics. Its publications include accurate annotated translations of the Buddha's discourses, standard reference works, as well as original contemporary expositions of Buddhist thought and practice. These works present Buddhism as it truly is -- a dynamic force which has influenced receptive minds for the past 2500 years and is still as relevant today as it was when it first arose. A full list of our publications will be sent upon request with an enclosure of U.S. $1.00 or its equivalent to cover air mail postage. Write to:

The Hony. Secretary
BUDDHIST PUBLICATION SOCIETY
P.O. Box 61
54, Sangharaja Mawatha
Kandy Sri Lanka

or

The Barre Center for Buddhist Studies
Lockwood Road
Barre, MA 01005
Tel: (508) 355-2347

* * * * * * * *

DISTRIBUTION AGREEMENT
~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

TITLE OF WORK: Dhamma & Non-duality -- Part I (BPS Newsletter Cover Essay, No. 27, 2nd Mailing 1994)
FILENAME: ESSAY_27.ZIP
AUTHOR: Bhikkhu Bodhi
AUTHOR'S ADDRESS: Buddhist Publication Society
P.O. Box 61
54, Sangharaja Mawatha
Kandy, Sri Lanka
PUBLISHER'S ADDRESS: <same>
COPYRIGHT HOLDER: Buddhist Publication Society (1994)
DATE OF PUBLICATION: 1994
RIGHTS AND RESTRICTIONS: See paragraph below.
DATE OF DHARMANET DISTRIBUTION: December 1994
ORIGIN SITE: Access to Insight BBS, Pepperell MA * (508) 433-5847 (96:903/1)

The copyright holder retains all rights to this work and hereby grants electronic distribution rights to DharmaNet International. This work may be freely copied and redistributed electronically, provided that the file contents (including this Agreement) are not altered in any way and that it is distributed at no cost to the recipient. You may make printed copies of this work for your personal use; further distribution of printed copies requires permission from the copyright holder. If this work is used by a teacher in a class, or is quoted in a review, the publisher shall be notified of such use. See the title page of this work for any additional rights and restrictions that may apply.

It is the spirit of dana, freely offered generosity, which has kept the entire Buddhist tradition alive for more than 2,500 years. If you find this work of value, please consider sending a donation to the author or publisher, so that these works may continue to be made available. May your generosity contribute to the happiness of all beings everywhere.
~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

DharmaNet International, P.O. Box 4951, Berkeley, CA 94704-4951

[end]

FOR THE WELFARE OF MANY

by Bhikkhu Bodhi

BPS Newsletter Cover Essay #28 (3rd Mailing 1994)

Copyright 1994 Buddhist Publication Society

* * *

DharmaNet Edition 1995

This electronic edition is offered for free distribution
via DharmaNet by arrangement with the publisher.

DharmaNet International
P.O. Box 4951, Berkeley CA 94704-4951

* * *

In the hour before dawn on Wednesday, 19th October 1994, our esteemed Founding-President and Patron, Venerable Nyanaponika Mahathera, passed away peacefully at his residence, the Forest Hermitage in the Udawattakele Reserve, Kandy. His death took place on the last day of the Vassa, the annual rains retreat observed by Buddhist monks since the days of the Buddha, in the quiet of the forest he loved so much, before the screeching of the fruit bats and the chatter of the monkeys could herald the approach of dawn. Three months earlier Ven. Nyanaponika had celebrated his 93rd birthday, frail but still in remarkably good health for his advanced age. In late August, however, the wheel of aging accelerated rapidly, ushering in a combination of illnesses that ended two months later in his demise.

The passing away of Ven. Nyanaponika marks the end of an era, both in the annals of the Western encounter with Buddhism and in the history of the BPS. Among Western Buddhists he was perhaps the last survivor of what might be called the "second generation" of pioneers, comprising those who forged their initial contacts with the Dhamma during the 1920s and 1930s. Ordained as a pupil of the illustrious German elder Ven. Nyanatiloka Mahathera in 1936, Ven. Nyanaponika was for decades the seniormost Theravada Buddhist monk of Western origin in the world. On the day of his death he had just completed his 57th rains as a member of the Sangha. He was also one of the four "Great Mentors, Ornaments of the Teaching" (//maha mahopadhyaya sasanasobhana//) in the Amarapura Nikaya, the monastic fraternity to which he belonged.

Through his own writings and in his editorship of the BPS, Ven. Nyanaponika played a momentous role in shaping the expression of Theravada Buddhism appropriate for the latter half of the twentieth century. Gifted with keen intelligence, a profound grasp of the Dhamma, and extraordinary sensitivity to the needs of his fellow human beings, he endeavoured both in his personal writings and in his publication policy to articulate a vision of the Buddha's teachings that underscored its crucial relevance to humanity in the present age. The early decades of the century provided the background to this vision. In his own mature years he had witnessed two world wars (one involving the mass extermination of his own ancestral people, the European Jews), countless small-scale social conflicts, and the breakdown of existential meaning in the lives of so many thoughtful, well-intentioned people. Against this background he constantly sought to emphasize, from different angles, those aspects of the Buddha's teachings that speak most directly and meaningfully to men and women earnestly searching for clear spiritual direction. His writings, though sparse and compact in expression, constitute a veritable "Guide for the Perplexed" in this age of confusion when it often seems that the only alternative to rampant materialism and religious fundamentalism is the bewildering potpourri of cults and fads that make up the spiritual supermarket.

Ven. Nyanaponika did not pursue his aim of sharing the Dhamma by sweetening and diluting the original doctrine in order to make it more palatable. His interpretations of the Dhamma always flowed from a clear personal discernment of its innermost essence -- the Four Noble Truths and the three characteristics -- and were built upon a solid respect for the commentarial tradition that has come down from the ancient elders. He based his writings, not only upon sound and thorough scholarship, but also upon a penetrative understanding of the human condition rooted in a deep sympathy with his fellow human beings. Hence his books and essays go far beyond the repetition of stale, stereotyped formulations of the teaching. They refract the Dhamma through the prism of a highly astute Western mind shaped by the best qualities of the European intellectual heritage, presenting it in a way intended to teach, to transform, and to edify his readers at the very core of their being.

His appreciation of the Buddha's teachings was as comprehensive as it was profound, as vitally direct as it was systematic and orderly. In his view the Dhamma offers a sublime ethics that can provide a psychological basis for morality in place of a theological one. He found the teaching fully acceptable to the most critical demands of rational thought, yet capable of providing sustenance for the nourishment of our emotional life, so badly impoverished by scientific objectivism and economic consumerism. Above all, he stressed the importance of self-knowledge and inner self-transformation and the role of Buddhist meditation as a means for knowing, developing, and liberating the mind. His book //The Heart of Buddhist Meditation//, translated into seven languages, still remains today, after 33 years, the clearest, most thorough, and most convincing contemporary account of the Buddha's way of mindfulness.

The supreme expression of Ven. Nyanaponika's endeavour to share the Dhamma with others was his commitment to the work of the BPS, which he helped to found and served as its first Secretary, first President, and longtime Editor. From the inception of the BPS in 1958, Ven. Nyanaponika dedicated himself completely to the work of the Society. During the first three years of its life, in fact, the Society was quartered entirely in his study at the Forest Hermitage. During this period he himself personally shouldered a large portion of the routine paperwork, though he soon divested himself of this when Richard Abeyasekera assumed the position of General Secretary, leaving him more time to attend to the editorial side.

As Editor, he carefully examined every manuscript to ensure that BPS publications accurately reflect the spirit of the original Buddhist teachings. It was above all his sagacious guidance, his overflowing compassion, and his dedication to the Dhamma that transformed the BPS into a major Buddhist publisher bringing the teachings of the Buddha to over eighty countries around the world. Even after his retirement from the editorship (in 1984) and from the presidency (in 1988), as our Patron he continued to take an active interest in the Society's development. We always apprised him of any important decision or line of policy that required consideration, and he was always ready to offer his wise advice.

On a personal note I must state that with the passing of Ven. Nyanaponika I have lost my life's closest friend, my teacher and spiritual guide. The last ten years, during which I had the privilege to live with him and to look after him at the Forest Hermitage, were indeed a blessing hard to encounter in the round of rebirths. Yet, although we shall miss his wise and loving presence, his subtle humor and sympathetic counsel, it is not sorrow and grief that we should feel at his parting, but rather a serene joy over a noble character that embodied the most worthy human traits, and immense gratitude for a life supremely well lived for the welfare and happiness of many. By the vast merits of his life's achievements, may Ven. Nyanaponika be able to pursue his aspiration unhindered in future existences and may he attain the supreme bliss of Nibbana.

* * * * * * * *

THE BUDDHIST PUBLICATION SOCIETY

The BPS is an approved charity dedicated to making known the Teaching of the Buddha, which has a vital message for people of all creeds.

Founded in 1958, the BPS has published a wide variety of books and booklets covering a great range of topics. Its publications include accurate annotated translations of the Buddha's discourses, standard reference works, as well as original contemporary expositions of Buddhist thought and practice. These works present Buddhism as it truly is -- a dynamic force which has influenced receptive minds for the past 2500 years and is still as relevant today as it was when it first arose. A full list of our publications will be sent upon request with an enclosure of U.S. $1.00 or its equivalent to cover air mail postage. Write to:

The Hony. Secretary
BUDDHIST PUBLICATION SOCIETY
P.O. Box 61
54, Sangharaja Mawatha
Kandy Sri Lanka

or

The Barre Center for Buddhist Studies
Lockwood Road
Barre, MA 01005 USA
Tel: (508) 355-2347

* * * * * * * *

DISTRIBUTION AGREEMENT
~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

TITLE OF WORK: For the Welfare of Many (BPS Newsletter Cover Essay, No. 28, 3rd Mailing 1994)
FILENAME: ESSAY_28.ZIP
AUTHOR: Bhikkhu Bodhi
AUTHOR'S ADDRESS: Buddhist Publication Society
P.O. Box 61
54, Sangharaja Mawatha
Kandy, Sri Lanka
~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

PUBLISHER'S ADDRESS: <same>
COPYRIGHT HOLDER: Buddhist Publication Society (1994)
DATE OF PUBLICATION: 1994
RIGHTS AND RESTRICTIONS: See paragraph below.
DATE OF DHARMANET DISTRIBUTION: April 1995
ORIGIN SITE: Access to Insight BBS, Pepperell MA * (508) 433-5847 (96:903/1)

The copyright holder retains all rights to this work and hereby grants electronic distribution rights to DharmaNet International. This work may be freely copied and redistributed electronically, provided that the file contents (including this Agreement) are not altered in any way and that it is distributed at no cost to the recipient. You may make printed copies of this work for your personal use; further distribution of printed copies requires permission from the copyright holder. If this work is used by a teacher in a class, or is quoted in a review, the publisher shall be notified of such use. See the title page of this work for any additional rights and restrictions that may apply.

It is the spirit of dana, freely offered generosity, which has kept the entire Buddhist tradition alive for more than 2,500 years. If you find this work of value, please consider sending a donation to the author or publisher, so that these works may continue to be made available. May your generosity contribute to the happiness of all beings everywhere.

DharmaNet International, P.O. Box 4951, Berkeley, CA 94704-4951

[end]

TOWARDS A THRESHOLD OF UNDERSTANDING (Part I)

by Bhikkhu Bodhi

BPS Newsletter Cover Essay #30 (2nd Mailing 1995)

Copyright 1995 Buddhist Publication Society

* * *

DharmaNet Edition 1995

This electronic edition is offered for free distribution
via DharmaNet by arrangement with the publisher.

DharmaNet International
P.O. Box 4951, Berkeley CA 94704-4951

* * *

//Pope John Paul II's recent book//, Crossing the Threshold of Hope, //is a collection of reflections primarily on issues of Christian faith, but the book also features the Pope's assessment of other religions, including a short chapter on Buddhism. The Pontiff's words in this chapter are far from appreciative. The release of the book in Sri Lanka on the eve of the Pope's visit to this country this past January stirred up waves of indignation in the Buddhist community that spread as far as the Vatican. The Buddhist prelates announced that they would not attend an inter-religious meeting requested by the Pope unless he formally retracted his unfavorable remarks about Buddhism. Although on arrival the Pope tried to appease the feelings of Buddhist leaders by declaring his esteem for their religion, even quoting the Dhammapada, he fell short of proffering a full apology, and this did not satisfy the Sangha elders.//

//The following essay is intended as a short corrective to the Pope's demeaning characterization of Buddhism. It addresses the issues solely at the level of ideas, without delving into the question whether ulterior motives lay behind the Pope's pronouncements. The essay is based on an article written for a Polish publisher, Source (Katowice), which is presently compiling a book on the Buddhist response to the Pope's book.//

The Pope states that "the Buddhist tradition and the methods deriving from it have an almost exclusively negative soteriology (doctrine of salvation)." Such a view of the Buddhist teachings was widespread among Christian missionaries in Asia during the 19th century, serving to justify their evangelical incursions into the heartlands of Buddhism. Serious scholars of comparative religion have long recognized this view to be a misrepresentation, rooted, in the case of the early missionaries, partly in misunderstanding, partly in deliberate distortion. It is therefore puzzling that the present head of the Catholic Church, otherwise so well informed, should repeat these worn-out lines, particularly at a time when greater mutual understanding is expected from the leaders of different religions.

The Pope does not explain exactly why he regards Buddhist soteriology as negative. Most likely, he takes this view because the Buddhist path of deliverance does not recognize a personal God as the agent and end of salvation. Like beauty, however, what is negative and what is positive lies in the eye of the beholder, and what is negative for one may turn out to be another's supreme ideal. If one seeks an everlasting union between one's eternal soul and a creator God, then a doctrine that denies the existence of an eternal soul and a Divine Creator will inevitably appear negative. If one regards everything conditioned as impermanent and devoid of self, and seeks deliverance in Nibbana, the Deathless Element, then a doctrine of everlasting union between God and the soul will seem -- not negative perhaps -- but founded upon wishful thinking and unacceptable articles of faith. For the ordinary reader, however, the word "negative," when applied to Buddhism, will suggest something far different from a philosophically acute way of approaching the Ultimate, conjuring up pictures of a bleak doctrine of escapism aimed at personal annihilation. Behind the Pope's words we can detect echoes of the ancient texts: "There are, monks, some recluses and brahmins who charge me with being an annihilationist, saying that the recluse Gotama teaches the annihilation of an existent being. That is false misrepresentation. What I teach, in the past as also now, is suffering and the cessation of suffering" (MN 22).

Even more worrisome than the Pope's characterization of the Buddhist doctrine of salvation as negative is his contention that "the Buddhist doctrine of salvation constitutes the central point, or rather the only point, of this system." The conclusion implied by this pronouncement, left hanging silently behind the lines, is that Buddhism is incapable of offering meaningful guidance to people immersed in the problems of everyday life; it is an otherworldly religion of escape suited only for those of an ascetic bent.

While Western scholars in the past have focused upon the Buddhist doctrine of salvation as their main point of interest, the living traditions of Buddhism as practiced by its adherents reveal that this attitude, being one-sided to begin with, must yield one-sided results. The Buddhist texts themselves show that Buddhism addresses as wide a range of concerns as any other of humanity's great religions. Nibbana remains the ultimate goal of Buddhism, and is certainly "the central point" of the Dhamma, but it is by no means "the only point" for which the Buddha proclaimed his Teaching.

According to the Buddhist texts, the Dhamma is intended to promote three types of good, each by way of different but overlapping sets of principles. These three goals, though integrated into the framework of a single internally consistent teaching, enable the Dhamma to address individuals at different stages of spiritual development, with varying capacities for comprehension. The three goods are:

(i) the good pertaining to the present life (//ditthadhammattha//), i.e., the achievement of happiness and well-being here and now, through ethical living and harmonious relationships based on kindness and compassion;

(ii) the good pertaining to the future life (//samparayikattha//), i.e., a favorable rebirth within the round of existence, by practicing generosity, observing the precepts, and cultivating the mind in meditation; and

(iii) the ultimate good (//paramattha//), i.e., the attainment of Nibbana, by following the complete training defined by the Noble Eightfold Path.

For most Buddhists in their day-to-day lives, the pursuit of Nibbana is a distant rather than an immediate goal, to be approached gradually during the long course of rebirths. Until they are ready for a direct assault on the final good, they expect to walk the path for many lives within samsara, pursuing their mundane welfare while aspiring for the Ultimate. To assist them in this endeavor, the Buddha has taught numerous guidelines that pertain to ethically upright living within the confines of the world. In the Sigalovada Sutta, for example, he enumerates the reciprocal duties of parents and children, husband and wife, friends and friends, employers and employees, teachers and students, religious and laity. He made right livelihood an integral part of the Noble Eightfold Path, and explained what it implies in the life of a busy lay person. During his long ministry he gave advice to merchants on the prudent conduct of business, to young wives on how to behave towards their husbands, to rulers on how to administer their state. All such guidance, issuing from the Buddha's great compassion, is designed to promote the welfare and happiness of the world while at the same time steering his followers towards a pleasant rebirth and gradual progress towards final liberation.

Yet, while the Buddha offers a graduated teaching adjusted to the varying life situations of his disciples, he does not allow any illusion to linger about the ultimate aim of his Doctrine. That aim is Nibbana, which is not a consoling reconciliation with the world but irreversible deliverance from the world. Such deliverance cannot be gained merely by piety and good works performed in a spirit of social sympathy. It can be won only by renunciation, by "the relinquishment of all acquisitions" (//sabb'upadhipatinissagga//), including among such "acquisitions" the bodily and mental processes that we identify as our self. The achievement of this end is necessarily individual. It must be arrived at through personal purification and personal insight, as the fruit of sustained effort in fulfilling the entire course of training. Hence the Buddha did not set out to found a church capable of embracing all humanity within the fold of a single creed. He lays down a path -- a path perfect in its ideal formulation -- to be trodden by imperfect human beings under the imperfect conditions that life within the world affords. While the quest for the highest goal culminates in deliverance from the world, this same ideal "bends back" towards the world and spells out standards of conduct and a scale of values to guide the unenlightened manyfolk in their daily struggles against the streams of greed, hatred, and delusion. Nibbana remains the "chief point" and the omega point of the Dhamma. But as this goal is to be experienced as the extinction of greed, hatred, and delusion, it defines the condition for its realization as a life devoted to overcoming greed through generosity, to overcoming hatred through patience and loving kindness. and to overcoming delusion through wisdom and understanding.

Bhikkhu Bodhi

//Part II of this essay will appear in the next BPS newsletter.//

* * * * * * * *

THE BUDDHIST PUBLICATION SOCIETY

The BPS is an approved charity dedicated to making known the Teaching of the Buddha, which has a vital message for people of all creeds. Founded in 1958, the BPS has published a wide variety of books and booklets covering a great range of topics. Its publications include accurate annotated translations of the Buddha's discourses, standard reference works, as well as original contemporary expositions of Buddhist thought and practice. These works present Buddhism as it truly is -- a dynamic force which has influenced receptive minds for the past 2500 years and is still as relevant today as it was when it first arose. A full list of our publications will be sent upon request with an enclosure of U.S. $1.00 or its equivalent to cover air mail postage. Write to:

The Hony. Secretary
BUDDHIST PUBLICATION SOCIETY
P.O. Box 61
54, Sangharaja Mawatha
Kandy Sri Lanka

or

The Barre Center for Buddhist Studies
Lockwood Road
Barre, MA 01005 USA
Tel: (508) 355-2347

* * * * * * * *

DISTRIBUTION AGREEMENT
~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

TITLE OF WORK: Towards a Threshold of Understanding -- Part I (BPS Newsletter Cover Essay, No. 30, 2nd Mailing 1995)
FILENAME: ESSAY_30.ZIP
AUTHOR: Bhikkhu Bodhi
AUTHOR'S ADDRESS: Buddhist Publication Society
P.O. Box 61
54, Sangharaja Mawatha
Kandy, Sri Lanka
PUBLISHER'S ADDRESS: <same>
COPYRIGHT HOLDER: Buddhist Publication Society (1995)
DATE OF PUBLICATION: 1995
RIGHTS AND RESTRICTIONS: See paragraph below.
DATE OF DHARMANET DISTRIBUTION: November 1995
~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

ORIGIN SITE: Access to Insight (http://world.std.com/~metta/index.html)

The copyright holder retains all rights to this work and hereby grants electronic distribution rights to DharmaNet International. This work may be freely copied and redistributed electronically, provided that the file contents (including this Agreement) are not altered in any way and that it is distributed at no cost to the recipient. You may make printed copies of this work for your personal use; further distribution of printed copies requires permission from the copyright holder. If this work is used by a teacher in a class, or is quoted in a review, the publisher shall be notified of such use. See the title page of this work for any additional rights and restrictions that may apply.

It is the spirit of dana, freely offered generosity, which has kept the entire Buddhist tradition alive for more than 2,500 years. If you find this work of value, please consider sending a donation to the author or publisher, so that these works may continue to be made available. May your generosity contribute to the happiness of all beings everywhere.

DharmaNet International, P.O. Box 4951, Berkeley, CA 94704-4951

[end]

THE ESSENTIALS OF BUDDHA DHAMMA IN MEDITATIVE PRACTICE

by
Sayagyi Thray Sithu U Ba Khin

With an Essay on U Ba Khin by Eric Lerner

The Wheel Publication No. 231

First Edition 1976
Reprint 1981

Copyright 1981, 1995 Buddhist Publication Society

BUDDHIST PUBLICATION SOCIETY
KANDY Sri Lanka

* * *

DharmaNet Edition 1995

Transcription: Tom Fitton
Proofreading & Formatting: John Bullitt

This electronic edition is offered for free distribution
via DharmaNet by arrangement with the publisher.

DharmaNet International
P.O. Box 4951, Berkeley CA 94704-4951

* * * * * * * *

THE ESSENTIALS OF BUDDHA-DHAMMA IN MEDITATIVE PRACTICE

Anicca, Dukkha, Anatta -- Impermanence, suffering and Egolessness -- are the three essential characteristics of things in the Teaching of the Buddha. If you know Anicca correctly, you will know Dukkha as its corollary and Anatta as ultimate truth. It takes time to understand the three together.

Impermanence (//anicca//) is, of course, the essential fact which must be first experienced and understood by practice. Mere book-knowledge of the Buddha-Dhamma will not be enough for the correct understanding of Anicca because the experiential aspect will be missing. It is only through experiential understanding of the nature of Anicca as an ever-changing process within you that you can understand Anicca in the way the Buddha would like you to understand it. As in the days of the Buddha, so too now, this understanding of Anicca can be developed by persons who have no book-knowledge whatsoever of Buddhism.

To understand Impermanence (//anicca//) one must follow strictly and diligently the Eightfold Noble Path, which is divided into the three groups of Sila, Samadhi and Panna -- Morality, Concentration and Wisdom. Sila, or virtuous living, is he basis for Samadhi, control of the mind leading to one-pointedness. It is only when Samadhi is good that one can develop Panna. Therefore, Sila and Samadhi are the prerequisites for Panna. By Panna is meant the understanding of Anicca, Dukkha and Anatta through the practice of Vipassana, i.e., insight meditation.

Whether a Buddha has arisen or not, the practice of Sila and Samadhi may be present in the human world. They are, in fact, the common denominators of all religious faiths. They are not, however, sufficient means for the goal of Buddhism -- the complete end of suffering. In his search for the end of suffering, Prince Siddhattha, the future Buddha, found this out and worked his way through to find the path which would lead to the end of suffering. After solid work for six years, he found the way out, became completely enlightened, and //then// taught men and gods to follow the Path which would lead them to the end of suffering.

In this connection we should understand that each action -- whether by deed, word or thought -- leaves behind an active force called "Sankhara" (or "kamma" in popular terminology), which goes to the credit or debit account of the individual, according to whether the action is good or bad. There is, therefore, an accumulation of Sankhara (or Kamma) with everyone, which functions as the supply-source of energy to sustain life, which is inevitably followed by suffering and death. It is by the development of the power inherent in the understanding of Anicca, Dukkha and Anatta, that one is able to rid oneself of the Sankhara accumulated in ones own personal account. This process begins with the correct understanding of Anicca, while further accumulations of fresh actions and the reduction of the supply of energy to sustain life are taking place simultaneously, from moment to moment and from day to day. It is, therefore, a matter of a whole lifetime or more to get rid of all one's Sankhara. He who has rid himself of all Sankhara comes to the end of suffering, for then no Sankhara remains to give the necessary energy to sustain him in any form of life. On the termination of their lives the perfected saints, i.e., the Buddhas and Arahants, pass into Parinibbana, reaching the end of suffering. For us today who take to Vipassana Meditation, it would suffice if we can understand Anicca well enough to reach the first stage of an Ariya (a Noble person), that is, a Sotapanna or Stream-enterer, who will not take more than Seven lives to come to the end of suffering.

The fact of Anicca, which opens the door to the understanding of Dukkha an Anatta and eventually to the end of suffering, can be encountered in its full significance only through the Teachings of a Buddha, for so long as that Teaching relating to the Eightfold Noble Path and the Thirty-Seven Factors of Enlightenment (//bodhipakkhiya dhamma//) remains intact and available to the aspirant.

For progress in Vipassana Meditation, a student must keep knowing Anicca as continuously as possible. The Buddha's advice to monks is that they should try to maintain the awareness of Anicca, Dukkha or Anatta in all postures, whether sitting, standing, walking or lying down. Continuous awareness of Anicca and so of Dukkha and Anatta, is the secret of success. The last words of the Buddha just before He breathed His last and passed away into Mahaparinibbana were: "Decay (or Anicca) is inherent in all component things. Work our your own salvation with diligence." This is the fact the essence of all His teachings during the forty-five years of His ministry. If you will keep up the awareness of the Anicca that is inherent in all component things, you are sure to reach the goal in the course of time.

As you develop in the understanding of Anicca, your insight into "What is true of nature" will become greater and greater, so much so that eventually you will have no doubt whatsoever of the three characteristics of Anicca, Dukkha and Anatta. It is then only that you will be in a position to go ahead for the goal in view. Now that you know Anicca as the first essential factor, you would try to understand what Anicca is with real clarity as extensively as possible so as not to get confused in the course of practice or discussion.

The real meaning of Anicca is that Impermanence or Decay is the inherent nature of everything that exists in the Universe -- whether animate or inanimate. The Buddha taught His disciples that everything that exists at the material level is composed of "Kalapas." Kalapas are material units very much smaller than atoms, which die out immediately after they come into being. Each kalapa is a mass formed of the eight basic constituents of matter, the solid, liquid, calorific and oscillatory, together with colour, smell, taste, and nutriment. The first four are called primary qualities, and are predominant in a kalapa. The other four are subsidiaries, dependent upon and springing from the former. A kalapa is the minutest particle in the physical plane -- still beyond the range of science today. It is only when the eight basic material constituents unite together that the kalapa is formed. In other words, the momentary collocation of these eight basic elements of behavior makes a man just for that moment, which in Buddhism is known as a kalapa. The life-span of a kalapa is termed a moment, and a trillion such moments are said to elapse during the wink of a man's eye. These kalapas are all in a state of perpetual change or flux. To a developed student in Vipassana Meditation they can be felt as a stream of energy.

The human body is not, as it may appear, a solid stable entity, but a continuum of matter (//rupa//) co-existing with mentality (//nama//).

To know that our very body is tiny kalapas all in a state of change is to know the true nature of change or decay. This change or decay (//anicca//) occasioned by the continual breakdown and replacement of kalapas, all in a state of combustion, must necessarily be identified as Dukkha, the truth of suffering. It is only when you experience impermanence (//anicca//) as suffering (//dukkha//) that you come to the realization of the truth of suffering, the first of the Four Noble Truths basic to the doctrine of the Buddha. Why? Because when you realize the subtle nature of Dukkha from which you cannot escape for a moment, you become truly afraid of, disgusted with, and disinclined towards your very existence as mentality-materiality (//namarupa//), and look for a way of escape to a state beyond Dukkha, and so to Nibbana, the end of suffering. What that end of suffering in like, you will be able to taste, even as a human being, when you reach the level of sotapanna, a Stream-enterer, and develop well enough by practice to attain to the unconditioned state of Nibbana, the Peace within. But even in terms of everyday, ordinary life, no sooner than you are able to keep up the awareness of Anicca in practice will you know for yourself that a change is taking place in you for the better, both physically and mentally.

Before entering upon the practice of Vipassana Meditation, that is, after Samadhi has been developed to a proper level, a student should acquaint himself with the theoretical knowledge of material and mental properties, i.e., of Rupa and Nama. For in Vipassana Meditation one contemplates not only the changing nature of matter, but also the changing nature of mentality, of the thought-elements of attention directed towards the process of change going on within matter. At times the attention will be focused on the impermanence of the material side of existence, i.e., upon Anicca in regard to Rupa, and at other times on the impermanence of the thought-elements or mental side, i.e., upon Anicca in regard to Nama. When one is contemplating the impermanence of matter, one realizes also that the thought-elements simultaneous with that awareness are also in a state of transition or change. In this case one will be knowing Anicca in regard to both Rupa and Nama together.

All I have said so far relates to the understanding of Anicca through bodily feelings of the process of change of Rupa or matter, and also of thought-elements depending upon such changing processes. You should know that Anicca can also be understood through other types of feeling as well. Anicca can be contemplated through feeling:

(i) by contact of visible form with the sense organ of the eye;
(ii) by contact of sound with the sense organ of the ear;
(iii) by contact of smell with the sense organ of the nose;
(iv) by contact of taste with the sense organ of the tongue;
(v) by contact of touch with the sense organ of the body;
(vi) and by contact of mental objects with the sense organ of the mind.

Once can thus develop the understanding of Anicca through any of six sense organs. In practice, however, we have found that of all the types of feeling, the feeling by contact of touch with the component parts of the body in a process of change covers the widest area for introspective meditation. Not only that, the feelings by contact of touch (by way of friction, radiation and vibration of the kalapas within) with the component parts of the body is more evident that other types of feeling and therefore a beginner in Vipassana Meditation can come to the understanding of Anicca more easily through bodily feelings of the change of Rupa or matter. This is the main reason why we have chosen bodily feeling as a medium for quick understanding of Anicca. It is open to anyone to try other means, but my suggestion is that one should be well-established in the understanding of Anicca through bodily feeling before any attempt is made through other types of feeling.

There are ten levels of knowledge in Vipassana, namely:

(i) Sammasana: theoretical appreciation of Anicca, Dukkha and Anatta by close observation and analysis.

(ii) Udayabbaya: knowledge of the arising and dissolution of Rupa and Nama by direct observation.

(iii) Bhanga: knowledge of the rapidly changing nature of Rupa and Nama as a swift current or stream of energy; in particular, clear awareness of the phase of dissolution.

(iv) Bhaya: knowledge that this very existence is dreadful.

(v) Adinava: knowledge that this very existence is full of evils.

(vi) Nibbida: knowledge that this very existence is disgusting.

(vii) Muncitukamyata: knowledge of the urgent need and wish to escape from this very existence.

(viii) Patisankha: knowledge that the stage is now set to get detached from all conditioned phenomena (//sankhara//) and to break away from egocentricity.

(x) Anuloma: knowledge that would accelerate the attempt to reach the goal.

These are the levels of attainment which one goes through during the course of Vipassana Meditation; in the case of those who reach the goal in a short time they can be known only in retrospect. Along with one's progress in understanding Anicca, one may reach these levels of attainment, subject, however, to adjustments or help at certain levels by a competent teacher. One should avoid looking forward to such attainments in anticipation, as this will distract from the continuity of awareness of Anicca, which alone can and will give the desired reward.

Let me now deal with Vipassana Meditation from the point of view of a householder in everyday life an explain the benefit one can derive from it -- here and now -- in this very lifetime.

The initial object of Vipassana Meditation is to activate the experience of Anicca in oneself and to eventually reach a state of inner and outer calmness and balance. This is achieved when one becomes engrossed in the feeling of Anicca within. The world is now facing serious problems which threaten all mankind. It is just the right time for everyone to take to Vipassana Meditation and learn how to find a deep pool of quiet in the midst of all that is happening today. Anicca is inside of everybody. It is within reach of everybody. Just a look into oneself and there it is -- Anicca to be experienced. When one can feel Anicca, when one can experience Anicca, and when one can become engrossed in Anicca, one can at will cut oneself off from the world of ideation outside. Anicca is, for the householder, the gem of life which he will treasure to create a reservoir of calm and balanced energy for his own well-being and for the welfare of the society.

The experience of Anicca, when properly developed, strikes at the root of ones physical and mental ills and removes gradually whatever is bad in him, i.e., the causes of such physical and mental ills. This experience is not reserved for men who have renounced the world for the homeless life. It is for the householder as well. In spite of drawbacks which make a householder restless in these days, a competent teacher or guide can help a student to get the experience of Anicca activated in a comparatively short time. Once he has got it activated, all that is necessary is for him to try and preserve it; but he must make it a point, as soon as time or opportunity presents itself for further progress, to work for the stage of Bhanganana -- the third level of knowledge in Vipassana. If he reaches this level, there will be little or no problem because he should then be able to experience Anicca without much ado and almost automatically. In this case Anicca will become his base, to which all his physical and mental activities return as soon as the domestic needs of daily life for such activities are over. However, there is likely to be some difficulty for one who has not reached the stage of Bhanga. It will be just like a tug-of-war for him between Anicca within, and physical and mental activities outside. So it would be wise for him to follow the motto of work while you work, play while you play. There is no need for him to be activating the experience of Anicca all the time. It should suffice if this could be confined to a regular period, or periods, set apart in the day or night for the purpose. During this time, at least, an attempt must be made to keep the attention focused inside the body, with awareness devoted exclusively to Anicca; that is to say, his awareness of Anicca should go on from moment to moment so continuously as not to allow for the interpolation of any discursive or distracting thoughts which are definitely detrimental to progress. In case this is not possible, he will have to go back to respiration-mindfulness, because Samadhi is the key to the contemplation of Anicca. To get good Samadhi, Sila (morality) has to be perfect, since Samadhi is build upon Sila. For a good experience of Anicca, Samadhi must be good. If Samadhi is excellent awareness of Anicca will also become excellent. There is not special technique for activating the experience of Anicca other than the use of the mind, adjusted to a perfect state of balance, and attention projected upon the object of meditation. In Vipassana the object of meditation is Anicca, and therefore in the case of those used to focus their attention on bodily feelings, they can feel Anicca directly. In experiencing Anicca in relation to the body, it should first be in the area where one can easily get his attention engrossed, changing the area of attention from place to place, from head to feet and from feet to head, at times probing into the interior. At this stage, it must clearly be understood that no attention is to be paid to the anatomy of the body, but to the formations of matter -- the kalapas -- and the nature of their constant change.

If these instructions are observed, there will surely be progress, but the progress depends also on Parami (i.e., on one's dispositions for certain spiritual (qualities) and the devotion of the individual to the work of meditation. If he attains high levels of knowledge, his power to understand the three characteristics of Anicca, Dukkha and Anatta will increase and he will accordingly come nearer and nearer to the goal of the Ariya or noble saint, which every householder should keep in view.

This is the age of science. Man of today has no Utopia. He will not accept anything unless the results are good, concrete, vivid, personal, and here-and-now. When the Buddha was alive, He said to the Kalamas:

> Now look, you Kalamas. Be not misled by report or tradition or hearsay. Be not misled by proficiency in the scriptural collections, or by reasoning or logic or reflection on and approval of some theory, or because some view conforms with one's inclinations, or out of respect for prestige of a teacher.

But when you know for yourselves: these things are unwholesome, these things are blameworthy, these things are censured by the wise; these things when practiced and observed, conduce to loss and sorrow -- then you reject them. But if at any time you know for yourselves: these things are wholesome, these things are blameless, these things are praised by the intelligent; these things, when practiced and observed, conduce to welfare and happiness, then, Kalamas, do ye, having practiced them, abide.

The time-clock of Vipassana has now struck -- that is for the revival of Buddha-Dhamma Vipassana in practice. We have no doubt whatsoever that definite results would accrue to those who would with an open mind sincerely undergo a course of training under a competent teacher -- I mean results which will be accepted as good, concrete, vivid, personal, here-and-now, results which will keep them in good stead and in a state of well-being and happiness for the rest of their lives.

May all beings be happy and may Peace prevail in the world.

* * * * * * * *

U BA KHIN: AN APPRECIATION

by Eric Lerner

Over the centuries Theravada Buddhist teachings have been preserved by and large in a monastic tradition. The requisite for the true practice has been the renunciation of worldly existence for a life behind walls or in the forest. Householders were left with the observances of morality, almsgiving, and worship to accrue merit for future lives when they could actually embark on the formal path to liberation. As the sutras themselves reveal, however, this was not the case at all when the Buddha was alive and preaching. Vast numbers of householders received the teaching and the practice as well, and attained high levels of spiritual development.

In the past few decades in the Theravada Buddhist countries there has been a general revival of interest in insight meditation among the robed Sangha, and with it a spreading of the practice outside the monastery walls. This has in a sense revivified the whole outlook toward meditation, practicalizing it, in a way, by focusing on two important aspects. First, how can a man who does not have his entire life to devote to silence and contemplation approach meditation? And second, what role can the meditative discipline play in worldly life?

These problems were dealt with in great detail and with remarkable strength of imagination by one of the most important meditation masters of modern day Burma, Thray Sithu U Ba Khin. He was well known within his country as an important Government servant, for many years the Accountant General of the Union of Burma as well as the chairman of a number of important boards and commissions. At one time he held four such posts simultaneously, was the father of six children and found the time to teach meditation at the International Meditation Center in Rangoon, which was established under his guidance in the early 1950s.

The unique characteristics of his spiritual teaching stem from his situation as a lay mediation master in an orthodox Buddhist country. It was not appropriate for him to instruct monks, so all of his practice was geared specifically to lay people. He developed a powerfully direct approach to Vipassana meditation that could be undertaken in a short period of intensive practice and continued as part of householding life. His method has been of great importance in the transmission of the Dhamma to the West, because in his twenty five years at the Center he instructed scores of foreign visitors who needed no closer acquaintance with Buddhism //per se// to quickly grasp this practice of insight. Since U Ba Khin's demise in 1971 several of his commissioned disciples have carried on his work, both within and outside of Burma. Hundreds of Westerners have received the instruction from S.N. Goenka in India, Robert Hover and Ruth Denison in America and John Coleman in England. In addition, several of U Ba Khin's closest disciples still teach at the Center in Rangoon.

What is the goal of Insight Meditation? And does it differ in any way for the man whose whole life is devoted to its practice and the man who earns a living and supports others? In the broadest sense there is no difference. The end of suffering is the goal. The experience of Nibbanic Peace within, as U Ba Khin referred to it, is the aim of the practice. But also the end of suffering each moment. Harmony between beings, the end of internal tension, the manifestation of loving-kindness, the ability to perform one's daily tasks free from anger, greed and anxiety. For the lay person and the monk it is the same. The way to proceed, however, differs, at least at the outset.

U Ba Khin understood that unlike the monk, his students faced severe limitations of time to devote to their practice. Furthermore, they had to function in a completely uncontrolled environment generally hostile to proper moral conduct and good concentration, the requisites for insight. Thus he gave them a method that could withstand that pressure. In the short span of ten days, most of his pupils could experience at least a glimpse of the reality within and continue expanding their awareness with two hours daily of formal meditation after they left the Center.

This technique has three distinctive qualities to it. First is its emphasis on the development of sufficient one-pointed concentration. Concerning this, U Ba Khin wrote:

> //Samadhi// (concentration) is a way of training the mind to become tranquil, pure and strong and therefore forms the essence of religious life.... It is, in fact, the greatest common denominator of all religions. Unless one can get the mind freed from the impurities and develop it to a state of purity, he can hardly identify himself with Brahma or God. Although different methods are used by people of different religions, the goal for > the development of mind is the same, viz, a perfect state of physical and mental calm. The student at the Center is helped to develop the power of concentration to one-pointedness by encouraging him to focus his attention to a spot on the upper lip at the base of the nose, synchronizing the inward and outward motion of respiration with the silent awareness of in-breath and out-breath....In the Anapana meditation technique (i.e., that of respiration mindfulness), which is followed at the Center, one great advantage is that the respiration is not only natural, but also available at all times for the purpose of anchoring one's attention to it, to the exclusion of all other thoughts. With a determined effort to narrow down the range of thought waves, firstly, to the area around the nose with respiration mindfulness and gradually, with the wavelength of respiration becoming shorter, to a spot on the upper lip with just the warmth of the breath, there is no reason why a good student of meditation should not be able to secure the one-pointedness of mind in a few days of training.

>
> -- The Real Values of True Buddhist Meditation, pp. 5-6.

The reason for the necessity of good concentration, he felt, was that with only a limited period of time available, one's mind had to have a degree of penetrating power to really experience the inner reality on more than a conceptual level. He departed from the most traditional monastic view that concentration had to be developed to very high states requiring great time and isolation. But neither did he agree with the approach that began with little specific concentration training. He was interested in a sufficient level for the work of real insight.

The second quality of his teaching was its focus on the characteristic of //anicca//, impermanence. The Buddha described reality as having three marks, or characteristics: impermanence, unsatisfactoriness, and the absence of a real I or self. In the practice of mindfulness, observance of just what is, focusing the attention of these true marks of reality breaks down false view and weakens attachment, U Ba Khin taught that the most direct access to understanding the process of life was through awareness of impermanence, //anicca//. He felt that //anicca// is the most apparent and readily comprehensible of the three marks and that its understanding leads naturally to the others. So the observance of change, or the alteration of all phenomenon at increasingly subtler levels was the real object of his Vipassana technique.

The method itself was the systematic awareness of physical sensation in the body. As the Satipatthana Sutta of the Buddha makes clear, the process of life is identical in every aspect of the mind-body continuum. Choose whichever you like and observe it closely enough and all of reality unfolds. U Ba Khin found that the unfolding is most dramatic and rapid in the physical sensation within the body. His students were directed to place their concentrated attention on that and become sensitive to the process of change observable in the tactile reaction of heat, cold tingling, pain, numbness, pressure or whatever was there. Simply observe the changing nature of the phenomenon within you, he taught.

Continued practice of the method, as he points out in the following articles, yields spiritual and worldly results as well. He maintained that a householder could enjoy the fruit of the Nibbanic experience in this life-time. And he encouraged men not to be content with ritual practice of simple book knowledge of the teachings. In addition, the practice, as his disciple S.N. Goenka terms it, is an art of living. So convinced was U Ba Khin of the power of this method for clearing the mind that he insisted that all of his employees in the Accounts Department take a course of meditation from him and that a portion of the office be set aside for a meditation space. Mr. Robert Hover recounts the story that his teacher told him. Sometimes U Ba Khin, attending particularly unfocused meetings of government with men of more biased minds, would in the midst of heated argument rise from his chair and stand for some moments gazing out the window before returning to the conference table. His colleagues thought he was watching the world outside. In fact, U Ba Khin explained, he was busy within, reestablising mindfulness to deal with the demands of life.

* * * * * * * *

INFORMATION ON MEDITATION COURSES
BASED ON U BA KHIN'S METHOD OF INSIGHT MEDITATION (VIPASSANA)

INDIA: Shri S.N. Goenka, a personal disciple of U Ba Khin, conducts regular ten-day courses in many places throughout India. The latest program, with the localities and dates of these courses, and the conditions of participating in them, can be obtained from:

Sayagyi U Ba Khin Memorial Trust
20, Shaheed Bhagat Singh Road
Fort, Bombay 400 001 INDIA

* * *

Information on courses conducted in the USA, UK, Continental Europe, etc., by disciples of U Ba Khin (also contact addresses in many countries), may be obtained from:

Vipassana Newsletter
PO Box 9426
Berkeley, CA 94709 USA

* * *

Recently established in the USA:

Insight Meditation Society
Pleasant Street
Barre, MA 01005 USA

* * * * * * * *

THE BUDDHIST PUBLICATION SOCIETY

The BPS is an approved charity dedicated to making known the Teaching of the Buddha, which has a vital message for people of all creeds. Founded in 1958, the BPS has published a wide variety of books and booklets covering a great range of topics. Its publications include accurate annotated translations of the Buddha's discourses, standard reference works, as well as original contemporary expositions of Buddhist thought and practice. These works present Buddhism as it truly is -- a dynamic force which has influenced receptive minds for the past 2500 years and is still as relevant today as it was when it first arose. A full list of our publications will be sent upon request with an enclosure of U.S. $1.00 or its equivalent to cover air mail postage.

Write to:

The Hony. Secretary
BUDDHIST PUBLICATION SOCIETY
P.O. Box 61
54, Sangharaja Mawatha
Kandy Sri Lanka

or

The Barre Center for Buddhist Studies
Lockwood Road
Barre, MA 01005 USA
Tel: (508) 355-2347

* * * * * * * *

DISTRIBUTION AGREEMENT
~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

TITLE OF WORK: The Essentials of Buddha Dhamma in Meditative Practice
~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

(BPS Wheel Publication No. 231)
FILENAME: WHEEL231.ZIP
AUTHOR: Sayagyi Thray Sithu U Ba Khin
AUTHOR'S ADDRESS: N.A. (d. 1971)
PUBLISHER'S ADDRESS: Buddhist Publication Society
P.O. Box 61
54, Sangharaja Mawatha
Kandy, Sri Lanka
COPYRIGHT HOLDER: Buddhist Publication Society (1981, 1995)
DATE OF PUBLICATION: 1981
RIGHTS AND RESTRICTIONS: See paragraph below.
DATE OF DHARMANET DISTRIBUTION: August 1995
ORIGIN SITE: Access to Insight BBS, Pepperell MA * (508) 433-5847 (96:903/1)

The copyright holder retains all rights to this work and hereby grants electronic distribution rights to DharmaNet International. This work may be freely copied and redistributed electronically, provided that the file contents (including this Agreement) are not altered in any way and that it is distributed at no cost to the recipient. You may make printed copies of this work for your personal use; further distribution of printed copies requires permission from the copyright holder. If this work is used by a teacher in a class, or is quoted in a review, the publisher shall be notified of such use. See the title page of this work for any additional rights and restrictions that may apply.

It is the spirit of dana, freely offered generosity, which has kept the entire Buddhist tradition alive for more than 2,500 years. If you find this work of value, please consider sending a donation to the author or publisher, so that these works may continue to be made available. May your generosity contribute to the happiness of all beings everywhere.

DharmaNet International, P.O. Box 4951, Berkeley, CA 94704-4951

[end]

ESSENTIAL ADVICE ON MEDITATION

excerpts from Teachings by Sogyal Rinpoche

When you read books about meditation, or often when meditation is is presented by different groups, much of the emphasis falls on the techniques. In the West, people tend to be very interested in the "technology" of meditation. However, by far the most important feature of meditation is not technique, but the way of being, the spirit, which is callled the "posture", a posture which is not so much physical, but more to do with spirit or attitude.

It is well to recognize that when you start on a meditation practice, you are entering a totally different dimension of reality. Normally in life we put a great deal of effort into achieving things, and there is a lot of struggle involved, whereas meditation is just the opposite, it is a break from how we normally operate.

Meditation is simply a question of being, of melting, like a piece of butter left in the sun. It has nothing to do with whether or not you "know" anything about it, in fact, each time you practice meditation it should be fresh, as if it were happening for the very first time. You just quietly sit, your body still, your speech silent, your mind at ease, and allow thoughts to come and go, without letting them play havoc on you. If you need something to do, then watch the breathing. This is a very simple process. When you are breathing out, know that you are breathing out. When you breath in, know that you are breathing in, without supplying any kind of extra commentary or internalized mental gossip, but just identifying with the breath. That very simple process of mindfulness processes your thoughts and emotions, and then, like an old skin being shed, something is peeled off and freed.

Usually people tend to relax the body by concentrating on different parts. Real relaxation comes when you relax from within, for then everything else will ease itself out quite naturally.

When you begin to practice, you center yourself, in touch with your "soft spot", and just remain there. You need not focus on anything in particular to begin with. Just be spacious, and allow thoughts and emotions to settle. If you do so, then later, when you use a method such as watching the breath, your attention will more easily be on your breathing. There is no particular point on the breath on which you need to focus, it is simply the process of breathing. Twenty-five percent of your attention is on the breath, and seventy-five percent is relaxed. Try to actually identify with the breathing, rather than just watching it. You may choose an object, like a flower, for example, to focus upon. Sometimes you are taught to visualize a light on the forehead, or in the heart. Sometimes a sound or a mantra can be used. But at the beginning it is best to simply be spacious, like the sky. Think of yourself as the sky, holding the whole universe.

When you sit, let things settle and allow all your discordant self with its ungenuineness and unnaturalness to disolve, out of that rises your real being. You experience an aspect of yourself which is more genuine and more authentic-the "real" you. As you go deeper, you begin to discover and connect with your fundamental goodness.

The whole point of meditation is to get used to the that aspect which you have forgotten. In Tibetan "meditation" means "getting used to". Getting used to what? to your true nature, your Buddha nature. This is why, in the highest teaching of Buddhism, Dzogchen, you are told to "rest in the nature of mind". You just quietly sit and let all thoughts and concepts dissolve. It is like when the clouds dissolve or the mist evaporates, to reveal the clear sky and the sun shining down. When everything dissolves like this, you begin to experience your true nature, to "live". Then you know it, and at that moment, you feel really good. It is unlike any other feeling of well being that you might have experienced. This is a real and genuine goodness, in which you feel a deep sense of peace, contentment and confidence about yourself.

It is good to meditate when you feel inspired. Early mornings can bring that inspiration, as the best moments of the mind are early in the day, when the mind is calmer and fresher (the time traditionaly recommended is before dawn). It is more appropriate to sit when you are inspired, for not only is it easier then as you are in a better frame of mind for meditation, but you will also be more encouraged by the very practice that you do. THis in turn will bring more confidence in the practice, and later on you will be able to practice when you are not inspired. There is no need to meditate for a long time: just remain quietly until you are a little open and able to connect with your heart essence. That is the main point.

After that, some integration, or meditation in action. Once your mindfulness has been awakened by your meditation, your mind is calm and your perception a little more coherent. Then, whatever you do, you are present, right there. As in the famous Zen master's saying: "When I eat, I eat; when I sleep, I sleep". Whatever you do, you are fully present in the act. Even washing dishes, if it is done one-pointedly, can be very energizing, freeing, cleansing. You are more peaceful, so you are more "you". You assume the "Universal You".

One of the fundamental points of the spiritual journey is to persevere along the path. Though one's meditation may be good one day and and not so good the next, like changes in scenery, essentially it is not the experiences, good or bad which count so much, but rather that when you persevere, the real practice rubs off on you and comes through both good and bad. Good and bad are simply apparations, just as there may be good or bad weather, yet the sky is always unchanging. If you persevere and have that sky like attitude of spaciousness, without being perturbed by emotions and experiences, you will develop stability and the real profoundness of meditation will take effect. You will find that gradually and almost unnoticed, your attitude begins to change. You do not hold on to things as solidly as before, or grasp at them so strongly, and though crisis will still happen, you can handle them a bit better with more humor and ease. You will even be able to laugh at difficulties a little, since there is more space between you and them, and you are freer of yourself. Things become less solid, slightly ridiculous, and you become more light-hearted.

This document can be acquired from a sub-directory coombspapers via anonymous FTP and COOMBSQUEST gopher on the node COOMBS.ANU.EDU.AU

The document's ftp filename and the full directory path are given in the coombspapers top level INDEX file.

Date of the document's last update/modification 03/09/93
==========
This file is the work of Stan Rosenthal. It has been placed here, with his kind permission, by Bill Fear. The author has asked that no hard copies, ie. paper copies, are made.

Stan Rosenthal may be contacted at 44 High street, St. Davids, Pembrokeshire, Dyfed, Wales, UK. Bill Fear may be contacted at 29 Blackweir Terrace, Cathays, Cardiff, South Glamorgan, Wales, UK. Tel (0222) 228858 email fear@thor.cf.ac.uk. Please use email as first method of contact, if possible. Messages can be sent to Stan Rosenthal via the above email address - they will be forwarded on in person by myself - B.F.

NOTE:
You may find and odd sentence or missing information every now and again in the files. Hopefully not to frequently. This is because the files were originally written on a machine using CP/M and had to be converted to dos format. Many of the 5.25 disks were very old and had bad sectors - thus missing info.

.....Beginning of file.....

.....1 0f 4.....

FIRST ESSAY

AN INTRODUCTION TO ZEN TAOISM AND ITS PRECEPTS

In common with many things which are unusual, deep or complex, it is easier to say what Zen is not, rather than what it is. To many people, looking at it from the outside, Zen seems to be an introverted process in which the practitioner sits for hours, contemplating, daydreaming, or undergoing some form of self-indulgent analysis. To others, who perhaps have read something of the history of Zen, it is a philosophy for warriors to live by; whilst those who are concerned with cultural pursuits, probably interpret the information with which they are presented as meaning that Zen is for the intellectual elite.

As though to add to the confusion, some publications from the U.S.A. during the 1950s and 1960s described various psychadelic experiences as being 'Zen-like' (which of course, they are not). Since there was comparatively little authentic information available on Zen in the English language at that time, Zen became thought of quite commonly as being an 'alternative' or 'hippy philosophy', whereas in reality the misleading information published at that time now seems to have been an attempt to promote the use (or abuse) of hard drugs, an activity which no Zen practitioner would condone. Such misconceptions are of course common, and can occur easily with regard to any philsophy, especially since philosophy is not something which many people think about, much less, practice in their lives.

Whilst the 'hippy' picture is an inaccurate picture, painted by those who are prepared to capitalize on the deprivation needs (discussed later) ignorance or weaknesses of others, the other three pictures, the warrior, the intellectual and the meditator are not without some validity, and are in some ways each quite symbolic of Zen, for each can represent the battle we might engage in when trying to discover our own true nature. Sometimes this battle will be quite ferocious, whilst at other times it can be a stressful process, but a process which results in quietude and serenity.

In any instance though, it is a misconception to think of Zen as being no more than meditation, intellectualization or the martial arts, for it is much more than these, and more even than self-awakening; it contains a deep philosophy which can be applied to virtually any situation, and has been the source of inspiration to countless individuals and many aspects of Western as well as Eastern society. Its influences range from the creative or fine arts, to the martial arts; from drama to pottery, and from literature to philosophy.

Some early misconceptions concerning Zen probably resulted from the fact that it was the martial arts, rather than the fine or creative arts which served to introduce Zen to the west, for there has long been a worldwide interest in the various forms of combat and self-defence, such as Karate, Judo, Ninjitsu, Kendo, Iaido and Aikido, which have their roots in Zen philosophy. However, in world literature there is now a wakening appreciation of Zen poetry epitomised by the Haiku, Waka and Tanka, whilst in music the sound of the Shakuhatchi is no longer strange to our ears. The effect of Zen upon the graphic arts such as surface pattern and fashion is now well known, whilst in psychology, sociology and international politics, the Zen Taoist influence has been strengthened by the work of such eminent writers as Erich Fromm, Carl Gustav Jung, Abraham Maslow and Dag Hammarskjold to name but four, and in ceramics the work of the raku potter, Shoji Hamada, echoes the same philosophy.

To those unfamiliar with Zen, it seems strange that a single philosophy could encompass and influence so many areas of life, but to the practitioners of Zen there is nothing surprising in this at all....in fact they would probably be surprised if it were not so. This is not to imply that everything in the world has been influenced by Zen, and neither is it to claim that the most eminent people in every field of work have been influenced by Zen, but it can be said in all honesty that Zen Taoism (the oldest form of Zen) and Zen Buddhism have between them influenced very many people, who through their own application of Zen philosophy have made real their own creative potential, and made positive marks upon the world, not least of which are the outspoken and sometimes particularly courageous arguments for world peace.

Such acts as these, the deep rooted philosophy, its application to such a wide range of topics and areas of life, do indicate that Zen is unlike many other ways of life. Although it considers thoughts and words to be important, it also considers that action is important. In this respect an 'action' can be a single act, or it can be 'the act of living', which is to say 'the manner in which we live our lives'. This of course is the major difference between Zen and other philosophies or religions which frequently satisfy their adherents at a verbal, conceptual or 'public appearance' level, and which do not call upon them to show any kind of 'active' proof.

Briefly then, the proof of Zen philosophy is in its application. This does not mean that the Zen student has to prove to his teacher (called a 'Roshi', which translates literally as 'old scholar') that everything he or she does is a Zen act; what it does imply is that as the student progresses in study and application, more and more of the actions concerned with life are performed in a Zen manner. Just what it is that constitutes a 'Zen manner' is difficult to define in summary form, but in essence, it is to act according to the principles of Zen. In Zen Buddhism these fundamental principles are found in 'The Four Noble Truths' and 'The Eightfold Path' and in Zen Taoism (discussed in more detail later) they are found in the 'precepts', these being guidelines which it is believed lead the individual to realization (making real) of his or her latent potential.

There is no pretence in Zen Taoism that it is easy to apply the precepts, but this is not so much due to the precepts themselves as it is to the manipulative, inhibiting and even damaging aspects of society which they assist us in overcoming. Novice students are usually reminded when 'the going gets tough' that if the precepts were unnecessary there would be no need of Zen itself, and that if they were easy to apply there would be no need of 'sesshin' (group meetings), 'naisan' or 'dokusan' (private, confidential tutorials), and no need of private study.

Zen Taoism believes that the vast majority of human beings are born with inherent potential which is never realized (made real by being manifested or used), because it is inhibited or repressed by certain negative elements in society which we allow, frequently by default, to govern our lives. The fact that Zen never has been, and probably never will be an 'establishment philosophy' is probably due to the fact that it considers the socio/economic/ political philosophy of most establishment orders to be generated around what it terms 'self-serving motivation' (the need, which they percieve, to serve or preserve their own power or authority, rather than serving those who give them that power or authority). This self-serving motivation is believed in Zen to be a major negative element in our lives, the manipulative aspects of which are often mirrored within the smaller units of the social structure (even the family), and between individuals at all levels from the public and political to the personal and intimate.

It must be admitted however that there is a particular problem which underlies the application of Zen Taoist precepts; this is not a problem in actually applying them, but in understanding them. This problem exists for many novice Zen students, and (it must be further admitted) is due in no small part to the esoteric or mystical language in which they are expressed. There have been attempts to explain the reason for this, the most common being that Zen Taoism is iteslf essentially spiritual. This is not my own belief. Without going into considerable detail on the history of Zen Taoism, it is hopefully sufficient to say that both Lao Tzu and the Boddhidharma, who between them originated what we call Zen Taoist philosophy, were both extremely pragmatic men. This is not to say that they were without spirituality, but they were both 'of the world', being concerned more with saving humanity from itself, than from anything which might exist on a 'spiritual plane'.

Having accepted though, that the literature of Zen Taoism is more than liberally strewn with poetic, esoteric or mystical phrases, the question still remains as to why should this be the case if it is meant to be practical and useable. There is hopefully no need to explain the poetic nature of much of the literature, since that which is beautiful needs to be defended only against barberians, and one reason why so much of Zen literature is shrouded in mysticism is, in my opinion, similar to this. It is that the use of this style defended the teachings from the establishment figures and groups who might have perceived it as a danger to their own self-serving interests if it had been phrased in more obvious terms.

The second reason for the use of such language is, I believe, the inherent limitaion of language itself. Those states, processes and experiences which Zen speaks of are not of themselves mystical, but are meant to be experienced, and many of them can be understood only through experience. The Bodhidharma expressed this 'experiential' nature of Zen perfectly in the phrase,

"It is a transmission beyond words."

It is with these words in mind that the Zen student is advised to both study and practice; and the reason for this is that the realization of Zen occurs through both. Whilst a book might provide a means of study, there is no book which is a valid substitute for experience. Zen sesshin is not only a 'study group' because it also provides the opportunity for experience...and that which might be experienced in a Zen Taoist sesshin is something of the reality of the precepts. However, Zen teaches that 'experience makes knowledge real', not that experience replaces knowledge. Provided that we enter Zen 'with an empty cup', any Zen Taoist Roshi would appreciate the fact that a would be student has at least tried to discover what Zen is about..... and what it is about is described in its precepts, which are discussed in the following essays. For your convenience however, and because so many of us like to experience where we are going before we arrive (or in s/me cases, even before we set out on the journey) the precepts are listed overleaf.

Have compassion for all sentient beings,
causing them no unnecessary hurt, nor needless harm.

Refrain from needless competitiveness,
from contriving for self-advantage,
and from subjugating others.

When accepting authority over others,
k.ow also that you accept responsibility for their wellbeing.

Value true friends(ip, and fulfidd your obligations,
rather than striving with egotistical motive.

Seek liberation from the negative passi let the mind be like running water.

When you are required to act,
remember that right motive is essential to right action,
just as right thought is essential to right words.

Beware of creating burdens for yourself or others to carry.

Act with necessary distinction,
being both creative and receptive,
and transcending subject/object dichotomy.

Know that you are not the centre of the universe,
but learn to put the universe at your centre,
by accepting the instant of your being.

Seek security within yourself,
rather than in others.

Know that even great worlddy wealth,
and the accumulation of material things
are of little worth,
compared with the priceless treasures;
love, peace and the freedom to grow.

Allow yourself to be,
so that your life may become a time of blossoming.

.....End of file.....
.....1 of 4.....

This document can be acquired from a sub-directory coombspapers via anonymous FTP and COOMBSQUEST gopher on the node COOMBS.ANU.EDU.AU

The document's ftp filename and the full directory path are given in the coombspapers top level INDEX file.

Date of the document's last update/modification 03/09/93
==========
This file is the work of Stan Rosenthal. It has been placed here, with his kind permission, by Bill Fear. The author has asked that no hard copies, ie. paper copies, are made.

Stan Rosenthal may be contacted at 44 High street, St. Davids, Pembrokeshire, Dyfed, Wales, UK. Bill Fear may be contacted at 29 Blackweir Terrace, Cathays, Cardiff, South Glamorgan, Wales, UK. Tel (0222) 228858 email fear@thor.cf.ac.uk. Please use email as first method of contact, if possible. Messages can be sent to Stan Rosenthal via the above email address - they will be forwarded on in person by myself - B.F.

NOTE:
You may find and odd sentence or missing information every now and again in the files. Hopefully not to frequently. This is because the files were originally written on a machine using CP/M and had to be converted to dos format. Many of the 5.25 disks were very old and had bad sectors - thus missing info.

.....Beginning of file.....

.....2 of 4.....

SECOND ESSAY

ACTING WITH RIGHT MOTIVE:
WITHOUT CONTRIVING FOR SELF-ADVANTAGE

There are many philosophies which teach that 'actions speak louder than words', but in Zen Taoism it is both the thought or motive, and the action, which are considered important. This view was expressed by Lao Tzu, who in the sixth century before the Christian era, wrote the definitive work of Taoist philosophy, a book of eighty-one very short but expressive chapters, known as the 'Tao Te Ching'. It was Lao Tzu's only written work, and has been translated from the original classical Chinese into most mod ern languages, including over thirty English translations. In chapter thirty-seven of the Tao Te Ching, Lao Tzu tells us,

"To act without contrived intent is to act without contriving;
this is the way of nature,
and so is the way of the Tao."

This is expressed in the precepts as,
"Know that right motive is essential to right action,
just as right thought is essential to right words."

Such statements as this frequently give rise to the question, "What does Zen teach is right, and what does it teach is wrong?".
In this sense it must be admitted that Zen teaching is difficult for the uninitiated to follow, for it says very little about 'wrongdoing', but gives examples by means of which we might ponder for ourselves on such matters as right and wrong, and of course, other issues raised by the precepts.

These examples are frequently provided in the form of 'koan', which are riddles or paradoxes, sometimes being asked as questions, or simply told as stories by the roshi during a part of sesshin known as 'sosan' or 'sanzen', the period in which the roshi addresses the students as a group. Alternatively the roshi might present a koan for a student during naisan or dokusan.
In either case though, the most difficult type of koan are probably those stated simply as a story, usually taken from real life, and referred to as 'genjo koan'. The reason for this is that it is usually difficult for the student to work out what problem the story is supposed to contain. It could be, and often is the case that the problem or exercise being set by the roshi is learning to identify the relevant problem contained within the story.

An example of this is demonstrated in the story below, which refers to an aphorism mentioned in the previous essay, concerning 'right action and right motive' as these relate to a student when he or she meets the roshi for the first time. The aphorism is a cautionary tale, taken from 'Tao, the Gateless Gate', a small collection of Zen Taoist stories.

This particular story tells of a young man who wished to attend Zen sesshin. Having a friend who already did so, he asked could his friend mention to the roshi that he would like to attend. His friend agreed, but warned him,
'If the roshi agrees to meet you, for goodness sake be careful that you do not appear to think that you know too much. The roshi is really very kind, but he believes very much that we should not boast of what we know. He told a story once of an ancient teacher interviewing a new student for the first time. Well, it seems that the student kept boasting of what he already knew, but the teacher ignored his boasting, and asked the student if he would like a cup of tea.
The student held the cup, and the old teacher began to pour some tea into it.....but the student kept on boasting. The more the student boasted, the more tea was poured, until it overflowed onto the student's lap. He shouted out for the teaher to stop, and the old man did so, but said,
"When the cup is full, behold, no room for more.
So if, this mystic wisdom, you would sup, ensure that you come hither with an empty cup."

The young man laughed at the story, and thanked his friend for the warning, assuring him that he would remember it. When the time came for him to meet the teacher, he presented himself. Bowing deeply, he said, "Behold master, my cup is empty."

To his surprise, the teacher shook his head sadly, and said to him,
"Oh dear. You'd best go away, and come back when you've learnt some manners."

When the young man next saw his friend, he complained at the treatment he had received, and told him exactly what had happened. His friend replied,
"That's a real pity, but you can't say that I didn't warn you."

If this was your first introduction to a koan, do not be too concerned if you do not fully understand its implications. What it is meant to illustrate is that motive, words and actions must support each other. In the koan just cited, although the student's bow (the action) was appropriate, his words implied that he thought he both knew and understood about having 'an empty cup'. However, the fact that it was the first thing he said, illustrated to the teacher that he did not understand it well enough to apply it, for it really says that a student, especially a novice, should accept that he or she can know very little, especially compared with a teacher from whom he or she wishes to learn.

To someone who knows nothing of Zen, the roshi's response to the student in the koan might seem somewhat harsh. However the relationship between any Zen teacher and student is a special one, and what occurs in the intial interview is therefore important, especially since it provides both student and teacher with an opportunity to decide whether they feel that there is a sufficient empathy between them for the teacher/pupil relationship to be of value. This is described in a short verse from 'Tao, the Gate less Gate',

'With that same right
the student has to choose his guide, the master also makes his choice
as to whom to teach, and whom to leave alone.
For as the student seeks a master in whom he sees that which he seeks, so does the master, through his experience, seek to test the student,
and his willingness to learn."

Whilst some followers of Zen believe that it should give more instruction on what is wrong or should not be done, in general and in specific situations, others maintain that the emphasis on what is right leads naturally to 'right motive and right action', and that this in turn leads to a positive attitude towards life. In essence, 'right motive' is a motive which is directed towards harmonious interaction, whereas 'right action' is the physical manifestation or realization (making real) of that motive. There are many things like this, which Zen maintains are 'right', and these are described in the precepts by such statements as,

"Have compassion for all sentient beings,
causing them no unnecessary hurt, nor needless harm."

It should be noted that this phrase talks of 'unnecessary hurt' and 'needless harm' as though it is impossible not to cause hurt or harm. This is in fact an accurate perception of the Zen view, which is that it is very unlikely that we can go though life without causing any hurt or harm at all. For example, we may kill an animal or plant for food as a necessity of life; and many parents are hurt when their offspring leave home, even though they know logically that it is a natural occurrence. In neither case does this mean that the hurt is caused deliberately, but that it would be unrealistic to believe that it did not occur at all, just as we should accept that using a sharp instrument in order to remove a splinter might cause hurt, but is a neccessity, if only as an act of compassion which we might carry out in order to prevent an infection which might otherwise occur.

True compassion, as described in Zen Taoism, seems to be somewhat different from that described in many religions; or at least as far as its motives are concerned, for in Zen we are told that even an act which might benefit another person is not really an act of true compassion if it is carried out for reasons of self- advantage. In this instance it seems that many religions teach that compassion can 'reach beyond the grave', since they advise that our reward for such acts will be found in heaven. Zen off ers no such promise, and considers it wrong that we should be compassionate in order to 'store up credits' as though heaven is a great 'Open University of the cosmos'. The Zen Taoist view is that we should not be without compassion, because without compassion, we are incomplete; and if we have compassion as part of our being, then we will not need to contrive or think of 'being' compassionate. This is the same as saying that with regard to compassion, we should be without motive. In chapter five of the Tao Te Ching, Lao Tzu says,
"Even when he seems to act in a manner kind or benevolent, the sage is not acting with such intent, for he is amoral and indifferent."

This is not to say that the sage is indifferent to human suffering or needs, but that when he performs an act which is compassionate, he does so simply because it is his nature to do so, rather than out of any sense of morality or reward.

Zen Taoism considers that there are 'three precious attributes', namely, compassion,
economy of effort (efficiency),
and courage.
On the benefits of compassion, Lao Tzu tells us (in chapter sixty-seven),
"Only he who is compassionate can show true bravery,
and in defending, show great strength.
Compassion is the means by which mankind may be guarded and saved, for heaven arms with compassion those whom it would not see destroyed."

Whilst it is considered by some that Zen does not provide sufficient information on what it considers 'wrong', there is nevertheless a particular way in which it does in fact give us advice or direction away from what it considers to be 'wrong', or to be more precise, away from that which it considers to be harmful to the development of the individual and to society.
We are advised in the precepts to,
"Seek liberation from the negative passions of hatred, envy, greed and rage, and especially from delusion, deceit and sensory desire."

In many respects this statement relates closely to the precept referring to 'needless hurt and unnecessary harm', since Zen teaches us that hurt and harm are often caused unnecessarily or needlessly as a result of these 'needless passions'. It teaches that liberation from them reduces the likelihood of our causing hurt or harm to others. Examples of hurt being caused to others as a result of hatred and rage are obvious, but envy and greed are themselves negative emotions which can drive the unwary individual to perform acts against others which he or she might later regret. However, it is not only the hurt or harm we cause others which is the concern of Zen, but also the hurt or harm which we might cause ourselves to undergo, and it is for this reason that delusion is included as a negative passion or emotion.

As was stated in the first essay, there are many misconceptions concerning Zen, and those who do not know its reality are sometimes concerned that it may be a 'cult', similar in some way to those which gain their followers by promising such rewards as 'instant enlightenment', 'sexual liberation', or 'eternal salvation'. Of course, Zen offers no such promises (in fact it makes no promises at all) and offers no rewards. What it does do though is to offer an alternative 'path' which some, and not others. On the choice of a path, 'Tao, the Gateless Gate' offers the following advice,

"Many are the true paths which to enlightenment do lead, and there is no enlightened one who would deny the truth of any one of these.
But among those paths we must avoid are those which would deny enlightenment to those who other paths have chosen.
And also, false are they which do but seek to gratify the body, senses, or the mind, and those which do require that we abstain from worldly life.

Apart from these, we have no right by which we might deny a man his chosen path, unless his path denies our right to choose,
or can be seen to do the chooser harm.

True paths all lead to that estate which we may call enlightenment,
And all men have the gift to use it,
to pass beyond that concept of themselves, which they, or others have allowed to predetermind what they are,
and what they should remain.

Whilst illustrating well that Zen does not consider itself the only path of value, this verse does provide a warning against those paths which offer 'escape' from reality by means of 'gratification of the body, senses or the mind', or by delusion (those paths which 'do the chooser harm').

Sensory desire (literally the desire to 'feed' or gratify the senses) is considered to be a form of lust for that which we see or apprehend through any of the senses, and try to obtain with disregard for ethical considerations. This does not mean that we should cease to want or need, nor that we should ignore sensory pleasure; rather it implies that we should not allow sensory considerations to take priority over our dealing with other human beings.
It is considered in Zen that such desires, if not temper ed by ethical considerations or compassion, frequently lead to deceit, another negative emotion from which we should seek liberation. However, it is not only the senses which demand gratification, for there are many who live much of their lives in the quest to 'gratify the mind'; that is, through intellectualizing rather than allowing themselves to experience life. Another story from 'Tao, the Gateless Gate' illustrates quite amusingly how this 'quest for knowledge' might be misused (and how a Zen teacher might help a student through that 'barrier'). The type of discussion illustrated, on the nature of existences, and what and how we know of them, is known in western philosophy as 'epistomology' (theory of knowledge). This story indicates how Zen tends to deal with such matters in a non-intellectual manner.
"A master and his student stood beside a rock.
'I say that rock exists', the master said.
The student did reply, 'And I say it does not,
for the picture that we see of things perceived,
is only in the mind.'
The master then said, 'Right, take off you shoe and kick that rock which isn't there.
The student laughed and made reply,
'No thanks, what of the pain which will result?'
'How can there be a pain within the toe, from kicking nothing?' his teacher asked.
'No pain within the toe,' the student did respond,
'for, as you have taught me, the pain is in the mind.'
The master then, without ado, stamped upon the student's toe. He lifted up his injured foot, and danced about.
The master asked, 'And is the pain is in the head,
why do you hold your toe?'
The student turned to answer him, and, in turning, tripped upon the rock."

Although the teacher may have hurt the student's toe, we assume that this hurt would not last long. In Zen, this would be considered a small price to pay to drive out sush intellectual delusion. Unfortunately though, there are of many instances in real life where the hurt is'within the mind'.
We need to think only of the changing nature of intimate human relationships to realise how much hurt and harm is caused by the hedonistic desire for continued sensory pleasure, or continued 'ownership' of another person, or when in reality a relationship has ended. It is with regard to this aspect of life, the ability or inability to let go, that Zen offers what is perhaps its strongest guidance, expressed in the precepts as,
"Learn to let go of that which cannot be owned, or which is destroyed by grasping."

It is not only when a relationship has ended that we need to let go. It is believed in Zen, that even trying to demand a wanted emotion or feeling from another person when it does not exist within them at that time, can create resentment, hurt or harm, and that this can have the reverse effect to that which is desired. Many a relationship has come to an end as a result of one of the people involved trying to 'own' the other, whereas the reality of a loving relationship requires 'the freedom to love', which cannot survive if a relationship becomes a prison. The breakdown (or change for the worse)

As well as being relative to intimate human relationships, this warning is relevant also to many other situations. In a society which uses competition amongst the many in order to create greater wealth for the few, even 'winning', or continuing to win, can become a burden. There are many astute manipulaters who can perceive ambition in subordinates, and who increase their burden without a thought as to the consequences. Whilst it is not denied that many survive unscathed, there are many who feel unable to recognise such manipulation, and who suffer as a result of it. Similarly, the fact that an indivual may accept a burden, is no guaruntee that he or ashe will be able to predict the outcome of accepting that burden.

One of the aspects of Zen Taoist training which many students appreciate is that it place no burden upon them, and that what they do is of their volition. To be sure, the roshi may tell them from time to time that they are not making enough effort, but only for the benefit of the student; but there is no obligation on the part of the student even to continue to take instruction. This is quite often a reason why 'outsiders' are puzzled by the commitment of many Zen students to their 'training'; it seems st range to someone who is not commited, to appreciate what can be gained in terms of personal growth, by such a commitment.

This does not mean that everyone who attends sesshin is committed to Zen, but those for whom sesshin becomes a 'buirden', simply stop attending. Nothing more is expected of them, but those who have the courtesy to inform the roshi or 'jikijitsu' (director of ceremonies) that they are not going to return are never questioned on their decision, since to do so might create a burden for that person.

It is of corse essential in life to learn to distinguish between 'needless burdens' on the one hand, and responsibilities and obligations, on the other, and It is perhaps for this reason, the need to distinguish, that Zen advises us in the precepts to,
Act with necessary distinction".

What is meant by this statement is that in all areas of our lives we should distinguish when necessary. We are not taught that 'everything is the same', but that in some instances we should make destinctions, whilst in other instances we should not, and that we should learn to distinguish both when and how to make such distinction as is necessary. For example, Zen tells us that it is necessary ('right')to distinguish right and wrong action, and 'wrong' in the majority of instances to discriminate against or distiguish between one or another sex, or between people because of the difference in the colour of their skin. In fact, the ancient Zen Taoists (of whom more will be said later) would be delighted to see that the anti-apartheid movement has adopted the Taoist symbol (the 'Tai Chi') as their own.

Rules and regulations can and should provide us with a sense of 'belonging' or security, and they are meant to be used for that purpose. There are, for example, the rules of etiquette which enable us to feel at ease when we 'dine out', the 'rules of behaviour' which we observe when visiting someone else's home, and the different modes of behaviour which we observe when visiting, say, a church or a fairground. Conversely though, the observance of such rules should not be allowed to detract from our observance of the precepts. There is a story which illustrates well 'letting go', necessary distinction and 'creating burdens'. If it were used in sesshin as a koan, the students might be asked to consider it in the light of those precepts. This is the story.

Two Buddhist monks were walking along a country road together in meditation. They belonged to a contemplative, celibate order, which means that no unnecessary talk should take place, and that the monks (and nuns) should not have physical contact with members of the opposite sex.

As the two monks approached a stream which crossed the road, they saw a beautiful young lady trying to ford the stream. She was wearing a kimono, which was obviously new and expensive, and the monks saw that she was encountering considerable difficulties, since every time she placed her foot in the shallow stream, the hem of her kimono would be threatened by its muddy waters.

As they approached the young lady, one of the monks ignored her, but the second monk picked her up in his arms and carried her across the stream, depositing her on the furthest bank. The two monks resumed their silent stroll for some three miles or so, when the first monk suddenly said to the second,
"You shouldn't have done that!"
"Done what?" asked the second monk.
"Picked up that woman" replied the first monk.
"What woman?" asked the second monk.
"That woman you picked up and carried across the stream!" said the first monk angrily.
"Oh, that woman", replied the second monk,
"I put her down three miles back."

As it relates to 'letting go', the first monk had not let go of the rule regarding people of the opposite sex, and in scolding his friend, he was creating a burden for him, and by becoming annoyed, was creating a burden for himself to carry. Furthermore, he had not acted with necessary distinction between the rules of his sect, and the precept concerning compassion.

Such stories as these are often used as koan, and in such instances are told during sosan (mentioned earlier). This is usually followed by 'mondo', which really means 'question and answer', and is a discussion period in which the students ask questions of the teacher and each other, in order to improve or confirm their understanding of the issues raised in the koan. When it appears that the students understand the key issues they will be asked to 'offer proof'. They then prepare a statement which is mean t to prove their understanding and ability to apply those issues. Each student then gives a response to the roshi (sometimes in note form) and the roshi replies to the response in terms of both its content and form.

If a student were to describe the content of the above koan in terms of letting go, creating burdens, compassion, or necessary distinction, this would meet with the approval of the roshi as far as content is concerned, but in order for the form to be approved the answer would have to be stated in a 'Zen manner'. Just what distinguishes this manner from any other is difficult to define, but in essence the answer would be brief, and would be a generalized statement or an allegory or analogy based on the original story.

With further regard to competitiveness and necessary distinction, we should learn that there may be times when it is unavoidable in the system or society in which we live, but when there is no need to compete, we should not turn the situation into a competition, for to do so is to create an unnecessary burden both for ourselves and others. The relevant precept tells us,
"Refrain from needless competitiveness,
from contriving for self advantage,
and from subjugating others."

The reason for refraining from competitiveness unless it is a necessity, lies in the last line of this precept, namely that through competitiveness, somebody is subjugated; that by 'winning' we create at least one loser. By creating a loser in order to feed our own ego, we could be causing needless hurt or unnecessary harm to another, especially if that person is not competative by nature, and even more so if he or she is vulnerable to such pressures.

On the other hand, if our chosen working environment is competative by its very nature (as is the case in sporting activities) we are told,
"When you are required to act,
in movement be as the dragon riding the wind."
Zen has many sayings and aphorisms of this poetic nature, which it has inherited from its early Chinese origins, (known as 'Taoism'), many Zen practitioners believing that Zen is in fact a unique development of Taoist and Buddhist philosophies. The early Taoists were particularly synergic (non-competitive) and if a Taoist (or a Zenji for that matter) were to engage in a career in the market place, he or she would not 'try to sell, no matter how'.
Even in such a career as marketing, Zen teaches that we sho uld consider our motives, thoughts and actions.

It is frequently the case in marketing a product or service that the 'salesperson' is the 'subject matter expert' in that he or she knows more about what is being offered than the prospective client. In such instances, the salesperson is in authority, and with regard to such situations we are reminded,
"When accepting authority over others,
know also that you accept responsibility for their wellbeing."

In administrative or other leadership terms, this equates with ensuring the wellbeing of one's subordinates, and with regard to marketing, it advocates that giving a service to the buyer creates a long-term customer who might actually wish to make his or her subsequent purchases from us, and that this is of far greater value to the selling (and producing) organization than an order won against the real wishes of the client. This in turn equates with the precept,
"Be just and honourable, taking pride in what you do,
rather than being proud of what you have accomplished."

.....End of file.....

This document can be acquired from a sub-directory coombspapers via anonymous FTP and COOMBSQUEST gopher on the node COOMBS.ANU.EDU.AU

The document's ftp filename and the full directory path are given in the coombspapers top level INDEX file.

Date of the document's last update/modification 03/09/93
==========
This file is the work of Stan Rosenthal. It has been placed here, with his kind permission, by Bill Fear. The author has asked that no hard copies, ie. paper copies, are made.

Stan Rosenthal may be contacted at 44 High street, St. Davids, Pembrokeshire, Dyfed, Wales, UK. Bill Fear may be contacted at 29 Blackweir Terrace, Cathays, Cardiff, South Glamorgan, Wales, UK. Tel (0222) 228858 email fear@thor.cf.ac.uk. Please use email as first method of contact, if possible. Messages can be sent to Stan Rosenthal via the above email address - they will be forwarded on in person by myself - B.F.

NOTE:
You may find and odd sentence or missing information every now and again in the files. Hopefully not to frequently. This is because the files were originally written on a machine using CP/M and had to be converted to dos format. Many of the 5.25 disks were very old and had bad sectors - thus missing info.

Human relationships are of course the roots of society, and begin in infancy within the family, extend when we begin to attend school, and grow even more with friendships and intimate relationships. It is hardly surprising therefore that so many of the precepts are concerned with our relationships with our fellow human beings, and Zen Taoist sesshin (meetings) are conducted in a anner which shows that it is possible to act in an harmonious manner towards others without having to discard or subjugate our own individuality. Even within the framework of the precepts, there is ample room for individual expression, and many people benefit from the structure of sesshin to gain confidence when in discussion with others ... many people who believed themselves too shy to express an opinion 'in public' find that they can begin to do so in sesshin.

In this way, through the application of Zen Taoism, the most fundamental precept of all is being followed, but in a manner which succeeds because it occurs from within the individual, rather than through any attempt to apply external pressure. The precept being applied in such circumstances is,
"Allow yourself to be,
so that your life may become a time of blossoming."

As mentioned, this is probably the most individual or personal precept of Zen Taoism. We believe that there are many people who never realise (make real) their full potential. Sometimes this is because of adverse aspects in upbringing, sometimes because of the hazards encountered in psychological development, or it might simply be because the individual could not identify their latent potential. In this last instance, such people frequently come to 'sesshin' in order to discover for themselves, what potential they have, and continue to attend because they find that what they receive from sesshin helps them in many other ways.

We might say that such people as have just been described, discover that they have more courage than they believed, and if this is the case, they would be discovering and applying the precept,
"Seek the courage to be;
to defend yourself, and your convictions."
There are of course others who attend sesshin for other motives, or who discover a value in sesshin which they had not previously considered to be important. I am thinking here of some who are perhaps somewhat too brash, or over confident, for it is usually the case that they learn the value of listening. Similarly, there are some Zen students who express themselves, and may feel impatient when listening to someone who is not gifted in that way; but even impatient students learn that those not so adept as themselves can often have something of value to contribute. So it is that people of all descriptions, with a wide range of attributes and skills, feel that they gain considerably from sesshin and the application of Zen Taoism to everyday life, with regard to their attitude both to themselves and to others.

They are of course following the percept which tells us,
"Act in harmony with your fellow beings, with nature, and with inanimate objects."

We believe that much of the antagonism and anguish in life stems from human relationships, and that the root of many human relationship problems may be found in the ego, that is, in the attitude which many people have that the world revolves around them, or that it should have their needs as its priority. This 'ego need' manifests itself in many different ways. We can easily recognise it in situations where we might say to ourselves woefully,
"Why does it always happen to me?", as though life itself contrives against us, but it is not so easy to recognise in someone, who, with the best will in the world, complains that those whom he or she wants or tries to help, will not listen. This is not to say that it is wrong to help others who are in need (it may be remembered that there is a specific precept on compassion), but that we should know the motive from which we function, even if our action benefits others. It is important to realise though that examination of our motive for performing an act does not mean we should stop performing the act if we discover that it stems from 'wrong motive', but that we should not pretend the motive is other than it is in reality.

In Zen terms, ego-centredness is called 'puting oneself at the centre of the universe' and is considered to be a barrier to one's own development, and a negation of society and the world at large, especially if it results in our applying one set of rules to ourselves, and a different set to the rest of society. This is referred to in the precept which tells us,
"Know that you are not the centre of the universe,
but learn to put the universe at your centre."

This precept is particularly difficult for those who do not participate in Zen. What it means is that we should try to 'encompass the universe within ourselves', which implys that we should try to appreciate how even macrocosmic laws (the Tao) are reflected in the individual at microcosmic level, and within society at intermediate level. In Zen we are taught that this can be accomplished by 'right meditation' and positive interaction. Probably the most elementary form of positive interaction is friendship, and true friendship is believed to occur only if there is no egotistical motive. In this respect the precepts advise us,

"Value true friendship, and fulfil your obligations, rather than striving with egotistical motive."

Meditation is one of the cornerstones of Zen. Whilst it cannot be fully explained in only a few words, one outcome of the Zen meditative state is that the individual becomes, albeit temporarily, egoless. With continued meditative practice, the individual learns how to act 'naturally', that is, without ego, and this in turn aids positive interaction with our fellow beings. Although it is somewhat over-simplified, friendship is an elementary form of this interaction. Positive interaction and the meditative or egoless state combine in a manner which is described as 'synergic', and it is this manner which is believed to be of benefit to the individual and society. Synergy is the action of two or more elements when they are combined, the action of this combination being greater than the actions of the elements if separate. In human terms, this means that a synergic interaction between two or more people will have a greater and more positive outcome than could be produced by those people if they were not working together. The synergic response is in fact considered to be 'exponential'. This cannot easily be defined, but, for example, when two people work together in order to move a heavy object, and manage to do so when another two people of equal strength have failed, the latter action could be described as synergic. The reason for this is that the effect of synergy is to multiply rather than to add.

In order for two or more people to act in a synergic manner, or to act in a manner which produces a synergic result, they must interact with each other, rather than one acting upon the other or both acting separately. It is a Zen belief that in society, human beings are 'interactively interdependent', which means that they both act upon each other and depend upon each other. Whilst this may be difficult to comprehend, it becomes easier to understand if we think of the actions of human beings upon each other as being what makes society what it is at any time. If we act upon each other in an antagonistic manner, society itself becomes antagonistic, but if our interactions are synergic, we engender a society which is itself positive, constructive and supportive to the development of human potential.

Zen meditation has already been mentioned, and whilst it cannot be fully described here (since it must be practiced in order to be 'understood') it is hopefully worth describing in a little more detail. As has already been stated, one purpose of meditation is to 'let go of the ego', but as is quite well known, a particular function or outcome of meditation is that it reduces the unhealthy effects of stress by promoting relaxation. This is referred to in the precepts with relationship to health, the relevant precept being,
"Remember to renew the source, in order to retain good health."

Although some people consider meditation to be somewhat mystical, and although in some respects it possibly does have a mystical element, it also functions at a very basic anatomical and physiological level. The key to Zen meditation probably lies in the method of breathing which is employed. This is known as 'diaphragmatic breathing' and involves using the diaphragm as a mechanical pump in order to clear the lower lobes of the lungs of stale air. This in turn enables the breathing rate to be reduced without causing oxygen deprivation. The effect of the slowed down breathing rate is that the metabolic rate decreases, and it is this which aids the relaxation response. As physical relaxation progresses, so it seems, the conscious mind 'relaxes' or at least becomes less active. The result is both physical and psychological 'stillness'. On meditative practice, the Zen student is advised in the precepts,
"Seek neither brilliance nor the void;
just think deeply, and work hard.
When still, be as the mountain;
When in movement, be as the dragon riding the wind.
Be aware at all times,
like the tiger which only seems to sleep, and at all times let the mind be like running water."

To those who do not meditate, it may seem strange that reference to 'the dragon riding the wind' occurs now with regard to meditation, whereas it was used previously with regard to action. However, those who do participate in meditation will understand that although meditation is stillness, it is not without its own energy and that when the diaphragmatic breathing technique has become natural, the action of inhaling and exhaling diaphragmatically is smooth and continuous, and not without its own beauty.

The 'movement' referred to is that of the abdomen rising and falling in regular and rhythmic waves, without disruption. In this way it was likened (somewhat poetically) by the early Taoists to 'the dragon riding the wind'.

The statement which advises us to 'be still, as the mountain' refers to the stability of the sitting posture, for Zen teaches us that when learning meditation, the entire body must be stable so as not to distract us from the psychological aspects of the meditative process. The reference to 'deep thought and hard work' might seem somewhat paradoxical, considering the outcome of meditation, but in this instance, deep thought implies concentration on what is being undertaken, and hard work refers to the fact that meditation, although simple, is far from easy. In telling us that we should 'seek neither brilliance nor the void', the precepts are advising us that it is impossible to meditate if we are consciously thinking of what we hope to achieve, whether it is 'enlightenment' (brilliance) or 'emptiness' (the void). The 'awareness' which is mentioned in the same precept, is in fact (admittedly somewhat obscurely) described in the following line which tells us that the manner in which we should be aware should be like 'the tiger which only seems to sleep'. If we observe such an animal as the tiger when it is in sleep, it is perfectly relaxed, but at the slightest sign (sound or smell) of danger, the response of the tiger is immediate; it is as though the natural preparedness of the animal does not disrupt its equally natural sleep pattern. Finally, 'the mind like running water' is referred to quite often in Zen, and implies that even if we are distracted from what we are doing, the practice of meditation will enable us to return virtually immediately to the previous act. In meditation itself, this implies that even if our meditation is disturbed, we should be able to return to it immediately the distraction has ceased. The fact that this does occur with experienced meditators has been confirmed by the use of electroencephalographs, which record the 'rhythms' of the brain.

As will now be evident, Zen is a mixture of the pragmatic and the idealogical, of the straight-forward and the mystical, of the physical and the psychological, and the prosaic and the poetic. It is perhaps for these reasons that it appeals to such a diverse range of people as attend Zen sesshin around the world. In the two major sects of Zen Buddhism (Soto and Rinzai Zen), sesshin is conducted in a manner which conforms to Buddhist teaching, but Zen Taoist sesshin has no religious formality. This does not mean that it has no formality, but that the formality is concerned more with providing a structure or pattern within which the needs of the students can best be met. Zen Taoist sesshin usually include, or are followed by an informal 'cup of tea' and discussion on what has occured during sesshin. The Roshi does not usually stay for this discussion (since he or she knows that students feel more free to talk without their teacher being present), but since every Roshi has been (and in many respects remains) a student, it is usually a source of much pleasure to the teacher to know that so many people of different ages and background are able to converse with and help each other. Also, the sound of laughter from the dojo (place of learning) as the students relax after sesshin can also be a source of amusement to the teacher, for Zen contains much humour, and the teacher might deliberately have created a 'diversion' to amuse the students during this informal discussion period.

It is during this period that a student who wishes to talk privately with the Roshi will seek a 'private interview' (known as 'Dokusan' or 'Naisan'), and it is no exageration to describe these inimate discussions as being, on occassion 'magnificent' in their synergic effect, for there can be few, if any relationships which equal the intimacy and understanding which exists between a Zen Taoist teacher and his or her students. It is in part because of the input of energy and length of training which is necessary on the part of the Roshi to gain and retain the skills required that Zen students are told in the precepts,
"Have humility and respect;
give thanks to those from whom you learn,
or who have otherwise helped you."

Although the student is expected to have respect for the Roshi, this does not mean that students are required to accept everything which is said without question. In fact, students are advised in the precepts, "Know that there is no shame in questioning."

This precept is in fact a condensed version of an aphorism by an early Chinese philosopher, the aphorism being known as 'The Code of Scholarship'. It is, in full,
"To ask may bring a moment's shame,
but not to ask is to remain in ignorance, and so condemn oneself to lifelong shame."

Sesshin is not the only period in which the student is expected or provided with the opportunity to learn, for Zen Taoism is not a monastic order, but is very much 'in the world'. Outside of sesshin time, Zen Taoists go about their daily lives doing very much the same sort of things as anyone else. It is therefore appropriate that learning should continue outside of sesshin, and students frequently seek an opportunity of applying in their daily lives the precepts which have been learned and discussed in sesshin. For example, the student is told,
"Help those who are suffering or disadvantaged, and as you yourself become awakened, help those who seek to make real their own potential."

The term 'awakened' refers to what is hopefully an ongoing process in which the student's own potential is made real. This means that the student is in fact being advised to offer help (by providing help) for anyone who is in any way disadvantaged or suffering, but should take care not to assume the teaching role until he or she has been told by the Roshi that the student has reached a sufficient level of awakening. With further regard to helping others, and also to 'necessary distinction', the student is taught that in order to discover if one is in a position to help others it is often necessary to distinguish between the value placed on something as it relates to oneself, and the value which may be placed upon it by another person. This means that if we ourselves are not thirsty, a glass of waater would be of little or no value, but because it would be of value to someone who is thirsty, we should not consider it to be valueless. To do so would be to think of it only from our own subjective frame of reference, and this would be to think of ourselves as 'the centre of the universe'. The relevant precept tells us,
"Know that a thing or an action which may seem of little value to oneself, may be a priceless treasure to another.

As may be appreciated from this example, the precepts are not separate entities, but form an integrated structure of concepts. Although they are expressed in the form of advice, the structure they form is in reality the Zen Taoist frame of reference. A major aspect of this frame of reference is that nothing is static. This is usually expressed in a more positive manner, in the expression, 'all things are in a state of flux'. Our relationship or attitude to change is therefore considered important, and we are advised in the precepts, "Accept transience, the inevitable and the irrevocable.

Know that change exists in everything."

The term 'transience' describes the fact that nothing remains for ever, and that the nature of all things and processes is only temporary. The 'inevitable' refers to the fact that although there are some things which we can influence, there are others which we cannot influence and the 'irrevocable' is a reference to the fact that something which has already occurred cannot 'unoccur'. In total, these three terms imply that it is fruitless to wish or pretend that things are different than they are, or that something which has happened did not occur. Whilst this makes sound sense to all of us, it is quite often difficult to prevent such thoughts or wishes from arising, but Zen teaches that the reason for this is the confusion between 'wishing' and 'faith or hope'. Whilst we might have faith in a divinity, or hope that a change will occur to improve a particular state, neither of these is the same as 'wishing' in the delusory sense in which it has been used here. This sort of wishing, although understandable, is not to be recommended, especially since it can easily change to a state of pretending that things are other than they really are; and this will undoubtedly prevent us from discovering just what can and what cannot be influenced. Zen does not teach that we should merely 'allow things to happen' and neither does it teach that we should not respond to situations; but it does help us to discover (through necessary distinction) where it is appropriate to respond or attempt to influence a situation, and where it is inappropriate or without value to do so.

Inability to act, or to determine when it is appropriate to act is considered in Zen to be a barrier to our awakening, and we are told in the precepts that we should overcome these barriers. The relevant precept adtually advises,
"Negate the barriers to your awakening; discover ther positive in the negative."

This is a reference to a particularly significant Zen teaching called 'The Gateless Gates', in which we are told that there are numerous gateways in life, and that part of our purpose in individual and social development is to learn to recognise and pass through these gateways. The concept of the gateless gates is interesting because it enables us to broaden our frame of reference by realizing that some things which are usually thought of as negative can in fact be positive, or even that something which is negative can be converted to the positive. If, for example we are too shy to speak in public, this is a negative factor, and therefore something which 'inhibits our awakening'. It is like a locked gate in front of us. However, in overcoming such an inability we 'unlock' or pass through that gate. If we think of a locked gate as a barrier, an unlocked or open gate is a form of exit and entry. In this instance the same gate can act as a barrier, or an exit from or entry to a different 'mode of being', from a state where we were unable to converse in public, to a state wehre we are able to do so. A negative gate or barrier will then have been converted, by our action, into a positive gateway.

Zen does not provide a definitive list of the gateless gates, because any individual has his or her own gates through which to pass. However, there are certain 'gates' through which every individual does pass, two of these being birth and death (referred to respectively as 'the gateway to life' and 'the gateway to eternity'. Birth is considered to be the physical manifestation of our true being, and death, our return to the infinite or eternal from which we come, and in which we dwell for ever.

.....End of file.....

This document can be acquired from a sub-directory coombspapers via anonymous FTP and COOMBSQUEST gopher on the node COOMBS.ANU.EDU.AU

The document's ftp filename and the full directory path are given in the coombspapers top level INDEX file.

Date of the document's last update/modification 03/09/93
==========
This file is the work of Stan Rosenthal. It has been placed here, with his kind permission, by Bill Fear. The author has asked that no hard copies, ie. paper copies, are made.

Stan Rosenthal may be contacted at 44 High street, St. Davids, Pembrokeshire, Dyfed, Wales, UK. Bill Fear may be contacted at 29 Blackweir Terrace, Cathays, Cardiff, South Glamorgan, Wales, UK. Tel (0222) 228858 email fear@thor.cf.ac.uk. Please use email as first method of contact, if possible. Messages can be sent to Stan Rosenthal via the above email address - they will be forwarded on in person by myself - B.F.

NOTE:
You may find and odd sentence or missing information every now and again in the files. Hopefully not to frequently. This is because the files were originally written on a machine using CP/M and had to be converted to dos format. Many of the 5.25 disks were very old and had bad sectors - thus missing info.

.....Beginning of file.....
.....4 of 4.....

This aspect of Zen teaching, the existence of the positive in the negative is difficult for many people to comprehend, especially since it is also taught that both the positive and the negative (Yang and Yin) co-exist in interactive interdependency in what is termed the 'Tai Chi' (symbolised by the Yin and Yang aspects linked together in the two halves of a circle. But even more than this, it is further taught that the Tai Chi is only a way of conceptualizing the infinite or absolute which contains 'all that which is, and all that which is not'. This concept seems to be unique to Taoism and Buddhism, and it is usually only advanced students who enter

'mondo' (question and answer, or discussion) on topics such as these, and such matters are not frequently discussed during normal sesshin. The reason for this (apart from the complexities involved) is that Zen students arae not encouraged to consider abstract or mystical matters until they are quite advanced. Such matters as 'the infinite', and 'eternity', are termed 'the song of the absolute', and we are warned in the precepts, "Be diligent in your practice, and on hearing the music of the absolute,
do not be so foolish as to try to sing its song."

This statement is in fact a reference to the difference between experiential learning (learning through experience) and cognitive learning (learning through study). In meditation we lose awareness of the ego, and might sthus sometimes lose awareness of the 'self'. Although this does happen without meditation (and without Zen) for some people, it is more usual for it to occur in a meditative state. It is an essential precursor to deep meditation, and to a state or attitude known as 'kufu' (the technique beyond technique). What the student is being told in the above precept is that although such states can and do occur, they are experiential rather than cognitive, which is to say that their value is in the experience rather than thinking about or discussing the experience. If this seems vague or esoteric, it shuld be considered in the same way as or riding a bicycle, both of which improve with practice rather than with discussion. Although we usually know that this is true, many people nevertheless do discuss how they swim, cycle, paint, etc, but the reason is quite often to seek the approval or praise of others. Whilst it can be constructive to receive honest criticism, when we request it, we usually hope that it will be favourable, and we therefore need to ask ourselves what is our true motive for asking. It should not surprise us if we find that the answer is insecurity.

It is a strong Zen belief that insecurity is a major inhibiter of human development, and that the 'establishment' or ruling faction is most social structures use insecurity as a means of gaining and retaining control over their members. In brief, many people will be prepared to accept considerable lack of personal growth for the sake of security, particularly since we cannot have experienced the result of growth or development which has not yet occurred ... so it is that many of us settle for the security which results from what we believe is the 'status quo'. Zen teaches that there is no real security other than that which we can find or develop within ourselves. The advice given in the precepts is quite simply,

"Seek security within yourself,
rather than in others."

Whilst many people spend a lifetime seeking a security which in reality does not exist, others might spend their time in a tranquil way, neither seeking nor finding others. Whilst neither of these is strictly a Zen Taoist path, the latter is certainly closer to Taoist teaching than the first. However, it is a Zen Taoist teaching that although we should not strive with egotistical motive, life can be much more rewarding, both to oneself and others, if we are able to find or develop a purpose in life which has meaning for us, and if possible, to society. The precept tells us,
"Seek a meaningful purpose in what you do."

Just what is considered to be a 'meaningful purpose' is difficult to define. This again is not because of any shortcoming in Zen Taoist teaching, but because each of us has a different concept of what is meaningful, and that which is meaningful to one person, may be meaningless to another. The reason for this is that 'meaning' is subjective.

When responding to a situation, we respond, not necessarily to what it is, but to what it means to us. Similarly, finding a purpose in life, or in what we do with life, is not so much a matter of 'what life is', but what life means to us. Without a meaningful purpose we can enter what is known as the 'existential vacuum', this being a state in which existence itself is empty and without meaning. Some people mistakenly think that this is what is meant by the Buddhist term 'Nirvana', however Nirvana is not a state devoid of meaning, but a state which is beyond subjective or objective meaning, and which, if it has any meaning at all, has a meaning which is neither subjective nor objective, but is absolute. Zen Taoism believes that it is very rarely, if ever, possible to develop 'absolute meaning' during one's earthly life, since this period of our existence is material or finite, and it is the finite which exists within the infinite or absolute, rather than the reverse.

It is probably given to very few people that they develop the ability to achieve absolute meaning during their earthly lives. Such an occurrance is so rare however, that it is beyond the comprehension even of most students who have practiced for many years, and it is therefore very unlikely that discussion on this or similar matters would occur during normal sesshin unless a specific request were made to the Jikijitsu (Director of Ceremonies) by the student group. In common with other matters which might be the concern of a particular student, but possibily beyond the comprehension of the majority, such matters as this might however be a topic for dokusan or nisan.

Whilst the nature of absolute meaning might not be commonly discussed during normal sesshin, the concept of meaningful purpose in life could be a topic for sosan (a short talk or lecture given by the Roshi during sesshin) or subsequent mondo. It is believed in Zen that human beings have free will, and that this is directed in its natural state towards the provision of meaning and the development of a meaningful purpose in life. It is also believed that where this fails to occur, the will may degenerate to power or nihilistic pleasure, or directly to the existential vacuum mentioned previously. A meaningful purpose in life is therefore considered to be important to the psychological health and wellbeing of any individual. As was also stated previously, just what constitutes a meaningful purpose in life can only be determined by the individual, but Zen Taoism believes that there are three essential prerequisites to a meaningful life. Because they are essential they are known as 'the three treasures'. The relevant precept tells us also that Zen Taoism does not condemn or criticise the material aspect of our lives, provided it does not take precedence over the development of meaningful purpose in life. The precept reads,
"Know that even great worldly wealth,
and the accumulation of material things
are of little worth,
compared with the priceless treasures;
love, peace and the freedom to grow."

Such terms as 'love', 'peace' and 'the freedom to grow' serve as an example of the subjective nature of meaning, for they are meaningful to some, but possibly in different ways, and meaningless to others. However, even those people for whom such terms as these are meaningful might have extreme difficulty or reluctance in discussing or describing them. In this sense at least it is not unfair to describe Zen as being somewhat 'mystical', for the word 'mystical' is really nothing other than a term we employ to describe processes which we cannot fully comprehend through logical analysis. Whilst this is probably true of many esoteric, spiritual or affective mental processes, it is probably nowhere more true than in relationship to the Zen concept which bears the name 'Kufu', and which is probabbly the aspect of Zen which is most concerned with the realization of individual creative potential. Even those whose successful application of Zen is in the creative (or martial) arts are usually unaware of how it works, or unable to explain the process of kufu, through which it functions.

'Kufu' is described in many ways, but it is in fact a difficult state to define or describe with accuracy, and in much of the Zen literature it is refered to as,
"the technique beyond technique", or more poetically, as
"The one technique which still remains when all techniques are learnt".

In order to understand such references, it is useful to know that virtually all forms of Zen expression are very much the products of their culture and period, and that they are expressed in a manner designed to appeal to a particular 'student population'. When we also know that the particular expressions quoted immediately above were popularized in the 'Kamakura Period', the period in which the samuri warriors of Japan were beginning to express an interest in the philosophical teachings and techniques of Zen, it perhaps becomes easier to understand why so many of the best known references to 'Kufu' relate to swordsmanship and the other martial arts. The reality though is that this particular concept is probably the most wide reaching and diverse in application of all the Zen Taoist concepts, for 'Kufu' represents a particular aptitude which has a psychological and somatic (physical) manifestation which is possibly the most 'Zen' of all the Zen concepts, namely,
'Transcendence of subject/object dichotomy'.

In the precepts, this process is referred to in conjunction with both creativity and receptivity, the precept being,
"Be creative and receptive, transcending subject/object dichotomy."

Although it is not easy to explain this concept briefly, it is useful to have at least some idea of its meaning. To this end, we can think of the first part of the phrase as advising us not to forget that an essential part of the creative process is receptivity. To understand the latter part of the phrase, it is helpful to think of it in terms of its constituent elements, these being:
transcendence; to overcome or rise above dichotomy; to separate or divide into two subject; the part of speech frequently represented by 'I' object; the part of speech frequently representing what is accomplished by subject, or the person or thing to whom it is done.

Therefore (in somewhat oversimplified terms) the phrase, 'Transcendence of subject/object dichotomy' represents the ability to overcome (transcend) that which divides or separates (the dichotomy) us (the subject) from what we do, or the person or thing (the object) to which we are trying to relate.

Referring once again to the 'techniques' mentioned in the literature of Zen, and shown earlier, it should now be more apparent that Kufu itself is not a technique at all, or at least, that it is not a technique in the sense of the techniques of painting or swordsmanship, but is in fact something which we might develop 'when all techniques are learnt'; something which might enable us to reach beyond the level of technical ability (although that ability should not be belittled) to the level of creative, aesthetic or artistic accomplishment.

An area of life in which the influence of Zen has been of particular significance is creativity, as witnessed by the now quite frequent use of its philosophy of aesthetics, and adaptation of its unique visual imagery in the fine and graphic arts. Similarly, in literature, the terse, esoteric, but nevertheless hightly aesthetic nature of Zen poetry has been a considerable influence on many modern poets.

For many westerners, the word 'Zen' conjures up two pictures, one being of a person sitting deep in meditation, and the other being warriors locked in combat. These two pictures are in fact very symbolic of Zen, for both can represent the battle we might engage in when trying to discover our own true nature. Sometimes this battle will be quite ferocious, whilst at other times it can be a quiet and thoughtful process. In either case however, Zen is of course much more than either meditation or the martial arts; it contains a deep philosophy which can be applied to virtually any situation, and has been the source of inspiration to countless individuals and many aspects of Western as well as Eastern society. Its influences range from the creative or fine arts, to the martial arts; from drama to pottery, and from literature to philosophy.

It is probably the martial arts, rather than the fine or creative arts which have served to introduce Zen to the west, and today there is worldwide interest in the various forms of Karate, Judo, Ninjitsu, Kendo, Iaido and Aikido. In world literature there is now a wakening appreciation of Zen poetry epitomised by the Haiku, Waka and Tanka, whilst in music the sound of the Shakuhatchi is no longer strange to our ears. The effect of Zen upon the graphic arts such as surface pattern and fashion is well known to those with an interest in such matters, and in psychology, sociology and international politics, the Zen Taoist influence has been strengthened by the work of such eminent writers as Erich Fromm, Carl Gustav Jung, Abraham Maslow and Dag Hammarskjold to name but four. In ceramics the work of the potter Bernard Leach echos the techniques as well as the philosophy of his teacher, Shoji Hamada, the Zen potter who made rakuware famous.

To those who are unfamiliar with Zen Taoism or Zen Buddhism, it seems strange that a single philosophy could encompass and influence so many areas of life, but to the practitioners of Zen there is nothing surprising in this at all....in fact they would probably be surprised if it were not so. This is not to imply that everything in the world has been influenced by Zen, and neither is it to claim that the most eminent people in every field of work have been influenced by Zen, but it can be said in all honesty that Zen Taoism (the oldest form of Zen) and Zen Buddhism have between them influenced very many people, who through their own application of Zen philosophy have made real their own creative potential, and made a positive mark upon the world, not least of which are the outspoken and sometimes particuleative or fine arts, to the martial arts; from drama to pottery, and from literature to philosophy.

.....End of file.....
.....4 of 4.....

ÉÍÍÍ

2) To undertake the training to avoid taking things not given.
This precept goes further than mere stealing. One should avoid taking anything unless one can be sure that is intended that it is for you.

3) To undertake the training to avoid sensual misconduct.
This precept is often mistranslated or misinterpreted as relating only to sexual misconduct but it covers any overindulgence in any sensual pleasure such as gluttony as well as misconduct of a sexual nature.

4) To undertake the training to refrain from false speech.
As well as avoiding lying and deceiving, this precept covers slander as well as speech which is not beneficial to the welfare of others.

5) To undertake the training to abstain from substances which cause intoxication and heedlessness.
This precept is in a special category as it does not infer any intrinsic evil in, say, alcohol itself but indulgence in such a substance could be the cause of breaking the other four precepts.

These are the basic precepts expected as a day to day training of any lay Buddhist. On special holy days, many Buddhists, especially those following the Theravada tradition, would observe three additional precepts with a strengthening of the third precept to be observing strict celibacy. The additional precepts are:

6) To abstain from taking food at inappropriate times.
This would mean following the tradition of Theravadin monks and not eating from noon one day until sunrise the next.

7) To abstain from dancing, singing, music and entertainments as well as refraining from the use of perfumes, ornaments and other items used to adorn or beautify the person. Again, this and the next rule.

8) To undertake the training to abstain from using high or luxurious beds are rules regularly adopted by members of the Sangha and are followed by the layperson on special occasions.

Laypersons following the Mahayana tradition, who have taken a Bodhisattva vow, will also follow a strictly vegetarian diet. This is not so much an additional precept but a strengthening of the first precept; To undertake the training to avoid taking the life of beings. The eating of meat would be considered a contribution to the taking of life, indirect though it may be.

The Buddhist clergy, known as the Sangha, are governed by 227 to 253 rules depending on the school or tradition for males or Bhikkhus and between 290 and 354 rules, depending on the school or tradition for females or Bhikkhunis. These rules, contained in the Vinaya or first collection of the Buddhist scriptures,, are divided into several groups, each entailing a penalty for their breech, depending on the seriousness of that breech. The first four rules for males and the first eight for females, known as Parajika or rules of defeat, entail expulsion from the Order immediately on their breech. The four applying to both sexes are: Sexual intercourse, killing a human being, stealing to the extent that it entails a gaol sentence and claiming miraculous or supernormal powers. Bhikkhunis' additional rules relate to various physical contacts with males with one relating to concealing from the order the defeat or parajika of another. Before his passing, the Buddha instructed that permission was granted for the abandonment or adjustment of minor rules should prevailing conditions demand such a change. These rules apply to all Sangha members irrespective of their Buddhist tradition. The interpretation of the rules, however differs between the Mahayana and Theravada traditions. The Theravadins, especially those from Thailand, claim to observe these rules to the letter of the law, however, in many cases, the following is more in theory than in actual practice. The Mahayana Sangha interprets the rule not to take food at an inappropriate time as not meaning fasting from noon to sunrise but to refrain from eating between mealtimes. The fasting rule would be inappropriate, from a health angle, for the Sangha living in cold climates such as China, Korea and Japan. When one examines the reason that this rule was instituted initially, the conclusion may be reached that it is currently redundant. It was the practice in the Buddha's time for the monks to go to the village with their bowls to collect food. To avoid disturbing the villagers more than necessary, the Buddha ordered his monks to make this visit once a day, in the early morning. This would allow the villagers to be free to conduct their day to day affairs without being disturbed by the monks requiring food. Today, of course, people bring food to the monasteries or prepare it on the premises so the original reason no longer applies. As many of you would be aware, in some Theravadin countries, the monks still go on their early morning alms round, but this is more a matter of maintaining a tradition than out of necessity. Also, a rule prohibiting the handling of gold and silver, in other words - money, is considered by the Mahayana Sangha a handicap were it to be observed strictly in today's world. They interpret this rule as avoiding the accumulation of riches which leads to greed. Theravadin monks tend to split hairs on this rule as, although most will not touch coins, many carry credit cards and cheque books.

Let me now deal briefly with the Buddhist attitude to violence, war and peace. The Buddha said in the Dhammapada:

*Victory breeds hatred. The defeated live in pain. Happily the peaceful live giving up victory and defeat.(Dp.15,5) and

* Hatreds never cease by hatred in this world; through love alone they cease. This is an eternal law. (Dp.1,5)

The first precept refers to the training to abstain from harming living beings. Although history records conflicts involving the so-called Buddhist nations, these wars have been fought for economic or similar reasons. However, history does not record wars fought in the name of propagating Buddhism. Buddhism and, perhaps, Jainism are unique in this regard. His Holiness, the Dalai Lama has never suggested armed conflict to overcome the persecution and cruelty perpetrated by the Communist Chinese occupation forces. He has always advocated a peaceful and non-violent solution. Venerable Maha Ghosananda, the Supreme Patriarch of Cambodia has urged Cambodians to put aside their anger for the genocide of the Khmer Rouge and to unify to re-establish their nation. He has written:

The suffering of Cambodia has been deep.
From this suffering comes great compassion.
Great compassion makes a peaceful heart.
A peaceful heart makes a peaceful person.
A peaceful person makes a peaceful family.
A peaceful family makes a peaceful community.
A peaceful community makes a peaceful nation.
A peaceful nation makes a peaceful world.

Going back to the early history of Buddhism, Emperor Asoka, who, after a bloody but successful military campaign, ruled over more than two thirds of the Indian subcontinent, suffered great remorse for the suffering that he had caused, banned the killing of animals and exhorted his subjects to lead kind and tolerant lives. He also promoted tolerance towards all religions which he supported financially. The prevalent religions of that time were the sramanas or wandering ascetics, Brahmins, Ajivakas and Jains. He recommended that all religions desist from self praise and condemnation of others. His pronouncements were written on rocks at the periphery of his kingdom and on pillars along the main roads and where pilgrims gathered. He also established many hospitals for both humans and animals. Some of his important rock edicts stated:

1. Asoka ordered that banyan trees and mango groves be planted, rest houses built and wells dug every half mile along the main roads.

2. He ordered the end to killing of any animal for use in the royal kitchens.

3. He ordered the provision of medical facilities for humans and beasts.

4. He commanded obedience to parents, generosity to priests and ascetics and frugality in spending.

5. All officers must work for the welfare of the poor and the aged.

6. He recorded his intention to promote the welfare of all beings in order to repay his debt to all beings.

7. He honours men of all faiths.

Not all Buddhists follow the non-violent path, however. A Buddhist monk, Phra Kittiwutthi of the Phra Chittipalwon College in Thailand, is noted for his extreme right-wing views. He said that it was not a breech of the first precept to kill communists. He said that if Thailand were in danger of a communist takeover, he would take up arms to protect Buddhism. Sulak Sivaraksa, a Thai peace activist, reports in his book, "Seeds of Peace" that Phra Kittiwutthi has since modified his stance by declaring "to kill communism or communist ideology is not a sin". Sulak adds that the monk confessed that his nationalist feelings were more important than his Buddhist practice and that he would be willing to abandon his yellow robes to take up arms against communist invaders from Laos, Cambodia or Vietnam. By doing so, he said, he would be preserving the monarchy, the nation and the Buddhist religion. In contrast to the views of Phra Kittiwutthi, Sulak Sivaraksa reports that the Vietnamese monk, Thich Nhat Hanh is of the view that 'preserving Buddhism does not mean that we should sacrifice people's lives in order to safeguard the Buddhist hierarchy, monasteries or rituals. Even if Buddhism as such were extinguished, when human lives are preserved and when human dignity and freedom are cultivated towards peace and loving kindness, Buddhism can be reborn in the hearts of human beings.

In conclusion, I will briefly mention some other issues mentioned in the Syllabus.

The third precept on training in restraint of the senses includes sexuality. A Buddhist should be mindful of the possible effects on themselves and on others of improper sexual activity. This precept would include adultery because this also breeches the precept of not taking what does is not freely given. A relationship with someone who is committed to another is stealing. Similarly in cases of rape and child abuse, one is stealing the dignity and self respect of another. One is also the cause of mental pain, not to mention physical pain so one is causing harm to another living being. Therefore, such behaviour is breaking several precepts.

Marriage is not a sacrament in Buddhism as it is in other religions. Marriage is governed by civil law and a Buddhist is expected to observe the prevailing law in whatever country they live. In the Theravadin tradition, monks are prohibited by their Vinaya rules to encourage or perform a marriage ceremony. The rule states:

Should a Bhikkhu engage to act as a go-between for a man's intentions to a woman or a woman's intentions to a man, whether about marriage or paramourage, even for a temporary arrangement, this entails initial and subsequent meeting of the Sangha.

In many Theravadin countries, the couple will, following their marriage in a civil ceremony, invite the monks to their home to perform a blessing ceremony. They will offer food and other requisites to the monks and invite their family and friends to participate. In the Mahayana tradition the same rule conveys an entirely different meaning. It reads:

Should a Bhikkshu, seek to establish a conducive situation by means of which a man and a woman engage in sexual misconduct, either by himself, by order, or by means of messages, and as a result of his activities the man and woman should meet, he has committed an offence.

This rule does not preclude marriage but, rather, deals with the monk assuming the role of a procurer for immoral purposes. In Western countries, following the Christian precedent, many Mahayana monks become registered marriage celebrants so that, if called upon, a marriage ceremony can be performed in the temple. Generally, in countries where the law allows, Buddhists accept de-facto relationships. Promiscuity would be frowned upon as sexual misconduct but an ongoing relationship between two people, either within or outside of marriage would be considered moral conduct. As one of the essential Buddhist teachings is that everything is impermanent and subject to change, the irrevocable breakdown of a relationship between a couple would be understood in this light, so divorce would not be considered improper.

As far as bioethical questions are concerned, it is mainly a matter of the attitude of the different traditions or schools of Buddhism. This is tied to the concept of rebirth and when it occurs. According to the Theravadin tradition, rebirth occurs immediately upon death. The body of the deceased is no longer considered as a part of the former being, so such things as autopsies, organ transplants etcetera are allowable. In fact, many Theravadins, especially in Malaysia, encourage the donation of human organs as being the highest form of giving. Often, especially at Vesak, the celebration of the birth, enlightenment and passing away of the Buddha, blood donations are performed in the temple grounds. The Mahayana, on the other hand, believes that there is an intermediate state between incarnations, known as Antarabhava. Most people following this tradition try to avoid touching or moving the body for, at least eight hours after death. This, of course, means that the organs would by then be useless for transfer to another human being.

The Buddhist work ethic and business and professional ethics would, ideally be closely tied to respect for the environment. It is well described in E.F.Schumacher's book "Small is Beautiful":

"While the materialist is mainly interested in goods, the Buddhist is mainly interested in liberation. But Buddhism is the Middle Way and therefore in no way antagonistic to physical well being. The keynote of Buddhist economics is simplicity and non-violence. From an economist's point of view, the marvel of the Buddhist way of life is the utter rationality of its pattern - amazingly small means leading to extraordinarily satisfying results."

Ken Jones in a paper called "Buddhism and Social Action" comments: "Schumacher outlines a 'Buddhist economics' in which production would be based on a middle range of material goods (and no more), and on the other a harmony with the natural environment and its resources.

The above principles suggest some kind of diverse and politically decentralised society, with co-operative management and ownership of productive wealth. It would be conceived on a human scale, whether in terms of size and complexity or organisation or of environmental planning, and would use modern technology selectively rather than being used by it in the service of selfish interests. In Schumacher's words, 'It is a question of finding the right path of development, the Middle Way, between materialist heedlessness and traditionalist immobility, in short, of finding Right Livelihood'".

Despite the theory surrounding Buddhist business practice, greed still seems to be the order of the day in many Buddhist countries. In Thailand, a monk in the north, Acharn Ponsektajadhammo, has been leading a campaign against the environmental vandalism of the timber industry. Tree felling in Northern Thailand has caused erosion, flooding and has economically ruined small farmers. For his environmental efforts, Acharn Ponsektajadhammo has had death threats and was recently arrested. In Japan, another country where the majority of the population is Buddhist, the killing of whales and dolphins is still prevalent. Animals seem to find no place in the group culture of Japanese society.

As may be seen from the foregoing, Buddhist ethical principles are very noble and in an ideal world their practice would lead to peace and harmony but, unfortunately, as the Buddha has taught, people are motivated by greed hatred and delusion - even Buddhists.

<end of file>

ÉÍÍÍ

Not to do any evil,
To cultivate good,
To purify one's mind, This is the Teaching of the Buddhas. (2.)

THE SPREAD OF BUDDHISM

Today, Buddhism is almost extinct in India, the land of its birth. It fell victim to the Arab (Muslim) invaders, led by Muhammad Kasim, in 712 A.D.
'His soldiers slaughtered a large number of 'samanis' (sramanas) who 'shaved their heads and beards'.---- Toward the end of the 8th century the Arabs swooped down upon the prosperous monasteries of Gujarat and destroyed the Buddhist University at Valabhi on the sea coast.' (3.)
However, during the reign, in India, of Asoka (273 - 276 B.C.) Buddhism spread outside India to Sri Lanka and, possibly, Burma (Myanmar)*. It was later adopted by Cambodia, Laos and Thailand. These countries constitute the stronghold of the Theravada or the orthodox school of Buddhism. Another major school, the Mahayana or reformed school, which had its roots in India in the fifth century B.C. spread to China, Korea, Japan and Vietnam, during the early centuries of the current era. An offspring of the Mahayana school, the Vajrayana or Tantric school took root in Tibet in the seventh century and later spread to Mongolia, parts of China and currently has pockets of followers in Korea (Chingak and Chongji sects) and Japan (Shingon sect).

*' According to the tradition preserved in the Ceylonese Chronicles, two Buddhist Monks, named Sona and Uttara, were sent by Emperor Asoka to preach Buddhism in Suvarna-bhumi, which is generally identified with Burma. There is, however, no reliable evidence to show that Sona and Uttara were actually sent as missionaries by Asoka, and the location of Suvarna-bhumi is also not beyond dispute. For, while some identify it with Burma, others place it in Siam or take it to denote, broadly the whole of Indo-China. Barring the story of Uttara and Sona there is no other evidence that Buddhism flourished in Burma before the fifth century A.D.' (4.)

DIFFERENCES BETWEEN THE MAJOR SCHOOLS

The essential teachings of the Buddha are accepted as pivotal to all schools of Buddhism, however, they differ mainly on the emphasis that they place on certain aspects of the teaching and in their interpretation of the rules (Vinaya) governing the conduct of the clergy (Sangha). The Theravada school claims to adhere strictly to the original teachings of the Buddha as contained in the Pali cannon (scriptures) and it emphasises the goal of personal salvation (Arahant ideal) for the individual follower. The Sangha of the Theravada is expected to observe to the letter the 227 rules laid down in the Vinaya, which includes eating only prior to midday and refraining from handling money. Four of these 227 rules, if broken, entail expulsion of the transgressor from the monastic order. They are: killing a human being, sexual intercourse, stealing and falsely claiming supernormal powers.

The Mahayana school is less rigid in its interpretation of the Teachings and emphasises the importance of the follower's becoming a Buddha for the salvation of all living beings (Bodhisattva ideal). The Sangha observes strict vegetarianism (unlike the Theravada where vegetarianism is optional) but eat in the evening. This change of eating rules became necessary when the Teaching spread to colder climates. The post-midday meals are regarded as medicine. The rule prohibiting the handling of money has been seen by the Mahayana Sangha as impractical in today's world, and it has been reinterpreted as not amassing wealth, whilst a transgression of the celibacy rule entails only demotion in some sects of the Mahayana. Other Mahayana sects, notably in Korea and Japan, admit married priests.

The Vajrayana school is essentially the same in its interpretation of the Teachings as the Mahayana but it stresses the importance of the acceptance of a personal Guru (teacher) who initiates his followers into the, so-called, secret teachings (Tantra). Neither the Theravada nor the mainstream Mahayana schools accept that there are such things as 'secret teachings' in Buddhism. The Gelugpa sect of the Vajrayana is the only Tibetan sect that insists on the celibacy of its clergy.

BUDDHISM COMES TO AUSTRALIA

Apart from the traditional Koorie (Aboriginal) religion, which has existed on Australian soil for at least 40,000 years, it is suggested, by some anthropologists, that Buddhism may have been the earliest non-indigenous religion to reach our shores. Between 1405 and 1433, the Chinese Ming Emperors sent an armada of sixty two large ships under the command of Cheng Ho, to explore the south. Evidence exists that several ships of this armada landed on the Aru islands, 480 kilometres north of Arnhem Land, but whether they set foot on the mainland is not confirmed. Professor A.P.Elkin seems convinced that certain Koorie practices such as the belief in reincarnation, psychic phenomena and mental cultivation can only be explained in the light of early contacts with the Orient. Unfortunately, no hard evidence exists to support his hypothesis.(5.)

In 1882, a ship called the "Devonshire" arrived in Mackay, Queensland, where two hundred and seventy five Sri Lankans were landed. Two days later, another two hundred and twenty five Sri Lankans disembarked at Burnett, to be met by an angry group of 'Anti-Coolie Leaguers' who pelted stones at them. This violence was met with retaliation by the Sri Lankans who drew knives to protect themselves. This racist encounter later came to be known as the 'Battle of Burnett'.(6.) A certain Bastion Appo is recorded as having sworn an oath on a 'Buddhist Bible' when bringing assault charges against an Australian in a Mackay Court in 1885. This 'Buddhist Bible' is thought to have been a Buddhist textbook which the Sri Lankans had brought with them. (7.)

During the 1890's, almost five hundred Sri Lankans, mainly pearlers, settled on Thursday Island and established the first Buddhist temple in Australia. It is thought to have occupied the site where the post office now stands. All that remains to remind us of this Buddhist community are two Bodhi trees (Ficus religiosa) descendants of the original tree under which the Buddha sat, when he attained Enlightenment, more than 2,500 years ago. Despite his minor flirtation with Buddhism, it was Alfred Deakin who introduced the Immigration Restriction Bill in 1901 which was the forerunner of the notorious White Australia Policy. (8.) This heralded the decline of Buddhism in Australia for the next fifty years.

It was not until the early 1950's, inspired by the visit of the American born Buddhist nun, Dhammadinna, that the Buddhist Society of New South Wales was formed under the Presidency of Leo Berkeley, a Dutch born Sydney businessman. This society is the oldest Buddhist organisation extant in Australia. Its membership was and still is comprised mainly of people of Anglo-European ethnic background.

In November, 1960, a lineage holder in the Chinese Cha'an (Zen) sect arrived in Sydney, where he stayed until the end of 1971. He was the famous master Hsuan Hua. (9.) He gained the impression that there were no Buddhists among the local Chinese community as he was largely ignored and, was, at one stage, on the verge of starvation due to the lack of support. At the end of 1961, he left for California, where, with the support of his many followers he established a monastic centre known as the 'City of Ten Thousand Buddhas'.

It was not until the 1970's and 1980's that true ethnic Buddhism made its appearance and became firmly established in New South Wales.

THE ETHNIC BUDDHIST COMMUNITIES OF NEW SOUTH WALES

The Burmese

In 1987, Sydney's small Burmese community rented a cottage at North Parramatta to serve as a temporary Buddhist Vihara (monk's residence and place of worship) as the first step towards establishing a permanent Burmese temple in the Sydney area. The Abbot, Venerable Sayadaw U Zagarabhivamsa, took up residence there in January, 1988. He is a highly respected teacher and scholar, being formerly a professor at Nalanda Buddhist Institute in India. In 1989, larger premises were purchased by the Burmese Buddhist Society at Merrylands, also in the Parramatta district from where it currently conducts its activities.
Many of the local Burmese community are middle class professionals, some of Chinese ethnic background, who were expelled by Ne Win during one of his purges of non-ethnic Burmese.

The Chinese

On January 23rd, 1972, Eric Liao, a Chinese businessman, formed the Chinese Buddhist Society of Australia. Initially, he invited Venerable Somaloka to conduct services in a garage adjacent to his home. With the assistance of Bill Jong, another businessman, he acquired more central and suitable premises in Dixon Street, in Sydney's Chinatown district. This newly established temple in Dixon Street was later named "Prajna Temple". A tragic fire destroyed the premises on November 14th, 1985. All that remained after the fire was the statues of Sakyamuni Buddha, Kwan Yin Bodhisattva, Ksitigarbha Bodhisattva and approximately one thousand books, including the Tripitaka (Buddhist canonical literature). The abbot of the temple, Venerable Sik Chee Ming, and his supporters later re-established the temple at Hornsby, a northern Sydney suburb. In 1989, premises in Dixon Street, vacated by the Chinese See Yup Society, were acquired and the central Chinese community, again, has a place of worship.

The form of Mahayana Buddhism followed by most Chinese and, indeed, the Vietnamese, is a fusion of Cha'an (Zen) and Pure Land (Messianic Buddhism). As Paul Croucher (10) observes:
'The elemental Chinese religion is, of course, a kind of nature polytheism, onto which aspects of Confucianism, Taoism, and Buddhism have been grafted. The Chinese brought with them a syncretic blend of beliefs and practices in which the demarcations were ill-defined and the influence of Buddhism only mild. As in China, those who identified themselves with Buddhism probably amounted to no more than one per cent of the population. Most were content to wear 'a Confucian crown, a Taoist robe, and Buddhist sandals', and when pressed had some difficulty in describing the religion they practised.'

Although a small number of the Chinese Buddhist community in Sydney is very devout, the greater number is quite pragmatic regarding religion and regard it as solely of use in rites of passage. A monk who eschews non- Buddhist practices amongst his congregation is Venerable Tsang Hui, who arrived in Australia from Taiwan in 1977. In 1979, from a rented house in Redfern, an inner city suburb, he established the Hwa Tsang Monastery. Being a qualified school teacher as well as a Buddhist monk, he employed the 'skilful means' of attracting young people to the Monastery by conducting classes in academic subjects. The monastery later moved to Greenacre, where regular religious services were conducted and later to a second location at Homebush, where a new monastery has been built. In addition to conducting religious observances, the monastery continues to attract many high school students to its daily classes in Buddhism, chemistry, Chinese language, English, general science, physics and mathematics. Due to these special classes, many of the students gained places at Sydney's universities and have later graduated to the professions. As an outcome of these Buddhist students attending the universities, joined by overseas students studying in Australia, university Buddhist societies were formed in the early eighties. The first student society was the University of New South Wales Buddhist Society, also known as UNIBUDS, which was founded, in 1981, with Venerable Tsang Hui's support. It was followed a year later by the formation of the Sydney University Buddhist Society. The proposed development for the recently opened Hwa Tsang Monastery at Homebush, in the Strathfield Municipality, created a furore among some of the older Australian residents of the district. Although figures are not available for the Strathfield Municipality alone, the 1986 Commonwealth Census reveals that in the Inner West Region of Sydney, of which the Strathfield Municipality forms a part, 10,513 residents are of Asian ethnic background - a not insignificant number. (11) An intensive letterboxing campaign under the names of H.J.Heath and Marie Heath J.P. (next door neighbours of Ven.Tsang Hui) stated:

If this type of development is allowed in A2 Class residential area your street may be next, or even the back garden next door. The value of your home, your most valuable asset will be eroded. What some people or organisations would like to put in our garden suburb!!! It WAS called "Oasis in the West" in our Council's Centenary year JUST three years ago!!! I know that most of us have worked all our adult life to own a place of our own to relax in, in the evening of our life. Not to be faced with a fight to maintain our peace and tranquillity and protect our landscape and view, and the sight of native birds feeding in our garden and nestled in the many trees, that would be affected by this proposed development. Please act now, you have only until 4 p.m. Friday 19th August, to protest in writing. You may view the plan and model as suggested in the letter (from the Council), but your own intelligence will paint in your mind's eye this hideous development to a back garden landscape. (12)

The Strathfield Municipal Council, noted as one of the most conservative councils in Sydney, despite receiving 890 individual letters and a petition containing 840 signatures supporting the application and a petition, organised by the Heaths, containing 273 signatures opposing it, unanimously rejected the Monastery's development application, so an appeal was lodged with the Land and Environment Court of N.S.W.. Venerable Tsang Hui stressed that should the Buddhist community accede to the Council's decision without putting up a fight, the door would be open to all other Councils to reject development applications for religious premises from the minor religions. Mr. Justice Cripps of the N.S.W. Land and Environment Court ruled, on June the first, 1989, in favour of the Monastery's development application. He stated in his judgement:

It became plain that the intensity of the opposition to the subject development was, in some instances, influenced by the circumstance that the religious institution was a Buddhist monastery. All residents were at pains to volunteer that their views were not "racist" and I accept their assessment of their objections. The question of what does or does not qualify as "racism" was not explored in the proceedings but because the word was bandied about during the course of the hearing, I feel bound to express my opinion that I do not think any objector is a "racist" just because he or she objects to a Buddhist temple functioning next door or in the near vicinity. It was stated explicitly by some and was implicit in the evidence of others that the opposition would not have been so intense had a comparable Christian establishment been proposed. By way of illustration, none of the residents seems to be duly concerned about the activities of the Lutheran church (nearly opposite). It is made clear by the evidence, there is a need for the monastery in the sense that there are many people who wish to congregate as Buddhists. The subject land is zoned residential but churches and educational establishments are permissible in residential areas. There are many churches in residential areas in Sydney, some of which have functions and undertake activities more intrusive than the subject proposal. It is, of course, not possible to speculate on the attitude Mr. and Mrs. Heath will have to the development if it proceeds. I am, however, confident that most other people who have expressed hostility to the concept will, with the passage of time, accept the monastery in the same way they presently accept the Lutheran church. (13.)

Reluctant to accept the umpire's decision, the Heath's formed an organisation called 'Strathfield Overdevelopment Saviours (S.O.S.)' which enlisted the support of the local State Member of Parliament, Paul Zammit, who possibly saw political mileage in siding with racists. He requested the Council to seek further legal advice in the hope that an appeal could be lodged against the judgement. In a letter to the Town Clerk, he wrote:

I therefore respectfully request Council to urgently call an extra-ordinary Council meeting to discuss this matter in the hope that a second legal opinion be obtained with the full knowledge of certain inconsistencies and possible moral turpitude that have come to light. Should Council decide to proceed to hold this meeting I strongly urge that S.O.S., on behalf of the residents, attend this meeting. (14.)

A copy of this letter was circulated to the local residents. When Ven.Tsang Hui's solicitor queried Zammit regarding his allegation of Immoral turpitude', he suggested that he suspected that the signatures on the Monastery's petition were faked. He withdrew this comment after it was suggested that a defamation action could result unless he did. The Town Clerk wrote to the N.S.W. Minister for Local Government and Planning, Mr.Hay, requesting that he overturn the Court's decision. The Minister replied:

I have noted the Council's views on the development, however, the council has presented its case to the Land and Environment Court and I have no power to overrule decisions of the court. It is therefore inappropriate for me to meet with the council to discuss the issues. Should the council wish to pursue the proposal further within the court, it should seek further legal advice. (15.)

The Council's 'further legal advice' was that there were no grounds for an appeal. Many councils and citizens of Australia still seem slow or resistant to accepting the policy of multi- culturalism. This causes much hurt, not to mention expense, in our new citizens and causes them to feel that one law applies to old Australians whilst the new have a constant battle for the acceptance of their lifestyles and culture.

The Hwa Tsang Monastery is not alone in facing trials and tribulations with Councils and local residents. The Taiwan based Fo Kwang Shan organisation, is currently constructing a huge multi-million dollar complex on a ten hectare site at Wollongong, south of Sydney. After a minor battle with the Wollongong City Council over its increasing the originally agreed price for the land, (16.) a bitter newspaper debate ensued in the 'Letters to the Editor' column. Fortunately, they had the support of the then Lord Mayor, Alderman Frank Arkell, who was also the local State Member of Parliament, so they are currently proceeding with the project which will comprise three prayer halls, two meditation halls, twenty classrooms, a dining hall for 500 people as well as sleeping quarters. Fo Kwang Shan also maintains centres in Hong Kong and in Los Angeles. This latter centre was the venue for the 16th Conference of the World Fellowship of Buddhists in 1988, the first time that it was held outside Asia.

Another ethnic Chinese religious group, whose members are mainly refugees from the Indo-Chinese countries, has constructed a temple at Bonnyrigg, west of Sydney, which is one of the largest in Australia. This is the Confucianist, Buddhist cum Taoist lay organisation, the Australian-Chinese Buddhist Society. Future plans involve the construction of a school for the young and a retirement village for the elderly. This temple is one of the few serving the Indo-Chinese community which is completely privately funded.

The Khmer (Cambodians)

Resulting from the genocide wrought on the Cambodian people by Pol Pot and his Khmer Rouge henchmen and the consequent invasion and occupation of Cambodia by the armed forces of the Peoples Republic of Vietnam, many refugees fled to the freedom of Thailand. These people, who, under the fanatical policies of the Khmer Rouge, were forced to labour for sixteen hours a day with little food, had lost all of their possessions. Many of their relatives and friends, especially the educated, the professionals and the monks, had been slaughtered. They looked to the compassionate countries of the 'West' for resettlement so that they could resume what was left of their shattered lives. Australia accepted many of these industrious people and the various Governments provided some assistance in their resettlement. Buddhism is central to the lifestyle of the Khmer people and their fondest wish, after their arrival in Australia was to have a Buddhist monk to minister to their spiritual and social needs. Due to the genocide, very few monks survived to satisfy this need. In the mid 1980's, the Venerable Long Sakkhone, a Cambodian Buddhist monk arrived to take up residence in Sydney. The community rented a rather run-down cottage in Fairfield, a Western suburb of Sydney, to serve as a temporary monk's residence and temple. The then Minister for Housing in the N.S.W.

Government, the Hon.Frank Walker, later arranged for the lease of a tract of land adjacent to a large shopping Plaza at Bonnyrigg to the Khmer Community of N.S.W. for the purpose of constructing a community centre and temple. Construction of the first stage of this Cambodian centre, comprising a community hall, office and amenities block as well as a monk's residence has already been completed and was officially opened by the Premier of N.S.W., the Hon.Nick Greiner on Saturday the 10th of February, 1990. The temple building, itself, being large, complex and expensive will have to wait for another day. The Khmer community is divided politically, with some supporting Prince Norodom Sihanouk (FUNCINPEC), others Son San (KPNLF), whilst a small number support the Vietnamese 'puppet' government of Hun Sen, however, they are united in their devotion to Theravadin Buddhism and, irrespective of how poor their circumstances in their new country, they generously support the temple and the religion generally. One would imagine that, in the light of the horrific experiences suffered by the Khmer community prior to their arrival in Australia, psychosis would be prevalent. Such is not the case, however. The Khmer people attribute this to their devotion to the teachings of the Buddha and are thus accepting of change, sorrow and their karmic circumstances.

The Koreans:

During the past 600 years, Buddhism has undergone turmoil in Korea. Cha'an (Zen) Buddhism was introduced from China in 372 A.D. and fused with the indigeonous Shamanism. (17.) The Choson kings, who ruled from 1392 until Japan annexed Korea in 1910, favoured Neo-Confucianism and ruthlessly suppressed Buddhism, forcing it out of the cities and towns and confining the temples to the remote mountains. During the Japanese occupation, Buddhism again gained favour but the celibate monks were forced to marry. Following liberation in 1945, the main sect, Chogye, re-instituted celibacy for its clergy whilst several of the minor sects persisted with married priests. Following the Korean war, Korea came under American influence and an influx of Christian missionaries, especially of the aggressive fundamentalist variety, invaded Korea. What was formerly a Buddhist stronghold, now sees half of its population following Christianity. The results of this tumultuous period in Korean history has, to a significant degree, manifested itself amongst the Korean Buddhist migrants in Australia. Early in the 1980's, the Korean Dharmakaya Society was formed at Summer Hill, a western suburb of Sydney. In 1984, a monk, Venerable Jin Sang Sunim, arrived from Korea and premises were leased at Earlwood to serve as a residence and temporary temple, known originally as Hong Boep Sa and later renamed Dharma Sa. Venerable Jin Sang left Australia early in 1985 and was replaced by Venerable Jang San Sunim, who arrived on the first of April, 1985. An uneasy relationship developed between the monk and the Committee of the temple. By October, the dissent had become so untenable that the Venerable Jang San was forced to leave the temple, together with those members of the congregation who remained loyal to him. By December, 1985, a new Korean temple, Bul Kwang Sa, was established at Summer Hill with Venerable Jang San as its Abbot. His visa expired early in 1986 and he returned to Korea. After returning to Australia in January, 1988, as a permanent resident, he resumed his duties of ministry to the spiritual needs of the Korean community at the Bul Kwang Temple. The Committee of the Korean Dharmakaya Society later sponsored a Bhikshuni (female monk), Venerable Jung O Sunim, in October, 1986, to take over as resident spiritual teacher. Again, conflict arose between Jung O Sunim and the temple committee and she was dismissed in September, 1988. Many of her supporters severed their connection with the Korean Dharmakaya Society and established yet another temple, Kwan Eum Sa, at Belmore, an inner Western suburb, with Ven.Jung O Sunim as its presiding abbot. Yet another Bhikshuni, Venerable Ja Young Sunim, arrived in 1989 to serve the needs of the Korean Dharmakaya Society. The Society has since vacated its Earlwood premises and established itself at Campsie, Sydney's main centre of Korean migrants. Meanwhile, trouble arose at the Bul Kwang Temple at Summer Hill. An assistant monk, Venerable Dok Jong Sunim had joined Venerable Jang San. The President felt that, as he and the committee were meeting the expenses of the temple, the monks should confine their activities to performing ceremonies and all major decisions should be vested in the committee. The situation became so tense that Venerable Jang San formed the opinion that the temple was serving more as a Korean social club, providing a venue for Koreans to meet and discuss issues back home. He felt that they had no real interest in practising Buddhism so he returned to Korea in mid 1989, leaving Venerable Dok Jong to conduct the religious ceremonies. Soon afterwards Venerable Dok Jong Sunim also departed, leaving the Bul Kwang Temple without any monks to serve the congregation. Many people in the Korean Buddhist community feel a deep sense of shame over the turbulent history of Korean Buddhism in Australia. Moves have been initiated by the new committee of the Dharma Sa Temple (Korean Dharmakaya Society) to unite the three temples and to resolve the past differences which have been so damaging to the progress of Korean Buddhism in Australia. With a spirit of goodwill the Korean community is striving for reconciliation and, hopefully, they will leave in the past what belongs in the past and will firmly establish the Korean Buddhist tradition in their new home. Won Buddhism, a fairly recent evangelical sect from Korea, is currently establishing itself in Sydney. A nun from this order arrived in 1990. Won Buddhism is a fusion of Son (Zen) and Confucianism and has, as its object of worship, a circle, symbolising the Void which 'contains everything and is perfect' (7), rather than the traditional Buddha image. Won Buddhism is celebrating the centenary of the birth of its founder, the Venerable Master Sotaesan, in 1991.

The Laotians:

The Lao society is inseparable from Buddhism - they have been Buddhist for nearly a thousand years. 95% of the country are rice farmers and rural life revolved around the village Wat (temple) where the monk acted as teacher, doctor and spiritual adviser. Throughout the feudal and colonial periods, the Sangha - the order of monks - remained the main institution in the country. The monks were held in tremendous esteem as moral and spiritual arbiters as well as the most learned of the community. (19.) In 1975, the Pathet Lao defeated the army of the royalist Buddhist monarchy and many Lao people fled from the communist tyranny across the Thai border. Many have since settled in Australia. The community divided into two factions - one supporting the former monarchy and the other, feeling dominated by the educated middle class, wishing to follow an independent path. In the mid eighties, the Lao refugees welcomed the arrival of their first monks to serve the spiritual needs of their community. The Lao Community Advancement Co-operative, the pro-monarchist group, purchased a two storeyed premises at Cabramatta West, known as Wat Prayort Keo Dhammananaram, to serve as a temporary residence for their monks and a meeting place for religious observances. They were later granted, by the N.S.W. Government, the lease on some land at Bonnyrigg for the purpose of, eventually, establishing a temple and community centre. The Foundation Stone Laying Ceremony was held on Sunday, 20th of August, 1989 and construction is scheduled to commence early in 1990. For many years the independent Lao Association of N.S.W., rented premises on the Hume Highway at Cabramatta as a temple and residence for their Abbot, Ven.Thongsoun Phantha-Oudom and their monks. The temple, known as Wat Buddhalavarn later became independent from the Lao Association and the Abbot was appointed as President. Early in 1988, a cottage was purchased to serve as a temporary Vihara (residence and temple) until land for a temple could be acquired. Moves were made in 1988 to unite the two Lao temples but, although the monks from both temples strongly supported it, suspicions about the motives for the merger still lingered amongst the laity, especially those from Wat Buddhalavarn, and such a conjunction now seems more remote than ever. The occasional combined ceremonies, that occurred before the attempted merger, have now completely ceased.

The Malaysians:
June, 1985 saw the arrival of Venerable Mahinda, who had a long association with both the Buddhist Missionary Society (B.M.S.) in Kuala Lumpur and the Singapore Buddhist Mission, on a one month missionary lecture tour of the eastern States of Australia. Whilst here, he realised the fertile ground ready for cultivating the Dhamma (the Buddha's teaching). An application was lodged, prior to his return to Malaysia, for his permanent residence visa. This was granted and he returned in July, 1986. He was appointed Bikkhu (monk) in Charge of the Hock Cheng See Buddhist Vihara at Ambarvale, a suburb of Campbelltown, south of Sydney. This Vihara had previously been purchased by some monks from Malacca, Malaysia and the trustees had invited Ven.Mahinda to use it as his residence. It was in August, 1986, that Venerable Mahinda suggested that an Australian Buddhist Mission could be set up on similar lines to the B.M.S. and the Singapore Buddhist Mission. During its formative years the Mission has organised several meditation retreats, Buddhist Youth Camps with participants from several ethnic groups including Australian born, Burmese, Cambodian, Malaysians, Sri Lankans and Vietnamese. The aim of the camps was not only to plant the seeds of Dhamma so that future Bodhi trees might grow but to promote mutual understanding and friendship among the diverse groups who make up our multi-cultural Australian community. In 1989, the Mission sponsored the two year visit to Australia of Ven.Acharn Yantra, a famous Thai meditation master and, in 1990, is sponsoring the visit of a senior Sri Lankan monk to minister to Sydney's small Sri Lankan community. The Mission's main aim is to complement rather than to duplicate the activities already being so ably performed by the other Buddhist organisations.

The Sri Lankans:
On the 9th of May, 1971, Venerable Ratmalane Somaloka, a Sri Lankan born monk, arrived in Sydney to become the first permanent resident member of the Buddhist Sangha in Australia. He ministered mainly to Buddhists of European ethnic origin. In May, 1973, the Australian Buddhist Vihara was opened at Katoomba, in the Blue Mountains, west of Sydney. This was the first Buddhist temple in New South Wales and the culmination of a dream of Venerable Somaloka and his devotees. Despite the optimism which greeted the founding of Australia's first Buddhist Vihara, since then, all has not been a bed of roses. A sign on the gate of the Vihara, "Private Property", is a significant indicator of its policies. Despite the Sri Lankan origins of Venerable Somaloka, the local Sri Lankan Buddhist community was discouraged from visiting the Vihara. It was only after the arrival of Venerable Pemananda, another monk from Sri Lanka, who was invited to assist in the activities of the Vihara, that the Sri Lankan community was granted limited access. The Bhikkhu (monk) who followed Ven.Pemananda's stay, Ven.Sugananda, was most unimpressed with the exclusiveness of the Vihara's policies and threatened to leave unless visitors were granted freer access. Some Blue Mountain's residents who wished to study the Dhamma (the Buddha's teachings) and to practice meditation claim that they were actively discouraged from attending the Vihara. As the result of an alleged breach of a major Vinaya rule by Somaloka, many of the original supporters have since withdrawn from its activities. Currently, the majority of Sri Lankan Buddhists, who follow the Theravadin school, attend the Thai temple or "the Australian Buddhist Mission.

The

Thais:

In 1975, a magnificent Victorian house, now known as Wat Buddharangsee, was purchased in the inner city suburb of Stanmore. The opening ceremony, on Vesak Day, 25th of May, 1975, was performed by His Royal Highness, Crown Prince Vajiralongkorn, in the presence of His Highness Ven.Somdet Phra Nyanasamvara, the Buddhist Patriarch and ten visiting Bhikkhus (monks) from Thailand. Although Wat Buddharangsee is essentially a Thai monastery, Ven.Phra Khru Sukumaphirak, the abbot, has ensured that it serve the needs of the Lao, Khmer, Malaysian and Sri Lankan communities as well as a significant group of Anglo-Europeans who regularly attend the nightly meditation sessions. Wat Buddharangsee has proved to be one of the most popular Buddhist meeting places, in the true spirit of multiculturalism, in the Sydney area.
Such has been its success, that it has rapidly become too small to adequately serve its large congregation so, a large tract of land was purchased at Leumeah, south of Sydney, where a traditional Thai-style forest monastery, Wat Pa Buddharangsee, was opened in May, 1988. The Stanmore premises has been retained to serve the needs of the inner city Buddhist community.

The Tibetans

Sydney's Tibetan community, numbering less than twenty, must constitute, perhaps, the smallest of the ethnic groups, yet, Tibetan Buddhist organisations make up one third of the many Buddhist organisations in Sydney. Tibetan Buddhism attracts many followers of Anglo-European background. Many of the local Tibetans were formerly Buddhist monks either in Tibet or in India following the Chinese occupation so they are often called upon to serve as teachers or translators for visiting lamas. Many of the Anglo-European followers have joined with the Tibetan community in protests at the Chinese genocide and persecution of the Tibetan clergy. The Tibetans are saddened and disappointed with the Australian Government's neglect of the plight of their country, preferring not to offend the Beijing regime lest it affect our trade. They have a strong supporter in the N.S.W. Attorney General, John Dowd, however, who has often bravely spoken out about the complacency, of both the Liberal and Labour Parties, about the Tibetan situation.

The Vietnamese

At the end of 1979, a group of Vietnamese refugees met at a restaurant in Glebe, an inner city suburb, and formed the Vietnamese Buddhist Society of N.S.W. The first religious ceremonies organised by the Society were held at the Thai temple, Wat Buddharangsee, at Stanmore. Premises at Lakemba, a western suburb, were later leased by the Society, to serve as a temporary temple, prior to the arrival of their monk, Venerable Thich Bao Lac. Problems with the local council and racism from the local residents forced the Society to seek Government assistance to find a more suitable place and to establish a more permanent place of worship. Land at Bonnyrigg, an outer western suburb, was leased to the Society by the Housing Commission of N.S.W.. Today, on this land stands the first, purpose built, Buddhist temple in metropolitan Sydney, the Phap Bao Temple. A large statue of the Bodhisattva Kwan Yin forms a dominating landmark at the entrance to the temple. Actually, the first Vietnamese monk to arrive in Australia was the senior teacher, Most Venerable Thich Phuoc Hue, who set foot on our soil in 1980. In 1981, he formed the Vietnamese Buddhist Federation of Australia, which currently has branch temples in all Australian States with the exception of Tasmania, which has very few Vietnamese refugees. At its Biennial Conference in 1987, the name of the Federation was changed to the United Vietnamese Buddhist Congregations of Australia. He established the Phuoc Hue Temple in a large garage at the rear of a cottage in Fairfield, which served as a monk's residence. Again, racism and the local council's insensitivity to the needs of the refugee communities, forced the Vietnamese Buddhist Federation to seek Government assistance in finding a suitable place for a temple to serve the spiritual needs of Sydney's large Vietnamese Buddhist community. The then Premier of N.S.W., the Hon.Barrie Unsworth, responded by making available an unused school premises at Wetherill Park, an outer western suburb. The foundation stone for the new Phuoc Hue Temple was laid by him in October, 1987. A splendid temple premises, which will be a major showpiece of Sydney, is currently under construction on this former school land. The Vietnamese community is divided politically, hence the two temples. The Phap Bao Temple was established by Vietnamese who were in Australia, as students or diplomats prior to the 1975 fall of Saigon. The Phuoc Hue Temple serves the 'boat people', who view those, who didn't personally experience Communist oppression, with suspicion. They claim that many of the people from the Phap Bao Temple are not vigorous enough in their opposition to the current government in Vietnam. Both temples support a youth movement called "The Young Buddhist Family" which is similar to and affiliated with the Boy Scout Movement.

The Administrative Structure

Traditionally, Buddhist temples are autonomous, although, in 1902, Thailand instituted the Buddhist Order Act, which brought the Sangha under its own bureaucratic control. Laos and Cambodia followed suit (20). An attempt was made, in Sydney, in 1988, to institute a Sangha Council as an advisory and administrative body, but due to the diversity of Buddhist traditions with differing Sangha rules and few of the monks having a common language, it became unworkable and was eventually disbanded. As previously mentioned, the Vietnamese Buddhists in Australia have established the United Vietnamese Congregations of Australia as an umbrella body. With few exceptions, the Vietnamese temples in all States of Australia are affiliated with this body which meets biennially to elect its council. The Buddhist Council of N.S.W. was established in 1985 to service the needs of the local Buddhist organisations. During its relatively short history, the Council had gained the respect and support, not only of the members of the Buddhist community, but especially that of both the Commonwealth and State Governments. The Council provided assistance and advice to the Buddhist community generally, but the bulk of its work involved support to the special needs of the ethnic Buddhist communities. Council was the co-ordinating body for the organisation and resource supply for the teaching of Dharma to Buddhist students in N.S.W. State Schools. Combined Vesak celebrations (Buddha's Birthday) were organised each year, bringing together, in a greater spirit of understanding, the many traditions that comprise the Sydney Buddhist community. The Council maintained liaison with various Government Departments and acted as a lobby group to promote the rights and interests of all Buddhists. Although it boasted a membership of twenty three organisations, at it annual General Meeting in 1989, it was unable to gain a quorum and its operations were temporarily suspended, however, at a well attended meeting called in September, 1990 to consider the future of the Council, a new committee was elected and a revised constitution ratified. A feature of the re-established Council is a Sangha Committee to act as a consultative and advisory body. A national body, the Buddhist Federation of Australia, was formed in 1952, but it has failed to gain the support of the majority of Australia's Buddhist organisations, having only seventeen member organisations in the whole of Australia in 1989. Its biennial conference, due to be held in January, 1989, had not been held by the time of writing this paper - nearly two years after its due date.

Buddhists and Australian Society
According to the 1986 Commonwealth Census (21), 80,387 people in FDivision, Ministry of Information and Broadcasting, Government of India, New Delhi, 1956.
A History of Buddhism in Australia - 1848-1988. New South Wales University Press, Kensington, 1989.
Croucher, Paul
A Short Account of the Spread of Southern Buddhism in Australia and Queensland in Particular Dhammadinna House, Wacol, 1982. de Jong, Klaas.
Australian Bureau of Statistics (ABS) 1986 Census extracted and compiled for the NSW Department of Housing and the Ethnic Affairs Commission of Sydney, 1989. H.J. and Marie Heath.
Urgent Notice to Strathfield Residents. Circular distributed in August, 1988. Cripps, J.S.
Judgement - Tsang
hui. Council of the Municipality of Strathfield Land and Environment Court of New South Wales, Sydney, 1989. Zammit, Paul.
Letter to the Town Clerk, Strathfield Municipal Council - SUBJECT: Proposed Buddhist Complex. Circular distributed in August, 1989.

Buddhists Perplexed Over Extension Drama. The Western Suburbs
Courier Vol.105, No.35, P.6, Wednesday, September 6, 1989. Jamrozik, Wanda.
$25m Buddhist Centre Falters - The Sydney Morning Herald,
P.3, Monday, May , 1989
The Scripture of Won Buddhism - Won Kwang Publishing Co., Iri, 1988.

Davidsons, John Paul (Producer)
Hearts and Minds - Asia 10 Years
After the Vietnam War. Film from BBC, London, 1985. unnag, Jane
The Way of the Monk and the Way of the World, Bechert, H. and Gombrich, R. (Eds.)
The World of Buddhism, Thames and Hudson, London, 1984.
McAllister, Ian and Moore, Rhonda Ethnic Prejudice in Australian Society: Patterns, Intensity and Explanations Office of Multicultural Affairs, Canberra, 1989.

<end of file>

CHAPTER ELEVEN
EVERY DAY IS A GOOD DAY

If Zen is to be of any use to our lives we must be able to bring what is discovered to our daily life. Zen does not remove us from life and the world but gives us the insight necessary to help better it. As a practitioner one has the freedom to take the teachings to what ever purpose one desires. In other words one can live in monastery as a priest or nun or one may return to their regular lives to inspire and teach the principles of Zen to their friends, neighbors and family.

The ability to apply the teachings of Zen to daily life is very important. Zen uses our ordinary life as a vehicle to enlightenment. One must always keep mindful of what one does. One must understand the importance of ordinary activities, that they are methods of Zen.

Although knowledge is looked up on in the west as a key virtue, it is not so in Zen Buddhism. Action is more important, and knowledge that can not be used to enhance life is of little value. It is interesting that many people from the west read all about the benefits of Zen and try to intellectualize the experience with out ever really having it. Although this can be beneficial in following the path it can never substitute for the actual experience.

As mentioned before Zen practice is not only done during periods of sitting but practice extends to the times we are just doing our normal duties. In this way we will find that everyday is a good day. The reality is that everyday is just a day there are no good days or bad days. It is up to our attitudes to decide. Life is always in a state of change and there is nothing wrong with this because it is teaching us something each day. If we can only detach ourselves from the past and enjoy what we have right now, how much better will we feel? We must learn to flow from one moment to the next. If we can do this, everyday will be a good day.

"Our life is a gleam which comes and is gone,
As springtime offers blossoms to fade in the fall
Earthly flourish and decline, O friends, do not fear at all.
They are but a drop of dew on the grass of morn!"

Van-Hanh

[This document can be acquired from a sub-directory coombspapers via anonymous FTP on the node COOMBS.ANU.EDU.AU]

[Last updated: 30 March 1992]

This document describes organizational details of sesshin (a Zen meditation retreat) as practiced by members of the Sydney Zen Center of the Diamond Sangha tradition

TRADITIONAL EVENING CLOSING CEREMONY

Jiki and Jisha leave dojo as third repetition of Great Vows begins. At end of Great vows, Jiki on drum and Jisha on bell signal the time thus. If it is before 9 p.m., Jiki hits drum 8 times, and Jisha signals which third of the 8th hour it is, e.g. if l0 to 9, with three bells. Each bell denotes 20 minutes. If it is after 9 p.m., Jiki hits drum 9 times. and Jisha indicates what third it is with the bell.

JIKI AND JISHA SHOULD BE AWAY AND SEPARATE, AS THOUGH ANSWERING EACH OTHER ACROSS A SPACE.

JIKI (On drum) X X X X X X x X (if before 9 pm)

X X X X X X X x X (if after 9 p.m.)

JISHA (On bell) O O O (if last third)

O (if lst third)

REPEAT FOR TOTAL OF THREE TIMES, WITH FIVE SECOND INTERVALS BETWEEN.

JIKI (On han) X X x X

JISHA I beg to urge you, everyone - life and death is a grave matter - all things pass quickly awayyyyyyyyyy.....
Each of you must be completely alert, never neglectful, never indulgentttttttttt.....

JIKI (han) X X X X X X X (7 at 5 second intervals)

Accelerando (about l5 seconds)

X X X X X (5 at 5 second intervals)

Accelerando (about l5 seconds)

X X X (3 at 5 second intervals)

Accelerando (about l5 seconds)

X X X (5 seconds)

JISHA (Bell) O

INO (Bell) O

JIKI AND JISHA RETURN TO DOJO.

END OF SESSHIN CEREMONY

JIKI: Sit facing in (when sosan nearly finished)

TANTO: Tanto walks the stick to close the dojo and prepares incense for teacher, ie two half sticks lit and one long standing by.

Teacher enters, offers incense, 3 bows. Downstairs dojo joins upstairs dojo.

TEACHER: Offers closing words for sesshin.

JIKI: Hands out sutra books.

INO: Leads Heart Sutra and End of Sesshin dedication, then 4 Vows.

Musical offering, then 3 bows.

TANTO: Tells sangha what is to happen. Form circle for tea, leaving spaces for leaders. Tea and sharing follows, depending on the time available. Sesshin photo at end of tea.

JISHA; Announces clean-up leaders and teams to start work straight after group photograph has been taken, in spirit of silence.

COOK: Announces lunch on han. (Lunch may be served prior to cleaning up, depending on the time.)

(Gatha for bell-of-mindfulness ringer: BODY, SPEECH & MIND IN PERFECT ONENESS, I SEND MY HEART ALONG WITH THE SOUND OF THE BELL, MAY THE HEARERS AWAKEN FROM FORGETFULNESS AND TRANSCEND ALL SUFFERING AND DISTRESS.

Gatha for those who hear the bell:
 LISTEN, LISTEN, THIS WONDERFUL SOUND BRINGS ME BACK TO MY TRUE SELF.)
---
end of file

--
Barry Kapke, director | "All that we are | INTERNET: dharma@netcom.com
DharmaNet International | is the result of | FIDONET: 1:125/33.0
P.O. Box 4951 | what we have thought." | BBS: (510) 836-4717
Berkeley, CA 94704-4951 | (BUDDHA) | VOICEMAIL: (510) 465-7403

Erin (Erin comes home from the convent) byTryAnything©

Authors note: Of course, everyone in this story is at least 18 years of age...

Erin

Erin was nervous. She was going home for the first time since she was 12 years old. Six yea lonely years. Strict years. Safe years. The train was making a clickety-clackety noise, over a and she found herself automatically sliding into the rhythm as she tried to meditate, to pray, guidance.

The door to her compartment suddenly opened and a man appeared, struggling with two ba stopped, staring for a moment, then hastily putting his bags down and removing his hat, he l her direction.

"I'm sorry to have disturbed you, Sister," he said. "I hope you don't mind," he added, glancin

"No, not at all," Erin said, embarrassed. "And I'm not a Sister," she added. "I'm only an acoly

"Oh, I'm sorry," the man said, sitting down. "I didn't realize there were degrees of it or anythi

"It just means I haven't taken my final vows yet," Erin explained, nervously adjusting her con

"I see," the man said agreeably. "Is that something you plan on doing?" he asked.

"I'm not sure yet," Erin replied. "That's why I'm going home, to make that decision."

"Well, you have your whole life ahead of you," the man said. "It's a decision you can always

"Y-y-yes," Erin replied, surprised by the thought.

"I'm sure you'll make the right decision," the man said, smiling at her.

"Yes, I'm sure I will too," Erin agreed, nervously twisting her hands.

The train pulled into the station and Erin got to her feet, picking up her one small bag that co her worldly possessions. Nodding to the man when he said goodbye, she made her way off platform and stood there, looking around. It had been three years since her parents had visi wasn't sure any more what they looked like.

Then she saw three people moving towards her and she realized that it was her parents and
Her heart sank when she saw them and she had a feeling of dread overcome her. She almo

When they got closer Erin could see that her mother's fiery red hair was cropped short, like a were heavily made up and she wore bright red lipstick. Erin was shocked when she realized a man's undershirt, the kind without any sleeves, and no bra, her full breasts pressing out tig the thin white material, leaving nothing to the imagination. It was torn off in halter style right a bottom of her ribs. If she bounced, Erin knew that her breasts would be visible. She wore a r skirt that barely covered her ass cheeks.

Her father was dressed in a white suit, white shirt, white tie, white shoes, white hat. It was lik carnival. He was tall and broad-shouldered, over six feet. His bright blue eyes sparkled as h

Her brother was dressed in skin-tight black leather pants and black boots. He was wearing a shirt which was unbuttoned almost to his navel and tucked into his pants. He had a big gold neck. His chest was muscled and totally devoid of hair. His hair was combed very neatly, sli gold earrings, studs, in each ear. He looked bored.

"Well, hi, sweetheart," Bill said as he reached his daughter, awkwardly putting an arm aroun attempting to hug her. "You have a nice trip?"

"Yes, fine," Erin replied, trying not to tremble.

"Hi, dear. You look good," Jane said, leaning over and air kissing her on the cheek. "It's goo home again."

"Hi, mom," Erin mumbled, almost ashamed to be seen in public like this.

"Hey," Brian said, nodding at her. "You've grown."

"So have you," Erin replied, seeing that he was now taller than their father.

"Is that what you have to wear?" Brian asked, nodding at her outfit.

"Yes," Erin replied, embarrassed.

"Don't you have anything else?" Brian persisted.

"No."

"Well, we're not going to worry about that," Jane said, taking Erin by the arm. "I'll just let you my stuff and find something. I'm sure it will fit you."

"Might be a good outfit for a plot line," Brian suggested.

"Brian," Bill said sharply. "Enough," he said, but inwardly thinking that it was a really good id

Erin was asked all sorts of different questions about life at the convent high school and she explain that it like any other high school except there were no boys and when they weren't i praying or going to services.

"And you want to spend your life that way?" Brian asked as they arrived at their home, a spr house on a ridge overlooking a valley that had a river meandering through it.

"I don't know yet," Erin replied, getting out of the car. "I need to decide."

"We bought this house two years ago," Jane said, sweeping her arm in an arc towards the h

"I haven't seen you in over two years," Erin said softly.

"Oh, honey, I know," Jane said. "We've been working so hard to pay for this place and gettin so..."

"I understand," Erin replied softly.

"Oh, shit," Jane said as she heard the phone ringing as she opened the door. "Hot Productio breathlessly into the phone.

"Oh, hi Jason," she said, waving everyone in. "Yes, we're going to shoot that scene in the m sure you're ready, okay?"

"Yes, I know how ready you are," Jane laughed. "See you in the morning."

"Have you heard from Tasha yet?" Bill asked, taking his coat and hat off and loosening his ti

"Not yet," Jane replied.

"What are you going to do?" Brian asked.

"She'll call," Jane assured them. "If she doesn't, I'll do it."

"What, again?" Brian laughed.

"We've talked about this," Bill said. "We can't make the leap to the big time with just you doin we need some new blood too."

"She'll call and she'll be here," Jane told them. "Now let me show Erin to her room."

Erin followed her mother down a hallway into a room that took her breath away. It was soft a of stuffed animals with a beautiful poster bed beneath a big picture window that looked out in the pool shimmering blue in the afternoon light.

"This is so beautiful," Erin breathed, running her hand along the soft bed cover.

"Well, it's all yours," Jane said, smiling at her daughter. "You have your own private bathroo there and there's a door going out to the pool from the bathroom. Now come with me to my r some clothes to wear until we can take you shopping."

"I'm okay with this," Erin said, smoothing the front of her long grey skirt.

"Honey, I'm not okay with that," Jane said with a big smile. "We're not in a convent and you h your final vows. You're not required to wear it away from school."

"I'm nervous," Erin admitted, twisting her hands.

"I know, sweetheart," Jane said, moving close and stroking her covered head. "Why don't we she suggested, tugging at her head covering.

Reluctantly Erin unpinned her head covering and removed it, revealing a ringleted mass of b that tumbled halfway down her back.

"Oh, honey, you're so beautiful," Jane breathed, awed by her daughter's beauty, her bright g contrasting perfectly with her hair, just like her own. "C'mon," she said, pulling her by the har hallway to her own room.

"Oh!" Erin exclaimed when she entered her mother's room. A big round bed, eight feet in dia middle of the room. The ceiling above it was mirrored, as were all the walls. It was like being mirrors. Everything was red satin with black trim. Erin shivered at the thought the devil would home in such an environment.

Jane was opening drawers and pulling things out, making a nice pile on the bed. Finally she around, sitting on the bed.

"That will get you started," she said, indicating the pile of clothes.

"Oh, I can't," Erin said, looking at them.

"Of course you can," Jane said. "I've got plenty. So take them to your room and put them aw something else," she said, picking up the pile and dumping it into Erin's unwilling arms. "Go said, shooing her towards the door. "I'm going to go for a swim. You should join me."

"I don't know," Erin said, suddenly very uncomfortable.

"I put a suit in there too," Jane told her as she unzipped her skirt and let it slide to the floor.

Erin gasped when she saw that her mother was naked beneath the skirt, no panties. When up her suit from the floor, Erin's face turned bright red and she turned and hurried out of the seen her mother's private parts clearly and there was no hair, just smooth skin like a baby's.

She went to her new room, closing the door behind her, and sat on the bed, dumping the clo
She felt so alone. All of the familiar anchors of the last six years were gone. She had never f place, not even her first days at the convent. Parsing through the clothes, Erin organized the in drawers, keeping out a pair of shorts and two shirts.

Glancing at the door, Erin removed her convent outfit, standing in a long undershift. Quickly undershift, which left her standing completely naked for a moment, Erin pulled on the shorts any panties in the clothes that her mother had given her. At the convent they were only allow undershifts and their overskirts. There were no panties or brassieres.

It felt strange to be wearing shorts. It had been over six years. Pulling first one, then the othe over her head, Erin looked down at her breasts pushing out against them and blushed in em breasts were her biggest source of embarrassment in her life. They were bigger even than h stood very upright on her chest. She had big silver-dollar sized nipples. She was grateful tha visible through the material.

Then, not knowing what to do, she sat on her bed and tried to meditate and pray, seeking th had known for many years.

"This is not going to be easy," Bill was saying to Jane as he sat on the side of the pool, his le in the water, watching her as she swam.

"Well, we just have to manage," Jane said, swimming up to him, holding the wall between hi

"She's so damned straight," Bill sighed. "I've never been around a good person before."

"Hey, watch it, bub!" Jane exclaimed, reaching up and grabbing him very firmly by the balls.

"Damn, Jane," Bill complained as she squeezed his cock.

"I'm not a good person?" Jane asked, continuing to massage his rapidly growing cock.

"Baby, you're the best there is and you and I both know it," Bill told her, a big smile on his fa

"And don't you forget it," Jane said with a laugh, staring at his now hard cock sticking up and against his bathing suit.

"How can I," Bill asked, fishing his cock out and pointing it in her face, "when you're always t me," he finished, sighing as Jane opened her mouth and sucked all 10 inches of his cock int stopping until her nose was pressed tightly up against his stomach.

"I hate wearing a bathing suit," Brian said as he approached, sitting down next to his father.

"You'll manage," Jane said, lifting her face off of Bill's cock to look her son in the eye before down on Bill's cock.

"If I have to wear a bathing suit because Sister Boring is here, why are you sucking dad's co
Brian asked, rubbing his own cock as he watched his mother work.

"She's in her room," Jane gasped as she replied. "And I can always just stop, you can't just appear."

"How about me?" Brian asked, pulling his now hard cock out.

"Oh course, honey," Jane said, turning to engulf his cock while she continued pumping Bill's Jane alternated back and forth, sucking first her husband's, then her son's cock.

"Look, you two," Jane said, gasping for breath as she looked up at them, gripping their rock-hands, "I need to get dinner ready, so just cum already.....or you can do each other," she gri

"Go ahead, I'm ready," Bill said with a laugh.

"Sure, mom," Brian laughed. "I just love watching you suck my cock though."

Jane continued pumping Brian's cock in her hand while she returned to sucking Bill's. It only minutes and Bill groaned, shooting cum into Jane's mouth. Jane eagerly gulped her husban and sucking his cock as hard as she could, trying to get every last drop. When she could su him, she turned her attention to her son, going down on his cock and milking him with her ta muscles.

"That's what I like, mom, just like that," Brian moaned, his hand twined in his mother's short sucked him off. "Just like that....YES," he cried, exploding in his mother's eagerly sucking m suck it all," he groaned, feeling his balls pulling up into his groin as they spasmed, cum gush mother's mouth.

Jane gulped and swallowed her son's cum, sucking his cock as hard as she could. When sh cum, she stopped, licking her lips as she looked up at him and her husband.

"Are you two happy now?" she asked, a smile on her face. "Now put your cocks away and le can get dinner ready," she said, pulling herself up out of the pool, standing in her thong bikin two of them.

An hour later Jane had dinner ready. She called out for everyone to come eat, but Erin was Bill and Brian at the table, she went to Erin's room, knocking on the door.

"Come in," she heard quietly from within the room.

Opening the door, Jane saw Erin sitting on her bed looking forlorn.

"What is it, sweetheart?" she asked, sitting next to her on the bed.

"I feel so lost," Erin almost sobbed. "I feel like I don't belong here."

"Of course you do," Jane assured her, putting an arm around her shoulders and holding her daughter and we've missed you and we're glad you're home again."

"But I'm so different," Erin complained. "I've been imprisoned in a convent for the past six ye

"You were not imprisoned," Jane objected vehemently.

"Then why did I have to stay there?" Erin asked. "Why did nobody visit me except maybe on you want me?"

"Honey, we wanted you, but we just thought it was better for you," Jane told her. "We didn't you."

"I can't even wear normal clothes without feeling weird," Erin sobbed, looking down at herse

"You look fine," Jane told her, getting to her feet. "Now come eat dinner with us."

Erin looked up at her mother, standing there in her thong bikini. She had never seen anyone She allowed Jane to lead her to dinner in the dining room where she sat at the table with he brother.

"How about a prayer?" Jane suggested, giving stern looks to both Bill and Brian when they l

"Really?" Erin asked, looking up hopefully.

"Of course," Jane replied. "Will you lead us?"

This was something Erin understood and she quickly intoned the meal prayer that she had s times a day for the past six years. When she finished Jane said amen, quickly followed by B
Throughout the meal they made small talk, trying to get Erin involved and feeling more a par

At some point they began talking about business until Jane opined that the evening meal wa discussing business.

"Since when" Brian asked derisively.

"Brian!" Jane said sharply.

"What is your business?" Erin asked innocently.

"We have a film and video production company," Bill answered smoothly. "It allows us to wo to have our office here at home."

"Really!" Erin exclaimed. "I never knew you did that. What kind of films and videos do you pr

"Mostly geared toward the entertainment market," Jane quickly interjected.

"Do you have a studio too?" Erin asked.

"The whole basement is our studio and production facilities," Brian told his sister.

"That must be really convenient," Erin commented. "And do you work every day?"

"Usually," Bill replied with a laugh. "One day is pretty much like the others."

"I guess," Erin agreed.

"How long are you going to be here?" Brian suddenly asked.

"Brian!" Jane said sharply.

"I was just wondering," Brian complained. "I mean, is it a short visit or are you home for goo

"I'm supposed to be deciding if I want to take my final vows," Erin said.

"And when do you do that?" Brian asked.

"There is no time limit," Erin informed him. "When I decide, I decide."

"What are you going to do while you're deciding?" Brian asked.

"I don't know," Erin answered. "It's so strange not to be at the convent with everything so pla structured. I'm not sure what to do."

"Well, you just don't worry about it," Jane told her. "You take your time and relax and enjoy b your family again. We're happy you're back and you can stay as long as you like. If you wan and become a nun, then you do that. If you don't, this is your home."

"Thank you," Erin said softly, feeling better.

They finished their meal and Erin automatically helped her mother clean up afterwards. Bria off and Erin started feeling uncomfortable so she went to her room, feeling more secure in th She eventually fell asleep and slept long and deep, not waking up until after 10 the next mor

First taking a shower, Erin went to the kitchen for some breakfast and found the house dese herself some breakfast, she realized they must be working down in their studio. She finished decided to take a stroll around the property. She found herself very impressed with the view position on the mountain. The river running through the valley below glinted in the sunlight a rippled along, winding along the valley floor.

Finally going back into the house, Erin decided to see if everyone was downstairs in the offic door to the basement was easy to find. It has raised brass lettering on it, Hot Productions, a a symbol that at first Erin didn't recognize. When she did, she blushed down to her toes, fina that it was two people in the classic 69 position.

Now she wasn't so sure that she wanted to see what kind of productions her family was invo was so alien to anything she had ever learned or thought, she was literally struck dumb. She and leave when she heard her mother's laughter ring out from the other side of the door.

"I told you she'd be here," Erin heard her mother saying. "She's pulling into the drive now."

"I still think we should do the scene with you," Erin heard a strange voice say. "There's nobo

"That's sweet, Jason," Erin heard her mother reply. "But I think you'll enjoy doing the scene is supposed to be about a very young girl and I don't think I can pull that off anymore."

Just then Erin heard the door to the house open and then close and then the sounds of footf direction. Not wanting to be caught for some reason, Erin ducked back into the shadows of t and slightly down the hall from Hot Productions' doorway, hoping not to be seen. She was s appeared to be a very young girl walking down the hall. She was wearing six-inch platform s and smallest skirt Erin had ever seen, and a very small, sheer tube top that barely restrained to be large breasts for so small a girl, for even with her platform shoes Erin could see that sh shorter than she was and she was 5'5". In Erin's mind she looked like a grotesque caricature girl made to look older, and blatantly sexual.

Pressing as deep into the shadow as possible, Erin watched as the girl opened the door to H walked in, leaving the door open.

"Hello, everybody, here I am," Erin heard her say as she threw her arms open wide in greeti

Erin could see her mother come up and hug the girl, then kiss her, a kiss that seemed to Eri longer than it should. She also noticed that her mother was wearing a thin silk-like house rob down to about mid-thigh. She watched as her mother introduced the girl to Bill and Brian, bo her with long kisses, and then a strange man, very tall, big muscles, who kissed her hard, hi her ass and pulling her close to him.

Through the open door Erin could see them all go through a doorway into another room. He the better of her, Erin quietly tip-toed into the room, following where they had gone until she their voices up ahead of her. Wanting to see into the room where the voices were coming fro a way to not be seen.

Seeing a standing rack full of clothes next to the door, Erin quickly slid behind it, peering thro in the clothes to see fully into the next room. To her surprise, it looked like a miniature schoo with a few desks, blackboard, books. Erin saw her mother hand the girl some clothes, and to girl simply undressed right there. When she stepped out of her platform shoes, Erin almost g and young she looked. The top of her head only came up to Jane's shoulder.

She noticed that her father and brother and Jason were eyeing the girl's naked body criticall put on the clothes her mother had handed her. It was a boring school uniform, though the sk and you could see the girl's full breasts straining against the see-thru white shirt that was ob or two too small. When she was dressed, Jane checked her outfit and appeared to give som everyone before moving over behind a movie camera that was mounted on a tripod to the si teacher's desk.

"Okay, places," Jane said, putting her eye to the camera. "And action," she said once the gir

Jason had seated themselves at two of the desks and Bill moved behind the teacher's desk.

"I've graded your tests, class," Bill said, picking up some papers from the desk. "Nice job, Ji to Brian, handing him a paper. "And you too, Sam. But you, Sue, once again you failed," he handing her a paper, a stern look on his face.

"Oh, Mr. Smith," the girl cried, looking up at him. "I can't fail again," she complained. "My pa so angry. I'll do anything, but please don't fail me again," she sobbed.

"There, there," Bill said, moving close to the girl and putting his hand on her shoulder, drawi him, having the effect of pressing her cheek against his crotch. "I'm sure we can work somet said, rubbing her head.

"Oh, do you think so?" the girl asked, rubbing her eyes and then letting her hand rest directl crotch. "I'd be willing to do anything," she said, rubbing him.

Erin watched in total disbelief as the girl slowly unzipped her father's pants, reaching in and cock out into the open. She had never seen a cock before. She couldn't believe it as this tin began licking and sucking on her father's cock, at one point taking the whole thing into her m looked so huge, she couldn't imagine how she managed to fit the whole thing.

"Okay, cut," Jane called out after several minutes.

The girl gave Bill's cock one last lick and released him, his cock standing straight out in fron

"Let's do the desk scene now," Jane said, moving the camera and tripod.

Erin couldn't believe that her mother was so nonchalant about Bill having his cock sucked. S filming it!

"Let me change," Jane said, turning towards the door.

Erin held her breath as her mother walked right over to the rack she was hiding behind and its hanger off, turned and walked back into the room. She couldn't believe she hadn't been s

But she had. At the last moment Jane had noticed Erin crouched behind the rack but had de and act like she hadn't seen her. She was smiling to herself as she returned to the room. Sh robe off, revealing that she had been naked beneath it, and pulled on the outfit she had cho a business suit with a skirt that came down only to her upper thighs.

Erin was mildly surprised that Jane had undressed in front of Brian, but seeing his non- reac that it wasn't the first time.

"Okay, Tasha, you're going to be sitting on the edge of the desk, and Jason, don't forget you instructed, checking the camera. "Okay, action," she said, looking into the camera's lens.

"I think you need to be punished for failing a test," Bill said to Tasha, pulling her to her feet a her over to the front of his desk where he easily picked her up and sat her on it.

"Oh, Mr. Smith, please don't hurt me," Tasha begged, leaning back in mock fear, bringing he edge of the desk, her knees wide apart.

"And you didn't wear any panties again," Bill said in mock anger, reaching out and pulling he her stomach, exposing her naked pussy.

"Oh, please," Tasha cried out as Bill dropped to his knees and buried his face in her pussy.

Erin couldn't see what was happening, but she had a pretty good idea. Tasha had lain back Bill ate her pussy, her head hanging over the edge, her legs sticking up in the air.

"I think the principal should have a say in this," Bill said, licking his lips as he looked up from Tasha's legs. "Go call her," Bill instructed Jason, "then come help me keep this girl quiet."

Jason walked around the desk by Tasha's head and called out loudly, "Principal Adams, Mr.
to please come to his classroom."

"I'll be right there," Jane called out from behind the camera.

Erin watched with curious amusement now as Jason walked back to stand by Tasha's head unbuttoning her blouse, pulling it open to expose her breasts, nipples hard and pointing up i grabbed Tasha's nipples between his fingers, squeezing them and pulling them hard, causin arch her back up off the desk. Erin had to stifle a gasp when Jason reached down with one h his pants, pulling an already hard cock out and sticking it in Tasha's mouth. Then Bill stood u realized that he was pushing his cock into Tasha's pussy. She wondered how such a small g take such a large thing like Bill's cock into herself without being split in two, but Tasha merel around Jason's huge cock in her mouth as Bill began to fuck her.

Then Jane walked around from behind the camera into the picture, exclaiming, "Mr. Smith, j here?"

"Ahh, Principal Adams," Bill said, pumping his hips back and forth as he continued to fuck T girl failed another test and she is trying to get extra credit to improve her grade. I told her yo be consulted also."

"I see," Jane said, moving around next to Jason. "And what do you have to say for yourself?
cocksucking Tasha.

"Oh, I'll do anything to get my grade better," Tasha said, gripping Jason's cock with both har replied.

"You'll have to convince me of that," Jane said, nudging Jason aside and lifting one foot up her pussy poised over Tasha's face.

This time Erin did gasp out loud as she saw her mother lift her skirt, showing her pussy just Tasha's face. Erin was struck at how immature her mother looked, then realized that it was no hair whatsoever on her pussy. It was as bald and smooth as a baby's.

"Convince me," Jane commanded, and Erin watched in utter disbelief as Tasha's tongue sna into her pussy.

Erin knew that some of the girls at the convent did things forbidden and she suspected that like that, but the fact that it was her mother, in front of her father and brother, well, that was j incredible. She was really amazed when her brother stood behind their mother and removed hands wrapping around her to hold and fondle her large breasts, pinching and pulling on her Tasha continued to make all sorts of slurpy wet sounds.

"I'm gonna cum," Bill growled, pulling his cock from Tasha's pussy.

"Okay, let's change positions," Jane said, stepping away from Tasha's tongue.

Erin watched as her father came and stood by Tasha's head, his big hard cock glistening in really surprised her was her mother bending over between Tasha's legs, her mouth right ove

"Okay, I want a nice, messy cum shot all over her face," Jane instructed. "Then I want you to

from all over her face into her mouth with your cock. Tasha, you make a big show of all the c Stick out your tongue to show it, then swallow it all very obviously and then stick out your tor show it is all gone."

"Not a problem," Tasha said, pushing up onto her elbows. "I love cum."

"Yes, I know you do," Jane laughed. "And Jason, you know your part; cum shot on the ass c crack. Okay, let's get to it," Jane said, lowering her face into Tasha's freshly fucked pussy.

Erin just stared as Tasha lay back down and her father fed his cock into her mouth, inch by i until the whole thing was buried deep in her throat. She could hear her mother's slurping noi Tasha's legs. But she was really shocked when Jason stood behind her mother, his big harc and began rubbing it up and down the crack of her ass and pussy.

Jane was bent over at the waist eating Tasha's pussy, her feet planted wide apart. She sigh pussy when she felt Jason's cock slide into her pussy, stroking deep. She wondered what ef having on Erin, hiding behind the wardrobe rack.

"Okay, here comes your extra credit for your test," Bill growled, pulling his cock from Tasha's

Erin saw streams of white fluid shoot out of her father's cock onto Tasha's face, covering it. S he began wiping the cum all over Tasha's face, pushing it into her mouth. When Tasha stuck covered with the thick white fluid, Erin found she was holding her breath as Tasha very delib swallowed, sticking out her tongue to show that it was all gone. Erin found herself wondering like.

Tasha was thrashing on the table as Jane expertly sucked her pussy, driving her into the ab and over again. Then she saw Jason take his huge glistening cock in his hand and aim it as from the end onto her mother's ass.

"Okay, cut," Jane said, standing up, her face shining with Tasha's pussy juices. "That was g she said, turning to the camera and turning it off. "Nice job, Jason," she said, reaching behin scooping a handful of cum from between her ass cheeks, bringing her hand to her mouth an stuff off.

"Brian, do you mind?" Jane asked, turning to her son.

"Sure, mom," he laughed.

Jane bent over, putting her hands on the floor, her cum-covered ass and pussy pointing dire was hiding behind the clothes rack. Brian got on his knees behind her and began licking her cleaning up all of the cum that Jason had shot all over her. When he finished, Jane stood up and kissing him long and hard.

"Thank you," she said. "That was just wonderful."

"Mmm, I can't wait to shoot the next scene," the small girl replied, getting to her feet.

"Why don't we all have some lunch and then shoot the next scene," Jane suggested. "I know "That sounds good," Jason agreed, absent-mindedly squeezing and stroking his cock. "Fuck an appetite," he said with a laugh.

"Is that why you eat like a horse," Jane laughed.

Erin stared in shock, realizing that Jason obviously had sex regularly with her mother. And E obviously didn't mind. This was way beyond wrong and sinful, this was the epitome of evil th taught about.

"Well, then let's eat," Tasha said, moving towards the door.

"We need to dress," Jane said, a wry grin on her face.

"Really! Why?" Tasha asked, staring at her.

"Because my sister has come home from the convent," Brian replied dryly.

"Your sister! A convent!" Tasha exclaimed. "You're kidding, right?"

"My daughter has been at a convent-high school for the past six years," Jane told her. "She our work yet. I'd rather find a gentler way of breaking it to her," she said, knowing full well tha hearing every word.

"Wow," Tasha said, shaking her head as she picked up her clothes. "Is she going to be a nu

"That's what she's come home to decide," Jane replied, pulling her clothes on.

"I'd never have believed it," Tasha said with a laugh. "Maybe she'd like to join the family bus suggested.

"Not likely," Brian muttered. "She's the squarest person I've ever met."

"Brian! That's not nice or fair," Jane scolded him. "She's just grown up in different circumstar different standards. She might surprise you what interests her," she said, smiling inwardly.

At this point Erin made a dash for the outer door, knowing she had to get upstairs before the
it to her room and shut the door, breathing hard, her heart pumping wildly in her heaving che of the fact that her nipples had hardened and she felt a wetness between her legs. She felt s what she had just witnessed. Her family made sex films. And they made them with each oth what else was there? She didn't know whether to run away and go back to the convent or no to her if she stayed in such a wicked and sinful place?

"Erin," Jane called, knocking on her door before opening it and peeking in. "There you are. V
now. Would you like to join us?"

"Uh, sure," Erin said, getting to her feet.

"This is Tasha, and this is Jason" Jane said, introducing her. "And this is my daughter, Erin."

"Hi," Erin said, staring at the tiny girl that she had just watched having sex with everyone.

"Hi," Tasha said, a big smile on her face. "It's so nice to meet you."

"Thanks," Erin said.

"Hi there," Jason said with a smile.

"Tasha and Jason sometimes work with us in the production company," Jane explained as t began to indulge in lunch.

"That's nice," Erin said. "What do you do?" she asked innocently.

"They're helping us in the filming," Bill quickly injected as Tasha tried not to laugh.

"Do you find it interesting work?" Erin asked, secretly enjoying herself.

"There's nothing else I'd rather do," Tasha told her. "It's so fulfilling."

Jason burst into a laugh, covering his mouth so that his food wouldn't fall into his lap. Bill str keep a straight face and Jane actually blushed.

"Jane tells me you've been at a convent high school?" Tasha inquired.

"Yes," Erin replied.

"Are there any boys there?" Tasha asked.

"No, no boys. Except Father Kelly, of course," she added.

"It must be really boring," Tasha said, shaking her head. "No boys. I couldn't do that."

"You get used to it," Erin told her. "I mean, if there've never been any boys, you don't really you? And the sisters taught us that boys only make trouble."

"Well, that's not true at all," Tasha said. "Some of them, sure, but not all of them. And some is so nice," she said, laughing. "So, are you here to stay?"

"I don't know," Erin replied. "I need to decide what to do."

"Maybe you'll help in Hot Productions too," Tasha suggested, a sly grin on her face.

"Oh!" Erin said, her eyes wide. "But I don't know anything about it. What could I possibly do?

"Everyone starts at the bottom," Tasha said with a laugh, "in every sense. And as you learn more."

"I don't think Erin would be interested in such things," Jane quickly interjected. "She's much spiritually inclined. Aren't you, sweetheart?" she asked with a smile.

"I don't know," Erin said truthfully. "I mean, yes, the Lord and Jesus fills my life, but if I don't take my vows, I have to have a way to take care of myself, something to do."

"What kind of things do they teach you in convent high school?" Tasha asked.

"You know, math, English, science, history, geography. We study a lot of Bible."

"Don't they teach you anything useful for the outside world?" Tasha asked.

"Well, sure, some," Erin replied. "I mean, we all have to work in the school office at some po know how to type and filing and things like that."

"See, you could be like the secretary or something to start," Tasha said, beaming.

"I don't think that's what Erin is interested in," Jane said.

"It was just a thought," Tasha said, stretching. "That was a good lunch."

"It sure hit the spot," Bill agreed, rubbing his stomach.

"What are you going to do this afternoon?" Jane asked Erin as she got to her feet.

"Oh, I don't know," Erin replied. "I walked around outside this morning. It's really beautiful he I'll sit outside for a while. Are you working more?" she asked ingenuously.

"Yes, we do have some more to do, probably a couple more hours," Jane replied.

"Maybe you'd like to join us, see what it's like," Tasha said mischievously, a glint in her eyes

"I don't know," Erin said, gulping. Jane was rooted to the spot, unable to move. "I think I'll sit now."

Jane suddenly realized that she had been holding her breath and she struggled to let it out v obvious. She wasn't ashamed of her life or how she lived it, but she was acutely aware of ho daughter she had, with a whole different set of morals and rules to guide her life. She knew thought of what she and Bill and Brian were doing. She didn't want to encourage her, but at was willing to let her find her own way.

"Alright, you guys, let's get back to work," Jane said in a no-nonsense voice. "You enjoy you said, kissing Erin on the cheek. "We'll be done in a couple of hours or so. Why don't you put suit I gave you and get some sun. It will do you some good to get some color."

"Maybe I will," Erin agreed.

"It was nice to meet you anyway," Tasha said, giving Erin a quick hug. "I'm sure we'll meet a

"It was nice to meet you too," Erin replied, liking Tasha in spite of everything.

"I think you'd be perfect in Hot Productions," Jason said, looking her up and down.

"Jason!" Jane said. "Let's leave that alone."

"She is incredibly beautiful," he said as they left the kitchen.

"Me, beautiful?" Erin thought to herself as she went to her room. She had never thought of h beautiful. In fact, her body had been a source of embarrassment to her in school. So many g about the size of her breasts and how fiery red her pubic hair was.

Erin decided that she would like to take a swim. Picking up the bathing suit her mother had g looked at it skeptically. It was a two-piece suit but it seemed to Erin to need some more mat undressing, she pulled the suit on, feeling very uncomfortable when she looked at herself in top barely contained her breasts and she could see bright red hairs sticking out from the sid
She almost decided not to swim, then realized that she'd be by herself and nobody would se

Going out to the pool, Erin looked around to make sure nobody was able to see her, then sli water, sighing at how nice it felt. She swam and floated in the pool for 15-20 minutes before sitting in the sun, letting it warm her body and dry her. But she couldn't get her mind off of w witnessed downstairs earlier. And she couldn't stop wondering what they were doing now.

Her curiosity getting the better of her, Erin decided to sneak downstairs and see if the door h open again. When she got to the door, it was closed. Erin stood there wondering if she dare someone was right on the other side. How would she explain herself?

Pressing her ear to the door, she could hear no voices. So taking a deep breath, she opene peeked in, saw nobody, and entered the room, silently shutting the door behind her. She tip-room to the classroom setting they had been working in earlier, but she didn't find them ther stood there for a minute and then heard her mother's voice coming from the next room.

"Okay, let's do this last scene and we can call it a day," Jane's voice said.

Erin moved over to the doorway to listen.

"Jason, on your back, Brian, you take her ass, and Bill, you fuck her mouth," Erin heard her
"And I want to see lots of cum all over her."

Now Erin couldn't resist peeking around the doorway into the room. What she saw resemble was lying on his back, his huge cock sticking up in the air. Tasha was crawling onto his body pussy pointing at the doorway where Erin was observing.

"Just a second," Jane said, setting down the camera she had been holding and reaching for "This will help," she said, squeezing some of the ointment onto her fingers. "This will make it said, reaching out and rubbing the ointment into Tasha's ass.

Tasha wriggled her ass, sighing audibly as Jane pushed one, then two fingers into her ass, ointment around inside of her.

"You too, Brian," she said, beckoning for him to come closer.

Erin was shocked when her mother grabbed her brother's erect cock and began pulling and ointment all over it.

"Okay, let's roll," Jane said, picking up the camera. "Action," she said.

Erin watched in fascination as Tasha crawled up Jason's body, grabbing his cock and pullin her face and sticking out her tongue to lick it, then opening her mouth and sucking on it. Afte so, still gripping his cock in her tiny hand, she straddled his hips, reaching down between he his cock to the entrance to her pussy.

Erin couldn't believe it when the giant cock began slowly disappearing into Tasha's pussy as herself onto it. She rode up and down on it a few times and Erin saw that it took on a sheen of her. Then Brian got up on the bed behind Tasha, his cock shining from the ointment. Erin when she saw that he was pushing his cock into Tasha's ass. Now she had two giant cocks

Jane was busy filming, moving in for close-ups, moving around for different angles as the tw and out of Tasha's small body. Then her father climbed up onto the bed, kneeling next to Ja Tasha fell forward, engulfing his cock in her mouth. Now the three of them were pumping in abandon as Jane filmed.

Erin could only stare in amazement as the three huge cocks slid in and out of Tasha's small time. It seemed to go on forever as Tasha writhed on the bed, the three men ravishing her ti saw her father groan and pull his cock from Tasha's mouth, streams of cum shooting into he in the thick ropy white fluid. Then it was Brian's turn, pulling his cock from Tasha's ass and s all over back and ass. When he finished, Tasha rose up off of Jason's cock and spun around her little-girl face as she engulfed his glistening cock in her mouth, sucking him and pumping hands. She released his cock for a moment and Erin saw a stream of cum shoot into the air again captured it in her mouth, sucking on him and obviously swallowing the cum that was fi Then she took Jason's still hard cock and rubbed it all over her face, smearing Bill's cum as continued to flick out and stab at the slit of Jason's cock.

"Okay, cut," Jane called out, lowering the camera. "That was just great, all of you," she said, her face. "Tasha, you were wonderful," she told her, bending over and kissing her deeply, th the cum from her face. "Why don't you get cleaned up while I get one of these boys to fuck r pussy is so hot and wet from watching."

Erin quickly turned and hurried for the door, not wanting to be caught, as Tasha made her w Tasha smiled to herself as she saw a flash of Erin's back as she made it out the door. She la into the shower, content....for the moment.

Erin rushed back upstairs, outdoors to the pool where she sat down, her heart pounding with she had just witnessed. It was the most depraved thing she had ever seen but her whole bo trembling. She felt so confused. Everything she had learned told her what she was witnessin sinful, yet she couldn't help noticing that everyone was happy and completely enjoying them started as she heard a noise behind her.

"Oh, hi, Erin," Tasha said as she approached, once again dressed as she had been when sl join you?" she asked, sitting down on the chaise lounge next to her.

"Uh, no, of course not," Erin replied, trying to control herself. "Are you done...working now?"

"Mmm, yes," Tasha answered, sitting back and enjoying the sun on her face. "This is nice."

"It's a beautiful day," Erin agreed.

"Hey, I've got an idea," Tasha said, sitting up and turning to face Erin. "Since you haven't be before, you don't know anyone, do you?"

"Not really," Erin agreed.

"Well, why don't you and I be friends," Tasha suggested. "Maybe you'd like to come shoppin beach with me tomorrow."

"Really!" Erin exclaimed, sitting up. "You'd like me to...."

"Why not?" Tasha asked with a laugh. "Aren't you allowed to have friends?"

"Of course I am," Erin replied. "I just thought that since you were working here...."

"Work is work and play is play," Tasha laughed, "though sometimes it's hard to tell the differ you say?"

"Well, sure, I'd like that," Erin agreed, smiling at the engaging girl.

"Good. Then it's settled. I'll come pick you up at 10:00 tomorrow, okay?"

"That'd be fine," Erin agreed.

"You know, you're every bit as beautiful as your mother," Tasha remarked.

"No, I'm not," Erin replied, blushing and looking down at herself, shocked to see that her nip hard and sticking out, very visible through her bathing suit.

"Oh, yes you are," Tasha said with a laugh. "And I should know. So I'll see you in the mornir

"Yes, in the morning," Erin agreed, embarrassed as she saw Tasha staring at her chest.

"Okay. Bye then," Tasha said, getting to her feet.

"Bye," Erin replied.

As soon as Tasha left, Erin got up and went to her room, confused by her body betraying he that Tasha had noticed. She decided to take a nap and didn't wake up until she heard knock announcing dinner. She quickly peeled off her bathing suit and pulled a t-shirt and some sho her family for dinner.

"How was your day, dear?" Jane asked as they sat down to eat.

"Fine," Erin replied. "I was by the pool a lot."

"It was a really nice day for the pool," Jane agreed. "Do you have any idea what you'd like to she asked.

"Tasha invited me to go shopping and to the beach with her," Erin replied.

"Really!" Brian said. "Tasha!"

"Yes. Is there anything wrong with that?" Erin asked.

"No, of course there isn't," Jane said quickly. "Tasha's a very sweet girl."

"I'll say," Brian said with a laugh.

"Brian, please!" Jane said, a bit exasperatedly. "I think you'll have a wonderful time with Tas said. "You're practically the same age."

They finished their meal without any more references to Tasha, or Erin for that matter, and E tiredness and escaped to her room, leaning against the door after she had closed it behind h was spinning. Her family was involved in the pornography industry. Everything she had learn away at the convent school told her she was living in the devil's house. It was all against the

But Erin knew her parents weren't evil. And even though Brian was being a bit rude to her, s just being an older brother. And in spite of what she had seen Tasha doing, with everyone, s nicest person she had ever met. How could she reconcile the apparent dichotomy? Her hea conflicting thoughts, Erin finally fell into a troubled sleep

Erin jumped awake when she heard a knocking on her bedroom door, sitting up in a sleepy opened and Tasha walked in, a big smile on her face.

"Are you still in bed?" she laughed. "Didn't you remember we're going to the beach and shop

"W-what time is it?" Erin asked, shaking the sleep from her head.

"It's 10:00 already, sleepyhead," Tasha replied. "Come on, the sun's out and there's a whole us."

"Okay, let me get dressed," Erin said, swinging her legs off the bed onto the floor. "What sho asked, looking at Tasha.

Tasha was wearing a very bikini top which covered her nipples and not much more, exposin beautiful breasts. She had a wrap-around skirt tied around her waist.

"Just a bathing suit and a skirt or some shorts," Tasha suggested. "We'll shop and find some Erin picked up her bathing suit, not sure if she could wear it out in public. But looking at Tash there made her realize that she really had no choice and that she should stop being so nerv in the real world, after all, not at the convent school. And besides, nothing bad was going to going to the beach and people wear bathing suits to the beach.

Blushing when she realized that Tasha wasn't going to leave the room while she changed, E t-shirt off over her head, releasing her naked breasts, and as quickly as possible without see hurrying, put her top on. She blushed when she realized that her nipples had hardened and Glancing up she saw that Tasha's eyes were fixed on her breasts.

Taking a deep breath Erin pushed her shorts down to put on the suit bottom and Tasha gasp

"My god, you really are a redhead, aren't you," she said, seeing Erin's fiery-red bush betwee

"Apparently so," Erin replied, blushing furiously as she pulled her suit bottom up.

When she pulled her shorts on over the bottoms, she noticed that once again red hairs were sides of her suit, something that Tasha also noticed.

"We'll take care of that at my place," Tasha said. "You'll have to if you're going to get a new

Not knowing what to say, Erin nodded, pulling her sandals onto her feet.

"Let me brush my teeth," she said, going into the bathroom.

Erin found Tasha laughing with her mother by the door when she finished.

"Have fun today," Jane told her, giving her a hug. "You look great! And I think you'll need thi handing Erin an envelope.

Opening it, Erin gasped. Inside was $500 and a credit card.

"Mom, that's so much money!" she exclaimed.

"Honey, things cost money, and sometimes lots of it around here," Jane laughed. "You don't Just have fun, spend what you want, and I'll see you when you get back, okay?"

"Oh, mom, thank you," Erin said, hugging her tightly. "I can't believe this."

Tasha had a convertible Mustang and the top was down. Erin loved the feeling of the wind b long thick red hair as they drove. Tasha put on the stereo and turned it up so loud that conve impossible, so Erin just put her head back against the headrest and enjoyed the drive down Monica Mountains to the beach. When they got there, Tasha expertly wheeled the car into t house and stopped the car.

"Come on it," she said. "This is my place."

Erin was curious as she entered Tasha's house and sort of surprised to see how girly and fe was like a little doll's house, and upon realizing that, that was exactly what Tasha was, a littl only odd thing was a wall of bookshelves in Tasha's bedroom filled with video tapes.

"That's a lot of tapes," Erin noticed. "You must really like movies."

"That's funny," Tasha said laughing.

"Why?" Erin asked, still not comprehending.

"Those are tapes of all of the movies I've been in," Tasha told her proudly. "There's over 300

"You're kidding!" Erin said, a shocked look on her face. "You've been in over 300 movies?"

"Uh-huh," Tasha replied.

"I didn't know you made movies," Erin said.

"Well, that's what I do with your parents," Tasha told her. "We're making movies. That's wha company is."

"Oh...." Erin said, the light going on in her head. And then the mathematics of the situation.

"Okay, let's get you a little trimmed up so we can go to the beach," Tasha said, opening a dr retrieving a pair of barber's scissors and a small cordless shaver.

"Oh!" Erin blushed. "What should I do?"

"Well, you can do it yourself, or if you want, I'll help you," Tasha said.

"But I've never done anything like that," Erin confessed, blushing. "I don't know what to do."

"Why don't I help you this time, then next time you'll be able to do it yourself," Tasha sugges

"I'm embarrassed," Erin confessed.

"Oh, don't be, silly," Tasha said, giving her a quick hug. "It's no big deal. I've done it for peop And I do it for myself too," she added, untying her wrap-around skirt and letting it fall to the f she said, standing with her feet spread and her hands on her inner thighs.

Erin stared at the juncture of Tasha's thighs where the tiniest piece of material covered her p Not a hair peeked out.

"I did it this morning and didn't even nick myself," she said, hooking a finger in one side and across, exposing her naked and completely hairless pussy to Erin.

"Oh!" Erin exclaimed, her hand covering her mouth in surprise. "But you don't have any hair

"Oh, we won't go that far," Tasha laughed, letting her suit fall back in place over her pussy. " want to go the way you are, of course."

"N-n-no," Erin stammered. "What should I do?" "Well, you need to take off your shorts anyw "Then we'll see."

Trying not to blush, Erin pushed her shorts off, once again seeing how bright red hairs were the sides of her suit.

"Here, lay here on the bed," Tasha indicated, patting the bed. "That's it, on your back," she s down, her legs pressed tightly together.

"You need to bend your knees, put your feet up on the bed," Tasha told Erin. "That's it, and feet," she said, reaching out and placing Erin's feet about shoulder- length apart.

"Let me see how tight the sides of your suit are," Tasha said, reaching out and hooking a fin edge of Erin's suit and pulling. "This is pretty tight," she said. "I can't do it this way. You neec them off."

"I'm so embarrassed," Erin said, her face bright red.

"It's okay," Tasha reassured her, grasping Erin's suit and pulling it down as Erin lifted her hip

"That's better," Tasha said when she saw Erin's pussy exposed.

Erin lay with her eyes closed and her fists clenched at her sides as Tasha reached between to snip with the scissors. Then there was a buzzing sound as Tasha turned on the shaver ar Erin felt Tasha's fingers touching her and then the shaver. She gasped as she felt the shave against her skin and then her nipples got rock hard and she gasped when Tasha grasped he her fingers and pulled on them, stretching them taught as she used the shaver.

The gentle touching of Tasha's fingers in and on her pussy combined with the vibrations of t stimulated Erin's body and Tasha noted with a slight smile the beads of fluid slowly starting t between Erin's now hairless pussy lips.

"That should do it," Tasha finally said, letting her finger slide across Erin's pussy to scoop up oozing from her pussy, bringing it to her mouth to gently suck on it as Erin opened her eyes.
think," she suggested.

Pushing up onto her elbows, Erin looked down between her spread legs at her pussy, her m as she saw that the only hair left was a one-inch strip above her now naked and smooth pus

"Oh, my god," Erin gasped, her hand flying between her legs to cover herself, her fingers im coated by her oozing pussy juices. "I thought you were just going to trim a bit," she said, em

"Well, I did," Tasha laughed. "You look beautiful. Besides, who's going to see it but you and

"But still," Erin complained, scrambling for her suit bottom and pulling it on.

"See how much better it looks now," Tasha suggested.

Looking down, Erin could see that there were now no hairs sticking out, but that was becaus gone. The suit molded itself to her naked pussy and she could discern the split between her looked, she could see the suit getting wet from her pussy.

"Oh, my god, what am I going to do?" she asked, covering herself with her hand.

"Let's go swimming and then nobody will notice," Tasha laughed. "Come on," she said, takin and pulling her towards the door.

They crossed the street and ran across the sand to the water's edge, panting with the exerti there. Tasha stripped off her wrap-around skirt and dashed into the water, diving when it wa in depth. Erin stared after her, shocked that Tasha's entire ass was naked and visible with o holding her bottom up that disappeared between her ass cheeks.

Hesitating a bit, Erin entered the water, cautiously as opposed to diving the way Tasha did.
her rib cage, she ducked down, letting the water wash over her head before standing up and her bright red hair flying and water spraying in all directions.

"Hey, you do that like a dog!" Tasha laughed.

"This is wonderful!" Erin exclaimed, splashing water up into the air.

For the next 30 minutes the two girls frolicked in the water, laughing and splashing like two l Forgotten was all life out of the sea as they played. Finally, exhausted, they made their way and collapsed onto the hot sand, breathing hard. Tasha spread her wrap-around skirt onto t were both able to lay back on it, shoulder to shoulder.

"Thanks for inviting me, Tasha," Erin said, turning to look at her.

"No problem," Tasha said. "It's nice to make a new friend."

"You must have lots of friends," Erin said a bit wistfully.

"Not really," Tasha said, shaking her head. "Most of the people I know are people I work wit like them and all, we don't really hang out after work or anything."

"What about you," Tasha asked, "did you have friends at school?"

"Sort of," Erin replied. "But it was so...so structured, and very strict. They didn't really encou personal relationships, they wanted us to only rely on our relationship with god and jesus, n human relationships."

"Wow, what a drag," Tasha said, shaking her head and sitting up to look down at Erin. "I thi to enjoy each other now. The future will take care of itself. If we're good in this life, hopefully be some sort of compensation later, but what matters is now. If you waste your life planning miss living now. That doesn't make much sense to me."

"Funny you should say it that way," Erin said. "I've been thinking something like that lately. I confusing."

"Well, you don't have to make a choice today, or tomorrow, and you can always make the c Tasha asked.

"Yes, that's true, but there's so much pressure from the school to decide now."

"But you don't sound very certain," Tasha said. "If there ever were a sign that you shouldn't would be a good one. Maybe later you'll feel different and do it then. But it seems to me that life to catch up on and you want to see what it's like, don't you?"

"Part of me does," Erin confessed.

"Well, I'm going to get some sun," Tasha stated, reaching behind herself and untying her to exposing her breasts.

"Tasha! Is that allowed?" Erin asked, turning her head to and fro to see if anyone was lookin

"Technically, no," Tasha laughed, laying down on her back, her rock-hard nipples sticking u as long as nobody complains, they usually leave me alone. I think it turns everyone on anyw

"You seem so sure, so brave," Erin marveled. "We're so different."

"Maybe not as different as you think," Tasha said, turning to lay on her side facing Erin, her pressing up against Erin's upper arm.

"Why do you say that?" Erin asked, very conscious of Tasha's nipple pressing against her a her.

"Well, for starters, how about your 'trim'?" Tasha asked with a laugh.

"Well, if I had known you were going to cut it all off, I wouldn't have done it," Erin told her.

"That's not what I meant," Tasha said.

"Then I don't understand."

"While I was going it you were excited, sexually excited," Tasha told her. "It happens to me t do it."

"But I'm a virgin," Erin blurted out before she even realized what she was saying. "That's not

"That doesn't matter," Tasha laughed. "Virginity has nothing to do with your ability to be exci

"Oh, I didn't realize..."

"Don't worry about it," Tasha laughed, leaning over and kissing Erin lightly on the forehead, dragging across Erin's arm and upper breast. "You've got a whole lifetime ahead of you to d she said as she lay back down on her back and closed her eyes.

An hour later Erin was awakened by Tasha shaking her.

"Erin, wake up," Tasha was saying, leaning over and looking into Erin's face. "You've had er should go."

Erin took the hand Tasha was offering her and got to her feet, feeling a bit light-headed.

"I think we need to get some lotion on you," Tasha said as she put her top back on. "Come o taking her by the hand.

They crossed the beach and then the road and entered Tasha's house.

"Here, take a shower," Tasha said, dragging her into the bathroom and turning on the water. cool, but you got too much sun and we need to cool your skin down. You're such a redhead extra sensitive."

Erin hesitated, then took off her suit, realizing as she did so that her skin was very sensitive suit bordered her body. Looking into the mirror, she was shocked to see that all of the skin t covered by her suit had a distinctly reddish color to it, while the rest of her, her breasts and h pussy, were pale white.

She got into the shower and gasped as the cool water hit her, then sighed as she felt her sk She could only gently rub the soap over her skin it was so sensitive. When she finished she door to look for a towel only to find Tasha standing there naked.

"Here, let's get this lotion on you," Tasha said, taking her hand and pulling her out of the sho best if your skin is still wet," she explained, upending the bottle and squirting the lotion all ov upper chest, then aimed a stream down to her stomach.

Erin gasped then laughed as Tasha quirt the lotion all over her body.

"Now gently rub in it," Tasha told her. "Here, I'll help," she said, dropping to her knees and g spreading the lotion on Erin's feet and lower legs.

Erin hesitated for a moment when Tasha dropped to her knees, then began gently spreadin chest and around and under her breasts, finally just covering her breasts too as a large porti been exposed by the brief bathing suit. She gasped when she felt Tasha start to spread the above the knee. It made her whole body tingle. Slowly spreading the lotion that Tasha had s stomach, Erin watched as Tasha slathered first one leg up to her thigh joint, and then the oth to her feet, Tasha let her hand and fingers drag across Erin's pussy, her fingers sliding betw of her outer lips.

"That feels so nice and smooth," Tasha said with a smile. "My turn for the shower," she said adjusting the water.

When she finished showering, she grabbed a towel and walked into her bedroom where she naked.

"I-I-I don't know what to put on," Erin confessed. "The suit is too uncomfortable right now."

"Here, try this," Tasha volunteered, pulling a soft silk sarong out of a drawer. "This is very so explained as she handed it to her. "But your skin has already sucked up the lotion. We shou need to keep it from drying out."

Returning to the bathroom, Tasha returned with the lotion, but with no towel this time. She w the day she was born.

"Here, lay down and I'll do it," Tasha said.

"You don't have to do that," Erin protested, noticing how the top of Tasha's head came only

"I don't mind," Tasha said, gently pushing Erin backwards. "Actually, I like it too," she laughe

Erin tried to relax as Tasha filled her hand with lotion and then started gently spreading it ac chest, above her breasts, then down each shoulder and arm, taking care to also put some o returned to her upper chest and spread the lotion downwards onto Erin's breasts, sliding her breasts and across her nipples to cup her beneath the breasts, lifting them slightly and sque letting them slide through her hands until she was holding Erin's nipples between her fingers

Erin gasped when Tasha squeezed her nipples tightly before releasing them and continued downwards onto her stomach, stopping just above her pussy to slide down her legs to her fe started working her way upwards. Erin arched her hips in surprise when Tasha got to the top let her hands slide onto her pussy, rubbing and squeezing her pussy lips with her fingers for sliding upwards, over her breasts again, once more paying attention to her now hard nipples to her face and gently spreading the lotion on her cheeks and forehead.

"Why don't we take a nap for a bit then go do some shopping," Tasha suggested softly while her eyes closed.

"Mmm, sounds nice," Erin said.

"Slide over, silly," Tasha giggled, sliding onto the bed next to Erin.

When Erin awoke it was to find that Tasha had turned in her sleep and had a knee and an a body, her hand cupping a breast. Erin felt a dampness against her thigh and realized that it pussy was pressing against her. Gently trying to extricate herself, she woke Tasha up.

"Oh, I'm sorry," Tasha said, rolling onto her back and off of Erin. "It's been so long since I fel with someone, I just naturally..."

"Uh, that's okay," Erin said. "That was a good nap."

"How's your skin?" Tasha asked, touching Erin's stomach.

"It's a bit hot and I think I could use some more lotion," Erin replied.

"Oh, can I do it?" Tasha asked with an impish smile. "You know how much I enjoy it."

"Okay, if you want," Erin said with a laugh, secretly looking forward to the way Tasha touche

Tasha got the lotion and crawled onto the bed, laughing as she squirt it all over Erin's body b it down and beginning to spread it beginning with her shoulders. Once again she paid partic Erin's breasts, this time overtly massaging them and pulling and pinching her nipples before down to her stomach. This time when she moved down to Erin's legs, she straddled her bod side of her chest, her ass and pussy pointing right in her face. Erin stared in amazement at T it spread open right in front of her face, then gasped when she felt Tasha slide her hands do her feet, then back up again, culminating in Tasha rubbing and massaging Erin's pussy with Erin began to writhe beneath Tasha as she began to deliberately rub her clit, holding her pu the fingers of one hand while she made slow circles with the other. She had never felt anyth her body was on fire. She gasped when she felt Tasha slide a finger partly into her pussy, g in and out as she continued to rub her clit. When Tasha leaned down and grasped Erin's clit and teeth and teased it with her tongue, Erin exploded in orgasm, flooding Tasha's mouth w in her head and the whole world went black.

When she came to, she must have passed out momentarily, Tasha was leaning over looking of concern in her expression.

"Are you okay, Erin?" she asked, gently stroking her cheek.

"I-I think so," Erin replied, still feeling her body tingling with electricity. "What happened?"

"You had an orgasm and fainted," Tasha told her. "You came like crazy and just passed out anyone do that before."

"I never felt anything like that before," Erin confessed, remembering now what had just happ
I had no control over myself."

"I'm sorry," Tasha said. "I just got carried away. You are so beautiful and your pussy looked couldn't help myself. I had to taste you. If I had known, or if I had thought about it, I wouldn't it. Please don't be mad at me."

"I'm not mad," Erin said. "But I am sort of confused. I never felt anything like that before."

"Haven't you ever played with yourself before?" Tasha asked.

"No. We were taught that it was wrong," Erin replied. "They punished girls who did things lik

"How sad," Tasha said. "It's so natural. Did you like it?" she asked shyly, a coy smile on her

"It was strange," Erin said, "but it was also nice. My whole body felt like it was on fire. You li that?"

"Gosh, yes," Tasha exclaimed. "You have a really sweet pussy. You taste wonderful."

"It seems so, so , so nasty," Erin said, blushing.

"But it's not, it's very natural," Tasha told her. "Look," she said, slowly reaching down betwe and rubbing her fingers up and down between her pussy lips, dipping a finger into her hole b stopping and bringing her hand up to Erin's face and rubbing her fingers on Erin's mouth. "T she said. "It won't hurt," as she pressed her finger tip into Erin's mouth.

Whether she wanted to or not, Erin was tasting herself on Tasha's finger. When she remove mouth, Erin reflexively licked her lips, once again tasting her own pussy juices that Tasha ha over her lips.

"It's nice, isn't it?" Tasha asked, a smile on her face as she licked her own fingers.

"It's okay," Erin agreed, not sure now how she felt about things.

"Are you ready to go shopping then" Tasha asked, rolling onto Erin's body, their breasts mas face just inches from Erin's. "Because if we don't, I'm going to eat you up again," she laughe

"Yes, let's go shopping," Erin laughed, feeling her nipples getting hard as they rubbed again

Tasha sat up, sitting on Erin's midsection, her hands grabbing her breasts and squeezing he Then quickly bending over, she quickly sucked and then bit gently each one, causing Erin to before she rolled off of her to stand by the bed.

"Here, you can wear this," Tasha said, throwing some clothes at Erin. "They're soft and they sunburn, until we can buy you something new."

Erin got out of the bed and stood next to Tasha, her skin red from the sun and also from her put on the shirt Tasha had given her and discovered that it only came down to her stomach, belly-button exposed. The softness of the material rubbing against her nipples kept them ha

"I don't know if I can go out like this," Erin said, looking down and seeing her nipples clearly beneath the thin material.

"Oh, of course you can't," Tasha laughed, reaching out and cupping Erin's naked pussy in h everyone in sight wanting you."

Laughing, Erin pulled on the skirt Tasha had given her. At least it wasn't as short as the one putting on. That one barely covered her ass.

"Do you have some panties I can borrow?" Erin asked, uncomfortable wearing a skirt and be

"I don't even own any," Tasha laughed. "They only get in the way. Ready to go?" she asked Erin's skirt and rubbing her pussy. "God, I can't keep my hands off of you," she laughed, brin her mouth and licking her fingers.

The two girls left the house, jumping into the convertible and roaring off down the road to the lined the beach for a couple of miles south of the Malibu pier. They tried on outfit after outfit, of them. Tasha took every opportunity to touch Erin, squeezing her breasts, rubbing her pus so used to it that she only giggled or laughed. At one point she grasped Tasha's hand as sh pussy and held it against herself.

"You're making me crazy," she told her. "I feel like I'm on fire."

"I know how to put that fire out," Tasha laughed, rubbing her juicy fingers on Erin's mouth be them herself. "Let's go back home and play."

"I'm getting hungry," Erin said as she licked her lips, tasting herself yet again.

"Ooohhh, now you're getting me excited too!" Tasha laughed, flipping her skirt up and flashi at Erin.

"I mean food," Erin laughed. "Don't you ever think of anything but..."

"Sex?" Tasha finished Erin's sentence. "Sometimes, but it is my favorite everything. That's w so much."

"You mean the videos?" Erin asked in a soft voice.

"Uh-huh," Tasha answered. "Come on, there's a nice restaurant nearby where we can get s go home and have some dessert."

"Maybe I should call my parents," Erin suggested. "They might be expecting me."

"I'll tell you what," Tasha said as they swept into the restaurant and were shown to a table, " mom and suggest that you spend the night so that we don't have to drive up the canyon in th you a ride home tomorrow. If you'd like."

"Oh, really? I mean, you wouldn't mind?" Erin asked, flustered.

"Of course not," Tasha laughed. "I like you and I think we're going to be great friends too."

"Oh, I-I'd like that," Erin said, blushing.

"What, spending the night or us being friends?" Tasha asked with a laugh.

"I'd like to be your friend," Erin said. "But where would I sleep?"

"My bed is plenty big for the two of us," Tasha replied, a twinkle in her eyes. "If you don't mi that is."

"Ladies, may I take your order?" the waiter asked as he appeared at their table.

"Oh, bring us some shrimp cocktail and caesar salad and a cioppino for two," Tasha ordere

Santa Margherita Pinot Grigio."

"Certainly," the waiter said, bowing slightly at the waist. "And may I say that it is a pleasure h such lovely ladies at my table."

"Thank you," Tasha said with a smile.

"Wow, you do that so easily," Erin said when the waiter walked away. I know what shrimp is after that."

"You'll love it, trust me," Tasha told her. "Oh, this is so much fun! I haven't had a girlfriend si in high school."

"Other than my father and brother, and the priests at school, I've never been around anyone observed, "and none of them were really my friends."

"Well, that's all going to change now," Tasha told her as the waiter brought giant shrimp coc them. "Mmmm, this is so good," Tasha said, taking a big bite of shrimp after dredging it throu sauce.

The two girls ate until they were ready to burst, talking and laughing like teenage schoolgirls waiter removed the vestiges of the last course from the table and brought them each an esp in their seats, stuffed and sated.

"That was the best meal I've ever eaten," Erin declared. "I never knew food could be so goo

"It seems like I'm going to have to teach you everything," Tasha said, a smile on her face. "A student?"

"I always got top marks at school," Erin laughed as Tasha licked her lips in an obvious fashi

"Let's go home and have some dessert," Tasha said.

"Ohmygosh!" Erin sat up straight. "We didn't call my mother!"

"Relax, I'll do it now," Tasha said, pulling out her cell phone and dialing.

"Jane? This is Tasha," she said.

"Yes, she's fine," she laughed. "We just finished eating dinner and we're totally stuffed. We v beach and shopping. Now we were going to go back to my place for some dessert and I tho spend the night and I'll bring her home tomorrow. If you don't mind."

"She wants to talk to you," Tasha said, holding the phone out to Erin.

"Mom?" Erin said. "Yes, it's been wonderful. I've had so much fun. Yes, I'd like to, but only if mind. Okay. Sure. Here she is," Erin said, returning the phone to Tasha.

"Hi! Really! With LeroyX! Sure, that sounds like fun. Okay. Then I'll just plan on being there a I'll bring Erin home then. Okay, bye-bye," she said, closing the phone.

"That's settled then," she said with a smile. "Your mom has a scene for me to shoot tomorro I'll take you home then."

"A scene?" Erin asked as they left the restaurant.

"Uh-huh," Tasha replied.

"Oh," was all Erin said as they got into the car.

"Does that bother you?" Tasha asked as she drove towards her house.

"N-no," Erin replied. "It's just that..."

"I know you were watching yesterday," Tasha said matter-of-factly.

"I don't know how to say it," Erin said, blushing.

"Just say it," Tasha told her. "You're not going to hurt my feelings, okay?"

"It's just that you seem so nice. You're so sweet. Yet you do these....videos. All my life I've b such things are sinful, wrong. I'm having trouble reconciling everything."

"I understand," Tasha said as she pulled in and parked at her house. "I'm not hurting anyone me. It's lots of fun. I never do anything I don't want to do or with anyone I don't want to do it v make lots of money. I just don't believe all of that suppressed sexuality stuff the religions try believe."

"But what about sin?" Erin asked as they entered the house.

"I figure if god invented everything, he wanted us to enjoy it," Tasha said, kicking off her san you're not harming anyone, including yourself, why should it be wrong?"

"I never thought of it that way," Erin confessed, kicking her sandals off too.

"And speaking of feeling good, we should get some more lotion on you," Tasha said with a b

"Oh!" Erin gasped, a smile on her face.

"Maybe you'd like to see some of my videos," Tasha suggested, slowly reaching out and pul over her head, releasing her breasts, nipples already hard.

"Really! You wouldn't mind?" Erin asked, then gasped when Tasha leaned over and took a n gently biting it with her teeth while her tongue teased it.

"Mmm, of course not," Tasha said, releasing Erin's nipple and pulling her by the hand into th onto the bed. "I'll show you my very first one," she said, getting up off the bed and going to t and picking one. "This was on my 18th birthday," she explained as she put it into the VCR. " until this," she said, undressing and crawling onto the bed to Erin.

Erin didn't resist when Tasha tugged on her skirt, pulling it off and leaving her naked too. Th side on the bed as the video started. It showed a naked Tasha being dragged by an equally bed. The woman held Tasha's hands above her head, kneeling on her shoulders, her pussy Then a big burly man came into the picture. He had a big beer belly and looked like he hadn several days. His cock was in his hand and it was hard, though not very big. He grabbed Ta pulling them apart. Holding his cock in his hand, he leaned forward and pushed himself into Tasha's body arched upwards but she could not escape. The man had her pinned with his c the woman was kneeling on her shoulders. The man began pumping his cock in and out of T could see how it began to glisten. The woman kneeling on her shoulders was laughing as sh cock sliding in and out of her pussy. Then Erin saw her sit on Tasha's face, mashing her pus rocking back and forth. This went on for several minutes until the man stiffened, his cock bu pussy. When he pulled his now shrunken cock from her body, Erin could see ropey strings o it.

The woman got off of her face and Erin could see that Tasha's face was covered with shiny grabbed her by the hair and pulled her towards him, shoving his cock in her face. Erin watch her mouth and began to lick and suck the man's cock, not stopping until he pushed her awa ended.

"You were a virgin before that?" Erin asked, staring at Tasha who had an ashen expression

"Yes," Tasha replied in a wooden voice.

"That didn't look like fun at all," Erin said, shaking her head.

"It wasn't. I hated it," Tasha said, turning to look at her.

"Then why did you do it?" Erin asked.

"Those were my parents," Tasha explained. "They raped me for my birthday present."

"Oh, my god," Erin gasped, her hand covering her mouth. "How awful. Then why do you ma do you have this one?"

"Oh, they taped it, told me I'd appreciate it some day. They raped me like that every day for Sometimes they'd invite their friends over and let them do what they wanted too. Somewher how it made me feel even though I hated all of them. When I had a chance, I ran away and much porn industry here it was easy to find someone to give me a chance. Now I can say ye and whatever and get paid lots of money. I'm in control. Nobody forces me to do anything."

"Oh, Tasha, that's terrible," Erin cried out, putting her arms around her, seeing the tears that threatening to spill from her eyes. "Nobody should be treated like that, especially not someo nice as you."

"Thanks," Tasha said, wiping her eyes and giving Erin a quick kiss on the lips. "But I'm pretty haven't watched that in a long time. I guess it got to me. Now let me show you one that I wa enjoyed doing," she said, bouncing up off the bed and taking another tape and putting it in th

The video started with a scene of 6-8 girls in cheerleader outfits in a locker room. Erin recog immediately. She was the smallest of the girls. They all undressed and got into the showers started playing and the scene soon turned into an all-out lesbian orgy on the shower floor. W were all doing what Tasha described to Erin was a daisy chain, there suddenly appeared in and several boys in football uniforms.

Erin gasped when she realized that the coach was her father and that one of the football pla brother. Very quickly the boys were all naked with a girl kneeling in front of them, sucking th Tasha was sucking her father's cock. Then all the girls got on their hands and knees with the each other in a starburst type of pattern. Behind each of them knelt a boy, with the 'coach' b They all began fucking and Erin watched in amazement with her mouth hanging open. After all moved over one girl and commenced fucking again. They did this until they had moved c circle and were back where they started. Now the girls turned around and began sucking the until they all exploded, shooting cum into their faces and open mouths.

Erin was in shock as Tasha paused the video. The frozen image on the screen was that of T of cum, a big smile, and her father's cock dangling in her face. Erin turned to look at Tasha, the same girl as that in the video.

"What are you thinking?" Tasha asked.

"It's just hard for me to see you like that," Erin tried to explain. "I mean, you seem so small a are so big...and all that stuff in your face..."

"I love the sticky feel of cum on my skin," Tasha told her matter-of-factly. "And I especially lo
And I may look small, but like any woman, my pussy can stretch big enough to have a baby, handle big cocks. And there's nothing like a big cock stuffing you."

Erin sat there with her mouth hanging open. She had never heard anyone talk so dirty and s such things. Then Tasha continued the video.

"Girls, girls, what is taking you so long," Erin heard a voice out of camera on the video say.

And then appeared what was obviously supposed to be the cheerleaders' coach. For some surprised to see that it was her mother. She watched as her father grabbed her by the arm, and telling her that they'd show her what's taking so long. Her clothes were quickly torn off a dragged to a bench where she was placed on her back, her legs spread apart and her arms girls, cum still dripping from their faces.

She saw her father slowly push his cock into her pussy, inch by inch. The camera angle was incredible. She could clearly see her mother's pussy for the first time, the fat outer lips, the i curling out from between them, grasping her father's cock as it slid in and out, and her clit, p rubbing against the cock as it fucked her.

Then she saw her father withdraw his glistening cock from her mother's pussy and stand ab sliding his cock into her mouth, laying it on her protruding tongue. He fucked her mouth whil
Then he pulled his cock from her mouth, cum shooting from the end, streaming it all over he putting it back in her mouth for her to finish sucking him.

When he was done, he laughed and told the other boys to show her too, and they did. One l forward and fucked her, then fucked her mouth until they came, shooting cum all over her fa mouth. Erin was only mildly surprised that her brother Brian was the last boy in line. She wa his cock, which was bigger than their father's, into their mother, slowly and leisurely fucking moved up to fuck her face, Erin was surprised to see him slide his entire cock into her mouth her throat. And he fucked her like that, each time slowly sliding his cock all the way into her he began to cum, he just let his cock lay on her tongue, shooting stream after stream of cum mouth until he finished, then pushing his cock into her mouth one more time as she sucked his cock from her mouth, Erin could see that she had swallowed the entire mouthful of cum.

When her father told the cheerleaders to get cleaned up, Tasha crawled between Jane's leg and suck her pussy. She then crawled up her body, laying on top of her, breasts to breasts, then began kissing and licking her face, eating all of the cum that the boys had shot all over cheerleaders had begun kissing one another, licking the cum from each others' faces.

Erin sat in shock as the video ended. She actually couldn't believe what she had just seen, i she had seen live at home. She also couldn't believe how her own body felt, hot, flushed. He hard and aching and she felt a wetness between her legs.

She didn't resists as Tasha eased her back onto the bed, gently leaning over to kiss her as s onto hers. Erin's skin felt electrified as Tasha's breasts slid over hers, their hard nipples grin each other. She lay there, paralyzed, as Tasha softly kissed her lips, her cheeks, gently nibb earlobes. When she again kissed her lips, Erin felt Tasha's tongue gently pressing against h back and forth. When she let her lips part just the slightest bit, Tasha's tongue slid into her m her own tongue, caressing it.

Erin moaned, pressing her mouth to Tasha's, kissing her back now, her own tongue aggress Tasha's. Then Tasha was kissing her neck, her hands under her arms, pushing them up ove fastened her mouth on a nipple, biting down with her teeth, Erin groaned and felt a new wetn legs. Her hands went to Tasha's head, holding her against her breast, not wanting her to sto chewing on her.

Then Tasha slid over to her other breast, increasing the electricity coursing throughout her b time she felt Tasha's hand slide between her legs, slipping through the wetness between he Tasha's lips left her breast and began kissing their way down across her stomach, Erin knev
Tasha to keep going, to do what she had done earlier.

Tasha noticed Erin's legs fall open, spreading her pussy. She eagerly slid her tongue down between her pouting pussy lips and directly into her honeypot, sucking the juices that had po arched her back in ecstasy as Tasha's tongue delved into her pussy. Tasha slid her leg acro straddling her, her ass and pussy right in Erin's face.

As Tasha ate Erin's pussy, Erin writhed beneath her, squirming in delight at the sensations producing between her legs. When Tasha began sucking on her clit, Erin went crazy. Grabb squeezing in response to the electric sensations emanating from her pussy, she inadvertent right into her face.

Suddenly Erin found herself licking and sucking Tasha's pussy, sticking her tongue up into h juices that were pouring from her pussy. The two girls licked and sucked each other. When into Erin's pussy and began sliding it in and out, Erin did the same. At Tasha's urging, Erin p more fingers into her pussy, finally pumping almost her entire hand in and out as she sucked

When finally the two girls fell apart in exhaustion, several hours had passed. They crawled i arms, exchanging a long wet kiss before falling asleep. Twice more during the night they aw love, sucking each other to mutual orgasms each time.

Morning arrived and Erin awoke to the wonderful sensation of Tasha's tongue between her l knees in her hands and pulled them up to her chest, spreading her pussy and making it eve tongue-fuck her juicy hole. When she had finished cumming, Tasha crawled up her body, gi kiss, the taste of her pussy intoxicating.

"Tasha," Erin said as they broke their kiss, "does this mean I'm a lesbian?"

"Of course not, silly," Tasha laughed, kissing her. "It just means you like girls."

"But I thought that's what a lesbian was," Erin said, puzzled.

"No, a lesbian is a woman who only likes women. Maybe you're like me, you like both."

"Oh! But I've never.....I don't...." Erin stammered.

"Don't worry about it," Tasha told her, rolling off of her and getting to her feet. "I'm sure you'r be absolutely cock crazy. With a body like yours, how could you be any other way."

"What do you mean?" Erin asked, suddenly embarrassed by her nakedness.

"Look at you," Tasha said. "You are absolutely beautiful. Perfect face, more than perfect bre sweetest, wettest pussy I've ever tasted, your ass is perfect, incredible red hair. You are a 1

"Oh, my," Erin blushed, not knowing what to say. "I don't think of myself that way at all."

"I know, that's what makes you so perfect," Tasha said, leaning over and kissing her, at the a finger into her pussy and rubbing her clit with her thumb.

Erin shuddered as she sucked Tasha's tongue, her pussy spasming in instant orgasm as Ta off.

"See what I mean?" Tasha asked, removing her fingers from Erin's soaked pussy and puttin where Erin softly sucked them, tasting herself. "So get your suit on, we're going to the beach
a laugh. "And I want you to wear your new suit today."

"Not in public!" Erin exclaimed, sitting up. "It barely covers anything."

"That's the idea, silly," Tasha laughed. "But you have to put on lots of sun block so you don't Actually, I'll put the sun block on for you, to make sure it gets done right."

Laughing the two girls pulled their suits on. Erin stared at herself in the mirror, modeling her dental-floss bikini. The top barely covered her nipples, leaving most of her 36-D breasts exp was merely a strip of material just wide enough to cover her pussy lips. It was so thin and sh outline of her lips was clearly visible, made even more obvious by how wet the material alrea pussy leaking.

Before she could protest, Tasha grabbed her by the hand and pulled her to the door, grabbi and the sun block on the way. They crossed the street a couple of cars honked their horns i ran down the beach to the water, dropping the towel as they ran into the sea. They frolicked 15- 20 minutes before leaving the water. Tasha spread the towel on the sand and Erin flopp

"Here, better let me put some sun block on you before you burn," Tasha said with a wicked g

Before she could stop her, Tasha was spreading the lotion on Erin, starting at her feet and w legs. When she got up to her covered pussy, Tasha quickly let a finger slip beneath the mat down the wet furrow of Erin's pussy. Erin gasped and looked from side to side to see if anyo but there were very few people on the beach at this time of the morning and nobody was loo

When Tasha began spreading the lotion onto Erin's stomach, she was forced to lay back on got to her breasts, Erin gasped when Tasha pulled her top up and off, exposing her breasts. rock hard as Tasha rubbed the lotion on, taking extra care to pinch and pull her nipples befo on her arms and neck and face.

"When you turn over, I'll do your back," Tasha told her, removing her own top and freeing he

"Tasha, I can't lay here with my top off," Erin said, covering herself with her hands.

"Don't be silly," Tasha told her. "Of course you can. Nobody's going to bother you," she said on the towel, closing her eyes.

At first Erin lay back with her hands covering her breasts, but she finally relaxed and lay ther the feeling of the sun on her body. Gradually she fell asleep, only to be wakened by the sou male voice.

"Hi there," the voice said.

"Oh, hi, Brad," Tasha said as Erin opened her eyes, her hands automatically going to her br

"Who's your friend?" he asked, looking at Erin.

"This is Erin," Tasha said. "Erin, this is Brad, he's the lifeguard on this beach."

"Hi, Erin," Brad said, holding out his hand.

"H-hi, Brad," Erin said, sitting up and reluctantly reaching up to shake his hand, uncovering l nipples were instantly erect and she could feel herself blushing.

"Here, time for you to turn over," Tasha said, picking up the sun block.

Gratefully Erin rolled over onto her stomach as Tasha started at her shoulders applying the l

"How have you been, Tasha?" Brad asked, squatting down next to them.

"Oh, fine," Tasha replied, gently and slowly applying the lotion to Erin's back. "How about yo

"Pretty good," Brad replied. "We've had great weather, so that's been good. Maybe we can g he suggested. "It's been a while."

"That would be nice," Tasha said, squirting a big glob of lotion onto the small of Erin's back.
a hand, do her legs for me," Tasha suggested, handing Brad the lotion.

"No problem," he said with a grin.

Erin started with surprise when she heard this and began to protest when Tasha began spre her lower back. At the same time Brad began with the calves of her legs. It felt nice and Tas chit-chatting so Erin relaxed again. Then as Brad moved above her knees with the lotion, Ta her lower back to her ass, kneading and massaging her totally naked ass cheeks. Brad was upper thighs when Erin felt Tasha squeeze her cheeks tightly in her hands, pulling them apa

"You're not going to burn today," Tasha said, running two fingers covered in lotion down the ass, beneath the nearly invisible string, over the pucker of her rosebud to delve beneath the material and into her pussy, stroking once, twice, before sliding back up the crack of her ass

"There, that should do it," Tasha said as Brad too finished, letting the back of his hand brush material covering Erin's pussy.

Erin lay with her head on her arms, her face flaming red in embarrassment at what Brad mu

"Uh, thanks," she managed to say, her voice almost cracking.

"Brad, you mind doing me?" Tasha asked, flopping down next to Erin.

"No problem," Brad said, grabbing the lotion and beginning to spread it over her body.

Erin continued to lay face down as Tasha and Brad chatted. They seemed fairly familiar with Erin got the feeling that he was very nice.

"Mmm, that's great," Tasha sighed.

Erin automatically turned her head to the side and saw that Brad was between Tasha's legs back and forth, obviously stroking her pussy. He saw Erin looking at him and grinned shyly, on the ass.

"But what about sin?" Erin asked as they entered the house.

"I figure if god invented everything, he wanted us to enjoy it," Tasha said, kicking off her san you're not harming anyone, including yourself, why should it be wrong?"

"I never thought of it that way," Erin confessed, kicking her sandals off too.

"And speaking of feeling good, we should get some more lotion on you," Tasha said with a b

"Oh!" Erin gasped, a smile on her face.

"Maybe you'd like to see some of my videos," Tasha suggested, slowly reaching out and pul over her head, releasing her breasts, nipples already hard.

"Really! You wouldn't mind?" Erin asked, then gasped when Tasha leaned over and took a r gently biting it with her teeth while her tongue teased it.

"Mmm, of course not," Tasha said, releasing Erin's nipple and pulling her by the hand into th onto the bed. "I'll show you my very first one," she said, getting up off the bed and going to t and picking one. "This was on my 18th birthday," she explained as she put it into the VCR. " until this," she said, undressing and crawling onto the bed to Erin.

Erin didn't resist when Tasha tugged on her skirt, pulling it off and leaving her naked too. Th side on the bed as the video started. It showed a naked Tasha being dragged by an equally bed. The woman held Tasha's hands above her head, kneeling on her shoulders, her pussy Then a big burly man came into the picture. He had a big beer belly and looked like he hadn several days. His cock was in his hand and it was hard, though not very big. He grabbed Ta pulling them apart. Holding his cock in his hand, he leaned forward and pushed himself into Tasha's body arched upwards but she could not escape. The man had her pinned with his c the woman was kneeling on her shoulders. The man began pumping his cock in and out of T

could see how it began to glisten. The woman kneeling on her shoulders was laughing as sh cock sliding in and out of her pussy. Then Erin saw her sit on Tasha's face, mashing her pus rocking back and forth. This went on for several minutes until the man stiffened, his cock bu pussy. When he pulled his now shrunken cock from her body, Erin could see ropey strings c it.

The woman got off of her face and Erin could see that Tasha's face was covered with shiny grabbed her by the hair and pulled her towards him, shoving his cock in her face. Erin watch her mouth and began to lick and suck the man's cock, not stopping until he pushed her awa ended.

"You were a virgin before that?" Erin asked, staring at Tasha who had an ashen expression

"Yes," Tasha replied in a wooden voice.

"That didn't look like fun at all," Erin said, shaking her head.

"It wasn't. I hated it," Tasha said, turning to look at her.

"Then why did you do it?" Erin asked.

"Those were my parents," Tasha explained. "They raped me for my birthday present."

"Oh, my god," Erin gasped, her hand covering her mouth. "How awful. Then why do you ma do you have this one?"

"Oh, they taped it, told me I'd appreciate it some day. They raped me like that every day for Sometimes they'd invite their friends over and let them do what they wanted too. Somewher how it made me feel even though I hated all of them. When I had a chance, I ran away and much porn industry here it was easy to find someone to give me a chance. Now I can say ye and whatever and get paid lots of money. I'm in control. Nobody forces me to do anything."

"Oh, Tasha, that's terrible," Erin cried out, putting her arms around her, seeing the tears that threatening to spill from her eyes. "Nobody should be treated like that, especially not someo nice as you."

"Thanks," Tasha said, wiping her eyes and giving Erin a quick kiss on the lips. "But I'm pretty haven't watched that in a long time. I guess it got to me. Now let me show you one that I wa

enjoyed doing," she said, bouncing up off the bed and taking another tape and putting it in th

The video started with a scene of 6-8 girls in cheerleader outfits in a locker room. Erin recog immediately. She was the smallest of the girls. They all undressed and got into the showers. started playing and the scene soon turned into an all-out lesbian orgy on the shower floor. W were all doing what Tasha described to Erin was a daisy chain, there suddenly appeared in and several boys in football uniforms.

Erin gasped when she realized that the coach was her father and that one of the football pla brother. Very quickly the boys were all naked with a girl kneeling in front of them, sucking th Tasha was sucking her father's cock. Then all the girls got on their hands and knees with the each other in a starburst type of pattern. Behind each of them knelt a boy, with the 'coach' b They all began fucking and Erin watched in amazement with her mouth hanging open. After all moved over one girl and commenced fucking again. They did this until they had moved c circle and were back where they started. Now the girls turned around and began sucking the until they all exploded, shooting cum into their faces and open mouths.

Erin was in shock as Tasha paused the video. The frozen image on the screen was that of T of cum, a big smile, and her father's cock dangling in her face. Erin turned to look at Tasha, the same girl as that in the video.

"What are you thinking?" Tasha asked.

"It's just hard for me to see you like that," Erin tried to explain. "I mean, you seem so small a are so big...and all that stuff in your face..."

"I love the sticky feel of cum on my skin," Tasha told her matter-of-factly. "And I especially lo And I may look small, but like any woman, my pussy can stretch big enough to have a baby, handle big cocks. And there's nothing like a big cock stuffing you."

Erin sat there with her mouth hanging open. She had never heard anyone talk so dirty and s such things. Then Tasha continued the video.

"Girls, girls, what is taking you so long," Erin heard a voice out of camera on the video say.

And then appeared what was obviously supposed to be the cheerleaders' coach. For some surprised to see that it was her mother. She watched as her father grabbed her by the arm, and telling her that they'd show her what's taking so long. Her clothes were quickly torn off a

dragged to a bench where she was placed on her back, her legs spread apart and her arms girls, cum still dripping from their faces.

She saw her father slowly push his cock into her pussy, inch by inch. The camera angle was incredible. She could clearly see her mother's pussy for the first time, the fat outer lips, the i curling out from between them, grasping her father's cock as it slid in and out, and her clit, p rubbing against the cock as it fucked her.

Then she saw her father withdraw his glistening cock from her mother's pussy and stand ab sliding his cock into her mouth, laying it on her protruding tongue. He fucked her mouth whil
Then he pulled his cock from her mouth, cum shooting from the end, streaming it all over he putting it back in her mouth for her to finish sucking him.

When he was done, he laughed and told the other boys to show her too, and they did. One forward and fucked her, then fucked her mouth until they came, shooting cum all over her fa mouth. Erin was only mildly surprised that her brother Brian was the last boy in line. She wa
his cock, which was bigger than their father's, into their mother, slowly and leisurely fucking
moved up to fuck her face, Erin was surprised to see him slide his entire cock into her mouth her throat. And he fucked her like that, each time slowly sliding his cock all the way into her he began to cum, he just let his cock lay on her tongue, shooting stream after stream of cum mouth until he finished, then pushing his cock into her mouth one more time as she sucked his cock from her mouth, Erin could see that she had swallowed the entire mouthful of cum.

When her father told the cheerleaders to get cleaned up, Tasha crawled between Jane's leg and suck her pussy. She then crawled up her body, laying on top of her, breasts to breasts, then began kissing and licking her face, eating all of the cum that the boys had shot all over cheerleaders had begun kissing one another, licking the cum from each others' faces.

Erin sat in shock as the video ended. She actually couldn't believe what she had just seen, i she had seen live at home. She also couldn't believe how her own body felt, hot, flushed. He hard and aching and she felt a wetness between her legs.

She didn't resists as Tasha eased her back onto the bed, gently leaning over to kiss her as onto hers. Erin's skin felt electrified as Tasha's breasts slid over hers, their hard nipples grin each other. She lay there, paralyzed, as Tasha softly kissed her lips, her cheeks, gently nibb earlobes. When she again kissed her lips, Erin felt Tasha's tongue gently pressing against h back and forth. When she let her lips part just the slightest bit, Tasha's tongue slid into her m her own tongue, caressing it.

Erin moaned, pressing her mouth to Tasha's, kissing her back now, her own tongue aggress Tasha's. Then Tasha was kissing her neck, her hands under her arms, pushing them up ove fastened her mouth on a nipple, biting down with her teeth, Erin groaned and felt a new wetn legs. Her hands went to Tasha's head, holding her against her breast, not wanting her to sto chewing on her.

Then Tasha slid over to her other breast, increasing the electricity coursing throughout her b time she felt Tasha's hand slide between her legs, slipping through the wetness between he Tasha's lips left her breast and began kissing their way down across her stomach, Erin knev
Tasha to keep going, to do what she had done earlier.

Tasha noticed Erin's legs fall open, spreading her pussy. She eagerly slid her tongue down between her pouting pussy lips and directly into her honeypot, sucking the juices that had po arched her back in ecstasy as Tasha's tongue delved into her pussy. Tasha slid her leg acro straddling her, her ass and pussy right in Erin's face.

As Tasha ate Erin's pussy, Erin writhed beneath her, squirming in delight at the sensations T producing between her legs. When Tasha began sucking on her clit, Erin went crazy. Grabb squeezing in response to the electric sensations emanating from her pussy, she inadvertent right into her face.

Suddenly Erin found herself licking and sucking Tasha's pussy, sticking her tongue up into h juices that were pouring from her pussy. The two girls licked and sucked each other. When T into Erin's pussy and began sliding it in and out, Erin did the same. At Tasha's urging, Erin p more fingers into her pussy, finally pumping almost her entire hand in and out as she sucked

When finally the two girls fell apart in exhaustion, several hours had passed. They crawled in arms, exchanging a long wet kiss before falling asleep. Twice more during the night they aw love, sucking each other to mutual orgasms each time.

Morning arrived and Erin awoke to the wonderful sensation of Tasha's tongue between her l knees in her hands and pulled them up to her chest, spreading her pussy and making it even tongue-fuck her juicy hole. When she had finished cumming, Tasha crawled up her body, giv kiss, the taste of her pussy intoxicating.

"Tasha," Erin said as they broke their kiss, "does this mean I'm a lesbian?"

"Of course not, silly," Tasha laughed, kissing her. "It just means you like girls."

"But I thought that's what a lesbian was," Erin said, puzzled.

"No, a lesbian is a woman who only likes women. Maybe you're like me, you like both."

"Oh! But I've never.....I don't...." Erin stammered.

"Don't worry about it," Tasha told her, rolling off of her and getting to her feet. "I'm sure you'r be absolutely cock crazy. With a body like yours, how could you be any other way."

"What do you mean?" Erin asked, suddenly embarrassed by her nakedness.

"Look at you," Tasha said. "You are absolutely beautiful. Perfect face, more than perfect bre sweetest, wettest pussy I've ever tasted, your ass is perfect, incredible red hair. You are a 1

"Oh, my," Erin blushed, not knowing what to say. "I don't think of myself that way at all."

"I know, that's what makes you so perfect," Tasha said, leaning over and kissing her, at the
a finger into her pussy and rubbing her clit with her thumb.

Erin shuddered as she sucked Tasha's tongue, her pussy spasming in instant orgasm as Ta off.

"See what I mean?" Tasha asked, removing her fingers from Erin's soaked pussy and puttin where Erin softly sucked them, tasting herself. "So get your suit on, we're going to the beach
a laugh. "And I want you to wear your new suit today."

"Not in public!" Erin exclaimed, sitting up. "It barely covers anything."

"That's the idea, silly," Tasha laughed. "But you have to put on lots of sun block so you don't Actually, I'll put the sun block on for you, to make sure it gets done right."

Laughing the two girls pulled their suits on. Erin stared at herself in the mirror, modeling her dental-floss bikini. The top barely covered her nipples, leaving most of her 36-D breasts exp was merely a strip of material just wide enough to cover her pussy lips. It was so thin and sh outline of her lips was clearly visible, made even more obvious by how wet the material alrea pussy leaking.

Before she could protest, Tasha grabbed her by the hand and pulled her to the door, grabbi and the sun block on the way. They crossed the street a couple of cars honked their horns i ran down the beach to the water, dropping the towel as they ran into the sea. They frolicked 15- 20 minutes before leaving the water. Tasha spread the towel on the sand and Erin flopp

"Here, better let me put some sun block on you before you burn," Tasha said with a wicked

Before she could stop her, Tasha was spreading the lotion on Erin, starting at her feet and w legs. When she got up to her covered pussy, Tasha quickly let a finger slip beneath the mat down the wet furrow of Erin's pussy. Erin gasped and looked from side to side to see if anyo but there were very few people on the beach at this time of the morning and nobody was loo

When Tasha began spreading the lotion onto Erin's stomach, she was forced to lay back on got to her breasts, Erin gasped when Tasha pulled her top up and off, exposing her breasts.
rock hard as Tasha rubbed the lotion on, taking extra care to pinch and pull her nipples befo on her arms and neck and face.

"When you turn over, I'll do your back," Tasha told her, removing her own top and freeing he

"Tasha, I can't lay here with my top off," Erin said, covering herself with her hands.

"Don't be silly," Tasha told her. "Of course you can. Nobody's going to bother you," she said on the towel, closing her eyes.

At first Erin lay back with her hands covering her breasts, but she finally relaxed and lay ther the feeling of the sun on her body. Gradually she fell asleep, only to be wakened by the sou male voice.

"Hi there," the voice said.

"Oh, hi, Brad," Tasha said as Erin opened her eyes, her hands automatically going to her br

"Who's your friend?" he asked, looking at Erin.

"This is Erin," Tasha said. "Erin, this is Brad, he's the lifeguard on this beach."

"Hi, Erin," Brad said, holding out his hand.

"H-hi, Brad," Erin said, sitting up and reluctantly reaching up to shake his hand, uncovering l nipples were instantly erect and she could feel herself blushing.

"Here, time for you to turn over," Tasha said, picking up the sun block.

Gratefully Erin rolled over onto her stomach as Tasha started at her shoulders applying the l

"How have you been, Tasha?" Brad asked, squatting down next to them.

"Oh, fine," Tasha replied, gently and slowly applying the lotion to Erin's back. "How about yo

"Pretty good," Brad replied. "We've had great weather, so that's been good. Maybe we can g he suggested. "It's been a while."

"That would be nice," Tasha said, squirting a big glob of lotion onto the small of Erin's back.
a hand, do her legs for me," Tasha suggested, handing Brad the lotion.

"No problem," he said with a grin.

Erin started with surprise when she heard this and began to protest when Tasha began spre her lower back. At the same time Brad began with the calves of her legs. It felt nice and Tas chit-chatting so Erin relaxed again. Then as Brad moved above her knees with the lotion, Ta her lower back to her ass, kneading and massaging her totally naked ass cheeks. Brad was upper thighs when Erin felt Tasha squeeze her cheeks tightly in her hands, pulling them apa

"You're not going to burn today," Tasha said, running two fingers covered in lotion down the ass, beneath the nearly invisible string, over the pucker of her rosebud to delve beneath the material and into her pussy, stroking once, twice, before sliding back up the crack of her ass

"There, that should do it," Tasha said as Brad too finished, letting the back of his hand brush material covering Erin's pussy.

Erin lay with her head on her arms, her face flaming red in embarrassment at what Brad mu

"Uh, thanks," she managed to say, her voice almost cracking.

"Brad, you mind doing me?" Tasha asked, flopping down next to Erin.

"No problem," Brad said, grabbing the lotion and beginning to spread it over her body.

Erin continued to lay face down as Tasha and Brad chatted. They seemed fairly familiar with Erin got the feeling that he was very nice.

"Mmm, that's great," Tasha sighed.

Erin automatically turned her head to the side and saw that Brad was between Tasha's legs back and forth, obviously stroking her pussy. He saw Erin looking at him and grinned shyly, on the ass.

"That should do it," he said, still squatting between her legs, an obvious erection tenting his

"You tease, you," Tasha laughed, looking over her shoulder at him.

"How about tomorrow night?" Brad suggested. "After work."

"That sounds like fun," Tasha agreed. "Maybe Erin will join us, if you don't mind, that is."

"No, the more the merrier," Brad said, getting to his feet and adjusting his obvious problem.
then," he said, returning to his duties.

"I was so embarrassed," Erin said, looking at Tasha. "I felt so naked. And he saw what you

"Don't be silly," Tasha told her, leaning over and pecking her on the lips. "Brad's the sweetes only person I actually go out with from time to time. And he's got a perfect cock," she added
"He's eight inches and he can stay hard forever. And he has an endless supply of cum."

"Oh, Tasha, is that all you think about?" Erin asked with a laugh.

"Not all, but if you're going to have a guy, he might as well have what it takes."

The two girls lay in the sun for another half an hour before Tasha suggested they go. Erin w her top back on and they made their way off the beach, waving to Brad as they went. When the house, Tasha dragged Erin into the shower where they soaped each other, rubbing each before getting out and falling onto the bed in a 69, eating each other's pussies to orgasm.

"Oh, I hate for this to end," Tasha said as she rolled onto her back, pussy juice smeared all

"What do you mean?" Erin asked, her fingers between her legs, exploring and playing.

"Well, I have a scene to shoot this afternoon, remember? I'd rather stay here with just us."

"Oh, I forgot," Erin said. "What do you have to do?" she asked curiously.

"It's a scene where I'm a maid and the teenage boy of the house gets caught by his parents punish him," Tasha explained.

"Oh!"

"Would you like to watch?" Tasha asked. "I sure don't mind."

"Oh, I couldn't," Erin exclaimed, sitting up, unconsciously sucking her fingers that had just be legs.

"But you've been watching. What's the difference now?" Tasha asked.

"If my parents knew..." Erin began.

"They'd love it," Tasha finished. "Can you imagine how hard it is for them keeping their lives don't want to hurt you or influence you in any 'bad' way. I'm sure they're worried about how y them based on your education and religious inclinations."

"I guess I never thought of it that way," Erin confessed. "But I'd be so embarrassed."

"Well, you were embarrassed the first time I licked your pussy, weren't you?" Tasha asked.

"Yes," Erin blushed.

"Does it still embarrass you?" Tasha asked.

"No," Erin replied, still blushing.

"And how do you feel about my pussy?" Tasha asked, running a finger between her pussy li

"Oh, I-I love your pussy," Erin began. "I mean, I love the taste of your pussy. I love touching

"That's what I mean," Tasha said, smiling at her. "24 hours ago you would have died from er kind of thought. Now, you just want to taste me," she said, putting a foot up on the bed next pussy right in front of her.

Giggling, Erin leaned forward and ran her tongue through Tasha's pussy, sucking on her clit between her pussy lips.

"We'll never get out of here if we start that again," Tasha laughed, pulling away from Erin's e
"You let me talk to your parents," she said. "I'll arrange it and you won't have to be embarras

"You're not going to tell them about us, are you?" Erin asked, looking anxiously at her.

"Not if you don't want me to," Tasha assured her. "What we do together is between us. If you private, I'll absolutely respect that."

"Okay," Erin nodded.

"Fine, that's settled then," Tasha said. "Now we better get dressed and out of here."

Erin was a bit nervous on the way home. So much had changed for her in just 24 hours. She they'd look at her and know everything by the guilt on her face. When they got to the house, with hugs, commenting on how nice she looked with some color. Erin showed her the new c though not the bathing suit. She went to her room to put them away and then lay on her bed ceiling and thinking about everything. She was startled out of her reverie by a knocking on th then opened revealing her mother standing there.

"Mind if I come in?" she asked, entering without waiting for an answer, shutting the door beh

"Uh, sure," Erin replied, sitting up.

"I talked with Tasha," Jane began without preamble. "I know you know what our production with. I also saw you watching us the other day."

"I didn't mean to..." Erin began.

"No, it's okay," Jane told her, sitting on the bed next to her. "I've been worried for years how about it, I just didn't know how. I was afraid to lose you."

"Mom, you can't lose me," Erin insisted, impulsively hugging her tightly.

"I just know you've been brought up being taught certain things and I know what they say ab Jane told her. "I'm not making any excuses. And I'm not ashamed either."

"Mom..."

"So, you want to watch Tasha do her scene today, is that right?" she asked.

"I think so," Erin said, nodding. "But not if you mind."

"I don't mind," Jane told her. "But you need to understand that your father and brother and I explicit pornographic movies together. And with other people. We break all the rules of dece you've been taught. I don't want you to be disgusted by us or what we do."

"I think I'm more curious than anything," Erin told her. "I mean, I've never really even heard o like this. And I had a good talk with Tasha about what she does. She even showed me some

"She told me," Jane said, nodding. "And what did you think of them?"

"Well, I was completely shocked at first, of course," Erin admitted, "but then, then it was sort
I don't know. Maybe if I see more I'll understand better."

"Well, we're going to start in about a half an hour. If you want to watch, you're welcome," Jan getting to her feet.

"Okay," Erin said. "Thanks. I'll think about it."

"I really do love you, sweetheart," Jane said, leaning over and gently kissing her on the mou father and your brother. Brian's just having a hard time figuring out how to behave around yo want to hurt you or your feelings either."

"I understand," Erin replied.

"Okay then," Jane said, going to the door. "In any event, we'll eat dinner around 6:00. Would invite Tasha to stay?"

"Oh, yes, please," Erin said, smiling. "I really like her."

"Well, she seems to like you too," Jane smiled back as she left the room.

Erin lay on her bed, pretending to decide whether to watch the video shoot when she alread her heart that nothing could keep her away. But still she felt a bit of shyness at openly being her father and brother and mother participated, knowing she was watching.

30 minutes later found Erin opening the door downstair and peeking in. Not seeing anyone, way through the maze of rooms until she got to the bedroom set where she heard voices. At around the door, she saw that Tasha was dressed in a scullery maid's uniform, a very short covered her ass cheeks. The top was very low cut, showing a lot of cleavage. Jane was givi instructions when Tasha looked up and saw her. A big smile crossed her face which was no who glanced over her shoulder and saw her daughter in the doorway.

"Okay, let's roll," Jane said, moving behind the camera with Bill standing next to her, Tasha the bed.

"Action!" Jane called and Brian entered the room, sauntering over and standing behind Tash bed.

Tasha jumped when Brian reached out and put his hand beneath her short skirt.

"Ooh, Master Davis," she said, not moving away from his hand. "You know what your parent me while I was working."

"I don't care. They're not here now," he replied, spinning her around and pulling her close. "I something for you to clean," he said, kissing her hard, a hand going to her ass beneath the s

As Brian pulled Tasha's clothes off and undressed himself, Erin slowly inched closer, wantin
When she was right behind her parents, Bill turned and smiled at her. He put his arm around drew her close, next to him. Now Erin was only 6 feet from where Tasha was sitting on the e sucking her brother's cock, taking it all the way into her throat as she worked him. Then he p from her knees and positioned her on the bed on her hands and knees, her ass and pussy p camera.

Erin's mouth was hanging open as she watched her brother's cock slowly slide into Tasha's wide, the same pussy she had licked and sucked all night long. She felt her nipples get hard as she watched her brother's cock sliding in and out of Tasha's pussy.

Then her father released her and stepped into the scene, bellowing, "Here, what's going on Brian jumped back, his cock standing straight up in the air, glistening with Tasha's pussy juic pussy pouted open at them, juices dripping from her clit.

"What have I told you about bothering the maid while she's working?" Bill shouted at Brian a and rubbed Tasha's pussy. "I'm going to have to teach you a lesson," he said, unzipping his them drop to the floor, his cock standing hard in front of him. "You kneel down right there an learn," Bill said, pushing Brian onto his knees right next to Tasha, then stepping behind her a cock into her pussy in one hard stroke.

Tasha was mewling and cooing as Bill fucked her, fucked her hard as Brian watched from ju found herself focusing on Tasha's pussy, the way it seemed to grip Bill's cock each time he s swallowing it again as he thrust into her.

Then giving her hand a squeeze, Jane stepped into the shot.

"Just what is going on here?" she demanded, standing close by them as Bill continued to fuc

"I caught this damned boy pestering the maid again," Bill told her. "I'm teaching him a lesson

"Well, when you're done, I'll teach him one too," Jane said, glaring down at her son.

"Ah, ah, ah," Bill groaned, reaching down and grabbing Brian by the hair.

He pulled his cock from Tasha's pussy, cum spurting from the end, and pointed it at Brian, s of cum into his face. Erin almost gasped out loud when Brian opened his mouth and Bill slid pumping from the end. Brian actively sucked his father's cock until Bill pulled it from his mou grabbed him by the arm and pulled him up onto the bed and straddled his midsection, pullin her head. Reaching down, she guided his still-hard cock to her pussy, lowering herself down to him, facing the camera. Erin could clearly see her mother's clit sticking out, big and fat, as and down on Brian's cock.

Then Tasha crawled up on the bed, planting her gooey, cum-filled pussy on Brian's face, rid while Jane rode his cock. When Brian stiffened in orgasm, Jane reached down, pulling his s her pussy and directing the streams of cum to her lower stomach, just above her pussy.

As Brian finished cumming, the cum running down Jane's stomach onto and over her pussy nudging Tasha out of the way and sliding her gooey pussy onto her son's face. Erin was ast licked and sucked his mother's pussy, eating all of the cum that he himself had put there.

"Okay, cut!" Jane finally called out, dismounting Brian's face and leaning over and kissing hi "You were just wonderful!" she said. "Didn't he do just great?" she asked, looking to both Bil approval.

"I loved it," Tasha said with a laugh, "but Brian got the best of everything, I think. What did y Erin?" she asked, turning to look at her.

"Oh, I-I-I...I had no idea..." she tried to start.

"You mean Brian and your dad?" Tasha asked, directly to the point.

"Well, yes," Erin nodded, blushing furiously. "I mean..."

"You have to lose the male-female thing," Tasha said, getting to her feet and coming over to hand. "It's about sex. Pussies, asses, mouths, hands, feet, nipples: sex. It wasn't personal. I never been with a man outside of filming a video."

"Actually, I have," Brian said, laughing. "I've been involved in a few group sex parties where got blurred. But if I have a choice, I'll take pussy every time."

"Well, why don't we all get cleaned up and meet upstairs for dinner," Jane suggested. "Good

"Thanks, you two," Tasha said, giving their cocks a sqeeze. "Can I use your shower, Erin?"

"Uh, sure," Erin said, nodding.

As they left the room, Jane turned to Bill and Brian.

"Well, what do you think?" she asked.

"Well, she's as beautiful a girl as I've ever seen," Bill said.

"I think you just leave her alone, let Tasha do whatever it is she's doing," Brian suggested. "I her to help us, operating the camera," he added when he saw the look on his mother's face.
is always complaining that we don't get good camera work when it's just standing on the trip operating it."

"Okay," Jane said, "but absolutely no pushing her or teasing her or anything. Do you unders looking directly at Brian.

"Sure, I understand," Brian said. "It'll be easier now that she knows anyway. I felt so awkwar hide."

Upstairs Tasha had a quick shower then flopped naked onto Erin's bed.

"How did you like it?" she asked. "Was it fun? Did it get you hot?"

"Yes, yes, yes," Erin laughed, sitting on the edge of the bed next to her.

"You didn't mind?"

"No, of course not," Erin replied. "Why should I?"

"Good. Then lick me real quick before your mom comes. Show me how much you still love r with a laugh, pulling her knees to her chest and exposing her pussy to Erin.

Glancing quickly to the door, Erin bent over and stuck her tongue into Tasha's pussy, expec different. But it wasn't. It was the same soft, hot, sweet pussy she had tasted before. Thinkir noise from the hall, she stopped, jumping to her feet. Laughing, Tasha pulled her clothes on Erin, her tongue dueling with hers for a moment.

"Let's eat, I'm famished," she said, heading for the door.

Dinner that night was the most normal meal they had yet shared. So much awkwardness wa didn't mention anything about the shoot, instead talking about the fun Erin and Tasha had ha they finished eating, it had been decided that Erin could stay with Tasha whenever she want to the beach and shopping and other people instead of being isolated up on the mountain w factors. They decided that they would buy Erin a car in the next few days so she wouldn't ha anyone to get around.

"That was so good, Jane," Tasha said, sitting back in a comfortable lounge chair by the pool "I'm always famished after a shoot."

"Me too," Jane agreed. "It's a wonderful way to work up an appetite, isn't it?"

"I'll say," Brian laughed, suddenly stripping off his clothes and diving into the pool.

"Come on, let's go swimming," Tasha said, getting to her feet and quickly peeling out of her

"I couldn't," Erin said, shaking her head.

"Then go put on a suit," Tasha told her. "Go on, hurry."

By the time Erin got back, wearing the suit Jane had given her, everyone was in the pool, na self-consciously she slid into the water, grateful for the privacy the water afforded. It did feel especially on her sunburnt skin. She lazily floated on her back, her breasts buoyantly suspe water, her nipples poking through the material.

At one point she bumped into someone, and turning over and around, sputtering water, she only to see that it was Brian and that he was licking and sucking Jane's pussy as she sat on pool, her feet up on the edge. She stared as Brian sucked their mother's pussy lips into his and stretching them. When he noticed her next to him watching, he lifted his face for a mom her, then stabbed his tongue into Jane's hole, holding her pussy lips wide apart.

Hearing Tasha's laughter, Erin turned to see her in the same position with her father betwee her pussy. Feelings of jealously and want coursed through her body but she was far too inhi anything about it. She could only watch as her mother and her now best friend got their puss

Frustrated, Erin made some excuse and went to her room, dropping her bathing suit on the naked onto her bed. She didn't know how much time had passed when she was awakened sitting on her bed. Opening her eyes, she saw that it was Tasha and that she was still naked

"W-w-what," Erin stammered, wiping her eyes.

"Everyone went to bed," Tasha explained. "I was going to go home but I thought maybe I co tonight. It's late and I'm pretty tired."

"Sure, of course," Erin said, moving over to make room.

"You mind if I lock the door?" Tasha asked, a mischievous grin on her face.

"No," Erin replied, blushing as she realized what Tasha intended.

"Good," she said, locking the door then climbing onto the bed, pushing Erin's legs apart as s mouth on her pussy, drinking up the juices that had pooled there.

Erin's hands went down to caress Tasha's head as she ate her pussy, cumming immediately sucking on her clit. When she stopped cumming, Tasha crawled up her body to kiss her, lett herself. Then she straddled Erin's head, her pussy spread open directly above her mouth.

"Now I've got a treat for you," Tasha said, lowering her pussy onto Erin's waiting tongue.

Erin happily sucked Tasha's pussy. She noticed that it was a bit saltier and viscous than bef absolutely delicious and she didn't stop until she had made Tasha cum and licked her dry. W Tasha curled up in Erin's arms, sharing a long sensuous kiss.

"Did you like it?" Tasha asked.

"What?" Erin asked.

"My pussy, silly," Tasha giggled.

"I told you I love your pussy," Erin whispered back.

"Was it different to you?" Tasha asked.

"Maybe a little," Erin replied. "Why?"

"Because I fucked your father and your brother and let them cum in me," she said.

"You mean..." Erin began.

"You just sucked my freshly fucked pussy full of their cum," Tasha told her. "I'm glad you like

"I wish I'd known," Erin said after a long pause.

"Why?" Tasha asked.

"Maybe I would have paid more attention to how it tasted," she replied.

"You don't pay attention to how my pussy tastes?" Tasha asked with mock sternness.

"I love the taste of your pussy," Erin said shyly, reaching down between Tasha's legs and ru between her pussy lips.

"Did you really, you know, with my father and brother?" Erin asked, sliding her finger into Ta

"Mmm, yes," Tasha replied. "They're both really good fucks, so it's always fun."

"What makes them good?" Erin asked, slipping a second finger into Tasha's pussy and slow

"They have nice size cocks, to start," Tasha said, humping her pussy into Erin's hand. "And forever without cumming. And when they cum, they can get hard really quickly."

Erin withdrew her hand from Tasha's pussy, crawling down her body to glue her mouth to he licking and slurping. She felt Tasha's tongue between her legs and sighed as the two girls su to yet another orgasm before finally falling asleep in each other's arms.

The next morning, after having breakfast together, they all went out to buy a car for Erin. Wh finished, Erin was the proud owner of a blue Morris Mini Convertible.

"Oh, mom, dad, I can't thank you enough," Erin said, giving them each long hard hugs. "I'm s home, I never want to leave."

"Let's go to the beach," Tasha suggested. "It's a beautiful day."

"Oh, yes," Erin agreed. "Mom, dad, Brian, you'll come with us? It's a beautiful beach."

"I've got work to do, sweetheart," Jane told her. "I've got to edit the video we shot yesterday.

"Why don't you two go have fun," Bill suggested. "We'll all catch up later."

"Let us know if you'll be home for dinner," Jane told her.

"I will, mom," Erin said, once again hugging her. "Thanks again for everything."

Getting behind the wheel of her new car, Erin carefully followed Tasha to her house. As she jumped out of her car and came to Erin's door, opening it.

"Time to dedicate your new car," she informed Erin.

"What do you mean?" Erin asked, looking up at her.

"Give me your shorts," Tasha demanded, holding out her hand.

"What!" Erin exclaimed, looking around. "Anyone could see," she complained, her face turni

"Nobody will see anything," Tasha told her, her hand still outstretched.

Very furtively Erin slipped her shorts off, handing them to Tasha, sitting with her naked ass o
Tasha then opened the car door, causing to Erin to gasp and once again look around. Knee Erin's legs out the car then pushed her onto her back, pushing her knees up to her chest an exposing her naked pussy.

Erin was laughing out loud as Tasha began licking her pussy, driving her tongue into her. W on her clit, she came immediately, gasping as Tasha sucked her dry. When Tasha leaned b smile on her pussy-juice smeared face, Erin sat up.

"Now you'll always remember the first time you got your pussy sucked in your car," Tasha to her feet. "Come on, let's get changed and down to the beach."

They ran into the house, Erin holding her shorts against her body, the two of them laughing.
one of her thong suits to put on and Erin struggled into it. She was larger than Tasha and sh to tie the top around her back. The tops of her nipples kept peeking out and she had to read bottom was similarly tight which resulted in it being pulled tightly against her pussy.

Grabbing towels and the sun block, they crossed the street to the honking of car horns and r near the water. Dropping their stuff, they ran to the water, jumping in with peals of laughter a splashed each other. After 15 minutes of frolicking in the water, they ran to their towels, sittin sun in their faces as the sea gently lapped at the sand.

"That was great," Tasha said, reaching behind herself and untying her top and removing it, h pointing out with hard nipples which she pinched and squeezed, making them even harder a

Hesitating for a moment, Erin took her top off too, rationalizing that it was too tight anyway a doing much of a job of covering her. Her nipples were the size of pencil erasers on the ends beautiful breasts.

"You want the sun on your front or back first?" Tasha asked, holding up the sun block.

"Back," Erin said, turning onto her stomach, still self-conscious about exposing herself so co public beach.

Tasha slowly and thoroughly covered Erin's back side with sun block, paying particular atter pulling the material tightly against her pussy so that it bunched up between her pussy lips, c exposing them. When she finished, she too lay down on her back, resting in the warmth of t "Hey, you two," they heard about a half an hour later. Opening her eyes and shading them w saw that Brad was squatting at the edge of their towels. "She's starting to get a bit pink," he looking at Erin's back side. "She should turn over."

Reluctantly Erin rolled onto her back, propping herself up on her elbows. She saw that Brad' her breasts and she felt her nipples getting hard, completely out of her control.

"Brad, will you hand me that sun block?" Tasha asked, holding out her hand.

"I'll do it," Brad volunteered, picking up the lotion and squirting it into his hand and starting to to Erin's lower leg.

"Thanks," Tasha said, smiling at Erin.

When Brad got up to her knees, Erin laid back onto her towel, feeling her face flushed and a how hard and large her nipples were. As Brad spread the lotion on Erin's upper thighs, he co noticing that the material of her suit had bunched up between her pussy lips, which were co Erin gasped when she felt his fingers slide across them.

"You sure don't want to burn there," Brad commented, rubbing first one, then the other of he between his fingers before sliding up onto her stomach.

Erin struggled to remain calm, to not tense her body as Brad spread the lotion upwards, his across her breasts and caressing them, massaging them, rolling her hardened nipples betw moving up to her neck and then her arms. Erin's pussy was soaked by the time Brad got do

"Well, there you go," Brad said, sitting back on his heels. "And that was definitely my pleasu with a big smile.

"Thanks," Erin managed to croak, her whole body on fire.

"Hey, why don't you stay the night," Tasha suggested to Erin. "We can invite Brad over and stuff. What do you say?"

"Well, sure," Erin agreed, silently wondering what 'stuff' meant.

"Hey, great," Brad said, getting to his feet. "I'll come by after I close down here."

"Okay, see you then," Tasha said, smiling at him.

"Oh, god," Erin groaned, putting her arm across her eyes as she lay there.

"What?" Tasha asked, puzzled. "Don't you want him to come over?"

"It's not that," Erin said, turning to look at Tasha. "When he put the sun block on me, well, he she said lamely.

"Well, I'd hope so," Tasha laughed. "How else is he going to put it on?"

"No, I mean he touched me," she said.

"I see. Did you like it?" Tasha asked.

"Tasha!" Erin exclaimed, sitting up, her breasts swinging. "He played with my nipples and to

"Did you like it?" Tasha repeated, laughing.

"It made my whole body tingle," Erin admitted, shaking her head. "And my pussy is just so w

"That's nice," Tasha said, laying down on her towel. "You just hold that feeling until later."

Erin lay back down, the sun warming her, and let her mind run wild. She couldn't stop thinkin everything, her family, Tasha, Brad, her own body. When Tasha finally suggested that they g to scream with frustration. They put their tops on and waved to Brad as they left the beach a Tasha's house.

"Wanna take a shower with me?" Tasha asked, dropping her suit onto the floor.

"Sure," Erin agreed, stripping.

In the shower they soaped each other, and Erin felt a thrill every time Tasha's hand touched legs or her breasts, but Tasha didn't do anything more than that and Erin was feeling even m when they got out of the shower. Tasha rummaged through a drawer and found some clothi Erin.

"You can wear this if you want," she said, watching Erin's expression as she examined the b skirt. "You can adjust it however you want," she explained. "Down to your ankles or whateve

Erin pulled it on, feeling it mold itself to her body. Turning to look in the mirror, she saw that it was red, it was of such a diaphanous material that it was almost transparent with light beh molded perfectly to her breasts and her nipples pushed out through the material. She adjust mid-thigh and was looking over her shoulder at the mirror when Tasha came up and ran her hands over her bo nipples and making her wet between the legs.

"You look good enough to eat," Tasha said, kissing her softly before pulling on a short silk sl more like a lace-trimmed slip than anything. It came down a couple of inches below her ass. top accentuated her breasts, leaving nothing to the imagination.

"You look great," Erin breathed. "You have such nice clothes."

"You will too, believe me," Tasha laughed.

Erin opened a bottle of white wine and they each sat with a glass, just chatting like two scho there was a knock on the door.

"Hello, anybody home?" they heard Brad call out.

"Come in, Brad," Tasha called out.

Brad entered, looking really tanned with his hair bleached from the sun and his bright blue e he had a shirt on now, Erin could still see the muscles rippling beneath it.

"Wow, you two look great," he commented as he took in their outfits. "I think I'm way underd

"Don't be silly," Tasha told him, moving over so he could sit next to them. "We're the flames, moth."

Tasha poured Brad a glass of wine and the three of them continued talking. Brad learned ab background and she learned that he was working as a lifeguard for the summer before goin found herself relaxing as she realized that he was a really nice boy. The trepidation she had seeing him again after he had touched her like that melted away and she laughed and enjoy

At one point Tasha called and ordered some delivered dinner and when it arrived they all at more bottles of wine disappeared before they finished eating, sitting back with full bellies an sober. Erin had never drunk so much in her life and she found herself almost floating at time tingly and hypersensitive.

Erin found herself sitting back on the sofa, one foot up. Her tube dress had ridden up on her it was barely covering her pussy. Tasha shuffled over next to her, snuggling up against her s arm drape across her shoulders. Brian was sitting in a chair directly across from them, a grin

"How about some dessert, Brad?" Tasha asked, bringing her feet up onto the edge of the so pussy to him.

Reaching between her legs, Tasha spread her pussy lips apart with two fingers as Brad crav fastened his mouth on her bald pussy. Erin watched in surprise as Brad sucked Tasha's pus her. Tasha was leaning against her, her body writing in delight as Brad's tongue did its magi legs. When her body spasmed in orgasm, Tasha clutched Erin's hand against her breast as Erin could feel her hard nipple pressing into the palm of her hand.

"Mmm, nice," Tasha said, reaching down and lifting Brad's face with a finger beneath his chi vanilla," she explained, "now try strawberry."

When she said that, Tasha hooked her left arm around Erin's uplifted knee and pulled it to th her legs and exposing her pussy. Before she could react or protest, Brad's tongue was slidin

Erin arched her back in ecstacy as Brad hooked her left leg with his arm and put her leg ove Brad ate her pussy, Tasha pulled her top down, releasing her breasts, and leaned over and nibbling on her nipples. She felt Brad slip first one, then two fingers into her tight virgin puss stiffened in apprehension until she felt him stop when he felt her barrier. He gently sucked h slid his fingers in and out of her sopping wet hole. Her body shuddered in orgasm and she fi Brad's head away from her pussy. The sensations were too much for her.

Brad sat back on his heels, his face shining with pussy juice, a big smile on his face.

"That was the best dessert I've ever had," he said with a laugh. "You two have to have the ta the planet."

"Now it's our turn," Tasha informed him, sitting up. "You sit here now," she instructed, sliding making room for him to take her place sitting right next to Erin, who still hadn't pulled her dre cover her breasts.

As Tasha pulled his shorts off, releasing his rock-hard cock, Brad cupped Erin's breast and suck on her nipple. She gasped as at the same time his other hand slid between her legs to She watched as Tasha grabbed Brad's cock and began to lick and suck it, her eyes never le how she teased the slit at the end with the tip of her tongue, how she would suck just the he swirling around the shaft at the same time. Then she would slowly lower herself until his enti disappeared into her mouth.

When Brad began to make some moaning and groaning noises, Tasha stopped pulling Erin'

"Come on, you help," she told her as she pulled her onto her knees next to her.

Erin could only stare at Brad's cock in Tasha's tiny hand as it stood straight up right in front felt Tasha gently pushing the back of her head, so taking a big breath, she stuck her tongue touch Brad's cock. She was instantly surprised by how warm and soft it was, even though it Tasha took her hand and guided it to Brad's cock, releasing him and leaving Erin with sole p

Erin leaned forward once more, the tip of her tongue probing the slit and tasting the droplet had appeared there. It was viscous and a bit salty, but she liked it and continued licking the cock. Then she opened her mouth, letting just the head in, closing her lips around the shaft whole mouth close on him, tasting him. She loved the feel and taste of his cock in her mouth pussy get wet, juice running down the inside of her thighs.

Tasha watched with delight as Erin quickly proved to be a natural cocksucker who obviously had both hands wrapped around Brad's cock and was attempting to take more and more of Quickly pulling her clothes off, Tasha reached for Erin's tube dress and pulled it up over her her completely naked on her knees in front of Brad.

She immediately grabbed his cock as soon as her arms were freed and held it, examining it sticking out her tongue and licking it from base to tip. Tasha got behind Erin, her arms aroun her breasts and playing with her nipples.

"Put it between your tits," Tasha whispered in Erin's ear.

Erin looked up at Brad's face which had a rapturous look on it. She blushed, realizing that it causing him to look that way, then leaned up and forward, wrapping her big breasts around cock. With Tasha's hands covering hers, Erin slid her breasts up and down Brad's cock. She to lean forward and lick the head of his cock as it appeared.

Then she released her breasts and just began sucking on him, almost in a frenzy. Brad bega at the pleasure Erin's mouth was creating on his cock.

"He's about to cum," Tasha breathed in Erin's ear. "His cock is going to suddenly get bigger going to shoot into your mouth," she whispered as Erin continued sucking Brad's cock. "Just she cautioned. "When you think your mouth is full, just swallow and keep on sucking."

Tasha watched in fascination, her face just inches from Brad's cock, as Erin sucked him. Bra his hips, pushing his cock into Erin's mouth as her eyes widened in surprise, and Tasha kne getting her first mouthful of cum. Brad sank back onto the sofa and Erin kept her lips clampe shaft of his cock. Tasha could hear her breathing through her nose, a real sign of a natural c

Then Brad just collapsed into the sofa, his mouth hanging open as he stared at the beautiful mouth wrapped around his cock. Erin sucked hard as she pulled off of Brad's cock, gulping a tongue reached out to probe the slit one last time. She gasped for breath and Tasha saw Br coating her mouth, some dribbling from the side of her mouth. Erin licked her lips, swirled he in her mouth and swallowed again, a surprised smile on her face which Tasha leaned over a her mouth with her tongue, tasting Brad's cum in her mouth. She licked the bits that had esc her again.

"That was incredible," Tasha said, beaming at Erin. "You did that like you'd been doing it for liked it, didn't you?"

"Oh, it was wonderful!" Erin gushed, totally surprised. "It feels so soft and hard and it tastes

"Did you like his cum?" Tasha asked, her eyes sparkling.

"Oh, yes," Erin breathed, blushing completely red, her green eyes sparkling.

"Do you like it more than my pussy?" Tasha asked with a laugh, seeing the look of surprise

Tasha laughed as Erin blushed, saying nothing.

"Come on, let's go into the bedroom," Tasha suggested. "We can play there."

Erin was excited and afraid as they went into the bedroom. So much was happening and so still spinning from the wine she had consumed. But one thing she knew, she wanted to feel hot cum into her mouth again. That had been the most exciting thing that she had ever expe she loved Tasha and loved eating her pussy, nothing was better than that sensation of a co thicker and then exploding, streams of hot cum shooting into your mouth.

"Only one rule," Tasha said, grabbing Brad by the cock and pulling him onto the bed with he Erin. If you want to fuck, you can fuck me. All you want. Okay?"

"Sure," Brad agreed, shrugging.

"Good. Then fuck me now," Tasha said with a laugh, spreading her legs and pulling him into that," she said, thrusting up against him as he speared her with his cock. "Come sit on my fa said, reaching over and taking her hand. "Let me lick that sweet pussy of yours."

Erin straddled Tasha's face facing Brad. She could clearly see his cock glistening as it slid i Tasha's pussy. She gasped when she felt Tasha's soft hot tongue in her pussy and her nipp more. Brad leaned forward and kissed her, long and soft, his tongue playing with hers as he Tasha's pussy. Then he leaned down and began sucking on Erin's nipples, his hands on he them, pinching and pulling on them while Tasha continued to eat her pussy.

After 15-20 minutes Brad started grunting as he fucked Tasha, getting close to an orgasm. T spoke from between Erin's legs.

"Do you want him to cum in your mouth again?" she asked, licking Erin's pussy.

"Oh, yes," Erin moaned, her eyes glazed. "Yes, cum in my mouth again."

Brad groaned and pulled his cock out of Tasha's pussy, wet and glistening in front of him. Ta from beneath Erin and watched as she crawled forward, opening her mouth and letting Brad Erin closed her lips around his cock and sucked with her whole mouth, tasting Tasha's puss she got to work really sucking on him, teasing him with her tongue. It wasn't a minute before swell and then explode, cum shooting into her mouth.

This time she sucked and sucked, not stopping until there was no more cum to be gotten fro Releasing him, she smiled at Tasha, cum covering her teeth, before gulping and swallowing searched out the remainder with her tongue and swallowed once more, licking her lips.

"Oh, I just love the taste of cum," she sighed.

"You are crazy!" Tasha laughed, tackling her on the bed and kissing her, tasting Brad's cum mouth.

Brad dove between Erin's legs, his mouth finding her pussy. The rest of the night was one lo experience. Erin would fall asleep only to be awaked by someone licking her pussy or suckin
Or she would awaken to find Tasha rubbing her pussy on her mouth or Brad pressing his co
She lost track of the number of times he came in her mouth.

When she finally awoke the next day, it was to Brad fucking Tasha from behind, his cock slid her pussy. She lay there watching the two of them, one hand idly between her own legs rubb her clit. When Brad finally groaned and said he was going to cum, Tasha told him to cum ins finished and pulled his cock from Tasha's pussy, Erin could see her pussy gaping open, cum dripping from her slit. Instinctively Erin crawled over and licked Tasha's pussy from behind, s cum cocktail that filled her gooey pussy. Tasha sighed as she felt Erin tonguing her, sliding h into her hole as she sucked her, eating the cum that Brad had just put there. Finally Tasha fe bed on her back, her feet flat on the bed, her hands covering her well-used pussy.

"God, I'm fucked out," Tasha laughed. "That was a great night."

"That was the best night I've ever had," Erin said with a laugh. "I can't believe me."

"I know I died and wound up in heaven," Brad said, shaking his head. "I hate for this to end."

"Who says it's going to end?" Tasha laughed. "There's always next time. And I just know tha to have your cock in her mouth again; am I right?"

"Mmm, yes," Erin agreed.

"Well, I gotta get to the beach," Brad said reluctantly. "Work, you know."

"We'll come over later and get some sun," Tasha promised. "Thanks for being such a good f

Erin laughed when Tasha said this and Brad kissed each of them before leaving.

"Oh, Tasha, that was incredible!" Erin said when Brad left, hugging her tightly. "I've never ha

"Just think, you're just starting, too," Tasha laughed. "It's only going to get better."

"Why didn't you let Brad fuck me too?" Erin asked.

"I didn't think you were ready to take that step yet," she replied. "There's plenty of time. Just it, you just sucked a strange boy's cock and swallowed his cum at least a half a dozen times even touched one before. And in between and during that you were getting your pussy suck were sucking my pussy. I mean, that's a pretty full day for day one, isn't it?"

"I guess so," Erin laughed. "And I was afraid of trying that, too. Thanks for looking out for me

"That's what friends are for, to look out for each other," Tasha said with a shake of her blonc going to take a shower and then sleep some more," she said. "Wanna join me?"

"Yes!" Erin said, jumping up from the bed and racing to the shower with Tasha. They washe other, laughing the whole time, then returned to the bed and crawled into each other's arms, asleep.

They awakened a couple of hours later and shared a leisurely late breakfast, sitting naked a kitchen. They then pulled on their suits and grabbed towels and sun block and went across t onto the beach. They waved at Brad when they saw him. Dropping their towels on the sand, water, enjoying the coolness of it on their bodies before exiting and sitting on their towels.

This time Erin didn't hesitate removing her top when Tasha did. Tasha grabbed the sun bloc it to Erin, who lay back on the towel, enjoying the sensation of Tasha's hands sliding all over they slid into her pussy and rubbed her there, she just sighed. Then she felt her hands slidin breasts, her nipples hard. Tasha finished and they lay back, napping in the hot afternoon su

"Hey, hey, you need to turn over," Erin heard, bringing her to consciousness.

Sitting up and shading her eyes, she saw Brad standing at her feet, smiling at her.

"You've been there for over a half an hour," he explained. "With your skin, that's enough. Tir

"I'll need some sun block on my back," Erin said with a smile.

"I think I can manage," he grinned at her.

Brad started at her feet, working his way up her legs to her ass. He let his hands slide down ass into her pussy, feeling her wetness before changing position to kneel at her head to do h

"Prop yourself up on your elbows," he instructed her as he released his cock from his baggie

Doing as he instructed, Erin saw surprised when she bumped into his erect cock sticking in h looking from side to side and seeing nobody looking in their direction, she opened her mouth on him while he slowly spread the lotion on her back. He quickly finished spreading the lotio front of her, one hand on the back of her head as he pumped his cock in and out of her suck fucking her. Tasha had rolled onto her side, her head resting on her hand, watching.

"Oh, yeah, oh, yeah," Brad growled, thrusting harder into Erin's mouth. "I'm cumming now, h cried, stiffening as his balls spasmed, cum shooting into Erin's mouth.

Still not using her hands at all, Erin sucked Brad's cock, not stopping until she got every drop to go flaccid. Only then did she let his cock fall from her mouth.

"I'd say you got your sun block," Tasha observed with a laugh.

"Thanks, Brad," Erin said, smiling up at him. "I really do like sucking your cock."

"I like it too," he said with a laugh. "Please do it whenever you get the urge."

"I think I've opened Pandora's Box," Tasha laughed as Brad walked away. "Now kiss me so she said, rolling over on top of Erin and kissing her, their tongues swirling together. "Sucking public on the beach, imagine that," Tasha said in mock rebuke. "Next thing you know..." she got a far-away, glazed look in her eyes.

"What?" Erin asked, sitting up and looking at her.

"Just a wisp of an idea that floated through my head," Tasha said, shaking her head and sm

"Well, what was it?" Erin asked. "Unless it's none of my business, of course."

"Hey, I have no secrets from you," Tasha told her. "You know more about me than your pare anyone that first video before."

"I didn't know," Erin said. "Sorry."

"No, just so you understand," Tasha told her. "I feel like we're sisters or something. I feel like you."

"Oh, Tasha, you can," Erin said, reaching out and hugging her. "And you are my sister, the o had."

"Thanks," Tasha said, wiping her eyes.

"So now you can tell me?" Erin asked.

"I was just thinking about you and Hot Productions," Tasha said carefully.

"Me! What do you mean?" Erin asked.

"Well, like you being in shoots with me," Tasha said.

"You're joking!" Erin exclaimed. "You're not serious!"

"I told you it was just a wisp of an idea," Tasha said. "Come on, let's go to the house. Watch Brad's cock made me horny. Now all I can think of is eating your pussy."

"Tasha!" Erin exclaimed, grabbing her top and tying it on. "Shame on you! You'll have to cat said, jumping to her feet and running for the road, her big breasts swinging and bouncing, fa top just as she got to the road. Two cars screeched to a stop as she ran across the road, he swinging. She couldn't stop laughing as she ran into the house ahead of Tasha, running into falling onto the bed, panting from the exertion of running.

Tasha ripped the thong from Erin's body, diving into her pussy, her tongue slashing her clit a devour her pussy. Erin pulled Tasha into a 69, pulling her thong aside to slide her tongue int honey well. They both came twice before they stopped, laying on their backs panting for bre

"You really think I could do videos?" Erin finally asked softly.

"Oh, yes," Tasha replied. "I think you'd be a natural."

"But I'm still a virgin," Erin reminded her. "I don't even know if I'll be able to do it or if I'll like it

"You'll love it," Tasha told her. "Trust me on that one. I've been with you. I've watched you su You'll love fucking."

"Maybe I could try it with Brad," Erin suggested.

"Do you want to fuck Brad?" Tasha asked.

"I don't know," Erin shrugged. "Why not? I mean, if I'm going to do it, he's nice. And I do like cock."

"I think if you're going to do it, you should make it your first video," Tasha said slowly.

"You mean like yours?" Erin asked.

"No, I don't mean getting raped against your will," Tasha said. "I mean making a video where virginity is part of the movie. It would be an incredible thing to have, not to mention how hot i And that's always the bottom line, making money."

"Do you make a lot of money?" Erin asked.

"This place is $5000 a month to rent," Tasha told her. "I get a minimum of $1000 a shoot. So $5000, especially if I have to do a lot of guys or something. Sometimes I do a shoot every da usually manage to do 15-20 shoots each month."

"That's incredible!" Erin said, shaking her head in disbelief. "My parents pay you that much?

"They're the ones really making the money," Tasha laughed. "I'll bet they make $50,000 prof they produce. And they produce almost 200 a year. So you do the numbers."

"That's a lot of money," Erin said, her eyes wide.

"A video of you losing your virginity they'd probably make $250,000 on. It would be a huge s her.

"Wow. They're rich then," she said.

"I'd say," Tasha agreed. "I'm hoping to ask them for a different deal soon, something with a p involved."

"Will they do that?" Erin asked.

"Maybe, if I agree to be exclusive with them," Tasha replied.

"You work for other people too?" Erin asked.

"Oh, yeah, a couple other production companies," Tasha answered. "In fact, I have a shoot t them. A big shoot too. Good money. If you stay here tonight, you can come with me tomorro want."

"That would be okay?" Erin asked.

"Sure, why not? It's my shoot and I can have anyone I want there with me," Tasha told her. "

"Sure, yes," Erin agreed.

"Great! Let's take a shower and go out to dinner," Tasha suggested, jumping up off the bed.

Hours later they finally made it back to Tasha's, stuffed from a great dinner and exhausted fr night before it. Erin called home and told her mother of her plans and promised that she'd be night for dinner. They crawled into bed and quickly fell asleep in each other's arms, not waki next morning.

"What should I wear?" Erin asked when they got up.

"Anything you want," Tasha told her. "Take whatever you like."

Erin found a tube top that would fit her, though it totally accentuated her huge breasts. She f mid-thigh skirt to go with it while Tasha gathered her things together.

"Ready?" she asked.

"Yup," Erin replied, nervously smoothing down the front of her skirt.

"Hey, no need to be nervous," Tasha laughed. "I'm the one doing the scene, not you."

"I know, it's just that...well, I don't know anyone," Erin said.

"That should make it easier," Tasha said. "I'd think it was a lot harder watching while your fa there."

They jumped into Tasha's car and dashed off into traffic, finally pulling into the parking lot of like a warehouse. Following her inside, Erin was surprised to see a basketball court in one s warehouse and what looked like locker rooms in another. The room had about a dozen peop all black. She and Tasha were the only white people there.

Now, Erin had not had any contact with black people in her life, and even though she had no prejudice towards them, she felt a bit uncomfortable as they made their way over to the larg people.

"Hey, Tasha," a big, heavy-set looking man said, giving her a hug. "And who's this, your own fluffer?" he asked with a big laugh.

"Hi, Jamal," Tasha said, laughing with him. "This is my friend, Erin. And she's not in the busi

"That's a shame," Jamal said, looking Erin over from bottom to top. "But no matter, the cloth there. We'll start with a cheerleader's outfit, okay?"

"No problem," Tasha said, taking Erin by the hand as she went over to the clothes rack.

"What's a fluffer?" Erin asked as Tasha undressed and pulled on a cheerleader's outfit.

"It's a prep person," Tasha told her. "They suck the guys off camera to keep them hard for th lots of time and film," she explained. "They should have one here today because I've got to t team, five guys, first individually, then as a group. So they'll have someone keeping them ha turn."

"Oh!" Erin said, her eyes wide. "And they thought I was here for that?"

"Some girls have their own personal fluffers," Tasha said, "so it's not that unusual. And you a sex," she said with a smile, kissing her.

They walked back over to the group where five of the men, big tall men, were dressed in bas Jamal gave them some last-minute instructions and then stepped behind the camera. Erin s

"Action!" Jamal called out and one of the men grabbed Tasha by the arm, pulling her close.

"We won the game and the bet," he said. "Now it's time for you to pay up."

"I keep my word," Tasha said, rubbing the large bulge between his legs.

Meanwhile, the other guys were pulling at Tasha's clothes, removing them and leaving her n like a tiny little girl next to those black giants and Erin was fearful for her safety as they pawe

"Okay, cut!" Jamal called out. "Now let's take it over to the locker room set."

Tasha gave a laugh, squeezing the big bulge in her hand as everyone moved over to the ne

"Okay, guys, I want this to be one at a time for now," Jamal instructed. "And action!"

Erin watched as Tasha reached into the gym shorts of one of the men and pulled his cock o loud when she saw it. It was huge, almost the size of one of Tasha's arms. She saw Tasha s mouth wide enough to suck on it, the contrast of her white skin against his black cock very s erotic to Erin's mind.

Then he was lifting Tasha up and sitting her on the trainer's table, holding her ankles in the a spreading her legs wide apart, exposing her sweet pink pussy. Stabbing a tongue that was a cock into her pussy, Erin could see Tasha writhing on the table as he licked her. Then stand the head of his monster cock at the entrance to Tasha's pussy. Erin just couldn't imagine it b fit, but as she watched, inch after inch disappeared into Tasha's pussy until she was comple

he slowly began pumping her pussy, fucking her with his huge tool.

Tasha was thrashing on the table as her tiny pussy was assaulted by the huge black cock. T stood around them watching, their equally large cocks in their hands waiting their turns. Whe pulled his cock from her pussy, already spurting cum which he directed all over her belly, sh her breasts, Erin could see right up into Tasha as her pussy gaped open.

Then he was finished and the next man took his place, sliding his cock into her already prim pussy. One by one they fucked her, covering her in cum. When Jamal finally called Cut, Tas her legs splayed, her pussy gaping open, cum dribbling, her body covered in the sticky fluid.

"That was great, Tasha," Jamal told her as she lay there exhausted from the ordeal. "Take 1 cleaned up and rest and we'll do the group scene," he told her. "Where is that damned fluffe angrily. "Maybe you wouldn't mind helping her get cleaned up," Jamal suggested to Erin.

Erin hurried over to Tasha as she lay splayed on the table, her beautiful little pussy now stre recognition.

"Are you okay?" Erin asked in concern.

"Yeah," Tasha sighed. "They're just so damned big. It takes it out of me. One is okay, but fiv tough," she said, sitting up, cum running down her body.

Hopping slowly down from the table, Tasha led Erin over to a door behind which was a full b a trail of cum having dripped onto the floor behind her. Erin watched as she got into the show the cum from her body.

"Mmm, that's better," Tasha said as she stepped out of the shower and grabbed a towel. "Th

"I can't believe how big they are," Erin said with a shake of her head. "I thought they were go in half."

"I used to think that too," Tasha laughed. "But I've got a magic pussy that seems to fit any co world. This next scene will be much harder," she said.

"Why?" Erin asked.

"You'll see," Tasha told her, kissing her. "Let's go get this over with so we can get out of here

They went back over to the group. The men were still standing around naked, their cocks da them, still huge even though they weren't hard.

"Okay, let's do the group scene now," Jamal said. "Is everyone ready?"

"Well, I'm ready," Tasha said, "but they're obviously not," indicating their non-hard states. "W fluffer?"

"She didn't show," Jamal confessed. "You think you'll be able to help us out here?"

"No way," Tasha said with a laugh. "They're killing me as it is. I'm not going to fluff them all t what you're paying me."

"What about you?" Jamal asked, looking at Erin. "I'll pay you a thousand cash if you'll fluff."

"Me!" Erin exclaimed, a hand going to her chest. "But I..."

"I told you, she's not in the business," Tasha interrupted. "She's my friend."

"What do you say?" Jamal persisted, looking at Erin. "You just need to fluff them so they're h have to get them off. That's Tasha's job."

Erin just stared at Jamal, then the five men, their huge black cocks dangling in front of them.
her nipples getting hard and knew that it was obvious to them, and her pussy was suddenly thought of how much she loved the taste of Brad's cock in her mouth.

"You don't have to do it, Erin," Tasha told her sternly. "It's not your problem, it's theirs."

"Well, maybe I could try," Erin heard herself say, "if it would help."

"That's the spirit," Jamal said, putting a hand on her shoulder. "You'll see, it's not that bad at

"Are you sure about this?" Tasha asked Erin, looking her in the eyes.

"If I don't like it I can stop, right?" Erin asked.

"Of course," Jamal reassured her.

"What should I do?" Erin asked, now a bit nervous.

"Would you be more comfortable on your knees or sitting on this stool?" Jamal asked.

"I think sitting," Erin replied. "The floor looks too hard."

"Okay, everyone, here's how we're going to do this," Jamal instructed. "As soon as Erin gets I imagine it won't take very long, get into the group scene. If you lose it during the scene, jus camera and get fluffed again. Any questions? Okay, then. Tasha, I want you on the bench. N take two more, one in the mouth and one in the ass. They'll keep rotating until we're done. C

"I'm fine," Tasha said, "but I'm worried about Erin. She's not in the business and she doesn't getting in to."

"I'll take care of Erin," Jamal assured her. "Come sit here, Erin," Jamal said, indicating a stoo

Sitting down, butterflies in her stomach from nervous excitement, Erin sat on the stool. All fiv gathered around her, stroking their cocks in their hands. Tasha watched as Jamal quietly ch camera and turned it to point at Erin. One of the men shoved his cock in her face and Erin w around it, seeing the stark contrast between her white hand and his black cock.

Sticking out her tongue, she licked the end of his cock, tasting him and finding that it wasn't different than Brad. She could taste Tasha's pussy juice on him as she opened her mouth as suck on him. With the other men encouraging her, Erin sucked on his cock, feeling it respon mouth. When he became hard, Erin released him, turning her attention to the next cock show she sucked on him, she felt hands on her shoulders, then they were sliding down into her tu breasts and pinch and pull on her hard nipples. She moaned as she felt her body respond a her mouth. The stool she was sitting on was becoming slippery from her pussy leaking all ov

She felt her top being pushed down off of her breasts as she started on the third cock, now s more confident as she successfully sucked him to hardness. In no time at all Erin had sucke to hard erections and they moved onto the set with Tasha. At this point Jamal changed the t and turned it towards the set. One of them was laying on the bench as Tasha mounted him, down onto his cock. Another got behind her and Erin watched with her mouth hanging open his giant black cock into Tasha's ass. Another was in front of her feeding his cock into her m

As the three cocks began to move in and out of Tasha's tiny body, Erin sat and watched, no her top back up and cover her breasts. As each of the men came, all over Tasha's body, the positions. Slowly but surely each one of them had her in the pussy, ass and mouth, treating rag doll.

At one point Erin noticed that Jamal was standing right next to her, his cock in his hand poin face. His cock wasn't nearly as big as the other men's and Erin eagerly opened her mouth to Though he was bigger than Brad, she was able to suck most of him into her mouth. Watchin corner of her eye, Erin happily sucked Jamal's cock, loving the taste and feel of it in her mou with her breasts, pulling on her nipples and pinching them between his fingers.

She was only mildly surprised when she felt his cock grow larger and then explode, cum sho mouth. Gulping and swallowing as fast as she could, Erin drank his cum and sucked him dry falling from her mouth as he called CUT. Tasha collapsed on the bench, worn out, and a cou over and offered dripping gooey cocks to Erin, which she sucked, cleaning them off.

Then seeing that Tasha was just laying on the bench, Erin got up, wiping her mouth with the and went to her, gently stroking her hair.

"Are you okay?" she asked, concerned.

"Yes, just totally worn out," Tasha replied.

"Come on, let's get you to the shower," Erin said, helping her to her feet.

"Just a second," Tasha said, turning and going over to Jamal. "Give me that tape you shot o demanded.

"I don't know what you're..." Jamal began.

"Give me the tape right now or I'll make sure you're ruined forever," Tasha told him. "You kn and you know I can do it."

"No big deal," Jamal said, reaching into his briefcase and handing the tape to her.

"Now my money, and Erin's," Tasha demanded, standing in front of him covered in cum, cum thighs.

"Tasha, what's the problem?" Jamal asked, pulling out a wad of bills and counting off 50 $10 and another 10 for Erin. "No hard feelings, right?" he asked.

"I'll never work for you again," Tasha told him. "You blew it."

She then turned and went with Erin to the shower and got cleaned up, leaving without giving speak to her again.

"I'm sorry that happened," Tasha apologized to Erin when they were in her car heading to he nasty business sometimes and people will take advantage of you every chance they get. It's like working for your parents. They are absolutely fair and they care about the people who w

They arrived at Tasha's house and Tasha crawled directly into her bed, exhausted.

"I've got to sleep," she said. "I'm so worn out."

"I guess I'll go home then," Erin said. "It's almost like I live here, I've been here so much."

"You're welcome to live here," Tasha told her. "I'd love having you as a roommate. But you s promised you'd be there for dinner tonight. Here's a present for you," she said, handing Erin had taken from Jamal. "I'd hide it and not let anyone see it for now," she suggested. "How do make $1,000?"

"Easy," Erin laughed. "I guess I really do like sucking cocks. I even sucked off Jamal while h At least he came in my mouth. God, I just love the taste of cum."

"I'll come visit you tomorrow," Tasha told her, kissing her tenderly on the mouth. "Have fun to

"Okay, bye," Erin said. "Hope you feel better."

"I'll be fine after a good sleep," Tasha assured her as she left.

Erin carefully drove her new car home, the top down, reveling in her newfound freedom. She Jamal's cum in her mouth, she realized, as she arrived home and parked her car. When she Jane came running up, naked, and hugged her, kissing her on the cheek, then giving her a s

"I'm glad you're home," she said. "We missed you. Did you have a good time?"

"Oh, it was fine," Erin assured her. "Tasha's the best. I think I'll take a shower before dinner time."

"Yes, we won't be eating for another half an hour at least," Jane told her.

"Um, why are you naked?" Erin asked.

"Well, to tell the truth, up until you came home, nobody really wore any clothes around the h naked pretty much all the time. We put on clothes so you wouldn't be uncomfortable."

"Oh, I see," Erin said. "Well, I don't mind. You shouldn't have to change your lives just becau I'll adjust."

"That's sweet, dear," Jane told her. "I'll tell the boys and they can do what they want, as long mind."

"No, that's fine," Erin assured her.

"Okay. You take a shower and we'll see you at dinner."

When Erin got into the shower, she discovered that she had dried pussy juice covering her i down to her knees. She smiled as she remembered how excited she had been sucking all th Tasha performing. Her hand between her legs, Erin rubbed her clit until she came before ge shower. Pulling on a long t-shirt, she went to the kitchen where she found her mother at the dishes, Brian standing behind her, his cock pumping in and out of her pussy.

"Oh, Erin, I'm sorry," Jane said when she realized she was there, twisting away from Brian a from her pussy. "Dinner is almost ready."

"That's okay," Erin said, staring at her brother's glistening cock and feeling the desire to have mouth. "You don't have to stop because of me."

"That's good, because I was just about to cum," Brian said, bending his mother over the tabl his cock into her pussy.

"Do me a favor," Jane asked. "Don't cum inside me. I don't want to be leaking all over during

"No problem," Brian said, his cock sluicing in and out of Jane's pussy, making wonderful wet
"I'm ready to blow my load," he said, pulling his cock from her pussy.

Quickly turning around, Jane took her son's wet sticky cock into her mouth and sucked him, with his balls. Brian groaned and Erin could see her mother's cheeks billowing as her mouth
She gulped it all down and continued sucking Brian's cock until he was finished cumming be

"Okay, that's dessert, now for some dinner," Jane laughed, licking her lips. "Call your father, requested.

Bill showed up, wearing clothes, and they all sat down to eat. Jane wanted to know all abou done, so Erin told them that they slept in and then went to the beach each day, that she had named Brad who was the lifeguard, how they went out to lunch and dinner each day. It was the excitement, and truth, from coming out. When she mentioned that she had accompanied shoot that morning, everything changed.

"You did what!" Jane asked sharply. "What production company?"

"It was someone named Jamal," Erin replied, surprised by her mother's hostility.

"And you watched a shoot?" Jane asked, her eyes boring into Erin.

"Yes!" Erin replied, a bit exasperated. "What's the big deal? I saw one here too, remember?"

"Yes, but that's here," Bill chimed in. "Here you're safe, with your family. We're in a very roug and there are a lot, a majority of the people out there are very untrustworthy. That's why you concerned. You didn't have any problems, did you?"

"No, not at all," Erin answered, feeling as though she really was telling the truth. "Tasha did I watched next to the camera, like I did here."

"What kind of a shoot was it?" Brian asked, a lascivious grin on his face.

"It was a cheerleader and a basketball team," Erin blushed as she replied.

"Just Tasha?" Brian asked, his eyebrows arching.

"Uh-huh, yes," Erin answered.

"What were they like?" Brian persisted.

"Well, they were all really big, and black," Erin added.

"Big tall or BIG?" Brian asked with a laugh.

"Big everywhere," Erin answered with a laugh, and the tension was broken. "I didn't know a big."

"That Tasha sure is a little cock slut," Brian said with a rueful shake of his head. "But she is

"Okay, no more shop talk at the table," Jane suggested.

"Did you like watching the shoot?" Brian asked.

"Um, it was.....exciting," Erin said, blushing.

"So what are your plans tomorrow?" Jane asked, changing the subject.

"I don't really have any," Erin admitted. "Tasha might come by, but I don't know. Are you all

"Yes, we have a couple of different shoots to do," Jane said. "And your father has hours of e Business is really good right now so we're not finding much free time."

"I understand," Erin said, nodding. "Tasha told me a little bit about her work, how she gets p

"You don't have a problem with what we do?" Jane asked, perplexed. "After the indoctrinatio school the past 6 years?"

"Well, it was a big shock at first," Erin agreed. "I didn't know what to think. And then everyon with everyone, you know, incest, adultery, that was hard for me to understand. But I've watc
I don't see you and dad loving each other any less, and I don't think anyone's hurting anyon anything they don't want to do. I've always had trouble at school understanding how if god c how could any part of it be bad in and of itself. It has to be what you do with something that or bad."

"Wow!" Brian said. "That's pretty heavy."

"I think it's very insightful," Bill said, appraising his daughter. "And very intelligent."

"What else have you thought about?" Jane asked, sitting back, her naked breasts jutting out incest."

"Well, I know it's a sin, but they made it a sin because of the problem of birth defects. They k closely related made babies, they turned out deformed. With all the modern contraceptives a not so much an issue anymore. The law says you can have sex at age 18, it shouldn't matte with as long as they agree. I guess that's how I feel about it."

"Incredible!" Brian said, staring at his sister. "That is totally cool."

"Anything else?" Jane asked weakly.

"I'm not going to take my vows," Erin declared. "There's too much of life that I want to experi Maybe later, but not now."

"What are you going to do?" Jane asked, her jaw agape.

"I'm not sure," Erin admitted. "I guess I need to get a job or something."

"You don't need to get a job," Bill said to her. "We have enough money that we can all stop w and never worry again."

"Then why are you working?" Erin asked. "Doing this."

"Because we love it," Jane answered simply. "We are all completely addicted to sex. No ma we're going to have sex be a part of everything, so why not just make money doing what you

"Oh!" Erin gasped, her mind going back to the wonderful sensation of Brad's cock in her mou spurting. She felt her nipples get hard and knew they were visible through her t-shirt. "Maybe with you somehow," she said softly.

"You want to make a video with us?" Brian asked, his eyes wide.

"Brian!" Jane said sharply. "Maybe you'd like to help with administrative things, learn to use she suggested.

"Sure," Erin said. "If I can help. I want to do something. I can't just hang out all the time, go t beach, go out to restaurants to eat."

"I think we can work something out," Bill said. "Not everyone has to work in front of the came than enough to do behind it."

"Well, we'll see tomorrow," Jane said. "Let's get this mess cleaned up and go for a swim."

It took the four of them no time at all to clear the table and do the dishes. Erin was conscious cock brushing against her a couple of times, and once she reached for the dish towel as he something into the sink and her hand brushed against him.

"Oh, I'm sorry," she said, blushing.

"No, it's hard to think of avoiding someone," he said. "We're so used to...you know."

"Yeah, I understand," Erin said, her nipples getting hard and poking through her shirt.

"Okay, that's it," Jane said, wiping her hands. "I'm ready for a nice swim."

"I'll go change," Erin said, too shy to be naked in front of her family.

When she got to the pool, they were all in the water, naked of course. Erin slipped into the w
It was the perfect temperature. She floated on her back, losing herself in the peacefulness o she heard her mother's squealing laughter and looked over to see her sitting on the side of t up on the edge and her father's face buried in her pussy. Erin experienced two simultaneous jealousy, the first that it wasn't her pussy getting licked, and the second, that she wasn't licki pussy. She realized that she missed Tasha and wished she was in bed with her, satisfying a

Climbing out of the pool, Erin felt uncomfortable, like she was left out, so she went to her roo mother's laughter the whole way. Once in her room she removed her suit and dried herself o down on her bed. Her whole world had started to change and she was stuck somewhere in t know where the rest of the change was going to take her.

She had actually surprised herself when she had responded at dinner to the questions put to ones about sex and incest. She hadn't realized how she felt until the moment she had verba between her legs, the other alternating between nipples, Erin played with herself, looking for had learned to crave. As with every other time, it took very little stimulation of her clit to trigg orgasm and Erin drifted off to sleep.

Erin awakened the next morning to the soft sound of her mother's voice and her foot being s eyes and stretching like a cat, she suddenly sat up, an arm covering her naked breasts.

"M-mom," she stammered. "I don't have any clothes on!"

"So I see," Jane replied with a smile. "And I do," she observed, looking down at herself. "An reversal, wouldn't you say?"

Laughing, Erin jumped up and pulled a long t-shirt on, covering herself.

"You could've knocked," Erin said.

"But I did," Jane answered. "You sleep like a rock."

"I was so tired," Erin said. "I just fell asleep."

"When are you going to show me the results of your shopping sprees?" Jane asked. "I'm dyi taste is like."

"Oh, mom, I'm sorry," Erin said. "Some of it I bought, some of it Tasha gave me out of her st explained, grabbing a pile of clothes from the chair and dumping it on the bed.

Jane picked through the pile, holding different things up, a smile on her face. When she pick bathing suit, Erin blushed.

"I'd like to see you model this," Jane said, holding it on one finger.

"Mom!" Erin said, snatching it from her hand.

"Well, why did you buy it if you're not going to wear it?" Jane asked.

"I did wear it," Erin replied, "to the beach."

"You wear that in public and you won't model it for me?" Jane asked, arching an eyebrow.

"Mom!" Erin said. "Okay, if you want to see it," she said, pulling the bottom on, then pulling h and putting the top on. She adjusted the top, making sure her nipples were covered. She blu them get hard and stick out. Jane's eyes didn't miss a thing as Erin adjusted the bottom, pul out from between her pussy lips, as it tended to bunch up there.

"You are incredibly beautiful," Jane commented, a smile on her face. "That looks great on yo

"You think so?" Erin asked, pleased. "It's not too much?"

"Too much isn't what most people would think," Jane said with a laugh. "I imagine they woul school, would they?"

"God, they'd think I was the world's biggest hussy," Erin laughed.

"Come on, let's get some breakfast and I'll start to show you some things downstairs," Jane

"Let me change real quick," Erin said, reaching behind to untie her suit.

"No, don't change," Jane said. "You look wonderful. Put a t-shirt on over it or something if yo uncomfortable."

When they entered the kitchen Bill and Brian were there already, dressed too, and Jason wa blushed when she saw his muscular body and remembered the last time she had seen him,

"Well, hi, Erin," he said, greeting her. "How's life on the outside?"

"Hi, Jason," Erin replied. "I've been having a great time."

"Good. Glad to see you're still here."

They all ate breakfast together, making small talk. Erin felt increasingly comfortable, mostly wasn't the object of the conversation. When they finished eating, Bill pushed to his feet.

"Well, I've got a bunch of editing to get done, so I'm going to do that," he said. "Erin, you goi your mom today?"

"I'm going to try," Erin replied.

"You'll do fine," he assured her.

They all went downstairs and Bill disappeared into the editing studio while the rest of them w bedroom set. Jane spent almost a half an hour showing Erin how the camera worked, expla controls. It seemed a bit overwhelming to her, but she paid close attention.

"The reason I'd like you to understand the camera," Jane explained, "is so that we don't hav shot, just the camera in one position at one focus. If you're doing the camera work, you can get different angles and perspectives. And you can do zooms and close-ups. Normally I do t running the camera, but when I'm in front of the camera and we don't have an extra person t with static shots. They're okay, but it's much better the other way."

"I understand," Erin said. "So what do you want me to do?"

"Why don't you start by just playing with the camera," Jane suggested. "Experiment with diff we're talking and setting up the shot. Then we'll see."

So Erin took up the camera, setting the shoulder piece on her left shoulder. As Jane talked w Brian about the shot she wanted to do, Erin played with the camera, experimenting with the how difficult it was to hold it steady without shaking. After a few minutes she felt much more

"Okay, let's do a dry run-through and see how it looks," Jane said. "Erin, that means we're g few minutes and then we'll see how it looks before deciding how to continue. So don't worry just do what you want and we'll look at it and make suggestions, okay?"

"I guess," Erin said nervously.

"Okay, come on boys, let's give this a run," Jane said.

As Erin filmed, Jason took Jane in his arms, kissing her, their tongues openly dueling with ea Brian moved behind Jane, grinding his pelvis into her ass, his hands sliding around her body breasts, Jane's hands wandered down Jason's body to squeeze and massage his cock thro her knees, with Brian pulling her shirt off over her head, Jane undid Jason's pants, pulling th releasing his cock.

Erin took a deep breath when she saw Jason's cock again. It looked completely different to h past couple day's experiences. Now it didn't just look big, it looked delicious. Her mouth was sympathetically as her mother began to suck on him while Brian knelt behind her, now nake playing with her breasts and sliding down to rub her pussy. After a few minutes Jane release turned around and began sucking on Brian's cock.

"Okay, that should do for a start," Jane said, releasing Brian's cock and standing up. "Let's s got," she said to Erin, taking the camera from her and plugging in a jack to the TV monitor a film.

They all stood together watching the footage Erin had shot. Until Jane had begun sucking Ja looked like a static shoot, no change of angle or focal zoom. Then it zoomed in on Jason's c mouth. When Jane turned to suck on Brian the shot stayed zoomed and didn't come back in cock was in Jane's mouth.

"Okay, not bad for your first try," Jane said, rewinding the film. "You didn't do anything at all started sucking Jason," she noted. "Next time, when you see my hands sliding down his boc close in a bit and follow my hands," she explained as that scene went by. "Same as when B and is playing with my nipples," she said. "You want to zoom it so the detail can be seen. W from Jason to Brian, you need to zoom out, then back in. If you stay zoomed in, you lose all did here."

"Oh, I did terrible!" Erin cried, shaking her head.

"No you didn't," Jane told her. "You're learning. Now let's try a dry run of Jason going down suck Brian," she suggested. "You'll need to be both very close physically with the camera ar zoom," she explained. "Extreme close-ups are the rule for this type of shot. You think you ca asked.

"I'll try," Erin agreed.

Jane unplugged the monitor and handed the camera back to Erin, then climbed on the bed a her knees up at her chest and her pussy exposed.

"Start with a close-up of me, then Jason will enter the shot," Jane instructed.

Erin moved closer with the camera and saw her mother's pussy up close for the first time thr
The sight of her big fat clit sticking out reminded her of Tasha's pussy and she felt her nipple her pussy wet as she filmed. Then she felt Jason's hand on her back and his face moved int first. She held the camera still, very conscious of his hand on her back, and watched as his t slid into her mother's pussy.

Jason moved his hand from her back to Jane's pussy, holding her pussy lips spread apart a her. When Brian climbed up on the bed to kneel above Jane's head, Erin slowly panned bac whole scene as Brian's cock disappeared into Jane's wide-open mouth.

"Oh, god, I'm cumming," Jane moaned, clutching Jason's head and pulling him tight into her she cried, pushing him away and sitting up laughing. "This is supposed to be a dry run and r

Everyone laughed as Erin lowered the camera. They reviewed the footage she had shot and suggestions, but overall everyone felt that she had done a good job.

"Let's try shooting the scene," Jane said. "Start to finish. I think Erin's doing good enough tha Erin, when we do penetration shots, very close up, okay. You want the person watching to th there."

"Okay," Erin agreed. She didn't know how she was going to do this. Her pussy was on fire a damp with her juices. Her nipples were so hard they hurt.

They began the scene and Erin quickly found herself immersed in the technical aspects of fi about how excited and horny it had made her. When Jason slid his cock into Jane's pussy, E watching how her mother's pussy lips wrapped themselves around the shaft of his cock, hole as it pumped her slurpy hole.

Erin was bent over at the waist, the camera just inches from Jason's cock as it slid glistening her mother's pussy. Panning up her mother's body to her full breasts heaving, her nipples ha knelt on the edge of the bed as she focused on her brother's cock in her mother's mouth.

She jumped when she felt a hand slide up her leg from the knee to squeeze and knead her a saw that it was Jason's hand and that he was smiling at her while he continued to fuck Jane as his hand started to slide into the crack of her ass, Erin panned back, standing by the bed took both cocks. At some signal that she missed, both Brian and Jason began groaning, stra approached orgasm. First it was Jason, who pulled his spurting cock from Jane's pussy and cum all over her belly and pussy. Then it was Brian's turn, shooting his cum all over Jane's f Erin's knees were trembling at the sight of all that cum shooting all over her mother. She yea mouthful of the tasty stuff.

"That was great, guys," Jane said, sitting up, cum dripping from her face onto her breasts. "H Erin?" she asked, wiping cum from her face and licking her hand.

"I think it was okay," Erin said. "But I don't really know."

"Well, let's look at it," Jane said, getting to her feet. "Go ahead and plug the camera into the said. "My hands are too sticky."

Everyone laughed as Jane smeared the cum covering her belly up over her breasts, wiping as the video rewound. Erin was very conscious of her mother's naked body next to hers, the her. Jason was on the other side and his cock was dangling right next to her arm. Brian was and between she and her mother.

"Oh, honey, you did great!" Jane said after the footage ended, turning and hugging her, forg was smeared with cum. "In no time you'll be as good as anyone out there.

"Yeah, nice job, sis," Brian said, a hand on her shoulder.

"Well, I certainly enjoyed it," Jason said with a laugh.

"Well, what now?" Erin asked, embarrassed as she remembered Jason's hand on her leg ar

"Now I take a shower and we're done for now," Jane told her.

"I'll join you," Brian volunteered, following her.

That left Erin alone with a naked Jason. She suddenly felt very uncomfortable, and vulnerab

"I hope you didn't mind that," Jason said, putting a hand on her shoulder which he let trail do her ass. "I just couldn't resist."

"It surprised me, made me jerk the camera," Erin replied, not moving away from his hand.

"You've got an ever sexier ass than your mother," Jason said, sitting on the stool behind him closer with his hand on her ass.

"I don't think...they might come back..." she started to say as Jason slid his hand beneath he her naked ass, just as she also heard her mother's pealing laughter coming from the shower

"Does this feel good?" he asked, his other hand joining the first, cupping both of her ass che squeezing them gently. "Do you like it?"

"It feels....nice," Erin admitted, squirming a bit and having the effect of pushing her ass into h
"But..." she started to say then gasped as Jason trailed his hands up her back beneath her t around her rib cage to cup her breasts, his thumbs unerringly finding her rock-hard nipples a

"You've got a million dollar body," he said, smiling at her as he released her, removing his ha beneath her t-shirt.

"I-I-I don't know what to say," Erin mumbled, her face flaming red to match her hair, though n away.

"Just enjoy it," Jason told her. "I think I should go find your mother," he said with a laugh. "Yo all worked up."

Looking down, Erin saw that his cock had indeed gotten hard again and was actually touchin t-shirt.

"She doesn't mind when it's not for a video?" Erin asked, not moving, her eyes darting from h cock, back and forth.

"Your mother is one of those perfect women who live for sex," Jason told her, a smile on his loves it. And luckily your father understands her. They're a great couple and I respect them a "Well, unless you're going to help me with this," Jason said, holding his erect cock in his han up, pressing his naked body up against Erin, "I've got to find your mother."

"Oh, I couldn't," Erin protested, putting her hands out in front of her on his chest, feeling his rippling beneath her fingers. "If she knew..."

"Knew what?" Tasha's voice asked as she walked into the room.

"Tasha!" Erin cried out, running over and hugging her. "You're here!"

"Yes, I'm here," Tasha replied with a laugh. "And none too soon, it seems," she added, looki his hard cock in his hand. "What do we have going on here?"

"This little hottie got me worked up and I told her if she didn't want to help me do something go find Jane," Jason told her with a laugh.

"Well, we wouldn't want Jane to have a fit, would we?" Tasha laughed. "Why don't you sit ba take care of that," she suggested. "You don't mind if I suck him off, do you, Erin?" Tasha ask in her eyes.

"N-no," Erin stammered as Tasha put an arm around her waist as she leaned over and suck her mouth.

"Mmm, that's nice," Jason sighed as Tasha engulfed his cock.

Erin felt his hand slide up her leg to cup her ass once again as Tasha continued to bob up a cock, sucking and slurping. Erin's knees trembled when she felt Tasha's hand slide up her o stopping until she had slid beneath the material of her suit into her soaking pussy. She sagg Jason's body as Tasha made small gentle circles on her throbbing clit. Then she felt Jason's her ass to join Tasha's in her pussy. She groaned out loud now as Jason slipped a finger int hole. She had just had her second orgasm when Jason groaned and held Tasha's head in h his cock pulsing and she knew that he was filling Tasha's mouth with his hot cum.

As Jason continued to gently finger-fuck her pussy, Tasha stood up and held Erin's face in h over and kissing her on the mouth, pushing her tongue between her lips. As Erin returned he flood of fluid push into her mouth along with Tasha's tongue. Gulping, she realized that it wa that Tasha was sharing with her. She rode Jason's finger to one more orgasm before Tasha the sound of Jane's voice approaching.

Just as suddenly as Jason's hand disappeared from her pussy, Tasha engulfed his cock wit Jane and Brian entered the room.

"Well, Tasha," Jane said with a laugh. "Glad you could make it."

"Oh, hi, Jane," Tasha said as she rose up off of Jason's cock. "I just couldn't resist. He was go find you."

They all laughed and Jane informed Tasha of what they had accomplished. They all watche more, making critiques here and there, but in the end Jane pronounced it good enough for E editing process.

"Well, I hope you're all hungry," Tasha said. "Because I deliberately didn't eat so I could eat

"Sorry, but I've got to go," Jason said. "Previous engagement."

"Oh, great, get your cock sucked and run," Tasha said mockingly.

"And very well at that," Jason said with a laugh as he got to his feet. "I'll see everyone later,' he pulled his clothes on. "You did great, Erin," he said, kissing her on the cheek.

"Thanks," Erin said, for everything, she thought silently.

They all went upstairs and prepared lunch and then called Bill to join them. Lunch was a fun and Brian complimented Erin's handling of the camera earlier and Bill said that the editing w When Jane brought up how much fun Erin seemed to have had during her time with Tasha, agreed.

"It's like having a sister," Tasha pronounced with a big smile.

"Well, Erin certainly seems happy for it," Jane observed.

"I even invited her to come with me to a shoot yesterday," Tasha mentioned.

"Yes, she told us," Jane said. "Jamal."

"Yes, Jamal," Tasha said, her eyes narrowing. "I told him I wouldn't work for him again."

"Why not?" Jane asked, alarmed. "Did anything happen?"

"No, it was just a vibe, something about his attitude," Tasha said. "And besides, even though really well, the work is just too damned hard! I'm still sore."

"Damn, I didn't think you ever got enough," Brian said with a laugh.

"From you, I don't," Tasha quipped as everyone roared with laughter.

Erin had thought that her brother's cock was big, until she had seen the five black cocks yes knew what big was. Brian's cock was nice and she knew it would be easier to suck on than t she had sucked yesterday. They had really stretched her jaw.

"Okay, let's go swimming," Tasha said brightly. "I'll help clean up."

They all pitched in and the clean-up took just a couple of minutes. This time Erin couldn't ve had to go change because she was wearing her thong suit under her t-shirt and her mother until they were all diving in, naked of course, before quickly stripping her t-shirt off and slippi water.

Tasha swam over to her and splashed her and then they were splashing and laughing just li beach. When Tasha jumped on her to push her beneath the water, Erin fought back and the together. Erin finally succeeded in pushing Tasha down and splashed to the surface, swimm jumping out, breathing hard.

"Damn, Erin!" Brian said. "Fuckin' awesome."

Erin looked at him with a puzzled expression on her face for a minute before she realized th father were both staring at her too. Looking down she saw that in her struggle with Tasha he spilled out of her top and they were totally exposed to everyone's view.

"Oh, my god," Erin gasped, turning her back on them and tucking her breasts back in.

"Really nice!" Brian said, and Erin realized that by turning her back, she was showing them l just a string running down her ass crack and between her legs.

Flustered, she turned to face them, her hands over her breasts and her face red with embar

"Hey, don't let that moron upset you," Bill said, swimming over to the side of the pool and loo
"You are just incredibly beautiful and he doesn't know any other way to say it."

"Oh, dad," Erin said, smiling down at him. "I'm sorry, it's just that I'm embarrassed, you know

"I understand," Bill said, nodding his head. "You just do what's comfortable for you. And try t brother's crude reactions as a compliment."

"Yeah, that's all I meant," Brian said. "I mean, you're hot, Erin. Really hot. I guess I didn't thi school and hot went together is all."

"That's okay," Erin said, sitting on the edge of the pool, the heels of her feet resting on the d
"I know naked is normal for all of you, and more. It's still new to me."

"I didn't mean to tease you," he said as he swam up to the side of the pool where she was s

"I know," she said, smiling down at him.

She saw his eyes focused between her legs and his mouth hanging a bit open. Looking dow thong had pulled between her pussy lips again and that Brian was staring at them wrapped a of her suit. Not making a big thing of it, she ran her fingers down her suit and covered her pu looked up at her guiltily, she just smiled at him.

"Hey, let's play chicken," Tasha suggested, grabbing Bill by the arm.

Bill ducked down into the water and allowed Tasha to scramble up onto his shoulders. Brian Erin sitting on the side and said, "Come on, let's get them."

Erin slid onto her brother's shoulders, hooking her feet behind his back for balance as he mo facing Bill and Tasha. The two girls laughed and giggled and they tried to grab each other an point they all fell over into the water laughing. As Brian swam beneath his sister's legs and s Bill was doing the same with Tasha. Rather than paying attention to Tasha, Erin was adjusti tucking her breasts back in, when Tasha succeeded in grabbing her and pulling. As Erin's an attempt to stay upright, Tasha grabbed at her again just as she fell, her fingers grabbing only Erin's suit, pulling it completely off.

As Erin rose sputtering from the water, trying to cover her breasts with her hands, Brian swa lifting her onto his shoulders right in front of Bill and Tasha. When Tasha tried to push her ov forgot about covering her breasts and defended herself. The two girls each had a grip on ea and Brian struggled mightily to remain upright, but to no avail. Soon they all fell into the wate

As she struggled to the surface Erin ran face first into a very erect cock. Popping up out of th surprise, she found herself face to face with her father, a smile on his face.

"We win," was all he said.

"That's not fair," Erin automatically protested. "Tasha cheated!"

"I did not!" Tasha replied with a laugh. "How did I cheat?"

"You pulled my top off," Erin said, covering her heaving breasts with her hands as she reme

"Well, I didn't have a top either," Tasha laughed, propping her breasts up in her hands, her f her hard little nipples as everyone laughed.

"So, do my breasts still look like a 20-year-old's?" Jane asked as she joined them, holding h hands as she stood next to Erin.

"Well, Erin's only 18, but let's see if there's a difference," Tasha suggested.

"But..." Erin started to protest, then stopped, realizing how silly she was being.

Trying to act nonchalant, she lowered her hands, letting her breasts swing free. Her nipples both from excitement and also from the cool night air and the water. Her breasts stood out p chest, her nipples large and slightly upwards as her eraser-sized nubbins protruded almost a Standing next to her daughter, Jane's breasts were just as firm and upright, though slightly s

"Well, if you weren't standing next to Erin, it'd be impossible to know," Tasha observed. "But definitely a bit bigger. But you don't have any sag at all and we all know how sensitive your n she said with a laugh. "In fact, if you had the same haircuts, in the dark it would be almost im tell the difference."

"Well, I'm definitely the luckiest guy in the world," Bill said, putting an arm around both Jane

"Yes, you are," Jane said, turning and hugging him. "And don't you forget it," she said, kissin

"I'm getting cold," Erin observed, hugging herself and shivering a bit.

"Let get out," Tasha said, swimming to the side and heaving herself out, turning to sit on the pool.

"That looks good," Brian said with a grin as he swam up to Tasha, his face between her legs her pussy.

"Not tonight, Brian," Tasha said, shaking her head. "I'm still sore from the shoot yesterday. I were going to fuck me to death."

"Oh, no problem," Brian said, a look of disappointment flitting across his face. "I understand.

He looked over to his mother as Erin got out of the pool, sitting next to Tasha, hugging her k chest. Jane and Bill were still kissing and Brian knew there'd be no satisfaction for him there turned back to Tasha and Erin and struggled not to show his surprise. Tasha had an arm ar her close as Erin hugged her knees to her chest trying to keep warm. This resulted in her th tightly between her pussy lips, exposing even the pucker of her asshole.

"Why don't we get in the hottub?" Brian suggested as Bill and Jane got out of the pool, walki arm in arm.

"Really!" Erin said, sitting up and releasing her knees. "You have a hottub?"

"Sure," Brian said, disappointed that he could no longer see his sister's pussy lips. "I'll get it

"Oh, good," Erin said, hugging herself as she shivered. "I'm so cold for some reason."

"It can be that way at night here," Tasha informed her. "Especially up in the hills. It's just so something about evaporation."

"Okay," Brian called from the other side of the pool.

Erin had noticed the beautiful redwood structure with the padded top and had thought it only sunning area. She had had no idea that it was a hottub. She had never even been in a hottu of them and had always had a desire to experience one.

Getting to her feet and following Tasha over to the tub, she saw that it was bubbling all over was rising from the water. She slid in down to her chin, sighing as the warm water covered h instantly. The bubbles felt nice against her body. It was small enough that it was impossible three people and not touch each other. It was obviously perfect for two, Erin realized.

"One rule about hottubs," Tasha said, turning to Erin and grabbing the string of her thong at "absolutely NO clothes," she said, pulling Erin's thong down to mid- thigh in one hard pull.

Brian laughed as Erin struggled with Tasha, who laughed when Tasha finally held up the sli hand in triumph, then tossed it away and out of reach. Erin squeezed her legs tightly togethe when she realized that the bubbles obscured anything beneath the surface.

Erin relaxed, laying her head back and closing her eyes, luxuriating in the warmth of the wat bubbles soothing her. At one point she felt Tasha's hand slide across her thigh and gently p hooking it over her own. Her hand then gently slid between her legs, cupping her pussy.

Erin never opened her eyes, she just sighed softly, a slight smile on her face as Tasha gentl pussy. She was startled but didn't open her eyes when she felt Brian change positions and s pressing against the right side of her body. Tasha shifted a bit which resulted in Erin leaning brother, using him as much as the back of the hottub as a backstop.

She felt his arm go around her shoulders and she let her head lay on his shoulder, her leg s Tasha's. Tasha's hand was now just resting on her upper inner thigh, close to her pussy but Erin once again relaxed, letting the heat and bubbles lull her.

When Brian shifted slightly, Erin put her right hand out to brace herself and put it directly on the time she realized what she had done, Brian's hand had covered hers, gently stopping he Erin sat there frozen, not sure what to do or how to react. She could feel the heat and hardn brother's cock beneath her hand and she felt her nipples harden, even in the heat of the wat

When Brian then removed his hand from hers, she didn't pull her own hand away. Instead, s around him, gently squeezing, feeling him get even harder in her hand. She didn't stop him slid down off of her shoulder to hold and squeeze her breast. His fingers found her hard nipp tightly, causing her to reflexively squeeze his cock even harder.

Tasha's hand still rested softly on her left thigh when she felt Brian lift her right leg and hook left leg, effectively now spreading her legs wide open. As he continued to play with her left b his hand slide up her leg towards her pussy. She gasped, opening her eyes when she felt hi pussy, one finger nestling between her pussy lips, the tip pressing gently into her opening.

She looked into her brother's eyes and saw the excitement there. When she looked at Tasha knowing smile on her face. Her hand still remained resting on her thigh. When Erin felt her b begin to move between her pussy lips she arched into his hand, pressing her pussy against his cock and began pumping it with her hand.

All thoughts but the pleasure her brother's fingers were causing between her legs and the fe cock in her hand left Erin's mind. The thrill was even greater when she thought of how she w sin by committing it with her own brother. She pumped his cock while he gently rubbed her c slipping a finger into her tight hole.

Erin lost track of how many times she had cum as she humped herself against her brother's pumping his cock faster and faster, barely able to get her fingers completely around it. Finall to feel his imminent orgasm.

"I can't cum in the tub," he growled, hot wanting his sister to stop.

He pushed to his feet his cock sticking straight out in front of him, pulsating. Sitting down on the tub, he groaned.

"Almost," he said, his fist wrapped around his cock.

"Go on, finish what you started," Tasha admonished Erin with a smile. "It's not fair to leave h

Turning to look at her brother, Erin smiled, at first shyly, then lasciviously as she got on her k him. She reached out and took his cock in her hand, shivering as the dry air chilled her. Her into hard rocks as she pumped her brother's cock in her hand.

"Do it right," Tasha whispered in her ear as she wrapped her arms around her, her hands co "You know you want to," she whispered, her tongue darting out to flick Erin's earlobe.

Leaning over, Erin licked the head of her brother's cock. As he gasped in surprise, she open began sucking on him. At first she tasted only the chlorine- tainted water of the hottub, but th to taste that wonderful taste of cock as he began to leak into her mouth.

Brian watched in amazement as his beautiful sister sucked his cock, her long red hair hangi damp ringlets. Tasha was still behind her, playing with her breasts as she watched her suck cock.

Erin loved the feel of Brian's cock in her mouth. It was big enough to fill her mouth, but not s had to stretch to accommodate him, like with those monster black cocks yesterday, she thou even harder. She knew what she wanted and she knew she was close as Brian groaned aga slit of his cock with the tip of her tongue, tasting the wonderful fluid before swallowing as mu as she could before choking.

Brian felt his balls spasm and tried to warn his sister, push her away, but she held him tightly harder until he felt cum gush from his cock into her mouth. Erin pumped him with her hand a down his hot cum as quickly as she could. She pumped him and sucked until there was noth letting him go, licking her lips in satisfaction. When she looked up at him and saw the look of his face, she blushed, the taste of his cum fresh in her mouth.

"Damn, Erin, that was just incredible," Brian said, shaking his head in amazement. "I had no

"It's cold out here," Tasha said. "Let's go inside and you can pay her back."

They all laughed as they scrambled out of the tub and ran into the house. They went to Erin' the door behind them. Tasha jumped on the bed, pulling Erin with her.

"Payback time," she announced. "You owe Erin a good pussy licking," Tasha declared.

Erin blushed furiously and Brian actually had the good graces to look a bit nonplussed.

"That sounds great to me," he said, dropping to his knees next to the bed and putting his ha knees, which were pressed tightly together.

Erin looked at him for a moment, then over her shoulder at Tasha who nodded with a smile. and allowed her brother to spread them apart, for the first time letting him see her naked pus Tasha snuggle up behind her, her arms going to her breasts as Brian pushed her knees up her spread pussy.

She took a deep breath and moaned when she felt his tongue slide into her, his mouth faste immediately and triggering an immediate orgasm in response. Brian enthusiastically drank h and sucking and teasing, gently chewing on her pussy lips, causing her to cum over and ove a finger into her, feeling the tightness of her pussy, gently pumping it in and out as he contin and suck her.

Erin hooked her arms under her thighs, holding her knees close to her chest as her brother her pussy. When he slid his tongue down and began to tongue her rosebud, Erin gasped, m probed her with the tip of his tongue. As his tongue trailed back up to her flowing pussy, she teasing her asshole with a finger, gently pressing against her.

As her body trembled from yet another orgasm, Erin felt Brian's finger tip slip into her ass. S her ass sphincter squeezed his finger. He continued licking and sucking her pussy, his finge her ass. As she slowly relaxed his finger pressed further and further into her, until she finally hand pressing against her. His finger was buried in her ass.

She bucked and writhed on the bed as he ate her pussy, slowly finger-fucking her ass at the yet another orgasm, Erin could take it no more. She twisted away from her brother, dislodgi and his finger, curling up in a fetal position on the bed, Tasha's arms around her as her body

"Are you okay?" Brian asked, concern on his face as he got to his feet, his face covered in h juices.

"Oh, I can't stop cumming," Erin moaned, shivering again.

"Such a problem to have," Tasha laughed, rolling her eyes.

Brian laughed as he stepped into Erin's bathroom to wash his hands. When he finished, he s relaxed and was laying entwined in Tasha's arms and legs. Smiling ruefully at them, he said I'll go to my room now."

"You don't have to do that," Tasha said, looking at Erin's face for a reaction and getting none you stay here with us?" she suggested.

"You don't mind?" he asked hopefully.

"No, it's okay," Erin managed to say, looking over her shoulder at him.

A big smile on his face, Brian switched the lights off and climbed into the bed, snuggling up s his sister's back. Twice during the night Erin awakened to the sensation of someone eating l pretty sure that it was her brother one of the times.

As dawn broke Erin once again awoke to the sensation of a tongue in her pussy. Looking do brother's head between her legs. She caressed his head as he pleasured her.

"That looks nice," Tasha said, leaning on her elbow to watch.

"Mmm, it is," Erin agreed. "He's really good at this."

"Your pussy tastes like a million dollars," Brian said, looking up from between his sister's leg

Erin laughed when she saw his face covered in a sheen of her pussy juices. Brian grabbed l top of him, her pussy in his face. As he stuck his tongue back into her sweet pussy, he felt h around his cock and begin to lick it. Tasha sat back and watched them in their 69, satisfied t going well. She continued to be amazed at Erin's cocksucking affinity. Finally Brian could co longer and his cock exploded in his sister's mouth, just as the door opened, Jane standing th her face.

Erin looked up at the door she saw facing and her brother's cock splashed cum all over her f gaping in surprise and shock at the sight of her mother, cum dribbled down her chin, still ooz cock in her hand.

"When you're finished, breakfast is ready," Jane said as though nothing out of the ordinary w then closed the door.

"Oh, god," Erin groaned, licking her brother's cock and her hand, both covered in cum. "How now?"

"You must be kidding!" Brian said, rolling his sister over so that he was straddling her chest, hanging in her face. "Think of who you're talking about."

Erin laughed when she realized what she had said and Brian took advantage of her open mo in. Erin sucked him for another minute or so, getting the last of his cum, then pushed him off laughing.

"So, how do you like sucking your brother's cock?" Tasha asked, trying to keep a straight fac

"It was nice," Erin replied thoughtfully, blushing at the same time.

"I'll say," Brian laughed. "I look forward to more of the same."

"I feel so embarrassed about mom," Erin said, pulling on a pair of shorts and a t-shirt.

"Don't be," Brian assured her. "She'll never say a word to you, believe me. I'm sure that deep heart she'd like you to be a complete part of everything," he said.

"Here, give me some shorts," Tasha said. That way you won't be the only one wearing cloth

Laughing, Erin threw a pair of shorts at Tasha which she put on, but she left her breasts exp went to the kitchen, Erin almost holding her breath in trepidation. But like Brian had said, the said to allude to what Jane had caught them doing. In fact, after just a few minutes Erin relax evaporating.

"So, is there work to do today?" she asked, drinking her orange juice.

"Well, there's always work," Bill laughed. "But right now we're just trying to process all of the we've been shooting for the past month. We have such a backlog. My guess is I'll be able to least 25 or 30 videos."

"That's great, Bill," Jane said, a big smile on her face. "We keep producing more and more a shortage of orders to fill. I'll bet we could easily sell 100-200 different titles a month."

"Is there really that much demand for...for this kind of thing?" Erin asked, finishing lamely.

"The demand is always going to be greater than the supply," Bill said. "The trick is making th produce stand out in quality and value. There's a lot of crap being thrown together on the ch

"I'd like to talk to you about that," Tasha spoke up. "I'm interested in giving you exclusive rigl she said. "I don't want to work with other productions any more."

"Well, you know we'd love that," Jane said. "I don't see that there's a problem."

"Well, I'd give up a lot of income if I gave up the other work," she said.

"Of course," Jane said, nodding. "What do you have in mind?"

"Well, I'd rather just get a regular salary and then a percentage of either the net or the gross her heart pounding in her chest.

"That's an interesting proposition," Bill said slowly, obviously thinking it through. "Do you hav particular numbers in mind?"

"I thought maybe $2000 a week and either 5% of the gross or 10% of the net," she said. "Ur better or another idea."

"I don't have a problem with the $2000," Bill said. "But if you want to invest in us as your futu profits, then I think a percentage of the net would be more appropriate. That way you'll share production costs as well. You'll have even more incentive to help make things profitable."

"That's okay with me," Tasha said, nodding. "And 10% is okay with you?"

"I think I'd rather start at 5%," Bill said slowly. "Let's try it that way for 6-12 months and then re-evaluate the situation, see exactly how the numbers are working out. But I promise it'll be What do you say?"

"Hmm, 5%," Tasha mused. "I guess I need to know what that translates to in dollars," she sa approximately, of course, but I need an idea to see."

"Well, let's say we're making approximately $50,000 net per title right now," he said. "Your 5 $2500. If we're doing 20-30 titles a month, well, you can do the math. Of course, it depends titles you're involved with, how much you want to work, but I think you can see that there's a potential."

"Wow," Tasha breathed. "I had no idea it was that big."

"So, what do you think?" Jane asked.

"I think yes," Tasha said without hesitating. "Oh my god, yes!" she shouted.

Everyone erupted into peals of laughter interspersed with congratulations for Tasha, who ac her eyes. She knew if she played her cards right, her future financial concerns would be fore in a few short years.

"I've got to celebrate," Tasha said, her eyes shining. "Let me take everyone to dinner."

"But we only just finished breakfast," Jane laughed.

"I don't mean now," Tasha laughed, bouncing with excitement, her breasts all over her chest all meet at Soixante-Neuf tonight at 7:00," she suggested.

"Mmm, that's going to be fun," Bill chuckled.

Erin looked puzzled, then blushed as she understood the restaurant's unusual name. She w restaurant it really was.

"Oh, I can't sit still," Tasha said, jumping to her feet. "I'm too excited. I think I'll go home and crazy," she said, laughing. "Erin, you want to come with me?" she asked. "We can go to the

"Mmm, sure," Erin said. "That sounds great. But only if you're sure there's no work today tha added, looking to her mother.

"No, today is really only stuff your father and I can handle right now. Maybe later after you've can help, but for today, go have fun. We'll join you later at dinner," Jane told her.

"You two mind if I join you?" Brian asked, getting an arched eyebrow from Jane in surprise.

"No, of course not," Tasha said.

"I'd better put some clothes on then," he said, getting to his feet, his cock swinging in front o

"We'll meet you at the car," Tasha said. "Come on, Erin," she said, pulling her from the table

"Well, what do you think?" Bill asked Jane, his arm around her shoulders as they watched th drive away.

"I think everything is just fine," Jane said, turning to kiss him.

"Erin and Brian seem to be adjusting to each other," he mused.

"Oh, yes, that they are," Jane said, a big smile on her face.

Bill gave her a funny look, then shrugged.

"Guess I'll get started," he said. "I want to get caught up."

"Me too," Jane agreed.

Both Brian and Erin had to caution Tasha on the way down out of the hills about her driving.
excited that she could hardly contain herself. Brian had never been to Tasha's home and he comfortable it was as he looked around.

"Yes, I like it," Tasha said as she stripped and pulled her bathing suit on.

Erin hesitated for only a second before also taking her clothes off, aware of Brian's eyes on her suit on also. She couldn't hide her nipples getting hard from his eyes and she flushed wh half-smile on his face as he looked at her.

They grabbed towels and the sun block and headed across the street and down to the water into the water, yelling and laughing and splashing like little girls. Brian watched them for a m plunging in and joining them. They ganged up on him, trying to push him beneath the surfac rose sputtering and laughing.

Erin's breasts had spilled from her top and Brian was surprised when she merely took it off a water. They sat on their towels and caught their breath.

"God, I love this place," Tasha sighed as she removed her top and lay back on her towel.

"Me too," Erin agreed. "Hey, give me the sun block," she said to Tasha.

"Oh, no, you don't," Tasha laughed. "You know this is my favorite part," she said, sitting up, her hand. "Unless you'd like Brian to do it," her voice trailed off suggestively.

"Hey, I am an expert at sun block application," Brian said. "Give me that," he said, holding h
"Which side first?" he asked after Tasha handed him the lotion.

"M-my back," Erin said, suddenly shy.

"Okay, lay down," Brian said.

Erin turned and lay on her stomach, her head on her hands. Brian started with her calves an legs. When he got to her ass there was no hesitation as he took both cheeks in his hands, m squeezing them, running his hand down the crack of her ass to tease her rosebud before sli then her arms. When he finished Erin was breathless. There was something about the way h body, strong, deft, sure, knowing, that made her feel really good. She was sorry he had stop

Some time later Tasha was shaking her shoulder, telling her it was time to turn over. Erin tur back, stretching, as Brian quickly grabbed the sun block. When Erin felt him touch her lower for a moment, then relaxed as his hands began to spread the lotion.

"Hi, Erin, Tasha," Brad said as he came up to them.

"Hi, Brad," Tasha said, smiling at him.

"Hi, Brad," Erin said as Brian's hands slid up her inner thighs and right under the material of rubbing her pussy. She felt her face flushing with embarrassment as Brian continued up her her breasts, taking extra care to thoroughly cover them with the sun block. Pulling and pinch he continued on to her neck and arms before sitting back, a smile on his face.

"Thanks, Brian," Erin said, propping herself up on her elbows, her breasts glistening from th nipples hard as rocks and sticking out. "Brian, this is Brad. He's the lifeguard here and a frie and mine," she added. "Brad, this is my brother, Brian," she introduced, seeing Brad's eyes said this.

"Hi," Brad said, offering his hand.

"Hey," Brian said, shaking his hand. "You must be good people if both of them think you're c

"Thanks," Brad said. "They're both pretty high in my book too. Well, I gotta get back to work.
later."

"Bye, Brad," Tasha said.

"Bye, Brad," Erin added.

"Nice to meet you," Brian said.

"Yeah, same," Brad replied as he turned and walked away.

"Brad's so sweet," Tasha said.

"Mmm," Erin agreed, laying back down and closing her eyes.

A while later Erin woke up suddenly when she felt her nipples being played with. Opening he Tasha smiling at her. "Time to go, sleepy-head," she said, giving her nipples a quick squeez them. "I've never seen anyone who can just lay down and fall asleep the way you do," she s
"You've had enough sun," she added.

They put their tops on and gathered their things. Waving to Brad, they made their way to Ta

"Okay, it's 4:00," she said. "We've got to leave here by 6:30. We should take a shower," she her suit off with a laugh. "Come on," she said, tugging at Erin's top.

With a laugh Erin pulled her suit off and ran laughing with Tasha to the shower. They had ju water adjusted when Brian joined them. There was much laughing and touching as they was
When they finished they toweled each other off and then Tasha led them all to her bedroom

Brian watched as Tasha pulled Erin onto the bed, kissing her. He saw his sister's legs fall op juicy pussy as Tasha sucked on her nipples. Brian's cock was rock hard as he watched Tash over Erin's pussy and begin to lick and suck. He moved around the bed to watch as Erin pul across her body so that she was straddling her face. Smiling at her brother, Erin stuck her to Tasha's pussy and tasted her. She then proceeded to lick and suck, turned on as much by T own pussy as she was by her brother standing watching, his hard cock sticking out in front o

Brian climbed onto the bed, kneeling above his sister's head, his cock just above her face, to pussy. Erin was sucking on Tasha's clit when her brother's cock slid across her face. She st and licked the shaft of his cock until it had entirely disappeared into Tasha's pussy.

Erin sucked Tasha's clit as her brother's cock slid in and out of her pussy, glistening with her eagerly sucked his cock when he would pull it from Tasha's pussy and drop it into her willing the taste of his cock with Tasha's pussy juices all over it.

It seemed to go on forever. Erin had orgasm after orgasm, her whole body shuddering as Ta her pussy. She was sucking at the junction of Tasha's pussy and her brother's cock, drinking juices, when Brian groaned and slid his cock from Tasha's pussy into her waiting mouth. As lips around the shaft of her brother's cock and sucked, it exploded in her mouth, hot cum qui mouth. She gulped, swallowing, and continued to suck, not stopping until he finally pulled his mouth. When he leaned over to kiss her, Erin wrapped her arms around her brother's neck, her tongue dueling with his. Then Erin lay there, on her back, her legs spread.

"That was great," Brian said, kissing Tasha. "I do love fucking you. And I love the way you su said to his sister.

"She's a natural, isn't she?" Tasha commented.

"I'll say," Brian agreed. "You really like it, don't you?"

"I love it," Erin confessed, flushing. "There's just something about the way it feels in my mou explained. "And nothing's better than the taste of a mouthful of hot cum."

"Damn, Erin, you are related to us, aren't you?" Brian laughed. "And you obviously like eatin

"Oh, Tasha's pussy is so sweet," Erin said, laughing. "I love eating her pussy."

"The only better tasting pussy I've ever had is yours and mom," Brian said. "I mean it."

"Mom's pussy is like mine?" Erin asked, curious.

"In the dark, I wouldn't be able to tell the difference," Brian told her. "And like Tasha, she had control of her pussy muscles. She can milk a cock like crazy."

"How?" Erin asked.

"Well, that's something you'll never be able to learn as long as you're a virgin," Tasha laughe

"I can't wait to fuck this pussy," Brian said, laying down between his sister's legs and licking pussy.

Erin pressed her pussy against her brother's mouth as he began to eat her, tongue- fucking When he slid a finger into her as he sucked on her clit, Erin humped up against him. He slid in and was amazed at how tightly her pussy gripped him. Tasha sat back and watched as Br with his sister's pussy. Finally Erin could take it no longer and she pushed him away, laughir the same time.

"Stop, stop, I can't take it anymore," she gasped, clasping her hands over her pussy.

"Okay, we need to start getting ready," Tasha announced. "I've got the perfect outfit for you Tasha said, jumping up and going to her closet and returning with something. "Here, try this handing it to her.

The top was a sheer white spandex-type of material that molded itself to Erin's body. It was than nothing. Her big breasts pressed out, her nipples hard and prominent. Every wrinkle wa white material did nothing to hide the dark pink color or her nipples. The skirt was a pleated swirled easily if she moved her hips at all. And it was very short. It came down just an inch o bottom of her ass. Any movement at all gave little glimpses of her naked body underneath.

"Oh, Tasha, this is beautiful," Erin said, twirling as watching as the skirt floated up, exposing ass and pussy. "But how can I possibly wear this to a restaurant?"

"It will be perfect, I promise," Tasha assured her. "Am I right, Brian?" she asked.

"Definitely," Brian agreed. "Soixante-Neuf is a very bacchanalian type of place."

"What are you going to wear, Tasha?" Erin asked, her hands sliding up her body over the sil breasts and nipples electrically sensitive as she rubbed over them.

"You'll love this," Tasha promised, pulling something out of the closet and putting it on.

Erin gasped when she saw it. The top was merely a silk halter which held her breasts from u her nipples totally exposed. The skirt was matching silk, but it consisted of strips of silk that l overlaying each other. Like Erin's, it was very short. Any movement at all parted the strips to was underneath.

"You can't wear that to a restaurant," Erin said, shaking her head. "You can't even wear that without getting arrested."

"Oh, yes, I can," Tasha laughed. "What do you think, Brian, are we going to turn a few heads grabbing Erin and twirling her like a dance partner.

Both skirts swirled up showing the nakedness beneath. Erin's nipples kept getting harder an rubbed against the silky spandex material. They were so sensitive that she kept rubbing the point pinching them very hard to stop the oversensitivity.

"You two will top the menu," Brian predicted.

"What are you wearing?" Erin asked her brother.

"Men all wear the same type of thing to Soixante-Neuf," Brian explained. "Let me get it."

Erin and Tasha danced together while Brian went into the other room, laughing as they look Brian returned wearing a beautiful embroidered silk robe, belted at the waist. It was mid-calf did a turn upon entering the room and the bottom of the robe floated nicely in a circle around before falling back down.

"That's beautiful, Brian," Erin said, reaching out and feeling it. "And what's under it?" she ask

"You're welcome to find out," he offered, holding his arms out to the sides, his feet spread.

Hesitatingly Erin reached out and loosened the belt of the robe. As she pushed the robe ope by the sight of her brother's cock rising up to her. He was completely naked underneath.

"Oh, my god," Erin said, stepping back, her hand going to her face. "You're going out like tha

"All men dress this way at Soixante-Neuf," he told her. "It's a private club restaurant. You ha member to go there. And it's got a dress code and other rules and customs that you agree to become a member. It's a pretty expensive place."

"Come on, let's go and stop for a drink on the way," Tasha suggested.

"A public place, dressed like this?" Erin asked, staring at her.

"Why not? I'll bet nobody complains. Come on, it'll be fun," she implored.

"If you want to go out in public dressed like that, that's fine with me," Erin said. "I almost feel wearing something," she said, looking down at her nearly naked breasts.

They went out and got into Tasha's car and drove off. The cool breeze only made Erin's nipp harder and more sensitive. She was constantly rubbing them. Tasha swung the car into a pa of a nice-looking bar and they all jumped out and went inside.

They stopped just inside the entrance to check it out and let their eyes adjust to the lower lig people turned around to see who had just entered and they froze as they stared. Tasha led bar. The bartender couldn't lift his eyes from her breasts, her naked nipples hard and visible

"Champagne," Tasha ordered, smiling at the bartender. "You can look at them again when y champagne," she told the bartender softly when he didn't move, rubbing little circles on her forefinger from each hand.

"I'm sorry," the bartender said, shaking his head. "It's just that you're so beautiful, both of yo of champagne would you like?" he asked.

"Krystal, please," Tasha said.

Tasha turned to Erin and hugged her, then Brian.

"This is so much fun," she said, laughing. "We're so safe with the three of us. It's wonderful t be so free and not worry about it."

"Everyone is staring at us," Erin said, again rubbing her breasts.

"They better be," Tasha said as the bartender returned with the champagne and three glass

He filled the glasses and they toasted one another, then drank from the glasses.

"Oh, that tastes nice!" Erin commented.

"Your first champagne?" Brian asked.

"Yes," she replied, taking another sip. "I like this."

"Drink it slowly," Tasha cautioned. "The bubbles make it get you drunk quicker."

They stood drinking their champagne and talking, laughing often. At one point Tasha reache and Erin knew that she was playing with his cock, but nobody could see. When Tasha remo at Erin.

"Your turn," she told her.

Erin gasped and quickly looked around the room. People were glancing over at them, but no watching them or staring. So sidling closer to her brother, Erin slid her hand into his robe an hand around his hard cock, squeezing it.

"This is so much fun," she giggled, taking a sip of her champagne with the other hand. "I wis kneel down and suck it right here," she said.

Tasha and Brian laughed at the wistful look on Erin's face when she said this.

"I'm sure you'll get your chance," Tasha said. "Okay, let's drink up. We need to go."

The bartender poured the remaining champagne into their glasses. They toasted each other their glasses to clink them together.

"I'm glad we're all together," Tasha said after taking a sip from her glass. "I mean the three c she explained, throwing her arms around Brian's neck and kissing him, then turning to Erin a though letting a hand slide down her back to cup her ass beneath her skirt.

There were a few appreciative wolf-whistles as Tasha exposed Erin's ass to the bar. They la their champagne before paying the bill and leaving, to a small scattering of applause. They s the car, taking a deep breath of the fresh air, their heads light from the champagne. Erin sta the car when Tasha stopped her.

"It's across the street," she said, indicating a place with blackened one-way windows. Above Soixante-Neuf, with an artwork graphic beneath the name showing a couple in the classic 69

They crossed the street and Tasha gave the receptionist her name. Her reservation was ver through a door to the hostess stand, where Erin got her first big surprise. The hostess was w classic French maid's uniform, complete with tiny apron. The only difference was that her bre exposed and the apron was the only thing she had on below the waist. Her naked ass was c

"Welcome," she said. "I have a table for 5 for you. There are only 3 other tables this evening them. "If you'll follow me, please."

They followed her into the main dining room, if it could be called that. There was a central su round in shape, about 15' across. In it were several low divan-type couches. Arranged aroun were several tables. At two of the tables were couples and the other table was 4 people, two the women were showing a lot if not all of their breasts. The men all had on robes similar in Bill and Jane were not yet arrived.

The hostess stopped at each table in turn and introduced everyone, though without any nam Erin was surprised when one of the women ran her hand up her leg and stroked her ass and trail across her pussy before stopping. She noticed that Tasha and Brian were being treated fashion so she understood that it was a part of the customs that Brian had mentioned. At the two couples Erin was surprised when one of the men reached up into Brian's robe also.

They finally reached their own table, which like the others was low to the ground and surrou settees where they could either sit or lounge in the Greek fashion. Brian took a seat between Tasha asked the hostess to bring champagne as they sat down.

"If I drink any more champagne, I won't be responsible," Erin giggled. "That stuff really make

"We'll get you some water then, too," Tasha said. "You don't want to miss any of the evening

As the champagne arrived, so did Bill and Jane. Erin gasped when she saw how her mother was nothing more than a bustier to display her breasts. Her skirt was vinyl, clear vinyl, and s nothing beneath it. She might just as well be naked.

They too were introduced to the other three parties. It seemed as though they knew one of t the big table. When they got to their table, they kissed everyone and Erin was very surprised her mother's kiss was. She felt her tongue gliding along her lips. They all sat down, Erin betw and brother.

"Ladies and gentlemen," the hostess suddenly said, appearing in the sunken area in the cer dinner this evening. For your dining pleasure, please allow me to introduce Aphrodite and H holding out her arm.

Into the sunken area entered a couple. The woman was tall and blonde with large breasts. S beautiful black cocktail dress that came down to just above her knees. The man was tall and like Hercules must have been. He was wearing a tuxedo. His eyes were bright blue and his back in a ponytail that hung down between his shoulder blades.

As they watched the couple slowly embrace, their first course was served by a waitress dres hostess, who was also serving one of the other tables. Erin looked at the dish placed in front puzzled expression on her face.

"It's called escargot," her father whispered to her. "Snails in French."

"Snails!" Erin said, looking at him in horror.

"They're very good," he said, a smile on his face. "Just try it. If you don't like it, don't eat any you really should give it a chance," he told her.

Erin looked over at the couple on the stage, for stage is what it certainly was. They were now more deeply. She could see their tongues as they became more passionate. Picking up her stabbed one of the escargot, watching as the hot butter dripped off of it. She touched it to he it okay, and put it in her mouth. It had a slightly chewy texture, but the flavor of the garlic and dominated and she found it tasty. She smiled at her father as she stabbed another one.

As they ate, the couple on the stage sank down onto one of the divans, their hands now roa each other's bodies. When the woman began to remove the man's jacket and unbutton his s at Tasha who had a big smile on her face as she plopped an escargot into her mouth.

They both picked up their champagne glasses and raised a silent toast and drank. Erin love bubbles as it slid down her throat. She returned her attention to the stage and saw that the m down to his waist and the woman was sucking on his nipples. Erin could see her gripping a teeth and pulling, stretching it.

The man suddenly stood up, pulling the woman with him. Grabbing the straps of her dress, over her shoulders, not stopping until the dress was on the floor at her feet. She was wearin beneath the dress. As Erin stared the woman dropped to her knees, undoing the man's pant the floor to join her dress. The man was not wearing any underwear and his cock hung in fro

Erin glanced around the room and saw that everyone was watching the stage. At the table c could see that the woman had her hand inside the man's robe. At the table with the two cou was fondling one woman's breasts.

Their escargot dishes were cleared to be replaced by small frozen balls of honeydew sorbet pallets. As Erin put a spoonful in her mouth, the woman on the stage opened her own mouth cock slide in on her tongue. Erin could only stare as the woman proceeded to suck the man' the restaurant was watching as they ate their sorbet. Erin felt herself getting excited as she woman swallow the man's cock.

As their sorbet dishes were cleared, the man placed the woman on her back, kneeling on th legs. Her hands went to her breasts as the man lowered his mouth to her pussy. Looking at Erin was surprised to see one of the couples imitating art, the man on his knees in front of th face buried in her pussy. At the table with two couples the women were both sucking the co

As the main course was served, medallions of filet in a sherry marsala reduction with shiitak couple were locked head to toe, sucking each other.

"Ladies and gentlemen, I give you Soixante-Neuf," the hostess said.

Everyone applauded as the couple continued to orally pleasure each other. As they began t course, the woman mounted the man, sliding down onto his cock and riding him. Erin gulpe of champagne as she ate, unable to tear her eyes from the spectacle taking place.

She jumped when she felt a hand slide onto her breast, squeezing it. She looked down to se move to her other breast, then slide down her stomach under the elastic waistband of her sk pussy. She moaned as she felt his finger slip into her tight hole then drag out to rub her clit.
put his finger into her open mouth, she sucked on it, tasting herself.

She looked over at her father and saw that her mother had his cock out and was slowly pum

She stared at her father's cock, her mother's hand looking tiny as it wrapped only part way a

"Go on, do it," she heard Brian whisper in her ear. "You know you want to. Just do it. Everyo

Erin looked at her mother, surprised to see that she was looking at her too. Jane smiled, the her hand slowly pumping Bill's cock. Erin looked at her father and he too smiled at her.

Her head spinning from the champagne, Erin smiled at her father, licking her lips. She got o knees on the divan, then dropped to her elbows, her father's cock right in front of her, her m still gently pumping it.

Jane inclined the head of Bill's cock towards her daughter's face. As Erin's mouth opened, h out to slide across the head of her father's cock, Jane's mouth opened too, sympathetically through/with her daughter.

Erin began to lick and suck her father's cock, her own ass sticking up in the air. She entwine her mother's on her father's cock, the two of them stroking him together as Erin sucked his k aware of Brian laying beneath her when he pulled her hips down and stuck his tongue into h back, she saw that Tasha was riding his cock while he ate her pussy.

Erin returned to sucking her father's cock, oblivious to the rest of the people in the restauran on the stage. Bill had a hand on the back of her head, encouraging her. Then Erin saw her r close and she was licking Bill's shaft while Erin sucked his knob. Together the two of them li him. When their mouths met at the top of his cock, their tongues dueled for access to the sli locked mouths, Bill's cock in the middle. They shared a long sensual kiss before Erin returne father's cock.

Bill was in heaven as his daughter sucked his cock. He couldn't believe it. She looked like a ringleted red hair down her back, draped over his lap right now as she sucked him like a pro balls beginning to tighten up and knew that he was close to blowing his load. He tried to get not wanting to cum in her mouth unawares, but Erin had already felt the change in her fathe begin to swell even larger. She attacked him with even greater ferocity as she sensed her re

Bill groaned as his balls exploded, cum shooting into Erin's sucking mouth. She gulped and feeling of hot cum splashing against the roof of her mouth. She sucked and swallowed until left, then lifted her face from her father's lap, a big smile on her face. Bill lifted her face, a ha beneath her chin, and kissed her softly on the mouth, then pulled her close and let his tongu her lips and really kiss her.

Erin straddled her father's lap, feeling his cock pressing against her pussy.

"Oh, daddy, I want you inside of me," she told him, kissing him again.

"Me too, sweetheart," Bill told her. "But not here, not tonight."

"Okay, but you have to promise," Erin insisted.

"You tell me that tomorrow when you haven't been drinking champagne, then we'll talk," he t her.

"Oh, oh, I'm going to cum," they heard Brian groan.

Erin slid off her father's lap, crawling over her brother's body until her face was right next to Tasha slid up and down on him. Tasha lifted off of his cock and Erin captured it in her mouth slide deep into her throat as she sucked Tasha's pussy juice from him. This was too much fo arched his back as cum shot from his cock into his sister's sucking mouth. Erin drank her bro his balls gave out.

Lifting her face from her brother's cock, Erin looked around and saw that her parents were n table. In fact, they were each at different tables. Erin watched her mother kneel down and su into her mouth as the woman with him rode his face. She then straddled him, sinking down o began to fuck him. Her father was at another table, fucking the woman who was on top of he cock while he ate her pussy. She could see her father's cock sliding across the man's nose was.

One of the men and one of the women from the big table came to their table. He stood in fro cock sticking in her face. She looked over to see the woman mount Brian's face. Tasha was she opened her mouth and let the strange man slide his cock in. As soon as she wrapped he forgot anything else but the wonderful feeling and taste of a cock in her mouth.

She was aware of Tasha parting her legs, her tongue finding her wet pussy as she continue man's cock. Though not as fat as either Brian or her father, his cock was longer. Erin found to relax her throat enough for it to enter, something she had yet to accomplish.

The man groaned as he felt his cock slip into Erin's throat. She sucked a cock with her whol literally. She was now laying on her back as he fed her his cock, Tasha between her legs fea pussy. The man felt his balls churn and Erin felt his cock grow, then explode in her mouth, to cum splashing her tongue and throat. She sucked with gusto, gulping his cum as fast as he mouth. She reveled in the taste of a mouthful of hot cum.

She sucked him until there was no more. She moaned when he pulled his now shrinking coc Looking up she saw her mother standing there, a smile on her face.

"You really love cum, don't you?" Jane asked her daughter, bending over and kissing her, h out the cum still coating Erin's mouth.

"Mmm, yes," Erin agreed, sucking on her mother's tongue.

"Here's a little present then," she said, standing up and swinging a leg over Erin, her pussy s right above her face.

Erin gasped when her mother's pussy appeared in front of her. It was red and glistening, cu hole from the fucking she had just enjoyed at the other table. As Tasha continued to eat her lifted her face, sliding her tongue up into her mother's hole as her mouth covered her pussy, tasting her for the first time, full of cum.

Bill returned to the table, watching as his daughter sucked her mother's cum-filled pussy whi hers. After a minute, he nudged Tasha aside, taking her place, gluing his mouth to Erin's sw redoubled her efforts eating her mother's cum-filled pussy when she realized that her father own pussy. Tasha watched in fascination as the three of them pleasured each other. She sn her back as she orgasmed, pressing her pussy into her father's face. When she finally collap divan, spent, Jane dismounted her face and bent over to kiss her, tasting herself on her dau

"Oh, Erin, that was just wonderful," she told her daughter.

"Your pussy tastes so nice," Erin told her mother. "And I love pussy filled with cum," she add

"You taste every bit as good as your mother," Bill told her, kissing her softly.

"Oh, daddy, I love the way you eat my pussy," she declared, throwing her arms around his n tightly.

"Ladies and gentlemen, thank you for joining us this evening," the hostess/waitress said fron where she was slowly fucking herself up and down on the man's still erect cock. "Please join evening of fine dining and entertainment."

From all the tables everyone applauded. It had indeed been a Bacchanalian orgy and everyo to their heart's desire. The people who needed to redressed themselves and everyone gathe for last-minute good-byes, which included not a few kisses and very personal fondlings.

Outside on the sidewalk Bill had his arm around Erin's shoulders as they stood in front of the

"So, time to head home," he said, giving Erin a squeeze.

"I think I'll take Brian home with me tonight," Tasha said with a laugh, linking her arm in his.
you like to do, Erin?" she asked.

"I think I'll go home," Erin said. "You two have fun."

"Oh, we will," Tasha laughed. "And I won't have to share him either."

"Well, you'd better enjoy it while you can then," Erin replied.

She gave both Tasha and her brother big hugs and long deep kisses as they parted, joining ride home.

"Did you enjoy yourself?" Jane asked as Bill drove.

"Oh, it was the most wonderful evening I've ever had," Erin sighed. "I never wanted it to end

"And it won't," Bill said with a laugh. "Your whole life can be a non-stop version of tonight."

"I almost don't recognize you anymore," Jane observed. "You've changed quite a bit in a we

"I know," Erin agreed. "I don't know myself either. But I do know that I like this side of me," s feels good."

They arrived at the house and entered. Jane noticed Erin hesitate for a moment.

"Erin, you should understand that you're always welcome to sleep wherever you like in this h you have your own personal space and bedroom doesn't mean that that's where you have to "You're always welcome to join me or your father or your brother or anyone who might be st understand?"

"Yes, I do, and thank you," she said, hugging her mother. "I don't feel like sleeping by mysel confessed.

"Then join us," Jane said, putting an arm around her daughter's shoulders. "We'd love to hav

"Yes," Erin said, putting one arm around her mother and the other around her father.

She went with them to their room, feeling a moment of awkwardness when they undressed a attention to her, removing her clothes and leaving her naked too. They pulled her onto the b between them. Erin felt their arms wrap around her. She could feel her mother's breasts pre own and she could feel her father's cock laying along the crack of her ass.

She felt so good, so safe wrapped in their arms. When Jane kissed her softly on the lips, Eri gently kissing her back, their kiss evolving into a long passionate one. She could feel her fat gliding all over her body, touching her here, there, probing, exciting her as she continued to mother.

When Jane slid down to suckle on her breasts, Erin arched her back in delight, feeling her m lightly clamp down on her hard distended nipples as she sucked them, teasing them with he had opened her legs and was rubbing her pussy, slipping a finger into her, rubbing her clit. S clamp down on his finger as she came, her mother's teeth tightly biting down on her nipple, moan out loud as the complexity of the sensations overwhelmed her.

When her mother's tongue replaced her father's hand on her pussy, Erin forgot about anythi her body was feeling, and she wanted more. She pulled her mother on top of her in a 69, fra her tongue into her sopping pussy as her mother continued eating her pussy.

Bill knelt at Erin's head, letting his cock slide down the crack of Jane's ass to where Erin's m busily lapping at the juices. He felt her tongue slide across his cock, then felt himself engulfe sucked his cock into her mouth. He looked down to watch as she alternated sucking his coc pussy, often managing to do both at the same time.

He was mildly surprised when Erin took him in her hand, positioning the head of his cock at Jane's hole. As he slowly slid into her hot pussy, Erin's tongue lathed the underside of his sh slowly slid his cock in and out, Erin's mouth and tongue never stopped licking and tasting hi pull his cock from Jane's pussy to let Erin really suck on him, then he would fuck Jane some

Erin was writhing in non-stop orgasm as her mother sucked her pussy. She was almost deli she sucked her father's cock, tasting her mother's pussy all over it. She was sucking him like wanting to relinquish him to her mother's gaping and hungry pussy. She felt him grow and th in her mouth, jets of hot cum splashing against the back of her throat. She sucked and gulpe taste of his cum in her mouth, loving the feeling of his cock pulsating and spurting gouts of t fluid.

She lay there enraptured when her father finally withdrew his cock from her mouth. Cum had corner of her mouth down to her chin. Her mother crawled up from between her legs, licking Bill's cum before gluing her mouth to her daughter's in a deep passionate kiss.

Erin nodded off wrapped in her parents' arms. She awaked several times during the night, o mother riding her father's cock next to her. The next time she awakened she crawled betwee softly and gently licking and sucking her pussy, slowly awakening her as she ate her cum-fill had sucked her clean and made her cum, she crawled back up to fall asleep in her mother's

Opening her eyes at the light streaming in the window, Erin smiled to herself, nuzzling her fa her mother's breasts. She could feel her father's hard cock pressing into her ass from behind her mother to face her father, Erin kissed him, very softly at first, then developing into a deep kissed her way down his body to his cock, first holding it in her hand as she licked the crown slit at the end before opening her mouth and letting him slide down to her throat.

The taste of her mother's pussy was all over her father's cock as she sucked him. She decid preferred the taste of a cock that was covered in pussy juice as she continued to suck her fa feel her pussy leaking and imagined that it was throbbing, so much did she want some satis

Grabbing her father's cock in her hand, she moved up, straddling him, holding his cock betw rubbing it back and forth between her pussy lips.

"Erin, are you sure you want to..." Bill began to ask until she suddenly sank down, 3-4 inches pressing up into her.

"Oh!" Erin gasped as she felt his cock stretch her virgin hole.

Jane had wakened and propped herself on one elbow, watching as her daughter continued her father's cock, using him to take her own virginity. Though beads of sweat appeared on h didn't utter a sound as she finally sat on her father, his entire cock buried deep in her pussy.

She just sat there, letting her pussy adjust to the massive size of the cock that was invading throb and pulsate deep inside of her. Bill propped himself up on his elbows so that he could Jane moved over to lay her head on his thigh, her face just inches from his cock as Erin slov up and down on his cock, fucking him.

Jane was fascinated watching her only daughter's pussy as it slid up and down Bill's cock. H looking like the tip of a pinkie finger, jutted out above her splayed inner pussy lips as they gr shaft of his cock, which was glistening with her juices. She was so wet that it actually made got into a rhythm, fucking her father.

"Bill, don't cum in her," Jane warned softly. "She's not on the pill yet."

"I want you to cum in my mouth," Erin panted as she rode her father's cock. "Oh, this feels s moaned, grinding herself onto his cock, pressing to get it even deeper.

"I'm going to cum soon," Bill warned. "I can't help it, your pussy is just so tight."

Erin dismounted her father. Her pussy actually made a sucking sound as it released his coc over, taking his glistening cock into her mouth, tasting herself on a cock for the very first tim him with gusto, slurping and making noise as she tried to milk him. Very quickly Bill groaned cheeks billowed as her mouth filled with cum. Swallowing quickly, she continued sucking, no Bill pushed her away, unable to take any more.

"God, stop, stop," he moaned, covering himself with his hands. "Too much," he gasped as E him, a big smile on her face.

"Are you okay?" Jane asked her daughter, gently stroking her breast, her nipples rock hard.

"Oh, mom, I feel great!" Erin exclaimed. "What a wonderful feeling having a cock filling you l

"It is rather special, isn't it?" Jane agreed, smiling at her daughter's candor.

"I can't wait to fuck Brian," she giggled. "Won't he be surprised."

"I imagine he will," Jane agreed.

"If he survives, that is," Bill said, sitting up and hugging his daughter. "I don't know what's m your pussy or your mouth," he told her.

"Well, my pussy and my mouth both love your cock, so I guess it doesn't matter, does it?" Er a laugh.

"Well, what shall we do now?" Jane asked.

"Hmm, I'd like some more cock, I think," Erin said, licking her lips.

"Hey, not me," Bill said with a laugh, springing up off the bed before Erin could grab him. "Yo enough for the moment. Besides, I've got work to do."

"Let him go," Jane laughed as she reached for Erin, pulling her onto her back. "I want to be t taste your pussy now that you're no longer a virgin."

"Oh, mom," Erin sighed as she felt her mother's tongue slide into her pussy. "You do that so

Bill was chuckling to himself as he left the room, Jane's tongue busy in Erin's pussy. He rubl still feeling his daughter's pussy gripping him as she fucked him. It had been quite a while si a pussy so tight.

Meanwhile, Jane had brought Erin to a quick orgasm sucking on her overly sensitive clit. Sh finger-fucking her pussy now, first with one finger, then two, then three as Erin begged for m her pussy onto her mother's hand in desperation.

"I've got an idea," Jane said, removing her hand from her daughter's pussy and rolling over t drawer of the bedside bureau.

Erin's eyes widened as she saw the handful of dildos that her mother had in her hands. They and shapes and colors. Jane dropped them on the bed as Erin sat up, sitting with her legs s wide spread, the dildos between them. Jane caught herself staring at her daughter's pussy, petaling out from between her outer lips, her clit large and swollen and prominent between t

"Here's what we do when the boys can't help us," Jane laughed, indicating the collection on Erin's spread legs. "Would you like to try one of them?" "Oh, they're so different," Erin exclai one up, surprised at how it felt in her hand, very much like a real cock, just not as warm. "An said, picking up a double-headed black one that was too large to get her hand around.

"That's my favorite," Jane laughed at the look on Erin's face.

"But it's so big," Erin said, shaking her head. "How can it fit? Doesn't it hurt?"

"No, not if you start slowly," Jane explained. "Just like with a real cock, a big one. You need slowly until you adjust, then..."

Erin's mouth was hanging open as she examined the huge double-headed black dildo. It wa wrist and had big ropey veins bulging along the sides.

"Why does it have two ends?" she asked.

"Well, that way two people can use it at once," Jane explained. "Or it can bend around and y your pussy and your ass at the same time. That's my favorite. It is the most incredible feelin filled in both places."

"I just can't even imagine how it could fit," Erin said, looking at her mother.

"Well, why don't you try it and see," Jane suggested with a smile.

"Oh, no, I couldn't," Erin blanched. "It would tear me apart."

"I didn't mean on yourself," Jane laughed. "Right now your pussy is not ready for something can try it on me if you'd like," she said, getting on her hands and knees and pressing her che bed, her knees wide apart spreading her pussy open. "Just lick it a bit to get it wet and go sl explained.

Erin stuck the end of the dildo in her mouth, sucking on it, not particularly liking the taste of t material. She then placed it at the entrance to her mother's wide- spread pussy and gently y To her surprise her mother's pussy stretched easily around the dildo. Once the head had en seemed to suck on the shaft, pulling it in deeper. Erin pushed it slowly in until she felt it bum something and it wouldn't go in any deeper. At least 10-12 inches of the huge black dildo we Jane's pussy.

Slowly Erin began to fuck her mother with the dildo, watching closely as her pussy lips gripp it slid in and out. She could see the dildo taking on a sheen from Jane's pussy juices and Ja Erin began to fuck her harder with it. Slowly letting the dildo slide from her mother's pussy, E sucked on the head, tasting her mother's juices. She observed that her mother's pussy rema gaping, her hole spread large from the dildo.

When she pressed the dildo back into her mother's pussy it easily slid in. Slowly Erin fucked the huge black dildo, amazed at the amount of juices that soaked the shaft of the dildo as it out of Jane's hungry pussy.

"Why don't you join me," Jane gasped as Erin plunged the dildo once more deep into her pu

"Me?" Erin asked, pausing, the dildo buried in Jane's pussy.

"Yes, you," Jane laughed, wriggling her ass and fucking herself on the dildo a bit.

She rolled over onto her back, the dildo staying in place, 12-14 inches of it still sticking out o Sitting up, she reached over and picked up two of the toys from the pile, one a normal-sized other larger, almost 8 inches, with a second very small cock piggy-back on it.

"Come here," Jane said, pulling Erin onto her back and straddling her chest, facing towards

She hooked Erin's legs under her arms, spreading her pussy wide and tilting it up so that it w to, which Jane did, plunging her tongue into her daughter's sweet hole. Erin groaned with de mother ate her pussy. Unconsciously she wrapped her hand around the dildo sticking out of and continued fucking her with it.

Jane took the normal dildo and sucked on it to get it nice and wet, then gently but firmly pres Erin's pussy, using the fingers of one hand to hold her pussy lips spread wide. Her fat clit stu begging to be sucked as Jane slowly but surely worked all six inches of the dildo into her da

Erin sighed with delight when she felt the dildo penetrating her. It wasn't as nice as her fathe it was wonderful to feel something deep inside of her like that, filling her pussy.

Jane began to slowly fuck Erin with the dildo, seeing how her pussy tightly gripped it as it sli She leaned over to suck on her clit while she continued to fuck her. Erin continued working t dildo in and out of her pussy at the same time.

Erin bucked her body in orgasm as her mother sucking on her clit drove her over the edge. S hypersensitive there. She felt her pussy clamping down on the dildo as she came. She gasp felt the dildo suddenly pulled from her pussy, only to freeze her mouth wide open as she felt pressing against her now loosened hole.

She felt like she would split in two as the head of the dildo finally entered her pussy. She wa breath as she felt her mother push another inch or two into her, then slowly work it in and ou little bit, letting her pussy adjust and adapt to the size of the new dildo. As she felt more of th press into her tight pussy, she also felt the second head of the double dildo rub against her a

She gasped when she felt her mother lean over and run her tongue around her pussy and th of it, down the crack of her ass to tongue her asshole, probing it with the tip of her tongue. T more felt the second head of the dildo rub against her rosebud and gently but firmly press.

It wasn't terribly big, only about an inch in diameter, but this was the first thing other than a t that Erin had ever had put in her ass and she found herself nervous, even as her pussy was shaft of the dildo sticking into her.

She felt her mother's tongue once again on her ass and then continued pressure. Suddenly relax and the head of the dildo slipped past her sphincter into her ass. It hurt at first and she her body as the two heads filled her two holes. She felt her mother sucking on her clit and sl orgasm once again. As she did, she felt both dildos slide even further into her. As her mothe suck her clit, causing a never-ending orgasm, she also continued to work both dildos in and daughter's two holes. It seemed like no time at all had passed before both shafts were comp eight inches, in both Erin's pussy and ass.

Erin was writhing beneath her mother as she felt the shafts of the two dildos reaming her as clit was screaming as Jane sucked on it. She gasped when she felt the dildo slip from her as one almost from her pussy. Then she gasped again when she felt the original dildo pressing Because she had already been opened and stretched from the smaller dildo, this normal-siz pressed into her ass, though not without discomfort. Erin was grateful for the time to adjust t it as her mother continued pumping the other dildo in and out of her pussy.

Slowly Jane worked the dildo into Erin's ass until she had completely buried inside of her. In rhythm she worked them in and out of her daughter, fucking her pussy and ass, leaning ove and drive her into yet another orgasm. Somehow throughout this whole thing Erin had contin black dildo in and out of Jane's pussy.

As Jane worked on her daughter, she saw Brian and Tasha appear in the doorway, looks of faces as they watched her fucking Erin with the two dildos. A big grin split Brian's face when him and he silently entered the room, dropping his clothes in the process. By the time he wa the bed, he had his erect cock in his hand.

Erin gasped when the dildo was removed from her pussy. She wanted more. She sighed wh filled once again. Jane had also let the dildo slip from Erin's ass so that Brian had an unimpe his sister's upturned pussy, which he eagerly plunged his cock into, stifling a groan as he fel was, even though Jane had been fucking her with the dildo.

Jane was sucking Erin's clit while Brian fucked her and Erin was gasping on the bed as she Jane pulled Brian's cock from Erin's pussy and sucked on it, then plunged her tongue into E as she positioned Brian's cock at the entrance to her open asshole. Erin groaned as Brian s cock into her ass, which was even tighter than her impossibly tight pussy.

Tasha had undressed and was standing next to Brian as he fucked his sister's ass, really wo and out now as Erin moaned and thrashed on the bed. Following Jane's silent direction, Tas Erin's ankles as Jane suddenly dismounted her daughter's body, holding her other ankle in h her legs spread wide apart and pulled up high to her chest.

Erin gasped when she saw that it was her brother fucking her ass. Tasha reached down with picked up a dildo and slowly worked it into Erin's pussy as Brian continued to fuck her ass. E trying to fuck herself onto the two cocks, one real, one fake, as they skewered her body. Suc groaned and thrust himself deep into Erin's ass, his cock swelling then exploding, hot cum s inside of his sister.

Erin could feel his cock pulsating inside of her ass and imagined that she could feel his cum Slowly his cock finished spurting and slid from her ass, and at the same time Tasha remove pussy. She lay there, completely spent, no longer a virgin in any sense of the word. Her fath pussy and her mother and brother had taken her ass.

As she lay there, her legs splayed wide, her pussy gaping red and swollen, Tasha crawled o burying her face between her legs, her velvety tongue sliding up and down her pussy lips lic on them, then sliding gently into her hole, slowly licking and drinking up her juices.

At the same time, Erin grabbed Tasha around the hips, pulling her pussy to her mouth. As s realized how much she had missed her. Tasha still had the sweetest pussy as far as she wa sucked each other for several minutes before Tasha rolled off to lay next to her.

"Oh, wow, that was just incredible," Erin breathed, her chest heaving, her nipples rock hard.
how good that was."

"Damn, Erin, you have one fine pussy and your ass is just incredible," Brian said as he sat d leaned over and kissed his sister deeply.

"Thank you for fucking me," she said, smiling at him. "Your cock felt wonderful, both places."

"Well, young lady," Jane began, "you've certainly made some decisions about yourself, have

"I guess I have," Erin agreed, sitting up and looking at her mother.

"And what have you decided?" Jane asked curiously.

"Well, first of all, I love sex. I mean, I really like it," Erin said, blushing. "It's all I think about. E right now, all I can think about is sucking a cock and tasting the hot cum as it fills my mouth, nice hard cock in my pussy and then in my ass. My whole body is on fire."

"Uh-oh, what have we created?" Tasha laughed. "Another sex addict/sex maniac?"

"God, I sure hope so," Brian said with a laugh.

"Well, let's go to the beach now," Tasha said. "I'm sure we can find a way to get our pussies

"Thank you," Erin said, hugging her brother and then kissing him, one hand dropping down t
"I can't wait until the next time."

"Me too," Brian responded, a big smile on his face.

"You too, mom," Erin said, turning to Jane and hugging her. "I couldn't ask for a better mom

"Oh, Erin," Jane sighed, holding her daughter tight. "I've only ever wanted the best for you."

"I know," Erin replied. "And that's what I've always had, only now more so."

"Come on, the beach is calling," Tasha laughed, tugging at Erin's arm.

Laughing the two girls went to Erin's room where Erin put on her thong suit, then a pair of sh running shorts and a cut t-shirt which exposed her stomach up to her ribs. They said good-b Tasha's convertible, roaring off down the road. When they arrived at Tasha's place, they we enough for her to change into her suit.

Wearing only their thongs, they ran across the street and then down onto the beach. They d and ran into the water, still laughing and splashing each other. After 15-20 minutes of fun, th water, dropping onto their towels out of breath. When Tasha removed her top, freeing her br hesitate in joining her. She cupped her breasts in her hands, looking at them her nipples scr knots on the ends.

"God, I am so horny!" she exclaimed, leaning back on her elbows. "I can't understand it. I ca of anything else."

"You'll get over it," Tasha laughed. "You just learned a new trick and you want to practice."

"That's right," Erin laughed. "I'd just love to suck a nice hard cock right now."

"Well, maybe you're going to get your wish," Tasha said, nodding her head to somewhere be

"Hi, you two," Brad said, squatting at the foot of Erin's towel, a grin on his face.

"Hi, Brad," the two girls chorused.

"Anyone need some sun block applied?" he asked.

"As a matter of fact, I was just getting ready to help Erin with this," Tasha said, holding up th
"Maybe you'd like to do it instead?"

"Ah, my pleasure," Brad said, taking the lotion from her.

"If you'll allow me?" he inquired, lotion on the palm on one hand as he looked Erin in the eye

"Mmm, thank you," Erin said, laying back on the towel as Brad's hands began working up he

When she felt his hands on her upper thighs, Erin felt her pussy suddenly flood and she kne obvious to him, so she was surprised when he finished her legs and moved up to her stoma touching her pussy. She smiled when she felt his hands on her breasts, even more when sh doing more than just spreading the lotion. When he squeezed her nipples between his finge arching her back. Then his hands were gone.

"There that should start you off," Brad said, getting to his feet.

"Oh, thank you," Erin said, feeling her cheeks flush with embarrassment.

"I'll come back by in about an hour and do the other side," Brad volunteered.

"That's nice of you," Erin said, smiling at him. "Thanks."

"That looked like fun," Tasha said when Brad had gone.

"Oh, I'm hornier than ever now," Erin complained, clutching her hands between her legs.

Tasha only chuckled as she lay back and closed her eyes. As frustrated as she was, the sou the warmth of the sun soon lulled Erin to sleep. She woke up when she felt her foot being nu eyes as she shielded them with her hand, she saw Brad standing there, a smile on his face his hand.

"Time to turn over," he informed her.

"Mmm, okay," Erin replied.

As she turned over, Erin managed to pull the material of her thong so that it bunched togeth inner leg, no longer covering her pussy at all. As she lay on her stomach, her head resting o allowed her legs to spread apart to about shoulder width as Brad knelt down and began to a

He couldn't help seeing Erin's naked wet pussy as he spread the lotion on her legs, and this to the top of her legs he didn't ignore her pussy, he simply slid his fingers right into her, caus gasp as her pussy clamped down tightly on his fingers. He plunged them in and out a few tir to her ass, cupping both cheeks in his hands as he continued to spread the lotion.

When he shifted position to kneel at her head to do her back, Erin didn't even hesitate. She suit and extracted his rock-hard cock, sucking it into her mouth as Brad groaned and spread back. Erin was so excited at having his cock in her mouth that she felt herself cum just from
As determined as she was and as worked up as Brad was, it wasn't long before he was groa mouthful of cum into Erin's eagerly gulping mouth. She sucked like there was no tomorrow, swallowing his hot cum, not letting his cock go until there just was no more. When she relea stayed there, kneeling in front of her, totally wasted from the fury of her blowjob.

"Oh, god, Erin, that was beyond belief," Brad finally said.

"I liked it too," Erin told him with a smile. "Your cock tastes so good."

"I-I-I have to go," Brad said reluctantly, obviously not wanting to.

"That's okay," Erin told him. "I understand. Thanks for the lotion and the snack," she said as feet.

"Yeah, see you," Brad said to them as he returned to his duties.

"Feel better?" Tasha asked.

"Yes," Erin said, smacking her lips, still able to taste Brad's cum. "But I want more."

"I think I know what you need," Tasha said, a grin splitting her face as the thought complete mind.

"I know what I need," Erin laughed. "But what do you mean?"

"No, I'm not going to tell you," Tasha told her. "It's going to be a surprise."

"Oh, Tasha," Erin groaned. "What is wrong with me?"

"Nothing we can't cure," Tasha told her.

So an hour later they had had enough sun and they gathered their things and made their wa waving to Brad as they left. They showered, then fell into bed, burying their faces in each oth eating each other to orgasm after orgasm before falling asleep in each other's arms.

"Okay, time to wake up," Tasha said, kissing Erin.

"Mmm," Erin said, wrapping her arms around Tasha and kissing her back. "This is so nice. I'
here."

"And I missed you too," Tasha told her. "Though Brian was a nice diversion last night."

"He's really a sweet guy, isn't he?" Erin asked. "I realize now that he was just uncomfortable behave around me when I got back."

"It's true," Tasha agreed. "I've never worked with anyone more considerate than Brian, exce They're just the best. And they're both great fucks too," she laughed.

"What are we going to do now?" Erin asked. "Is it time to eat?"

"We can eat if you want," Tasha nodded, "but I think my surprise might be a good appetizer

"Tell me!" Erin begged. "Please!"

"Nope!" Tasha laughed. "Let's get dressed."

"You have something I can borrow?" Erin asked.

Your shorts and shirt are fine," Tasha told her. "That's all I'm wearing."

"Oh!" Erin said, then quickly dressed.

When she looked into the mirror, she saw that her t-shirt was so see-thru that her breasts w visible. The way her shorts rubbed against her pussy only increased her horniness.

"Mmm, you look nice," Tasha said, taking her in her arms and letting one hand trail down be where she easily slid a finger into Erin's readily accessible pussy.

"Tasha!" Erin exclaimed when she suddenly released her and spun away.

"Come on, let's go," Tasha said, picking up her keys.

They jumped into the car and Tasha roared off, her laughter pealing out after them. She dro neighborhood with big homes before pulling into the parking lot of a small shopping center. T to a free-standing building in one corner of the parking lot and Erin followed her as she ente

Once they entered, Erin stopped as she realized they were in a porno shop. She looked aro Tasha went up to the man behind the counter, maybe the largest man Erin had ever seen. H was tall. But Tasha seemed to know him and Erin saw that they were laughing as they talke

"Erin, come here," Tasha beckoned. "I want you to meet Isaac," she said, introducing her to

"Hi Erin," he said as his huge hand engulfed hers. He had a very deep basso voice.

"Hi Isaac," Erin replied, smiling at him. In spite of his size, she got a feeling of extreme gentl the large man.

"Have fun," he said to Tasha as she grabbed Erin by the hand and led her down a hall in the

There were doors every few feet with numbers on them. When they got to the door marked it and pulled Erin in after her. Erin looked around. The walls were very strange. Wrapping ar of the small room was a window that started about 4 feet from the ground and was about 3 f was narrow. Erin could easily touch both side walls at the same time. She was startled to rea able to look into the adjoining rooms.

"It's a one-way mirror," Tasha answered her unspoken thought. "We can see out, they can't

"But what..." Erin began to ask.

"You'll see," Tasha assured her with a big smile.

And just as she said this the outer door to one of the adjoining rooms opened and a man ca maybe Bill's age, and he looked around for a minute before dropping some tokens in a mach that it was a pornographic movie that began showing. She was surprised when the man pull began stroking it as he watched the movie.

Erin looked at Tasha with a quizzical look on her face then continued watching the man. She cock got quite large as he stroked himself. She jumped back when the man suddenly turned to the window where Erin had been watching him. Before she could ask, the man's cock app in the wall that Erin hadn't noticed before. She looked at Tasha who was laughing, holding h mouth.

"Well, go ahead, there's a cock for you," Tasha told her.

"What?" Erin asked.

"Do whatever you want," Tasha told her. "He can't see you."

Her mouth and eyes opening in understanding, Erin turned to the cock sticking through the her. Reaching out she wrapped her hand around it, feeling it jump as she squeezed it in her gently stroked the cock, she sank to her knees, opening her mouth and wrapping her lips ar Looking up she could see the man plastered against the one-way mirror, his face contorted cock. Loving the sudden feeling of anonymity and nastiness that coursed through her body, him with feeling, in a hurry to get her mouthful of hot cum. It didn't take long either, as the m suddenly exploded in her mouth, hot cum shooting from it.

Erin couldn't believe it, she had to swallow three times before the man stopped cumming. Sh man could cum so much. By the time he finished cumming and withdrew his rapidly shrinkin Erin needed a breath of air from her exertions.

"God, that was so nasty," she said with a laugh as she wiped her mouth with the back of her even know him. I just sucked a cock that stuck through a wall. It could have been anyone."

"That's right," Tasha laughed. "Pretty cool, isn't it? You can get all the pleasure you want wit the hassles. Look, here's another one," she said as a thick black cock stuck through another the other walls.

This time Erin didn't even bother looking through the one-way mirror to see who was attache of the cock, she just sank to her knees, grabbing the cock, noticing that she couldn't even co getting her had all the way around it.

"It's so big," she exclaimed to Tasha as she stretched her mouth as wide open as possible a
it.

She only succeeded in getting the head of it in her mouth, but when she probed the slit with tongue, she tasted the wonderful flavor of precum leaking from the cock. She sucked on the cock, but just couldn't get any more of it in her mouth.

"It's too big," she said to Tasha, stroking it in her hands. "I can't suck it."

"They fuck it," Tasha suggested.

"What!"

"Just bend over, back up to it, and fuck it," she explained.

"It's pretty big," Erin commented.

"Well, your pussy will stretch a lot more than your mouth will," Tasha told her. "But if you don I'm ready for a nice fuck."

Giggling, Erin turned her back to the wall, holding the fat black cock in her hand. Quickly rea shorts were in the way, she pushed them down, kicking them off. She laughed as she saw th Tasha's face.

"You want some help?" Tasha offered.

"I think I need some," Erin replied with a laugh. "I don't know what to do."

"First of all, let me have that," Tasha said, grabbing the cock and dropping to her knees and tongue teasing the slit. "Now spread your legs wide and reach over and grab your ankles," T which Erin obeyed, her ass and pussy right in Tasha's face. "Mmm, that's nice," Tasha said, and dragging her tongue through Erin's wet pussy. "You taste so good," she said, plunging h into Erin as she could.

Then licking the head of the cock once more, Tasha rubbed it up and down between Erin's p even wetter, this time with Erin's pussy juices.

"Okay, now push back," she instructed, placing the head of the huge black cock at the entra pussy.

Erin leaned back onto the cock pressing at her pussy and felt it begin to stretch her tight little began to hurt so she stopped, letting herself get used to the feeling before pushing back aga more, feeling herself stretch even more. Just as she thought her pussy would tear itself from much, she felt the head of the cock slip inside of her and her pussy clamped down on it, puls

Erin was gasping as she tried to not move as she got used to the huge cock stretching her p Tasha gently rub her clit and she felt another inch or two of the cock slide into her. She coul how filled she felt. She could feel the cock throbbing inside of her as her pussy clamped and spasmodically on it.

She pulled away then pushed back, several times, feeling her pussy get even wetter and no stretched. Then she felt the cock pushing into her as she pushed against it and it took her br split her pussy. Suddenly Erin felt the wall on her ass cheeks and she realized that she had the cock as was available into her pussy.

Bracing herself by putting her hands on the wall right in front of her, Erin began to pump her black cock filling her pussy. She couldn't believe how good it felt once she adjusted to the si another cock suddenly appeared through the wall in front of her face, she opened her mouth Glancing over at Tasha Erin saw that she had undressed and was herself sucking on a cock through the third of the walls.

By now Erin was slamming herself onto the cock in her pussy, her body experiencing orgasm big cock filled her. She almost choked as the cock in her mouth suddenly erupted, streams o her throat. She gulped and swallowed as fast as she could, sucking on the cock until she ha

She felt the huge cock in her pussy expand and she knew that it would be spewing hot cum wanting to get pregnant, Erin reluctantly pulled away from the huge black cock and turned a in her hand and licking and sucking on the head of it. She was bracing herself against the op pressing her ass against it. The cock in her hand suddenly grew and hot cum spurt into her f the cum-spurting slit with her mouth, loving the feeling of the hot sticky cum shooting into he

As she sucked she felt something press into her pussy and she realized that she had presse the opposite wall in such a way that someone had been able to stick their cock through the h waiting pussy. As she felt that cock begin to fuck her, she felt Tasha's hands on her back. G while still sucking the cum from the cock in her mouth, she saw that Tasha was pressing her wall and bracing herself on her back as she got fucked.

Erin couldn't believe how as soon as one cock disappeared from the hole in the wall, anothe
Skinny, fat, white, black, every kind of cock she could imagine poked through one of the hole mouth or pussy. At one point Tasha asked to change places, saying she wanted two cocks f

Erin looked at the hole in the third wall and saw a nice cock stick through. Her pussy was so throbbing and she suddenly had an idea. Grabbing the cock she turned her back to the wall, wet and ready pussy. She let it pump her a few times then pulled off of it, grabbing it in her h guiding it to her asshole. Holding it steady against her asshole, Erin pushed back against it, she felt her ass sphincter resist stretching. Then suddenly she felt the cock plunge past her her ass. She gasped as she drove herself back onto it, feeling it plunge into the depth of her

She pressed herself into the wall, letting the man behind the cock fuck her ass. When she fe explode, this time she didn't have to pull away. She gasped when she felt it spurting deep in feeling the hot cum splashing inside of her. When she felt the cock slip from her ass, before move another one pressed into her, and she could feel that this one was larger too.

Erin stayed pressed against the wall as cock after cock stuck through the hole into her ass.
rubbed her clit while bracing herself on Tasha's back, watching her take cocks in both ends.
something really big trying to push into her ass. Even though she had already taken at least cocks in her ass and cum was oozing from her asshole, this cock seemed almost too big to loud when she felt it slip in and her asshole throbbed around the head of it as she tried to ac size of it. She slowly pressed herself back onto it, feeling it fill her to the point of feeling total stuffed. She slowly pumped herself onto it a few times, then looked back at the hole and sav same big black cock that she had started with more than two hours ago.

Pressing herself against the wall, Erin impaled her ass on the huge black cock. Bracing hers the cock to fuck her ass, slowly pounding in and out, in and out, stuffing her beyond belief. E her ass was fucked, her eyes glazed as she watched Tasha taking two cocks at once from t seemed like forever before she felt the cock in her ass explode, cum spewing her insides ye felt the cock slide from her now gooey ass, she slumped to the floor, exhausted, her ass thro abuse it had endured.

And even as she slumped on the floor, gasping for breath, another cock appeared through t
Even though she had no strength, Erin enveloped the cock with her mouth, working it with h while it fucked her face. She found that if she leaned her head against the wall, she could ju mouth open and let it be fucked.

Three more times Erin's mouth was filled with hot cum before no more cocks appeared. She dripping from the corners of her mouth, down her chin and onto her heaving breasts, watchi swallowed another mouthful. When she had finished, she joined Erin on the filthy, cum-stick yet satisfied look on her face.

"So, how are you doing?" she asked Erin.

"I'm so tired," Erin sighed. "My pussy hurts, my ass hurts, my mouth is tired."

"So you liked it then," Tasha managed to laugh.

"This is the best," Erin said. "As much cock as you want and no hassles. Just cocks and cur how many there were. I didn't see any people when we got here."

"Oh, I told Isaac to call some people so we'd have something to do," Tasha told her, laughin surprised look on Erin's face. "And I saw you enjoyed Isaac's cock too."

"How do you know..." Erin began to ask before realizing the obvious answer. "Which one wa

"You must be kidding!" Tasha snorted. "That huge black cock is Isaac. He's got an incredible sometimes it's just too much," she said, shaking her head. "I can't believe you were able to h ruining yourself."

"I don't know that I didn't," Erin grunted. "I thought he was big in my pussy, but in my ass, I s it."

"Jesus, you took that in your ass!" Tasha asked, her eyes wide. "I can't do that and I've tried love being fucked in the ass, but Isaac is just too big. He really fucked you in the ass?"

"Yeah," Erin nodded. "After that I was done. I couldn't even stand up anymore. I just let them

"Damn!" Tasha exclaimed, shaking her head. "Well, let's get dressed and get out of here," s "Unless you want some more?"

"No thanks!" Erin laughed. "I've had enough."

They pulled on their clothes, but cum continued to leak from Erin's ass and down her thighs. cum from her pussy and it had leaked down past her knees. They laughed as they looked at

"Don't we look like a couple of cum whores," Tasha laughed.

"Well, aren't we?" Erin asked. "God, I feel like gallons are running down my legs."

"Come on," Tasha said, opening the door and stepping out into the hall.

They walked to the front of the store and Erin was shocked to see at least 12-15 men of all a colors there. When she and Tasha appeared they all began to applaud and Erin realized tha that had been supplying all of the cock she and Tasha had enjoyed. Blushing furiously, Erin at them as they made their way through, her body tingling as she felt hands touching her as to the door. They got into Tasha's car and made their way back to her house. They took a lo and collapsed on the bed, falling asleep almost immediately.

Authors note: I hope you liked the introduction to my latest story... :)

Extortion (A teen blackmails his adulterous mother for sex)
byG. H. Lawrence©

I

It was about 4:30 on a Thursday afternoon, and I was sitting in the den watching a porno mo

The picture quality was terrible, but that was expected. It was spy porn, captured by a came motel room. The video, which resembled convenience store surveillance footage, showed a teal fleur-de-lys pattern. Beside the bed, light crept under a set of heavy curtains drawn over

On the bed, a woman was sucking a man's cock. Both were completely nude. He looked ab spot on the back of his head and a flabby gut that made his legs seem skinny. He was swart and his cock looked decently large, maybe eight or nine inches.

“Oh, yeah, suck it, Kate,” he moaned.

The woman looked younger, about 30, and was spectacular. Both her coiffure and her trimm medium-brown. Her bronzed skin was flawless, and her figure just wouldn't quit. Her legs we perfectly tapered. Her hips were full but not overly so for her height and frame—she was abo and relatively lithe. Her stomach was flat and her waist was narrow.

And her tits—oh, man, her tits. They were massive, easily a DD cup and probably a DDD or too, riding close together like two huge, supple eggs. They shimmied and bounced against e pumped her fist up and down her partner's thick cock. She sneered at the man and licked he movie actress. One might guess that she was a very expensive prostitute and he was a wea

“You ready for it, baby?” the man asked. The woman reached across and took a condom pa nightstand. A quick tearing sound cut through the room, then the woman took the rolled prop mouth. She went down on the man once more, methodically this time, unrolling the condom None of my many teenage girlfriends had ever done that to me.

The intercourse was hot, in a perfunctory way. They started in the missionary position, the b huge, firm-looking breasts widening as she lay back and the man mounted her. Inside her, h robotically; I watched his saggy butt hump up and down between her legs and wished the fix captured the penetration. Clearly, this wasn't the first time this couple had fucked. By now, th up all his moves and the woman was getting bored.

Then the view got a lot better. The man rolled off the woman and she mounted him. Riding c flexed her gorgeous figure up down while the man groped her. This time I could see the pen my own big tool grow rock-hard in my pants as I watched the hemispheres of her shapely as his dong.

“Ooh, yeah, baby, go for it,” the man seethed.

Even the view of his cock going into her was nothing, however, compared to the sight of her mightily. The man liked this, too, his eyes widening and fixing on her tanks as they lurched u reached up and cupped his hands under them. Lucky bastard.

Then he slid his hands down to her waist and she arched her back proudly. Those big tits pr off her chest, vaulting out like two huge, soft gourds.

“Oh, fuck,” I whispered. “Oh, Christ, yes.” I had seen this woman before, you understand, bu Never even naked. I squeezed my throbbing cock through my pants, desperately wanting to off right then and there. I had jacked off to her so many times already. But I didn't dare this t better plans for my cock. Much better plans.

The woman's fantastic breasts were too much for her partner. Groaning, he bucked his hips back in his head.

“Oh, baby, I'm—ohhhhhhhh. Ungggggh! Yeahhhhhh! Oh!” He had just shot his load into the over.

The woman stared down at him with pursed lips and then dismounted. She clearly hadn't ha own. She lay beside him, offering another long, unobstructed frontal view of her incredible b man lit a cigarette for himself, then offered her one. She declined.

“You know, Jim,” she said, folding her arms behind her head, “You've got a nice big dick but long enough.”

“Sorry, babe,” he said.

While they pillow-talked on the videotape, I heard a car outside in the driveway. I quickly hit button and listened for the front door. It opened a minute later and I heard a pair of heels cli stone floor of the foyer. My mother was home.

Normally, this would have caused a moment of sheer panic. I was 18 years old, a senior in h here I was watching a sex video in my parents' den. Under normal circumstances, I would ha yanked the tape from the VCR and dashed up the back stairs to my bedroom.

Not this time, however. Today was different. Today was far from normal. If things went as pl going to be the greatest day ever.

You see, the hot woman on the hidden-camera sex tape was no porn star or hooker.

She was my mother.

I had long suspected her of having affairs, and with this video, which I had made two days p her dead to rights. If Dad knew, it would crush him. He adored my mother for reasons I neve

Dad wasn't going to find out, however, if I got my way. This is where the whole thing gets rea keep reading only if you dare. See, I didn’t plan to show Dad the tape. I planned to show it to and I was going to blackmail her with it.

What did I want, you wonder? A new car? Nah, I already had a Mustang convertible. Money from the cushy summer office jobs I'd worked. That was ordinary stuff. There in the VCR wa from hell, and I wanted something really good in exchange. Something unthinkable. Someth the rest of my life.

I wanted what the guy on the tape got. I wanted to fuck my mother.

II

I hit the rewind button and headed casually down the long hallway to the kitchen. En route, I second thoughts about my plan. Would it work? Was it too sick even to try? Was there some with me? Sure, Freud said all men want to bone their mothers, but he never said it was okay

As I walked into the kitchen, I had momentarily given up on my scheme and was looking forw evening, not a weird one. Funny how sex can scare you that way. Then I saw Mom, who wa mineral water in the refrigerator, and my cock stirred again. Lord, what a woman. She was w cotton skirt that rode snugly down over her hips and thighs and ended a few inches above th her silky legs descended into a pair of blue platform sandals. Her toenails were crimson and

The top half was even better. Her big tits were practically pushing the front of her pearl silk b different zip code. I could see a tantalizing hint of her massive cleavage swelling and jiggling the fridge. What an hourglass. Mom was 36 but had the figure of a 20-year-old. During a mo usually undressed her in my mind. Now, thanks to that tape, however, I no longer needed to incredible she looked naked, how firm and perfect her body was. I had seen everything—he beaver, everything, and it was all just as hot as I had envisioned.

Yes, I wanted to fuck her. Nothing else mattered just then. My plan was suddenly back in ac “Hi,” I said.

“Hi, Peter. Did you mow the back yard yet?”

“Not yet.” Mowing the back yard was my Thursday afternoon chore.

“Well, you'd better get moving before it gets dark.” She was right. We had a big back yard.

“Yeah, I will,” I said. “But first there's something I want to show you.”

“What?”

“Uh, it's a video.”

“Oh, Peter, this isn't another tape from football practice, is it? I really don't have time—”

“No, it's not another football practice. It's a surprise.”

“Okay, let me get a drink and I'll be there in a minute.”

I headed back to the den to wait. After five minutes, which seemed like ten years, her heels down the hallway. She walked into the den with a Tanquerey and tonic in a crystal rock tuml tinkling like a tiny xylophone. Her huge breasts were bouncing youthfully inside her blouse. I linger on them a little longer than usual, and she noticed.

“Peter, what did I tell you about staring at my chest?”

“Sorry.”

“My big breasts attract enough attention out in public, so the last thing I need is for my own s them at home.”

“I'll control myself.”

After today, I thought, I won't ever need to stare again. I'll just glance in her direction and thi there, done that.

“Come on, Peter, show me whatever this surprise is. I've got things to do.”

“I'm glad you made yourself that drink,” I said. “You're gonna need it.”

“Why?” she asked with a note of alarm.

I hit the play button and the tape rolled from the beginning. There was a second or two of sta the empty motel room appeared.

“What is this?” she asked with even more concern.

“Oh, it's just something I taped a couple of days ago.”

“Where did—”

Her question trailed off as the motel room door opened and the lunchtime lovers entered.

I glanced at Mom, who had just recognized herself. “Oh, my god,” she whispered. “Oh, my g her hands for a few seconds and then looked at the screen again, where she and her pudgy beside the bed. He was kissing her neck and cupping his hands under her jugs through her “Man, that guy can't keep his hands off those big tits of yours,” I said. I had never said anyth to Mom, and it felt raw and scary coming out.

Still in shock, she didn't even hear me. “Peter how did you get this tape?” she asked, her lov quivering.

“I made it myself,” I said. “Last week I followed you to that motel. The desk clerk said you an always come every Tuesday around one o'clock. So this Tuesday morning I went back there early and gave the clerk fifty bucks to let me install the camera in one of the rooms. Then he give you that room. As you can see, he made good on his promise.”

On the screen, Mom's sweater was off and her partner was licking the slopes of her tits betw of her full-coverage bra while she fumbled with his belt buckle.

“Turn it off, Peter, please. I don't want you to see this.”

“Are you crazy? Do you think I haven't watched it already? I've seen the whole thing, Mom. I I've seen your gorgeous naked body while you suck his cock—”

“Peter, stop it!”

“—then I've seen those fantastic tits heaving while you ride the lucky bastard.” “No, no, no,” burying her face in her hands again.

“But frankly, Mom, you'd didn't seem satisfied at the end. How long have you been fucking th

“Peter, don't talk like that.”

“Oh, that doesn't matter now. How long?”

“A couple of months. I don't think we should discuss this.”

“Well, the real question is, what are we going to do about it?”

“It's not your concern. I'll stop seeing Greg. It's over.”

“You're not going to tell Dad?”

“No, no, it would kill him. Do you want to see him hurt?”

“No, and you don't want to be divorced and penniless, do you?”

“Peter, what has come over you? Everyone makes mistakes, young man.”

“And people have to pay for their mistakes.”

“Peter, believe me, just sitting here with you and seeing this is bad enough for me.”

“Well, that's not good enough for me.”

“What?”

“Listen, do you want me to give this tape to Dad, or don't you?”

“What are you getting at?” she asked morbidly.

A long silence fell.

“Oh, I see, you're blackmailing me. You're blackmailing your own mother. Jesus Christ, you’

“Well?”

“Well what? What do you want? A new car? How about a BMW? I'll pay for it from my privat father will be no wiser.”

“Nah, I love my Mustang.”

“What, then? A trip? You can go anywhere. You can take your girlfriend to Europe for a mon as you want.”

“I don't like French food.”

“Well, what, then? I don't understand. Do you want more freedom? No more chores? No cur work it out with your father somehow.”

“You're getting colder, Mom.”

“Then what, Peter? Would you please tell me what the hell you want?”

I smiled at her and nodded at the screen, where she, kneeling, was tugging down the man's blowjob. Unfortunately, he had his back to the camera and I couldn't quite see his dick in he “Peter, please turn that off.”

“No, Mom, you don't understand. That's what I want.”

“What?”

“That.” On the TV, Mom's eyes were closed as she bobbed on her partner's knob. The micro smacking sounds.

“You want…from me? Are you crazy?”

“That, for starters.”

“Oh, my god, you want to have sex with me?” her tone approached hysteria.

“Yep.”

“Peter, honey, be reasonable. Think about what you’re suggesting.”

“I’ve thought about it a lot. Hell, I’ve been thinking about it for years,” I said, ogling her huge

Her eyes followed mine down into her cleavage. “Oh, god, I knew this beautiful body would g trouble one day, but I never dreamed of anything this insane. Well, it doesn’t matter because to happen. Sorry, Peter, but I’m not going to sleep with my own son. When you come to you me for it.”

“Mom, you’re forgetting something. The tape.”

On the screen, Mom and the guy were naked and on the bed. She was still blowing him, onl seeing everything. She slowly drew her sensual lips up and down his pole as he moaned an bedspread.

“Oh, my god, Peter, please turn that off. Even seeing me like that will damage you. It’s just n

“Looks like you give great head,” I said, ignoring her pleas.

“Peter, for Christ’s sake,” she intoned, standing up and facing me, blocking my view of the te planting her hands on her hips. I had no intention of relinquishing the remote control to her a power switch on the console.

“I’m offering you a real bargain, Mom. Most kids would want tons of money. You’re getting o basically. In a few hours, the tape will be yours. And believe me, you’ll enjoy earning it.”

“You’re absolutely out of your mind.”

“If you think that guy is well-hung, wait until you see my big boy.”

She ignored that. “Listen, honey, just because you’ve caught me with someone else doesn’t slut who will do anything.”

“Oooh, yeah, that it’s, Greg,” came her voice from the TV speaker. “Suck my big tits while yo winced and flushed.

I guffawed. “You were saying?”

“Peter, please don’t destroy our relationship. We’ve already had so much trouble.”

“Enough talk,” I announced, getting up and facing her. “Unless you want me to mail that tape office tomorrow, here’s what’s going to happen. We’re going to go upstairs to my room, take then I’m going to slide my big cock into your pussy and fuck your brains—”

I saw the flash of her palm, then felt the neck-twisting whop of her hand against my face. Sh as hard as she could. Frowning in pain, I saw the desperate rage in her beautiful brown eyes but she had never struck me.

“I’ll give you some time to think about it,” I said. “Either you show up in my room later this ev that red bikini, or Dad gets the tape. And by the way, I’ve already made a copy of it. The cho the right thing.”

“Peter, please, let’s talk this over.”

I was out of the room and headed down the hall.

“Go screw yourself, Peter,” Mom called after me. I looked back and saw her leaning sexily a doorframe. “You’re right, honey, I do have a fantastic body. My legs are long, my ass is shap tiny and my tits, well, look at them,” she said, cupping her hands around her awesome rack making her cleavage swell and strain against her blouse buttons. Fuck. “Huge, round, firm, p lovers have said they’re the best, and that I’m the best. Greg couldn’t get enough of me. But will never, ever know me that way. Give it up.”

“Alright,” I said. “I’ll pack up a copy of the tape for Dad.”

III

I had no idea what she'd do. Mom was a conniving gold digger, but she wasn't crazy. Having son—now that was crazy. I had probably presented Mom with the most agonizing dilemma c

With a little luck, she'd face it as a true pragmatist. After just a couple of hours of unthinkable get away with having an affair and go right on with her life. She should even consider hersel Dad was a good man but a very jealous one, and if he had caught her in bed with that guy, h of them a bullet between the eyes. Viewed that way, my snooping had perhaps forestalled a Darkly, I imagined the scene: Dad bursting into the motel room, his snub-nosed .357 revolve gasp and a shriek from the bed, where Greg had just started pumping Mom's pussy doggy-s swinging and her face screwed up in pleasure. Dad would shoot Greg first, the bullet hitting the left eye and slamming him back against the headboard, dead. Then Mom would rise up position, petrified, not even bothering to cover her huge breasts with her hands. As she blurt apology, Dad would take one last, lustful look at her fantastic body and then blow her head c

See? I had circumvented all that carnage, and all I wanted in return was a little pussy.

Of course, she didn't see it that way. She only saw it as a choice between moral turpitude an
If Dad saw the tape, she'd be out of the house within hours and divorced within days. My fat powerful man and could easily make it happen that fast.

Would I do it? Would I really send him the tape? I asked myself that question more often as on and Mom didn't show up at my door. She wasn't going to do it, I realized. She'd do anythi privileged life, but she wouldn't resort to incest. She was probably pondering various counte me out of my twisted quest.

She had come up with a pretty good one, it turned out. Around nine, I heard her slippered fe room.

“Peter?” she said softly, standing the doorway, afraid to enter. She was wearing her powder which vaulted forward over her huge chest, and her hair was wet.

“Yeah, I’m in here,” I said.

“I have an idea. Do you remember Cindy, my friend from the tennis club? She’s really gorge like me," she said, bringing her hands up to her chest. "If that's what you like, then I'll arrang and her to, you know…"

"Well, if Cindy wants to join us for a threesome, that would be hot. I think I could satisfy both once. Otherwise, it'll just be you and me."

Mom, who had taken a hopeful step into the room, leaned back against the wall by the light a long, defeated sigh. Her big tits shimmied under her robe. Then she smiled wryly and shoo disbelief. "And you haven't come to your senses about that shiny new BMW?"

"Nope."

A long pause, maybe ten seconds.

"Okay, then let's get this over with." She untied the bathrobe, pulled it from her shoulders an
to the floor behind her.

Underneath it, she was wearing the red bikini.

IV

"Oh, yeah," I said wolfishly, getting up quickly and walking over to her. "Oh, fuck, yeah."

There her tits were, rising huge and firm above the stiff French cups of the bikini top. I put m cups and pressed my thumbs against her cleavage. Warm and springy. Perfect.

"Oh, god," she gasped, looking down at her tits.

I leaned down and gave each huge mound a long lick—the left tit, then the right. She graspe push me away, then let her hands fall to my shoulders.

Nearly berserk with lust, I had to get those melons out and suck them. "Get your top off," I c surface, her disgust seemed to be mounting, but I knew how proud she was of those gorgeo calmly in the eye, she reached behind her and unhooked the fasteners. Then she pulled the shoulders and tossed the top down to one side.

Holy shit. As awesome as her naked tits were on the videotape, you can imagine how they v point-blank range. No, actually, you can't imagine. Practically leaping out of the bikini cups, t against each other and quivered maddeningly before coming to rest. They were even bigger under clothes, and I realized I had been underestimating Mom's bra size all along. This wom DDD. She was, in all likelihood, a EE. What I 'm trying to impart here is that her tits were enc and firm, launching off her slim, curvy frame like two supple grapefruit. Her aureoles were sr her nipples were definitely not erect.

“God,” I said.

“Like 'em?” she asked dryly.

“I've never had my hands on a rack this big,” I said.

Greedily, I cupped my hands under them. Jesus, they were firm and heavy. I craned down a nipples, rolling my tongue around each aureole. Still, she didn't grow erect. I didn't care. I wa beautiful mother's huge breasts and nothing else really mattered.

After that first helping, I straightened up and looked at her, my hands still squeezing her rack wait to get my big cock between these,” I said, looking down at her globes.

“Good, let's do that first,” she said. “Since you like them so much, you'll last about ten secon be done.”

“Oh, no, honey,” I countered. “I'm going to finish off between them, alright, but only after I giv a good, long fuck.”

“Peter, you're not going to do anything weird to me, are you? You just want straight sex, righ

I smirked. “What do you mean by ‘weird’?”

“Well, you're not going to tie me to the bed or pee on me or anything like that?”

“No, I won't tie you to the bed if you behave yourself. And no, I'm not going to pee on you, bu cum on you.”

“Oh, Peter,” she said, her face sour.

“And I come in quarts.”

“Wonderful,” she said.

“If you only knew how much you're going to enjoy this, you'd stop bitching,” I told her.

“Peter, I am not going to enjoy this.”

“Pull my big cock out of my pants and you'll change your mind. Do it.”

My rigid tool was bulging obscenely down the right leg of my jeans, but Mom pretended not calmly knelt and undid my belt buckle. Then she unzipped my fly with about as much sensua trauma nurse.

“Come on, get it out and stroke it before I rip my pants.”

With my fly open, she tugged my jeans and boxers down to my thighs with a couple of firm,

She truly had no idea how big I was, but she was about to find out. Freed, my rock-hard coc her on the chin.

“Jesus,” she said, recoiling slightly from the blow. Then she got a good look at my dick. It wa right at her face, and it was a foot long. That's right. Twelve inches, and very thick.

“Oh, my lord, Peter,” she said, her eyes widening. “I didn't know you were that big.”

“Nice, eh? Stroke it.”

Tentatively, she reached up and wrapped her right hand around my dong just below the hea quite meet.

“Ohhhh,” I moaned, feeling her warm, strong hand squeeze my shaft. “Oh, god. Come on, ja

She did as I ordered, sliding her fist up and down in short, fast strokes.

“Ungh, yeah, that feels great,” I said as we both watching her hand stroke my huge pole. “Ev on one this big?” I asked.

“No.”

“Ever had a cock as big as mine in your mouth or your pussy?”

“No, Peter, I haven't, and this one isn't going either place. I'm going to get you off with my ha gripped me harder and picked up the pace. I had to admit, the woman knew how to give a h “Forget it. I last forever,” I said. “Even with you, I bet I'll have good endurance.”

“We'll see about that.” I watched her massive rack jiggle youthfully and wondered if she was “Ooooh, yeah, jack it, Mom, jack it. Besides, you still don't understand. This session isn't ove it's over. If I shoot my load now, I'll be ready for round two before you can wipe all the cum o “Bullshit, I'm going to drain you dry the very first time,” she said, sneering up at me. “Come o come! Don't hold back, Peter. Just let it squirt out. You can do it all over me if you want. I'll e off my tits, I promise. Anything to make you come and get this over with.”

As insanely hot as that sounded, I held back somehow. “Too late,” said, pulling her hand off the head toward her mouth. “Suck it.”

“Peter, please don't make me do this,” she protested.

“Suck it!”

She looked up at me with even more resentment. “Now you really are going to come, young as good as me.”

She closed her eyes and slid her lips over the tip, her jaw stretching wider and wider as the mouth. '

“Nnnnnn,” she moaned plaintively and I wondered how much of it she could take. My many had never managed more than a helmet polish.

Mom, however, was a pro. After industriously smacking her lips up and down the head abou sucking harder and harder, she ventured down the shaft. Three inches, four. Five. Six—Jesu six-inch needle dick is one thing, but taking even a half-foot of my lead pipe is a real accomp

“Oh, fuck yeah, baby, take it. Oh, shit, I've never had a blowjob this good.”

Still deep on me, she glared up at me with reddened eyes. Her mouth was stretched freakish looked like she was trying inhale an entire stick of salami.

“Mmmm, yeah, just like that,” I encouraged. “I've fantasized so many times about you doing

She drew her lips all the way off my cock and a huge line of spit ran down her chin and dripp tit. She didn't even seem to notice. Whether or not she would ever admit it, she was getting i “You've fantasized about me like this? Sucking your cock?”

Holy shit, I had never heard her talk like that, and she knew it. This was all a ploy to get me could put my cock in her pussy.

“I bet it's better than you ever dreamed, isn't it?” she asked. Then she went back to work on only an inch or so beyond the head, sucking, licking, even rubbing her bottom teeth against my throbbing shaft. Jesus, what a feeling. For a woman who was doing it against her wishes going for broke.

This continued for a few more minutes, getting hotter all the time.

“Come on, honey, shoot your load,” she coaxed, jacking my dick between loud slurps. “Do it over me. I'll even...oh, god...I'll even swallow it if you want.”

“Shit, you'll do anything to get out of this fuck, won't you?”

“I just want this all to be over, honey. Please.”

“Well, babe, the sooner we start fucking, the sooner it will be.”

Exasperated, she stood up. Wrapping one hand casually around my raging tube, she gave m smoldering look again. “Then let's get on the bed and get busy.”

“Yes, Ma'am.” I cupped my hands under her tits and leaned down to give each another quick her by the hand and led her to the bed.

Holy shit, I was really going to do it. The plan had worked. I was going to bang her.

“What position do you want to start in?” she asked matter-of-factly.

“Missionary.”

“Good,” she said, gazing down at my cock as we stood beside the bed. “I need to get used t

I knelt in front of her. “You won’t be needing these anymore,” I said, sliding her high-cut bikin over her shapely thighs. It fell to her ankles and she stepped out of it. Her beaver, a neat, cl triangle of brown hair, was now in my face. I reveled in the pleasure of exposing my mother think, I was about to slide my cock into that thing. Oh, man, this was going to be good. I plan kiss on her pelt and a shudder coursed up her frame.

She lay across the bed on a diagonal and spread her legs. I got between them, my foot-long thick and stiff above her beaver. I looked down at her tits, which were now riding as wide as on her chest and quivering slightly.

“Ready?” I asked her.

We both looked down and she tensed at the sight of my huge shaft pointing hands-free at h

“Oh, lord, honey,” she said, drawing a breath. “Wait, wait.” She reached down and started fi “Let me make sure.”

I watched her fingers diddle her pussy for a few seconds and then decided to join in. I took r hand and brought the head to where her fingers were.

She looked down again. “Wait, Peter, don't screw me yet. Honey, please, you'll hurt me.”

“I'm not putting it in,” I reassured her. “I'm just helping you get ready.”

“Okay,” she said softly.

I pressed the tip of my cock against her clit and rubbed it up and down gently, then more firm stayed there, the index and middle finger continuing to do their thing. Then she took her han long breath. I kept working my glans against her clit.

“Yeah, just a little more like that,” she said, looking down as if inspecting my technique.

Now this was progress. My goal was not only to have sex with Mom, but for her to like it. An lying naked on my bed while I rubbed my head against her clit to get her hot and wet. She c she wasn't enjoying this, but that claim grew shakier with each heavy breath she drew.

She gripped me around the arms and looked into my eyes. “I'm ready.”

I looked down to guide my big boy into her and she rose up on her elbows to follow my gaze

“Good lord, Peter,” she intoned, her mind evidently reeling once more at the size of my mon

I pushed the head between her lips, which began to stretch taut around it.

“Ooh, go slow, honey. Please go slow at first until I get used to you—if I even can.”

“That's what all the girls say,” I told her.

“Oh, Peter,” she said, disgusted.

I slid the first two or three inches into her. She bit her lip to stifle a cry and her hands grippe tighter. “Easy, Peter, easy. Good lord, you're huge.”

“That's why you're going to enjoy this so much,” I said.

“Peter, please stop saying that. I'm never going to enjoy this. If you weren't my son, it would but you are, and we're doing this strictly for you.” She raised her head to look down at the pe again. “Believe me, Peter, considering the situation, I wish you were a little smaller.”

“You'll be singing a different tune in a few minutes,” I said, giving her another two inches and lips inhale my shaft between her huge, jiggling tits. “God, your pussy's tight.”

“Just have your fun and get it over with.”

As I expected, her pussy couldn't swallow my entire cock—few women are dug deep enoug man-meat—but she took a helluva lot of it, about nine or ten inches. With two inches to go a clinging tight and horny to the base of my fuck stick, my head came to rest against her cervi

“Ungh,” she exclaimed softly, biting her lip once again.

“Never been filled up like this, have you?” I asked arrogantly.

“No,” she huffed, still wincing.

I gave her a long, slow first thrust and felt her hot, tight pussy suck at my shaft skin. I pulled the way out to the head and then drove it gently home again. She drew her knees up and gr hands while I ever so gradually picked up the pace like a mile-long freight train gathering mo

Any other woman would have been moaning her head off by now, but Mom just stared up at
I stared back into hers and the room was silent for a couple of minutes save for the squeakin

“I'm fucking you,” I finally said to her, grinning. “I never thought you'd let me do it.”

“I didn't plan to, even when I put on the bikini. I really thought I could satisfy you with a hand would have been enough for most teenage boys. Believe me, Peter, I never, ever intended t said, raising her head and looking down at the action.

“Yeah, look at that,” I encouraged. “Look at my big cock servicing your pussy.”

“Peter, please don't say things like that.”

“You know you like it. I heard you talking dirty to Greg on the tape.”

“That was different.”

For all her protests, she was actually coming around quite nicely. She had let go of her knee arms up around my back. She wasn't clawing me or even rubbing, mind you—not yet, at lea
I went deep into her and watched her eyes close and her face tense up as if holding back a lip more and more often.

I looked down at my boy and started doing her even harder. We were now approaching the serious fucking. I was going to make this woman scream if it was the last thing I did.

“It's good, isn't it?” I asked. She ignored me. “There's no way you can't be loving this.”

“I just want you to enjoy it so you'll get what you want,” she said. Her tone was still detached now rubbing my back with her hands. Bingo.

I shifted gears again and started pounding her in earnest, my pelvis whacking loudly against beefstick pummeled her slot. Her huge breasts pinwheeled and slammed into each other. Sl but her lip-biting was now almost constant. She didn't even seem to be breathing, in fact, as could no longer exhale without moaning.

“You've gotta be loving this,” I said, panting from the exertion. “There's no way you can't.”

Scrunching her eyes shut, she shook her head.

“You want to change positions?” I asked.

“It's up to you, Peter.”

“I want to give it to you side-saddle.”

I pulled my huge dick out of her and dismounted to the left. She rolled to the other side and l then I spooned up behind her and lifted her top leg. This left me with no hands free.

“Guide me in,” I said. She reached down and grasped my tool, gave it a couple of strokes, th into her slit. I pushed forward with my hips and drove my boy back into paradise. She cranec to watch it go into her.

“God, I can't get over how tight your pussy is.”

“Peter, you're so big, every woman must feel tight to you.”

“Mom, I'm telling you, I've fucked sixteen-year-olds whose pussies weren't as snug as yours

“Mine won't be tight after much more of this.”

Reaching around and fondling her big right tit, I gave her long, strong strokes. Soon she shu seemed to stop breathing again.

“Come on, Mom, let it out,” I whispered in her ear, pumping her a little faster. “If it's good, at me a little feedback.”

Again, she shook her head.

“Okay, don't say anything. Just nod your head if you're enjoying the sex.”

She nodded instantly.

V

“I knew it,” I said, kissing her on the cheek. “C'mon, stop holding back!”

Like a human balloon filled to the bursting point, she couldn't take any more.

“OH!” she exploded. “OH! OH! OH, GOD, PETER, FUCK ME, SWEETHEART, FUCK ME! Y FUCKING GOOD!”

“Finally!” I said. “What took you so long?”

With her free hand she reached up and brought my face down to hers.

Then something I didn't expect happened. We kissed. Since we weren't facing each other, it kiss but instead more of a mid-air tongue-tangle. She tasted vaguely sweet, like powdered s Frangelico.

She moved her lips up to my ear. “Fuck me, Peter. Don't stop for anything.”

I returned the gesture, tonguing her ear for a few minutes while she clawed at my hair and m

Then we both looked down between her legs again. “Oh, yeah, fuck me, big boy, fuck me go cock is so big, Peter. If I had known, honey, I never would have argued with you.” I gave her thrusts and felt her squirm with pleasure. “Ooooooh, yeah,” she groaned, wrinkling her brow so good, Peter.”

I reached around and kneaded her right tit again.

“Mmmm, yeah, squeeze my big tits, honey.”

“Want to change position again?”

“Yeah, I want to ride you.”

I pulled out of her and lay on my back. “It's all yours, honey,” I announced. “Climb aboard.”

“Jesus Christ,” she swore, gazing at my foot-long cock, which was now sticking straight up li On her knees now, she swung her left leg over me and centered herself. To get my massive she was going to need to lean way forward, with her flat stomach against my face, and reach guide the sailor into port.

She did just as required, first putting her tits in my face. “Farther, honey,” I said between sm of her nipples, which were now very erect. She scooted forward and I felt the bristly scruff of my chest. I tongued her navel as she reached around and grasped my cock.

“God almighty, Peter, I hope you don't get any bigger.”

“I just want to be big enough to please you every night.”

“Honey, you've got plenty for that job.” I felt her guide my glans between her lips and ease h pipe.

“Ungh,” she groaned. “Ungh. Oh. Oh, Peter. OH, FUCK, PETER, YOUR COCK IS STRETC
IT'S LIKE GIVING BIRTH. OH, FUCK, YES.”

“You can take it,” I encouraged.

As if we were made for doing it like this, my cock found the end of her pussy just as her tits again. As I licked and sucked those huge, firm globes, Mom gingerly began impaling herself short, dainty strokes that quickly became more bold. Soon she was screaming and slammin baseball bat, riding me as if I were a wild bronco and sliding her lips all the way to my helme stroke. Fantastic. As her massive tits flailed against my face, I occasionally looked down to s churning frantically up and down on my dick.

“Oh, Peter, yes! Yes! Yes! Jesus, this the best sex I've ever had! Yes! Ungh!”

“You're glad we did this now, aren't you?” I asked into her cleavage.

“Oh, god, yes! You're fantastic, honey! I knew you cock was big, but I had no idea!”

I started giving her slight up-thrusts to meet her strokes. That sent her over the edge.

“Oh, honey, just like that!” she cried. “Oh, yes! Yes! Yes! Yes! Oh, Peter! Yes! Yes! Yes! I'm coming! Yes! YES! YES! OH, GOD, YES! YES! YES! YES! JESUS CHRIST, PETER! UNNN

“COME BABY!” I YELLED. “COME ALL OVER MY BIG COCK! IT'S WHAT YOU'VE WANTE

“YES! OH! OH! OH! OH! YES! NOW! I'M COMING! YES! YES! YES! OH! OHHHHHHHHHH AIEEE

“Yeah, do it, baby,” she rasped, watching my cock service her heaving melons. “Fuck 'em ar it all over me if you want to, Peter.”

“Get ready,” I warned at about T-minus 20 seconds. “There's gonna be a lot.”

“Oh, I don't doubt it with a dick and balls that big,” she said. “I bet you come in fucking gallor

With about ten seconds to go, my hips went into those familiar pre-orgasmic convulsions, dr cock furiously back and forth between her shimmying jugs, the underside rubbing furiously a and the helmet slamming against her chin. She leaned her head back to give my meat more “Mmmm, yeah, do it, honey,” she said dreamily. “Do it all over me.”

My thrusts slowed and my balls clenched. “Oh, fuck, yeah,” I groaned. “Oh, fuck, Mom. OH, COMES!”

Then something really cool happened. Just as I pulled my cock from between her tits, she ro and, with her other hand, reached up and grabbed my cock. “Here, I'll jack the cum out,” she

Then she aimed my huge cannon right at her face. Jesus Christ.

“Ungh,” I groaned. The first blast was a big one, a long stream of cream that poured right on her nose and into both eyes. “Ohhhh.” An even longer string followed it. She gave my shaft t with her fist and a huge rope sprayed onto chin. Then one splattered across her left cheek. “ my life passing before my eyes. I had never come that hard.

Or that much. “Ooooh, yeah, Peter, soak me with it,” Mom cooed as she leaned her head ba tool draped three thick lines of semen from her chin to her hair and onto the sheet past her h Christ, you really do come in gallons,” she said, raising her head up just in time to get a big l into her mouth. “Mmmm,” she moaned, quickly taking my spurting helmet between her lips. I weren't empty yet. “Arggggggh, yeah,” I groaned obscenely as a good five or six enormous s taking at least a full second, gushed into her mouth. She gulped and moaned.

“Ungh, yeah, swallow it,” I ordered. “Swallow it!”

She did—every drop. Well, almost every drop. As her eyes widened with the shock of how m squirting into her mouth, a gooey white line ran down her chin and dripped onto her neck.

I pulled my cock out of her mouth and sprayed three more big lines across the left side of he with my cum shot reduced to a mere dribble, I took my cock out of her skilled hand and strok letting the last of my load drip on her chin. She lapped at it hornily.

“Oh, my god,” I moaned. “Oh, my god, that felt so fucking good.” I scooted back a little and w clinging to my helmet on her left nipple, then her right.

“Mmmm, yeah, wipe it on my big tits,” she purred, watching.

“Oh, Mom, I have never come that hard in my whole life.”

“Good lord, I hope not,” she said as I got off her and she sat up. She looked down at her hug from her cum-drenched face dripped onto them. Then she turned and looked behind her at a puddles of jism on the sheet. “I've never seen this much cum. Jesus, honey, when was the la orgasm?”

“This morning.”

“Were you jacking off?”

“Yep.”

“Were you fantasizing about me?”

“Yep.”

“Did you shoot this much?”

“Nope.”

“Is it because fucking me turned out to be even better than you had hoped?”

“Yep.”

“See, honey, that's why you shouldn't masturbate. Real sex is much better for you, young m ready for round two?”

FACETS OF METTA

by Sharon Salzberg

Copyright 1995 Sharon Salzberg

Excerpted from "Loving-kindness: The Revolutionary Art of Happiness" by Sharon Salzberg, 1995, Shambala Publications.

* * *

DharmaNet Edition 1995

This electronic edition is offered for free distribution
via DharmaNet by arrangement with the publisher.

DharmaNet International
P.O. Box 4951, Berkeley CA 94704-4951

* * * * * * * *

A pearl goes up for auction
No one has enough,
so the pearl buys itself

-- Rumi

Love exists in itself, not relying on owning or being owned. Like the pearl, love can only buy itself, because love is not a matter of currency or exchange. No one has enough to buy it but everyone has enough to cultivate it. Metta reunites us with what it means to be alive and unbound.

Researchers once gave a plant to every resident of a nursing home. They told half of these elderly people that the plants were theirs to care for -- they had to pay close attention to their plants' needs for water and sunlight, and they had to respond carefully to those needs. The researchers told the other half of the residents that their plants were theirs to enjoy but that they did not have to take any responsibility for them; the nursing staff would care for the plants.

At the end of a year, the researchers compared the two groups of elders. The residents who had been asked to care for their plants were living considerably longer than the norm, were much healthier, and were more oriented towards and connected to their world. The other residents, those who had plants but did not have to stay responsive to them, simply reflected the norms for people their age in longevity, health, alertness, and engagement with the world.

This study shows, among other things, the enlivening power of connection, of love, of intimacy. This is the effect that metta can have on our lives. But when I heard about the study, I also reflected on how often we regard intimacy as a force between ourselves and something outside ourselves -- another person, or even a plant -- and how rarely we consider the force of being intimate with ourselves, with our own inner experience. How rarely do we lay claim to our own lives and feel connected to ourselves!

A way to discover intimacy with ourselves and all of life is to live with integrity, basing our lives on a vision of compassionate nonharming. When we dedicate ourselves to actions that do not hurt ourselves or others, our lives become all of one piece, a "seamless garment" with nothing separate or disconnected in the spiritual reality we discover.

In order to live with integrity, we must stop fragmenting and compartmentalizing our lives. Telling lies at work and expecting great truths in meditation is nonsensical. Using our sexual energy in a way that harms ourselves or others, and then expecting to know transcendent love in another arena, is mindless. Every aspect of our lives is connected to every other aspect of our lives. This truth is the basis for an awakened life. When we live with integrity, we further enhance intimacy with ourselves by being able to rejoice, taking active delight in our actions. Rejoicing opens us tremendously, dissolving our barriers, thereby enabling intimacy to extend to all of life. Joy has so much capacity to eliminate separation that the Buddha said, "Rapture is the gateway to nirvana."

The enlivening force itself is rapture. It brightens our vitality, our gratitude, and our love. We begin to develop rapture by rejoicing in our own goodness. We reflect on the good things we have done, recollecting times when we have been generous, or times when we have been caring. Perhaps we can think of a time when it would have been easy to hurt somebody, or to tell a lie, or to be dismissive, yet we made the effort not to do that. Perhaps we can think of a time when we gave something up in a way that freed our mind and helped someone else. Or perhaps we can think of a time when we have overcome some fear and reached out to someone. These reflections open us to a wellspring of happiness that may have been hidden from us before.

Contemplating the goodness within ourselves is a classical meditation, done to bring light, joy, and rapture to the mind. In contemporary times this practice might be considered rather embarrassing, because so often the emphasis is on all the unfortunate things we have done, all the disturbing mistakes we have made. Yet this classical reflection is not a way of increasing conceit. It is rather a commitment to our own happiness, seeing our happiness as the basis for intimacy with all of life. It fills us with joy and love for ourselves and a great deal of self-respect.

Significantly, when we do metta practice, we begin by directing metta toward ourselves. This is the essential foundation for being able to offer genuine love to others. When we truly love ourselves, we want to take care of others, because that is what is most enriching, or nourishing, for us. When we have a genuine inner life, we are intimate with ourselves and intimate with others. The insight into our inner world allows us to connect to everything around us, so that we can see quite clearly the oneness of all that lives. We see that all beings want to be happy, and that this impulse unites us. We can recognize the rightness and beauty of our common urge towards happiness, and realize intimacy in this shared urge.

If we are practicing metta and we cannot see the goodness in ourselves or in someone else, then we reflect on that fundamental wish to be happy that underlies all action. "Just as I want to be happy, all beings want to be happy." This reflection gives rise to openness, awareness, and love. As we commit to these values, we become embodiments of a lineage that stretches back through beginningless time. All good people of all time have wanted to express openness, awareness, and love. With every phrase of metta, we are declaring our alignment with these values.

From this beginning, metta practice proceeds in a very structured way and specific way. After we have spent some time directing metta to ourselves, we then move on to someone who has been very good to us, for whom we feel gratitude and respect. In the traditional terminology, this person is known as a "benefactor." Later we move to someone who is a beloved friend. It is relatively easy to direct lovingkindness to these categories of beings (we say beings rather than people to include the possibility of animals in these categories.) After we have established this state of connection, we move on to those that it may be harder to direct lovingkindness toward. In this way we open up our limits and extend our capacity for benevolence.

Thus, next we direct lovingkindness to someone whom we feel neutral toward, someone for whom we feel neither great liking nor disliking. This is often an interesting time in the practice, because it may be difficult to find somebody for whom we have no instantaneous judgment. If we can find such a neutral person, we direct metta toward them.

After this, we are ready for the next step -- directing metta toward someone with whom we have experienced conflict, someone toward whom we feel lack of forgiveness, or anger, or fear. In the Buddhist scriptures this person is somewhat dramatically known as "the enemy." This is a very powerful stage in the practice, because the enemy, or the person with whom we have difficulty stands right at the division between the finite and the infinite radiance of love. At this point, conditional love unfolds into unconditional love. Here dependent love can turn to the flowering of an independent love that is not based upon getting what we want or having our expectations met. Here we learn that the inherent happiness of love is not compromised by likes and dislikes, and thus, like the sun, it can shine on everything. This love is truly boundless. It is born out of freedom, and it is offered freely.

Through the power of this practice, we cultivate an equality of loving feeling toward ourselves and all beings. There was a time in Burma when I was practicing metta intensively. I had taken about six weeks to go through all the different categories: myself, benefactor, friend, neutral person, and enemy. After I had spent these six weeks doing the metta meditation all day long, my teacher, U Pandita, called me into his room and said, "Say you were walking in the forest with your benefactor, your friend, your neutral person, and your enemy. Bandits come up and demand that you choose one person in your group to be sacrificed. Which one would you choose to die?"

I was shocked at U Pandita's question. I sat there and looked deep into my heart, trying to find a basis from which I could choose. I saw that I could not feel any distinction between any of those people, including myself. Finally I looked at U Pandita and replied, "I couldn't choose; everyone seems the same to me."

U Pandita then asked, "You wouldn't choose your enemy?" I thought a minute and then answered, "No, I couldn't."

Finally U Pandita asked me, "Don't you think you should be able to sacrifice yourself to save the others?" He asked the question as if more than anything else in the world he wanted me to say, "Yes, I'd sacrifice myself." A lot of conditioning rose up in me -- an urge to please him, to be "right" and to win approval. But there was no way I could honestly say "yes," so I said, "No, I can't see any difference between myself and any of the others." He simply nodded in response, and I left.

Later I was reading the Visuddhi Magga, one of the great commentarial works of Buddhist literature which describes different meditation techniques and the experiences of practicing these techniques. In the section on metta meditation, I came to that very question about the bandits. The answer I had given was indeed considered the correct one for the intensive practice of metta.

Of course, in different life situations many different courses of action might be appropriate. But the point here is that metta does not mean that we denigrate ourselves in any situation in order to uphold other people's happiness. Authentic intimacy is not brought about by denying our own desire to be happy in unhappy deference to others, nor by denying others in narcissistic deference to ourselves. Metta means equality, oneness, wholeness. To truly walk the Middle Way of the Buddha, to avoid the extremes of addiction and self-hatred, we must walk in friendship with ourselves as well as with all beings.

When we have insight into our inner world and what brings us happiness, then wordlessly, intuitively, we understand others. As though there were no longer a barrier defining the boundaries of our caring, we can feel close to others' experience of life. We see that when we are angry, there is an element of pain in the anger that is not different from the pain that others feel when they are angry. When we feel love there is a distinct and special joy in that feeling. We come to know that this is the nature of love itself, and that other beings filled with love experience of this same joy.

In practicing metta we do not have to make a certain feeling happen. In fact, during the practice we see that we feel differently at different times. Any momentary emotional tone is far less relevant than considerable power of intention we harness as we say these phrases. As we repeat, "May I be happy; may all beings be happy," we are planting seeds by forming this powerful intention in the mind. The seed will bear fruit in its own time.

When I was practicing metta intensively in Burma, at times when I repeated the metta phrases, I would picture myself in a wide open field planting seeds. Doing metta we plant the seeds of love, knowing that nature will take its course and in time those seeds will bear fruit. Some seeds will come to fruition quickly, some slowly, but our work is simply to plant the seeds. Every time we form the intention in the mind for our own happiness or for the happiness of others, we are doing our work; we are channeling the powerful energies of our own minds. Beyond that, we can trust the laws of nature to continually support the flowering of our love. As Pablo Neruda says:

> Perhaps the earth can teach us, > as when everything seems dead in winter > and later proves to be alive.

When we started our retreat center, Insight Meditation Society, in 1975, many of us there decided to do a self-retreat for a month to inaugurate the center. I planned to do metta for the entire month. This was before I'd been to Burma, and it would be my first opportunity to do intensive and systematic metta meditation. I had heard how it was done in extended practice, and I planned to follow that schedule. So the first week I spent directing lovingkindness towards myself. I felt absolutely nothing. It was the dreariest, most boring week I had known in some time. I sat there saying, "May I be happy, may I be peaceful," over and over again with no obvious result.

Then, as it happened, someone we knew in the community had a problem, and a few of us had to leave the retreat suddenly. I felt even worse, thinking, "Not only did I spend this week doing metta and getting nothing from it, but I also never even got beyond directing metta towards myself. So on top of everything else, I was really selfish."

I was in a frenzy getting ready to leave. As I was hurriedly getting everything together in my bathroom, I dropped a jar. It shattered all over the floor. I still remember my immediate response: "You are really a klutz, but I love you." And then I thought, "Wow! Look at that. Something did happen in this week of practice."

So the intention is enough. We form the intention in our mind for our happiness and the happiness of all. This is different from struggling to fabricate a certain feeling, to create it out of our will, to make it happen. We just settle back and plant the seeds without worrying about the immediate result. That is our work. If we do our work, then manifold benefits will surely come.

Fortunately, the Buddha was characteristically precise about what those benefits include. He said that the intimacy and caring that fill our hearts as the force of lovingkindness develops will bring eleven particular advantages:

1) You will sleep easily.
2) You will wake easily.
3) You will have pleasant dreams.
4) People will love you.
5) Devas [celestial beings] and animals will love you.
6) Devas will protect you.
7) External dangers [poisons, weapons, and fire] will not harm you.
8) Your face will be radiant.
9) Your mind will be serene.
10) You will die unconfused.
11) You will be reborn in happy realms.

People doing formal metta practice often memorize these eleven benefits and recite them to themselves regularly. Reminding ourselves of the fruit of our intention and effort can bring a lot of faith and rapture, sustaining us through those inevitable times when it seems as if the practice is not "getting anywhere." When we consider each of these benefits, we can see more fully how metta revolutionizes our lives.

When we steep our hearts in lovingkindness, we are able to sleep easily, to awaken easily, and to have pleasant dreams. To have self-respect in life, to walk through this life with grace and confidence, means having a commitment to nonharming and to loving care. If we do not have these things, we can neither rest nor be at peace; we are always fighting against ourselves. The feelings we create by harming are painful both for ourselves and for others. Thus harming leads to guilt, tension, and complexity. Sleeping easily, waking easily, But living a clear and simple life, free from resentment, fear, and guilt, extends into our sleeping, dreaming and waking.

The next benefit the Buddha pointed out is that if we practice metta we will receive in return the love of others. This is not a heartless calculating motivation, but rather a recognition that the energy we extend in this world draws to it that same kind of energy. If we extend the force of love, love returns to us. The American psychologist William James once said, "My experience is what I agree to attend to. Only those items I notice shape my mind." Perhaps this is partially how this law works -- opening to the energy of love within us, we can notice it more specifically around us.

It happens on other levels as well. If we are committed in our lives to the force of lovingkindness, then people know that they can trust us. They know we will not deceive them; we will not harm them. By being a beacon of trustworthiness in this world, we become a safe haven for others and a good friend.

The next set of benefits the Buddha points out promises that if we practice metta we will be protected. Devas, and other invisible beings, are classically taught as part of the Buddhist cosmology, but we don't have to believe in the intervention of invisible forces in order to comprehend how the practice of metta protects us. This assertion does not mean being protected in the sense that nothing bad will ever happen to us, because clearly the vicissitudes of life are completely outside our control. Pleasure and pain, gain and loss, praise and blame, and fame and ill repute will revolve throughout our lives. But nevertheless we can be protected by the nature of how we receive, how we hold that which our karma brings us.

Albert Einstein said, "The splitting of the atom has changed everything except for how we think." How we think, how we look at our lives, is all-important, and the degree of love we manifest determines the degree of spaciousness and freedom we can bring to life's events.

Imagine taking a very small glass of water and putting into it a teaspoon of salt. Because of the small size of the container, the teaspoon of salt is going to have a big impact upon the water. However, if you approach a much larger body of water, such as a lake, and put into it that same teaspoonful of salt, it will not have the same intensity of impact, because of the vastness and openness of the vessel receiving it. Even when the salt remains the same, the spaciousness of the vessel receiving it changes everything.

We spend a lot of our lives looking for a feeling of safety or protection; we try to alter the amount of salt that comes our way. Ironically, the salt is the very thing that we cannot do anything about, as life changes and offers us repeated ups and downs. Our true work is to create a container so immense that any amount of salt, even a truckload, can come into it without affecting our capacity to receive it. No situation, even an extreme one, then can mandate a particular reaction.

Once I had a meditation student who had been a child in Nazi-occupied Europe. She recounted an instance when she was around ten years old when a German soldier held a gun to her chest -- a situation that would readily arouse terror. Yet she related feeling no fear at all, thinking, "You may be able to kill my body, but you can't kill me." What a spacious reaction! It is in this way that lovingkindness opens the vastness of mind in us, which is ultimately our greatest protection.

Another benefit of cultivating of metta is that one's face becomes very clear and shining. This means that an unfeigned inner beauty shines forth. We know in life situations how mind affects matter, how if we are enraged about something, it shows in our face. If somebody is full of hatred, it shows in the way they stand, the way they move, the way their jaw is set. It is not very attractive. No amount of make-up, jewelry, or embellishments bring beauty to a sullen, disgruntled, angry face. In just the same way, when someones mind is filled with the rapture of lovingkindness or compassion, it is beautiful to see the expression of light, of radiance, on their face and bearing.

With the practice of metta one also has a serene mind. The feeling of lovingkindness generates great peace. This is the mind that can say, "You are really a klutz, but I love you." It is a feeling endowed with acceptance, patience, and spaciousness. This great peace allows union with all of life, because we are not relying on changing circumstances for our happiness.

The peace of metta offers the kind of happiness that gives us the ability to concentrate. Serenity is the most important ingredient in being able to be present or being able to concentrate the mind. Concentration is an act of cherishing a chosen object. If we have no serenity, the mind will be scattered, and we will not be able to gather in the energy that is being lost to distraction. When we can concentrate, all of this energy is returned to us. This is the potency that heals us.

If we practice metta, another major benefit is that we will die unconfused. Our habitual ways of thinking, acting, and relating to life tend to be the ones that are strongest at the time of death as well. If we spend a lifetime feeling separate, apart, cultivating anger, giving way to frustration, to fear, to desire, that will likely be the mental-emotional environment within which we face our death. But if we have lived our life in a way that honors our connectedness, reflects our oneness, and cultivates caring and giving, that is likely to be how we will die.

The last specific benefit the Buddha spoke of was being reborn in happy realms as a result of filling our hearts with lovingkindness. The potential for rebirth again and again in various realms of pleasure or pain is part of the Buddhist worldview. For someone who subscribes to this vision of life, rebirth in a realm where one can attain liberation is most important. For those who don't subscribe to this vision, the benefits of metta can surely be seen to come to us in this lifetime.

Metta is the priceless treasure that enlivens us and brings us into intimacy with ourselves and others. It is the force of love that will lead beyond fragmentation, loneliness and fear. The late Hindu guru Neem Karoli Baba often said, "Don't throw anyone out of your heart." One of the most powerful healings (and greatest adventures) of our lifetime can come about as we learn to live by this dictum.

* * * * * * * *

From Loving-Kindness: The Revolutionary Art of Happiness by Sharon Salzberg, copyright 1995. Reprinted by permission of Shambala Publications, Inc. Available at local bookstores or from Shambala, (617) 424-0228.

[end]

[This document can be acquired from a sub-directory coombspapers viaanonymous FTP an on the node COOMBS.ANU.EDU.AU]The document's ftp filename and the full directory path
coombspapers top level INDEX file][This version: 23 November 1993]----------This file was copied from an archive of Zen Buddhist texts establishedat Sam Huston Univ, Texas, US on a Gopher Host oac3.hsc.uth.tmc.eduPath=1/computers/oac_staff/S_Newton/zenThe original document was Newton,<snewton@oac.hsc.uth.tmc.edu> of the Southwest Chogye International ZenAcade
Houston, TX 77055 English (713) 467-0998Korean (713) 467-0997 Fax (713)
467-0998---------- FAITH AND FELLOWSHIPL liberate ourselves from our chains ofpast revenge and sore bitternessLet us create new virtu mantle of wisdom,empty-minded, pure and simple-minded, patient and helping others in c act.Let us create a new world of one flower, followingwhat the good-and-wise ones teach us continuously and diligently study that bywhich mind eye can be openedSouthwest Chogye I Academeia----------end of record

CONTEMPLATION OF FEELING
The Discourse-Grouping on the Feelings
(Vedana-Samyutta)

Translated from the Pali, with an Introduction
by

Nyanaponika Thera

The Wheel Publication No. 303/304

SL ISSN 0049-7541

Copyright 1983 Buddhist Publication Society

BUDDHIST PUBLICATION SOCIETY
KANDY SRI LANKA

* * *

DharmaNet Edition 1995

Transcription: Joe Crea
Proofreading: Joe Crea, John Bullitt
Formatting: John Bullitt

This electronic edition is offered for free distribution
via DharmaNet by arrangement with the publisher.

DharmaNet International
P.O. Box 4951, Berkeley CA 94704-4951

* * * * * * * *

INTRODUCTION

"To feel is everything!" -- so exclaimed a German poet. Though these are rather exuberant words, they do point to the fact that feeling is a key factor in human life. Whether people are fully aware of it or not, their lives are chiefly spent in an unceasing endeavour to increase their pleasant feelings and to avoid unpleasant feelings. All human ambitions and strivings serve that purpose: from the simple joys of a humdrum existence to the power urge of the mighty and the creative joy of the great artist. All that is wanted is to have more and more of pleasant feelings, because they bring with them emotional satisfaction, called happiness. Such happiness may have various levels of coarseness or refinement, and may reach great intensity. These emotions, on their part, will produce many volitions and their actualizations. For the purpose of satisfying the "pleasure principle," many heroic deeds have been performed, and many more unheroic and unscrupulous ones. For providing the means to pleasurable feelings, thousands of industries and services have sprung up, with millions of workers. Technology and applied sciences, too, serve to a large extent the growing demands for sense-enjoyment and comfort. By providing questionable escape routes, these purveyors of emotional and sensual happiness also try to allay painful feelings like fear and anxiety.

From this brief purview one may now appreciate the significance of the Buddha's terse saying that "//all things converge on feelings//." From such a central position of feeling it can also be understood that misconceptions about feelings belong to the twenty Personality Views, where the Aggregate of Feeling (//vedana-kkhandha//) is in various ways identified with an assumed self.

Yet, //feeling// by itself, in its primary state, is quite neutral when it registers the impact of an object as pleasant, unpleasant or indifferent. Only when emotional or volitional additions are admitted, will there arise desire and love, aversion and hate, anxiety, fear and distorting views. But that need not be so. These admixtures are not inseparable parts of the respective feelings. In fact, many of the weaker impressions we receive during the day stop at the mere registering of a very faint and brief feeling, without any further emotional reaction. This shows that the stopping at the bare feeling is psychologically possible, and that it could also be done intentionally with the help of mindfulness and self-restraint, even in cases when the stimulus to convert feelings into emotions is strong. Through actual experience it can thus be confirmed that the ever-revolving round of Dependent Origination (//paticca-samuppada//) can be stopped at the point of Feeling, and that there is no inherent necessity that Feeling is followed by Craving. Here we encounter Feeling as a key factor on the path of liberation, and therefore, the //Contemplation of Feeling// has, in Buddhist tradition, always been highly regarded as an effective aid on that path.

The Contemplation of Feeling is one of the four Foundations of Mindfulness (//satipatthana//) and may be undertaken in the framework of that meditative practice aiming at the growth of Insight (//vipassana//). It is, however, essential that this Contemplation should also be remembered and applied in daily life whenever feelings are prone to turn into unwholesome emotions. Of course, one should not try to //produce// in oneself feelings intentionally, just for the sake of practice; they should rather be taken up for mindful observation only when they occur. There will be many such occasions, provided the mind is alert and calm enough to notice the feelings clearly at their primary stage.

In the Contemplation of Feelings, there should first be a mindful awareness of the feelings when they arise, and one should clearly distinguish them as pleasant, unpleasant (painful) or neutral, respectively. There is no such thing as "mixed feelings."

Mindfulness should be maintained throughout the short duration of that specific feeling, down to its cessation. If the vanishing point of feelings is repeatedly seen with increasing clarity, it will become much easier to trap, and finally to stop, those emotions, thoughts and volitions, which normally follow so rapidly, and which are so often habitually associated with the feelings. Pleasant feeling is habitually linked with enjoyment and desire; unpleasant feeling with aversion; neutral feeling with boredom and confusion, but also serving as background for wrong views. But when Bare Attention is directed towards the arising and vanishing of feelings, these polluting additives will be held a bay; or when they have arisen they will be immediately cognized in their nature, and that cognition may often be sufficient to stop them from growing stronger by unopposed continuance.

If feelings are seen in their bubble-like blowing up and bursting, their linkage with craving or aversion will be weakened more and more, until that bondage is finally broken. By that practice, attachment to likes and dislikes will be reduced and thereby an inner space will be provided for the growth of the finer emotions and virtues: for loving-kindness and compassion, for contentment, patience and forbearance.

In this contemplation it is of particular importance to dissociate the feelings from even the faintest thoughts of "I" or "mine." There should be no ego-reference, as for instance "//I// feel (and, therefore, I am)." Nor should there be any thought of being the owner of the feelings: "I have pleasant feelings. How happy I am!" With the thought, "I want to have more of them" craving arises. Or, "I have pains. How unhappy I am!" and wishing to get rid of the pains, aversion arises.

Avoiding these wrong and unrealistic views, one should be aware of the feelings as a conditioned and transient process. Mindfulness should be kept alert and it should be focused on the bare fact that there is just the mental function of such and such a feeling; and this awareness should serve no other purpose than that of knowledge and mindfulness, as stated in the Satipatthana Sutta. As long as one habitually relates the feelings to a person that "has" them, and does so even during meditation, there cannot be any progress in that Contemplation.

To be aware of the feelings without any ego-reference will also help to distinguish them clearly from the physical stimuli arousing them, as well as from the subsequent mental reactions to them. Thereby the meditator will be able to keep his attention focused on the feelings alone, without straying into other areas. This is the purport of the phrase "he contemplates feelings in the feelings" as stated in the Satipatthana Sutta. At this stage of the practice, the meditator will become more familiar with the Insight Knowledge of "Discerning mentality and materiality" (//nama-rupa-pariccheda//).

Further progress, however, will require persistence in the mindful observations of the arising and passing away of every instant of feeling whenever it occurs. This will lead to a deepening experience of impermanence (//anicca//), being one of the main gates to final liberation. When, in Insight Meditation (vipassana), the vanishing moment of feelings becomes more strongly marked, the impermanent nature of the feelings will impress itself very deeply on the meditator's mind. This experience, gained also from other mental and bodily processes, will gradually mature into the Insight Knowledge of Dissolution (//bhanganana//). On reaching that stage, the meditator will find himself well on the road to further progress.

It is within the practice of Insight meditation that the Contemplation of Feelings can unfold its full strength as an efficient tool for breaking the chain of suffering at its weakest link. But from this Contemplation, considerable benefits can be derived also by those who, in their daily life, devote only some quiet reflection to their feelings and emotions, even if done retrospectively. They will soon find that feelings and emotions are "separable." Even this reflective and retrospective contemplation can help them to a fuller awareness of feelings and emotions when they actually occur. This again can save them from being carried away by the emotional cross-currents of elation and dejection. The mind will then gradually reach a higher level of firmness and equipoise, just by that simple procedure of looking, or looking back at, one's feelings and emotions.

This, however, should not, and need not, be made a constant practice, but should be taken up on suitable occasions and for a limited period of time until one has become familiar with the mechanism of feelings followed by emotions. Such an understanding of the process will result in an increasing control over one's emotional reactions, and this will happen in a natural, spontaneous way. One need not have fears that one's focusing the mind on the feelings and emotions, in the manner described, will lead to cold aloofness or an emotional withdrawal. On the contrary, mind and heart will become more open to all those finer emotions spoken of before. It will not exclude warm human relationships, nor the enjoyment of beauty in art and nature. But it will remove from them the fever of clinging, so that these experiences will give a deeper satisfaction, as far as this world of Dukkha admits.

A life lived in this way may well mature in the wish to use the Contemplation of Feelings for its highest purpose: mind's final liberation from suffering.

Nyanaponika

Kandy, Sri Lanka
January, 1983

* * * * * * * *

THE PLACE OF "FEELING" IN BUDDHIST PSYCHOLOGY

It should be first made clear that, in Buddhist psychology, "feeling" (Pali: //vedana//) is the bare sensation noted as pleasant, unpleasant (painful) and neutral (indifferent). Hence, it should not be confused with //emotion// which, though arising from the basic feeling, adds to it likes or dislikes of varying intensity, as well as other thought processes.

Feeling, in that sense, is one of the five Aggregates or Groups of Existence (//khandha//), constituting what is conventionally called "a person." The specific factors operative in //emotion// belong to the Aggregate of Mental Formations (//sankhara-kkhandha//). Feeling is one of the four mental Aggregates which arise, inseparably, in all states of consciousness; the other three are perception, mental formations, and consciousness.

Feeling arises whenever there is the meeting of three factors, i.e., sense-organ, object and consciousness. It is called the meeting of these three that, in Buddhist psychology, is called sense-impression (contact, impact; //phassa//), which is a mental, and not a physical process. It is sixfold, as being conditioned either by of the five physical senses or by mind. it is this sixfold sense-impression by which the corresponding six feelings are conditioned. In the formula of the Dependent Origination (//paticca-samuppada//), this is expressed by the link: "Sense-impression conditions Feeling" (//phassa-paccaya vedana//). When emotions follow, they do so in accordance with the next link of Dependent Origination: "Feeling conditions Craving" (//vedana-paccaya tanha//).

The feeling that arises from contact with visual forms, sounds, odors, and tastes is always a neutral feeling. Pleasant or unpleasant feelings do not always follow in relation to these four sense perceptions; but //when// they follow, they are then an additional stage of the perceptual process, subsequent to the neutral feeling which is the first response.

But bodily impressions (touch, pressure, etc.) can cause either pleasant or unpleasant feelings.

Mental impressions can cause gladness, sadness or neutral (indifferent) feeling.

Feeling is one of those mental factors (//cetasika//) which are common to all types of consciousness. In other words, every conscious experience has a feeling tone, even if only that of a neutral or indifferent feeling, which also has a distinct quality of its own.

Feeling by itself (if one could so separate it) is, as it was already said, the bare sensation noted as pleasant, painful or neutral. The subsequent emotional, practical, moral or spiritual values attached to that basic feeling are determined by other mental factors that subsequently arise in relation to that feeling, but, by way of classification, belong to the Aggregate of Mental Formations (//sankhara-kkhandha//). It is the quality of those other mental functions that makes the co-nascent feeling, too, to be either good or bad, noble or low, kammic or non-kammic, mundane or supramundane.

Feeling may stop at the stage of bare sensation in all weak states of consciousness, but also when there is mindful control of feelings. In such cases, there is no evaluation of these feelings, emotionally or intellectually.

* * *

THE DISCOURSE-GROUPING ON FEELINGS
(Vedana-Samyutta)

1. Concentration

"There are, O monks, these three feelings: pleasant feelings, painful feelings, and neither-painful-nor-pleasant feelings.

"A disciple of the Buddha, mindful, clearly comprehending, with his mind collected, he knows the feelings [1] and their origin, [2] knows whereby they cease [3] and knows the path that to the ending of feelings lead. [4]
And when the end of feelings he has reached, such a monk, his thirsting quenched, attains Nibbana." [5]

2. Happiness

"There are, O monks, these three feelings: pleasant feelings, painful feelings, and neither-painful-nor-pleasant feelings.

"Be it a pleasant feeling, be it a painful feeling, be it neutral, one's own or others', feelings of all kinds [6] -- he knows them all as ill, deceitful, evanescent.
Seeing how they impinge again, again, and disappear, [7]
he wins detachment from the feelings, passion-free."

3. Giving up

"In the case of pleasant feelings, O monks, the underlying tendency [8] to lust should be given up; in the case of painful feelings, the underlying tendency to resistance (aversion) should be given up; in the case of neither-painful-nor-pleasant feelings, the underlying tendency to ignorance should be given up.

"If a monk has given up the tendency to lust in regard to pleasant feeling, the tendency to resistance in regard to painful feelings, and the tendency to ignorance in regard to neither-painful-nor-pleasant feelings, then he is called one who is free of (unwholesome) tendencies, one who has the right outlook. He has cut off craving, severed the fetters (to future existence), and through the full penetration of conceit, [9] he has made an end of suffering.

"If one feels joy, but knows not feeling's nature, bent towards greed, he will not find deliverance.

If one feels pain, but knows not feeling's nature, bent toward hate, he will not find deliverance.

And even neutral feeling which as peaceful the Lord of Wisdom has proclaimed, if, in attachment, he should cling to it,

he will not be free from the round of ill.

And having done so, in this very life will be free from cankers, free from taints.

Mature in knowledge, firm in Dhamma's ways,
when once his life-span ends, his body breaks,
all measure and concept he has transcended."

4. The Bottomless Pit

"When, O monks, an untaught worldling says that in the great ocean there is a (bottomless) pit [10], he speaks about something unreal and not factual. [11] 'The (bottomless) pit,' O monks, is rather a name for painful bodily feelings. When an untaught worldling is afflicted by painful bodily feelings, he worries and grieves, he laments, beats his breast, weeps and is distraught. He is then said to be an untaught worldling who cannot withstand the bottomless pit and cannot gain a foothold in it. But when a well-taught noble disciple [12] is afflicted by painful bodily feelings, he will not worry nor grieve and lament, he will not beat his breast and weep, nor will he be distraught. He is then said to be a noble disciple who can withstand the bottomless pit and has gained a foothold in it.

Who cannot bear the painful body-feelings that arise endangering his life, he trembles when afflicted.
He wails and cries aloud, a weak and feeble man.
He cannot stand against the pit,
nor can a foothold he secure.

But one who bears the painful body-feelings that arise, not trembling when his very life is threatened, he truly can withstand that pit and gain a foothold in its depth."

5. To Be Known

"There are, O monks, these three feelings: pleasant, painful and neither-painful-nor-pleasant. Pleasant feelings should be known as painful, painful feelings should be known as a thorn, and neither-painful-nor-pleasant feelings should be known as impermanent. If a monk has known the feelings in such a way, it is said of him that he has the right outlook. He has cut off craving, severed the fetters (to existence) and, through the full penetration of conceit, he has made an end of suffering.

"Who sees the pain in happiness and views the painful feeling as a thorn, perceives the transience in neutral feeling which is peaceful -- right outlook, truly, has such a monk who fully understands these feelings;
And having penetrated them, he will be taint-free in this very life.
Mature in knowledge, firm in Dhamma's ways,
when once his life-span ends, his body breaks,
all measure and concept he has transcended."

6. The Dart

"An untaught worldling, O monks, experiences pleasant feelings, he experiences painful feelings and he experiences neutral feelings. A well-taught noble disciple likewise experiences pleasant, painful and neutral feelings. Now what is the distinction, the diversity, the difference that exists herein between a well-taught noble disciple and an untaught worldling?

"When an untaught worldling is touched by a painful (bodily) feeling, he worries and grieves, he laments, beats his breast, weeps and is distraught. He thus experiences two kinds of feelings, a bodily and a mental feeling. It is as if a man were pierced by a dart and, following the first piercing, he is hit by a second dart. So that person will experience feelings caused by two darts. It is similar with an untaught worldling: when touched by a painful (bodily) feeling, he worries and grieves, he laments, beats his breast, weeps and is distraught. So he experiences two kinds of feeling: a bodily and a mental feeling.

"Having been touched by that painful feeling, he resists (and resents) it. Then in him who so resists (and resents) that painful feeling, an underlying tendency of resistance against that painful feeling comes to underlie (his mind). Under the impact of that painful feeling he then proceeds to enjoy sensual happiness. And why does he do so? An untaught worldling, O monks, does not know of any other escape from painful feelings except the enjoyment of sensual happiness. Then in him who enjoys sensual happiness, an underlying tendency to lust for pleasant feelings comes to underlie (his mind). He does not know, according to facts, the arising and ending of these feelings, nor the gratification, the danger and the escape, connected with these feelings. In him who lacks that knowledge, an underlying tendency to ignorance as to neutral feelings comes to underlie (his mind). When he experiences a pleasant feeling, a painful feeling or a neutral feeling, he feels it as one fettered by it. Such a one, O monks, is called an untaught worldling who is fettered by birth, by old age, by death, by sorrow, lamentation, pain, grief and despair. He is fettered by suffering, this I declare.

"But in the case of a well-taught noble disciple, O monks, when he is touched by a painful feeling, he will not worry nor grieve and lament, he will not beat his breast and weep, nor will he be distraught. It is //one// kind of feeling he experiences, a bodily one, but not a mental feeling. It is as if a man were pierced by a dart, but was not hit by a second dart following the first one. So this person experiences feelings caused by a single dart only. It is similar with a well-taught noble disciple: when touched by a painful feeling, he will no worry nor grieve and lament, he will not beat his breast and weep, nor will he be distraught. He experiences one single feeling, a bodily one.

"Having been touched by that painful feeling, he does not resist (and resent) it. Hence, in him no underlying tendency of resistance against that painful feeling comes to underlie (his mind). Under the impact of that painful feeling he does not proceed to enjoy sensual happiness. And why not? As a well-taught noble disciple he knows of an escape from painful feelings other than by enjoying sensual happiness. Then in him who does not proceed to enjoy sensual happiness, no underlying tendency to lust for pleasant feelings comes to underlie (his mind). He knows, according to facts, the arising and ending of those feelings, and the gratification, the danger and the escape connected with these feelings. In him who knows thus, no underlying tendency to ignorance as to neutral feelings comes to underlie (his mind). When he experiences a pleasant feeling, a painful feeling or a neutral feeling, he feels it as one who is not fettered by it. Such a one, O monks, is called a well-taught noble disciple who is not fettered by birth, by old age, by death, by sorrow, lamentation, pain, grief and despair. He is not fettered to suffering, this I declare.

"This, O monks, is the distinction, the diversity, the difference that exists between a well-taught noble disciple and an untaught worldling."

7. At the Sick Room -- I

Once the Blessed One dwelt at Vesali, in the Great Forest, at the Gabled House. In the evening, after the Blessed One had risen from his seclusion, he went to the sick room and sat down on a prepared seat. Being seated he addressed the monks as follows:

"O monks, mindfully and clearly comprehending should a monk spend his time! This is my injunction to you!

"And how, O monks, is a monk mindful? He dwells practicing body-contemplation on the body, ardent, clearly comprehending and mindful, having overcome covetousness and grief concerning the world. He dwells practicing feeling-contemplation on feelings, ardent, clearly comprehending and mindful, having overcome covetousness and grief concerning the world. He dwells practicing mind-contemplation on the mind, having overcome covetousness and grief concerning the world. He dwells practicing mind-object-contemplation on mind-objects, having overcome covetousness and grief concerning the world. So, monks, is a monk mindful.

"And how, O monks, is a monk clearly comprehending? He applies clear comprehension in going forward and going back; in looking straight on and in looking elsewhere; in bending and in stretching (his limbs); in wearing the robes and carrying the almsbowl; in eating, drinking, chewing and savoring; in obeying the calls of nature; in walking, standing sitting, falling asleep waking, speaking and being silent -- in all that he applies clear comprehension. So, monks, is a monk clearly comprehending.

"If a monk is thus mindful and clearly comprehending, ardent, earnest and resolute, and a pleasant feeling arises in him, he knows: 'Now a pleasant feeling has arisen in me. It is conditioned, not unconditioned. Conditioned by what? Even by this body it is conditioned. [13] And this body, indeed, is impermanent, compounded, dependently arisen. But if this pleasant feeling that has arisen, is conditioned by the body which is impermanent, compounded and dependently arisen; how could such a pleasant feeling be permanent?'

"In regard to both body and the pleasant feeling he dwells contemplating impermanence, dwells contemplating evanescence, dwell contemplating detachment, dwells contemplating cessation, dwells contemplating relinquishment. And in him who thus dwells, the underlying tendency to lust in regard to body and pleasant feeling vanishes.

"If a painful feeling arises in him, he knows: 'Now a painful feeling has arisen in me. It is conditioned, not unconditioned. Conditioned by what? Even by this body it is conditioned. And this body, indeed, is impermanent, compounded, dependently arisen. But if this painful feeling that has arisen is conditioned by the body which is impermanent, compounded and dependently arisen, how could such a painful feeling be permanent?'

"In regard to both the body and the painful feeling he dwells contemplating impermanence, dwells contemplating evanescence, dwells contemplating detachment, dwells contemplating cessation, dwells contemplating relinquishment. And in him who thus dwells, the underlying tendency to resistance in regard to the body and painful feeling vanishes.

"If a neutral feeling arises in him, he knows: 'Now a neutral feeling has arisen in me. It is conditioned, not unconditioned. Conditioned by what? Even by this body it is conditioned. And this body, indeed, is impermanent, compounded, dependently arisen. But if this neutral feeling that has arisen is conditioned by the body which is impermanent, compounded and dependently arisen, how could such a neutral feeling be permanent?'

"In regard to both the body and the neutral feeling he dwells contemplating impermanence, dwells contemplating evanescence, dwells contemplating detachment, dwells contemplating cessation, dwells contemplating relinquishment. And in him who thus dwells, the underlying tendency to ignorance in regard to body and neutral feeling vanishes.

"If he experiences a pleasant feeling, he knows it as impermanent; he knows, it is not clung to; he knows, it is not relished. If he experiences a painful feeling ... a neutral feeling, he knows it as impermanent; he knows, it is not clung to; he knows, it is not relished.

"If he experiences a pleasant feeling, he feels it as one unfettered by it. If he experiences a painful feeling, he feels it as one unfettered by it. If he experiences a neutral feeling, he feels it as one unfettered by it.

"When having painful feelings endangering the body, he knows: 'I have a painful feeling endangering the body.' When having painful feelings endangering life he knows: 'I have a painful feeling endangering life.' And he knows: 'After the dissolution of the body, when life ends, all these feelings which are unrelished, will come to final rest, even here.'

"It is like a lamp that burns by strength of oil and wick, and if oil and wick come to an end, the flame is extinguished through lack of nourishment. Similarly this monk knows: 'After the dissolution of the body, when life ends, all these feelings which are unrelished will come to (final) rest, even here.'"

8. At the Sick Room -- II

Once the Blessed One dwelt at Vesali, in the Great Forest, at the Gabled House. In the evening, after had arisen from his seclusion, he went to the sick room and sat down on a prepared seat. Being seated, he addressed the monks as follows:

"O monks, mindfully and clearly comprehending should a monk spend his time! This is my injunction to you!

"If a monk is thus mindful and clearly comprehending, ardent, earnest and resolute, and a pleasant feeling arises in him, he knows: 'Now a pleasant feeling has arisen in me. It is conditioned, not unconditioned. Conditioned by what? Even by this sense-impression [14] it is conditioned. And this sense-impression, indeed, is impermanent, compounded, dependently arisen. But if this pleasant feeling that has arisen is conditioned by a sense-impression which is impermanent, compounded, and dependently arisen, how could such a pleasant feeling be permanent?'

"In regard to both sense-impression and the pleasant feeling, he dwells contemplating impermanence, dwells contemplating evanescence, dwells contemplating detachment, dwells contemplating cessation, dwells contemplating relinquishment. And in him who thus dwells, the underlying tendency to lust in regard to sense-impressions and pleasant feeling vanishes.

"If a painful feeling arises in him, he knows: 'Now a painful feeling has arisen in me. It is conditioned, not unconditioned. Conditioned by what? Even by this sense-impression it is conditioned. And this sense-impression, indeed, is impermanent, compounded, dependently arisen. But if this painful feeling that has arisen is conditioned by a sense-impression which is impermanent, compounded and dependently arisen, how could such a painful feeling be permanent?'

"In regard to both sense-impression and painful feeling, he dwells contemplating impermanence, dwells contemplating evanescence, dwells contemplating detachment, dwells contemplating cessation, dwells contemplating relinquishment. And in him who thus dwells, the underlying tendency to resistance in regard to sense-impression and painful feeling vanishes.

"If a neutral feeling arises in him, he knows: 'Now a neutral feeling has arisen in me. It is conditioned, not unconditioned. Conditioned by what? Even by this sense-impression it is conditioned. And this sense-impression, indeed, is impermanent, compounded, dependently arisen. But if this neutral feeling that has arisen is conditioned by a sense-impression, which is impermanent, compounded and dependently arisen, how could such a neutral feeling be permanent?'

"In regard to both sense-impression and neutral feeling, he dwells contemplating impermanence, dwells contemplating evanescence, dwells contemplating detachment, dwells contemplating cessation, dwells contemplating relinquishment. And in him who thus dwells, the underlying tendency to ignorance in regard to sense-impression and neutral feeling vanishes."

(The concluding sections are identical with those in Text 7, from if he experiences ... up to the end.)

9. Impermanent

"The three kinds of feelings, O monks, are impermanent, compounded, dependently arisen, liable to destruction, to evanescence, to fading away, to cessation -- namely, pleasant feeling, painful feeling and neutral feeling."

10. Rooted in Sense-Impression

"There are, O monks, these three feelings, rooted in sense-impression, caused by sense-impression, conditioned by sense-impression: pleasant, painful and neutral feelings.

"Dependent on a sense-impression that is liable to be felt as pleasurable, there arises a pleasant feeling. When that very sense-impression liable to be felt as pleasurable has ceased, then the sensation born from it [15] -- namely the pleasant feeling that arose dependent on that sense-impression -- also ceases and is stilled.

"Dependent on a sense-impression that is liable to be felt as painful (neutral), there arises a painful (neutral) feeling. When that very sense-impression liable to be felt as painful (neutral) has ceased, then the sensation born from it -- namely the painful (neutral) feeling that arose dependent on that sense-impression -- also ceases and is stilled.

"Just as from the coming together and rubbing of two sticks of wood heat results and fire is produced, and by the separation and disconnection of the sticks, the heat produced by them ceases and disappears, so it is also with these three feelings which are born of sense-impression, rooted in sense-impression, caused by sense-impression, dependent on sense-impression: dependent on a sense-impression of a certain kind there arises a corresponding feeling; by the cessation of that sense-impression the corresponding feeling ceases."

11. Seclusion

Once a certain monk came to see the Blessed One and, after saluting him respectfully, sat down at one side. Seated thus, he spoke to the Blessed One as follows:

"When I went into seclusion, while I was in solitude, this thought occurred to me: 'Three feelings have been taught by the Blessed One: pleasant, painful and neutral feelings. But the Blessed One has also said that whatever is felt is within suffering.' Now, with reference to what was it stated by the Blessed One that whatever is felt is within suffering?"

"Well spoken, monk, well spoken! While three feelings have been taught by me, the pleasant, the painful and the neutral, yet I have also said that whatever is felt is within suffering. This, however, was stated by me with reference to the impermanence of (all) conditioned phenomena (sankhara). I have said it because conditioned phenomena are liable to destruction, to evanescence, to fading away, to cessation and to change. It is with reference to this that I have stated: 'Whatever is felt is within suffering.'

"I have further taught, monk, the gradual cessation of conditioned phenomena. In him who has attained the first meditative absorption (jhana), speech has ceased. Having attained the second absorption, thought-conception and discursive thinking has ceased. Having attained the third absorption, joy has ceased. Having attained the fourth absorption, inhalation and exhalation have ceased. Having attained the sphere of the infinity of space, perception of form (matter) has ceased. Having attained the sphere of the infinity of consciousness, the perception of the sphere of the infinity of space has ceased. Having attained the sphere of no-thingness, the perception of the sphere of infinity of consciousness has ceased. Having attained the sphere of neither-perception-nor-non-perception, the perception of the sphere of no-thingness has ceased. Having attained the cessation of perception and feeling, perception and feeling have ceased. In a taint-free monk greed has ceased, hatred has ceased, delusion has ceased.

"I have further taught, monk the gradual stilling of conditioned phenomena (//sankhara//). In him who has attained the first meditative absorption, speech has been stilled. Having attained the second absorption, thought-conception and discursive thinking have been stilled ... (//To be continued as above, up to//:) Having attained the cessation of perception and feeling, perception and feeling have been stilled. In a taint-free monk greed has been stilled, hatred has been stilled, delusion has been stilled.

"There are, monk, these six quietenings. In him who has attained the first absorption, speech is quietened. Having attained the second absorption, thought-conception and discursive thinking are quietened. Having attained the third absorption, rapture is quietened. Having attained the fourth absorption, inhalation and exhalation is quietened. [16] Having attain the cessation of perception and feeling, perception and feeling are quietened. In a taint-free monk greed is quietened, hatred is quietened, delusion is quietened."

12. In the Sky -- I

"In the sky, O monks, various kinds of winds are blowing: winds from the east, west, north and south, winds carrying dust and winds without dust, winds hot and cold, gentle and fierce. Similarly, monks, there arise in this body various kinds of feelings: pleasant feelings arise, painful feelings arise and neutral feelings arise.

"Just as in the sky above winds of various kinds are blowing:
Coming from the east or west, blowing from the north or south,
Some carry dust and others not, cold are some and others hot,
Some are fierce and others mild -- their blowing is so different.

So also in this body here, feelings of different kind arise:
The pleasant feelings and the painful and the neutral ones.

But if a monk is ardent and does not neglect
To practice mindfulness and comprehension clear,
The nature of all feelings will he understand,
And having penetrated them, he will be taint-free in this very life.
Mature in knowledge, firm in Dhamma's ways,
When once his life-span ends, his body breaks,
All measure and concept he has transcended."

13. In the Sky -- II

(This text repeats the prose section of No. 12, without the verses)

14. The Guest House

"In a guest house, O monks, people from the east may take lodgings, or people from the west, north or south. People from the warrior caste may come and take lodgings there, and also Brahmins, middle class people and menials.

"Similarly, O monks, there arise in this body various kinds of feelings; there arise pleasant feelings, painful feelings and neutral feelings; worldly feelings that are pleasant, painful or neutral, and unworldly (spiritual) feelings that are pleasant, painful and neutral."

15. Ananda -- I

Once the Venerable Ananda went to see the Blessed One. Having saluted him respectfully, he sat down at one side. Thus seated, he said:

"What are the feelings, O Lord? What is the origin of feelings, what is their cessation and the way leading to their cessation? What is the gratification in feelings? What is the danger in feelings? And what is the escape from them?"

"There are, Ananda, three kinds of feelings: pleasant, painful and neutral. Through the origin of sense-impression there is origin of feelings; through the cessation of sense-impression there is cessation of feelings. It is the noble eightfold path that is the way leading to the cessation of feelings, namely: right understanding, right thought, right speech, right action, right livelihood, right effort, right mindfulness and right concentration.

"It is the happiness and gladness arising dependent on feelings that is the gratification in feelings. Feelings are impermanent, (liable to bring) pain, and are subject to change; this is the danger in feelings. The removal and the giving up of the desire and lust for feelings is the escape from feelings.

"I have further taught, Ananda, the gradual cessation of conditioned phenomena (sankhara) ... (//to be continued as in Text 11, para 4, up to//:) In a taint-free monk, greed, hatred and delusion are quietened."

16. Ananda -- II

(In this discourse, the Buddha himself puts to Ananda the same questions as in Text 15, and being requested by Ananda to give the explanation himself, the Buddha answers in the same way as in Text 15.)

17-18. Many Monks

(Here, again, the same questions and answers are repeated, in the case of "many monks." The introductory parts correspond to those in Texts 15 and 16.)

19. Carpenter Fivetools (Pancakanga) [17]

Once Carpenter Fivetools went to see the Venerable Udayi. Having saluted him respectfully, he sat down at one side. Thus seated, he asked the Venerable Udayi:

"How many kinds of feelings, reverend Udayi, were taught by the Blessed One?"

"Three kinds of feelings, Carpenter, were taught by the Blessed One: pleasant, painful and neutral feelings. These are the three feelings taught by the Blessed One."

After these words, Carpenter Fivetools said: "Not three kinds of feelings, reverend Udayi, were taught by the Blessed One. It is two kinds of feelings that were stated by the Blessed One: pleasant and painful feelings. The neutral feeling was said by the Blessed One to belong to peaceful and sublime happiness."

But the Venerable Udayi replied: "It is not two feelings that were taught by the Blessed One, but three: pleasant, painful and neutral feelings."

(This exchange of views was repeated for a second and a third time,) but neither was Carpenter Fivetools able to convince the Venerable Udayi, nor could the Venerable Udayi convince Carpenter Fivetools. It so happened that [the] Venerable Ananda had listened to that conversation and went to see the Blessed One about it. Having saluted the Blessed One respectfully, he sat down at one side. Thus seated, he repeated the entire conversation that had taken place between the Venerable Udayi and Carpenter Fivetools.

The Blessed One said: "Ananda, Udayi's way of presentation, with which Carpenter Fivetools disagreed, was correct, indeed. But also Carpenter Fivetool's way of presentation, with which Udayi disagreed, was correct. In one way of presentation I have spoken of two kinds of feelings, and in other ways of presentation I have spoken of three, of six, of eighteen, of thirty-six, and of one hundred and eight kinds of feelings. [18] So the Dhamma has been shown by me in different ways of presentation.

"Regarding the Dhamma thus shown by me in different ways, if there are those who do not agree with, do not consent to, and do not accept what is rightly said and rightly spoken, it may be expected of them that they will quarrel, and get into arguments and disputes, hurting each other with sharp words.

"Regarding the Dhamma thus shown by me in different ways, if there are those who agree with, consent to, and accept what is rightly said and rightly spoken, it may be expected of them that they will live in concord and amity, without dispute, like milk (that easily mixes) with water, looking at each other with friendly eyes.

"There are five strands of sense desire. What are these five? Forms cognizable by the eye that are wished for, desirable, agreeable and endearing, bound up with sensual desire and tempting to lust. Sounds cognizable by the ear ... odors cognizable by the nose ... flavors cognizable by the tongue ... tangibles cognizable by the body, that are wished for, desirable, agreeable and endearing, bound up with sense desire, and tempting to lust. These are the five strands of sense desire. The pleasure and joy arising dependent on these five strands of sense desire, that is called sensual pleasure.

"Now, if someone were to say: 'This is the highest pleasure and joy that can be experienced,' I would not concede that. And why not? Because there is another kind of pleasure which surpasses that pleasure and is more sublime. And what is this pleasure? Here, quite secluded from sensual desires, secluded from unwholesome states of mind, a monk enters upon and abides in the first meditative absorption (jhana), which is accompanied by thought conception and discursive thinking and has in it joy and pleasure born of seclusion. This is the other kind of pleasure which surpasses that (sense) pleasure and is more sublime.

"If someone were to say: 'This is the highest pleasure that can be experienced,' I would not concede that. And why not? Because there is another kind of pleasure which surpasses that pleasure and is more sublime. And what is that pleasure? Here, with the stilling of thought conception and discursive thinking ... a monk enters upon and abides in the second meditative absorption ... in the sphere of the infinity of space ... of the infinity of consciousness ... of no-thingness ... of neither-perception-nor-non-perception.

"If someone were to say: 'This is the highest pleasure that can be experienced,' I would not concede that. And why not? Because there is another kind of pleasure which surpasses that pleasure and is more sublime. And what is this pleasure? Here, by completely surmounting the sphere of neither-perception-nor-non-perception, a monk enters upon and abides in the cessation of perception and feeling. This is the other kind of pleasure which surpasses that pleasure and is more sublime. [19]

"It may happen, Ananda, that Wanderers of other sects will be saying this: 'The recluse Gotama speaks of the Cessation of Perception and Feeling and describes it as pleasure. What is this (pleasure) and how is this (a pleasure)?'

"Those who say so, should be told: 'The Blessed One describes as pleasure not only the feeling of pleasure. But a Tathagata describes as pleasure whenever and whereinsoever it is obtained.'"

20. Bhikkhus

(This Discourse, addressed to Bhikkhus, repeats the main part of Text 19, without its introductory section.)

21. Sivaka

Once the Blessed One dwelled at Rajagaha in the Bamboo-Grove Monastery, at the Squirrel's Feeding Place. There a wandering ascetic, Moliya Sivaka by name, called on the Blessed One, and after an exchange of courteous and friendly words, sat down at one side. Thus seated, he said:

"There are, revered Gotama, some ascetics and brahmins who have this doctrine and view: 'Whatever a person experiences, be it pleasure, pain or neither-pain-nor-pleasure, all that is caused by previous action.' Now, what does the revered Gotama say about this?"

"Produced by (disorders of the) bile, there arise, Sivaka, certain kinds of feelings. That this happens, can be known by oneself; also in the world it is accepted as true. Produced by (disorders of the) phlegm ... of wind ... of (the three) combined ... by change of climate ... by adverse behavior ... by injuries ... by the results of Kamma -- (through all that), Sivaka, there arise certain kinds of feelings. That this happens can be known by oneself; also in the world it is accepted as true.

"Now when these ascetics and brahmins have such a doctrine and view that 'whatever a person experiences, be it pleasure, pain or neither-pain-nor-pleasure, all that is caused by previous action,' then they go beyond what they know by themselves and what is accepted as true by the world. Therefore, I say that this is wrong on the part of these ascetics and brahmins."

When this was spoken, Moliya Sivaka, the wandering ascetic, said: "It is excellent, revered Gotama, it is excellent indeed! ... May the revered Gotama regard me as a lay follower who, from today, has taken refuge in him as long as life lasts."

22. Hundred and Eight Feelings

"I shall show you, O monks, a way of Dhamma presentation by which there are one hundred and eight (feelings). Hence listen to me.

"In one way, O monks, I have spoken of two kinds of feelings, and in other ways of three, five, six, eighteen, thirty six and one hundred and eight feelings.

"What are the two feelings? Bodily and mental feelings.
What are the three feelings? Pleasant, painful and neither-painful-nor-pleasant feelings.
What are the five feelings? The faculties of pleasure, pain, gladness, sadness and equanimity.
What are the six feelings? The feelings born of sense-impression through eye, ear, nose, tongue, body and mind.
What are the eighteen feelings? There are the (above) six feelings by which there is an approach (to the objects) in gladness; and there are six approaches in sadness and there are six approaches in equanimity.
What are the thirty six feelings? There are six feelings of gladness based on the household life and six based on renunciation; six feelings of sadness based on the household life and six based on renunciation; six feelings of equanimity based on the household life and six based on renunciation.
What are the hundred and eight feelings? There are the (above) thirty six feelings of the past; there are thirty six of the future and there are thirty six of the present.

"These, O monks, are called the hundred and eight feelings; and this is the way of the Dhamma presentation by which there are one hundred and eight feelings."

Texts 23-29
(Repeat the paras 3 and 4 of Text 15; only the interlocutions differ.)

Text 30
(Contains only an enumeration of the three kinds of feeling.)

31. Cessation

"There is, O monks, worldly joy (piti), there is unworldly joy, and there is a still greater unworldly joy. There is worldly happiness (sukha), there is unworldly happiness, and there is a still greater unworldly happiness. There is worldly equanimity, there is unworldly equanimity, and there a still greater unworldly equanimity. There is worldly freedom, there is unworldly freedom, and there is a still greater unworldly freedom.

"Now, O monks, what is worldly joy? There are these five cords of sense desire: forms cognizable by the eye that are wished for and desired, agreeable and endearing, associated with sense-desire and tempting to lust. Sounds cognizable by the ear ... odors cognizable by the nose ... flavors cognizable by the tongue ... tangibles cognizable by the body, wished for and desired, agreeable and endearing, associated with sense-desire and tempting to lust. It is the joy that arises dependent on these five cords of sense desire which is called 'worldly joy.'

"Now what is unworldly joy? Quite secluded from sense desires, secluded from unwholesome states of mind, a monk enters upon and abides in the //first meditative absorption (jhana)//, which is accompanied by thought-conception and discursive thinking, and has joy and happiness born of seclusion. With the stilling of thought-conception and discursive thinking, he enters upon and abides in the //second meditative absorption// which has internal confidence and singleness of mind without thought conception and discursive thinking, and has joy and happiness born of concentration. This is called 'unworldly joy.'

"And what is the still greater unworldly joy? When a taint-free monk looks upon his mind that is freed of greed, freed of hatred, freed of delusion, then there arises joy. This called a 'still greater unworldly joy.'

"Now, O monks, what is worldly happiness? There are these five cords of sense desire: forms cognizable by the eye ... sounds cognizable by the ear ... odors cognizable by the nose ... flavors cognizable by the tongue ...tangibles cognizable by the body that are wished for and desired, agreeable and endearing, associated with sense desire and alluring. It is the happiness and gladness that arises dependent on these five cords of sense desire which are called 'worldly happiness.'

"Now what is unworldly happiness? Quite secluded from sense desires, secluded from unwholesome states of mind, a monk enters upon and abides in the //first meditative absorption// ... With the stilling of thought-conception and discursive thinking, he enters upon and abides in the //second meditative absorption// ... With the fading away of joy as well, he dwells in equanimity, mindfully and fully aware he feels happiness within, and enters upon and abides in the //third meditative absorption// of which the Noble Ones announce: 'He dwells in happiness who has equanimity and is mindful.' This is called 'unworldly happiness.'

"And what is the still greater unworldly happiness? When a taint-free monk looks upon his mind that is freed of greed, freed of hatred, freed of delusion, then there arises happiness. This is called a 'still greater unworldly happiness.'

"Now, O monks, what is worldly equanimity? There are these five cords of sensual desire: forms cognizable by the eye ... tangibles cognizable by the body that are wished for and desired, agreeable and endearing, associated with sense desire and alluring. It is the equanimity that arises with regard to these five cords of sense desire which is called 'worldly equanimity.'

"Now, what is unworldy equanimity? With the abandoning of pleasure and pain, and with the previous disappearance of gladness and sadness, a monk enters upon and abides in the //fourth meditative absorption//, which has neither pain-nor-pleasure and has purity of mindfulness due to equanimity. This is called 'unworldly equanimity.'

"And what is the still greater unworldly equanimity? When a taint-free monk looks upon his mind that is freed of greed, freed of hatred and freed of delusion, then there arises equanimity. This is called a 'still greater unworldly equanimity.'

"Now, O monks, what is worldly freedom? The freedom connected with the material. What is unworldly freedom? The freedom connected with the immaterial. And what is the still greater unworldly freedom? When a taint-free monk looks upon his mind that is freed of greed, freed of hatred, and freed of delusion, then there arises freedom."

* * *

NOTES

[1] Comy.: He knows the feelings by way of the Truth of Suffering.

[2] Comy.: He knows them by way of the Truth of the Origin of Suffering.

[3] Comy.: He knows, by way of the Truth of Cessation, that feelings cease in Nibbana.

[4] Comy.: He knows the feelings by way of the Truth of the Path leading to the Cessation of Suffering.

[5] //Parinibbuto//, "fully extinguished"; Comy.: through the full extinction of the defilements (//kilesa-parinibbanaya//).

[6] On "feelings of all kinds", see Text 22.

[7] //Phussa phussa vayam disva//, The Comy. explains differently, paraphrasing these words by //nanena phusitva phusitva//, " repeatedly experiencing (them) by way of the knowledge (of rise and fall)." These verses occur also in Sutta Nipata, v. 739, with one additional line.

[8] //anusaya//.

[9] "Conceit" refers in particular to self-conceit (//asmi-mano//), i.e., personality belief, on both the intellectual and the emotional levels.

[10] //patala//.

[11] Comy. (paraphrased): According to popular belief, there is in the ocean a very deep abyss hollowed out by the force of the water, which is the abode of aquatic animals as well as dragon deities (naga), etc. Hence, for these beings, this abyss provides a basis for their existence, a comfortable abode. Therefore, to call it a //bottomless// pit is unrealistic and not factual, because it gives an inadequate and non-evident meaning to the word. It is rather bodily pain, inseparable from bodily existence, which deserves to be called a "bottomless pit" of suffering, being a part of unfathomable Samsara.

[12] Comy.: In this Discourse, by the words "noble disciple," it is, in the first place, a Stream-winner (sotapanna) that is meant. But also a meditator with strong insight and keen intellect is capable of withstanding feelings that arise without being carried away by them. He, too, ought to be included here (because he penetrates the feelings to some extent; Sub-comy.).

[13] The term //body// may be taken here as referring to the first five of the six bases of sense-impression (//phassayatana//).

[14] Sense-impression, or contact (//phassa//), is a mental factor and does not imply physical impingement.

[15] //tajjam vedayitam//.

[16] In the section on "being quietened" (//patipassaddha//), the four immaterial absorptions (//arupajjhana//) are not mentioned. According to Comy. they are implied in the "cessation of perception and feelings" (for the attainment of which they are a condition).

[17] This text is identical with Majjhima Nikaya No. 59, //Bahuvedaniya Sutta// ("Many Kinds of Feelings").

[18] See Text 22.

[19] Comy.: "From the fourth Jhana onwards, it is the neither-painful-nor-pleasant feeling (that is present in these meditative states). But this neutral feeling, too, is called 'pleasure' (sukha), on account of its being peaceful and sublime. What arises by way of the five cords of sensual desire and by way of the eight meditative attainments is called 'pleasure as being felt' (//vedayita-sukha//). The state of Cessation of Perception and Feeling is a 'pleasure, not being felt' (//avedayita-sukha//). Hence, whether it be pleasure felt or not felt, both are assuredly 'pleasure,' in the sense of their being painfree states (//niddukkhabhava-sankhatena sukhena//)."

In Anguttara Nikaya, Nines, No. 34, the venerable Sariputta exclaims: "Nibbana is happiness, friend; Nibbana is happiness, indeed!" The monk Udayi then asked: "How can there be happiness when there is no feeling?" The venerable Sariputta replied: "Just this is happiness, friend, that therein there is no feeling." The continuation of that Sutta may also be compared with our text. On Nibbana as happiness, see also Anguttara Nikaya, Sixes, No. 100.

* * *

MISCELLANEOUS TEXTS

for use in the Contemplation of Feelings

Feelings are like bubbles.

Khandha Samyutta No. 95

All things converge on feelings.

Anguttara Nikaya, Nines, No. 14

"All feeling -- whether it is of the past, the future or the present, whether in oneself or in others, whether coarse or sublime, inferior or superior, far or near -- should be seen with right understanding as it actually is: 'This is not mine, this I am not, this is not a self of mine.'"

Anatta-lakkhana Sutta, Samyutta Nikaya, XXII, 59.

Pleasant feeling is pleasant when present; it is painful when changing.

Painful feeling is painful when present; it is pleasant when changing.

Neither-painful-nor-pleasant feeling is pleasant if one understands it; it is painful if there is no understanding.

Majjhima Nikaya No. 44; Cula Vedalla Sutta

A well-taught noble disciple ... does not consider feeling as the self nor the self as the owner of the feeling, nor feeling as included within the self, nor the self as included within the feeling.

Of such a well-taught noble disciple it can be said that he is unfettered by the bondage of feeling, unfettered by bondage inner or outer. He has seen the coast, he has seen the Other Shore, and he is fully freed from suffering -- this I say.

Khandha Samyutta No. 117

It was said that one should know the feelings, their conditioned origin, their diversity, their outcome, their cessation, and the way to their cessation. Why was this said?

What are the feelings? These three: pleasant, painful, and neither-painful-nor-pleasant.

What is the conditioned origin of these feelings? Sense-impression is the conditioned origin of the feelings.

What is the diversity in feelings? There are pleasant feelings, worldly and unworldly; there are painful feelings, worldly and unworldly; and there are neutral feelings, worldly and unworldly.

What is the outcome of feelings? It is the personalized existence (//attabhava//) born of this or that (feeling), be it of a meritorious or demeritorious character, which one who feels causes to arise.

What is the cessation of feelings? It is the cessation of sense impression that is the cessation of feelings.

And it is the noble eightfold path that is the way leading to the cessation of feelings, namely: right understanding, right thought, right speech, right action, right livelihood, right effort, right mindfulness and right concentration.

If a noble disciple knows in such way the feelings, their conditioned origin, their diversity, their outcome, their cessation, and the way to their cessation, he will be one who knows this penetrative Holy Life, namely the cessation of feelings.

//From// Anguttara Nikaya, Sixes, No. 63

On account of what has it been said that the four Noble Truths are the Dhamma taught by me, which is unrefuted, untarnished, irreproachable and uncensored by intelligent ascetics and brahmins?

Based on the six elements [1] there is descent into the womb. When such descent into the womb takes place, there will be mind-and-body (nama-rupa). Mind-and-body conditions the sixfold sense-base. The sixfold sense-base conditions sense-impression. Sense-impression conditions feeling. Now it is for one who feels [2] that I make known, 'This is suffering,' 'This is the origin of suffering,' 'This is the cessation of suffering,' 'This is the way leading to the cessation of suffering.'

//From// Anguttara Nikaya, Threes, No.61

[1] These are the elements of earth, water, fire, wind, space and consciousness. See Majjh. 140.

[2] The commentary applies this to one who //understands// feeling and quotes the beginning of the Contemplation of Feeling from the Satipatthana Sutta. -- Alternatively, "One who feels" may also refer to all beings who feel suffering and seek a release from it.

"Sisters, suppose there is a lamp burning: its oil, its wick, its flame, its radiance, all are impermanent and liable to change. Now, would anyone speak correctly when saying: 'When this lamp is burning, its oil, wick and flame are impermanent and liable to change, but its radiance is permanent, everlasting, eternal, and not liable to change?'" -- "Certainly not, venerable sir." "Why not?" -- "Because, venerable sir, when that lamp burns, its oil is impermanent and liable to change, and so are the wick, the flame and the radiance."

"In the same way, sisters, would anyone speak correctly when saying: "These six (organ) bases in oneself are impermanent, but what, dependent on them, I feel as pleasant or painful or neither-painful-nor-pleasant, that is permanent, ever-lasting, eternal, and not liable to change'?" -- "Certainly not, venerable sir." "Why not?" -- "Because, venerable sir, each kind of feeling arises dependent on its appropriate condition, and with the cessation of the appropriate condition the corresponding feeling ceases."

"Well said, sisters, well said! When a noble disciple perceives this, he sees it with right understanding, as it actually is."

//From// Majjhima Nikaya No. 146;
Nandaka's Exhortation

Pleasant feeling is impermanent, conditioned, dependently arisen, having the nature of wasting, vanishing, fading and ceasing. The painful feeling and the neutral feeling, too, are impermanent, conditioned, dependently arisen, having the nature of wasting, vanishing, fading and ceasing.

When a well-taught disciple perceives this, he becomes dispassionate towards pleasant feelings, dispassionate toward painful feelings and dispassionate toward neutral feelings. Being dispassionate, his lust fades away, and with the fading away of lust, he is liberated. When liberated, there comes to him the knowledge that he is liberated. He now knows: 'Birth is exhausted, the holy life has been lived, done is what was to be done, there is no more of this to come.'

A monk whose mind is thus liberated, concurs with none and disputes with none; he employs the speech commonly used in the world, but without misapprehending it.

//From// Majjhima Nikaya No. 74;
Dighanakha

* * *

Aphorisms from the Exegetical Literature

To know, as it actually is, the origin, (cessation, and the way to cessation) of feeling, etc., leads to liberation without clinging, because it partakes of the path.

The lack of full penetration of the origin, etc., of feeling leads to imprisonment in the jail house of Samsara, because (such ignorance) is a condition for the Kamma-formations (sankhara).

Delusion which hides the true nature of feelings, leads to enjoyment of feelings.

But an understanding of feelings as it actually is, leads to the penetration of feeling and to dispassion regarding it.

By not understanding the danger and misery (//adinava//) in feelings, the craving for feelings will grow; and this happens because one only considers what is enjoyable in feelings (//assada//).

When there is lust for what is felt, one will be wriggling in the grip of the notions of self and self's property, and in the grip of the notions of eternalism, and so on. This is due to the proximity of the cause for it, since clinging (to ego-belief and views) is conditioned by craving.

For those who proclaim doctrines of eternalism etc., or feel emotions corresponding (to them), sense-impression is the cause (//hetu//). This applies because (having such ideas or emotions) cannot occur without the meeting of sense-organ, object, and consciousness (which constitute sense-impression).

//From// Sub-Commentary to Brahmajala Sutta (//pakarana-naya//)

* * * * * * * *

THE BUDDHIST PUBLICATION SOCIETY

The BPS is an approved charity dedicated to making known the Teaching of the Buddha, which has a vital message for people of all creeds. Founded in 1958, the BPS has published a wide variety of books and booklets covering a great range of topics. Its publications include accurate annotated translations of the Buddha's discourses, standard reference works, as well as original contemporary expositions of Buddhist thought and practice. These works present Buddhism as it truly is -- a dynamic force which has influenced receptive minds for the past 2500 years and is still as relevant today as it was when it first arose. A full list of our publications will be sent upon request with an enclosure of U.S. $1.00 or its equivalent to cover air mail postage.

Write to:

The Hony. Secretary
BUDDHIST PUBLICATION SOCIETY
P.O. Box 61
54, Sangharaja Mawatha
Kandy Sri Lanka

or

The Barre Center for Buddhist Studies
Lockwood Road
Barre, MA 01005 USA
Tel: (508) 355-2347

* * * * * * * *

DISTRIBUTION AGREEMENT
~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

TITLE OF WORK: Contemplation of Feeling: The Discourse-Grouping on the Feelings (Vedana-Samyutta). (Wheel Publication No. 303/304)
FILENAME: WHEEL303.ZIP
AUTHOR: Nyanaponika Thera
AUTHOR'S ADDRESS: N/A (d. 1994)
PUBLISHER'S ADDRESS: Buddhist Publication Society
P.O. Box 61
54, Sangharaja Mawatha
Kandy, Sri Lanka
COPYRIGHT HOLDER: Buddhist Publication Society
DATE OF PUBLICATION: 1983
RIGHTS AND RESTRICTIONS: See paragraph below.
DATE OF DHARMANET DISTRIBUTION: October 1995
ORIGIN SITE: Access to Insight BBS, Pepperell MA * (508) 433-5847 (96:903/1)

The copyright holder retains all rights to this work and hereby grants electronic distribution rights to DharmaNet International. This work may be freely copied and redistributed electronically, provided that the file contents (including this Agreement) are not altered in any way and that it is distributed at no cost to the recipient. You may make printed copies of this work for your personal use; further distribution of printed copies requires permission from the copyright holder. If this work is used by a teacher in a class, or is quoted in a review, the publisher shall be notified of such use. See the title page of this work for any additional rights and restrictions that may apply.
~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

It is the spirit of dana, freely offered generosity, which has kept the entire Buddhist tradition alive for more than 2,500 years. If you find this work of value, please consider sending a donation to the author or publisher, so that these works may continue to be made available. May your generosity contribute to the happiness of all beings everywhere.

DharmaNet International, P.O. Box 4951, Berkeley, CA 94704-4951

[end]

TO LIGHT A FIRE
A Dhamma Discourse

by
The Venerable Webu Sayadaw

Translated from the Burmese
by Roger Bischoff

BODHI LEAVES No. 122

BUDDHIST PUBLICATION SOCIETY
KANDY SRI LANKA

Published in 1990

Buddhist Publication Society
P.O. Box 61
54, Sangharaja Mawatha
Kandy, Sri Lanka

Copyright 1990 by Roger Bischoff

Selected from //Discourses of the Venerable Webu Sayadaw//, translated by Roger Bischoff. Used with permission of the translator.

DharmaNet Edition 1994

This electronic edition is offered for free distribution via DharmaNet by arrangement with the publisher.

Transcribed for DharmaNet by Steven McPeak

DharmaNet International
P.O. Box 4951, Berkeley CA 94704-4951

TO LIGHT A FIRE

~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

WEBU SAYADAW: You have taken the moral precepts, now practice them. Only when your practice of morality (//sila//) is perfect can you fulfill your aspirations for awakening. Having perfected yourselves in morality, you have to perform various other meritorious practices, and these can take you to the pinnacle and the fulfillment of your aspirations.

The teachings of the Buddha are enshrined in the Tipitaka. These teachings were not given by the Buddha just to be preached and studied. You are good people; you have to practice the teachings with unwavering effort from the time you obtain them in order to escape from this suffering.

Do not get confused about the teachings. We don't have to know many techniques, only one; but that we should know clearly. If we establish one technique with strong effort and get rid of all doubts then, without asking anyone else, we shall find the answers.

Choose one technique and practice it steadfastly. If you focus your mind at the small spot where the air touches when you breathe in and out, then there will be no wanting, no aversion or delusion, and as these three are absent, you are immediately out of suffering.

So, for a short moment Your mind is pure. Now, if your last mind-moment came up at this time and you died, would there be anything to be worried about or to be afraid of?

The benefits accruing to you from this practice don't last for just a short moment or one life-time. This short moment of purity will bring benefits for the remainder of the cycle of birth and death. And why can you accomplish this? Because the time is right, your form of existence is right, and you are putting forth right effort.
~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

The disciples of the Buddha took the practice from the Teacher and worked with unwavering perseverance. Therefore, they achieved the awakening they had aspired for.

How did they work? In the same way as a man who wants to light a fire with a fire stick, as in the olden days. They rubbed two pieces of wood together, and heat was produced. Eventually the wood started to glow, and then they could light a fire. So, if a man wants to start a fire in this way, and rubs two pieces of wood together, does he count: "One rub, two rubs, three rubs..."?

DISCIPLE: No, sir, that wouldn't work very well.

SAYADAW: How would he have to do it then?

D: He would have to rub continuously until he got a flame.

S: Yes, when they wanted to start a fire in those days, this was the only way to do it. They had to rub with strong determination and without taking breaks. Now, if one were to rub two pieces of wood together in this way, how long would it take for the fire to start?

D: When it gets hot enough, the fire will start, sir.

S: Will that take long?

D: Not very long, sir.

S: No, if this man works with determination, it doesn't take long. It is just the same with this practice here. You want fire. You know that if you rub these two pieces of wood together you can have it. Now, if you count, "One rub, two rubs..." it will become a little bit hot. And then you take a rest for a while. Will you start a fire?

D: No, sir.

S: OK, so you start again, once, twice, three times, ... and again heat is produced. Then you lay back again and take a bit of rest. Will you start a fire?

D: No, sir. .

S: And if you continue in this way for a whole month?

D: We won't get fire.

S: And if you continue for a whole year?

D: It will just get warm, sir, but there will be no fire.

S: Now, what if you were to work like this for one hundred years?

D: It will just become warm, sir.

S: In that case, there is no fire in these two pieces of wood?

D: There is fire, sir, but effort and perseverance are not sufficient.

S: It is just the same with our work. You have to work as the fire maker does, without taking rest. Soon it will become hot and then, before long, a fire will start. Only then will you be able to use the fire in the way you want. You should all make effort to fulfill your aspiration for awakening. You have received the teachings of the Buddha. Now you have to work so that your efforts are equal to those of the wise of old who attained their goal. The teachings of the Buddha are the only path out of suffering, and you can practice them only when a Buddha has arisen and as long as his teachings are available. When no teachings of a Buddha are available, you cannot fulfill your aspiration for Nibbana.

When a Buddha arises in the world, right conduct (//carana//) and understanding (//vijja//) that lead out of suffering are expounded. If you use the opportunity and put them into practice, you will become perfect. Right conduct can also be practiced when there are no teachings of a Buddha, but insight or understanding is not available.

What exactly does right conduct mean? Now that the teachings of a Buddha are available, all of you untiringly give the four requisites of food, robes, shelter and medicine to the monks. When you give, you offer the best you can afford. But still you are not satisfied yet; you want to do more and more. This is good conduct (//carana//).

To practice the teachings of the Buddha to the point of being able to escape from all suffering we have to be aware of one single object continuously, without break or interruption. If we are thus aware, we are practicing understanding (//vijja//).

Practicing both together and being perfect in effort, the wise of old attained to the awakening to which they had aspired.

You may think, "Well, we make offerings to the teachings by giving food, clothing, shelter and medicine to the monks. To realize the teachings for ourselves we would have to practice insight. We shall do that if we have some free time after preparing our offerings." Now if you work like this, are you practicing right conduct or insight?

D: It is right conduct, sir.

S: When you have fulfilled your duties and keep your mind steadfastly focused on one single object, what are you practicing then?

D: Wisdom, sir.

S: So, what happened to right conduct? When you keep your attention focused on the spot, are you still practicing right conduct?

D: Yes, sir, then we are practicing right conduct and understanding at the same time.

S: Yes, you can practice the two jointly. First you prepare food and then you meditate. Thus we have to perfect ourselves in both practices, in right conduct and understanding. But you practice first only right conduct and then only understanding. Is it not possible to practice these emancipating teachings of the Buddha simultaneously? Is it not possible to be aware of in-breath and out-breath even while preparing food or while building a monastery?

D: It's possible, sir.

S: You see, this is the way the wise disciples of the Buddha used to practice. They had the ability to accept good advice and instructions. Do you think they might have thought, "Our parents, who are our highest possessions and to whom we owe an infinite debt of gratitude, are getting old. We have to spend day and night serving them, therefore we can't meditate?"

D: Sir, some must have thought in this way.

S: Is the fulfillment of one's duties towards parents comprised in right conduct or in understanding?

D: It is right conduct, sir.

S: Isn't it possible to be aware of mind and matter while you look after your parents?

D: It's possible, sir.

S: Now that you know that the wise of old practiced right conduct and understanding simultaneously, do you still consider it impossible to practice understanding while serving your children and grandchildren? Can't you train your mind in the awareness of mind and matter at the same time as you are fulfilling all your duties? Wherever you -are, whatever you do, you can practice right conduct and meditation at the same time. When your children are good, you can be aware of in-and-out-breath, and when they are naughty and you have to correct them, then too you can practice. Tell me, what is your correcting the children?

D: It is right conduct, sir.

S: So, if you practice awareness while you scold them, what are you practicing?

D: Understanding, sir.

S: If we practice awareness while we do what we have to do, will we suffer? Does it cost us anything? Does it disturb our work?

D: No, sir, if one works with awareness the work is completed more quickly.

S: If you don't allow yourselves to be distracted, you will work faster and you will earn more money. Your aspiration to Nibbana too will be fulfilled more quickly. All the beings who practice in this way can fulfill their aspirations. There is not a single second in which it isn't possible to fulfill your aspiration. How about those human beings, Devas and Brahmins who don't practice the teachings of Buddha, though the time is good? Do they attain the fulfillment of their aspirations?

D: Those who don't make effort can't fulfill their aspirations, sir.

S: Why? Is it because they aren't reborn in the right plane of existence or because it isn't the right time?

D: No, sir, but without effort nothing can be accomplished.

S: Maybe they don't have sufficient parami (spiritual perfections)?

D: Maybe some can't grasp the teachings because they haven't completed their perfections sufficiently in the past, sir.

S: But if you don't put forth effort, can you still claim that you don't understand because of missing parami?

D: Those who have accumulated perfections in the past attain the stages of Nibbana when they listen to the teachings. But we, sir, because we have no perfections, we listen to the Dhamma again and again and we remain just the same.

S: The wise of old were just like thirsty people. They were thirsty, so they looked for water. And when they found it, what did they do? Did they look up at the sky and say, "Well, we don't want to drink this water yet"? No, they were people who were really thirsty. What about you? You have Buddha's teachings; do you drink them right away?

D: Sir, we linger and wait.

S: In that case it isn't true that you don't have any parami. If you don't drink, your thirst will not be quenched. What will you do if you find yourselves sitting right next to the water pot?

D: Because we don't have a sufficient amount of parami, we just sit there, sir.

S: What will you do if you walk into a lake full of water?

D: When we walk down into the water we stretch out our neck and turn our face up towards the sky, sir. And if we should dive, sir, we shall keep our mouth firmly shut.

S: Now, are you still telling me that you are thirsty, but that you don't have the necessary understanding to be able to drink?

D: Sir, because we don't have the necessary conditioning, we don't open our mouth in the water.

S: If you really wanted to drink, would you still keep your mouth shut?

D: If one really wanted to drink, one wouldn't, of course.

S: So you are saying, "Though I do want to drink, I do not want to drink"! Aren't you contradicting yourselves?

D: It is as if we pretended not to want to drink, sir.

S: Tell me then, if you are thirsty and just bear it, are you happy or unhappy?

D: Unhappy, sir.

S: So, if you are unhappy, will you keep sitting near the water pot without drinking?

D: Sir, we see this kind of suffering as happiness.

S: Did the Buddha teach that this thirst is happiness?

D: No, sir, he said it was suffering.

S: Now, tell me, what do you think is true: What the Buddha said or what you think?

D: Our view, that this is happiness, is wrong, sir.

S: Do you want to be happy or unhappy?

D: Though we would like to be happy, we continue to create unhappiness for ourselves.

S: What is better: to listen to the Buddha or not to listen to the Buddha?

D: Sir, we know that we should follow the word of the Buddha, but still we continue to create suffering for ourselves.

S: In that case it seems as if you knew your own good, but that you are simply lazy.

D: Because our parami are weak, we have to suffer under our own ignorance, sir.

S: Now, if there is water and you don't quench your thirst with it, is that because you have not perfected your parami?

D: Because of the lack of perfections the power of ignorance is so overwhelming, sir.

S: Tell me, what is more powerful, understanding (//vijja//) or ignorance (//avijja//)

D: Sir, understanding is more powerful for human beings.

S: Then you know that the understanding the Buddha taught is powerful.

D: Sir, we know that understanding is a good thing.

S: So, just associate yourselves with understanding. Whether you think that the power of ignorance is strong or whatever.... You have learned now to distinguish between mind and matter. While you are aware of mind and matter in the way the Buddha taught, is there still ignorance prevailing?

D: While we are aware, sir, there is no ignorance.

S: Now, let us concentrate at the spot below the nose above the upper lip with the awareness of mind and matter (//nama-rupa//), just as the Buddha taught. When we anchor our attention thus, can ignorance stay? If you look out for it, will you be able to find it?

D: It will be completely gone, sir.

S: Are you still aware where it has gone?

D: Sir, it has disappeared completely.

S: In that case, is the power of understanding greater or that of ignorance?

D: The power of ignorance is great, sir.

S: Oh dear, how is it great? The poor thing just ran as fast as it could; you couldn't even see it anymore.

D: But it comes back again and again, sir.

S: This is so because you allow it back in. If you allow only understanding and knowledge in, ignorance can't come back. But if you allow it back, then slowly your understanding will break up and ignorance takes over once more. It is as with the electric lights in here. What do you need to switch on the lights?

D: Switches, sir.

S: What happens inside the switches that we get light?

D: Electricity flows through them, sir.

S: What happens if the flow is interrupted?

D: It will become dark, sir.

S: What do you have to do to turn the darkness into light?

D: We have to feed electricity to the bulbs, sir.

S: And where does the darkness go when the lights are lit?

D: It disappears, sir.

S: Is any of the darkness left behind?

D: No, sir.

S: When understanding shines, is there any ignorance left?

D: No, sir.

S: In that case, is the power of ignorance great?

D: No, sir, it isn't.

S: Is it difficult to do what we did just now?

D: Not very difficult, sir.

S: Don't we see the reality when light suddenly comes?

D: We do, sir.

S: Will you still be able to go wrong?

D: No, sir.

S: It is so easy! What did the wise disciples of the Buddha connect? If you want to switch on the light, you have to switch on the wires so that electricity flows. So, gently keep your attention at the spot; it will connect. Do you understand?

D: We would like to give this up, sir.

S: Just concentrate your attention there. Gently. Do you become tired if you focus your mind in this way?

D: No, sir.

S: Does it cost you anything?

D: No, sir.

S: Do you have to stop your work?

D: No, sir.

S: Isn't this wonderful? You can practice in all the four postures: sitting, standing, walking and lying down. Can you keep your attention at the spot with the awareness of the in- and-out-breath even while you are eating, drinking and working?

D: Please, sir, teach us how to be aware of the breath while we are moving about and working.

S: You know about many different techniques, but you don't have to practice them all. Choose one and work with it. If you keep your mind steadfastly focused on one object, you will immediately be aware of what you have not been aware of before, just as you see light as soon as you turn on the switch. Can there still be wrong view and delusion in your mind while you are thus aware?

D: No, sir, but as we don't know where the light switches are, we have to remain sitting in the dark.

S: Oh dear, you've got so many switches! Whichever you turn, the light will come.

D: Sir, because there are so many switches, I don't know which one to turn.

S: Any one will do; the results will be immediate.

D: When I press that switch, sir, the light bulb immediately burns up. That's why I thought it was the wrong switch.

S: It doesn't burn up; it will light the bulb. Even if it shots out one day, when you try again, it will certainly burn.

D: But I don't know where to press the switch, sir.

S: You know the switches; you have been taught so many techniques by the monks who have compassion for you. Now, do not try them all. Select one only.

D: Sir, please teach us this one technique!

S: Every technique the Buddha taught will work as a switch to turn on the light.

D: We would like to learn a technique by which we can perfect our conduct and train ourselves in understanding while we work, walk or sit, sir.

S: Well then, tell me, do not all of you, big and small, breathe?

D: Yes, sir, we do.

S: So, there is no one here who doesn't know how to breathe. Can you say sometimes, "Sorry, I am very busy now. I don't have time to breathe"?

D: No, sir.

S: So then, it is very easy for you to breathe, isn't it? Now just try to find out where the air comes out when you breathe out.

D: It comes out of the nose, sir.

S: Is there any other place where it comes out?

D: No, sir, there is only one place.

S: Yes, there is only one place. So, don't come and tell me that there are so many switches and that you don't know which one to press. You are all breathing, aren't you? Where does this air touch when you breathe out?

D: It touches at a point at the base of the nose, sir.

S: What happens when the air enters? Where does it touch?

D: It touches there again, at the same spot, sir.

S: So, this is quite obvious to you: The air brushes over a small spot at the base of the nose as you breathe in and out. You are aware of this, aren't you?

D: Yes, sir.

S: Don't allow the mind to wander away to other objects. Can you feel the spot where the air touches just as if you were touching it with your finger? Put your attention there and keep it there. Don't follow the breath outside the nostrils. Keep your attention quietly and calmly at the spot, and you will be able to know how the air goes in and out. The flow of air is continuous, isn't it?

D: Yes, sir, it is.

S: You can be aware of it without the slightest interruption. If you keep your attention there, there is only the awareness of mental properties and physical properties (//nama-rupa//). Now under which of the two come the nostrils, under mind or under matter?

D: Sir, as far as I know, the nostrils are matter (//rupa//).

S: What is the entity that knows the touch sensation?

D: Sir, that which knows is mind (//nama//).

S: So you are aware of mind and matter at the same time. If you are aware of mind and matter, are there still some other entities of which you aren't aware?

D: No, sir, there is nothing apart from mind and matter.

S: Is being aware of mind and matter ignorance or knowledge?

D: It is knowledge, sir.

S: If one has no awareness of mind and matter, what do we call that?

D: That we call ignorance, sir.

S: Can ignorance still influence us while we are training ourselves in understanding.

D: No, sir, it can't.

S: Is there still cause for worry and fear about the present and the future?

D: No, sir, there isn't.

S: Even if you are aware for just one short moment,. you benefit. How much will you receive if you can keep up this awareness for a longer period.

D: The benefits must be many, sir.

S: Will there still be doubt in your mind about your own ability to attain the awakening to which you have aspired?

D: No, sir.

S: You can reach your goal even quicker than you thought. Of course you still have to fulfill your duties towards your teachers. parents and children. You have to support the teachings of the Buddha. You have to make a living. If you don't fulfill all these duties, is your morality perfect?

D: It isn't, sir.

S: If your moral conduct isn't perfect, can you attain your goal?

D: No, sir, it is impossible.

S: Tell me, when or where is it not possible to practice right conduct and meditation simultaneously?

D: It is never too difficult, sir, even if one is ill.

S: If your insight develops through your practice, do you still need to tell others that you have become happy through the Buddha Dhamma?

D: It isn't necessary to tell others, sir.

S: And if you don't talk about it, does it mean that you don't know about your own happiness?

D: Even if we don't tell everyone, we still know for ourselves, sir.

S: In just the same way noble people know. You know for yourselves how much you have got now, and when you reach the goal, then you will know. If you write on a piece of paper that salt is salty and someone reads this, he knows that salt is salty, doesn't he.

D: Of course, sir.

S: And if you just tell someone that salt is salty, will he know?

D: Why, certainly, sir.

S: But tell me, will salt become salty just by your writing so or saying so?

D: No, sir, of course not.

S: If you read that salt is salty, do you actually know that this is so?

D: Though one understands that it is salty, one doesn't actually know how salt tastes. Only if we put some salt on our tongue and taste it, shall we actually know what "salty" means.

S: If you have tasted it and know it is salty, do you still have to read about it? Do you still have to make declarations about its taste?

D: No, sir.

S: If we tell our neighbor about its taste, will he know then?

D: He will just have heard about it, sir.

S: What do we have to do to make him know?

D: We have to give him some salt and make him taste. Otherwise, what he knows is just hearsay, sir.

S: Do you know for sure, that right conduct and insight and wisdom constitute the path to the release from suffering?

D: Yes, sir, we know.

S: If you read that salt is salty and consider this knowledge to be quite sufficient, then that is where you stop. But if you want to make sure, you have to taste for yourselves. Is it sufficient to read that salt is salty and then have this confirmed by me?

D: Sir, you wouldn't lie. If you tell me it is salty, that is quite sufficient for me.

S: Now you are going back on what you said earlier on. You know salt is salty from hearing and reading about it, but only if you really know for yourselves will you become happy. If you tell somebody that salt is salty and he blindly accepts what you say, then he won't even feel the desire to taste for himself.

After all, he thinks he knows. With this notion in mind, he won't see the need to taste it. It is not easy to know for oneself that salt is salty. Salt does exist. Take it, taste it. Then you will know for yourselves and there will be no need to ask others.

D: Sir, yesterday I did taste a little bit of salt.

S: Really? Why only a little? Did the salt run out?

D: No, sir, there is plenty of it.

S: Then take it! Don't just taste a little bit. Use as much as you need. Every single one of you has got some salt, haven't you?

D: Yes, sir. We haven't eaten our full yet, sir, but we are satisfied with tasting just a little.

S: But, of course, you are not thinking of leaving it at that, are you?

D: Well, sir, not actually, but as time goes by everything changes. We planned something last year and already a year has passed....

S: Now, this time, don't only think. How many "thinkers" were there at the time of the Buddha?

D: They were as numerous as grains of sand on the beach, sir.

S: You still have to make efforts and meditate. You still have to strive to understand the teachings of the Buddha. You are planning to do that, aren't you? Will you only think about putting forth effort in this life also?

D: If we only think about it, sir, we shall again be left behind in the cycle of birth and death.

S: Now, then, there is no problem. "In the past we missed out because we were only thinking about making effort, but now we know that there is fire in the two pieces of wood. We shall rub them together." Thinking in this way, there will be effort and also the desire to fight the battle.... Have you got hold of the two pieces of wood? If I continue talking, you will think, "This monk is talking for a long time." I shall stop now. Only if you work can you make an end of it. If you have the desire to work, meditate, work hard, applying yourselves with the same effort and determination as did the Noble Ones of old.

ABOUT WEBU SAYADAW

The Webu Sayadaw was born on the 17th of February 1896 in Ingyinbin, a small village near Shewbo in upper Burma. He was ordained as a novice at the age of nine and was given the name Shin Kumara. At the age of twenty he was ordained as a full member of the Sangha, now being addressed as U Kumara. ("Webu Sayadaw" is a title meaning "the holy teacher from Webu," given to him after he became an established teacher.)

U Kumara went to Mandalay to study at the famous Masoyein Monastery, the leading monastic university of the time. In his seventh year after full ordination he abandoned the study of the Pali scriptures and left the monastery to put into practice what he had learned about meditation.

After leaving the monastery, U Kumara spent four years in solitude. Then he went to his native village Ingyinbin for a brief visit. He taught his former teacher at the village monastery on request the technique of meditation he had adopted. He said: "This is the shortcut to Nibbana. Anyone can use it. It stands up to investigation and is in accordance with the teachings of the Buddha as observed in the scriptures. It is the straight path to Nibbana.

The Webu Sayadaw emphasized the practice of meditation as the only way to bring the teachings of the Buddha to fulfillment. The study of the scriptures, though helpful, is not essential for the realization of Nibbana. The technique of meditation taught by the Webu Sayadaw is //anapana sati//, "mindfulness of breathing," which requires one to be aware of breathing in while breathing in, of breathing out while breathing out, and of the spot or area which the stream of air touches while the breath is entering and leaving the nostrils. Though //anapana sati// is basically a way of developing //samadhi//, one-pointed concentration of mind, the Webu Sayadaw said that when concentration is developed to a sufficient degree, the mediator can gain insight into the three characteristics of nature -- impermanence, unsatisfactoriness and non-self. The direct understanding of these three characteristics is called //panna//, wisdom, which is the most essential quality required of a mediator to reach Nibbana.

The Webu Sayadaw was not a scholar and his discourses do not cater to the intellectual who prefers the study of Buddhist philosophy to the practice. His refreshing simplicity, his patience, his lovely sense of humor, and his humility, all revealed in his dialogue with his audience, illumine a side of Buddhism which cannot be perceived by reading treatises and texts. The statements of the people in the audience offer us a glimpse of how Buddhism is practiced in Burma today.

The Webu Sayadaw undertook pilgrimages to the Buddhist sites of India and Sri Lanka. He passed away on the 26th of June 1977 in the meditation center at his native village Ingyinbin. He was believed by many to have been an Arahat, a person who has in practice fully understood the Four Noble Truths and attained the end of suffering.

Roger Bischoff

THE BUDDHIST PUBLICATION SOCIETY

The BPS is an approved charity dedicated to making known the Teaching of the Buddha, which has a vital message for people of all creeds. Founded in 1958, the BPS has published a wide variety of books and booklets covering a great range of topics. Its publications include accurate annotated translations of the Buddha's discourses, standard reference works, as well as original contemporary expositions of Buddhist thought and practice. These works present Buddhism as it truly is -- a dynamic force which has influenced receptive minds for the past 2500 years and is still as relevant today as it was when it first arose. A full list of our publications will be sent upon request with an enclosure of U.S. $1.00 or its equivalent to cover air mail postage. Write to:

The Hony. Secretary
BUDDHIST PUBLICATION SOCIETY
P.O. Box 61
54, Sangharaja Mawatha
Kandy Sri Lanka

or

The Barre Center for Buddhist Studies
Lockwood Road
Barre, MA 01005
Tel: (508) 355-2347

[end]

The Fire Sermon (Adittapariyaya Sutta, Samyutta Nikaya XXXV, 28) I have heard that the Blessed One was staying at Varanasi in Gaya, at Gaya Head, with 1,000 monks. Ther monks: 'Monks, the All is aflame. What All is aflame? The eye is aflame. Forms are af Visual consciousness is aflame. Visual contact is aflame. And whatever there is that arise on visual contact, experienced as pleasure, pain or neither-pleasure-nor-pain, that too is a Aflame with what? Aflame with the fire of passion, the fire of aversion, the fire of delusion.
say, with birth, ageing & death, with sorrows, lamentations, pains, griefs & despairs. 'Th aflame. Sounds are aflame... 'The nose is aflame. Odors are aflame... 'The tongue is af Flavors are aflame... 'The body is aflame. Tactile sensations are aflame... 'The intellect aflame. Ideas are aflame. Mental consciousness is aflame. Mental contact is aflame. An is that arises in dependence on mental contact, experienced as pleasure, pain or neither-pleasure-nor-pain, that too is aflame. Aflame with what? Aflame with the fire of pa fire of aversion, the fire of delusion. Aflame, I say, with birth, ageing & death, with sorrows lamentations, pains, griefs & despairs. 'Seeing thus, the instructed Noble disciple grows di with the eye, disenchanted with forms, disenchanted with visual consciousness, disencha contact. And whatever there is that arises in dependence on visual contact, experienced a pain or neither-pleasure-nor-pain: He grows disenchantedwith that too. 'He grows disenc
the ear... 'He grows disenchanted with the nose... 'He grows disenchanted with the tongu
'He grows disenchanted with the body... 'He grows disenchanted with the intellect, disench ideas, disenchanted with mental consciousness, disenchanted with mental contact. And that arises in dependence on mental contact, experienced as pleasure, pain or neither-plea He grows disenchanted with that too. Disenchanted, he becomes dispassionate. Through released. With release, there is the knowledge, "Released." He discerns that, "Birth is de holy life fulfilled, the task done. There is nothing further for this world."' That is what the Blessed One said. Glad at heart, the monks delighted at his words. And while this explana given, the hearts of the 1,000 monks, through no clinging (not being sustained), were rele mental effluents

[This document can be acquired from a sub-directory coombspapers via anonymous FTP or COOMBSQUEST gopher at the Australian National University, Canberra on the node COOMBS.ANU.EDU.AU or from the ANU Soc.Sci.WWW Server at http://coombs.anu.edu.au/CoombsHome.html]

[This version: 10 April 1995]

THE FIVE AGGREGATES.

By Ven Thubten Pende

This following teaching was given at Institute Vajra Yogini in France by Ven Thubten Pende, who is one of the most foremost scholars of Tibetan Buddhism. He is an American monk ordained for almost two decades. He is the head teacher at Nalanda Monastery in France.

Transcribed by Ven Tony Beaumont at Nalanda

Copyright (c) 1994 of Thubten Pende and the Foundation for the Preservation of Mahayana Tradition. Any distribution without permission is prohibited by law.

The Foundation for the Preservation of Mahayana Tradition (FPMT) is an international network of Buddhist centers and activities dedicated to the transmission of Mahayana Buddhism as a practiced and living tradition. The FPMT was founded in 1975 by Lama Thubten Yeshe and Lama Thubten Zopa Rinpoche. It is composed of monasteries, retreat centers, communities, publishing houses, and healing centers, all functioning as a means to benefit others. Teachings, such as the above presented, are given at many of these centers.

To receive a complete listing of these about 80 centers across the world, as well as news about the activities throughout this global network, please request a complimentary copy of the Mandala Magazine from:

FPMT Central Office
P.O. Box 1778
Soquel, California 95073
USA

Tel: 408-476-8435
Fax: 408-476-4823
E-mail: 76072.47@compuserve.com

THE FIVE AGGREGATES.

By Ven Thubten Pende

This is the first of four lectures taking place this weekend, and the subject of this weekend's talk is the five aggregates. There is a relationship with us, that's simply because we want to be happy and we don't want to suffer. I heard the words of a song recently which said "I don't mind dying it's living that scares me."

All of us know the difficulties of life and we're trying somehow to minimize those. If what the Buddha said is true and this life is followed by another life and another and another and another then the problems are multiplied. Fortunately there was not only bad news from the Buddha, but he also found a way of escaping from this suffering, and that is the main reason why we are here. So the Buddha found that all of suffering is derived from a mistake in cognition and that the actual antidote to that mistake is the cultivation of a certain wisdom, and that wisdom is known as the wisdom realizing selflessness, and it is this teaching on selflessness that mainly distinguishes the Buddha's philosophy from all other world philosophies. Selflessness is referring to a quality which all things possess and this quality is an absence; it is an absence of an illusion we have mistakenly projected on all things.

So all of the teachings of the Buddha are either directly or indirectly trying to lead the student to discover what that absence is. Teachings that are speaking directly about this subject, fall into the category of the perfection of wisdom scriptures, and in those scriptures we find such statements like" the five aggregates are empty of self". It is our task to find out what that means, so we have to first of all begin by finding out what the five aggregates are.

In general the five aggregates are a way of classifying the body and the mind. The two main constituents that make up any person are the body and the mind. Rather than merely saying the body and mind the Buddha mentioned five classifications, and when he was teaching this he was using handfuls of grain to say there is this aggregate and this aggregate and this aggregate, five all together. The Sanskrit word is skanda, and what it means is a pile, as in a heap or pile of rice, and those five are the aggregate of form, feeling, recognition, compositional factors and consciousness.

The first three of these he mentioned in particular, because of their relationship with desire. In addition to mentioning that the source of all our sufferings is in a misknowledge of reality, at other times the Buddha said that the source of all of our problems is desire. However we should know that he was not referring to all desire. For instance the desire to be happy is not a source of problems. The desire to escape one's problems is also not the source of suffering. So he was referring to a specific type of desire, and that being a desire whose object appears as the source of happiness when in fact it is not. So it is a desire with respect to or, a desire towards an hallucination, and the means of eliminating that desire is by discovering that the object is an hallucination.

So what are the types of objects that this negative desire arises towards?

Well, one is bodies, our own and others. It's not uncommon that a body can appear in an exaggerated way, causing it to seem as if it is the source of happiness, and not only the body but also all the objects of our senses. So in order to discover the actuality of the objects of the senses then the Buddha taught, or The Buddha mentioned the aggregate of FORM.

Then desire arises for those things that feel good. In fact the desire that motivates most people arises from pleasant experiences, such as with the thought "This feels good therefore

I want to never be parted from it." What a common thought! Where the mistake arises is in this expression "never being parted from it", especially if this object is something impermanent, and that there is no way that the contact can be preserved for- ever. Consequently the desire is setting oneself up for disappointment. Therefore in order to explore such feelings the Buddha mentioned the second aggregate the aggregate of FEELING.

Another object to which people become attached with desire are ideas. The disputes that scholars get into can get very heated, because these scholars become attached to their ideas and discriminations, regarding their own as superior and other's ideas as inferior, causing them to desire for their idea to be recognized as the supreme. This fuels the actions of speech and so forth that make the various disputes that one gets and can come to such extremes as causing closed mindedness, losing the ability to openly examine other's ideas. In order to explore such discriminations or ideation the Buddha mentioned the aggregate of DISCRIMINATIONS.

There are many other functions and emotions of the mind, so he heaped all of those in the classification known as COMPOSITIONAL FACTORS. In some texts the compositional factor aggregate is called VOLITION, and volition is one of the functions of the mind that is contained within that class. This is an example of giving the name of a member of the group to the whole group. VOLITION was chosen rather than any of the others because of it's importance, and this is because desire for instance can only bring about experience once it is put into action, and the way it is put into action is through volition. For instance one can have the desire to possess something, but it is only when one generates the actual will to get it that the action follows and such volition or will is what is known as karma. The word karma is used colloquially to refer to the experiences that occur to people. Technically those experiences are known as the results of karma, and technically karma is referring to the action which is the cause of such experiences. Karma then is referring to volition or will, as well as the actions of body and speech motivated by such will, and once you have set the action in motion then you're bound to the result, like the turning of a wheel. So as this is something important to analyze and come to know the Buddha mentioned this aggregate of compositional factors.

The last aggregate is the aggregate of CONSCIOUSNESS and this is referring to the six consciousnesses, visual, auditory, olfactory, gustatory, tactile and mental, which are the main means we come to know the various objects that compose reality. So this also is very important to investigate.

So that was a brief presentation of the five aggregates.

In the doctrine of selflessness there's said to be two types. The selflessness of person and the selflessness of phenomena, and the person is said to be the I that is designated in dependence upon any of the aggregates such as in the expression "I am sitting here." That I is a person which is being designated in dependence upon the form aggregate, because it is being designated in dependence upon the body which is included in the FORM aggregate. Without the body you wouldn't be able to have the thought "I am sitting here." The great Indian master Nagarjuna who elucidated The Buddha's teaching on selflessness said that the misconception of the self of a person arises by depending upon the misconception of the self of phenomena. By phenomena there he meant the five aggregates, and for example because of mistaking the way in which the five aggregates exist, such as the body, mistaking the way in which it exists then we mistake the way the I exists which is dependent upon those aggregates. By mistaking the way the I exists one mistakes the way others exist, and by mistaking the way others exist then such perverse thoughts as clinging and ill will arise. Due to the arisal of such emotional addictions there comes volition, the acting out of those emotions, and due to such action one is bound to experience the result, which creates a cycle or vicious circle of death and rebirth, over and over again.

Nagarjuna mentioned that, in his book " The Precious Garland Of Advice To The King." In there he tried to clarify what the mistake of self of person is, and what the mistake of self of phenomena is, in order to generate the wisdom of selflessness of person and phenomena in order to put an end to this vicious circle of existence.

So studying such a book has benefits, but in order to make sense of Nagarjuna's arguments you have to have some appreciation of the world view that he held. For instance when Nagarjuna was describing phenomena he did so in terms of the four elements; earth water, fire and air. Such a presentation has not been employed in Western education for a long time! Now, if you're looking for elements you look in the Periodic Table which has dozens of elements, which requires having a certain love of chemistry to penetrate. So the presentation of things in terms of four elements seems simplistic in comparison with the Periodic Table

But on it's own it has it's own elegance and if you understand it then you'll be able to understand the arguments set forth in the Buddhist classics such as the " Precious Garland".

It is not necessary to read such classics in order to gain the wisdom realizing selflessness. For instance one can do it by relying on the words of a master who has the correct understanding of selflessness and can present it in contemporary terms, but there is a benefit in being able to appreciate the presentations in those classic texts which is that such texts are the scriptural authorities that masters have been relying upon for generations and thus if your understanding, if you can see that your understanding is supported by those classic texts you'll have that much more confidence in your understanding. It's always nice to know what the contemporary masters are relying upon to get their understanding. This helps a lot to avoid cultism, because such knowledge is not the personal property of anybody and if you discover that such knowledge can be generated by the study of a timeless wisdom then you know it is not the sole property of one individual whom you have to please in order to get drops.

So are you following me so far? Okay.

So now we begin the detailed presentation of the five aggregates. The first is the FORM AGGREGATE. It consists of eleven items.

Q: What is the difference between volition and mental consciousness?

A : I'll give a quick answer now and later there'll be more details. So mental consciousness is included in the fifth aggregate and volition is included in forth aggregate, and volition is a function you find in all consciousnesses. Mental consciousness has the function of volition, so you should see mental consciousness as something that is merely knowing it's object whereas volition is a way in which that mental consciousness relates to that object or functions with respect to that object. More information comes later.

I mentioned there were eleven divisions of form and I should say that the source that I'm taking most of this information from is the book " Meditation On Emptiness" by Professor Jeffrey Hopkins. So if you're being frustrated by not being able to take notes as fast as I am speaking you'll find all the information in that book.

So we have the eye sense organ, lets not use the word organ lets use the word power, or eye sense faculty, or eye power or eye faculty whatever you choose. Choose one of them rather than all of them, it takes too long.

Eye faculty, Ear faculty, Nose faculty, Tongue faculty, Body faculty. That's five so far. Then there's visual form, sound, smell, taste, tactile objects and the eleventh one is form for the mental consciousness.

So then with respect to those first five what's meant by faculty?

Well if it's a form it's made up of particles. So we can say atomically constructed. That's what we mean by form here and the faculty here is a form that enables consciousness to have access to it's respective objects. For example the eye faculty enables visual consciousness to function within the field of visual form or visual objects, and the ear faculty allows the auditory consciousness to function within the field of sound. You have to distinguish between the eye faculty and the eye ball in which the eye faculty is found. Similarly with the ear faculty and the fleshy ear and so forth. These faculties are composed of particles and are subtle, subtle in that not just anybody can see them. Whether or not they can be seen by machinery I don't know. The texts say that clever persons with certain types of super knowledge can see these forms and thus certain shapes have been attributed to them. Such as the eye faculty is shaped like the bud of a ? plant. Whatever that is. The ear faculty is shaped like the knot of a birch tree. I'm mentioning this just to say that these faculties have been seen by somebody who thought that they could be distinguished by their shapes. They didn't stop with the mere designation of a name. The nose faculty is shaped like two hollow needles at the root of the nose. Then the tongue faculty is shaped like many half moons the diameter of the tip of a hair, each one is the diameter of the tip of a hair and are found in the middle of the tongue. The body faculty is shaped like skin or hide pervading the body.

Such faculties then have the function of enabling their respective consciousnesses to access their respective objects. What consciousnesses ? The five sense consciousnesses.

Somebody might have remembered that I mentioned there were six consciousnesses in the consciousness aggregate. Therefore someone might wonder does that consciousness have a faculty? Does that mental consciousness have a faculty? It does, because it has to have that which enables it to access it's object. These faculties are necessary conditions for the arising of consciousness, and the faculty is known as the dominate condition, because of giving that consciousness power with respect to it's object, causing that consciousness to operate only in that one field rather than another field. For example due to the eye faculty visual consciousness can only see visual objects it cannot see sounds. So mental consciousness also has a mental faculty that functions as it's dominate condition, but unlike the five sense consciousnesses the mental faculty is not form. That is unlike those five faculties I've mentioned being form, the mental faculty is not composed of particles.

I hope I'm not going too slow for some of you, but as there is so much information here it would be better to go home with something, rather than only remembering a blur of sound.

So that mental faculty is a previous moment of consciousness such as a visual consciousness that enables the mental consciousness to access visual objects. So therefore that visual consciousness would be considered a mental faculty and dominate condition for the arising of the mental consciousness perceiving visual objects. All kinds of interesting things to discuss arise from such a presentation but there isn't enough time

Okay so we have here in the case of the visual faculty the function that enables consciousness to access visual objects, All kinds of interesting things to discuss arise from such a presentation but there isn't enough time.

Okay so we have here in the case of the visual faculty the function that enables visual consciousness to access visual objects. So what are the visual forms that are the objects of visual consciousness? There are two main types: shapes and colors: white, blue, red and yellow; these are said to be the color of the four elements. Air is white, water is blue, fire is red and earth is yellow. There is another presentation of eight secondary colors. It's a bit bizarre though, such as the color of cloud, the color of smoke, the color of mist, the color of illumination, the color of darkness, the color of shadow and the color of sunlight.

These two lists of divisions of color are obviously not exhaustive. So these are the color visual objects. Then there are shapes of which you have different kinds, such as long shapes short shapes, such as a long board or a deep well. Then there's high and low, there's a shape known as square but it can refer to any polygon. That's also an example of the name of a part given to the whole. So although it's called square shaped it can refer to the shape of a dice, it can also refer to the shape of rectangular boxes and so forth. Then there's the round shape which can refer to anything egg-shaped and can also refer to the so called flat circle. There's the level shape, like the shape of the surface of this floor. Then there can be the non level shape, such as the shape of a ploughed field that is irregular.

Shapes and colors is what visual conscious sees. The question arises :

Can you see that vase there ?

And of course one would say "Yes"

But technically speaking what the visual consciousness is seeing is just the shape and color of the vase, and the vase is not a shape or a color. So because one has come to associate a vase with such a shape then the visual consciousness can immediately give rise to the thought thinking vase. This cognition thinking vase that employs the word vase and thus is being done with a conceptual consciousness is called "seeing a vase', simply because of the close relationship between the seeing of the color and the shape of the vase and that conception thinking vase that arises as a result of it.

So this is an example of giving the name of a cause to the result. The cause being the visual consciousness and the result being a mental consciousness that is a conception. If this sounds very mechanical and concrete it is. It is based upon the Sautantrika view of Buddhist tenet. They have a very concrete view of the world. It's very logical and categorical. They like to keep their categories straight without mixing, and as we all know nothing is that clear. But just as a person interested in particle physics and quantum mechanics must first pass through Newtonian physics to get there, likewise it's very useful for us to see the world from the Sautantrika point of view before we get into bizarre explanations of the higher schools of Buddhist thought such as the Prasangika. Just as quantum mechanics arose because when you explore the view of Newton and his mechanics, you discover on extremely tiny things, and also on vast distances in other words, on the very limits of that view, there are some problems. Likewise when you explore the limits of the Sautantrika view you see the need to jump to a higher view. I use the example of physics as if I knew something about it, but it was one of my worst subjects actually.

Sound is defined as the object of auditory consciousness, and there's different ways of dividing it.

One way is sound that arises from elements conjoined with consciousness and sound arising from elements not conjoined with consciousness.

The sound that arises from elements conjoined with consciousness would be the sounds made by a human being. Amongst sounds made by a human being there's two types, articulate sounds and non articulate sounds. Articulate sounds are sounds that denote a meaning such as words, and of articulate sounds there's two types pleasant and unpleasant. A pleasant articulate sound might be good poetry, an unpleasant articulate sound might be criticism.

The non articulate sounds don't denote any meaning in particular, and there are two types; pleasant and unpleasant.

A pleasant one might be the snapping of fingers, an unpleasant one might be the sound of a hand slapping a face.

Then amongst sounds arising from elements not conjoined with consciousness there are two types; articulate and non articulate. The definition is the same as before, one denotes a meaning and the other doesn't. Of the articulate there are two types pleasant and unpleasant. What might be a pleasant one that's an articulate sound? There's the legendary dharma drum in the heavens. The beating of it produces dharma discourses. An unpleasant articulate sound, now I'm going to merely guess here. Decide yourself whether I'm right or wrong, and that would be an echo that is criticizing you. An echo's coming from a cliff, that's a sound arising from elements not conjoined with consciousness. So I think it possesses the definition. Then the non articulate sounds, pleasant and unpleasant. A pleasant one would be the sound of a well played musical instrument, and the unpleasant one would be the sound of a not well played musical instrument. I used to be in an orchestra once and to hear a person just learning to play the violin was just painful? Of course when they get good it's a different story but in the beginning..... So that's sounds.

Then the next is odors. These are defined as objects perceived by the olfactory consciousness. There's different divisions, such as fragrant odors and unfragrant odors. This refers to something that smells nice and something that doesn't smell nice, and of these there are two divisions.

Those that are equal and those that are unequal. An equal odor whether it is fragrant or unfragrant would be one that is equal with everything else, it doesn't dominate. Whereas the unequal one in the case of a fragrant odor would be a perfume that dominates everything else when you enter a room. In the case of the unfragrant dominate odor, an example would be the smell of garlic.

So we have all these different divisions; products of the Indian mentality, in particular Indian scholars, who sat down and tried to figure out everything that could be known and then put in it's proper category. So if you sat down to analyze odors it's not just a question of odors; it's a question of fragrant odors, unfragrant odors, subtle odors, strong odors etc.

Then we come to tastes, an object of special fondness in this country. There are six types; and by the way taste is defined as the object of gustatory consciousness. Sweet and sour, hot and salty, bitter and astringent. What's that spice from Solu Khumbu? Erma! Astringent would be the flavor of erma. Actually erma is said to have all the flavors. The astringent somehow dries your tongue, shrivels it up.

So these different objects including the tastes are made up of the four elements. For example the sweet taste arises from a preponderance of the earth and the water element, sour from fire and earth, salt flavor from water and fire, hot from fire and wind, bitter from water and wind and astringency from earth and wind.

We then come to tactile objects which are the objects perceived by the tactile consciousness. There are two groups: the elements and the tangible objects that are arisen from the elements. The elements are as mentioned before earth, water, fire and wind. Earth is hard and obstructive; water is wet and cohesive; fire is hot and burning; air is light and moving, and the thing is you never have one of the elements without another one. The smallest particles are said to be made out of eight things. They're made out of the four elements, and they are made out of the visual object, olfactory, the gustatory and tactile. There's no auditory particle because sound is not something which can produce a continuum of itself as the other one's can. So the particles that make up all forms are when you get down to the smallest particles are particles made up of these eight components, but those particles will have a dominance of one element over another. So therefore when you see a fire it doesn't mean that there is no water element there. It is only that the fire element is dominating at that time. For example a fire's ability to support a piece of paper or a leaf. For instance if you throw a piece of paper or a leaf in a fire it doesn't immediately float down, it's held. That ability is the function of the earth element part of fire. Also the way that all the tongues of the flames of the fire can all merge together, that's the water element of the fire. The fact that the fire can move is the air element part of the fire, and of course the fire is something that you can see, touch and so forth. Even though fire is defined in terms of the tactile consciousness, it is still something that you can see, so that is something that is included in those other components of fire.

Now how might water contain those other elements? A body of water, how might that contain all the elements ? For instance water can support a ship, that's it's earth element, and if you put a plant in water eventually it will decay and that's it's fire element. Water will flow down hill and that's it's air element.

Wind's earth element can support all kinds of objects, such as leaves, and when the wind blows, your clothes will dry, that's it's fire element. The wind of a tornado moves together, that's it's water element.

When you take two stones, certain stones and hit them together you get a spark, that's the fire element in earth and the fact that all the parts of a board hold together, the cells don't disintegrate but hold together, that is the water element of Earth. Things like trees can move, that's the wind element or air element. I didn't mean walking! they move when they grow.

So like that whenever you have the one element you have the other elements, you may find that one of the elements dominates the other ones. There's other tangible objects too, besides the elements; such as smooth, rough, heavy, light, cold, hunger, thirst and they are said to arise from the four elements.

Smoothness arises from a dominance of fire and water, roughness from earth and water, heavy from earth and water, light from fire and wind, cold from water and wind, hunger from wind or a dominance of wind, and thirst from a dominance of fire. These particles can be seen and their color is depending on which element is dominating, and the shapes depend upon the arrangement of the color particles.

So then what about these forms for a mental consciousness?

These are forms that are objects only for a mental consciousness. One is called form arising from aggregation or collection. The small particles that make up gross objects that we can see and hear and so forth can't be seen by the senses, however our mental consciousness can know of such particles. For instance I don't think anybody has seen an electron, but we know about them don't we? So those would be form for a mental consciousness and in particular this one form arising from aggregation.

Another one is called space form, this one is difficult to appear to my mind, but it is similar to the space that appears to a visual consciousness. For instance there is a space that appears to our visual consciousness such as the gap between ourselves and some object across the room, and that gap is something that is changeable. It can change color for instance, it can get dark, it can get smog colored, in a city for instance, or it can be clear. So this is something that is a changeable phenomena and can be seen with the eyes, and likewise, when one is using only the mental consciousness you can see space. Such as when you shut your eyes and you imagine something far away. Then aren't you cognizant of the space between you and that object far away as in the distance? So that one is not appearing to your visual consciousness that's appearing to your mental consciousness, that is the space form included as the object of mental consciousness and one should distinguish such space from what is known as permanent space. A permanent space is a negation of obstruction to extension. For example there is a space that we can see in the middle of this room, and somebody might wonder is there enough space to pass through, and you look there and you look at the size of that person say, and you see that there is no obstruction there that should prevent the person passing. That absence of obstruction is known as a permanent space. It is called permanent not because it will last forever, but rather because it is not a thing that changes from moment to moment. It is not some dynamic energy, it is a mere absence of obstruction, therefore it is called permanent.

There's nothing permanent about the five aggregates! The five aggregates are said to include all impermanent phenomena. But there are other than impermanent phenomena, such as permanent phenomena.

Then another type of form contained in the form for a mental consciousness would be the form arising from a promise. For example when a person takes a vow, it is said a subtle form arises, which certain people with super knowledge can see. I often wonder what my form created from taking vows looks like after twenty years. Maybe like a very holey rag!

So these forms do not just arise when one is making virtuous promises either. In dependence upon a butcher's physical and verbal actions in killing animals and the selling of their flesh also such a form can arise.

Maybe this may have some relationship with what are known as auras.

Then there are imaginary forms such as the elephants of a dream. It's a form but not really, because it's not actually made out of particles, physical particles, so that's why it's called an imaginary form and it just appears to a mental consciousness.

Then there's the forms of one with meditative power, and this would be a form that some person with a special power can generate which others can see. There's different types here; there's the type that only lasts as long as the meditator is concentrating and then there's the type that can remain even when the meditator is doing something else.

Okay so that deals with the form aggregate.

Let's take a break.

Talk two

So I'd like to begin this afternoon with any questions that came from this mornings lecture.

There was a lot of information, so long as it's not a question like could you repeat what you said this morning I would be happy to answer. Was it clear?

Q: This morning Pende said that the first three of the aggregates were linked to desire. Why is the forth one Volition, not linked to desire?

A: The fourth one is explained mainly on the basis of volition as I mentioned and I said that volition is the same thing as karma, but in fact you can't say that all volition is karma, only the volition that is under the control of ignorance is known as karma. And thus as negative desire is a product of ignorance then the volition which is controlled by desire is certainly this phenomena known as karma.

There is a way of course, a way of relating the fourth aggregate with desire, but it is not entirely necessary, in that The Buddha when he was explaining the five aggregates, he did so in such a way as to point out how a person who has acquired the five aggregates is bound to cyclic existence. A person is bound in cyclic existence by both the mental addictions and karma. Okay.. So for instance we can say that volition is controlled by desire thus when we investigate volition it is important to see how that is the case, and wherever the volition goes that's where the six consciousnesses go, because that's the specific function of volition, that is to take the consciousness to it's respective object. Another question?

Q: What do you mean by volition?

A: Okay, that's coming up. We could even say it's the same thing as will power, or intention.

Q: Why isn't the auditory object, sound, included in the same way that other sensory objects are?

A: The answer given before was that sound doesn't produce a continuum of itself, but that was insufficient.

So here sound is understood as something that arises from for instance hitting one object against another, but if those objects don't come in to contact there is no sound produced, so in the case of this one foundation particle, which is composed of eight parts sound isn't included in there because that object is not making a sound. That is, there is no separate particle in addition to those eight, that you could say is sound, but if two of those particles collided then it is possible that a sound could be produced.

Q: So if there is nothing which can produce the sound, it's the same for the other objects like tactile objects or olfactory objects, so if I don't see something, if there is not an object, a visual object I cannot see it, if there is not a taste object I cannot taste it.

A: Here, it's not that there is nothing that produces the sound, sound is produced. For instance when a particle strikes the ear drum then sound is produced. Now the types of particles that are moving through space that will strike the ear drum we call sound waves. Now in this system it is thought that these foundation particles as they move can bring about sound, but there is no particular particle which is sound, whereas there is a particular particle that is a visual form, and there is a particular particle that is an odor and so forth. Those particles are said to be evolution, to be developments of the four elements. A visual particle and so forth are somehow made up of the four elements, and so you can take some object and touch it, and the reason why you can touch it, is because of it's tactile object quality, or you can taste it and so forth, but when you listen, the sound that you might hear is not due to a particle of sound, but rather to the movement of all these other particles.

That's the best I can do.

Q: How can it be that good desires don't give birth in cyclic existence?

A: So this mental factor of volition I said is called karma in the case of being under the control of ignorance. In cases where we read that in order to become liberated we have to cease karma, it does not mean that we have to bring to an end all instances of this mental factor of volition. It means we have to bring to an end the dominance or the control of volition by these mental addictions, so volition having the basic function of taking the mind to it's object whatever it is, is also operating in the mind of a Buddha, because without volition the mind would not be able to make contact with any object. Thus The Buddha would not know things, and The Buddha would not have a compassion which perceives sentient beings. So volition is a necessary function of consciousness. If you want to know something, if it's not particularly easy for your mind to know an object, then you have to have the wish to do so. That wish can be desire, we can call it aspiration, and that motivates that will to do it, to discover that object. Then of course all the actions following that hopefully will bring you to the object that you want to experience, and some objects are worth experiencing and others are not. When this wish, aspiration, or positive desire is brought about by a wisdom consciousness of clear intelligence then it is not going to get us in trouble. In particular if it is brought about by a wisdom consciousness that perceives reality, then it won't cause the type of volitional activity that brings about the uncontrolled death and rebirth known as cyclic existence.

So it is interesting to contemplate existence without any desire at all. Why would you do anything if you had no desire whatsoever?

The only types of actions that would happen would be actions like falling down. But of course if you had no desire whatsoever you would never have stood up. Now because of such observations there are those who thought that the path to liberation was the end of all desire, and thus engaged in the practice of total inactivity, which they sought to achieve by stopping their mind from generating any desire. In the process of doing that they discovered it takes some time to stop the mind from generating desire. If they pursued this practice of total inactivity they might starve to death before they reached the mental state of no desire, then there had to be some desire employed to get up and get food and stuff, and that type of activity was not seen as activity that was leading to bondage but was leading to liberation. So now the interesting question then becomes what is it that they are going to do to stop the mind of desire? For instance if there is no desire whatsoever, which is the same as saying no aspiration then what would the liberation that this person is seeking look like? Would it be some kind of a state of utter non-existence? Because if there is no movement taking place at all then it would be just that. Perhaps our idea of this type of liberation is based upon our experience of deep sleep. That state that we have no direct experience of but we infer from our memory of when we lost consciousness and when we regained it again this is not a perfected state, this is not the experience of Buddha. A Buddha is quite active, benefiting sentient beings. For instance a Buddha has to want to benefit sentient beings, so we have to cultivate that now as practitioners. So this is the problem of trying to distinguish between the negative desire and the positive desire, and it often happens that we refer to negative desires as positive desires. It would be much easier if we could just sort of block out all desire whatsoever, and say it's all negative. But would that be nearly as attractive as the ultimate goal? Such an ultimate goal is the plan of most materialists. They are betting that after death there is nothing. They can achieve that without even meditating one minute, it's just going to arise naturally when the breath stops. Of course it's interesting that there is nothing that we know that is like that. It seems like everything always remains something, such as in theory of the conservation of energy, no energy is ever lost it just transforms into something else. But that belief of the materialist is just like any dogmatic belief. There's no evidence for it, nobody has ever come back from the state of nothingness to say how it was.

Okay any more questions. No. Then I have a question.

If it's a color is it necessarily an object of the visual consciousness ?

A: There are for instance the very small particles, they have a color but the visual consciousness can't perceive those, they're objects of mental consciousness. Now the objects of mental consciousness are called phenomena, visual objects, sounds, smells and so forth are also phenomena aren't they ?

So does that mean that the objects of the mental consciousness are the same as the objects of the other five consciousnesses?

The answer to that is that the phenomena which are the objects of the mental consciousness is referring to all the other objects that aren't included as objects of the first five sense consciousness's, such as the color of the very small particle, or even the very small particle itself etc., other consciousness's and so forth

Q: Can a mental consciousness perceive a visual form, a gross visual form not just the subtle?

A: Yes it can, I mentioned an example of it how a visual consciousness perceiving a blue color can be a cause for a mental consciousness.

What do I mean by a gross object?

Does that mean something that's disgusting?

No not in this context. Although sometimes that's what I mean by gross, but in this context a gross object means an object that's composed of many particles, such as a table. It's made up of many particles, and the basic particle that forms a table is that eight fold particle. Then you can think that the hardness of this table comes from the earth element, and that the wood all sticks together this comes from the water element. If you rub this wood with another piece of wood theoretically fire will come this comes from the fire element, and there must be some movement there otherwise I don't think you'd get a nail to go in the wood, and that's the air element. You can see the table and that's due to the visual particles. I think you could even taste the table due to the taste particles and so forth.

Now if visual form, sound, and smell and so forth, if these are all made up of particles which are themselves developments of the four elements why are the four elements contained as tactile objects ? Why aren't they included amongst visual objects or odors or something like that?

This is because it is through tactile consciousness that we mainly know those elements.

Earth is known through it's hardness and hardness is known through tactile consciousness. Water is known through wetness and that is perceived by tactile consciousness. Fire is known by it's being hot and that's perceived by tactile consciousness, Air by it's lightness and that's experienced by tactile consciousness. So without tactile consciousness there would be no way to know those elements. So that's why they are included as objects of the tactile consciousness.

So if you keep those questions and answers in mind you should be able to pass the test on Sunday afternoon. I'm only joking.

Now we leave the form aggregate behind and deal with the four aggregates that are included in mind.

First of all what I mean by mind is that which is clear and knowing. Clear describes it's reality being formless. Buddhism asserts then, that mind is not made of form, it is not composed of physical particles, therefore it can not be reduced to electromagnetic energy. So therefore it is not the brain, it's not neurons and it's not the electrical energy passing through those neurons, nor is it a mere name referring to those objects.

There is one theory that mind is merely an Epi phenomena, which is just a name but it is referring to, for example, according to this way of seeing a chair could be called an epi phenomena because what a chair in fact is, is the legs the seat and the back and that's what a chair is. But we talk about a chair as if it were a gestalt, something greater than the sum of it's parts, something other than the sum of it's parts. Likewise, when we are talking about mind these people would say that all we're really talking about is these electro- chemical responses going on in the body, but they run into some trouble philosophically with that position, because when we are talking about mind, we are not talking about the body We are not talking about the electro-chemical responses going on in the body. Those materialist reductionists would like to eliminate the language of the mind from all language. They would just like to eliminate it, but they can't, so they would like to say that type of language is in itself meaningless, it has it's own internal consistency, but what's really going on that accounts for experience and so forth is the electro-chemical reactions in the body. When you press some body who adheres to this philosophy for some observable evidence that they base their philosophy on, they would give examples of cases where through injecting certain chemicals in the brain, or removing certain parts of the brain and so forth you can bring about these different experiences like making a cat fear a mouse, a mouse being so brave that it will attack a cat. Or by brain damage you can eliminate memories of whole parts of one's life, or through the electrical stimulation of different parts of the brain you can cause such things as gustatory consciousness to arise, or various memories to occur.

So a person who adheres to the non physical nature of the mind will say that such events are merely describing the relationship between the body and the mind, but not the identity of body and mind, that through stimulating a physical organ then a mental experience can take place. Such a relationship is already asserted by Buddhism. For instance, as I said there are five physical faculties upon which the five sense consciousnesses depend. If those faculties are damaged in any way then the consciousnesses will be affected, but they are also quick to point out it's not only that the body affects the mind but the mind can affect the body. For example by visualizing certain channels in the body and concentrating on certain visualized points in those channels you can change the temperature of the body radically. Of course that's an extraordinary example but there are many ordinary ones. For instance the reason why we came here was not necessarily a physical itch, but rather there were reasons in our mind for coming here. While there are certain mental diseases that are treated successfully with chemicals, there are many mental disorders that are best treated by using the mind itself. For example if you desire a BMW., say 240 Turbo drive, black, tinted black windows with a lot of trunk space. If you desire that, but you do not have the money to pay for it, then the best solution is not to take Prozac or some other chemical agent, but rather it's to contemplate the difficulties you would experience being in debt for the rest of your life, how that would last longer than the life of the car, how having that car will not solve all of your problems, that there'll still be you driving it, alone, hungry, looking for some place to drive to and running out of gas.

So thinking like that can replace this image of that car being the most important thing in the world, and although it may not replace that desire it can work on it slowly. Whereas the chemicals may deal with that desire by causing some euphoric state where you may think you don't need anything any more, or it may cause a dullness in the mind where you couldn't bother yourself to generate such desires, but when you come off the chemical those desires once again arise, so at best they can be seen to be temporary solutions, and everybody recognizes that the best solution would be a mental solution such as an insight that sees the reality of the situation.

That insight is gained through a thinking process. It's not gained by taking pills, or by a well balanced diet, with exercise. So that in itself shows the difference between the mind and the body. You can have a person who physically is very healthy, but mentally is a mess. Likewise somebody who is mentally very clear, friendly, soft etc. but physically is a mess.

Those are kinds of examples that illustrate the difference in nature between the mind and the body, and there's many others. Some of the more dramatic examples you find in the experiments that take place in parapsychology, which are phenomena that can't be explained by any physical laws, nor can their existence be denied, but you shouldn't take my word for it, this is something you have to study for yourself. For some people this is very obvious for others it's just a belief but it's not something that is supported by any conviction, in particular a conviction that's based on sound reasoning or direct observation, consequently that belief could be easily shaken, or at the back of the mind there might be a subtle hope that at the time of death every thing ceases, and one won't have to worry about all that bad karma one has been accumulating. For while the mind is clear, (meaning formless), it doesn't mean it doesn't exist. It exists because it has the function of cognition. It apprehends objects, an apprehension which is known as knowing, or cognizing and it is dynamic, it is energetic, it is not a physical energy, but it is non the less functioning obviously. So why not apply the law of conservation of energy to it. There's no reason why it should suddenly stop while all other physical energies keep going in one way or another. Well you can make anything sound reasonable, just because something sounds reasonable that doesn't mean that's the way it is. Yet there are examples of people who seem to confirm the existence of this continuum of mental energy, such as the children who remember former lives, and whose reports are corroborated by authoritative researchers.

Anybody ever heard of a great philosopher and mathematician named Pascal? "Pascal's Wager". Have you ever heard of Pascal's-wager ? You're going to. For the benefit of those who haven't heard of it, I think he was French, he said that if you prepare for the next life and there isn't a next life then you'll have no regrets because you won't be around. If you don't prepare for a next life and there is a next life you'll have big regrets. So there's nothing to lose by preparing for the next life and everything to gain!

So what I mean by mind then is what is clear and knowing. You know what knowing is right, the opposite of not knowing is knowing. Do you know the exact population of France this moment? Nothing comes to mind does it. That's not knowing, there's not an apprehension of an object, such as an appearance that can be seen by the eyes and so forth. Do you know the human population of your house? Suddenly something comes to mind, so that's knowing Inaudible.....

The mental factors are mind that function to perceive the qualities of the object and respond in various ways to the features of the object. Main minds and mental factors are related by being one substance, that is for any main mind there are mental factors which are of the same substance of that main mind, or we could say that mind in general, this thing which is clear and knowing has various functions one of those functions is called main mind and the other functions are called mental factors. So if we take any moment of mind that moment's knowing of the object or the entity of the object is called main mind, and that moment of mind's knowing the various features that make up that object is called mental factors.
This two fold division of mind into main mind and mental factors is likened to a community. Within the community there is a director whose job is to know what's happening in general in the community, and also in that community there would be a cook whose job it is to take care of the preparation of the food. So the director has to know something about what's going on in the kitchen but he doesn't have to know everything, that's the job of the cook. That's an example I heard a long time ago when I first studied this stuff. It's a little bit illuminating but not much.
Rather I prefer the explanation that if you have a moment of mind then it's different functions are being divided into main mind and mental factors, so while you can distinguish main minds from mental factors or one mental factor from another in the way of distinguishing one function from another function they're still all functions of the same moment of mind. For instance. .....

That main mind and it's attendant mental factors, have five similarities to them. The first is that they have the same object of observation, for example take the visual main mind and it's attendant mental factors that are perceiving blue color. The blue color is the object of observation so the visual main mind and it's attendant mental factors are all taking as their object of observation the blue color.

The second similarity is similar aspect, the aspect means when a mind perceives an object then an aspect or an image of that object appears in that consciousness, such as when an object is placed in front of a mirror an image of that object appears in that mirror, in the case of the example that image is called a reflection, in the case of consciousness that image is called an aspect. It is said for instance if you take a piece of clear crystal like one of those nice pieces that are cut with different facets around them and it's clear, if you put that on some nice blue clothe then that crystal will appear to be blue in color. Likewise when a consciousness is perceiving it's object it takes on the aspect of that object, this is not to say that when we are perceiving objects all we are perceiving is aspects in the mind, we are perceiving those objects.

So the main mind and it's attendant mental factors have the same aspect, they also occur simultaneously, therefore they do not have a cause and affect relationship. A main mind and it's attendant mental factors will have the same faculty as it's dominant condition. For example a main visual consciousness and it's attendant mental factors both have the eye faculty as their dominant condition.

They are also said to be of similar substance, for example the feeling mental factor that would be an attendant of a visual consciousness would not be found in some other consciousness.

The reason for mentioning those five similarities is to just get away from the idea that main minds and mental factors can be operating independently of each other at different times, they're all of the same substance.

There are six main minds from visual to mental main minds and those are what constitute the CONSCIOUSNESS aggregate, the fifth of the five aggregates. The mental factors are what compose the second third and forth aggregate.

How are we doing ?
I know there's exhaustion, but so far are you following me?
Q: Can you repeat the five please?
A: Object of observation, Aspect, Time or duration, (the duration is simultaneous), dominant condition, similar substance.
There are fifty one mental factors, I hope you have a lot of ink in your pens, actually there's a lot more than that but fifty one were mentioned to just give you an idea of these various functions in the mind. And these functions were identified principally from the perspective of what brings happiness and what brings suffering, and then from the perspective of someone in a meditative tradition. So from another perspective you may be able to find many other mental factors, and even from the perspective of this tradition there are other mental factors beside the list of fifty one.
Those fifty one mental factors fall into five categories.
The first is known as the omnipresent mental factors. The second is the object ascertaining mental factors, then the virtuous mental factors, then the next is the root afflictions, the next are the secondary afflictions and the last is the variable mental factors. So there was five plus one.
There are five omnipresent mental factors according to either, the Abhidharmakosha or Abhidharmasamuccaya. The Abhidharmakosha has a different list of five similarities. What I'm saying is that the presentation I'm giving here is based upon certain texts. Not all authoritative Buddhist scholars have the same presentation. For instance the fifty one mental factors mentioned by Asanga in his text Abhidharmasamuccaya. His younger brother Vasubandhu wrote a text Abhidharmakosha, and in that text he only mentioned forty eight mental factors. If I remember correctly one text has a group of five similarities between main minds and mental factors that's different from the other ones, and one text says there's five omnipresent mental factors and the other one says there's ten.
Lord Buddha is the one who gave the monks vows, he's the source of the monk's vows, there are a number of different traditions that have arisen over the years of such vows. For instance the tradition of the discipline that exists in Tibet is known as the Mulasarvastivadan.

In Thailand the tradition is known as the Theravadan tradition .
In the Mulasarvastivadan tradition there are 253 vows for a fully ordained monk, whereas in the Theravadan tradition there are 227. So it seems like the Tibetans have more vows. So where did they get them from if it was all based on The Buddha? Well in fact all of those are contained in 227 of the Theravadan tradition. They just have a different way of enumerating them. So like that you have these different scholars that have different ways of enumerating these things, so we can't say the differences indicate that one is right and the other is wrong, they usually have their reasons for their own system.
Omnipresent means that with every moment of mind there are these five omnipresent mental factors operating, therefore one can know implicitly that every moment of mind does not necessarily have all 51 mental factors operating, but it will have these five omnipresent ones.
There's feeling. When you hear the name don't immediately assume you know what it means because we employ names that already have common usage in our respective languages but they have specific definitions in this context. Here the definition of feeling is a mental factor which is the nature of experience, individually experiencing the fruition of virtuous and non virtuous actions. All will become clear shortly.
It's objects are pleasure, pain and that which is neither pleasure or pain. So feeling is the mental factor that experiences pleasure, pain, and neutral experiences. Pleasure is that which when it ceases you want to meet it again. Pain is that experience when it arises you want to separate from it, and the neutral experience is one that when it arises you neither want to separate from it nor to meet it again. Experiences arise from previous actions that we have undertaken. It is the virtuous actions that produce pleasure and the non virtuous that produce pain, in fact the words virtuous and non virtuous are used merely because one produces pleasure and the other produces pain. What we want is pleasure or happiness, an action that brings that is called virtuous it's not because it was declared virtuous by an omnipotent being, it's just another word for good because it gets us what we want, whereas the non virtuous action produces pain.

So this emphasizes then that our experiences of pleasure and pain do not come without causes, nor are their causes some unrelated entity. It's not that our pain or happiness is something that is bestowed upon us by some deity, rather they come from our former actions, so therefore we ourselves are the creators of our future experience, and the person who was in our previous continuum was the creator of our present experiences.
There is no need to visit a clairvoyant and pay a lot of money to know what you were in your former lifetime and to know what you're going to be in your next lifetime. Look at your present experience and you'll know what kind of person you were in the past, look at your present activity and you'll know what kind of experience you'll have in the future. It's chilling!
So, the knowledge, the certain knowledge that virtuous action brings happiness and non virtuous action brings suffering is highly esteemed, having that certainty is something which is highly esteemed. It's praised as the basis of all auspicious doctrines and it's called the correct view of all Buddhists. Buddhists vary in what they call the correct view of reality, but they all agree that virtuous actions bring happiness. Buddhists disagree about what they regard as the correct view of reality, reality is one of those subtle things and because it's so subtle The Buddha gave very different accounts to the different disciples who came to hear him and consequently you have different philosophical schools, but they all agree that virtue brings happiness and non virtue brings suffering. A happy life, at the end of which one could say, "Not bad, it could have been worse", is created by a virtuous action. The experiences that occur during the life, good or bad, are also created by actions, virtuous or non virtuous. We can develop conviction in this, but it is very difficult to know exactly what all those actions were .
Okay so let's stop there today. Let's just sit quietly for a few minutes, give it a chance to all sink in.

So while listening to the subject, it's important to listen in such a way that the teaching becomes in itself an antidote to the causes of our problems. Among the numerous causes of problems we can say there's two types: external and internal. The external causes of our problems are all familiar to us, such as bad weather, obnoxious people, all of these kinds of things that we hear complaints about every day, we read about in the papers and see on TV. and so forth. And if happiness was dependent on the elimination of these outer causes of problems then the whole task would be hopeless, because there's no definite guarantee that any external condition will not become a cause of problems. For instance our best friends, they can turn against us, a beautiful home can become a prison, a tropical beach can become boring, a holiday can become a death sentence. There's nothing to trust in the external circumstances.

Then there are the internal causes of problems. These internal causes of problems such as anger, clinging, and so forth, jealousy, these sorts of minds. So long as we have such disturbing uncontrolled states of mind, then there's going to be misery, but if such uncontrolled disturbing states of mind are eliminated then even poor external conditions can be easily tolerated. It's like the story of how shoes were invented in China. There was an emperor who was raised in the plush environment of his palace, and he decided to go outside one day into his kingdom to see what it was like, he was not wearing any shoes and while walking he stepped on something sharp. He'd never experienced such pain before and it made him very angry. When he returned to the palace he summoned all his ministers, and he declared that they should cover his whole kingdom in leather, thinking that by so doing he would be able to go for a walk without stepping on something sharp. The ministers realized that this was hopelessly impractical and at the very least would cause bankruptcy for the whole empire. One particularly bright minister had a good idea, he thought why not just cover the emperor's feet with leather, it will accomplish the same purpose and be much cheaper. The emperor accepted this idea and thus shoes were invented. The moral of this story is that if one tames ones own inner mind then no matter what external circumstances one might meet good or bad the mind remains stable and at peace. The question is however, is such a thing possible? Nobody wants to be angry but despite that we all from time to time get angry, so how might it be possible to eliminate anger? Similarly no one wants to experience a great loss and yet often it happens that people due to being controlled by desire give up something of great value for something of less value, as if they were temporarily insane. This is just the effect of desire. So although we only want to profit and never lose, still such desire can arise and overcome us.

However such persons as the Buddha demonstrated that it was possible to eliminate these negative minds. So long as they are not eliminated there will not be happiness. When they are eliminated there will be happiness. One thing that is definitely true is that we all want to be happy and not to suffer, therefore at some time we have to pursue this path of eliminating the inner causes of suffering, by whatever means. So long as we avoid that then we will be contradicting our own inner wish. However even the Buddha had to admit it's not easy, and it takes a lot of time. For instance once He generated the spirit of Enlightenment, Bodhicitta it still took three countless great aeons to become a Buddha. I don't know how many years constitute a great aeon, I know that countless is the largest number in the Indian system of counting. It might be similar to that mythological number in English known as zillion which means huge, so a zillion times three aeons, and that was after he had developed a spontaneous Bodhicitta and was a real Bodhisattva. This was after He had spent lifetimes in pursuit of higher states of mind. Giving up kingdoms to meditate in solitude in the mountains, dressed in tree bark, internally generating a conviction in paths leading to liberation, conviction in karma, conviction in the existence of future lives, a dedication to the welfare of others, having more concern for others than himself. So he was already a saint before He became a Bodhisattva, and yet it still took an awful long time to become a Buddha.

So if you feel like it's an enormous undertaking you're right, and if you feel like it's too much to accomplish in this lifetime you're also right. So generally what's done is that a person looks at their worst fault and tries to minimize it, and if at the end of the life you've had any success at all at weakening that thought you can be satisfied, and that's a realistic approach to the spiritual path. If you think that you won't be satisfied at the end of the life unless you've some remarkable attainments like clairvoyance, passing through walls, flying, or with the attitude that is completely disillusioned with the whole of cyclic existence, Bodhicitta or the correct view of reality. If that's what it will take to make you feel satisfied with your life you might be disappointed. For instance if Bodhicitta is the goal to achieve in this lifetime any time you desire something just for yourself you've failed. For instance in the lunch line, at the end of the lunch line there's the plate with all the fruit on it and they're all oranges and apples but only one banana and if you have the thought " I hope nobody takes that banana before I get there! " You've failed ! Or when you walk into the cinema and all the seats in the middle are taken and you get upset you've failed. So how miserable such an aspiration will make one. We shouldn't put these time limits on ourselves. Generating realizations is not like boiling an egg. You can be sure that after four minutes you've got a hard boiled egg, but it's unsure how many years of your practice is going to produce a realization. We read in the biographies of former saints of somebody who suddenly gains a high realization while chopping wood or by looking at a stone as they're walking on the road. This might produce the wrong view that at any moment as you go about your ordinary daily life a realization will dawn without having done anything to create it. We don't know how many lifetimes those saints in biographies spent practicing. You can be sure there were a lot. Take the great yogi Milarepa for instance. Before he met his guru Marpa he killed over thirty people, and yet in that very life he became a Buddha. That might generate the thought that well I haven't killed anybody so I should be able to become a Buddha too, easier, faster. Of course when you read Milarepa's biography you discover that he killed those thirty people by practicing black magic. He could make animals hallucinate. Can you stop a dog from barking just through the power of your mind ? He could cause hail storms. Could you make a cloud cover the sun for just one minute of shade? The master who taught Milarepa black magic regarded Milarepa as the best disciple he'd ever had, and then when he entrusted himself to Marpa, Marpa worked him harder than a mule and yet Milarepa never generated any contempt towards Marpa. He had some pretty unusual qualities that he was born with. How come he was born with those qualities and not me ? In a former lifetime, the life time before he was Milarepa he was a Kadampa Geshe, given up the affairs of that life, dedicated himself to studying and practice, had generated at least the correct intellectual view of reality. So even to do that he must have had some great qualities to bring into that lifetime, which he must have cultivated in a former lifetime and so on.

So while we're listening to a talk on the dharma which is information that is by it's very nature stimulating the good qualities and opposing the bad qualities, then we should at least try in this occasion as much as possible to cultivate the antidotes to the inner sources of our problems. There's all kinds of things that we have probably thought we should practice, such as practicing using ourselves as a resource for other's happiness. That's not necessarily a very common aspiration but it's a very interesting one.

When I was a child I used to pray all the time, not that I was a little angel or anything. I used to pray to get the things I wanted. I'd pray to get toy guns, and all those kinds of prayers that kids usually make, and my prayers would often take the form of "If I was God I would certainly give me these things."

Well as I got older I stopped relying on such an omnipotent being and thought that it might be better if I became the kind of person who could supply others with the things that they needed because if you see something that's missing why trust somebody else to fill it? Why not do it oneself?

So the problem is that there's just not enough help.

There's so many problems in the world and there's just so much need, and if you look around you see so many people who are requesting help. So we could join them and be just one other voice in that great Sea of Plea! Or one could be trying to become the answer, that which fulfills those supplications, and increasingly make oneself a better and better resource for the welfare of others.

Well a thought might arise that the needs or demands of others are endless and it might seem quite a daunting task to become something that can respond effectively. Well The Buddha is pretty incredible, but that's how one becomes a Buddha so a person who has dedicated themselves to become a Buddha for the sake of all beings has a great appreciation of his or her capability. So if one's having the attitude, "Oh I couldn't do that." then one is far from generating the thought of becoming Enlightened. So even if it's just using the past Buddhas as a reason one can just think well I can become a Buddha because they did, because once upon a time they were just like me and if they can develop such perfect qualities then I can too. When I was a teenager I was involved in sports. It was my path to liberation from studies and I remember before we would actually play an opposing team our coach used to give us a pep talk, encouragement. There was one team we were going to play against, they were a lot bigger than us, and in American football it matters if they're bigger than you. I remember something that he said to encourage us, he said " You can beat these guys, they're no different from you they put their pants on one leg at a time just like you." The Buddhas were at one time just like ourselves, they'd get completely carried away by their delusion just like we do. They'd be only concerned with the happiness of this life just like us, but despite all that they were able to achieve such an exulted accomplishment, so we can do the same thing. The very teachings we have at our disposal are the same teachings that they rely on, as far as the explanations and techniques that are available, nothing is missing. It's not as if there was once a certain type of technique to achieve Enlightenment and now there's not.

End side 1 tape 3

In fact there may be more techniques available now than there were in the past, so from the outside everything is there. Now all we have to do from our side is generate the determination and keep it. It's not easy, but so long as we don't generate such a determined attitude, or if we let go of our determination then we're only undermining our wish to be happy and be free from suffering.

Okay so yesterday we finished with FEELING, the mental factor of feeling. We went through the form aggregate of which there were 5 physical sense powers mentioned. There were the objects of the five sense consciousnesses and there was the form which is the object of mental consciousness. So we went into detail yesterday of what all those eleven things were.

The second aggregate is that of Feeling, which is the experience of the maturation of karma of which there are three types, pleasure, pain and neutral feelings and there are some other divisions of feeling, for instance there is the feeling which is the base of attachment, and this is a feeling that accompanies attachment to the attributes or qualities of the desire realm.

The desire realm is one of three realms. These are called desire realm, form realm and formless realm. Here we should understand realm as a state of mind. So the desire realm is a state of mind in which there is desire for the pleasant objects of the senses. So we know what the objects of the senses are, I mentioned those yesterday. Visual forms, sounds, odors etc. and amongst pleasant and unpleasant giving rise pleasurable feeling and painful feeling. So the desire realm is the state of mind that regards such pleasurable feelings as the best. So as long as one is regarding such objects in high esteem then one is a person in the desire realm.

Form and formless realms refer to states of mind that have lost such esteem for the objects of the senses. I shouldn't say lost it, they've transcended it by seeing the shortcomings of such experiences and seeing the superior qualities of the experiences of meditation. The form realm gets it's name from the objects of meditation having form. The formless realm mentality is said to be higher than the form realm, it has transcended the mentality of the form realm by seeing the shortcomings of such a mentality and seeing the superior qualities of the formless realm.

So as there is one feeling which is called the base of attachment, accompanying the attachment to the attributes of the desire realm there is another feeling which is the base of deliverance, and this is a feeling that accompanies the mentality of the form and formless realm, that being the feeling which is the base of deliverance. So the feeling that is the base of attachment is pleasant feeling, pleasurable feeling with respect to objects of the senses and this causes the clinging attachment to arise. Such a pleasurable feeling is viewed unrealistically as true happiness. It is not true happiness. One reason why it is not true happiness is because it can't last, but because it is seen as true happiness the mind grasps onto it and will not let it go and will do anything to keep in touch with it. This is the major obstacle for the human being, of all the various faults this is the main one. In a thanka known as "the Wheel of Life" --that last one hanging up there, it is often painted with a Buddha in each of the five or six realms of cyclic existence and each of those Buddhas is carrying something that represents the antidote to the main suffering of the respective realm, and the Buddha in the human realm is carrying the staff and the bowl of a monk whereas in the hungry ghost realm he's carrying water and food. That is because the hungry ghosts suffer from hunger and thirst mainly, and for the humans it's because humans suffer from desire. That's not such a gross generalization because if you eliminate the conditions of war and illness and poverty, those extremes of human suffering that you find in the world, then you see so many human beings that are destroyed by their desire. Sometimes marriages fail because of desire for somebody other than the partner, because of adultery, and that may result in one or both of the people who are married falling from the level of status in the society that they were in. Or politicians who were honored in society, well how about supreme court judges, high court judges who are honored in society, but because of their sexual misconduct then there's a big scandal and they fall from their position. Teachers who have sexual relations with students and then lose their position as teachers and so on. And these are all people who have plenty of food, clothing and shelter and medicine and all that stuff.

So it's like all those people who are trying to end war where they are, just like at Sarajevo in Bosnia Hercegovina. Well once they eliminate the war then they can look forward to suffering like every one else. Right now they're suffering in a gross way, but then comes the suffering of the uncontrolled desire, where there's always something missing. So this is something that we all try to transcend and generally the main way in which we do that is by weighing the disadvantages against whatever benefit we'd get if we followed the desire. If the disadvantages are really horrendous and the advantage of following the desire is very small, then it's much easier to give up that desire. Unfortunately it's not always that clear, and so consequently it's difficult to give up the desire and it stays, and then one just has to endure it. So there arises the thought "I wonder if there is a state of mind free of such desire, where it just doesn't arise and one could just cruise through this life like the wind. You touch things but leave them as they are not carrying them with you just free".

There's a Zen story. Two Zen monks a master and his disciple come up to a river, it's an old story you may have heard it before. There's a beautiful woman who's trying to cross the river but she needs help. So the master picks her up and carries her across the river. According to the discipline he shouldn't be touching a woman and this is what the disciple was thinking, so on the other side of the river the master and disciple carried on their journey but after sometime the disciple couldn't hold himself back anymore and he said to the master

" How could you pick up that woman?" and the master said

" The important thing is to put her down when the river was crossed, which I did, you on the other hand are still carrying her."

So can you imagine being free of desire? How free you would be! You could enjoy anything but put it down with no second thoughts and I'm not talking about the attitude of a cad, I don't know what you'd call it. I'm not talking about the attitude of somebody who has love affairs and then just disposes of them like that, one night stands. I'm not talking about that. There's nothing high about that, that's somebody who's really possessed by desire, they can't get satisfaction. I'm talking about something quite different. Freedom from desire exists, you get it when you enter the form realm, when you generate this form realm mentality, the desire for the objects of the senses doesn't arise any more.

To generate a form realm mentality requires a cultivation of concentration, the type of concentration where you can stay single pointedly on an object for hours. It generates it's own kind of mental and physical ecstasy, which eclipses the pleasure of the desire realm. Unfortunately it's not very easy to cultivate. Well at least it's nice to know it's possible, but because it's not so very easy, there's very few people who have that freedom from desire and consequently even those people who make it their profession of being desireless have a hard time. That's when we here of all the scandals in religious orders. Their main way of controlling desire is just like everybody else's. The only advantage that they may have is the amount that they separate themselves from the objects of desire, in for instance cloisters. Usually the scandals occur with those people who don't have such separation.

So in the good old days concentration was easier to cultivate they say, I'm not so sure, I think it was always a bit difficult. In a monastery of a thousand people there were probably only a handful who could do it, but the thing is all of us have the same problem, so as long as we have the pleasurable feeling then attachment can arise unless you've abandoned attachment. So lets say we have attachment, what it likes is pleasurable feelings, so whenever pleasurable feeling arises, there's danger of attachment. If attachment arises you've lost your freedom. Usually I don't buy many things, consequently I don't have much interest in shopping so when I walk down a street of shops the impression in my mind is just things, but when I do go shopping, for instance to buy a computer, then if I walk by a shop that sells computers even after I've already bought a computer I can't just walk by that shop thinking thing. My mind gets stuck there I have to stop walking, look at all the things, especially the price to see if I paid more for mine. I might get upset, all of these things that didn't have to happen. So that's a simple example, there are many other examples, where, when the attachment arises your mind gets stuck to the object. Then throughout the day your mind keeps on that object, it comes up again and again, you find your mind plotting in order to get that object. You find that your voice of reason is getting weaker and weaker, your voice of cleverness is getting louder and louder, so you're stuck, you've lost freedom, therefore The Buddha said we have to guard the doors of our senses.

So it's not that a pleasurable feeling is negative, it's the attachment that's negative, the feeling has no ethical quality. Pleasurable feelings aren't virtuous, painful feelings aren't non virtuous. It's just that pleasurable feelings tend to give rise to this mind of clinging attachment and painful feelings give rise to anger. It's also interesting to keep in mind that if a pleasurable feeling is the result of virtuous karma, if that's the case then the object which was a cause of the pleasurable feeling, enabled this pleasurable feeling to occur, such as sunshine. From one point of view, the pleasurable feeling experiencing the sunshine, depends upon the sunshine, but the source of that pleasurable feeling being pleasurable was a previous virtuous action. It's like you can't have a crop without a field, so keeping that in mind, rather than regarding the various objects as sources of happiness, one should pursue virtuous action with the same kind of enthusiasm that we use to pursue those pleasurable objects.

Okay so then the next aggregate is DISCRIMINATION. This is also a mental factor and is an omnipresent mental factor and this one apprehends the uncommon signs of an object. Each object has characteristics which it shares in common with other objects and characteristics that are unique to it, and it is those unique characteristics that enable us to differentiate one object from another. So discrimination is the function of the mind that apprehends those unique characteristics, and there is discrimination that we find accompanying sense consciousnesses and those accompanying mental consciousnesses, and of the mental consciousnesses there are the conceptual consciousnesses and it is the conceptual consciousness of a person who knows a language that has the discrimination that can differentiate objects by means of names. So it is this discrimination mental factor that applies names, identifies objects with names. Sensory consciousness doesn't name objects but it can nonetheless be clear about different objects. It can clearly differentiate say yellow from red.

Discrimination enables us to recognize and differentiate the objects that make up reality.

This is the one that functions when sensory consciousness is operating and on the basis of having clear and distinct perceptions a conceptual discrimination mental factor will name different objects and similarly when hearing true words, then in your mind you're identifying certain things, and giving names to those things you're identifying and that's also discrimination. Also when you identify something as good by depending upon it having the signs and the reasons that's also discrimination.

So there's a discrimination, a reasoned discrimination. This is one that is skilled in relating names with their objects and also that is able to observe the appropriate qualities such as sound is impermanent. Also there's a discrimination that has a clear aspect and a clear object. This is opposed to an unreasoned discrimination, such as one that is unskilled in relating names with their meaning, such as a child who is yet to learn any language, or a discrimination that thinks that sound is permanent, or a discrimination that lacks any clear subjective aspect or object.

That last type of unreasoned discrimination is the discrimination that operates in the highest level of the formless realm, where there is no clear aspect and no clear object appearing to the mind. It's really not a very useful state to generate, but it comes from the belief that discrimination, this faculty of discrimination is a source of the problems.

It's not uncommon to read criticism of discrimination. For instance in a number of spiritual texts that would describe the ultimate state as somehow a unified state. With such expressions as all is one. Now of course discrimination differentiates, identifies and differentiates, which seems to contradict an all is one experience, and that description, based upon the mere description of some high state of mind as all is one, some psychologists have misunderstood what that high state of mind is. For instance in child psychology there is a recognition that as an infant, the child doesn't discriminate between subject and object. A clear subjective ego awareness is yet to arise in the child. This is sometimes called oceanic awareness. In one place Carl Jung thought that the high realizations of these yogis was recovering that state of mind that is possessed by the infant. Which is elevating a primitive consciousness to an exulted state. (That's not what he said), and in another place Freud referred to such high experiences of the yogis as infantile regressions thinking that they were non other than what the infant has. This would be devaluing an exulted state and making it a primitive state. So there's a big difference between lacking discrimination and transcending discrimination. So the infant doesn't have discrimination of subject and object. The yogi does have such discrimination, but within that discrimination has been able to discriminate something that transcends both subject and object and in order to do that, you have to have even more powerful discrimination than other people. So far from achieving high states of mind by eliminating discrimination, such states of mind are achieved by making one's mind that much more powerful.

Another type of discrimination is called discrimination of the small, which is discrimination in the mind of a person in the desire realm. There's another discrimination known as discrimination of the vast, which is discrimination in the mind of a person in the form realm, so from the point of view of the form realm the experiences of the desire realm are small and quite insignificant. Then there's discrimination of the limitless, and this is discrimination that is found in the first two states of the formless realm, where one discriminates limitless space and limitless consciousness. And then there's discrimination of nothingness, which is third state of the formless realm, where one doesn't discriminate anything and that state is like being unconscious. Also a mistake. These different states of mind have been achieved by people who are striving hard for liberation, and in their striving having discovered that the secret for liberation was in the mind itself, or the key for liberation was in the mind itself. They stumbled upon the tremendous capacity for concentration and having this amazing tool tried to achieve liberation merely by it. Concentration that enabled them to turn off parts of their mind, trying to achieve liberation by making themselves unconscious for instance. There's no pain if there's no experience. Experimenting with all kinds of manipulation of the mind with concentration, and by means of this they could achieve what's known as the peak of cyclic existence, in which all of the various disturbing negative thoughts of the desire realm, form realm and the formless realm below the peak, cease functioning. They become free of all that. The only problem is that faults of the peak itself remain, and it doesn't have anything higher than the peak to get rid of those faults, unless you use something else besides concentration. The thing that they miss is the wisdom perceiving emptiness and if you have the wisdom realizing emptiness you can totally abandon all the faults of cyclic existence even without having to generate such a high power of concentration.

So that's the discrimination aggregate.

Any questions ?

Q: As you explained it seems as though we are a community of different tendencies. So how is it possible to have this feeling of oneness ? And this feeling of a self of permanence?

A: So first of all seeing our self as one thing. This is a very common phenomena to think of and it comes from our capacity to conceptualize by means of which we can categorize different things, for instance a crowd of people is actually many people but we can differentiate one crowd from another crowd. We can have one crowd or many crowds and that can have some practical functions, so this capacity is something that is useful. So for instance we are composed of a body and a mind. And when we say body, body includes many things, but rather than having to list all those things for which there's no end because there are just countless atoms in the body and even those things we can see, that is those things we can see under a knife of discrimination are still too many to mention. So we have this capacity to think body by means of which we can be including all the parts of the body or just some of the parts of the body. and also for ourselves it can be useful to refer to that which possesses the body and mind as in the expressions "my body" and "my mind". We don't mean that we are something that can get up and walk away leaving our body and mind behind, the way the owner of a car can get up and leave the car, but it's just a way that we organize our experiences and describe our actions, so this ability to construct things with thoughts can be useful, and by means of this we can differentiate one thing from another. The problem occurs is when we take the thought constructs and forget that in fact they are thought constructs and start thinking that they have an independent life of their own. And based upon the belief that it has an independent life of it's own and also based upon the fact that it doesn't appear to change that one can view it as permanent, we refer to ourselves as I or me, using those same pronouns day in and day out, and also thinking of ourselves in the past, thinking I did this then, and referring to ourselves in the future I will do this, when, and thus it appears that this I is not changing at all, it is exactly the same. And further more, if it exists with a life of it's own, then it would have to be permanent. It wouldn't be depending on anything else such as causes, to exist, but when we analyze this point closer, we see that although the name may remain the same we have indeed changed. In fact it would be a sad state if we remained exactly the same as we were when we were children. The thing is that we seldom analyze and just take things as they appear. So this person, the person, ourself, which is just a thought construct, having functions in terms of practical discrimination and language appears to have a life of it's own, and then it is actually apprehended as having a life of it's own. This apprehension is the ignorance or misknowledge which was recognized by The Buddha as being the root source of all the suffering. Is there anything more to that question that I could address. It's good ? Okay !

Q: You described the different levels of concentration according to each realm, can you repeat them please ?

A: The interesting one would be form and formless realm. First there's desire realm, that has concentration but it's not distinguished, that is it is not special. And the discrimination associated with that one is called the discrimination of the small, that is the objects it can recognize are small in quality in comparison to the objects that are recognized in the form and formless realm. Then with the form and formless realm we start to find very special types of concentration. In the form realm the discrimination there is known as the discrimination of the vast, that is the objects that are identified in the form realm are vastly superior to those of the desire realm. Then the formless realm is said to be superior to the form realm because it is without the faults that are found in the form realm, and within the formless realm there are different types of discrimination. In the formless realm there's four levels known as limitless space, limitless consciousness, nothingness and the fourth is called neither sensation nor no sensation. That fourth level is also called the peak of cyclic existence. The discrimination found in the first two of those is known as the discrimination of the limitless and then that found in third level is known as the discrimination of nothingness and the discrimination found in the fourth level is a type of unreasoned discrimination. It is the type in which there is no clear subjective aspect and no clear object of observation. So let's take a break.

The next aggregate is the one known variously as Compositional factors or Intention and all of the other mental factors are included in this aggregate. I'm using by the way, volition, intention and will synonymously.

We'll begin then with this mental factor of Intention which some people consider to be the most important of the mental factors, and it is defined as the mental factor that moves and directs the mind that accompanies it to it's object, and it has the function of engaging the mind in virtue, non virtue, or those activities that are neither virtuous or non virtuous.

It's something which is extremely powerful, it causes the mind to engage in an object helplessly, like metal filings have to helplessly follow a magnet. If you drag a magnet over metal filings then they just have to follow it, they have no choice. Sometimes it happens that a person notices that they're just not in control of their life, they would like to go in a particular direction but they are helplessly going in another direction. That can be striking because it makes you wonder, who's in charge? We have these expressions "this is my body and this is my mind." "I want to do this, I don't want to do that ". " So how come my body and mind don't go the way I want them to go ?" Remember when I described this I, this person, as a mere mental construct, aside from qualities that we might conceptually give it, it doesn't have any qualities itself. For instance when you have the thought I am walking, it's ability to walk is actually borrowed from the body or in other words because the body is walking one can have the thought I am walking. It's not like the body is walking and also I am walking and we're sort of walking hand in hand. And likewise when there is the thought I am going to do it, in fact it is the mental factor that is thinking do it, that is the impulse that produces the activity and on the basis of that impulse we can have the thought "I" am doing it. So it's that impulse that's the actual creator of things, and that's why it's considered so important, because there's also the I that's designated by depending upon feeling, such as I feel pain or I feel pleasure, so we can have such thoughts because there's the Feeling mental factor experiencing pain or pleasure and then there is this conceptual process that invents this character known as ""I" on the basis of that.

Now the experiences then are derived from this creator function of intention. We would like to have it that the only kind of feelings we would have would be the pleasurable sort as the basis of our thought "I". In order for that to happen then this creator intention has to be only going in a virtuous direction and thus we can only be a virtuous person if our mental factor intention is directing us virtuously.

Now is the mental factor Intention susceptible to persuasion ? Of course! It doesn't exist on it's own independent of the other mental factors. Often it is something that arises after a considerable amount of thinking. Like if you have to make a decision about whether you go on a long trip or not. There you use your faculties of discrimination and so forth to weigh the advantages and disadvantages of such a trip. When you think about being in such a place a pleasurable experience may arise causing the desire to meet with such an object which also influences the thinking process. There might be a painful experience associated with the place you're staying in, causing the thought to separate from it as soon as possible. This can also influence the thinking process and at a certain point all of this thinking concludes in this intention to do it. Then that intention starts taking the mind in that direction and at that point you're just along for the ride, like a surfer on a wave, or more accurately a thought construct designated on the basis of this intention that's in motion.

Every conscious action we do has intention going in either a virtuous or a non virtuous way or a neutral way. So we are acting continuously, throughout the day we have numerous intentions that we set, and those intentions don't necessarily cease immediately. .....Let's say in my example of going to a place the intention of going to that place can take you to that place but it is not the case that that process of intentionality totally stops once you get there. That whole process is something that's remembered in the mind and it can repeat itself, and has many different effects. Anyway this whole thing is the subject of karma, so I'm going to have to move on. But for instance you can have effects even after this life, for instance at the time of death it's said that as a person goes through the death process they can have numerous visions, people who have had near death experiences report having had the experience of their whole life flashing in front of them. And having seen their life flash in front of them it causes to make some evaluation. Certain things in their life stand out more than others, they identify more strongly with a certain type of behavior than other behaviors, that they witness in such visions. Or in using the language of this description of Intention, there arises from it's latent state, a process of intentionality, that had been operating in the past but then went latent, and then due to the circumstances of death it became active again, and due to the association that we have with the thought "I" in relation to that intentionality process, there you go again another ride, but in this case the intentionality as it takes "you" the mere thought construct on the basis of it. It's taking you without your body because you've left that behind now. However it may be the case for this intentionality to get to it's object, to get to it's aim it will need a physical body. But it only uses a physical body which is necessary to get to it's aim, and there's a great many varieties of physical bodies. If your aim (in my other example of intention) of going on a trip was to go south in the winter and that was the intentionality that happens to resurrect itself at the time of death, then maybe all you need to accomplish that again is the body of a bird, because the mind is not linked with any specific type of body. The body is only a vehicle for the mind, and each body due to it's own nature, allows certain kinds of mental experiences to take place. In some ways we could say that the rebirth is the dominant condition for the experience of life, that is the mind coming together with a certain kind of body then gives that mind access to a certain kind of experience. The unique characteristic of the human body is that it's nervous system supports an unlimited development of intelligence. Therefore the human body is the best sort of body for the person who is aspiring for liberation, because in order to get liberation you have to develop this penetrative insight into the way things exist. This doesn't mean just any kind of human body. It has to be a human body that has all it's senses working properly, and a human body in a place in which it is not too easy and not too difficult to find the necessities of life. It can't be too difficult because if that's the case you never have any free time to explore such questions as why do things exist the way they do ? And we know such people that just dismiss such thoughts as useless philosophy and they have to get on with their work of making money and supporting their various responsibilities. But if life is too easy then that is also a problem, because the mind gets sluggish, and thus there's no incentive for the cultivation of intelligence, so it has to be somewhat challenging as human beings rely upon their intelligence to survive. That's why the practice of a person who is mainly trying to achieve a higher rebirth consists of the practice of ethics.

There are many types of ethics, one type of ethics is the ethics of restraint, which is restraining yourself from an action that will bring you some immediate pleasure, because you recognize in the long run it's going to be problematic, and although the experience of denying oneself this pleasure is painful, one can see that in the long run there is going to be great benefit. So even an animal can see what's immediately in front of it, so in this case for the person practicing ethics what's immediately in front of this person is pleasure to be had and pain if I don't take it. What enables a person to restrain themselves and not be miserable is the ability to imagine something in the future which the animals can't do. That requires quite a development of intelligence.

So one then is exercising this intelligence in order to get a greater benefit even at the cost of a short term sacrifice. That is especially the case for the person who is sacrificing the potential experiences of this life in order to get even better things in the future life, because this life is tangible, it is something that you see and you have, whether there is a future life you can't tell by seeing, tasting and smelling. You can only know that with intelligence. So for the person who is trying to get a good rebirth and avoid a bad rebirth, all of this is done through the power of their intelligence and this person is putting a higher priority on the use of their intelligence than just the instincts of taking what is pleasurable and trying to get rid of what is immediately painful. So such a person is likely then to be reborn with the type of a body that will support the further development of such intelligence. They would get for instance, a human body, in a place where they would have access to the type of education where they could learn about higher and higher states of happiness.

Any questions about that?

I wish I was wrong !

But I think that's what the dharma says. That's what The Buddha had in mind. Even though I hate to hear it ! Due to the kindness of my teachers I just can't help myself but I have to say those things.

They say that the dharma is like a mirror, in that a mirror is something that you use to see if you have any dirt on your face, so that you can then wash it off, and similarly the dharma is something that you can use to see if you have any faults, any mistaken conduct and so forth. Then you can eliminate those faults and change your conduct. So the fact that one might squirm a little bit or feel uncomfortable when one is hearing the dharma doesn't mean that it is wrong.

Q: Is it possible that Volition can bring us to activities helplessly and is it possible to influence the volition and in this case is this influence an intention ?

A: There are many other mental factors beside intention, and for instance when I was talking about generating the intention to go somewhere there was a whole thought process that led up to that. It is not an absolute that a specific intention has to arise, it's not like a whole package ready to go, it's dependent upon various conditions, for instance through the power of intelligence you can determine that the aim of a specific intention is undesirable and therefore you don't allow that intention to arise. Also the intention is usually taking place within a context of a person and that person's environment, and so that person has various likes and dislikes and then the intention is the means by which that person is able to get what they want and avoid what they don't want, so the force of the intention is dependent upon the way in which that person is perceived. For instance if you're dreaming, and you're chased by some monster in the dream, then the intention to get away from that monster is dependent upon you believing that you are real in that dream.

Then the intention to get away doesn't arise because there is nobody who has to really escape from any thing really frightening. So like that the Buddha discovered that the degree of reality that we attribute to ourselves is more than is actually there, and when we discover that we are empty of that extra reality, then all of the intentionalities that were created in the past that were dependent upon this exaggerated view of oneself no longer have any control over oneself. That's when one is liberated. That's why the whole thrust of The Buddha's teachings, or the emphasis of The Buddha's teachings is the discovery of the actuality, of the true reality of the person. Sometimes when people hear about the teaching of karma there comes in their mind the idea of predetermination, as if they are locked in an experience or a process that you can't do anything about, but as intention is something that arises on it's causes and it's conditions, and these causes and conditions are not things that are fixed, we can get control over this karma. In other words we can get control over this intention.

Did you have a question?
(Complicated question asked)_
It's only when you study a lot that it all becomes clear because the Buddha dharma has so many topics within it. We have an expression that you can't see the forest because of the trees, which means that when you're in a forest and you see the individual trees there's so many of them the idea of forest doesn't come to mind and likewise as we're studying all the details of the dharma a unified view, an overview doesn't come to mind. So for instance yesterday I talked about how there must be a continuation of mind and although it wasn't everything that can be said about it I'm not going to spend any more time on it.
What you said today about the possibility of there being animal mind, preta mind and so forth, that's true. Just as it's the case that a human being can generate a mind of the form realm and formless realm, which are also actual states of rebirth because a human being can generate the certain types of concentration that are concentrations of the form and formless realms, so also the human being can generate animal minds, hungry ghost minds and just as a person takes rebirth in form and formless realms because of generating the form and formless concentrations, so the human being can take rebirth as an animal because of generating an animalistic mentality. There are certain times in our life where these states of mind appear evidently and we even have expressions for that like a person is behaving unreasonably fearfully we may say they're "chicken" and there's a lot of these expressions, animal names that are given to certain types of behavior, and that's because that behavior doesn't conform with the dignity of the human being.
So if one dies with that type of mentality active then you get the body that best accords with that mentality and likewise with liberation. Liberation is a state of peace, one has been pacified of the disturbing negative thoughts, and being forced uncontrollably to take rebirth. So the source of the disturbing negative thoughts and karma is the ignorant misconception of the self. So when the person through the cultivation of a special insight into reality is able to completely abandon that conception of self and thus all the other afflictions and karma

by virtue of eliminating their foundation, then that person is said to be liberated even though they are still a human being, and after death who knows where that person goes. Their mental continuum doesn't cease. They still have the experience of liberation. The continuum of mind is not something that is dependent upon ignorance, as ignorance is mind that is distorted, so all we're doing is correcting the distortion. So all of this experience like our whole life experience here, is like when we got off the highway to get on a shortcut and we got lost, and it became a nightmare. So when you get liberated it's like finding your way back home again. What you do there, we who are still lost can only just guess.

Remember the definition of mind, clear and knowing. Mind, consciousness, are synonymous and main minds and mental factors are minds, because they are clear and knowing. They are products as we know. The visual consciousness for example arises by depending upon a visual object, an eye sense faculty and the immediately preceding moment of consciousness.

So then the mind that we have now what is it's original cause (our present mind today thinking in this moment)? What is it's original cause ?

That would be the first moment of consciousness in the womb. That would have been a mental consciousness

(Missing approx. 4 minutes.)

in all three realms, desire, form and formless realms it comes in the general category of mental factors known as object ascertaining mental factors and it is defined as a mental factor of fine discrimination, which can discriminate between whether a thing is virtuous or non virtuous. Now this definition is a biased one, it is biased from the point of view of how intelligence should be employed along the spiritual path. Using the faculty of mind to discriminate what sort of story you are going to tell somebody in order to convince them to buy your product might be the same mental factor but it doesn't have this definition. So this intelligence, mental factor in Sanskrit is called prajna, which is often translated as wisdom, but you can also translate it as intelligence based upon the definition of being fine discrimination which is something which sounds like intelligence. But if we call it wisdom we certainly put it in a different category than the cleverness of buying and selling things and it is a mental factor that you only find with the mental consciousness.

The five sense consciousnesses do not have this mental factor of intelligence, also for example concentration that's also another object ascertaining mental factor and this enables one to focus single pointedly on an object without being distracted by excitement or laxity, this too is only a mental consciousness, you can't develop your concentration merely by looking at something with the eyes, there has to be a mental thought for instance going on that produces an image or that you use to focus single pointedly with. This mental factor concentration is said to function to increase wisdom, intelligence, because if you can focus single pointedly on something for a long time then that enables you to analyze very finely all of the qualities and characteristics of a thing, particularly determining whether the thing exists in the way it appears.

Concentration is something that depends upon another object ascertaining mental factor which is known as mindfulness. Mindfulness is the factor of not forgetting and it functions in the way of holding any object without letting it go. In this context it's mainly referring to virtuous objects as this is a presentation of mind and mental factors that are either supportive or destructive of the path to liberation. So if you want to have good concentration then you have this ability to bring to mind an object and hold it there. To do that you need effort, which is found in the category of virtuous mental factors , this effort is the mental factor that delights in virtue and it functions to cause new qualities to develop and old qualities to reach perfection. It's essential in the bringing to conclusion any virtuous work. It is a specific type of endeavor, not all types of endeavor are this specific mental factor effort. This one is delighting in virtue, delighting in making money is not the same thing, due to delight in making money a person can generate a lot of energy and also use up all their time. From the point of view of the definition of effort that was given here, that type of endeavor is called laziness, the type of endeavor of rejoicing or delighting in making money is called laziness. Now from the point of view of the person who delights in making money, the person who's spending all their life meditating and studying is lazy. The person who is devoting their life the meditation and studying can regard this other person as lazy, both are exerting effort but they have different results. The industrialist has the result of great wealth, the spiritual practitioner has the result of liberation and Enlightenment. So after the industrialist gets all of their money are they happy ? No they're not, and they will say so. So therefore they've wasted their time. The person who gets liberation and Enlightenment is happy. So they didn't waste their time.

So if we judge laziness or not being lazy on the basis of getting the results you want then this person who delights in virtue is the one who is not lazy and so from this point of view engaging in other activities is a laziness and that laziness undermines their effort. There's different kinds of laziness. Laziness is a mental factor that you find among the twenty secondary afflictions. It's defined as the mind that does not delight in virtue and it has different types. Such as delighting in the non virtues, delighting in doing nothing. Delighting in doing nothing is something that you discover when you're relaxing in your favorite chair in front of the television and somebody asks you to do something, then you discover how much you enjoy sitting in that chair doing nothing. There's other forms of laziness, one of which is self discouragement, such as thinking that you can't possibly enter into the spiritual path, thinking like I just couldn't do it. "That's okay for those high beings but not for me." Okay so that thought is a form of laziness. The Buddha said that "even if a mosquito made the effort it could become a Buddha, you human beings have more capacity than a mosquito all that's lacking is effort". Remember effort is delighting in virtue. So this is the key. Sometimes the expression of putting effort into something appears to the mind like drudgery, like work, sweating, breaking one's nails. There's expressions like I don't know if you have in French. We have an expression for a person "working like a mule."

"working like a mule" If you ever watch a mule work it's real drudgery.

But here idea of effort is delighting in virtue. Enjoying it, this comes from aspiration which is an object ascertaining mental factor, which is a mental factor that having ascertained a virtuous object then seeks it. This mental factor arises from the virtuous mental factor of faith. The virtuous mental factor of faith is a mind that causes peace with respect to a valid object, it's a mental factor that has a valid object and causes all the disturbing thoughts to be removed from the mind when you focus on that object. There's different types.

One is the faith of conviction which arises by depending upon reasons, such that one's mind has penetrated to whatever that object is, so that is you know what that object is. Then there is a purifying faith that with respect to the qualities that one sees the object having causes the mind to have a peace or tranquillity that arises in the heart, a kind of joy. Like for instance sometimes when you read biographies of great saints and there you become aware of the qualities that such a person exhibited and that causes a kind of joyful energy in your heart then from this can come the aspiration to achieve such qualities oneself. The mental factor of effort sustains that aspiration.

There's another object ascertaining mental factor called belief and that mental factor takes as it's object an object that has been ascertained and holds that object in the face of all discouragement. So if somebody were to tell you no it's not true , but if you have this mental factor of belief then it wouldn't matter what they said you'd still hold that as true. So by depending then on faith the aspiration arises so faith will arise by coming to know for instance the different qualities of an object or the different reasons that validate the existence of the object and that's obtained by for instance listening and studying. Some conviction comes from thinking about what you've been studying and listening to. Aspiration then arises. Then effort comes, with that effort seeing the various qualities, the various functions that say concentration can give you and you

aspire to achieve that. Then you generate the effort to do so. Through this effort one cultivates mindfulness and through mindfulness you'll be able to hold the object throughout the whole meditation period. Then through another mental factor called introspection which is a type of intelligence you analyze whether or not any subtle factors are affecting the concentration, any subtle negative mental factors are affecting the concentration such as the secondary afflictions of excitement and laxity. We are then through the exercise of the virtuous mental factor of conscientiousness which is a combination of four other virtuous mental factors, those being the mental factors of detachment, non anger, non ignorance and effort. Then one avoids any kind of action that is not conducive to the spiritual development and thus applies whatever antidotes are necessary to eliminate these adverse factors of excitement and laxity, until one arrives at a place where these negative mental factors don't occur at all. Then you have to break the habit of utilizing this mental factor of introspection, because although it was helpful at the time, it still divides your attention between the object of concentration and the state of mind you have. For this you employ the virtuous mental factor known as equanimity, which is a state of mind that remains in an equal state free from excitement and laxity, which sounds like a type of contentment, which then counters this impulse to resort to introspection. Then through this, one arrives at single pointedness, which is achieved through the power of familiarity, which is brought about through the mental factor of mindfulness, of being able to hold the object without losing it. This single pointedness then gives rise to the virtuous mental factor known as pliancy, which provides one with the ability to use the mind in whatever way you want. Pliancy is said to be the actual antidote to laziness. Although laziness and effort counteract each other it is pliancy that eliminates any danger of laziness because then you can use your mind to do any virtuous activity without any resistance, like for instance if there was an opportunity to take precepts in the early morning, a person who generated pliancy, as soon as they have the thought to take precepts then the mind would just go there. Without pliancy then when the thought to take precepts arises it might be followed by the thought to not take precepts. This mental pliancy can produce a physical pliancy in which the body also gives no resistance to virtuous activities, in particular this meditative activity. The body feels extremely light, like a cotton ball. There's no pain in the knees or the back or any thing like that. Then due to the physical pliancy then that gives rise to a physical joy, then that physical joy gives rise to a mental joy. So those two joys indicate that one has arrived at the type of concentration that is known as calm abiding, which is in the category of an actual dhyana which is a mind of the form realm. Then by means of this state of mind one can cultivate intelligence with respect to the object reality, that is then using the mental factor of fine discrimination, and when that fine discrimination enhances one's concentration instead of dividing it one achieves penetrative insight or higher seeing. This is also known as the yoga or union of calm abiding and penetrative insight. Quite a high achievement. With such an achievement one enters into what's known as the path of preparation, and due to the force of familiarity, that penetrative insight perceiving reality (which at this stage is still just a conceptual mind) will become a direct experience of reality, known as the path of seeing. When you achieve the path of seeing you longer create any more karma and you don't take rebirth through the force of karma. You're not done yet though. There's still the path of meditation to go before you reach the path of no more learning. The path of no more learning is the state of liberation. It gets it's name because you no longer have to learn anything more to achieve liberation.

So there was a little presentation of how these different mental factors are operating. There wasn't enough time to go into all of them, but you get some idea. The last aggregate, the fifth one is these six main minds which I mentioned before. Somebody asked at lunch whether or not there are any more than six. According to say, the Prasangika school of Buddhist philosophy there are only six, but within mental consciousness you can divide between gross forms and subtle forms. In the Cittamatrin school that follows scripture, you find a presentation of eight consciousnesses. There is another school whose presentation asserts there is only one consciousness, and it just looks out through the different doors of the senses like one person in a house with many windows.

In the presentation of eight consciousnesses, there are the six that were first mentioned, then a seventh one, known as the afflicted consciousness and the eighth one known as the foundation consciousness. So there are these different schools of thought. The Cittamatrin following reasoning just asserts six consciousnesses, so even the same school can't agree. The Cittamatrin school following scripture would refer to such scriptures of the Buddha as the Lankavatara sutra which mentions the eight consciousnesses. But the great logician Dharmakirti who had a special psychic power by means of which he could never be defeated in debate, (much to the annoyance of many non Buddhists) could not accept that there were eight consciousnesses. He found that the afflicted mind was part of mental consciousness, and that the various functions for which the foundation consciousness was asserted to be responsible could also be explained by the mental consciousness.

You might be attending teachings on tantra and you might hear such expressions as "clear light consciousness". The Prasangika's would say that this would be an example of a subtle mental consciousness and also all the conceptual or thought consciousnesses are mental consciousnesses. Dreams would be a mental consciousness, although we can sometimes talk about hearing and seeing in dreams, such hearing and seeing should be properties of auditory and visual consciousnesses shouldn't they? The Prasangika's would say dream visual consciousness and dream auditory consciousness, they just use conventional expressions. According to them there doesn't have to be any more validity for a thing than just how it's used conventionally, because they say that all things are existing merely by name and thought. But that's all a subject of next month's seminar, so you have to stay tuned to that next episode. "Aggregates 2." The sequel to "Aggregates 1"

Any questions?

So let's just sit for a couple of minutes and try to digest the things that were said.

Please dedicate the effort that we've made on this weekend that all those beings who have yet to generate the aspiration for Enlightenment may quickly do so, that those who have already generated such an aspiration will develop it further and oneself will quickly become a fully Enlightened being so one can lead everyone else without exception to that very same state.

---

end of file

FOOD FOR THOUGHT:
Eighteen Talks on the Training of the Heart

by

Ajaan Lee Dhammadharo
(Phra Suddhidhammaransi Gambhiramedhacariya)

Translated from the Thai by Thanissaro Bhikkhu
(Geoffrey DeGraff)

Metta Forest Monastery
PO Box 1409
Valley Center, CA 92082

Transcription: David Savage
Proofreading: Thanissaro Bhikkhu
Formatting: John Bullitt

* * *

This work may be freely copied, printed, and redistributed provided it is offered free of any charge.
Otherwise, all rights reserved.

* * *

DharmaNet Edition 1995

This electronic edition is offered for free distribution
via DharmaNet by arrangement with the translator.

DharmaNet International

P.O. Box 4951, Berkeley CA 94704-4951

* * * * * * * *

CONTENTS

Introduction
Taking the Long View
An Inner Mainstay
Trading Outer Wealth for Inner Wealth
Bodily Debts
Nightsoil for the Heart
The Honest Truth
Self-reliance
The Mind Aflame
Food for the Mind
First Things First
Quiet Breathing Centered Within Getting Acquainted Inside
Stop & Think
Heightened Consciousness
Respect for the Truth
Serving a Purpose
Free at Last

* * * * * * * *

INTRODUCTION

This book is an introduction to the Buddhist practice of training the heart. It is taken from the talks of Phra Ajaan Lee Dhammadharo, a teacher in the Thai forest tradition of meditation, and is called //Food for Thought// because it invites the reader to fill in the spaces suggested by the talks -- to reflect on how the images and teachings they contain relate to one another and to one's own situation in life.

Two of the talks included here, 'Quiet Breathing' and 'Centered Within', briefly describe a technique of breath meditation aimed at giving rise to a centered and discerning state of mind. The rest of the talks deal with how to use such a state of mind in dealing with the problems of life: the day-to-day problems of anger, anxiety, disappointment, etc., and the larger problems of ageing, illness, and death.

In other words, this is a book concerned less with the techniques of meditation than with its meaning and worth: the questions of why should one train the heart to begin with, what personal qualities are involved in its training, and how to make the best use of it as it becomes trained. Readers interested in more detailed instructions in the techniques of formal meditation can find them in Ajaan Lee's other books -- especially //Keeping the Breath in Mind// and //Inner Strength// -- although it is wise to reflect on the sorts of questions raised by this book before actually sitting down to the practice.

The talks translated here are actually reconstructions of Ajaan Lee's talks made by two of his followers -- a nun, Arun Abhivanna, and a monk, Phra Bunkuu Anuvaddhano -- based on notes they made while listening to him teach. Some of the reconstructions are fairly fragmentary and disjointed, and in presenting them here I have had to edit them somewhat, cutting extraneous passages, expanding on shorthand references to points of formal doctrine, and filling in gaps by collating passages from different talks dealing with the same topic. Aside from changes of this sort, though, I have tried my best to convey both the letter and spirit of Ajaan Lee's message.

I have also tried to keep the use of Pali words in the translation to a minimum. In all cases where English equivalents have been substituted for Pali terms, I have chosen to convey the meanings Ajaan Lee gives to these terms in his writings, even when this has meant departing from the interpretations given to these terms by scholars. A few Pali terms, though, have no adequate English equivalents, so here is a brief glossary of the ones left untranslated or unexplained in this book:

ARAHANT: A person who has gained liberation from mental defilement and the cycle of death and rebirth.

BRAHMA: An inhabitant of the heavens of form and formlessness corresponding to the levels of meditative absorption in physical and non-physical objects.

BUDDHO: Awake; enlightened. An epithet of the Buddha.

DHAMMA (DHARMA): The truth in and of itself; the right natural order of things. Also, the Buddha's teachings on these topics and the practice of those teachings aimed at realizing the true nature of the mind in and of itself.

KAMMA (KARMA): Intentional acts, which create good or bad results in accordance with the quality of the intention. Kamma debts are the moral debts one owes to others for having caused them hardships or difficulties.

NIBBANA (NIRVANA): Liberation; the unbinding of the mind from mental defilement and the cycle of death and rebirth. As this term refers also to the extinguishing of fire, it carries connotations of stilling, cooling and peace. (According to the physics taught at the time of the Buddha, a burning fire seizes or adheres to its fuel; when extinguished, it is unbound.)

SANGHA: The followers of the Buddha who have practiced his teachings at least to the point of gaining entry to the stream to Liberation. To take refuge in the Buddha, Dhamma, and Sangha means to take them as the guide in one's search for happiness and to make the effort to give rise to their qualities within oneself.

* * *

My hope is that the teachings in this book will serve as more than just food for thought, and that they will inspire the reader to search for the inner worth and happiness that come with the practice of training the heart.

Thanissaro Bhikkhu
(Geoffrey DeGraff)

January, 1989

* * * * * * * *

TAKING THE LONG VIEW
August 4, 1957

Most of us tend to concern ourselves only with short, small, and narrow things. For instance, we think that there isn't much to human life -- we're born and then we die -- so we pay attention only to our stomachs and appetites. There's hardly anyone who thinks further than that, who thinks out past death. This is why we're short-sighted and don't think of developing any goodness or virtues within ourselves, because we don't see the truth and the extremely important benefits we'll gain from these things in the future.

Actually, the affairs of each person are really long and drawn out, and not at all short. If they were short, we'd all know where we came from and how we got where we are. The same would hold true for the future: If our affairs were really a short story, we'd know where we're going and what we'll be after death.

But the truth of the matter is that almost no one knows these things about themselves. The only ones who do know are those whose minds are strong in goodness and virtue, and who have developed purity to the point where they gain the intuitive understanding that enables them to see where they've come from and where they're going. These people have the inner eye, which is why they are able to see things past and future. Sometimes they can see not only their own, but also other people's affairs. This is what makes them realize the hardships and difficulties suffered by human beings and other living beings born into this world. They see the cycle of birth, ageing, illness, and death. They see their past lives, both good and bad, and this makes them feel a sense of dismay and dispassion, disenchanted with the idea of ever being born again. As a result, they try to develop their goodness and virtues even further so that they can reduce the number of times they'll have to be reborn. For example, Stream-enterers -- those who have entered the stream to Liberation (nibbana) -- will be reborn at most only seven more times and then will never have to be reborn again. Once-returners will be reborn in the human world only once more, while Non-returners will be reborn in the Brahma worlds and gain Liberation there.

As for Stream-enterers, even though they have to be reborn, they're reborn in secure places. They aren't reborn in states of deprivation, such as the realms of hungry shades, angry demons, or common animals. They're reborn as human beings, but as special human beings, not like the rest of us. How are they special? They have few defilements in their hearts, not thick defilements like ordinary people. They have a built-in sense of conscience and scrupulousness. Even though they may do wrong from time to time, they see the damage it does and feel a sense of shame, so that they won't want their various defilements to lead them into doing wrong ever again.

People disenchanted with rebirth make an extra effort to build up their virtues so that they won't have to come back and be reborn. If you want to cut down the number of times you'll take rebirth, you should steadily increase your inner quality and worth. In other words, make your heart clean and bright with generosity, moral virtue, and meditation. Keep your thoughts, words, and deeds at equilibrium, secluded from evil both inside and out. If you have no vices in word and deed, that's called being secluded from outside evil. If your mind is firmly centered in concentration and free from obstructing distractions, that's called being secluded from inside evil. This way you can be at peace and at ease both within and without. As the Buddha said, 'Happy is the person content in seclusion.'

When this kind of seclusion arises in the mind, all sorts of worthwhile qualities will come flowing in without stop. The heart will keep growing higher and higher, until it no longer wants anything at all. If you used to eat a lot, you won't want to eat a lot. If you used to eat in moderation, there'll be times when you won't want to eat at all. If you used to talk a lot, you won't want to talk a lot. If you used to sleep a lot, you'll want to sleep only a little. However you live, the heart will be entirely happy, with no more danger to fear from anyone. This is how you cut down the number of times you'll take rebirth.

* * *

If you see any areas in which you're still lacking in inner worth, you should try to fill in the lack right away. Be steady in your practice of meditation and make your mind clear, free from the distractions that will drag it down into the dirt. Dirt is where animals live -- pigs, dogs, ducks, chickens, and cows. It's no place for human beings. If you're really a human being, you have to like living in clean places, free from danger and germs. This is why the Buddha praised seclusion as the well-spring of happiness. So try to find a secluded spot for yourself to stay within the mind, secluded from hindering distractions. Make your mind as bright as a jewel, and don't let temptation come along and try to trade garbage for the good things you've got. You have to be mindful at all times, so don't let yourself be absent-minded or forgetful.

* * *

If your mind doesn't stay with your body in the present, all sorts of evil things -- all sorts of distractions -- will come flowing in to overwhelm it, making it fall away from its inner worth, just as a vacant house is sure to become a nest of spiders, termites, and all sorts of animals. If you keep your mind firmly with the body in the present, you'll be safe. Like a person on a big ship in the middle of a smooth sea free from wind and waves: Everywhere you look is clear and wide open. You can see far. Your eyes are quiet with regard to sights, your ears quiet with regard to sounds, and so on with your other senses. Your mind is quiet with regard to thoughts of sensuality, ill will, and harm. The mind is in a state of seclusion, calm and at peace. This is where we'll let go of our sense of 'me' and 'mine', and reach the further shore, free from constraints and bonds.

* * * * * * * *

AN INNER MAINSTAY

August 28, 1957

Normally, our hearts can hardly ever sit still. They have to think about all kinds of thoughts and ideas, both good and bad. When good things happen, we keep them to think about. When bad things happen, we keep them to think about. When we succeed or fail at anything, we keep it to think about. This shows how impoverished the mind is. When it thinks about things it likes, it develops sensual craving. When it thinks about things that are possible, it develops craving for possibilities. When it thinks about things that are impossible, it develops craving for impossibilities, all without our realizing it. This is called unawareness. It's because of this unawareness that we have thoughts, judgments, and worries that form the well-spring for likes, dislikes, and attachments.

Sometimes the things we think about can come true in line with our thoughts; sometimes they can't. While there's at least //some// use in thinking about things that are possible, we like to go to the effort of thinking about things that are out of the question. I.e., when certain things are no longer possible, we still hold onto them to the point where we feel mistreated or depressed. We keep trying to get results out of things that can no longer be. When our hopes aren't satisfied, we latch onto our dissatisfaction; when they //are// satisfied, we latch onto our satisfaction. This gives rise to likes and dislikes. We latch onto thoughts of the future and thoughts of the past. Most of us, when we succeed at something, latch onto our happiness. When we don't succeed, we latch onto our disappointment. Sometimes we latch onto things that are good -- although latching onto goodness leaves us //some// way to crawl along. Sometimes we actually latch onto things that are clearly bad.

This is what made the Buddha feel such pity for us human beings. In what way? He pitied our stupidity in not understanding what suffering is. We know that red ants can really hurt when they bite us, yet we go stick our heads in a red ant nest and then sit around in pain and torment. What good do we get out of it?

When we see good or bad sights with our eyes, we latch onto them. When we hear good or bad sounds with our ears, we latch onto them. When we smell good or bad odors, taste good or bad flavors, feel good or bad sensations, or think good or bad thoughts, we latch onto them -- so we end up all encumbered with sights dangling from our eyes, sounds dangling from both of our ears, odors dangling from the tip of our nose, flavors dangling from the tip of our tongue, tactile sensations dangling all over our body, and thoughts dangling from our mind. This way, sights are sure to close off our eyes, sounds close off our ears, odors close off our nostrils, flavors close off our tongue, tactile sensations close off our body, and thoughts close off our mind. When our senses are completely closed off in this way, we're in the dark -- the darkness of unawareness -- groping around without finding the right way, unable to go any way at all. Our body is weighed down and our mind is dark. This is called harming yourself, killing yourself, destroying your own chances for progress.

Thoughts are addictive, and especially when they're about things that are bad. We remember them long and think of them often. This is delusion, one of the camp-followers of unawareness. For this reason, we have to drive this kind of delusion from our hearts by making ourselves mindful and self-aware, fully alert with each in-and-out breath. This is what awareness comes from. When awareness arises, discernment arises as well. If awareness doesn't arise, how will we be able to get rid of craving? When awareness arises, craving for sensuality, craving for possibilities, and craving for impossibilities will all stop, and attachment won't exist. This is the way of the Noble Path.

Most of us tend to flow along in the direction of what's bad more than in the direction of what's good. When people try to convince us to do good, they have to give us lots of reasons, and even then we hardly budge. But if they try to talk us into doing bad, all they have to do is say one or two words and we're already running with them. This is why the Buddha said, 'People are foolish. They like to feed on bad preoccupations.' And that's not all. We even feed on things that have no truth to them at all. We can't be bothered with thinking about good things, but we like to keep clambering after bad things, trying to remember them and keep them in mind. We don't get to eat any meat or sit on any skin, and yet we choke on the bones.

'We don't get to eat any meat:' This means that we gather up imaginary things to think about, but they don't bring us any happiness. A person who opens his mouth to put food in it at least gets something to fill up his stomach, but a person who clambers around with his mouth open, craning his neck to swallow nothing but air: That's really ridiculous. His stomach is empty, without the least little thing to give it weight. This stands for thoughts that have no truth to them. We keep searching them out, gathering them up and elaborating on them in various ways without getting any results out of them at all, aside from making ourselves restless and distracted. We never have any time to sit still in one place, and instead keep running and jumping around until the skin on our rears has no chance to make contact anywhere with a place to sit down. This is what is meant by, 'We don't get to sit on any skin.' We can't lie down, we can't stay seated -- even though our bodies may be seated, our minds aren't seated there with them. We don't get to eat any meat and instead we choke on the bones. We try to swallow them, but they won't go down; we try to cough them up, but they won't come out.

When we say, 'We choke on the bones,' this refers to the various bad preoccupations that get stuck in the heart. The 'bones' here are the five Hindrances.

(1) Sensual desire: The mind gets carried away with things it likes.

(2) Ill will: Things that displease us are like bones stuck in the heart. The mind fastens on things that are bad, on things we dislike, until we start feeling animosity, anger, and hatred. Sometimes we even gather up old tasteless bones that were thrown away long ago -- like chicken bones that have been boiled to make stock: The meat has fallen off, the flavor has been boiled away, and all that's left are the hard, brittle bones they throw to dogs. This stands for old thoughts stretching back 20 to 30 years that we bring out to gnaw on. Look at yourself: Your mind is so impoverished that it has to suck on old bones. It's really pitiful.

(3) Torpor & lethargy: When the mind has been feeding on trash like this, with nothing to nourish it, its strength is bound to wane away. It becomes sleepy and depressed, oblivious to other people's words, not hearing their questions or understanding what they're trying to say.

(4) Restlessness & anxiety: The mind then gets irritable and distracted, which is followed by --

(5) Uncertainty: We may decide that good things are bad, or bad things are good, wrong things are right, or right things are wrong. We may do things in line with the Dhamma and not realize it, or contrary to the Dhamma -- but in line with our own preconceptions -- and not know it. Everything gets stuck in our throat, and we can't decide which way to go, so our thoughts keep running around in circles, like a person who rows his boat around in a lake for hours and hours without getting anywhere.

This is called harming yourself, hurting yourself, killing yourself.

And when we can do this sort of thing to ourselves, what's to keep us from doing it to others? This is why we shouldn't let ourselves harbor thoughts of envy, jealousy or anger. If any of these five Hindrances arise in the heart, then trouble and suffering will come flooding in like a torrential downpour, and we won't be able to hold our own against them. All of this is because of the unawareness that keeps us from having any inner quality as a mainstay. Even though we may live in a seven- or nine-storey mansion and eat food at $40 a plate, we won't be able to find any happiness.

People without any inner quality are like vagrants with no home to live in. They have to be exposed to sun, rain, and wind by day and by night, so how can they find any relief from the heat or the cold? With nothing to shelter them, they have to lie curled up until their backs get all crooked and bent. When a storm comes, they need to scurry to find shelter: They can't stay under trees because they're afraid the trees will be blown down on top of them. They can't stay in open fields because they're afraid lightning will strike. At midday the sun is so hot that they can't sit for long -- like an old barefooted woman walking on an asphalt road when the sun is blazing: She can't put her feet down because she's afraid they'll blister, so she dances around in place on her tiptoes, not knowing where she can rest her feet.

This is why the Buddha felt such pity for us, and taught us to find shelter for ourselves by doing good and developing concentration as a principle in our hearts, so that we can have an inner home. This way we won't have to suffer, and other people will benefit as well. This is called having a mainstay.

People with no mainstay are bound to busy themselves with things that have no real meaning or worth -- i.e., with things that can't protect them from suffering when the necessity arises. //A person without the wisdom to search for a mainstay is sure to suffer hardships//. I'll illustrate this point with a story. Once there was a band of monkeys living in the upper branches of a forest, each one carrying its young wherever it went. One day a heavy wind storm came. As soon as the monkeys heard the sound of the approaching wind, they broke off branches and twigs to make themselves a nest on one of the bigger branches. After they had piled on the twigs, they went down under the nest and looked up to see if there were still any holes. Wherever they saw a hole, they piled on more twigs and branches until the whole thing was piled thick and high. Then when the wind and rain came, they got up on top of the nest, sitting there with their mouths open, shivering from the cold, exposed to the wind and rain. Their nest hadn't offered them any protection at all, simply because of their own stupidity. Eventually a gust of wind blew the nest apart. The monkeys were scattered every which way and ended up dangling here and there, their babies falling from their grasp, all of them thoroughly miserable from their hardship and pain.

//People who don't search for inner worth as their mainstay are no different from these monkeys.// They work at amassing money and property, thinking that these things will give them security, but when death comes, none of these things can offer any safety at all. This is why the Buddha felt such pity for all the deluded people in the world, and went to great lengths to teach us to search for inner quality as a mainstay for ourselves.

People who have inner quality as their mainstay are said to be kind not only to themselves but also to others as well, in the same way that when we have a house of our own, we can build a hut for other people to live in, too. If we see that another person's hut is going to cave in, we help find thatch to roof it; make walls for the left side, right side, the front and the back, to protect it from storm winds; and raise the floor to get it above flood level. What this means is that we teach the other person how to escape from his or her own defilements in the same way that we've been able, to whatever extent, to escape from ours. When we tell others to practice concentration, it's like helping them roof their house so that they won't have to be exposed to the sun and rain. Making walls for the front and back means that we tell them to shut off thoughts of past and future; and walls for the left and right means that we tell them to shut off thoughts of likes and dislikes. Raising the floor above flood level means we get them to stay firmly centered in concentration, keeping their minds still with their object of meditation.

Once people have a house with good walls, a sound roof, and a solid floor, then even if they don't have any other external belongings -- just a single rag to their name -- they can be happy, secure, and at peace. //But if your house is sunk in the mud, what hope is there for your belongings?// You'll have to end up playing with crabs, worms, and other creepy things. Your walls are nothing but holes, so that people can see straight through your house, in one side and out the other. Even from four to five miles away they can see everything you've got. When this is the case, thieves are going to gang up and rob you -- i.e., all sorts of bad thoughts and preoccupations are going to come in and ransack your heart.

As for your roof, it's nothing but holes. You look up and can see the stars. Termite dust is going to sift into your ears and eyes, and birds flying past will plaster you with their droppings. So in the end, all you can do is sit scratching your head in misery because you haven't any shelter.

When this is the case, you should take pity on yourself and develop your own inner worth. Keep practicing concentration until your heart matures, step by step. When you do this, you'll develop the light of discernment that can chase the darkness of unawareness out of your heart. When there's no more unawareness, you'll be free from craving and attachment, and ultimately gain Liberation.

For this reason, we should all keep practicing meditation and set our hearts on developing nothing but inner goodness, without retreating or getting discouraged. Whatever is a form of goodness, roll up your sleeves and pitch right in. Don't feel any regrets even if you ram your head into a wall and die on the spot. If you're brave in your proper efforts this way, all your affairs are sure to succeed in line with your hopes and aspirations. But if evil comes and asks to move into your home -- your heart -- chase it away. Don't let it stay even for a single night.

* * *

People who like to gather up thoughts, worries, etc., to hold onto are no different from prisoners tied down with a ball and chain. To fasten onto thoughts of the past is like having a rope around your waist tied to a post behind you. To fasten onto thoughts of the future is like having a rope around your neck tied to a door in front. To fasten onto thoughts you like is like having a rope around your right wrist tied to a post on your right. To fasten onto thoughts you don't like is like having a rope around your left wrist tied to a wall on your left. Whichever way you try to step, you're pulled back by the rope on the opposite side, so how can you hope to get anywhere at all?

As for people who have unshackled themselves from their thoughts, they stand tall and free like soldiers or warriors with weapons in both hands and no need to fear enemies from any direction. Any opponents who see them won't dare come near, so they're always sure to come out winning.

But if we're the type tied up with ropes on all sides, nobody's going to fear us, because there's no way we can take any kind of stance to fight them off. If enemies approach us, all we can do is dance around in one spot.

So I ask that we all take a good look at ourselves, and try to unshackle ourselves from all outside thoughts and preoccupations. Don't let them get stuck in your heart. Your meditation will then give you results, your mind will advance to the transcendent, and you're sure to come out winning someday.

* * * * * * * *

TRADING OUTER WEALTH FOR INNER WEALTH

July 1, 1958

Inner wealth, according to the texts, means seven things -- conviction, virtue, a sense of conscience, scrupulousness, breadth of learning, generosity, and discernment -- but to put it simply, inner wealth refers to the inner quality we build within ourselves. Outer wealth -- money and material goods -- doesn't have any hard and fast owners. Today it may be ours, tomorrow someone else may take it away. There are times when it belongs to us, and times when it belongs to others. Even with things that are fixed in the ground, like farms or orchards, you can't keep them from changing hands.

So when you develop yourself so as to gain the discernment that sees how worldly things are undependable and unsure, don't let your property -- your worldly possessions -- sit idle. The Buddha teaches us to plant crops on our land so that we can benefit from it. If you don't make use of your land, it's sure to fall into other people's hands. In other words, when we stake out a claim to a piece of property, we should plant it full of crops. Otherwise the government won't recognize our claim, and we'll lose our rights to it. Even if we take the case to court, we won't have a chance to win. So once you see the weakness of an idle claim, you should hurry up and plant crops on it so that the government will recognize your claim and issue you a title to the land.

What this means is that we should make use of our material possessions by being generous with them, using them in a way that develops the inner wealth of generosity within us. This way they become the kind of wealth over which we have full rights, and that will benefit us even into future lifetimes.

* * * * * * * *

BODILY DEBTS

September 29, 1958

This body of ours: Actually there's not the least bit of it that's really ours at all. We've gotten it from animals and plants -- the pigs, prawns, chickens, fish, crabs, cows, etc., and all the various vegetables, fruits, and grains that have been made into the food we've eaten, which the body has chewed and digested and turned into the blood that nourishes its various parts. In other words, we've taken cooked things and turned them back into raw things: ears, eyes, hands, arms, body, etc. These then become male or female, they're given ranks and titles, and so we end up falling for all of these conventions. Actually these heads of ours are lettuce heads, our hair is pigs' hair, our bones are chicken bones and duck bones, our muscles are cows' muscles, etc. There's not one part that's really ours, but we lay claim to the whole thing and say it's this and that. We forget the original owners from whom we got it all and so become possessive of it. When the time comes for them to come and take it back, we're not willing to give it back, which is where things get messy and complicated and cause us to suffer when death comes near.

If all the various animals we've eaten were to come walking out of each of us right now (here I'm not talking about the really big ones, like cows and steers; say that just all the little ones -- the shrimps, fish, oysters, crabs, chickens, ducks, and pigs -- came walking out) there wouldn't be enough room for them all in this meditation hall. None of us would be able to live here in this monastery any more. How many pigs, ducks, chickens, and shrimp have each of us eaten? How many bushels of fish? If we were to calculate it all, who knows what the figures would be -- all the animals we ourselves have killed for food or that we've gotten from others who've killed them. How do you think these animals won't come and demand repayment? If we don't have anything to give them, they're sure to repossess everything we've got. Right when we're at death's door: That's when they're going to crowd around and demand that we repay our debts. If we don't have anything to give them, they're going to knock us flat. But if we have enough to give them, we'll come out unscathed.

In other words, if we develop a lot of inner goodness, we'll be able to contend with whatever pains we suffer, by giving back the body with good grace -- in other words, by letting go of our attachment to it. That's when we'll be at peace. //We should realize that the body leaves us and lets us go, bit by bit, every day.// But we've never left it, never let it go at all. We're attached to it in every way, just as when we eat food: We're attached to the food, but the food isn't attached to us. If we don't eat it, it'll never cry even once.

All the attachment comes from our side alone.

The pleasure we get from the body is a worldly pleasure: good for a moment and then it changes. It's not at all lasting or permanent. Notice the food you eat: At what point is it good and delicious? It looks good and inviting only when it's arranged nicely on a plate. It's delicious only for the brief moment it's in your mouth. After it goes down your throat, what is it like then? And when it gets down to your intestines and comes out the other end, what is it like then? It keeps changing all the time. When you think about this sort of thing, it's enough to make you disillusioned with everything in the world.

Worldly pleasure is good only when it's hot and fresh, like fresh-cooked rice piled on a plate when it's still hot and steaming. If you leave it until it's cold, there's no taste to it. If you let it go until it hardens, you can't swallow it; and if you let it sit overnight, it spoils and you have to throw it away.

As for the pleasure of the Dhamma, it's like the brightness of stars or the color of gold. The brightness of stars is clear and glittering. Whoever sees it feels calmed and refreshed. When depressed people look at the stars, no matter when, their depression disappears. As for the color of gold, it's always gleaming and golden. No matter what the gold is made into, its color doesn't change. It's always gleaming and golden as it always was.

In the same way, the pleasure of the Dhamma is lasting and gives delight throughout time to those who practice it. For this reason, intelligent people search for pleasure in the Dhamma by giving up their worthless, meaningless worldly pleasures, to trade them in for lasting pleasure by practicing meditation until their minds and actions reach the level of goodness, beauty, and purity that goes beyond all action, all suffering and stress.

* * * * * * * *

NIGHTSOIL FOR THE HEART

July 6, 1959

Beautiful things come from things that are dirty, and not at all from things that are pleasant and clean. Crops and trees, for instance, grow to be healthy and beautiful because of the rotten and smelly compost and nightsoil with which they're fertilized. In the same way, a beautiful mind comes from meeting with things that aren't pleasant. When we meet with bad things, the mind has a chance to grow.

'Bad things' here refers to loss of wealth, loss of status, criticism, and pain. When these things happen to a person whose mind is rightly centered in concentration, they turn into good things. Before, they were our enemies, but eventually they become our friends. What this means is that when these four bad things occur to us, we can come to our senses: 'Oh. This is how loss of wealth is bad. This is how loss of status, how pain and criticism are bad. This is how the ways of the world can change and turn on you, so that you shouldn't get carried away with their good side.'

When meditators meet with these four kinds of bad things, their minds develop. They become more and more dispassionate, more and more disenchanted, more and more detached from the four opposites of these bad things -- wealth, status, pleasure, and praise -- so that when these good things happen, they won't be fooled into getting attached or carried away with them and can instead push their minds on to a higher level. When they hear someone criticize or gossip about them, it's as if that person were taking a knife to sharpen them. The more they get sharpened, the more they grow to a finer and finer point.

Loss of wealth is actually good for you, you know. It can teach you not to be attached or carried away with the money or material benefits other people may offer you. Otherwise, the more you have, the deeper you sink -- to the point where you drown because you get stuck on being possessive.

Loss of status is also good for you. For instance, you may be a person, but they erase your good name and call you a dog -- which makes things even easier for you, because dogs have no laws. They can do what they like without any constraints, without anyone to fine them or put them in jail. If people make you a prince or a duke, you're really in bad straits. All of a sudden you're big: Your arms, hands, feet, and legs grow all out of size and get in your way wherever you try to go or whatever you do.

As for wealth, status, pleasure, and praise, there' s nothing the least bit constant or dependable about them. The more you really think about them, the more disaffected and disenchanted you become, to the point where you find that you're indifferent, neither pleased nor displeased with them. This is where your mind develops equanimity and can become firm in concentration so that it can grow higher and higher in the practice -- like the lettuce and cauliflower that Chinese farmers plant in rows: The more they get fertilized with nightsoil, the faster, more beautiful, and more healthy they grow. If they were fed nothing but clean, clear water, they'd end up all sickly and stunted.

This is why we say that when people have developed mindfulness and concentration, they're even better off when the ways of the world turn ugly and bad. If the world shows you only its good side, you're sure to get infatuated and stuck, like a seed that stays buried in its shell and will never grow. But once the seed comes out with its shoot, then the more sun, wind, rain, and fertilizer it gets, the more it will grow and develop -- i.e., the more your discernment will branch out into knowledge and wisdom, leading you to intuitive insight and on into the transcendent, like the old Chinese vegetable farmer who becomes a millionaire by building a fortune out of plain old excrement.

* * * * * * * *

THE HONEST TRUTH

June 23, 1958; August 23, 1958

When we first meet with the fires of greed, aversion and delusion, we find them comforting and warm. We're like a person sitting by a fire in the cold season: As he sits soaking up the warmth, he gets more and more sleepy and careless until he burns his hands and feet without realizing it, and eventually falls head-first into the flames.

* * *

The pleasures felt by people in the world come from looking at things only on the surface. Take a plateful of rice, for instance. If. you ask people what's good about rice, they'll say, 'It tastes good and fills you up, too.' But the Buddha wouldn't answer like that. He'd answer by talking about rice both when it goes in your mouth and when it comes out the other end. This is why his view of things covered both cause and effect. He didn't look at things from one side only.

The Buddha saw that the ease and happiness of ordinary pleasures is nothing lasting. He wanted an ease and happiness that didn't follow the way of the worldly pleasures that most people want. This was why he left his family and friends, and went off to live in seclusion. He said to himself, 'I came alone when I was born and I'll go alone when I die. No one hired me to be born and no one will hire me to die, so I'm beholden to no one. There's no one I have to fear. In all of my actions, if there's anything that is right from the standpoint of the world, but wrong from the standpoint of the truth -- and wrong from the standpoint of my heart -- there's no way I'll be willing to do it.'

So he posed himself a question: 'Now that you've been born as a human being, what is the highest thing you want in this world?' He then placed the following conditions on his answer: 'In answering, you have to be really honest and truthful with yourself. And once you've answered, you have to hold to your answer as an unalterable law on which you've affixed your seal, without ever letting a second seal be affixed on top. So what do you want, and how do you want it? You have to give an honest answer, understand? I won 't accept anything false. And once you've answered, you have to keep to your answer. Don't be a traitor to yourself.'

When he was sure of his answer, he said to himself, 'I want only the highest and most certain happiness and ease: the happiness that won't change into anything else. Other than that, I don't want anything else in the world.'

Once he had given this answer, he kept to it firmly. He didn't allow anything that would have caused the least bit of pain or distraction to his heart to get stuck there as a stain on it. He kept making a persistent effort with all his might to discover the truth, without retreat, until he finally awakened to that truth: the reality of Liberation.

If we search for the truth like the Buddha -- if we're true in our intent and true in what we do -- there's no way the truth can escape us. But if we aren't true to ourselves, we won't find the true happiness the Buddha found. We tell ourselves that we want to be happy but we go jumping into fires. We know what things are poison, yet we go ahead and drink them anyway. This is called being a traitor to yourself.

* * *

Every person alive wants happiness -- even common animals struggle to find happiness -- but our actions for the most part aren't in line with our intentions. This is why we don't get to realize the happiness we want, simply because there's no truth to us. For example, when people come to the monastery: If they come to make offerings, observe the precepts, and sit in meditation for the sake of praise or a good reputation, there's no real merit to what they're doing. They don't gain any real happiness from it, so they end up disappointed and dissatisfied. Then they start saying that offerings, precepts, and meditation don't give any good results. Instead of reflecting on the fact that they weren't right and honest in doing these things, they say that there's no real good to the Buddha, Dhamma, and Sangha, that the Buddha's teachings are a lot of nonsense and lies. But actually the Buddha's teachings are an affair of the truth. //If a person isn't true to the Buddha's teachings, the Buddha's teachings won't be true to that person// -- and that person won't be able to know what the Buddha's true teachings are.

* * *

When we practice virtue, concentration, and discernment, it's as if we were taking the jewels and robes of royalty and the Noble Ones to dress up our heart and make it beautiful. But if we aren't true in our practice, it's like taking robes and jewels and giving them to a monkey. The monkey is bound to get them dirty and tear them to shreds because it has no sense of beauty at all. Whoever sees this kind of thing happening is sure to see right through it, that it's a monkey show. Even though the costumes are genuine, the monkey inside isn't genuine like the costumes. For instance, if you take a soldier's cap and uniform to dress it up as a soldier, it's a soldier only as far as the cap and uniform, but the monkey inside is still a monkey and not a soldier at all.

For this reason, the Buddha teaches us to be true in whatever we do -- to be true in being generous, true in being virtuous, true in developing concentration and discernment. Don't play around at these things. If you're true, then these activities are sure to bear you the fruits of your own truthfulness without a doubt.

* * * * * * * *

SELF-RELIANCE

May 22, 1959

In Christianity they teach that if you've done wrong or committed a sin, you can ask to wash it away by confessing the sin and asking for God's forgiveness. God will then have the kindness to hold back punishment, and you'll be pure. But Buddhism doesn't teach this sort of thing at all. If you do wrong, //you// are the one who has to correct the error so as to do away with the punishment on your own behalf. What this means is that when a defilement -- greed, anger, or delusion -- arises in your heart, you have to undo the defilement right there so as to escape from it. Only then will you escape from the suffering that would otherwise come as its natural consequence.

We can compare this to a man who drinks poison and comes down with violent stomach cramps. If he then runs to a doctor and says, 'Doctor, doctor, I've drunk poison and my stomach really hurts. Please take some medicine for me so that the pain will go away,' there's no way that this is going to cure the pain. If the doctor, instead of the sick man, is the one who takes the medicine, the sick man can expect to die for sure.

So I ask that we all understand this point: that we have to wash away our own defilements by practicing the Dhamma -- the medicine of the Buddha -- in order to gain release from any evil and suffering in our hearts; not that we can ask the Buddha to help wash away our mistakes and sufferings for us. The Buddha is simply the doctor who has discovered the formula for the medicine and prepared it for us. Whatever disease we have, we need to take the medicine and treat the disease ourselves if we want to recover.

* * * * * * * *

THE MIND AFLAME

July 28, 1959

If the heart doesn't have any inner nourishment, it won't have any strength, because it's hungry and thin. When it doesn't have any nourishment, it goes out eating whatever it can find -- bones and old dry skins -- without finding any decent food to eat or water to drink at all. This is why it ends up shriveled and dry, because the heart, if it doesn't have any inner goodness, is thin and gaunt, and goes running around all sorts of back alleys, scraping together whatever it can find just for the sake of having something to stick in its mouth. It doesn't get to eat anything good at all, though. It can't find a single thing to give it any flavor or nourishment. But if the heart is strong and well-fed, then whatever it thinks of doing is sure to succeed.

The Buddha saw that we human beings are thin and malnourished in this way, which is why he felt compassion for us. He taught us, 'The mind that goes around swallowing sights, sounds, smells, tastes, and tactile sensations is eating a ball of fire, you know. Not any kind of food.' In other words, 'The eye is burning.' Everything we see with the eye is a form, and each of these forms contains a ball of fire, even though on the outside it's coated to look pretty and attractive. 'The ear is burning.' All the pleasing sounds we search for, and that come passing in through our ears from the day we're born to the day we die, are burning sounds, are flames of fire. The heat of the sun can't burn you to death, but sounds //can// burn you to death, which is why we say they're hotter than the sun. 'The nose is burning.' We've been smelling smells ever since the doctor cleaned out our nose right after birth, and the nature of smells is that there's no such thing as a neutral smell. There are only two kinds: good smelling and foul-smelling. If our strength is down and we're not alert, we swallow these smells right into the mind -- and that means we've swallowed a time bomb. We're safe only as long as nothing ignites the fuse. 'The tongue is burning.' Countless tastes come passing over our tongue. If we get attached to them, it's as if we've eaten a ball of fire: As soon as it explodes, our intestines will come splattering out. If we human beings let ourselves get tied up in this sort of thing, it's as if we've eaten the fire bombs of the King of Death. As soon as they explode, we're finished. But if we know enough to spit them out, we'll be safe. If we swallow them, we're loading ourselves down. We won't be able to find any peace whether we're sitting, standing, walking or lying down, because we're on fire inside. Only when we breathe our last will the fires go out. 'The body is burning.' Tactile sensations are also a fire that wipes human beings out. If you don't have any inner worth or goodness in your mind, these things can really do you a lot of damage.

* * *

Greed, anger, and delusion are like three enormous balls of red-hot iron that the King of Death heats until they're glowing hot and then pokes into our heads. When greed doesn't get what it wants, it turns into anger. Once we're angry, we get overcome and lose control, so that it turns into delusion. We forget everything -- good, bad, our husbands, wives, parents, children -- to the point where we can even kill our husbands, wives, parents, and children. This is all an affair of delusion. When these three defilements get mixed up in our minds, they can take us to hell with no trouble at all. This is why they're called fire bombs in the human heart.

But if, when greed arises, we have the sense to take only what should be taken and not what shouldn't, it won't wipe us out even though it's burning us, because we have fire insurance. People without fire insurance are those with really strong greed to the point where they're willing to cheat and get involved in corruption or crime. When this happens, their inner fires wipe them out. To have fire insurance means that even though we feel greed, we can hold it in check and be generous with our belongings by giving donations, for instance, to the religion. Then even though we may die from our greed, we've still gained inner worth from making donations as an act of homage to the Buddha, Dhamma, and Sangha -- which is like keeping our insurance payments up. This way, even though our house may burn down, we'll still have some property left.

Anger. When this defilement really gets strong, it has no sense of good or evil, right or wrong, husband, wives, or children. It can drink human blood. An example we often see is when people get quarreling and one of them ends up in prison or even on death row, convicted for murder. This is even worse than your house burning down, because you have nothing left at all. For this reason, we have to get ourselves some life insurance by observing the five or eight precepts so that we can treat and bandage our open sores -- i.e., so that we can wash away the evil and unwise things in our thoughts, words, and deeds. Even if we can't wash them all away, we should try at least to relieve them somewhat. Although you may still have some fire left, let there just be enough to cook your food or light your home. Don't let there be so much that it burns your house down.

//The only way to put out these fires is to meditate and develop thoughts of good will.// The mind won't feel any anger, hatred, or ill will, and instead will feel nothing but thoughts of sympathy, seeing that everyone in the world aims at goodness, but that our goodness isn't equal. You have to use really careful discernment to consider cause and effect, and then be forgiving, with the thought that we human beings aren't equal or identical in our goodness and evil. If everyone were equal, the world would fall apart. If we were equally good or equally bad, the world would have to fall apart for sure. Suppose that all the people in the world were farmers, with no merchants or government officials. Or suppose there were only government officials, with no farmers at all: We'd all starve to death with our mouths gaping and dry. If everyone were equal and identical, the end of the world would come in only a few days' time. Consider your body: Even the different parts of your own body aren't equal. Some of your fingers are short, some are long, some small, some large. If all ten of your fingers were equal, you'd have a monster's hands. So when even your own fingers aren't equal, how can you expect people to be equal in terms of their thoughts, words, and deeds? You have to think this way and be forgiving.

* * *

When you can think in this way, your good will can spread to all people everywhere, and you'll feel sympathy for people on high levels, low levels and in between. The big ball of fire inside you will go out through the power of your good will and loving kindness.

This comes from getting life insurance: practicing tranquillity meditation so as to chase the defilements away from the mind. Thoughts of sensual desire, ill will, lethargy, restlessness, and uncertainty will vanish, and the mind will be firmly centered in concentration, using its powers of directed thought to stay with its meditation word -- //buddho// -- and its powers of evaluation to create a sense of inner lightness and ease. When the mind fills itself with rapture -- the flavor arising from concentration -- it will have its own inner food and nourishment, so that whatever you do in thought, word, or deed is sure to succeed.

* * * * * * * *

FOOD FOR THE MIND

July, 1958; August 10, 1957

There are two kinds of food for the mind: the kind that gives it strength and the kind that saps its strength. What this refers to is (1) the food of sensory contact -- the contact that takes place at the eye, ear, nose, tongue, body, and intellect. There are six mouthfuls of this kind of food. (2) The food of consciousness, i.e., the consciousness of contact that takes place at each of the six senses. There are six mouthfuls of this kind, too. (3) The food of intention or mental concomitants, i.e., the thoughts that are formed in the heart, leading it to think of the past or future and to know if things are good or bad, pleasant or painful. Once we know that our body and mind depend on these kinds of food, we should use our discernment to reflect on them and evaluate them carefully.

Discernment is what forms the teeth of the mind. When children are small, they need to depend on others to mince or strain their food; but when they grow up, they have their own teeth and don't need to depend on anyone else. If people are really discerning, they don't need to chew coarse food at all. For example, an intelligent hunter, once he's killed an animal, will remove the feathers and wings or cut off the antlers and hooves and take home just the useful part. Then he cuts the meat off in pieces so that it can serve as food. In other words, if he's intelligent, he throws away the inedible parts piece by piece.

In the same way, intelligent people who want the inner quality of dispassion have to take the discernment that comes from concentration and use it to evaluate sights, sounds, smells, tastes, etc., so that these things can serve a purpose and not do them any harm. Whoever eats an entire fish -- bones, scales, fins, feces, and all -- is sure to choke to death on the bones. For this reason, we have to find a knife and chopping block -- in other words, use mindfulness to focus on, say, a visual object, and discernment to consider what kind of object it is. Is it something we should get involved with or not? What kind of benefits or harm will it cause for the mind? If it's a visual object that will cause harm to the mind, you shouldn't get involved with it. //If it's a good-looking object, look for its bad side as well.// Be a person with two eyes. Sometimes an object looks good, but we don't look for its bad side. Sometimes it looks bad, but we don't look for its good side. If something looks beautiful, you have to focus on its bad side as well. If it looks bad, you have to focus on its good side, too.

If you aren't selective in what you eat, you can ruin your health. Pleasing objects are like sugar and honey: They're sure to attract all sorts of ants and flies. Disagreeable objects are like filth: In addition to carrying germs, they're sure to attract all sorts of other bad things, too, because they're crawling with flies and worms. If we aren't discerning, we'll gobble down the filth together with the worms and smelly parts, and the sugar together with the ants and flies. Your heart is already in poor health, and yet you go gobbling down things that are toxic. When this happens, no one can cure you but you yourself.

For this reason, you have to keep the heart neutral, on the middle path. Don't be pleased by the objects you think are pleasing; don't hate the objects you think are disagreeable. Don't be a person with only one eye or one ear. When you can do this, you're equipped with discernment. You can spit visual objects, sounds, smells, tastes, etc., out of the heart. Once you can see that 'good' has 'bad' hiding behind it, and 'bad' has 'good' hiding behind it -- in the same way that the body has both a front and a back -- you shouldn't let yourself fall for sights, sounds, smells, etc. You have to consider them carefully.

The mind has two basic sorts of food: good mental states and bad mental states. If you think in ways that are good, you'll give strength to the mind. If you're discerning, you'll get to eat fine food. If you aren't, you'll have to eat crude food -- e.g., you'll get a crab, and you'll eat the whole thing raw, without knowing how to boil it and peel away the shell and the claws. The effort of meditation is like a fire; concentration is like a pot; mindfulness, like a chopping block; and discernment, a knife. Intelligent people will use these things to prepare their food so that its nourishment -- the nourishment of the Dhamma -- will permeate into the heart to give it five kinds of strength:

(1) The strength of conviction.

(2) The strength of persistence: The heart, when we're persistent, is like the wheels of an automobile that keep turning and propelling it toward its goal, enabling us to see the gains that come from our persistence.

(3) The strength of mindfulness: Having mindfulness is like knowing when to open and when to close your windows and doors.

(4) The strength of concentration: Concentration will be firmly established in the mind whether we're sitting, standing, walking, lying down, speaking, or listening. We can listen without getting stuck on what's said, and speak without getting stuck on what we say.

(5) The strength of discernment: We'll gain wisdom and understanding with regard to all things, so that eventually we'll attain purity of mind -- by letting go of all thoughts of past and future, and not being pleased or displeased by any sights, sounds, smells, tastes, etc., at all.

* * * * * * * *

FIRST THINGS FIRST

October 6, 1958

There are three ways in which people order their priorities: putting the world first, putting themselves first, and putting the Dhamma first.

//Putting the world first:// There's nothing at all dependable about the affairs of the world. Stop and think for a moment: Ever since you were born, from your first memory up to the present day, what is the best thing that has ever happened in your life? What is the most enjoyable thing? What have you liked the most? If you answer, you have to say that of all the things in the world, only 50 percent are satisfactory; the other 50 are unsatisfactory. But if you asked me, I'd answer that there's nothing satisfactory about the world at all. There's nothing but stress and misery. You get friends and they take advantage of you. You get possessions and you have to worry about them. You get money and you end up suffering for it. The people you work with aren't as good as you'd like them to be. Your family and relatives are nothing but trouble. In short, I don't see anything that really brings a person any real happiness. You get money and it brings trouble. You get friends and they make you suffer. The people you live and work with don't get along smoothly. This is the way it is with the world. For this reason, anyone whose mind runs along in the current of the world is bound for nothing but pain and sorrow. The Buddha taught, 'For the mind not to be affected by the ways of the world is to be serene and free from sorrow: This is the highest good fortune.'

The world has eight edges, and each edge is razor sharp, capable of slicing human beings to bits without mercy. The eight edges of the world are, on the one side, the edge of wealth, the edge of status, the edge of praise, and the edge of pleasure. These four edges are especially sharp because they're things we like. We keep polishing and sharpening them, and the more we do this the sharper they get, until ultimately they turn around and slit our throats.

The other side has four edges too, but actually they're not so sharp, because no one likes to use them. No one wants them, so no one sharpens them, and as a result they're dull and blunt -- and like dull knives, they can't kill anyone. These four edges are loss of wealth, loss of status, criticism, and pain. No one wants any of these things, but they have to exist as part of the world.

How are the sharp edges sharp? Take status for an example. As soon as people gain status and rank, they start swelling up larger than they really are. You don't have to look far for examples of this sort of thing. Look at monks. When they start out as ordinary junior monks, they can go anywhere with no trouble at all, along highways and byways, down narrow alleys and back streets, anywhere they like. But as soon as they start getting a little ecclesiastical rank, they start getting abnormally large. The roads they used to walk along start feeling too narrow. They have trouble walking anywhere -- their legs are too long and their feet too heavy. Their rears are too large for ordinary seats. (Of course, not all high-ranking monks are like this. You can find ones who don't swell up.) As for lay people, once they're hit by the edge of status, they start swelling up too, to the point where they can hardly move. Their hands get too heavy to raise in respect to the Buddha. Their legs get so big they can't make it to the monastery to hear a sermon or observe the precepts -- they're afraid they'd lose their edge. This is how one of the edges of the world kills the goodness in people.

As for the edge of wealth, this refers to money and possessions. As soon as we get a lot, we start getting stingy. We become wary of making too many offerings or of being too generous with others because we're afraid we'll run out of money. This is why rich people tend to be stingy and drown in their wealth. As for poor people, they can give away everything and then work to replace it. They can give offerings and be generous, with rarely any sense of regret. Their arms and legs aren't too big, so they can come to the monastery with no trouble at all.

The edge of pleasure is very sharp, because wherever you get your pleasure, that's where you get stuck. If your pleasure comes from your friends, you're stuck on your friends. If your pleasure comes from your children or grandchildren, you're stuck on your children and grandchildren. If your pleasure comes from eating, sleeping or going out at night, then that's where you're stuck. You're not willing to trade in your pleasure for the sake of inner worth because you're afraid of letting your pleasure fall from your grasp. You can't observe the five or eight precepts because they make you force and deny yourself. If you observe the eight precepts, you can't go see a movie or show and can't sleep on a nice soft mattress. You're afraid that if you miss one evening meal, you'll get hungry or weak. You don't want to sit and meditate because you're afraid your back will hurt or your legs will go numb. So this is how the edge of pleasure destroys your goodness.

As for the edge of praise, this too is razor sharp. When people are praised, they start floating and don't want to come down. They hear praise and it's so captivating that they forget themselves and think that they're already good enough -- so they won't think of making the effort to make themselves better in other ways.

All four of these edges are weapons that kill our goodness. They're like the paint people use on houses to make them pretty: something that can last only a while and then has to fade and peel away. If you can view these things simply as part of the passing scenery, without getting stuck on them, they won't do you any harm. But if you latch onto them as really being your own, the day is sure to come when you'll have to meet with disappointment -- loss of wealth, loss of status, criticism, and pain -- because it's a law of nature that however far things advance, that 's how far they have to regress. If you don't lose them while you're alive, you'll lose them when you die. They can't stay permanent and lasting.

Once we realize this truth, then when we meet with any of the good edges of the world we shouldn't get so carried away that we forget ourselves; and when we meet with any of the bad edges we shouldn't let ourselves get so discouraged or sad that we lose hope. Stick to your duties as you always have. Don't let your goodness suffer because of these eight ways of the world.

//Putting yourself first:// This means acting, speaking and thinking whatever way you like without any thought for what's right or wrong, good or bad. In other words, you feel you have the right to do whatever you want. You may see, for instance, that something isn't good, and you know that other people don't like it, but you like it, so you go ahead and do it. Or you may see that something is good, but you don't like it, so you don't do it. Sometimes you may like something, and it's good, but you don't do it -- it's good, but you just can't do it.

When you're practicing the Dhamma, though, then whether or not you like something, you have to make yourself do it. //You have to make the Dhamma your life, and your life into Dhamma// if you want to succeed. You can't use the principle of giving priority to your own likes at all.

//Putting the Dhamma first:// This is an important principle for those who practice. The duties of every Buddhist are (1) to develop virtue by observing the precepts, (2) to center the mind in concentration, and (3) to use discernment to investigate the truth without giving rein to defilement.

The basic level of virtue is to prevent our words and deeds from being bad or evil. This means observing the five precepts: not killing any living beings, not stealing, not engaging in illicit sex, not lying, and not taking intoxicants. These are the precepts that wash away the gross stains on our conduct. They're precepts that turn us from common animals into human beings and prevent us from falling into states of deprivation and woe.

The intermediate level of virtue turns human beings into celestial beings. This refers to restraint of the senses: keeping watch over the way we react to our senses of sight, hearing, smell, taste, feeling, and ideation so that they don't give rise to bad mental states. This can turn human beings into celestial beings, but even then we haven't escaped from death and rebirth, because when celestial beings run out of merit they have to come back and be reborn as human beings again. They still have to keep swimming around in the cycle of rebirth.

Those who can gain release from all forms of evil, however, won't have to be reborn as animals, human beings, or celestial beings ever again. This refers to people who practice concentration and can abandon all evil in their hearts by developing the stages of absorption (//jhana//) and discernment until they reach the level of Non-returning. When they die, they go to the Brahma worlds, and there they develop their hearts still further, purifying them of all defilements, becoming arahants and ultimately attaining total Liberation.

The basic level of virtue protects our words and deeds from being evil. The intermediate level protects our senses and keeps them clean -- which means that we don't let the three defilements of passion, aversion/ and delusion be provoked into action by what we see, hear, smell, taste, touch/ or think.

As for the highest level of virtue -- inner virtue -- this means giving rise to Right Concentration within the mind:

(1) On this level, 'not killing' means not killing off your goodness. For instance, if bad thoughts arise and you aren't careful to wipe them out, their evil will come pouring in and your goodness will have to die. This is because your mind is still caught up on good and evil. Sometimes you use good to kill evil. Sometimes you use evil to kill good: This is called killing yourself.

(2) 'Stealing' on this level refers to the way the mind likes to take the good and bad points of other people to think about. This sort of mind is a thief -- because we've never once asked other people whether they're possessive of their good and bad points or are willing to share them with us. For the most part, what we take is their old dried up garbage. I.e., we like to focus on their bad points. Even though they may have good points, we don't let ourselves see them. We take our own opinions as our guide and as a result we end up as fools without realizing it.

(3) 'Illicit sensuality' on this level refers to the state of mind that is stuck on sights, sounds, smells, tastes, tactile sensations, and ideas, or that lies fermenting in greed, anger, and delusion. In other words, the mind is impure and is always involved with sensual objects and moods.

(4) 'Lying' on this level means not being true. How are we not true? We come to the monastery but our minds are at home. We listen to the sermon but our hearts are thinking of something else. Our bodies may be sitting in the meditation position, just like the Buddha, but our minds are roaming around through all sorts of thoughts, gnawing on the past, nibbling at the future, not finding any meat at all This is called lying to yourself and to others as well. How is it lying to others? Suppose you go home and someone asks, 'Where did you go today?' and you answer, 'I went to the monastery to listen to a sermon.' Actually, your body came, but you didn't come. Your body listened, but you didn't listen. This has to be classed as a kind of lying.

(5) 'Intoxication' on this level refers to delusion and absentmindedness. If we're going to contemplate body, feelings, mind, and mental qualities, our minds have to be still and really focused on these things. But if we're absentminded and forgetful, our minds go down the wrong path, weaving in and out, back and forth like a drunkard. Sometimes we end up falling down in a stupor and lying there on the side of the road. Nothing good will come of it.

Those who are careful to keep their minds firmly centered in concentration and to keep the five precepts on this level pure and whole, though, are said to be developing the highest perfection of virtue -- showing respect for the Dhamma above and beyond the world, above and beyond themselves. This is called putting the Dhamma first in a way befitting those who practice it. This is what it means to be a true Buddhist in a way that will eventually lead us to release from all suffering and stress.

* * * * * * * *

QUIET BREATHING

Now I'd like to explain a little about how to meditate. Sitting in meditation is a worthwhile activity. The outer part of the activity is to sit in a half-lotus position with your right leg on top of your left leg; your hands palm-up in your lap, your right hand on top of your left. Keep your body erect. Close your eyes, but don't close them off like a person asleep. Your optic nerves have to keep working to some extent or else you'll get drowsy.

These activities are the outer aspects of good meditation, but they aren't what makes the meditation good. You also need to have the right object for the mind to dwell on, and the right intention: the intention to keep the in-and-out breath in mind, to adjust it so that it's comfortable, and to keep the breath and mind together so that they don't slip away from each other. When you can do this properly, you'll gain beneficial results in terms of both body and mind -- i.e., the right quality you're looking for, termed 'inner worth', which means a soothing sense of ease, comfort, fullness, and well-being.

When you sit and meditate, keep noticing whether or not your mind is staying with the in-and-out breath. You have to keep mindfulness in charge of the mind. For example, when you breathe in, think //bud//; when you breathe out, think //dho//. //Bud-dho.// Be mindful. Don't let yourself forget or slip away. Put aside all your outside responsibilities and let go of all outside thoughts and perceptions. Keep your mind with nothing but the breath. You don't have to turn your attention to anything else.

Usually when you sit and meditate, though, thoughts of past and future tend to appear and get in the way of the quality of your meditation. Thoughts of this sort -- whether they're about things past or yet to come, about the world or the Dhamma -- have no good to them at all. They'll simply cause you trouble and suffering. They make the mind restless and disturbed so that it can't gain any peace and calm -- because things that are past have already passed. There's no way you can bring them back or change them. Things in the future haven't reached us yet, so we can't know whether or not they'll be in line with our expectations. They're far away and uncertain, so there's no way they'll be any help to our thinking at all.

For this reason, we have to keep hold on the mind to keep it in the present by fixing it on nothing but the breath. To think about the breath is called directed thought, as when we think buddho together with the breath -- //bud// in, //dho// out, like we're doing right now. When we start evaluating the breath, we let go of //buddho// and start observing how far the effects of each in-and-out breath can be felt in the body. When the breath comes in, does it feel comfortable or not? When it goes out, does it feel relaxed or not? If it doesn't feel comfortable and relaxed, change it. When you keep the mind preoccupied with investigating the breath, let go of //buddho//. You don't have any need for it. Mindful awareness will fill the body, and the in-breath will start to feel as if it's permeating the body throughout. When we let go of //buddho//, our evaluation of the breath becomes more refined; the movement of the mind will calm down and become concentration; outside perceptions will fall silent. 'Falling silent' doesn't mean that our ears go blank or become deaf. It means that our attention doesn't go running to outside perceptions or to thoughts of past or future. Instead, it stays exclusively in the present.

When we fix our attention on the breath in this way, constantly keeping watch and being observant of how the breath is flowing, we'll come to know what the in-breath and out-breath are like, whether or not they're comfortable, what way of breathing in makes us feel good, what way of breathing out makes us feel good, what way of breathing makes us feel tense and uncomfortable. If the breath feels uncomfortable, try to adjust it so that it gives rise to a sense of comfort and ease.

When we keep surveying and evaluating the breath in this way, mindfulness and self-awareness will take charge within us. Stillness will develop, discernment will develop, knowledge will develop within us.

* * * * * * * *

CENTERED WITHIN

August 13, 1956

When you sit and meditate, you should keep in mind the factors that make it a worthwhile activity:

(1) The right object for the mind -- i.e., the breath, which is the theme of your meditation.

(2) The right intention. This means that you focus your mind steadily on what you're doing and nothing else, with the purpose of making it settle down firmly in stillness.

(3) The right quality -- inner worth -- i.e., the calm and ease you gain from your practice of concentration.

* * *

To have the right object while you sit and meditate, you should have your mind set on giving your heart solely to the qualities of the Buddha. What this means is that you focus on your in-and-out breathing together with the word //buddho//, without thinking of anything else. This is your object or foundation for the mind. The mental side of the object is the word //buddho//, but if you just think, //buddho, buddho//, without joining it up with your breathing, you won't get the results you want, because simply thinking on its own is too weak to have a hold on the mind, and as a result it doesn't fulfill all the factors of meditation. The mind won't be snug enough with its object to stay firmly put in its stillness, and so will show signs of wavering.

Since this is the case, you have to find something to give it some resistance, something for it to hold onto, in the same way that a nail you drive into a board will hold it firmly to a post and not let it move. A mind without something to hold onto is bound not to be snug and firm with its object. This is why we're taught to think also of the breath, which is the physical side of our object, together with //buddho//, thinking //bud// in with the in-breath, and //dho// out with the out.

As for the factor of intention in your meditation, you have to be intent on your breathing. Don't leave it to the breath to happen on its own as you normally do. You have to be intent on synchronizing your thought of the in-breath with the in-breath, and your thought of the out-breath with the out. If your thinking is faster or slower than your breathing, it won't work. You have to be intent on keeping your thinking in tandem with the breath. If you breathe in this way, this is the intention that forms the act (//kamma//) of your meditation (//kammatthana//). If you simply let the breath happen on its own, it's no longer a theme of meditation. It's simply the breath. So you have to be careful and intent at all times to keep the mind in place when you breathe in, and in place when you breathe out. When you breathe in, the mind has to think //bud//. When you breathe out, it has to think //dho//. This is the way your meditation has to be.

The quality of inner worth in centering the mind comes when you make the body and mind feel soothed and relaxed. Don't let yourself feel tense or constricted. Let the breath have its freedom. Don't block it or hold it, force it or squeeze it. You have to let it flow smoothly and easily. Like washing a shirt and hanging it out to dry: Let the sun shine and the wind blow, and the water will drip away by itself. In no time at all the shirt will be clean and dry. When you meditate, it's as if you were washing your body and mind. If you want the body to feel clean and fresh inside, you have to put it at its ease. Put your eyes at ease, your ears at ease, your hands, feet, arms, and legs all at their ease. Put your body at ease in every way and at the same time don't let your mind get involved in any outside thoughts. Let them all drop away.

* * *

When you wash your mind so that it's clean and pure, it's bound to become bright within itself with knowledge and understanding. Things you never knew or thought of before will appear to you. The Buddha thus taught that the brightness of the mind is discernment. When this discernment arises, it can give us knowledge about ourselves -- of how the body got to be the way it is and how the mind got to be the way it is. This is called knowledge of form and name or of physical and mental phenomena.

Discernment is like a sail on a sailboat: The wider it's spread, the faster the boat will go. If it's tattered and torn, it won't catch the wind, and the boat will have to go slowly or might not even reach its goal at all. But if the sail is in good shape, it will take the boat quickly to its destination. The same holds true with our discernment. If our knowledge is only in bits and pieces, it won't be able to pull our minds up to the current of the Dhamma. We may end up sinking or giving up because we aren't true and sincere in what we do. When this is the case, we won't be able to get any results. Our good qualities will fall away and sink into our bad ones. Why will they sink? Because our sails don't catch the wind. And why is that? Because they're torn into shreds. And why are they torn? Because we don't take care of them, so they wear out fast and end up tattered and torn.

This is because the mind spends all its time entangled with thoughts and ideas. It doesn't settle down into stillness, so its discernment is tattered and torn. When our discernment is in bits and pieces like this, it leads us down to a low level -- like a log or post that we leave lying flat on the ground, exposed to all sorts of dangers: Termites may eat it or people and animals may trample all over it, because it's left in a low place. But if we stand it up on its end in a posthole, it's free from these dangers, apart from the minor things that can happen to the part buried in the ground.

The same holds true with the mind. If we let it drift along in its ideas, instead of catching hold of it and making it stand firmly in one place -- i.e., if we let it make its nest all the time in concepts and thoughts --it's bound to get defiled and sink to a low level. This is why the Buddha taught us to practice centering the mind in concentration so that it will stand firm in a single object. When the mind is centered, it's free from turmoil and confusion, like a person who has finished his work. The body is soothed and rested, the mind is refreshed -- and when the mind is refreshed, it becomes steady, still, and advances to a higher level, like a person on a high vantage point -- the top of a mountain, the mast of a boat, or a tall tree -- able to see all kinds of things in every direction, near or far, better than a person in a low place like a valley or ravine. In a low place, the sun is visible for only a few hours of the day, and there are corners where the daylight never reaches at all. A mind that hasn't been trained to stand firm in its goodness is sure to fall to a low level and not be bright. But if we train our minds to a higher and higher level, we'll be sure to see things both near and far, and to meet up with brightness.

These are some of the rewards that come from centering the mind in concentration. When we start seeing these rewards, we're bound to develop conviction. When we feel conviction, we become inspired to pull our minds even further -- in the same way that a sail that isn't torn can take a boat to its destination without any trouble. This is one point I want to make.

Another point is that discernment can also be compared to an airplane propeller. When we sit here stilling our minds, it's as if we were flying an airplane up into the sky. If the pilot is sleepy, lazy, or in a blur, we're not safe. No matter how fantastic the plane may be, it can still crash us into a mountain or the forest wilds, because the pilot doesn't have any mindfulness or presence of mind. So when we sit meditating, it's like we're flying an airplane. If our mindfulness is weak and our mind keeps wandering off, our airplane may end up crashing. So we have to keep observing the body to see where at the moment it feels painful or tense; and keep check on the mind to see whether or not it's staying with the body in the present. If the mind isn't with the body, it's as if the pilot isn't staying with his airplane. The Hindrances will have an opening to arise and destroy our stillness. So when we sit and meditate, we have to make sure that we don't get absentminded. We have to be mindful and self-aware at all times and not let the mind slip away anywhere else. When we can do this, we'll develop a sense of comfort and ease, and will begin to see the benefits that come from mental stillness.

This insight is the beginning of discernment. This discernment is like an airplane propeller. The more we practice, the more benefits we'll see. We'll be able to take our plane as high as we want, land it whenever we feel like it, or try any stunts that occur to us. //In other words, when we develop discernment within ourselves we can have control over our mind.// If we want it to think, it'll think. If we don't want it to think, it won't think. We know how to keep our own mind in line. If we can't keep ourselves in line, there's no way we can expect to keep anyone else in line. So if we're intelligent, it's like being a pilot who can keep a plane under his full control. We can keep the mind in line. For example, if it thinks of something bad, we can order it to stop and rest, and the thought will disappear. This is called keeping the mind in line. Or if we want it to think, it will be able to think and to know. Once it knows, that's the end of the matter, and so it will then stop thinking. Whatever we want it to do, it can do for us. According to the Buddha, people like this are called sages because they have discernment: Whatever they do, they really do. They know what is harmful and what isn't. They know how to put a stop to their thinking and as a result they very rarely meet with suffering.

As for stupid people, they simply fool around and drag their feet, pulling themselves back when they should go forward, and forward when they should go back, spending their days and nights thinking about all kinds of nonsense without any substance. Even when they sleep, they keep thinking. Their minds never have any chance to rest at all. And when their minds are forced to keep working like this, they're bound to run down and wear out, and won't give any good results when they're put to use. When this happens, they suffer.

But if we have the discernment to be alert to events, we can let go of what should be let go, stop what should be stopped, and think about what needs to be thought about. We can speak when we should speak, act when we should act -- or simply stay still if that's what's called for. People who work day and night without sleeping, without giving their bodies a chance to rest, are killing themselves. In the same way, thoughts and concepts are things that bring on the end of our life and destroy our mind -- because they keep the mind working whether we're sitting, standing, walking, or lying down. Sometimes, even when we're just sitting alone, we keep thinking -- which means we're killing ourselves, because the mind never gets a chance to rest.

Its strength keeps eroding away; and eventually, when its strength is all gone, its good qualities will have to die.

So when we sit here centering our minds, it's like eating our fill, bathing ourselves till we're thoroughly clean, and then taking a good nap. When we wake up, we feel bright, refreshed, and strong enough to take on any job at all.

This is why the Buddha was able to develop such strength of mind that he was able to do without food, for example, for seven full days and yet not feel tired or weak. This was because his mind was able to rest and be still in the four levels of absorption. His concentration was strong and gave great strength to his body, his speech, and his mind. The strength it gave to his body is what enabled him to wander about, teaching people in every city and town throughout Northern India. Sometimes he had to walk over rough roads through destitute places, but he was never tired in any way.

As for the strength of his speech, he was able to keep teaching, without respite, from the day of his Awakening to the day of his final passing away -- a total of 45 years.

And as for the strength of his mind, he was very astute, capable of teaching his disciples so that thousands of them were able to become arahants. He was able to convince large numbers of people who were stubborn, proud, and entrenched in wrong views, to abandon their views and become his disciples. His heart was full of kindness, compassion, and sincerity, with no feelings of anger, hatred, or malice toward anyone at all. It was a pure heart, without blemish.

All of these qualities came from the Dhamma he had practiced -- not from anything strange or mysterious -- the same Dhamma we're practicing right now. The important thing is that we have to be intent on really doing it if we want to get results. If, when we center the mind, we really do it, we'll get real results. If we don't really do it, we'll get nothing but playthings and dolls. That's how it is with the practice.

* * * * * * * *

GETTING ACQUAINTED INSIDE

September 28, 1958

The four properties of the body -- the way it feels from the inside, i.e., earth (solidity), water (liquidity), wind (motion), and fire (heat) -- are like four people. If you keep trying to acquaint yourself with them, after a while they'll become your friends.

At first they aren't too familiar with you, so they don't trust you and will probably want to test your mettle. For instance, when you start sitting in meditation, they'll take a stick and poke you in your legs so that your legs hurt or grow numb. If you lie down, they'll poke you in the back. If you lie on your side, they'll poke you in the waist. If you get up and sit again, they'll test you again. Or they may whisper to you to give up. If you give in to them, the King of Death will grin until his cheeks hurt.

What you have to do is smile against the odds and see things through. Keep talking with all four properties. Even though they don't respond at first, you have to keep talking with them, asking them this and that. After a while they'll give you a one-word answer. So you keep talking and then their answers will start getting longer until you eventually become acquaintances and can have real conversations. From that point they become your friends. They'll love you and help you and tell you their secrets. You'll be a person with friends and won't have to be lonely. You'll eat together, sleep together, and wherever you go, you'll go together. You'll feel secure. No matter how long you sit, you won't ache. No matter how long you walk, you won't feel tired -- because you have friends to talk with as you walk along, so that you enjoy yourself and reach your destination before you realize it.

This is why we're taught to practice meditation by keeping mindfulness immersed firmly in the body. Contemplate your meditation themes -- body, feelings, mind, and mental qualities -- without letting your mind wander astray in outside thoughts and preoccupations. Contemplate the body so as to know how its properties are getting along, where it feels pleasant, painful, or neutral. Notice how the mind moves around in the various things you know until you reach the mental quality that is still, solid, and true.

This way it's like having friends go with you wherever you go and whatever you do. In other words, when the body walks, the mind walks with it. When the body lies down, the mind lies down with it. When the body sits, the mind sits with it. Wherever the body stops, the mind stops, too. But most of us aren't like this. The body takes two steps, but the mind takes four or five -- so how can it //not// get tired? The body lies in a mosquito net surrounded by a railing and seven thick walls, but the mind can still go running outside. When this is the case, where will it get any happiness? It'll have to wander around exposed to the sun, wind, rain, and all sorts of dangers because it has no protection. If there's no concentration to act as a shelter for the heart, it'll always have to meet with misery and pain.

For this reason, you should train your heart to stay firm in concentration and to develop full strength within yourself so that you can be your own person. This way you'll be bound to meet with all things pure and good.

* * * * * * * *

STOP & THINK

July 20, 1959

Insight isn't something that can be taught. It's something you have to give rise to within yourself. It's not something you simply memorize and talk about. If we were to teach it just so we could memorize it, I can guarantee that it wouldn't take five hours. But if you wanted to understand one word of it, three years might not even be enough.

//Memorizing gives rise simply to memories. Acting is what gives rise to the truth.// This is why it takes effort and persistence for you to understand and master this skill on your own.

When insight arises, you'll know what's what, where it's come from, and where it's going -- as when we see a lantern burning brightly: We know that, 'That's the flame... That's the smoke.. That's the light.' We know how these things arise from mixing what with what, and where the flame goes when we put out the lantern. All of this is the skill of insight.

Some people say that tranquillity meditation and insight meditation are two separate things -- but how can that be true? Tranquillity meditation is 'stopping,' insight meditation is 'thinking' that leads to clear knowledge. When there's clear knowledge, the mind stops still and stays put. They're all part of the same thing.

Knowing has to come from stopping. If you don't stop, how can you know? For instance, if you're sitting in a car or a boat that is traveling fast and you try to look at the people or things passing by right next to you along the way, you can't see clearly who's who or what's what. But if you stop still in one place, you'll be able to see things clearly.

Or even closer to home: When we speak, there has to be a pause between each phrase. If you tried to talk without any pauses at all, would anyone be able to understand what you said?

This is why we first have to make the mind stop to be quiet and still. When the mind stays still in a state of normalcy, concentration arises and discernment follows. This is something you have to work at and do for yourself. Don 't simply believe what others say. //Get so that you know 'Oh! Oh! Oh!' from within, and not just 'Oh? Oh? Oh?' from what people say.// Don't take the good things they say and stick them in your heart. You have to make these things your own by getting them to arise from within you. Spending one dollar of your own money is better than spending 100 dollars you've borrowed from someone else. If you use borrowed money, you have to worry because you're in debt.

If you use your own money, there's nothing to worry about.

* * *

Stopping is what gives rise to strength. If a man is walking or running, he can't put up a good fight with anyone, because the advantage lies with the person standing still, not with the person walking or running. This is why we're taught to make the mind stop still so that it can gain strength. Then it will be able to start walking again with strength and agility.

It's true that we have two feet, but when we walk we have to step with one foot at a time. If you try to step with both feet at once, you won't get anywhere. Or if you try to walk with just one foot, you can't do that either. When the right foot stops, the left foot has to take a step. When the left foot stops, the right foot has to take a step. You have to stop with one foot and step with the other if you're going to walk with any strength because the strength comes from the foot that has stopped, not from the foot taking a step. One side has to stop while the other side takes a step. Otherwise, you'll have no support and are sure to fall down. If you don't believe me, try stepping with both feet at once and see how far you get.

In the same way, tranquillity and insight have to go together. You first have to make the mind stop in tranquillity and then take a step in your investigation: This is insight meditation. The understanding that arises is discernment. To let go of your attachment to that understanding is release.

So stopping is the factor that gives rise to strength, knowledge, and discernment -- the fixed mind that knows both the world and the Dhamma in a state of heightened virtue, heightened consciousness, and heightened discernment leading on to the transcendent.

* * * * * * * *

HEIGHTENED CONSCIOUSNESS

June 25, 1959

The Buddha taught, 'The pursuit of heightened consciousness is the heart of the Buddhas' teaching.' Heightened consciousness is a state of mind that lies above and beyond mental defilement. There are two ways it can be reached:

(1) The mind doesn't yet have any heightened inner quality, but we heighten it through our efforts.

(2) The mind has developed the proper inner quality and uses it to keep itself safe, above and beyond defilement.

The first case refers to the state of ordinary people's minds. When they aren't sitting in meditation, their minds aren't in any special state of concentration, so if defilement arises within them, they have to be determined and perceptive -- to be aware of the defilement and to make up their minds that they won't let it push them around. This is called Right Attitude. Even though the mind isn't in concentration, this technique can give results.

What this means is that we're alert to what's going on. For example, when we're angry, when we meet with something undesirable, we should be alert to the fact and make ourselves determined that no matter what, we're going to keep the defilement of anger under control by resisting it and putting our better side into play. In other words, when we're angry, we act as if we weren't. Instead of letting the anger overpower the mind, we use our inner goodness to overpower the mind. This is called heightened consciousness. When you meet with something you don't like, don't let the fact that you don't like it show. Instead, act as if you were happy and calm. I.e., put your good side to use. Don't let your bad side show under any circumstances.

If you're circumspect and composed enough to hold the mind in check before it can let its defilements come out in word or deed, if you can force the defilements to stop and can let only your best manners show, you count as having heightened consciousness. You are also a good member of any social group, for you can work toward your own progress and that of the group as a whole.

In the texts, this quality is called composure -- a state of mind that lies above the defilements. This is one form of heightened consciousness and is something we should all try to develop within ourselves as we are able.

The second form of heightened consciousness refers to a mind freed from the Hindrances and trained to a state of Right Concentration. The mind is firmly established in its inner quality. When defilements arise, they can't overpower the mind //because they can't reach in to touch it//, for the mind is protected by its own full measure of inner quality.

I ask that we all aim at making this form of heightened consciousness arise within ourselves by being persistent and persevering in cherishing our own inner goodness -- in the same way that when we have good food, we make sure to chase away the flies so that we can enjoy it in good health.

To do this, you have to be observant and make two kinds of effort: the effort to abandon your defilements and the effort to develop your meditation theme, which is the means for wiping out the mental Hindrances. There are five types of Hindrances: sensual desire, ill will, torpor & lethargy, restlessness & anxiety, and uncertainty. As for meditation, there are two ways of practicing it -- in series and in isolation -- as I'll explain to you now.

(1) To practice in series is to practice by the book: contemplating the unattractiveness of the body, for instance, by following the lists of its parts without skipping over any of them or mixing them up. Whichever theme you choose, you have to understand how the topics are grouped and in what order, so as to deal with them properly. This kind of meditation can give great benefits, but at the same time can cause great harm. For example, if you contemplate the unattractiveness of the body, it can lead to a sense of dispassion, detachment, and calm, but there are times it can also get you into a state where you can't eat or sleep because everything starts seeming filthy and disgusting. This is one way it can be harmful. Or sometimes you may contemplate the body until a mental image arises, but you get frightened and unnerved. In cases like this, you have to try to be up on what's happening so that your theme will help you instead of harming you.

(2) To practice in isolation is to focus on a single refined theme that doesn't have a lot of different features. I.e., you focus on being mindful of the in-and-out breath, without letting your attention slip away. Focus on whatever kind of breathing feels soothing, and the mind will settle down. Try to make the breath more and more refined, all the while keeping the mind gently with the breath, in the same way that you'd cup a bit of fluff in the palm of your hand. Do this until you feel that there's no 'in' or 'out' to the breath at all. The mind doesn't wander around. It's quiet and still, able to cut away thoughts of past and future. At this point it becomes even more refined, with no restlessness at all. The mind is stable and doesn't change along with its objects. It's firmly set and unwavering to the point where it becomes fixed and strong.

When you can develop your meditation to this point, it will make the mind let go of its attachments and gain conviction and understanding into the truths of inconstancy, stress, and not-self. Your doubts will fall away, and you will know the way of the world and the way of Liberation, without having to ask for confirmation from anyone else. When your knowledge is clear and free from uncertainty, the mind is firm in its own strength. This is when you become your own refuge -- when your mind isn't affected by other people or objects and reaches the happiness and ease of heightened consciousness.

* * * * * * * *

RESPECT FOR TRUTH

There are four kinds of truth in the body of every human being: stress, its cause, its disbanding, and the path to its disbanding.

These truths are like gold: No matter whether you try to make gold into a bracelet, a ring, an earring, or whatever, it stays gold in line with its nature. Go ahead and try to change it, but it'll stay as it is. The same holds true with the nature of the body. No matter how wonderful you try to make it, it'll have to return to its normal nature. It'll have to have stress and pain, their cause, their disbanding and the path to their disbanding.

People who don't admit the normal nature of the body are said to be deluded; those who realize its normal nature are said to know. Wise people realize the principles of nature, which is why they don't get caught up in a lot of fuss and confusion. In other words, the body is like an object that originally weighs four kilograms. Even though we may find things to plaster onto it to make it heavier, the plaster will eventually have to fall off and leave us with the original four kilograms. You simply can't escape its original nature.

The stress and pain that occur in line with the principles of nature aren't actually all that troublesome. For example, pain and disease: If we try to fight nature and not let there be disease, or if we want it to disappear right away, sometimes we make the disease even worse. But if we treat the disease without worrying about whether or not it'll go away, it will follow its natural course and go away at its own pace without too much trouble or suffering on our part. This is because the mind isn't struggling to fight nature, and so the body is strong enough to contend with the disease. Sometimes, if we have this attitude, we can survive diseases that otherwise would kill us. But if the mind gets all upset and thrashes around, wanting the disease to go away, then sometimes a small disease can get so bad it'll kill us -- like a person with a scorpion sting he thinks is a cobra bite, who gets so frightened and upset that the whole thing gets out of hand. Sometimes we may come down with a disease that ought to finish us off, but the power of the mind is so great that it fights off the pain and the disease goes away.

This is one of the principles of nature -- but we shouldn't be complacent about it. If we get complacent, then when the disease comes back it'll be worse than before, because the truth, when you get right down to it, is that no matter what you do, these things can't escape their true nature. When the body's normal nature is to have pain and stress, then try as you may to make the pain go away, it'll have to return to its true nature. Whether or not you can cure it, the truth is still the truth. In other words, even when you cure the disease, it comes back.

Suppose, for instance, that we feel ill, take some medicine, and feel better. We think the disease has gone away. People of discernment, though, realize that it hasn't gone anywhere. It's simply been suppressed for a while and then it'll have to come back out again. We may think that we've made the disease go away, but the disease is smarter than we are. When it comes back again, it wears a new costume, like actors in a theater troupe: If the public gets tired of one play, they put on another. Otherwise, no one will spend money to watch them perform. In other words, the disease is smart enough to come from a new direction. If it put on the old play, it wouldn't get any reward. At first it came in your stomach, so this time it comes in your leg. You treat it until it goes away, but then it comes back in a new play -- in your eye. You treat it in your eye until it goes away, and then it comes back in your ear. So you treat your ear. Wherever it comes, you keep treating it and your money keeps getting spent. As for the disease, it's glad you're fooled. There's only one of it, but it comes in all sorts of disguises. Ageing, illness, and death are very smart. They can keep us tied on a short leash so that we can never get away from them. People who don't train their minds to enter the Dhamma are sure to miss this point, but those who train themselves to know the truth of the Dhamma will understand this principle of nature for what it is.

If we don't realize the truth, we lose in two ways. On the one side we lose in terms of the world: We waste our money because we don't realize what's necessary and what isn't, so we get worked up and upset all out of proportion to reality. On the other side, we lose in terms of the Dhamma because our virtue, concentration, and meditation all suffer. Illness makes us lose in these ways because we lack discernment. This is why the Buddha taught us to use our eyes. We live in the world, so we have to look out for our well-being in the world;

we live in the Dhamma, so we have to look out for our well-being in the Dhamma. The results will then develop of their own accord. If we use discernment to evaluate things until we know what's necessary and what's not, the time won't be long before we prosper in terms both of the world and of the Dhamma. We won't have to waste money and time, and there won't be any obstacles to our practice.

In other words, when you see that something is true, don't try to get in its way. Let it follow its own course. //Even though the mind doesn't age, grow ill or die, still the body has to age, grow ill and die.// This is a part of its nature that you can't fight. When it gets ill, you take care of it enough to keep it going. You won't be put to difficulties in terms of the world, and your Dhamma practice won't suffer.

The suffering we feel because of these things comes from the cause of stress: delusion, ignorance of the truth. When the mind is deluded, it doesn't know the cause of stress or the path to the disbanding of stress. When it knows, it doesn't get caught up in the natural pain and stress of the body. //Mental suffering comes from the accumulation of defilement, not from ageing, illness and death.// Once the stillness of the path arises within us, then ageing, illness, and death won't unsettle the mind. Sorrow, despair, distress, and lamentation won't exist. The mind will be separate. We can compare this to the water in the sea when it's full of waves: If we take a dipperful of sea water and set it down on the beach, there won't be any waves in the dipper at all. The waves come from wavering. If we don't stir it up, there won't be any waves. For this reason, we have to fix the mind so that it's steady in its meditation, without letting anything else seep in. It will then gain clarity: the discernment that sees the truth.

* * *

The mental state of the cause of stress leads us to pain; the mental state of the path leads us to happiness. If you don't want stress or pain, don't stay with the flow of their cause. //Mental suffering is something unnatural to the mind.// It comes from letting defilement seep in. Diseases arise in the body, but we let their effects spread into the mind. We have to learn which phenomena die and which don't. If our defilements are thick and tenacious, there'll be a lot of ageing, illness and death. If our defilements are thin, there won't be much ageing, illness and death.

For this reason, we should build inner quality -- awareness of the truth -- within ourselves. However far the body is going to develop, that's how far it's going to have to deteriorate, so don't be complacent. The important point is that you develop the mind. If the mind gets developed to a point of true maturity, it won t regress. In other words, if your concentration is strong and your discernment developed, the defilements that enwrap your mind will fall away in the same way that when the flowers of a fruit tree reach full bloom the petals fall away, leaving the fruit. When the fruit develops till it's fully ripe, the skin and flesh fall away, leaving just the seeds that contain all the makings for a new tree. When the mind is fully developed, then ageing, illness, and death fall away. Mental stress and suffering fall away, leaving the mind in Right Concentration.

When Right Concentration is ripe, you'll know the location of what dies and what doesn't. If you want to die, then stay with what dies. If you don't want birth, don't stay with what takes birth. If you don't want ageing, don't stay with what ages. If you don't want illness, don't stay with what grows ill. //If you don't leave these things, you have to live with them.// If you leave them, your mind won't age -- it won't be able to age; it won't grow ill -- it won't be able to grow ill; it won't die; it won't be able to die. If you can reach this point, you're said to have respect for the truth -- for the teachings of the Buddha.

Respect for the truth isn't a matter of bowing down or paying homage. It means having a sense of time and place: If something is possible, you do it. If it's not, you don't -- and you don't try to straighten it out, either. The defilements of unawareness, craving, and attachment are things that connect us with suffering, so don't let them entangle the mind.

Unawareness is the mental state that is deluded about the past, present, and future. True awareness knows what's past and lets it go; knows what's future and lets it go; knows what's present and doesn't fall for it. It can remove all attachments. Unawareness knows, but it falls for these things, which is why it forms the fuel for suffering. True awareness knows what things are past, present, and future, //but it doesn't run out after them//. It knows but it stays put -- quiet and calm. It doesn't waver up or down. It doesn't seep out, and nothing seeps in. The past, the present, and the future it knows in terms of the principles of its nature, without having to reason or think. People who have to reason and think are the ones who don't know. With knowledge, there's no thinking or reasoning, and yet the mind knows thoroughly. This is true awareness. Ageing, illness, and death all become an affair of release. In other words, nothing is fashioned in the mind, and when nothing is fashioned, there's no ageing, illness, or death.

As for attachment, it catches us and ties us to a stake, like a person being led to his execution with no chance to wiggle free. We're tied with a wire stretching out to the past and future. Craving inches along the wire towards us, rolling his eyes and making horrible faces, so that we worry about the past and future. Behind us he splits into three: craving for sensuality, craving for possibilities, and craving for impossibilities. In front of us, he splits into three -- the same three sorts of craving -- and in the present he splits into the same three. With nine of them and only one of us, how can we expect to be a match for them? In the end, we're no match at all.

If we practice concentration and develop discernment, though, we'll be able to cut the wire of Death. When the mental state that forms the path arises, our thoughts of past and future will all disband. This is the disbanding of stress. Attachment and craving won't exist -- so where will stress and suffering have a chance to arise? People who have defilements -- even if they earn $3,000 a day -- can't keep themselves from falling into hell. But people with no defilements, even if they don't have anything at all, are happy nonetheless -- because the mind has enough to eat, enough to drink, enough of everything. It's not poor. When we can think correctly in this way, it's called respect for the Dhamma -- and it can make us happy.

* * *

Respect for the Dhamma means taking seriously all the things that come in and out the house of your mind. //(1) The door of the body:// You have to be careful to make sure that none of your actions stray into ways that are harmful. //(2) The door of speech// -- the door of the mouth -- is very large. The tongue may be only a tiny piece of flesh, but it's very important, because what we say today can keep echoing for an aeon after we die. When the body dies, the time isn't long before there's nothing left of it, and so it's not as important as our speech, for the stone engravings we make with our tongue last a long, long time. For this reason, we should show a great deal of respect for our mouths by saying only things that are worthwhile. //(3) The door of the intellect:// We have to be careful with our thoughts. If something is harmful to us when we think about it, then we shouldn't think about it. We should think only about things that are beneficial and good.

These three doors are always receiving guests into the mind, so we have to pay attention to see who is coming with good intentions and who is coming with bad. Don't let down your guard. Whoever comes with good intentions will bring you happiness and prosperity. As for troublemakers and thieves, they'll rob you and kill you and cause you all sorts of trouble.

As for your eyes, ears and nose, these are like three windows that you have to be careful about as well. You have to know when to open and when to close them. If you aren't discerning, you may invite thieves into your house to rob and kill you, plundering all the wealth your parents and teachers gave you. This is called being an ingrate -- not knowing enough to care for the legacies that others have passed down to you. The legacies of your parents are your life, health, and strength. The legacies of your teachers are all the things they taught to make you a good person. If you leave your thoughts, words, and deeds wide open so that evil can flow into you, evil will keep pouring in, wearing down the health and strength of your body and mind. This is called having no appreciation for the kindness of your parents and teachers.

Sometimes we don't leave just the doors open -- we leave the windows open as well. Lizards, snakes, scorpions, birds, and bats will come in through the windows and take up residence in our house. After a while they'll lay claim to it as theirs -- and we give in to them. So they leave their droppings all over and make a mess of the place. If we don't exercise self-restraint, our body and mind are going to be ruined, and this will destroy the wealth our parents and teachers went to such great trouble to give us.

So if anyone tries to come into your house, you have to grill them thoroughly to see what they're up to and what they're coming for -- for good or for bad. Look them straight in the eye. In other words, you have to be mindful and reflecting in all your actions. Anything that isn't good you have to drive out of your activities. Even if it would help you financially or make you popular and well-known, don't have anything to do with it. The same holds true with your speech. If something you're about to say will serve a good purpose, then open your mouth and say it. Say what should be said, and don't say what shouldn't. If something serves no real purpose, then no matter how fantastic it may be, don't say it. You have to know how to respond to all the activities that present themselves for you to do. Let in the good ones and drive out the bad.

As for the mind, you have to show restraint with that, too. If a thought will lead to good and happy results, you should let yourself think it. But as for thoughts that will cause harm, don't pull them in. If you go gobbling down everything you like, you're going to die. I.e., (1) your inner quality will deteriorate. (2) The wealth your parents and teachers gave you will disappear.

As for your senses -- sight, hearing, smell, taste, feeling -- you should show an interest in everything that will benefit you. Drive out what's bad and bring in what's good. When you can do this, it's called showing respect for your parents, your teachers, and yourself as well. Your house will be clean, and you can lounge around in comfort without having to worry about sitting on bird- or bat-droppings.

But if you don't exercise self-restraint, your actions will be defiled, your words will be defiled, so how can your mind live in comfort? Like a filthy house: No guests will want to go into it, and even the owner isn't comfortable there. If you keep your home clean and well-swept, though, it'll be nice to live in, and good people will be happy to come and visit. When good people come and visit, they won't cause you any harm. In other words, the things that come in through the senses are like guests and they won't cause any harm to the mind. The mind will be good and obedient and will stay put where you tell it to. But even if your couches and chairs are made of marble: If they're dusty and dirty, no guests will want to sit there, and you yourself won't want to, either.

* * *

So if you keep your virtue bright and clear with regard to our senses of sight, hearing, smell, taste, feeling, and ideation, your mind will find it easy to attain concentration. Then even when defilements come to visit you from time to time, they won't be able to do you any harm -- because you have more than enough wealth to share with them. If thieves come, you can throw them a hunk of diamond ore and they'll disappear. If ageing, illness, and death come begging, you can throw them another hunk, and they'll stop pestering us.

If your old kamma debts come at you when you're poor, they won't get enough to satisfy them, so they'll end up taking your life. But if they come at you when you're rich, you simply share your merit -- all the inner wealth you've accumulated -- and they'll leave you alone. If your goodness isn't yet full, then evil will have an opening to flow in; but if your hands, feet, eyes, ears, nose, tongue, body, and mind are filled with goodness, evil can't get into you, so you can come out unscathed.

Ultimately, you'll get so rich in inner quality that you can go beyond both good and evil. That's when you can be truly happy and free from danger. So I ask that you all remember this and treat your thoughts, words, and deeds in a way that shows respect for the Dhamma as I've explained it. You'll then meet with the happiness you hope for.

* * * * * * * *

SERVING A PURPOSE
November 4, 1958

My own motto is, 'Make yourself as good as possible, and everything else will have to follow along in being good.' If you don't neglect yourself for the sake of external things, you'll have to be good. So you shouldn't neglect yourself. Develop your inner worth to your own satisfaction.

The world says, 'Don't worry about whether you're good or bad, as long as you have money.' This is just the opposite of the Dhamma, which says, 'Don't worry about whether you're rich or poor, as long as you're a good person.'

* * *

Your good qualities, if you don't know how to use them, can hurt you -- like money, which is something good but, if you don't know how to spend it wisely, can lead to your ruin; or like a good sharp knife that, if you don't know how to use it properly, can do you harm. Say, for instance, that you use the knife to kill someone. When you're caught, you'll have to be thrown in jail or executed, that means that you used the knife to kill yourself.

* * *

Each of us has four kinds of valuables: the goodness of our deeds, the goodness of our words, the goodness of our manners, and the goodness of our thoughts. For this reason, we have to care for these valuables as best we can.

Most of us have good things to our name but we hardly ever bring them out to put them to use. Instead, we like to bring out only our worst things to use. In other words, we keep our goodness to ourselves and show only our worst side -- like the plates, cups and saucers in our homes: The good ones we keep in the cupboard, and only the chipped, cracked and broken ones get put on the table, because we're afraid the good ones will break. As for our best clothes, we don't dare use them because we're afraid they'll get old, stained, or torn. So we end up keeping them packed away until they get so moldy or moth-eaten that they can't be worn and have to become rags. As a result, we don't get any good out of our valuables in line with their worth. In the same way, //if we have any goodness within ourselves but don't put it to use, it serves no purpose at all, either for ourselves or for others// -- like a knife you keep packed away until it gets rusty: If you finally bring it out to slice some food, the rust will poison you. If you happen to cut your hand or foot with it, you may come down with tetanus and die.

* * *

An intelligent person knows how to use both good and evil without causing harm. Arahants even know how to use their defilements so as to be of benefit. When sages use common language, it can serve a good purpose. But when fools use fine language, it can be bad. If they use bad language; it's even worse. An example of a person who used common language to serve a good purpose is Chao Khun Upali (Siricando Jan). One time he was invited to give a sermon in the palace during the weekly funeral observances for a young prince whose death had caused a great deal of sorrow to the royal relatives. On the previous weeks, some very high-ranking monks from Wat Debsirin had been invited to give sermons and they had all gone on about what a good man the prince had been, and how sad it was that he had come to such an untimely end that prevented him from living on to do more good for the world. This had caused the relatives to cry all the more.

When it came Chao Khun Upali's turn to give a sermon, though, he didn't carry on in the same vein at all. Instead, he started out with the theme of mindfulness of the body, describing the ugliness and foulness of the body, which is full of repulsive and disgusting things: snot, spit, dandruff, sweat, etc., etc. 'When the body dies, there's not one good thing about it,' he said, 'but people sit around weeping and wailing with tears streaming in tracks down their cheeks and mucus running out their noses and dribbling down to their chins. With their faces all in a mess like this, they don't look the least bit attractive.'

This made the relatives who had been crying so embarrassed that they stopped crying immediately, after which they expressed a great deal of admiration for Chao Khun Upali and his sermon. This is why it's said that a person who uses a sharp tongue with skill is a great sage. //If people are wise, then no matter what they say, it serves a good purpose// because they have a sense of time, place, and the people they're talking to. If something will serve a purpose, even if it sounds unpleasant, it should be said. If it won't serve a purpose, even if it sounds pleasant, don't say it.

* * *

The affairs of the religion are an affair of the heart: Don't go looking for them in the dirt or the grass, in temples or in monastery buildings. Although people may do good with their words and deeds, it's still an affair of the world. The affairs of the religion are quiet and still, without any fuss or bother. They're aimed at a mind that's pure, undefiled, and bright. With goodness, there's no need to do anything much at all. Simply sit still, and there's purity.

Take the example of the little novice with quiet and composed manners who, as he was going out for alms one morning, happened to enter the compound of a stingy moneylender and his wife. Whether or not they would put any food in his bowl, he didn't show the least concern, and he didn't open his mouth to say a word. When he left -- his bowl still empty -- he went calmly and unhurriedly along his way. The moneylender's wife, seeing him, became curious and trailed him from a distance, until he reached a point where he suddenly had to go to the bathroom. Carefully he put down his bowl and, using his foot, cleared away the leaves to make a little depression in the dirt so that the urine wouldn't flow off anywhere. Then, after looking right, left and all around him to make sure that there wouldn't be anyone walking past, he squatted down to urinate unobtrusively in the proper way. When he had finished, he used his foot to cover the spot with dirt and leaves as it had been before, picked up his bowl and went calmly on his way.

As for the moneylender's wife, who had been watching from a distance, when she saw the manner in which the little novice was acting, the thought occurred to her that he had probably buried something of value. So she stealthily crept to the spot and, using her hand, dug the earth out of the hole buried by the novice and sniffed it to see what it was -- and that was when she realized that it was urine. The little novice had taken care of his urine as if it were gold. 'If it were something more valuable than this,' she thought, 'there's no doubt how well he'd care for it. With manners like this, we should adopt him as our foster son. He'd be sure to look after our fortune to make sure that it wouldn't get wasted away.'

She went home to tell her husband who, impressed with her story, had a servant go and invite the novice into their home so that they could inform him of their intentions. The novice, however, declined their offer to make him their heir, and taught them the Dhamma, making them see the rewards of practicing generosity, virtue, and meditation. The moneylender and his wife were deeply moved, overcame their stinginess, and asked to take refuge in the Buddha, Dhamma, and Sangha from that day onward. Eventually, they progressed in virtue, meditation, and right practice to the point where they both gained a glimpse of Liberation. Afterwards, they made a large donation to build a memorial over the spot where the novice had urinated, as a reminder of the goodness that had grown within them from the puddle of urine the little novice had bestowed on them that day.

The affairs of the religion come down to //'sacitta-pariyodapanam'// -- making the heart entirely clean, clear and pure. //'Etam buddhana-sasanam'// -- this is the heart of the Buddhas' teachings.

* * * * * * * *

FREE AT LAST

July 13, 1958; May 11, 1957 October 12, 1957

When the heart is a slave to its moods and defilements -- greed, aversion, and delusion -- it 's like being a slave to poor people, troublemakers, and crooks, all of whom are people we shouldn't be enslaved to. The 'poor people' here are greed: hunger, desire, never having enough. This feeling of 'not enough' is what it means to be poor.

As for aversion, this doesn't necessarily mean out-and-out anger. It also means being grumpy or in a bad mood. If anyone annoys us or does something displeasing, we get irritated and resentful. This is called being a slave to troublemakers.

Delusion means seeing good as evil or evil as good, right as wrong or wrong as right, thinking you're good when you're evil, or evil when you're good. This is called being a slave to crooks.

But if the mind becomes a slave to goodness, this is called being a slave to the Buddha, Dhamma, and Sangha, in which case we're well-off because the Buddha is a kind person. He won't make us work all hours of the day and instead will allow us time to rest and find peace of mind.

But still, as long as we're slaves, we can't say that it's really good, because slaves have no freedom. They still have a price on their heads. Only when we gain release from slavery can we be fully free and happy. So for this reason, be diligent in your work: Meditate a lot every day. You'll profit from it, get to buy yourself out of slavery to the Buddha, Dhamma, and Sangha, and gain Liberation. Don't let there be anyone at all over you giving you orders. That's when it's really ideal.

* * *

Actually, the Buddha never meant for us to take as our mainstay anything or anyone else aside from ourselves. Even when we take refuge in the Buddha, Dhamma, and Sangha, he never praised it as being really ideal. //He wanted us to take ourselves as our refuge.// 'The self is its own mainstay:' We don't have to take our authority from anyone else. We can depend on ourselves and govern ourselves. We're free and don't have to fall back on anyone else. When we can reach this state, that 's when we'll be released from slavery -- and truly happy.

When we're slaves to the Buddha, Dhamma, and Sangha, we're told to be generous, to observe the precepts and to practice meditation -- all of which are things that will give rise to inner worth within us. In being generous, we have to suffer and work because of the effort involved in finding wealth and material goods that we then give away as donations. In observing the precepts, we have to forgo the words and deeds we would ordinarily feel like saying or doing. Both of these activities are ways in which we benefit others more than ourselves. But when we practice meditation, we sacrifice inner objects -- unskillful thoughts and mental states -- and make our minds solid, sovereign, and pure.

This is called paying homage to the Buddha, Dhamma, and Sangha through the practice -- which the Buddha praised as better than paying homage with material objects. Even though the Buddha would have benefited personally from the homage shown with material objects, he never praised it as being better than homage shown through the practice, which gives all its benefits to the person who pays the homage. This was the sort of homage that pleased the Buddha, because the practice of training the heart to reach purity is the way by which a person can gain release from all suffering and stress. The Buddha had the kindness and compassion to want to help living beings gain freedom from all forms of suffering, which is why he taught us to meditate, so that we can free our hearts from their slavery to the defilements of the world.

When we become slaves to the religion -- to the Buddha, Dhamma, and Sangha -- we're still not released from suffering as long as our minds still have worries and concerns. Being a slave to our concerns is like being in debt to them. When we're in debt, we have no real freedom in our hearts. Only when we can find the money to pay off our debts can we be happy, free, and at ease. The more we pay off our debts, the more light-hearted we'll feel. In the same way, if we can let go of our various worries and cares, peace will arise in our hearts. We'll be released from our slavery to craving and defilement, and will find happiness because peace is what brings release from suffering. This is why the Buddha taught us to center our hearts in concentration so as to give rise to stillness, peace, and the inner wealth with which we'll be able to pay off all of our debts. That's when we'll attain happiness and ease. All our burdens and sufferings will fall away from our hearts and we'll enter full freedom.

* * *

The mind has two kinds of thoughts, skillful and unskillful. Unskillful thoughts are when the mind thinks in ways that are bad -- with greed, anger or delusion -- about things either past or future. When this happens, the mind is said to be a slave to defilement. As for skillful thoughts, they deal in good and worthwhile ways with things future or past. We have to try to let go of both these kinds of thoughts so that they don't exist in the mind if we want to gain release from our slavery.

* * *

If we want to buy ourselves completely out of slavery, we have to farm our four acres so that they bear abundant fruit. In other words, we have to develop the body's four properties -- earth, water, fire, and wind -- to a point of fullness by practicing meditation and using pure breath sensations to soothe and nourish every part of the body. When the mind is pure and the body soothed, it's like our farm's having plenty of rain and ground water to nourish our crops. I.e., our concentration is solid and enters the first stage of absorption, with its five factors: directed thought, evaluation, rapture, pleasure, and singleness-of-preoccupation. Directed thought is like harrowing our soil. Evaluation is like plowing and scattering the seed. Rapture is when our crops begin to bud, pleasure is when their flowers bloom, and singleness-of-preoccupation is when the fruits develop until they're ripened and sweet -- and at the same time, their seeds contain all their ancestry. What this means is that in each seed is another plant complete with branches, flowers and leaves. If anyone plants the seed, it will break out into another plant just like the one it came from.

In the same way, when we center the mind to the point of absorption, we can gain insight into our past -- maybe even back through many lifetimes -- good and bad, happy and sad. This insight will cause us to feel dismay and dispassion, and to lose taste for all states of being and birth. The mind will let go of its attachments to self, to mental and physical phenomena, and to all thoughts and concepts -- past and future, good and bad. It will enter a state of neutral equanimity. If we then work at developing it further, we'll be able to cut away more and more of our states of being and birth. When the mind gains change-of-lineage knowledge, which passes from the mundane over into the transcendent, it will see what dies and what doesn't. It will blossom as //buddho// -- the awareness that knows no cessation -- bright in its seclusion from thoughts and burdens, from mental effluents and preoccupations. When we practice in this way, we'll come to the reality of birthlessness and deathlessness -- the highest happiness -- and on into Liberation.

This is how we repay all our debts without the least bit remaining. As the texts say, 'In release, there is the knowledge, "Released. Birth is no more, the holy life is fulfilled, the task done."'

For this reason, we should be intent on cleansing and polishing our hearts so that they can gain release from their worries and preoccupations, which are the source of pain and discontent. Peace, coolness, and a bright happiness will arise within us, in the same way as when we unshackle ourselves from our encumbering burdens and debts.

We'll be free -- beyond the reach of all suffering and stress.

* * * * * * * *

sabbe satta sada hontu
avera sukha-jivino
katam punna-phalam mayham
sabbe bhagi bhavantu te

May all beings live happily, free from animosity.
May all share in the blessings springing from the good I have done.

[end]

ONE FOOT IN THE WORLD

Buddhist Approaches to Present-day Problems

LILY DE SILVA

The Wheel Publication No. 337/338

BUDDHIST PUBLICATION SOCIETY
Kandy 1986 Sri Lanka

Copyright 1986 Buddhist Publication Society

DharmaNet Edition 1994

This electronic edition is offered for free distribution via DharmaNet by arrangement with the publisher.

Transcribed for DharmaNet by Maureen Riordan

DharmaNet International
P.O. Box 4951, Berkeley CA 94704-4951

PREFACE

The dispensation of the Buddha includes not only monks and nuns, but male and female lay followers as well. All these four groups comprising the Buddhist community have but one ultimate goal. That goal is the attainment of Nibbana.

Though Nibbana means final liberation from the world, while walking along the path to liberation a Buddhist has to live in the world and deal with the conditions of worldly existence. This problem is likely to be felt especially acutely by the lay Buddhist, who may find that the demands and attractions of secular life tend to pull him away from the path to deliverance. However, the Buddha was not unaware of or unconcerned about this dilemma confronted by his lay disciples, but gave it his careful attention. He taught his lay followers how to organize lay life in accordance with the ethical principles of the Dhamma and how to lead successful lay lives without deviating from the path of rectitude.

As lay Buddhists, we must be ever vigilant so that in our pursuit of worldly goals such as wealth, pleasure, and success we do not lose sight of our spiritual goal.

Care should be taken especially to avoid the violation of the basic moral principles summed up in the Five Precepts, as such violation leads to regression on the path. We must often remind ourselves that the first two of the four stages of holiness can be attained by those still leading a married life; that there have been non- returners of the third stage who continued to remain in lay life though observing celibacy; and that the texts record instances of laymen who even attained arahatship prior to their deaths. The Pali Canon contains ample evidence of exemplary laymen and laywomen, such as Anathapindika, Visakha, and the parents of Nakula, to mention only the most prominent. Therefore a layman should make every endeavor to follow the way to the end of suffering in this very life itself, by leading a life of moderation and self-discipline and by practicing meditation with the aim of developing insight into the ultimate truths of life and death.

The essays in this booklet explore various facets of experience from lay life which require the attention of the lay aspirant to deliverance. They deal particularly with those which have become more pronounced and urgent in our contemporary materialistic and secularized world. My wish is to share these ideas with others who also may be attempting to follow the Buddha's path in the lay life, and are thus walking with one foot on the way to Nibbana and one foot still in the world. I hope these essays will assist them to understand and overcome the problems they may face in their day-to-day lives.

A LAYMAN'S HAPPINESS

Life in the modern age has become particularly trying and problematic. Though it remains a fact that the standard of living has generally improved, man is still suffering immensely under the weight of present-day living. The physical condition of man has been reduced to such a pathetic level that he succumbs to untimely death by killer diseases such as cancer, heart failure, diabetes, etc. to an unprecedented degree. Mentally, he is so tension-ridden that he has forgotten the art of relaxing, and he cannot even enjoy sound sleep without the aid of tranquilizers. In this set up interpersonal relations have become so brittle and vulnerable that the divorce rate has become alarmingly high, thus letting loose a whole series of other social problems such as uncared-for children, juvenile delinquency, suicide, etc. Thus life has become a problematic burden and a solution to make life more tolerable and enjoyable is a great pressing need.

As the world of the Buddha is of everlasting value and universal applicability, and as the Buddha preached not only to monks and nuns but also to the lay public as well, it is useful to find a teaching of the Buddha which is relevant to our present-day problems. In the //Pattakammavagga// of the Anguttara Nikaya (A II, 69) the Buddha preached a sutta to Anathapindika on the fourfold pleasures of a layman. It is our considered opinion that this sutta offers adequate insight to meet the demands of the present-day problems as well. The four types of pleasure listed there are: //atthisukha//, the pleasure of having material wealth; //bhogasukha//, the pleasure of enjoying material wealth; //ananasukha//, the pleasure of being debtless; and //anavajjaskha//, the pleasure of being blameless. Let us take these for discussion one by one and see how these sources of pleasure can be harnessed for leading a happy life in the present-day world.

//Atthisukha// -- Man should not only have a righteous means of living, avoiding blameworthy trades such as dealing in meat, liquor, poison, firearms and slavery, he should also entertain a wholesome attitude towards his righteous occupation. For instance, if a doctor welcomes epidemics in the locality in order to make much money, or a trader hopes for natural calamities to send market prices up, the money earned by such unscrupulous individuals is not righteous money as their intentions are impure and foul. Also one should not deceive or exploit others in carrying out one's occupation. Exerting oneself with great perseverance, one should earn one's living, and such hard-earned wealth is called righteous wealth (//dhammika dhammaladdha//). Again one could have great wealth, but if one does not experience a sense of contentment with what one has, one cannot really enjoy //atthisukha// or the pleasure of having. The amassing of wealth of such a person is like trying to fill a bottomless vessel. This is one of the widespread maladies we see in the present-day society. Inordinate expansion of wealth becomes a source not of happiness, but of anxiety. Such wealth exposes the possessor to the jealousies and maneuvers of other unscrupulous individuals, hence the occurrence of blackmailing and kidnapping from time to time. But if one does have a righteous means of earning one's living and the correct attitude to wealth, one can escape many of the hazards which money brings in its wake to modern man.

//Bhogasukha// -- Wealth has only instrumental value and the proper enjoyment of wealth is an art which is worth carefully cultivating.

Buddhism deplores both extravagance and miserly hoarding. One must maintain a healthy balanced standard of living according to one's means. If, in the enjoyment of wealth, one overindulges in sense pleasures, one is bound to run into health hazards in a very short time. If, for instance, one overindulges in food just because one can afford it, one will soon be overcome by diseases such as heart failure, high blood pressure and diabetes. Such a one will be faced with the situation of "cutting his neck with his own tongue." Moderation in food is a virtue praised in Buddhism and it is a health-promoting habit. Often in the name of enjoying wealth, man cultivates unhealthy habits such as smoking and drinking. It is paradoxical that man, who actually loves himself most, should act as if he were his own worst enemy by indulging in habits which ultimately reduce him to a physical wreck. It is medically established that smoking causes the highest percentage of lung cancer, and that drinking causes irreparable damage to vital organs of the body. If only one pauses to ponder over one's own welfare, and if only one entertains at least some degree of compassion towards oneself, one would not get into the clutches of these vicious habits. Wealthy men often end up in the pitiful plight of the ant fallen in the pot of honey. Such men did not know the art of enjoying //bhogasukha//. The regard the body as an instrument for pleasure, and they wear out and debilitate the body's capacity for enjoyment in double quick time, long before the natural process of wear and tear sets in. If we love ourselves, we have to treat our bodies with proper care without taxing it with overindulgence and deprivation. It is with the body that we can enjoy not only the pleasures of the senses, but even the spiritual bliss of Nibbana. Another aspect of the joy of wealth is the art of sharing. Without being an //Adinnapubbaka//, a "never-giver," if one learns to share one's riches with the less fortunate have-nots, one will have the noble experience of being happy at the joy of another. At the same time one will learn the love and good will of others, instead of becoming the target of jealousy and intrigue.

//Ananasukha// -- The pleasure of being debtless is the third quality discussed in our sutta. Economically if one can be completely free of debt, one is indeed a very fortunate person. To be really debtless in society one has to discharge one's obligations scrupulously. As a wage earner one has to discharge one's duties for which one is paid, otherwise one can be indebted to the wage one gets. As a parent one has to fulfill one's obligations to one's children. In our society children are taught to worship and look after their parents, and it is well to bear in mind that parents too have to qualify themselves for the honor they receive by being dutiful parents. It should be emphasized that fathers who neglect their families as a result of their addiction to vices such as drinking and gambling fall far short of the ideal of debtlessness. One can have the satisfaction of being debtless only if one has fulfilled one's obligations in all social roles one has to perform.

//Anavajjasukha// -- The satisfaction of leading a blameless life is the highest form of satisfaction that a layman can have. Every society has a code of ethics to be followed by its members. According to Buddhism the minimum code of ethics regulating the life of its adherents is the //pancasila//, the Five Precepts[1]. If one practices these virtues, one can have the satisfaction of leading a righteous life to a great extent. Refraining from doing to others what one does not like others to do unto oneself is the basic principle underlying these virtues. Buddhism speaks of //hiri// and //ottappa//, the sense of shame and the fear to do wrong, as //deva dhamma// or celestial qualities. These are the basic qualities which separate man from the animal kingdom. Unlike the animals man has a conscience which makes him squeamish about doing wrong. Buddhism recognizes blameless mental activity as well. Mental activities which spring from greed, hatred and delusion are unwholesome and blameworthy. Let us see how such mental behavior is a source of unhappiness. Take for instance the case of a person who is angry. What are the symptoms of anger? Hard breathing, accelerated heart beat, faster circulation of blood, feeling hot, sweating, trepidation, restlessness, etc. -- these are the physical manifestations of anger. These are certainly not comfortable physical experiences. Each time the cause of anger is remembered, even though the physical manifestations of anger may not be that marked, one feels quite restless and mentally ill at ease. We use expressions such as "boiling with anger," "I got the devil on to me," etc. to mean getting angry, and these sayings are literally expressive of the situation. It is just not possible for one to be angry and happy at the same time. An irritable person is truly a very sad person, and what is worse he infects others around him too with the same sadness. The cultivation of sublime modes of behavior such as loving kindness, compassion, sympathetic joy and equanimity are truly conducive to happy living. Those who live with such attitudes habitually are pleasant and amicable people who can be happy alone as well as in company.

If we truly understand the significance of the four kinds of happiness elucidated in our sutta, and translate them into action, life will be much more pleasant and happy even in this modern age.

THE MECHANICS OF BONDAGE AND SUFFERING

The Buddhist texts repeatedly describe man as being bound and fettered to suffering. Many Pali words are used to describe this pathetic situation, such as //samyojana//, //bandha// and //pasa//, meaning bond, fetter, and snare, respectively. One sutta employs a simple simile to illustrate the manner in which man is fettered to //samsaric// life. According to this simile a black bull and a white bull are tied together with a rope. In this situation it cannot be said that the black bull is a fetter to the white bull, or that the white bull is a fetter to the black bull. Actually it is the rope with which the two are tied together that constitutes the fetter. Similarly the external world is not a fetter to man, nor is man a fetter to the external world. It is the desire for pleasure with which man is bound to the external world that forms the fetter. Desire is a very strong fetter which chains man to the external world and thereby to the ever recurring cycle of births and deaths. This strong fetter has six strands emerging from the six sense faculties, namely, the eye, ear, nose, tongue, body, and the mental faculty. The last mentioned faculty is called //mano// in Pali and is regarded as the sense that unifies all other faculties.

The Pali word for sense faculty is //indriya//, a very interesting word which reveals much about our human situation. //Indra// means lord or king, and the sense faculties are called //indriyas// because they dominate us so much. They act as our lords or masters and we slavishly obey them. The eye wishes to see pleasant forms, the ear wishes to hear pleasant sounds, the nose to smell pleasant smells, the tongue to enjoy pleasant tastes, and the body to feel pleasant tactile objects. The mental faculty which unifies all other sense faculties, gets terribly disturbed as it is dragged in different directions by the different sense stimuli, while it has to deal with its own share of agitations in the form of hopes, memories, and imaginations. The //Chappanaka Sutta// of the Samyutta Nikaya beautifully illustrates the struggle of the six senses with an eloquent simile. According to this simile, six animals having different habits and diverse fields of action are tied together in one knot by a strong rope. The six animals are a crocodile who tries to run to the water, a bird who tries to fly in the air, a dog who tries to run to a village, a fox who tries to flee to a cemetery, a monkey who tries to go to the forest, and a snake who tries to creep into an anthill. These six animals are constantly struggling to reach their respective habitats. Similarly, the six senses are constantly seeking gratification in their own spheres, and the man who has no control over his sense faculties becomes terribly confused.

Through our senses we are chained to sense stimuli. We are chained to pleasant sense stimuli by the way of greed. We love to see pleasant objects and we spend a great deal of time, energy, and money in our endeavor to procure as many pleasant objects as possible. We love to hear pleasant words; if someone speaks in praise of us once we will often recall it with pleasure and be attached to that pleasure. We love to eat tasty food. This is a great weakness in most of us. Even when rich food is detrimental to our health, the desire to please the tongue is so great that we indulge in food even at the risk of our precious lives. This is how we sometimes go to the extent of beheading ourselves with our tongues. Man's desire to gratify his sex desire is also so intense that he runs the gravest risk of suffering great pain and debility with social diseases. AIDS (Acquired Immunity Deficiency Syndrome), the present dreaded disease which is taking a very heavy toll of human life in the West, is the latest severe penalty man is paying for his unrestrained greed for sensuality. The plight of modern man can be illustrated by the traditional simile of the ant fallen in the pot of honey, bogged down and drowning in the very pleasures he is trying to enjoy.

Just as much as we can become fettered by greed, so we can also get trapped by dislike and hatred. Our aversion is aroused by unpleasant sense stimuli. The stronger the aversion, the more tenaciously we become fettered to the unpleasant object. Let us take an example. Suppose we have seen a disgusting object just before or during a meal. Our aversion may grow so strong that we will reject even the most delicious food. If we see a worm in a bean curry, our aversion to it may even make us give up eating beans altogether, for each time we see beans we would be reminded of the unpleasant experience. Let us take another example from auditory experience. If somebody abuses us in front of a gathering, we would indeed get very angry with the abuser. This incident would come to our mind often and each time it came up we would experience anger. When we recall the abuse over and over and inject negative emotions of anger and hatred into this memory, we should know that a fetter has been formed.

By these obsessions by greed and hatred generated through the instrumentality of the senses, man's freedom of activity is limited and demarcated. He becomes like an animal tethered to a post by a rope, with its range of activity limited by the length of the rope. Here egoism is like the post, as we are all tied to the idea of self or "I". The rope stands for desire or aversion, for the stronger the idea of self, the more selfish we become, and the more selfish we become, the stronger grow our desires, likes, and dislikes. So it goes on like a vicious circle. Let us work out the simile in greater detail: when the rope of desire is strong, the rope itself becomes short, restricting man's freedom of activity proportionally. The man with a very strong sense of ego is like the animal who is smothered by the tightness and the shortness of the rope. The nature of this desire-rope is such that when negative emotions of likes and dislikes are weak, the rope itself is not only weakened but also lengthened, giving the human animal greater freedom of activity. When negative emotions become weak, positive emotions such as love and compassion emerge, expanding man's scope of freedom. The entire message of the Dhamma can be summarized as a method of rescuing human beings from the trammels of egocentricity, negative emotions, and ignorance, and granting them complete and unlimited freedom. In the language of our simile, it is like cutting the rope and uprooting the post to which the animal is tied.

The suttas also speak of another human tendency with regard to sense pleasures: dwelling on past sensual pleasures while even neglecting to enjoy present pleasures. The past sense objects have already passed away and changed, but we become attached to our memories of them and thus experience anguish. Another trap we fall into because of our enjoyment of sense objects is the generation of the three types of conceit. When we think that we have a greater share of sensual pleasures than others, we develop a superiority complex (//seyyamana//); by considering ourselves equal to others, we develop the equality complex (//sadisamana//); and by thinking of ourselves as being less fortunate than others in the enjoyment of sense pleasures, we develop the inferiority complex (//hinamana//). Thus, by using the measuring rod of sense pleasures to quantify status, we become more and more self-centered and suffer the consequences of all possible complexes. therefore the Buddha calls sense pleasures the "snare of Mara," the Evil One.

A sutta in the Salayatana Samyutta explains the situation from a different angle. When the sense faculties are unrestrained, the mind gets corrupted, wallowing in the enjoyment of sense objects.

Such a corrupt mind does not find //pamojja//, delight in those higher noble pursuits which elevate the mind.

When this //pamojja//, or spiritual delight is absent, pious joy (//piti//) is also absent. When pious joy is missing there is no //passaddhi//, physical and mental relaxation. He who is not relaxed, lives in tension, frustration, and misery. This is what is called in Pali //dukkha//, "suffering." Thus suffering is traced to non-restraint in the sense faculties.

Looking at the problem from another perspective, the Salayatana Samyutta traces the origin of the world to sense experience. Depending on the sense faculties and sense objects there arises sense consciousness. The convergence of these three factors -- sense faculties, sense objects and sense consciousness -- is called contact (//phassa//). Contact generates feelings (//phassapaccaya vedana//). In other words, if the object is delightful we experience pleasure in making contact with it. Feelings give rise to craving (//vedanapaccaya tanha//) as we tend to desire more and more of the pleasant feelings. Craving generates clinging (//tanhapaccaya upadanam//), when we try to possess the objects we crave for. Clinging nurtures the growth of personal factors (//upadanapaccaya bhavo//), which is turn causes birth (//jati//). Birth brings in its wake all the ills of old age, death, grief, lamentation, etc. This is called the arising of the world. Thus we construct our own private worlds through the instrumentality of our sense faculties.

All this material goes to show that we are trapped to //samsara// through the domination of our senses. If we allow them free rein, we allow them to control us. Bondage and suffering are proportionate to the extent that we allow our sense faculties to dominate us. If we desire freedom and happiness for ourselves we have to subjugate the senses and make them our servants.

UNDERSTANDING AND MANAGING STRESS

Stress is a term adopted from engineering science by psychology and medicine. Simply defined, stress in engineering means force upon an area. As so many forces are working upon us in the modern age, and we find it extremely difficult to cope under so much pressure, stress is called the "disease of civilization." Philip Zimbardo in his //Psychology and Life// traces four interrelated levels at which we react to the pressures exerted upon us from our environment. The four are: the emotional level, the behavioral level, the physiological level, and the cognitive level. the emotional responses to stress are sadness, depression, anger, irritation, and frustration. The behavioral responses are poor concentration, forgetfulness, poor interpersonal relations, and lowered productivity. The physiological responses consist of bodily tensions, which may lead to headaches, backaches, stomach ulcers, high blood pressure, and even killer diseases. At the cognitive level one may lose self-esteem and self-confidence, which leads to feelings of helplessness and hopelessness. At worst such a person may even end up committing suicide.

In order to understand stress let us consider the various environmental factors which exert pressure on modern man. In this atomic age the very survival of the species is threatened. Nuclear war threatens every single human being on earth, irrespective of whether one lives in a country with nuclear weapons or not. Population explosion threatens man with severe food shortages; at present even a large segment of human population is undernourished while still others are dying of starvation and malnutrition. Environmental pollution causes severe health hazards and mental and physical retardation. Unemployment among the skilled is a growing global problem. The pace of life has become so hectic that man is simply rushing from one task to another without any relaxation. This is really paradoxical in an age when labor-saving devices are freely available and are in use to an unprecedented degree.

Competition for educational and employment opportunities is so severe that it has contributed to a fair share to increase the rate of suicide. Enjoyment of sense pleasures has grown so obsessive that it has become like drinking salt water to quench thirst. Constant stimulation of the senses is today considered a necessity, and thus pocket radios with earphones, chewing gum, and cosmetics are marketed everywhere. Sense stimulation goes on unrestrained but satiation is far from achieved. It is no wonder that man, caught up in all this, is terribly confused and frustrated, and his life is intolerably stressful. This is the situation Buddhism describes as "tangles within and tangles without, people are enmeshed in tangles."

While the above observations were made from the point of view of modern studies and contemporary conditions, Buddhism makes similar observations from a psychological perspective. Man experiences stress and suffering because of five psychological states which envelop his whole personality. They are called //nivarana// in the Pali language, meaning hindrances. They hinder happiness and overcloud man's vision of himself, his environment and the interaction between the two. The thicker and more opaque these hindrances, the greater the stress and suffering man experiences. The thinner and more sparse these hindrances, the less his suffering with a corresponding increase in happiness. These five hindrances are the desire for sensual pleasures, anger, indolence, worry and doubt. The Pali Canon illustrates the effect of these hindrances with the help of five eloquent similes. The mind overpowered by the desire for sense pleasures is compared to colored water which prevents a true reflection of a thing on the water. Thus a man obsessed with the desire for sense pleasures is unable to get a true perspective of either himself or other people or his environment. The mind oppressed by anger is compared to boiling water which cannot give an accurate reflection. A man overpowered by anger is unable to discern an issue properly. When the mind is in the grip of indolence it is like moss covered water: light cannot even reach the water and a reflection is impossible. The lazy man does not even make an effort at correct understanding. When worried the mind is like wind-tossed turbulent water, which also fails to give a true reflection. The worried man, forever restless, is unable to make a proper assessment of an issue. When the mind is in doubt it is compared to muddy water placed in darkness which cannot reflect an image well. Thus all the five hindrances deprive the mind of understanding and happiness and cause much stress and suffering.

Buddhism puts forward a methodical plan of action for the gradual elimination of stress and the increase of happiness and understanding. The first step recommended in this plan is the observance of the Five Precepts comprising the abstention from killing, stealing, illicit sex, falsehood and intoxicants. Stress is greatly enhanced by guilt, and these precepts help man to free his conscience of the sense of guilt. The //Dhammapada// says the evil-doer suffers here and hereafter; on the other hand, the man who does good deeds rejoices here and hereafter.

Buddhism firmly believes that evil increases stress while good increases happiness. In addition to the observance of the Five Precepts throughout life, Buddhism advocates the periodical observance of the Eight Precepts by laymen. These additional precepts attempt to train man for leading a simple life catering to one's needs rather than one's greeds. A frugal mode of life where wants are few and are easily satisfied is highly extolled in Buddhism. It is the avaricious and the acquisitive mentality that is responsible for so much stress that we experience.

The next step in the process of training is the control of the sense faculties. When our sense faculties are uncontrolled we experience severe strain. We have to first understand what is meant by being uncontrolled in the sense faculties. When a person sees a beautiful form with his eyes, he gets attracted to it; when he sees an unpleasant object, he gets repelled by it. Similarly with the other senses too. Thus the person who has no control over his senses is constantly attracted and repelled by sense data, as during waking life sense data keep on impinging on his sense faculties constantly. When pulled in different directions by sense stimuli, we become confused and distressed.

Our sense faculties have different spheres of activity and different objects, and as each sense faculty is a lord in its own sphere, and as they can severally and collectively dominate man, they are called in Pali //indriyas//, meaning "lords" or "masters." If we allow the sense faculties to dominate us, we get terribly confused. If we assert ourselves and control our sense faculties, we can have unalloyed pleasure (//avyasekasukha//), so called because this pleasure is uncontaminated by defilements. It is also called //adhicittasukha//, meaning spiritual pleasure. Whereas sense pleasures increase stress, this type of spiritual pleasure reduces stressfulness and increases peace of mind and contentment.

The third step in the management of stress is the cultivation of wholesome mental habits through meditation (//bhavana//). Just as we look after and nurture our body with proper food and cleanliness, the mind too needs proper nourishment and cleansing. The mind is most volatile in its untrained state, but when it is tamed and made more stable it brings great happiness. Buddhism prescribes two fundamental meditative methods of mind-training called //samatha// and //vipassana//, calm and insight. The former is the method of calming the volatile mind, while the latter is the method of comprehending the true nature of bodily and mental phenomena. Both methods are extremely helpful for overcoming stress. The //Samannaphala Sutta// explains with the help of five appropriate similes how meditation reduces the psychological stress caused by the five hindrances. The man who practices meditation gains a great sense of relief and it is this sense of unburdening oneself that the similes illustrate. They are as follows: A man who has raised capital for a business by taking a loan, prospers in business, pays off the loan and manages his day-to-day affairs with financial ease. Such a man experiences a great sense of relief. The second simile portrays a man who has suffered a great deal with a prolonged chronic illness. He gets well at long last, food becomes palatable to him and he gains physical strength. Great is the relief such a man experiences. The third simile speaks of the relief a prisoner enjoys after being released from a long term in jail. The fourth is the slave who gains freedom from slavery. The fifth simile speaks of a well-to-do man who gets lost in a fearful desert without food. On coming to a place of safety he experiences great relief. When the stress caused by the five hindrances is eliminated from the mind, great joy and delight arise similar to the relief enjoyed by the men described in the similes. The best and most effective way of overcoming stress is the practice of meditation or mental culture. But as a prelude to that at least the Five Precepts must be observed.

The cultivation of positive emotions such as loving-kindness (//metta//), compassion (//karuna//), sympathetic joy (//mudita//), and equanimity (//upekkha//) is another means of conquering stress. Strained interpersonal relations is one of the common causes of stress in household life and in the workplace. //Loving kindness// is the positive wholesome attitude one can cultivate with benefit for oneself and others in all interpersonal relationships. //Compassion// is the emotion with which one should regard and help those in distress. //Sympathetic joy// is the ability to rejoice in the joy of another. It is difficult for a man of mean character to entertain this attitude as the joy of another brings jealousy to the mind of such a person. Where there is jealousy there is no unity, and where there is no unity there is no progress. The cultivation of these positive emotions stands for both material and spiritual progress. //Equanimity// is the attitude to be adopted in the face of the vicissitudes of life. There are eight natural ways of the world that we have to face in life. They are gain and loss, fame and lack of fame, praise and blame, happiness and sorrow. If one trains oneself to maintain an equanimous temperament without being either elated or dejected in the face of these vicissitudes, one can avoid much stress and lead a simple life with peace and contentment. We cannot change the world so that it will give us happiness. But we can change our attitude towards the world so as to remain unaffected by the stresses exerted by events around us. Buddhism teaches the way to bring about this wholesome change of attitude.

THE BUDDHIST ATTITUDE TO GAIN AND HONOR

The world today has evolved various means of bestowing honor on individuals whom society recognizes as worthy of being honored. The Nobel Prize is considered one of the most prestigious, and there are various other prizes and honorific titles that are bestowed annually or from time to time on distinguished persons. In the scholarly world the publication of felicitation and commemoration volumes and the conferment of honorary degrees are the usual methods of honoring academic celebrities. In society at large we indulge in various devices in the public display of honor and appreciation. Often we resort to overtly ego-boosting methods. As the public display of honor and esteem has become such an important phenomena in our social life, given much publicity over all the media -- the press, radio and television -- it is timely to pause to understand the Buddhist attitude towards the display and acceptance of such public honor. The Pali Canon uses terms such as //labha//, //sakkara//, //siloka//, //puja// and //vandana// to mean various expressions of honor, esteem and reverence.

According to Buddhism the presence of ethical and spiritual qualities is the primary criterion for eligibility for honor. The Buddha, the Paccekabuddha, the Arahant and the universal monarch rank as the highest personages who are worthy of honor and respect. Honor paid to those worthy of honor is listed as a great blessing in the //Mahamangala Sutta// (//puja ca pujaniyanam etam mangalam uttamam//). The //Dhammapada// (vv. 105-6) declares that honor paid to a perfected saint is far better than a century spent in the performance of sacrifice. The same text reiterates that the merit of one who reverences those worthy of honor cannot be measured (v. 195). In the domestic sphere parents are greatly honored and esteemed. As they have done so much for the children, toiling through a whole lifetime, they deserve to be appreciated, honored and looked after by the children. There should be mutual honor and respect between husband and wife. This quality helps to weave a cohesive relationship to build a happy home for the rearing of progeny. It is also a healthy age-old custom to honor and welcome guests as is, for instance, maintained in the //Canki Sutta// (M. II, 167). Respect shown to elders is also highly commended as is well illustrated by the parable of the //Tittira Jataka// (J. I, 218). Thus noble spiritual qualities, parentage and seniority are recognized as some of the main criteria deserving the display of honor and respect.

Now let us turn our attention to the attitude to gain and honor by those who receive them. Since the Buddha's immediate disciples were monks, who by reason of their religious status regularly received gains and honor from the laity, it is to be expected that his statements on this subject are addressed primarily to the monks and their concerns. Moreover, as the monks have committed themselves fully to the quest for deliverance, the Buddha's advice to them naturally takes their special vocation into account. However, while recognizing the differences in their position, lay people can take the Buddha's counsel to the monks as guidelines for their own attitudes towards gain and honor.

The Pali texts show that it is possible to adopt one of the following three attitudes: (a) One could eagerly appreciate and enjoy the honor one receives, even actively seek it. (b) One could turn away and refuse to accept the honor bestowed. (c) One could be indifferent and entertain an attitude of equanimity towards such honors. We shall take these one by one for discussion.

(a) The //Mahasaropama Sutta// (M.I, 192) elucidates the appreciative attitude to gain and honor with the help of a simile. If a monk who has entered the Order enjoys the gain and honor he receives and is satisfied therewith, he is like a man who, being in search of timber, is satisfied with the end trimmings of a huge tree. What he looked for is timber, but what he is satisfied with is just twigs and foliage. Devadatta (J.I, 186) is the classic example of one who fell into utter ruin by enjoying gain and honor. He had developed psychic powers, and he utilized these powers for convincing laymen of his spiritual development. The most influential layman who was thus convinced was Ajatasattu. The unconcealed display of superhuman powers gave rise to much gain and honor for Devadatta, so much so that in his utter stupidity he wished to kill the Buddha and usurp Buddhahood, and he enticed Ajatasattu to kill his father and usurp the kingship. The Buddha pronounced that it is for Devadatta's utter ruin and downfall that he was endowed with so much gain and honor, just as the plantain tree beats fruit for its own ruin. (S.II, 241). The //Dhammapada// maintains that gain and honor is one thing and the path to the realization of Nibbana is another. Knowing this clearly a monk should not take delight in gain and honor (Dh. 75). According to the //Milindapanha// (p. 377), just as a ship has to withstand various forces such as the force of strong currents, thunder and whirlpools, even so a monk has to withstand the forces of gain, honor, fame and homage. If a monk relishes these and gets a bloated ego, he flounders and sinks just like a wrecked ship. The //Milindapanha// (p. 377) takes another simile from naval experience. A ship's anchor is able to hold a ship fast without letting it drift along, even in very deep waters, even so a monk must remain anchored to his purpose with great strength of character without letting the gain and honor that comes in the wake of virtue carry him adrift. It is no doubt the duty of the layman to honor and respect a virtuous monk, and also to provide him with the requisites. It is the responsibility of the monk to maintain a sane balanced attitude, without becoming elated. Buddhism maintains that it is difficult for a man of mean spiritual development to resist the enjoyment of gain and honor (//sakkaro kapurisena dujjaho//, Thag. 1053). There is the great danger of spiritual erosion when a man indulges and basks in the glory of fame and honor. One develops a bloated ego and boastfulness creeps into his character in the most surreptitious ways. Such men also develop contemptuous attitudes towards others who do not get so much honor. The //Labhasakkara Samyutta// sarcastically compares him to the dung beetle who entertains contempt towards other dung beetles for having less dung. The //Anangana Sutta// (M. I, 29-30) shows the abhorrence and disgust towards a monk who undertakes the religious life and difficult ascetic practices for the sake of public generosity and popularity. Such a monk is compared to one who places the carcass of a snake or a dog in a beautifully polished brand new metal bowl. The bowl of higher life (//brahmacariya//) is not meant for storing carcass-like immoral intentions.

Monks are advised in the most emphatic terms to guard against taking delight in gain and honor. The //Labhasakkara Samyutta// works out a number of similes in great detail to illustrate the point (S. II, 226-7). A young tortoise who defied the elders' advice is shot with a splinter to which a string is attached and he is bound to be caught by the hunter in no time. The hunter in the simile is none other than Mara himself. The splinter is gain, honor and fame. The string attached to the splinter is the monk's attachment to gain and honor. Again, gain and honor are compared to a bait which greedy monks might swallow to be utterly ruined in the hands of the trapper Mara.

(b) Now let us turn to the attitude of the monk who refuses gain and honor. Mahakassapa was an eminent monk who eschewed gain and honor, and found delight in helping the poor to earn merit by going to them for alms. Once the Buddha saw him begging his alms in a locality where poverty-stricken weavers lived, in spite of gods trying to procure for him a fine meal. On this occasion the Buddha gave expression to an inspired utterance (//Udana//, p.11) in appreciation of Mahakassapa's simplicity. Once a famous householder named Citta was impressed by the explanation of a knotty doctrinal point by a monk named Isidatta in a great assembly. Citta invited Isidatta to reside in the locality and promised him hospitality with all requisites. Isidatta seized the first opportunity to quietly leave the locality without informing Citta (S. IV, 286-8). Such was the scrupulous reticent behavior of those who understood the pernicious nature of gain and honor.

(c) Generally the Buddha and Arahants do not fight shy of gain and honor. They face it with the same equanimity as they face loss and blame. The //Maha Govinda Sutta// (D. II, 223) records that gods rejoice in the Buddha because of his attitude to gain and honor. The Buddha has received gain and fame which a king would long to have, but with no trace of elation whatsoever he fares along partaking of only the basic requisites. The gods declare that there was never a teacher of such calibre before. The lotus, though born in the water, remains unsullied above the water. Similarly the buddha and Arahants rise uncontaminated above the mundane conditions of family, prestige, gain, fame, and reverence (//Milinda, p.375). "The Unique Ones (//asamasama//) are worshipped by gods and men. But they relish no honor. This is the norm of Buddhas" (//Milinda//, p.95). Cullasabhadda, an //upasika//, observes that while the world is elated and depressed by gain and loss respectively, the true monks maintain an equanimous attitude in the face of both.

Buddha declares that he has personally known, seen and understood (//samam natam samam dittam samam viditam//, //Itivuttaka//, p.74) that beings who have been overwhelmed (//pariyadinnacitta//) by gain and honor, and also those who are obsessed by the lack of gain and honor, at the disintegration of the body are born in states of woe. The desire for honor and recognition is so insinuative that even normally upright individuals can succumb to it. The Buddha says that there are some who would not stoop so low as to tell a deliberate lie for the sake of silver and gold, a beauty queen, parents, children or even life, but who would do so to gain honor and prestige. So vicious and pernicious are the snares of gain and honor (S. II, 234, 243). Except Arahants, those of the highest order who have reached the state of //akuppa cetovimutti// (S. II, 239) or unshakable mental emancipation, all those of lesser spiritual development are said to be vulnerable in this respect. It is no wonder that gain and honor is a powerful member of the army of Mara (Sn. 438-9). It should be recognized by all those who value spiritual progress as a disaster come in the guise of a blessing.

LIVELIHOOD AND DEVELOPMENT

Right livelihood (//samma ajiva//) is the fifth factor in the Noble Eightfold Path. As a method of earning one's living is important to every human being, whether a member of the clergy or a layman, the correct understanding of right livelihood is crucial. For a monk, complete dedication to the higher life constitutes right livelihood. He then is rightly entitled to be supported by public generosity. In this essay we shall confine ourselves to an inquiry into the concept of right livelihood for the layman.

Right livelihood implies that one has to avoid a wrong means of earning a living, known as //miccha ajiva// in Pali. This includes trades which are directly or indirectly injurious to others, be they animal or human, such as trade in meat, liquor, poison, weapons and slaves. These are contrary to the basic five precepts which all lay Buddhists are expected to abide by. In the world today these trades, except perhaps the slave trade, are flourishing industries, and much of the revenue to governments comes from these industries. This shows to what an extent wrong livelihood is prevalent in the world today.

Even a blameless means of living can become blameworthy if practiced with inordinate greed and dishonesty. If a doctor in private practice makes mints of money exploiting his patients, he is guilty of wrong livelihood even though medicine itself is a noble profession. A vegetable dealer who cheats in weights and measures is similarly guilty of wrong livelihood. Honest scrupulous service rendered without exploiting the public is considered an essential feature of right livelihood.

Buddhism upholds the quality of having few wants (//appicchata//) and the ability to be satisfied with little (//santutthi//) as great virtues. One has to practice these virtues not only in consumerism but in production too; in the modern world, however, these virtues have been totally lost sight of in both these spheres. Therefore governments as well as the private sector aim at ever increasing development. Such development, however, has no limit. Each time a target has been reached, the limit to possible growth recedes further like a mirage. More and more is produced, more and more is consumed. There is no satiation with development, nor with consumerism. This is a limitless race in a limited world with limited resources. Therefore mankind has to learn that the concept of development as it is understood today cannot go on forever, it is logically and practically impossible.

Nature seems to set its own limits to this process of escalated growth. It appears that there are biological, psychological, social and ecological limits to growth. The physical constitution of man seems to revolt against this limitless growth. There is an array of diseases man readily succumbs to today related to overconsumption and overindulgence. There are pressure-related diseases too, which affect both the human body and the human mind. Present-day development taxes man's endurance enormously and he becomes a psychological wreck due to the pressures of work, competition and maintaining standards. Interpersonal relationships have become superficial, brittle and sour, and this seems to be a sign that society cannot withstand the weight of its material development. In the external world too there are unequivocal signs which portend impending catastrophe unless man changes his course of action. There is air, water and land pollution everywhere, and this is extremely injurious not only to human life but to all forms of life in this planet. These are nature's ways of expressing her disapproval of the methods and rate of production and consumption man has chosen today.

Agriculture is recognized in Buddhism as a noble means of making a living, but what has happened in this sphere? Prompted by population pressures, and encouraged by the ever-expanding vistas of scientific knowledge, traditional methods of tilling the land have given way to mechanized industrial agriculture. Vast acres are plowed by machines; chemical fertilizers are applied freely; weedicides, insecticides and pesticides are used indiscriminately; and large harvests are gathered. More and more research is going on in agricultural engineering to produce better seeds which promise higher yields. Though production has increased, prices remain at a constant high level. In some countries when the price level threatens to go down due to overproduction, the products are methodically destroyed or dumped into the sea despite the fact that large masses of people in the world today are undernourished and some are actually starving to death. It is blatantly clear that the whole industrialized agricultural policy is prompted by inordinate greed and it is far from right livelihood.

From the Buddhist point of view this whole system is wrong. On the one hand it has resulted in the erosion of moral and human values. It has deprived man of sympathy for his fellow sentient beings as is evident from the large-scale use of insecticides. Economic gain seems to be the only criterion by which man is prompted to action. Blinded by short-term economic gain, man seems to turn a blind eye to the long-term repercussions of his aggressive policies on this planet. In the wake of the avaricious and aggressive industrialization, the crime rate has risen to an unprecedented degree, and this is a clear index to man's moral degeneration. On the other hand, the natural ecological balance of the earth has been disturbed to an alarming degree. Chemical pollution of land and water has affected bacteria, insects and fish. While some of these forms of life useful to man have died or are dying, others, especially insects dangerous to man have become resistant to insecticides. As more and more effective chemicals are produced, these creatures become immune to them and the vicious circle goes on without any practical solution in sight. The natural fertility and the organic balance of the soil also diminish as more and more chemical fertilizers are applied throughout the years and thus a vicious circle gets formed there too.

All this evidence clearly shows that man cannot dominate and subjugate nature. In the long run nature emerges triumphant and man becomes the loser. Instead man must learn to co-operate with nature. Here we are reminded of an admonition given by the Buddha that in amassing wealth man must exploit nature as a bee collects pollen. The bee harms neither the beauty of the flower nor its fragrance, similarly man must not pollute or rob nature of its richness, beauty and its rejuvenating and replenishing capacity. This is the real implication of right livelihood when it comes to the utilization of natural resources.

It should be reiterated that the whole modern concept of development, which seems to have nothing short of the sky itself as the limit, is severely antithetical to Buddhist values. Buddhism sets the limit at the other end: it advocates that we feed our needs and not our greeds. Man needs the basic comforts of food, clothing, shelter and medicine. It is the responsibility of the rulers to provide avenues of employment so that the average man can afford to have these needs satisfied with a fair degree of comfort. As man is naturally prone to greed, Buddhism emphasizes the value of having few wants (//appicchara//). Contentment (//santutthi//) is also a much valued virtue in Buddhism. Care is taken to see that these virtues do not degenerate into apathy and cause social stagnation. Buddhism encourages the layman to be industrious, to forge ahead in his chosen blameless occupation (//utthanasampada//). Wealth earned by sheer perseverance, by the sweat of one's brow, is highly praised as well gotten righteous wealth. It is even recommended that a layman should invest half of his earnings for improvement of his industry. Laymen are also exhorted to save (//arakkhasampada//) their hard earned money, and to lead a comfortable life consonant with earning capacity, avoiding both extremes of miserliness and extravagance//over-indulgence. thus the tension between having few wants (//appicchata//) and contentment (//santutthi//) on the one hand, and industriousness (//arakkhasampada//) on the other, helps to keep society at a practically comfortable level of development which can be sustained for a long time. When these economic ideas are reinforced with the other moral values inculcated by Buddhism, a stable society with harmonious interpersonal relations can be expected.

The modern concept of large-scale industries and factories also does not agree with the Buddhist concept of right livelihood. These large industries and mechanized labor have made a few people enormously rich and thrown millions of employable people out of employment. Thus wealth gets concentrated among a few factory owners and businessmen while millions can barely eke out an existence. Maldistribution of wealth is regarded in Buddhism as a social evil which paves the way to crime and revolution. Moreover machines have robbed man of his creativity and left him terribly frustrated. This may be one of the reasons why the youth of today have turned to drugs to find an easy escape route.

The concept of right livelihood works with the notion that man is the central concern in economy as producer as well as consumer, not the profit made in the process of products changing hands. The skills and talents of the producer should be enhanced in the process of production and he should have the satisfaction derived from his output. The producer, not an employer above him or a middleman, should get a fair return commensurate with his labor and sufficient to afford him a decent living. The consumer, on the other hand, should get quality and quantity for what he pays. In sharp contrast to this ideology, the profit made by the employer is the central concern today: both the producer and the consumer are subservient to the profit motive. Therefore right livelihood would opt for small-scale industries which would satisfy the creative instinct of man and the basic needs of many more people, and would also ensure a more equitable distribution of wealth in society. It is better to have a large number of skilled cobblers than a well equipped mechanized shoe factory.

As right livelihood is a part and parcel of the Noble Eightfold Path, when it is rightly practiced it leads to the elimination of greed, hatred and delusion (S. V, 5). Just as the river Ganges is inclined towards the east, he who practices the Noble Eightfold Path is inclined towards Nibbana. Thus the correct understanding of right livelihood is essential for the Buddhist layman who is bent on his spiritual welfare.

FACING DEATH WITHOUT FEAR

Death is the only certain thing in life. It is also the thing for which we are least prepared. We plan and prepare for various other things -- examinations, weddings, business transactions, building houses -- but we can never be certain whether our plans will materialize according to our wish. Death, on the other hand, can come any minute, sooner or later; it is the most certain event in life. Just as the mushroom raises itself from the ground carrying a bit of earth on its hood, so every living being brings with himself the certainty of death from the moment of his birth.

The Anguttara Nikaya (IV, 136) illustrates the uncertainty and the evanescent nature of life with the help of a few evocative similes. Life is compared to a dew drop at the tip of a blade of grass: it can drop off any moment and even if it does not fall off, it evaporates as soon as the sun comes up. Life is also as fleeting as a bubble of water formed by the falling rain or a line drawn on the water. The text points out that life rushes towards death incessantly like a mountain stream rushing down without stopping. The //Dhammapada// compares the fragility of the body to foam (v 46) and to a clay water pot (v 40). Thus with various similes the uncertainty of life and the certainty of death are emphasized over and over again in the Buddhist texts.

It is accepted as a general truth that everybody fears death (//sabbe bhayanti maccuno// -- Dh 129). We fear death because we crave for life with all our might. It is also a fact that we fear the unknown. We know least about death, therefore we fear death for a duality of reasons. It seems reasonable to conjecture that the fear of death, or the fear of harm to life, lurks at the root of all fear. Therefore each time we become frightened we either run away from the source of fear or fight against it, thus making every effort to preserve life. But we can do so only so long as our body is capable of either fighting or running away from danger. But when at last we are on the deathbed face to face with approaching death, and the body is no longer strong enough for any protest, it is very unlikely that we will accept death with a mental attitude of resignation. We will mentally try hard to survive. As our yearning for life (//tanha//) is so strong, we will mentally grasp (//upadana//) another viable place, as our body can no longer support life. Once such a place, for example the fertilized ovum in a mother's womb, has been grasped, the psychological process of life (//bhava//) will continue with the newly found place as its basis. Birth (//jati//) will take place in due course. This seems to be the process that is explained in the chain of causation as: craving conditions grasping, grasping conditions becoming or the process of growth, which in turn conditions birth. Thus the average man who fears death will necessarily take another birth as his ardent desire is to survive.

Let us probe a little further into the process of death, going from the known to the unknown. We know that in normal life, when we are awake, sense data keep on impinging on our sense faculties. We are kept busy attending to these sense data, rejecting some, selecting some for greater attention, and getting obsessed with still other things. This is an ongoing process so long as we are awake. In the modern age man is reaching out and seeking more and more sense stimulation. The popularity of the portable radio with or without earphones, chewing gum, cosmetics and television is a clear indication of the present trend for more and more sense stimulation. By all this we have become alienated from ourselves; we do not know our own real nature, or the real nature of our mind to be more precise. Moreover, we go about our business in social life wearing masks appropriate for each occasion. We often do not show our true feelings of jealousy, greed, hatred, pride, or selfishness. We hide them in socially accepted ways of formalized verbal expressions such as congratulations, thank you, deepest sympathies. But there are times when our negative emotions are so acute that they come into the open in the form of killing, stealing, quarreling, backbiting, and so forth. But generally we try to keep these venomous snakes of negative emotions inhibited.

Now let us see what happens at the moment of death. We believe that death is a process and not just a sudden instantaneous event. When the senses lose their vitality one by one and they stop providing stimulation, the inhibitions too fall away. The masks we have been wearing in our various roles get cast off. We are at last face to face with ourselves in all our nakedness. At that moment if what we see are the venomous snakes of negative emotions of hatred, jealousy, etc., we would be laden with guilt, remorse and grief. It is very likely that our memories too will become quite sharp, as all the sensory disturbances and inhibitions which kept them suppressed have fallen off. We may remember our own actions committed and omitted during our lifetime with unpretentious clarity. If they are morally unwholesome we would be guilty and grief stricken (S. V. 386), but if they are morally wholesome we would be contented and happy. The //Abhidhammattha Sangaha// speaks of the presentation of //kamma// or //kammanimitta// at the mind door on the advent of death. This seems to be the revival in memory of an actual action or action veiled in symbols at the onset of death. It is said that rebirth will be determined by the quality of thoughts that surface in this manner.

Death is as natural an event as nightfall; it is but one of the manifestations of the law of impermanence. Though we dislike it immensely we have to orient ourselves to accept its inevitability, as there is no escape therefrom. The Buddhist texts advocate the cultivation of the mindfulness of death often so that we are not taken unawares when the event does take place. To face death peacefully one has to learn the art of living peacefully with one's own self as well as with those around. One method of doing so is to remember the inevitability of death, which will deter one from unwholesome behavior. The practice of meditation is the best technique which will enable one to live peacefully with oneself and others.

The practice of loving-kindness (//mettabhavana//) is an effective method of meditation. One of its special advantages is the ability to face death undeluded (//asammulho kalam karoti//).

In one sutta (A. III, 293) the Buddha explains how to prepare for a peaceful death. One has to organize one's life and cultivate an appropriate attitude for this purpose. The instructions given there are as follows:

(1) One should not be fond of a busy life involved in various activities.

(2) One should not be fond of being talkative.

(3) One should not be fond of sleeping.

(4) One should not be fond of having too many companions.

(5) One should not be fond of too much social intercourse.

(6) One should not be fond of daydreaming.

Another sutta (A. I, 57-8) explains that if one avoids unwholesome wicked activities through body, speech and mind, one need not fear death. The //Mahaparinibbana Sutta// (D. II, 85-6) categorically states that those who are evil in character face death with delusion while the virtuous face death free from delusion. Thus if one leads a simple virtuous life one need not fear death.

Once Mahanama Sakka (S. V. 369) disclosed to the Buddha that he was worried where he would be reborn if he were to meet with a violent death in a road accident. The Buddha explained that those who have cultivated the qualities of faith, virtue, learning, generosity and wisdom for a long time need not entertain such fears. To illustrate the position further the Buddha employs a simile. If a pot of oil or ghee is broken in deep water the potsherds will sink to the riverbed and the oil or ghee will rise to the surface of the water. Similarly in such a tragic situation the body would be discarded and may be devoured by vultures and jackals, but the mind will rise and progress upwards.

The account of the illness of Nakula's father (A. III, 295) is another interesting episode regarding the Buddhist attitude to death. Once Nakula's father was seriously ill and his wife noticed that he was fretful and anxious. She advised him that death with anxiety is painful and is denounced by the Buddha. Therefore he must compose himself. Comforting him, she said that he might be worried about the family income and the task of bringing up the children after his death. She assured him that she was capable of spinning and weaving and thus she could provide for the family and bring up the children. He may be anxious that she would remarry after his death. She said that he knows just as well as she that she has never been unfaithful to him ever since they were married at the age of sixteen, and she pledged that she would remain loyal to him even after his death. Perhaps he may worry about her spiritual development and she assured him that she would continue to be earnest in her spiritual welfare. Therefore he must face death, if need there be, with no anxiety. Such was her advice to her husband who was fatally ill. It is said that he regained self-composure and thereby good health too. The matter was later reported to the Buddha, who commended Nakula's mother for her wisdom and composure.

The suttas also discuss the advantages of the regular contemplation of death (A. IV, 46-48; S. V, 344,408). The mind gets divested from the love of life, and being intoxicated with the zest of life, men commit various atrocities. That can be prevented by the habit of practicing mindfulness of death. If we only remember that we have not come to this world to stay forever, we would take care to lead much better lives. If, when we take stock, we find wicked negative emotions such as lust, hatred and jealousy in us, we should immediately take steps to eradicate them as we would try to put out the flames if our head were to catch fire (A. IV, 320).

Thus the Buddhist texts tirelessly reiterate the positive benefits of the regular contemplation of the inevitability of death. It helps one to lead a more wholesome life and also to face death, the one and only certain event in life, with calm composure and fearless confidence.

THE HUMAN BODY

When alive the human body is the most precious and the most mysterious object in the whole world. We regard it as beautiful and spend much time, energy, and money to make it more beautiful. We regard it as an instrument for pleasure and spend nearly all our lives in procuring objects of pleasure. We assume it is a vital part of ourself. It would be useful to discuss the validity of these attitudes and assumptions from the Buddhist point of view.

The human body is the most intricate machine in the world. Each human body is unique not only in appearance but also in its biochemical structure, sensitivity of sense faculties, disease resistance, disease susceptibility, etc., and hereditary laws alone are incapable of offering a satisfactory explanation. Buddhism holds that the body and its sense faculties have been so structured as the effect of former kamma. From the dawn of civilization man has tried to understand the mystery of the human personality and he has given rise to various sciences and religions. In one sutta the Buddha says that within this fathom-long sentient human body is found the whole world, its origin, its cessation and the path leading to its cessation. In a way this means that the world of experience is within the human body. In another sense it means that if one were to understand the mystery of the human body, that would amount to understanding the mystery of the world. In fact the external world is nothing but what we get to know through the instrumentality of our sense faculties. If we understand the sense faculties and sense data, we have understood everything.

The relationship of the body and the mind is most elusive. According to the //Samannaphala Sutta// this relationship can be understood only after the attainment of the fourth //jhana//. The adept can then see consciousness established in the physical constitution just as one can see a colored thread running through the aperture of a transparent gem. Another sutta explains the interdependency of body and mind through the simile of two bundles of reeds placed against one another supporting each other. Emotional changes in the mind affect body chemistry, and fluctuations in body chemistry affect the mind. As a gross example we can take the negative emotion of anger. Anger triggers off glandular secretions which alter body chemistry considerably to bring about changes such as trepidation, sweating, feeling hot, etc. On the other hand, changes in body chemistry produced, for instance by the intake of alcohol or drugs affect the mind to bring about appropriate mood changes, euphoria and hallucinations.

According to a sutta in the Anguttara Nikaya (A. IV, 385 f.) all thoughts are translated into sensations (//sabbe dhamma vedanasamosarana//). This shows the extent to which the body is influenced by the mind. Buddhism has clearly recognized this interdependency and utilized that knowledge in its path to liberation. The body is disciplined through morality (//sila//) and is thus maintained at a reasonably healthy biochemical level. The mind is disciplined with meditation (//bhavana//) to produce healthy psychological changes and thereby reinforce a more healthy biochemical composition of the body. This process goes on until the attainment of Arahantship, when the biochemical composition has undergone such a radical, irreversible change that an Arahant is said to be incapable of certain physiological functions which are antithetical to spiritual development but normal in average human beings.

Though the sentient human body is most precious, no precious material goes into its composition. It is precious because, through its instrumentality, man is able to probe into the deepest mysteries of the universe and of himself, into the meaning of life and the enigma of death. When we stand by the ocean in the evening twilight and gaze at the vast ocean as far as the horizon, or at the star-studded firmament receding into infinity as far as the eye can see, we are awe-struck by the magnitude of the universe. Compared to that man is but an infinitesimal speck of dust in size. But when we pay attention to the potentialities of man, it is he who can even conceive of this mighty universe, it is he who can unravel its mysteries. Though part and parcel of the universe, though subject to natural cosmic laws, man has the capacity to transcend the natural material world and can even reach Buddahood. Therefore man is supreme and the sentient human frame is precious.

It is true that we generally look at the human body as a thing of beauty. We speak of beautiful eyes, teeth, face, hair, and figure. But Buddhism looks at the human body from a realistic point of view. The body is a bag of filth, it is full of impurities. The Buddhist texts dealing with the thirty-two parts of the body spell out in detail its foul material constituents. If we only pause a moment to consider attentively the state of the face prior to a wash in the morning, we can gain a fair idea of the body's repulsive nature. It exudes so much dirt from its major nine apertures and numerous pores that it needs constant cleaning. Just imagine how intolerable the body would be if we neglect to clean what it discharges from the outlets even for a single day, let alone for a long period. Great care has to be taken to keep the body clean, so that it is not offensive to oneself and others. If no regular cleaning is done, it can be the home of various parasites, and thus a public nuisance. We have to understand the real nature and the composition of the body in order to reduce and eliminate our infatuation with it.

We have to feed the body very carefully throughout life. However well the body is fed, it grows hungry over and over again. Hunger is the worst disease says the //Dhammapada//. There is no end to feeding the body until death. The stomach is like an open sore which needs careful periodical dressing. Gross food is but one of the nutriments the body needs according to Buddhism; contact with the environment (//phassa//), volition (//manosancetana//), and consciousness (//vinnana//) are the other three nutriments. All these four forms of nutriment are essential for the continuance of the body in health. The body also needs to be protected from heat, cold, rain, injurious germs and external harm. We have to be ever alert to protect the body from these various sources of external danger. For these reasons Buddhism says that the body is a source of great anxiety -- //bahudukkho ayam kayo//. Great is the hardship man has to undergo just to keep the body viable, clean and healthy.

The body is endowed with sense faculties and they are ever in search of pleasure. The eye is in search of pleasant forms, the ear of pleasant sounds, the nose of pleasant smells, the tongue of pleasant tastes and the body of pleasant tactiles. Most of our life is spent in the pursuit of these pleasures. But it remains a fact that the body texture is such that it does not tolerate excessive pleasure. However desirable pleasure may be, the body falls ill when overloaded with them. For instance, however palatable rich food may be, when it is taken in excess, the body becomes a victim of killer diseases. Similarly, excessive indulgence in sex causes social diseases, of which the most dreaded today is AIDS. Acquired Immunity Deficiency Syndrome, for which a cure has not yet been found. Therefore restraint in the enjoyment of sense pleasures is the best course of conduct for those desirous of health and long life.

When we look at the body in its various postures of standing, sitting, walking and lying down, we realize that the body can tolerate these postures only for a very short time. Even if we are sitting in the most comfortable seat, we continue to remain in the same position without moving around only for a short time. Automatically we move about adjusting our limbs to more comfortable positions in a constant search for pleasure. But pleasure is short-lived; pain raises its head and we move and adjust ourselves again to eke out a little pleasure. Thus the search for pleasure goes on and we delude ourselves saying that we enjoy life. The basic truth is that the body is a source of misery, but we prefer to turn a blind eye to this fact and cling desperately to fleeting pleasures. The Buddha says that there is no doubt an iota of pleasure //appassada//, but the misery is far in excess of this pleasure, //bahudukkha//.

The body in its various stages of growth also brings much pain. Birth causes excruciating pain both to mother and babe. The infant is completely at the mercy of others around it. If its needs are not duly attended to, it experiences much misery, which it expresses by pitiful cries. Teething is a significant landmark in the series of growing pains. All attempts to master the various physical postures contribute their own quota of hardships to infancy. Puberty and adolescence are also harassed by the growing pains appropriate to those ages. Old age is particularly notorious for aches and pains. The sense faculties are on the decline, sight fails, hearing becomes short and other senses too diminish in their acuity. Various joint pains and body aches become more constant and the body strength ebbs away. Even the Buddha in his old age said that his body was like an old worn-out cart which could be kept going only with much repair. He added that he enjoyed physical comfort only when he spent time in //jhanic// ecstasy. Such is the nature of the body in old age. We cannot forget that the body is prone to various diseases during all stages of its growth.

Though the body is thus a source of great misery we cannot afford to hate it. To have a healthy attitude towards the body we should avoid both extremes of being infatuated with the body and hating it. We should have //metta//, a friendly attitude towards the body. Realistically understanding its nature, we should avoid misusing it as an instrument only for pleasure. We should be very careful not to form habits which are injurious to the body, such as smoking, drinking, and the excessive indulgence in sensual pleasures. The body becomes a prey to self-inflicted diseases if we fail to cultivate an attitude of friendliness towards it. If we want to enjoy a reasonably healthy body as a vital part of our self. When we say: "I am tall, I am fat, I am fair, I am beautiful or ugly," we really mean that the body has these attributes. But as we keep on using the pronoun "I" we get caught in the grammatical subject and assume the existence of an ontological subject such as the soul or the ego. Therefore we establish a relationship of identity and possession with the body. Thus the body becomes a vital part of the self. The Buddha argues that if the body is really ours as we assume it is, it should behave according to our wishes. It should remain young, healthy, beautiful and strong as we always wish it to be. But the body hardly behaves according to our wishes and we come to grief when it goes against our wishes and expectations. The Buddha points out that the body really does not belong to us, nor is it really our self or a part of our self. We should therefore give up craving for it, we should cease to identify ourselves with it. Giving up craving for the body results in much happiness and peace. In order to wean ourselves from our habitual identification and ownership we have to impress the repulsive and alien nature of our bodies into our minds with deep sensitivity, so that an attitudinal change takes place in us with regard to the body. Observation of the repulsive and misery-producing nature of our bodies repeatedly, over and over again, is one sure way of gaining the realistic perspective. This is the path leading out of misery.

SENSUALISTIC SOCIAL TRENDS AND BUDDHISM IN MODERN TIMES[*]

[*] Paper read at the Conference on Buddhism and the Modern World, Dongguk University, Seoul, Korea, 1976.

Causes for Sensualistic Social Trends[2]

Scientific and technological advancement has brought about widespread changes in the lifestyle of modern man. Changes have been so rapid and overwhelming during the 20th century, that this century seems to far outweigh all other centuries put together in this respect. Man's attitudes, values, goals and ideals too have undergone radical change. Scientific knowledge regarding the nature and evolution of the universe, man, society, culture and civilization has unsettled many of the old certitudes and undermined the very basis and authority of the Western theistic religious traditions. With the loss of respect for authority and tradition, the validity of moral values too came to be questioned. Ever renewing scientific knowledge, which exposed traditional beliefs one after another as superstitious or mythical, gave a halo of superiority to modernity. Nurtured in such an environment, the younger generation became alienated from the lifestyle of their parents and the age-old generation gap assumed unprecedented proportions.

While scientific knowledge rendered man a skeptic alienated from his cultural heritage technology robbed him of his creative ability. The machine with its vast powers of production reduced man to a button pusher and threw millions of workers out of employment. Their muscular and creative powers were left unharnessed, thwarted and frustrated. As a result the indigenous folk arts and crafts of all nations, which were in fact expressions of sublimated emotions, became almost extinct. Man in his admiration for creativity and feeble struggle for self-expression has now become an antique collector.

The next force which completely overwhelmed modern man was the tyranny of commercialization and advertising. When production exceeded consumption man had to be persuaded into consuming more, lest trade suffer with a backlog of unconsumed stockpiles. Deliberate and calculated attempts were made to change traditional frugality into an ethic of consumption. Mass media were utilized to convince the people of the virtues and necessity of increasing consumption to maintain the newly acquired standard of affluent living. Research into motivational and behavioral psychology betrayed the susceptibilities of man, and advertising agents made capital by playing upon these weaknesses, namely, man's innate greed for sensual pleasure, personal property and social prestige. Unleashed as he was from his cultural moorings, and frustrated as he was in his creative urge, modern man succumbed to the attractive appeals of mass media and plunged into a life of self-indulgence.

Harmful Effects on Individual and Society

~~~
~~~

death at times of family stress. Teenage drug addictions and juvenile delinquency have become alarming problems of the day. These social phenomena are directly related to man's attitude towards sense pleasure and serious rethinking seems most urgent today if man is to be saved from the imminent danger of self-destruction through sensuality.

Can Buddhism Help?

Buddhism has been a great civilizing force and a guiding principle for millions of people during the last twenty-five centuries. It would be useful to see what light Buddhism sheds on the present chaotic situation, and what wisdom it offers for self-adjustment under modern conditions and for healthy family and interpersonal relations. Though criticism is often levelled that Buddhism is a life-denying ascetic ideal, and that it is antisocial and antipolitical, it should be remembered that Buddhism embraces in its dispensation not only monks (//bhikkhu//) and nuns (//bhikkhuni//), but also male and female lay followers (//upasaka//, //upasika//). The intellectual and disciplinary training of the laity is as important a concern in Buddhism as that of the monks. Therefore Buddhism offers a social and a political philosophy, the goal of which is the creation of a society where human rights are safeguarded, human enterprise is the key to success, resources are well distributed and justice reigns supreme. As Trevor Ling too maintains, Buddhism is not just a religion or a philosophy, it is in fact a whole civilization, a full fledged multi-faceted philosophy of life designed to meet the secular and spiritual needs of man.[3]

Sensuality and Human Ambitions

According to Buddhism ambitions of man center on the acquisition of wealth, pleasure, fame, longevity and happiness after death. (A. II, 66-68). Accepting these as human aspirations and goals of human endeavor, Buddhism advocates a way of life to help man realize these aims. For the danger is ever present that man in his pursuit of pleasure will in the long run defeat those very aims. Wealth and sex are two important means of acquiring pleasure. A prudent attitude towards them would go a long way for the realization of the other three human ambitions as well. As most of the social ills of today are attributable to the mishandling of these two, a correct understanding of the Buddhist attitude towards them would be most profitable.

Wealth

The Buddhist attitude towards wealth is such that it has never prescribed a ceiling on income. What it has prescribed is that wealth should be acquired through righteous means and expended also in a righteous manner. Wealth earned by the sweat of one's brow without harming, deceiving or exploiting others is highly commended. It is always emphasized that wealth has only instrumental value. It should be utilized for (a) living in comfort making one's family, parents, dependents and friends happy, (b) insuring oneself against possible calamities through fire, water, etc., (c) performing one's duties to relatives, guests and state, and for religio-cultural activities, and (d) patronizing those engaged in spiritual advancement. According to one's means, on a large or very small scale, one should try to make the best use of one's resources in the most righteous manner.

What is deplored in Buddhism is the excessive acquisitive greed and the hoarding habit. While niggardliness is held in contempt, frugality is extolled as a virtue. Wastefulness is a deplorable habit and it is even regarded as anti-social. Once Ananda explained to a king how the monks put the gifts offered to them to maximum use. When new robes are offered the old ones are taken as coverlets, the old coverlets are utilized as mattress covers, the former mattress covers are used as rugs, the old rugs are taken as dusters, the old tattered dusters are kneaded with clay and used to repair cracked floors and walls (Vin. II, 291). Such was the Buddhist monks' conscientious use of resources. The same frugality has influenced the laity too and the famous episode of a wealthy merchant who bade a servant to collect a drop of ghee off the floor, lest it be wasted, is a very fine example. The same merchant was so generous that his largesse surprised the recipients (Vin. I, 271). Though frugality and generosity appear to be incompatible, they are recognized as commendable virtues in their own right to be cultivated by one and all. When these simple virtues are compared with the information revealed to us, for instance, by Vance Packard's epochmaking eye-opener //The Waste Makers//, one begins to wonder whether sanity and common sense have left the knowledgeable man of science today. Some investigators estimate that American consumption of the world's resources within forty years is equal to what mankind has consumed during the last 4000 years. As the earth's resources are not unlimited, it is high time that modern man did some re-thinking and cultivated some economical Buddhist habits at least out of sympathy for posterity. It is true that oceanography opens unexploited resources to man, but it must be remembered that the ocean too is not unlimited, whereas man's greed knows no limit nor satiation.

Sex

Buddhism recognizes the sex attraction as a universal reality. Among animals the sex impulse is regulated by nature and thus their mating and breeding are seasonal. Among humans there is no such natural mechanism, and man has by a long process of experiment and adjustment arrived at certain taboos, rules and regulations to handle his sex drive in a manner appropriate to himself and his fellow beings. Though these rules differ according to times and place, on the whole they have helped man to emerge from savagery to civilization.

According to Buddhism monogamy is the ideal form of marriage, while chastity and fidelity form ideal behavior before marriage. This alone is not sufficient for success in married life. Mutual confidence (//saddha//), morality (//sila//), self-denial (//caga//) and prudence (//panna//) are emphasized as virtues which ensure conjugal happiness and success. In other words, mutual confidence means dependability, morality implies strength of character, self-denial or the joy of selfless service to the beloved denotes emotional maturity, and prudence shows intellectual maturity. These qualities bring the spouses so close to one another, it is said, that the relationship could persist even after death in a future existence. Nakula's parents are portrayed in Buddhist literature as an ideal couple who, in their old age, expressed the wish that their love should survive death. The Buddha replied that the wish would materialize if the above qualities are equally shared by both partners (A. II, 61-61).

Marital bonds of modern man are so brittle and fragile because these cohesive emotional forces are lost in sensuality. Much emphasis is laid on carnal pleasure while personality adjustments and emotional involvement which call for sacrifices and selflessness respectively, are ignored or neglected. Though sex is an important basic requirement in marriage, it is certainly not the be-all and end-all of family life. Indulgence in sex for its own sake never brings satisfaction, whence fulfillment? The insatiability of lust is disdainfully illustrated in Buddhist literature by the traditional simile of a dog licking a bone to satisfy hunger. But sex as an expression of conjugal love is a satisfying emotional experience. If sex was the only concern, man need not have evolved an institution like the family. Animals too satisfy their sex instinct, but nothing compared to the human family has evolved in the animal kingdom. The important function of family life seems to be to teach man a great moral lesson to overcome his egocentric nature. Man starts life in his mother's womb as the most selfish parasite. He then passes through the emotional stages of self-love, conjugal love and parental love. As a mature man and a parent he completely loses himself in the service of his offspring. His self-denial is such he even relinquishes his personal possessions, acquired through the toil of a lifetime, in favor of them. Finally he makes an emotional self-sacrifice when he gets a partner for his child to love and cherish. In his old age he regards his offspring with equanimity and contentment. This emotional maturity and fulfillment is utterly impossible if sensuality is regarded as the goal of married life.

Fame and Longevity

These two ambitions of man depend to a very large extent, as mentioned earlier, on the manner he handles his wealth and pleasure. Special mention should be made that liquor, like sensuality, is a great betrayer of all human ambitions. It has been aptly remarked that a man's conscience is soluble in alcohol. According to Buddhism both liquor and sensuality destroy man's physical and mental health, drain his resources, spoil his public image and distort his intellectual capacities (D. III, 182-184).

Happiness After Death

In this age of material pleasure, man is not much concerned with a life after death. The Buddhist axiom is that a man reaps what he sows. If one has led a useful moral life and reached old age with a sense of fulfillment, contentment and equanimity, one has no regrets. A well-spent blameless life has, according to Buddhism, happiness beyond the grave. Such a person is said to progress from light to brighter light (//joti joti parayano//, A. II, 86).

Sensuality and Intellectual Maturity

Another noteworthy ill effect of self-indulgence is the inhibition of intellectual capacities. Buddhism emphasizes that obsession with sensuality prevents clear thinking, distorts vision, clouds issues, inhibits wisdom and destroys peace of mind. While these observations were made twenty-five centuries ago by the Buddha, the inhibitory effect of sex on brain activity seems to be indicated quite independently by medical research on the pineal gland.

In man, the pineal gland is a pear-shaped midline structure located at the back of the base of the brain. This gland synthesizes a hormone called melatonin which affects behavior, sleep, brain activity, and sexual activity such as puberty, ovulation and sexual maturation. While melatonin stimulates brain activity, it inhibits sexual activity. Again it has been recognized that light, dark, olfaction, cold, stress and other neural inputs affect the pineal function. Exposure to light reduces the synthesis of melatonin and depresses pineal weight. On the other hand light accelerates sexual maturation activity.[4]

It will be useful to compare this medical information with Buddhist ideology. Buddhism maintains that sense stimuli disturb mental activity. If the sense doors are well guarded (//indriyesu guttadvaro hoti//), i.e. if visual, auditory, olfactory, gustatory and tactile inputs are controlled, a corresponding degree of concentrated mental activity becomes possible. //Cittassa ekaggata// or the ability to fix the mind on one point is greatly determined by the control of the sense faculties. In terms of physiology it seems to mean that such sense control helps the synthesis of melatonin in the pineal gland, which stimulates brain activity and retards sexual activity. Thus, with the help of medical research it seems possible to confirm the buddhist point of view that sensuality inhibits intellectual maturity.

Sensuality and Culture

According to the //Agganna Sutta//, which gives an account of the evolution of the world and society, the earliest inhabitants of the earth were mind-made and self-luminous beings who subsisted on joy and moved about in the sky. After a long time they tasted something extremely flavorsome and were delighted with this new gustatory sense experience. Craving entered into them and they went on tasting food in this manner. Consequently their bodies became coarser and coarser; they lost their radiance and the ability to subsist on joy and to traverse in the sky. (D. III, 84-86).

Now what is important for us here is not the authenticity of this evolutionary process, but the point that sensual desire has caused the loss of higher mental and physical capacities which man is supposed to have once possessed.

The //Cakkavattsihanada Sutta// (D. III, 69-74) deals with the problem of social change. As a result of the unequal distribution of wealth, poverty becomes widespread and moral standards deteriorate rapidly. With moral degeneration there is a corresponding decrease in physical beauty and length of life. As time goes on and immorality settles down, society comes under the grip of three derogatory phenomena, namely, perverted lust (//adhammaraga//), wanton greed (//visamalobha//) and a wrong sense of values (//micchadhamma//). Disrespect for family, religious and cultural traditions becomes an accepted social phenomenon. When moral degradation continues thus a time will come when the life-span is reduced to ten years and the marriageable age goes down to five. By that time food will undergo so much change that delicacies such as ghee, butter, honey, etc. will vanish, and what is considered coarse today will be a delicacy of that time. All concepts of morality will disappear and language will have no word to denote morality. Immorality will reign supreme with social sanction. There will be no marriage laws nor kinship, and society will fall into a state of utter promiscuity, as among animals. Among such humans keen mutual enmity will become the rule, and they will be overcome by passionate thoughts of killing one another. A world war will break out and large-scale massacre would be the result. After this mass blood bath, the few destitutes who are left behind will find solace in each other's company and they will begin to regard one another with kindly thoughts. With this change of heart there will be a gradual re-evolution of moral values. Step by step the good life will be restored, physical beauty will reappear and the life-span will increase. Mental potentialities too will gradually develop.

Such are the Buddhist ideas of social change. Society stands or falls with the rise or fall of moral values.

It is noteworthy that some present-day sociological studies too have revealed that morality and culture are causally connected.

William Stephens observes that primitive tribes have great sexual freedom, premarital as well as extramarital, when compared with civilized communities which have tight sex restrictions.[5] Dean Robert Fitch has connected the decline of the Roman civilization with the deterioration of their sexual morality.[6] The most important contribution in this respect is made by J.D. Unwin in a study called //Sex and Culture//.[7] He has conducted a survey of the sexual behavior and the level of culture of eighty uncivilized tribes and also those of six known civilizations. He concludes that there is a definite relationship between permissiveness and primitiveness, and sex restrictions and civilization. Sexual freedom gives rise to what he calls a zoistic (dead level of conception) culture where people are born, they satisfy their desire, they die and are forgotten after the remains are disposed of. They are not able to rationally find out the causal connection between events. When afflicted by illness, for instance, they resort to witchcraft and nothing more. When a certain degree of sex restriction, occasional, premarital, or post-nuptial, is present, the result is a manistic culture where ancestors are worshipped at times of crisis, but without a definite place of worship. Strict sex regulations as in monogamy produce a deistic culture with definite places of worship. Culture in the sense of the external expression of internal human energy resulting from the use of human powers of reason, creation and self knowledge becomes possible only with strictly enforced monogamous sex mores. The mechanism of this operation is not known, just as it is not known how carbon placed under different settings turns to coal or diamond.[8] All that can be said is that there is a definite causal link between sexual behavior and the culture pattern. As Unwin comes to this conclusion after conducting exhaustive methodical investigations, it is possible to maintain that scientific inquiries too have confirmed the Buddhist point of view regarding the relationship between morality and culture.

Sensuality and Environment

~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

The Anguttara Nikaya (I, 160) maintains that rainfall decreases
~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

when society comes under the sway of perverted lust, wanton greed and wrong values. Drought causes famine as a result of which the mortality rate goes up. Though it is difficult to establish a direct connection between immorality and lack of rain, an interpretation of the five natural laws mentioned on the commentaries might offer a plausible explanation.

In the cosmos there are five natural laws or forces, namely //utuniyama// (lit. season law), //bijaniyama// (lit. seed-law) //cittaniyama//, //kammaniyama//, and //dhammaniyama//.[9] These can be translated as physical laws, biological laws, psychological laws, moral laws, and causal laws. While the first four laws operate within their respective spheres, the last law of causality operates within them as well as among them. Thus the physical environment or ecology affects living organisms, i.e. biology; this influences psychology, which determines the moral force. The opposite process also operates with harmful or beneficial results depending on the nature or the forces at work. Perhaps the operation can be illustrated with a concrete example. Man's greed for luxury, wealth and power has caused the setting up of vast factories. They created the problem of air, water and noise pollution, which have adversely affected both fauna and flora.[10] The inadvertent modifications of atmospheric properties and processes caused by human activities is intensively studied by scientific bodies today. It is complained that although the effects of pollutants and smog upon people, plants and economic activities have been extensively studied, relatively little attention has been paid to the effects of pollution and smog upon climatic patterns. It is well known that many climatic elements such as radiation, cloudiness, fog, visibility and the atmospheric electric field are affected by pollution. Temperature and humidity are influenced indirectly and effects on precipitation are also suspected.[11] Science will reveal in the course of time whether pollution is definitely responsible for weather and climatic change, but it remains a fact that the world is already confronted with an acute shortage of water.

It is no secret that man uses his inherent powers of reason, intelligence and creativity to change his environment for his advantage. But man is not aware that the moral force he himself creates brings about corresponding changes in his environment to his weal or woe whether he likes it or not.

Conclusion

Concluding this essay, it should be emphasized that there is a Cosmic Moral Force which profoundly influences man. According to Buddhism it is this Cosmic Moral Law or Force which makes the world and mankind go on: //kammana vattati loko//, //kammana vattati paja// (Sn. v 654). This Cosmic Moral Force is generated by none other than man himself, for the Buddha maintains that human thoughts are a moral force (//cetanaham bhikkhave kammam vadami//, A III, 410). It is also more directly said that thoughts (or ideologies) make the world go on (//cittena ni yato loko//, S. I, 39). Therefore man has to discover his own inherent powers which are, at present, mostly dissipated on alcohol and sensuality. The discovery of the potentialities of //The World Within// is the most urgent need of today as modern man living in //Sick Cities//, lost in a //Sexual Wilderness//, unaware of //The Hidden Persuaders//, is being slowly but surely reduced to a //Naked Ape//.[12]

NOTES

[1] Abstinence from killing, stealing, sexual misconduct, false speech and intoxicants.

[2] Works consulted are: Vance Packard, //The Sexual Wilderness// (London, 1968); Lord Annan //The Disintegration of an Old Culture// (Oxford, 1966).

[3] Trevor Ling, //The Buddha// (London, 1973), pp. 17, 24 f.

[4] See G.E.W. Wolstenholme and Julie Knight, eds., //The Pineal Gland// (London, 1971).

[5] //The Family in Cross-Cultural Perspective// (New York, 1963), pp. 256-259.

[6] Quoted by Packard, //The Sexual Wilderness//, p.417.

[7] London: Oxford University Press, 1934.

[8] Ibid., pp. 424, 417, 412, etc.

[9] //Atthasalini//, PTS ed., p.272.

[10] Mitchell Gordon, //Sick Cities// (New York, 1963), pp. 92, 80.

[11] //Weather and Climate Modification: Problems and Prospects//, Vol. II (National Academy of Sciences, Washington, 1966) pp. 82-108.

[12] References are to the titles of works by Gina Cerminara (New York, 1957), Mitchell Gordon, Vance Packard (op. cit. and London, 1957), and Desmond Morris (New York, 1967).

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Lily de Silva is a professor in Buddhist Studies at the University of Peradeniya, Sri Lanka. Educated at the University of Ceylon, Peradeniya, she obtained the degree of Bachelor of Arts with First Class Honors in Pali and the Woodward Prize for Pali. She has taught at the University of Peradeniya since 1959 and was awarded the Ph.D. degree in 1967. Dr. de Silva is the editor of the //Digha Nikaya Atthakatha Tika// (Subcommentary to the Digha Nikaya), published by the Pali Text Society of London in three volumes. She is also the author of //Paritta: The Buddhist Ceremony for Peace and Prosperity in Sri Lanka// (National Museums of Sri Lanka, Colombo, 1981) and is a regular contributor to Buddhist scholarly and popular journals. She was a Visiting Scholar at the Center for the Study of World Religions, Harvard University, in 1978-79.

TRANSLATOR'S FOREWORD

This is a 'how to' book. It teaches the liberation of the mind, not as a mind-boggling theory, but as a very basic skill that starts with keeping the breath in mind.

The teachings here are drawn from the works of Ajaan Lee Dhammadharo (1906-61), one of Thailand's most renowned teachers of Buddhist meditation. Ajaan Lee was a forest monk -- one who prefers to live in the seclusion of the forest and makes meditation the central theme of his practice -- so his teachings grow out of personal, practical experience, although he also makes a point of relating them to standard Buddhist doctrine.

The book is in two parts: The first is a basic guide to the techniques of breath meditation -- Ajaan Lee's specialty -- and gives two methods that he developed at separate points in his career. The second part consists of excerpts from five of his talks dealing with issues that tend to arise in the course of meditation.

If you want to begin your practice of meditation immediately and fill in the details later, turn to Method 2. Read over the seven basic steps until you have them firmly in mind and then start meditating. Take care, especially at the beginning, not to clutter your mind with extraneous ideas or information. Otherwise, you might spend too much time looking for things in your meditation and not see what is actually there. The rest of the book can wait until later, when you want help with a particular problem or -- what is often the same thing -- when you want an over-all perspective on what you are doing.

The purpose of this book is to suggest possibilities: to direct your attention to areas you may have overlooked, to suggest approaches that otherwise might not have occurred to you. What you actually see is purely an individual matter. Don't try to force things. Don't be worried if you have experiences that aren't covered in the book. Don't be disappointed if you don't have experiences that are.

Signs and visions, for example: Some people experience them, others don't. They are an individual matter, and not really essential to the meditation. If you experience them, learn how to use them wisely. If you don't, learn how to use what you do experience. The important point is to keep the basics in mind and to stay observant.

Meditation, like carpentry, sailing, or any other skill, has its own vocabulary that to the beginner is bound to seem like a code. One of the challenges in using this book will be in breaking its code. Part of the difficulty is that some of the terms are literally foreign: They're in Pali, the language of the oldest extant Buddhist texts, colored by shades of meaning they've picked up from Thai. This problem, though, is relatively minor. Most of these terms are explained in the text; the glossary at the back of the book gives definitions for any that aren't, plus additional information on many that are.

A greater challenge lies in getting a feel for the author's point of view. In meditation, we are dealing with the body and mind as experienced from the inside. Ajaan Lee practiced meditation most of his adult life. He had long experience in viewing the body and mind from that perspective, and so it is only natural that his choice of terms should reflect it.

For example, when he refers to the breath or breath sensations, he is speaking not only of the air going in and out of the lungs, but also of the way breathing feels, from the inside, throughout the entire body. Similarly, the 'elements' (dhatu) of the body are not the chemical elements. Instead, they are elementary feelings -- energy, warmth, liquidity, solidity, emptiness, and consciousness -- the way the body presents itself directly to inner awareness. The only way to get past the strangeness of this sort of terminology is to start exploring your own body and mind from the inside and to gain a sense of which terms apply to which of your own personal experiences. Only then will these terms fulfill their intended purpose -- as tools for refining your inner sensitivities -- for the truth of meditation lies, not in understanding the words, but in mastering the skill that leads to a direct understanding of awareness itself.

You might compare this book to a recipe. If you simply read the recipe, you can't -- even if you understand all the terms -- get any flavor or nourishment from it. If you follow the first few steps and then give up when it starts getting difficult, you've wasted your time. But if you follow it all the way, you can then set it aside and simply enjoy the results of your own cooking.

My hope is that this book will be helpful in your personal exploration into the benefits that come from keeping the breath in mind.

Thanissaro Bhikkhu
(Geoffrey DeGraff)

Metta Forest Monastery
PO Box 1409
Valley Center, CA 92082

* * * * * * * *

FRAMES OF REFERENCE

by

Ajaan Lee Dhammadharo

(Phra Suddhidhammaransi Gambhiramedhacariya)

Translated from the Thai
by Thanissaro Bhikkhu
(Geoffrey DeGraff)

DharmaNet edition 1994

This electronic edition transcribed for DharmaNet by arrangement with the author

Transcribed for DharmaNet by W. D. Savage

{All bracketed text inserted by scribe}

CONTENTS
~~~~~~~~

FOREWORD: About the Author

FRAMES OF REFERENCE

APPENDIX: A REFUGE IN AWAKENING

GLOSSARY
~~~~~~~~

FOREWORD: ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Phra Ajaan Lee was born in 1906 in a rural village in Ubon Ratchathani province, northeastern Thailand. At the age of 20 he was ordained as a monk at the temple in his home village, and there began his study of Buddhist doctrine and monastic discipline. He discovered, much to his distress, that life in his temple -- as in most temples in Thailand at the time -- had little to do with the practice of the Buddha's teachings. As he wrote later in his autobiography, 'Instead of observing the duties of the contemplative life, we were out to have a good time: playing chess, wrestling, playing match games with girls whenever there was a wake... Whenever I looked into the books on monastic discipline, I'd start felling really uneasy. I told myself, "If you don't want to leave the monkhood, you're going to have to leave this temple."'

Soon after making this resolution, he happened to meet a monk of the wandering ascetic tradition founded by Phra Ajaan Sao Kantasilo (1861 - 1941) and Phra Ajaan Mun Bhuridatto (1870 - 1949). Impressed both with the man's teachings and with his way of life, Ajaan Lee set out on foot to find Ajaan Mun and to become his student. He spent two very intensive periods studying with Ajaan Mun: once, that first year, in the forests of Ubon; and then again, four years later, at Wat Chedi Luang in Chieng Mai. Ajaan Mun and Ajaan Sao were unique in their time in teaching that the way to nibbana was still open, and the training they gave their students in the direction of that goal was also unique, involving not only intensive meditation practice, but also the total re-education of the student's character: his habits, values and powers of observation. As Ajaan Lee wrote in his autobiography, 'Staying with Ajaan Mun was very good for me, but also very hard. I had to be willing to learn everything anew... Some days he'd be cross with me, saying that I was messy, that I never put anything in the right place -- but he'd never tell me what the right places were... To be able to stay with him any length of time, you had to be very observant and very circumspect. You couldn't leave footprints on the floor, you couldn't make noise when you swallowed water or opened the windows or doors. There had to be a science to everything you did -- hanging out robes... arranging bedding, everything. Otherwise, he'd drive you out, even in the middle of the Rains Retreat. Even then, you'd just have to take it, and try to use your powers of observation.

'In other matters, such as sitting and walking meditation, he trained me in every way, to my complete satisfaction. But I was able to keep up with him at best only about 60 percent of the time.'

After Ajaan Lee's second period of training, Ajaan Mun sent him out into the forests of northern Thailand to wander and meditate on his own. Ajaan Lee's wanderings eventually took him through every part of Thailand, as well as into Burma, Cambodia and India. Of all of Ajaan Mun's students, Ajaan Lee was the first to bring the teachings of the forest tradition into the mainstream of Thai society in central Thailand. In 1935 he founded a temple, Wat Paa Khlawng Kung, in a cemetery near Chanthaburi, on the southeast coast; and in 1955 he founded Wat Asokaram in a marshy area at the mouth of the Chao Phraya River on the outskirts of Bangkok. He drew students -- monks and lay people, men and women -- from all levels of society and all walks of life. In 1957 he was given the ecclesiastical rank of Chao Khun, with the title Phra Suddhidhammaransi Gambhiramedhacariya. He passed away in 1961.

Even in his last years, though, he continued to retreat regularly into the forest. To quote again from his autobiography: 'Living in the forest, as I like to do, has given me a lot to think about... It's a quiet place, where you can observe the influences of the environment. Take the wild rooster: If it went around acting like a domestic rooster, the cobras and mongooses would make a meal of it in no time... So it is with us: If we spend all out time wallowing in companionship, we're like a knife or a hoe stuck down into the dirt -- it'll rust easily. But if it's constantly sharpened on a stone or a file, rust won't have a chance to take hold. So we should learn always to be on the alert...

'Living in the forest, the mind becomes confident. The Dhamma you've studied -- or even that you haven't studied -- will make itself clear, because nature is the teacher. It's like the sciences of the world, which every country has used to develop amazing powers: None of their inventions or discoveries cane out of textbooks. They came because scientists studied the principles of nature, all of which appear right here in the world. As for the Dhamma, it's just like science: It exists in nature. When I realized this, I no longer worried about studying the scriptures, and I was reminded of the Lord Buddha and his disciples: They studied and learned from the principles of nature. None of them followed a textbook.'

'For these reasons, I'm willing to be ignorant when it comes to texts and scriptures. Some kinds of trees sleep at night and are awake during the day. Others sleep by day and are awake by night.'

FRAMES OF REFERENCE

INTRODUCTION

This book on the frames of reference is based to some extent on my own thoughts and opinions. In some spots it may not be directly in line with the original texts, because my primary aim has been to get to the heart of the matter, so that it can be conveniently put into practice. Those who hold zealously to the texts may feel that what I have written is wrong; but as for me, I feel that whoever is able to practice in line with what is written here will find that it can be taken as a guide to the true principles of concentration, discernment and release. To hold to the texts isn't wrong, but they should be held to intelligently, just as in medicine: A doctor who thinks that the only way to cure a fever is to drink a concoction of boiled neem and quinine leaves is wrong. Some doctors may add the leaves of other trees; some may make a concentrated extract; others may vary the dosage. In the same way, when practicing the Dhamma, to go no further than the texts may in some cases be wrong. Actually, any path that leads to the abandonment of defilement and to release from suffering is right. The value of medicine lies in its ability to cure disease; the value of a method of practice lies in its ability to get rid of defilement. As far as I can see, there is nothing wrong with any method that has been found to work. In the end, all such methods must follow the basic principles of virtue, concentration and discernment, and differ only as to whether they are crude or sophisticated, direct or indirect, fast or slow.

Now, I don't want to set myself up as an absolute authority of any kind. Thus, I want you, the reader, to use your own discernment. Take whatever passage seems right for you as a basis for your practice. There is no need to follow the entire book. Simply focus on a single point, and that will be enough. Once you have mastered an important point, all the other sections will come together and connect right there.

When you are ready to meditate, you should try to find a quiet, solitary place to assist in your practice of the frames of reference. Otherwise, your practice won't go smoothly, because solitude is desirable for all spiritual seekers in general. Just as a person who wants to look at his reflection in the water will be able to see himself clearly only when there is no wind rippling across the surface, in the same way, a person who wants peace that is subtle and profound has to conduct himself in this manner.

Or to put it another way, there has to be external peace and quiet before internal peace will arise. When both forms of peace are present, you will know and see the Dhamma as it actually is. So when you put this form of meditation into practice, you should first say your chants and pay respect to the Buddha in whatever way you are accustomed to, and then begin sitting in meditation. You are sure to obtain genuine results in line with what I have written here.

If there is anything defective or wrong in this book, I trust that the reader will show me forgiveness, for I'm not much of an expert when it comes to the texts. I've simply learned a few parts, and put them into practice.

One more point: This practice of training the heart is very important in that it forms the source of all goodness and merit; and whatever is the source of goodness and merit deserves special care and attention. The heart is a vessel for all that is good. When the heart is pure, any meritorious actions you may perform externally will truly foster happiness. External merit is like a tasty curry. If it's served in a filthy dish, then even though the curry may be delicious, the person eating it won't want to eat his fill because of the filth. But if the dish is clean and the curry delicious, the person eating is likely to eat with confidence to his heart's content. In the same way, if the heart is clean, it will find itself attracted to performing externally meritorious actions. It will always be ready to make sacrifices, because in every case it will taste the nourishment of its goodness.

Not only that, a clean heart also forms the path for release from stress and suffering, leading ultimately to nibbana. Those who are to reach the paths (magga) and fruitions (phala) leading to nibbana will do so by way of the heart. If the heart isn't trained, then no matter how much external merit you may have, you won't be able to reach nibbana. Nibbana can be attained only by training the heart in the practice of virtue, concentration and discernment. Virtue forms the basis for concentration; concentration, the basis for discernment; and discernment, the basis for release. Concentration is especially important because it forms the basis for discernment and intuitive understanding (nana), which are the crucial factors of the path. You can't do without concentration. If concentration is lacking, you can gain nothing but jumbled thoughts and conjectures, without any sound support.

Concentration is like a nail: and discernment, a hammer. If the nail isn't held firm and straight, the hammer will strike it only hit-or-miss, and the nail will never get through the board. For the heart to penetrate the world and get through to the highest Dhamma, it must take a firm stance in concentration so as to give rise to intuitive understanding. Intuitive understanding can occur only to those who have centered the mind in concentration. As for discernment, it's something we all have, but if it lacks intuitive understanding, it can never get beyond the world.

For this reason, we should all take an interest in the factors that form the path leading beyond suffering and stress to abundant well-being.

If you have questions about any part of this book, please feel free to ask at any time.

The merit coming from the writing of this book, I ask to dedicate to all those who have felt inspired to help pay for its printing costs so that it can be distributed freely as a gift of Dhamma. May the power arising from this gift bear them fruit, so that whatever they aspire to that is upright and just may succeed in bringing them happiness in every way.

Phra Ajaan Lee Dhammadharo

Wat Paa Khlawng Kung
(The Shrimp Canal Forest Temple)
Chanthaburi, 1948

{FRAMES OF REFERENCE}

{Main Text}

An explanation of the four frames of reference, which are -- for those who put them into practice -- a means for freedom from defilement:

I. Kayanupassana satipatthana: being mindful of the body as a frame of reference.
II. Vedananupassana satipatthana: being mindful of feelings as a frame of reference.

III. Cittanupassana satipatthana: being mindful of the mind as a frame of reference.
IV. Dhammanupassana satipatthana: being mindful of mental qualities as a frame of reference.

In order to use these four frames of reference as a means for centering the mind, you must first familiarize yourself with the following three qualities. Otherwise, you can't say that you are standing firm on your frame of reference. The truth of the matter is that the translations given above are too narrow -- for in dealing with the frames of reference, mere mindfulness isn't enough. When it's not enough, and yet you keep being mindful of the body, you will give rise only to feelings of pleasure and displeasure, because the duty of mindfulness is simply to keep referring to an object. So in developing the frames of reference, you have to know your tools --

1. Sati: mindfulness; powers of reference.
2. Sampajanna: presence of mind. This has to be firmly in place before sending mindfulness out to refer to its object -- such as the body -- and then bringing it back inwards to refer to the heart.
3. Atappa: focused investigation, analyzing the object into its various aspects.

This can be illustrated as follows: The body is like a saw mill. The mind is like a drive shaft. Presence of mind is the pulley that spins around the drive shaft in one spot. Mindfulness is the belt that ties the mind to its object, not letting it slip away to other objects. Focused investigation is the saw blade that keeps cutting the logs into pieces so that they can be of use. These three qualities must always be present for your practice of centering the mind to succeed.

Now we will discuss the work to be done, the objects for which focused investigation, presence of mind and mindfulness are responsible, each its separate way. The objects are four --

1. The body (kaya), which is a conglomeration of the four properties of earth, water, fire and wind.
2. Feelings (vedana): the experiencing of such sensations as pleasure, pain and indifference.
3. The mind (citta), which is what stores up the various forms of good and evil.
4. Mental qualities (dhamma): conditions that possess their own nature, such as the skillful and unskillful qualities that occur mixed together in the mind.

These are the four things for which you must be responsible.

I. THE BODY

The term 'body' here refers to conglomerations of the four properties, both those that have consciousness directing them and those that no longer do, but that still appear to the eye. Both sorts are termed physical bodies (rupa-kaya). Physical bodies can be considered under three aspects --

A. The inner body: your own body.
B. Outer bodies: the bodies of other people.
C. The body in and of itself: the act of focusing on an aspect or part of the body, such as the breath, which is an aspect of one of the four properties. This is what is meant by the body in and of itself.

The body, whether inner or outer, is simply a matter of the four properties. Now that you know your duties, you have to perform them properly. Sampajanna: Keep your presence of mind in place, right at the mind within. You don't have to direct it anywhere else. Sati: Your powers of reference have to be all-round. In other words, refer inwardly to the mind and then out to the object -- in this case, the body -- and then watch after the mind and its object to make sure that they don't slip away from each other. Atappa: Focus on investigating the body, analyzing it into its various aspects. This can be done in any of five ways:

1. Investigate the 32 parts of the body, beginning with the hair of the head, hair of the body, nails, teeth, skin, etc. Make a thorough survey and evaluation. If this method doesn't calm the mind, go on to --

2. Investigate the various repugnant aspects of the body, beginning with the fact that the body is a conglomeration of all sorts of things. In other words, it's a burial ground, a national cemetery, filled with the corpses of cattle, pigs, ducks, chickens, sour, sweet, greasy, salty, gathered and aged in the stomach, filtered and distilled into blood, pus, decomposing and putrid, oozing throughout the body and coming out its various openings: this body, which all of us in the human race care for without ceasing -- bathing it, scrubbing it, masking its smell -- and even then its filth keeps displaying itself as ear wax, eye secretions, nasal drip, tooth tartar, skin-scruff and sweat, always oozing out, filthy in every way. What it comes from is filthy, where it stays is filthy (i.e., in a cemetery of fresh corpses, or even worse -- we've probably buried hundreds of different kinds of corpses within ourselves). If you look at the human body, you'll see that its characteristics are ill-matched and incongruous. Its smell is something really offensive. If looking at the body in this way doesn't give rise to a sense of dispassion and detachment, go on to --

3. Investigate the in-and-out breath. When the breath comes in long, be aware of the fact. When it goes out long, be aware of it. When you first begin dealing with the breath, start out by sending your awareness out with the out-breath and in with the in-breath. Do this two or three times, and then let your awareness settle in the middle -- without letting it follow the breath in or out -- until the mind becomes still, paying attention only to the in-and-out breath. Make the mind open, relaxed and at ease. You can settle your awareness at the tip of the nose, at the palate -- if you can keep it centered in the middle of the chest, so much the better. Keep the mind still, and it will feel at ease. Discernment will arise; an inner light will appear, reducing distractive thought. Now observe the behavior of the breath as it swells and contracts -- in long and out long, in short and out short, in short and out long, in long and out short, in heavy and out light, in light and out heavy, in light and out light. Focus on making a thorough investigation into these different modes of breathing, without letting the mind move along with the breath. Do this until it gives rise to a sense of mental calm. If, however, this method doesn't make you calm, go on to --

4. Investigate the four properties: earth, water, wind and fire. The parts of the body that feel hard are the earth property. The parts that feel liquid are the water property. The energy that flows through the body is the wind property; and the warmth in the body, the fire property. Imagine that you can take the earth property out and pile it in a heap in front of you, that you can take the water property out and pile it behind you, that you can pile the wind property in a heap to your left and the fire property in a heap to your right. Place yourself in the middle and take a good look at the body, until you see that, when taken apart in this way, it vanishes into nothing, into ashes -- what they call 'death' -- and you will come to feel a sense of dispassion and detachment. If, however, you don't see any results appearing, go on to --

5. Consider the fact that the body, once it's born, leaves you exposed on all sides to the steady onslaughts of old age, illness and death. Ultimately, you are sure to be torn away from all that you love and cherish in the world. The body is always displaying its nature --

Anicca: It's inconstant, unstable, always shifting precariously about.

Dukkha: It's hard to endure.

Anatta: It's not you, yours, or anyone else's. You didn't bring it with you when you came, and can't take it with you when you go. When you die, you'll have to throw it away like an old log or a piece of kindling. There's nothing of any substance or worth to it at all.

When you consider things in this way, you'll come to feel a sense of dispassion that will make the mind steady, still and firmly centered in concentration.

These five activities are the duties of your focused investigation, fighting to see the true nature of the body. As for mindfulness, it has to follow its own duties, referring to the object under investigation, at the same time referring to the mind within. Don't make reference to anything else. Keep check on whether or not you have your mind on what you're doing: This is presence of mind. Keep track of your mind, observing it at all times to see in what ways it might be acting or reacting on you. Keep your awareness of this always in place, right at the heart.

All the activities mentioned here are aspects of taking the body as a frame of reference. Whether you are dealing with the inner body, with outer bodies or with the body in and of itself, you have to use the three qualities mentioned above. Only when you have them fully developed can you say that you are developing the great frame of reference (maha-satipatthana).

Normally, mindfulness is a quality we all have, but when it lacks presence of mind, it falls into wrong ways, becoming Wrong Mindfulness. But when you can follow the methods outlined above, you are sure to develop a disinterested steadiness of mind. You will come to feel a sense of dispassion and detachment that will make the mind quiet, calm and unperturbed. This is the ladder of liberating insight (vipassana-nana), leading to nibbana, which people of wisdom and experience have guaranteed:

nibbanam paramam sukham

Nibbana is the ultimate ease.

This ends the discussion of keeping the body in mind as a frame of reference.

II. FEELINGS

The word 'feeling' refers to the experiencing of sensations that arise from one's own actions, or kamma. There are three sorts of feelings: inner feelings or moods, outer feelings, and feelings in and of themselves.

A. Inner feelings, in terms of how they feel, are of three kinds --

1. Sukha-vedana: good moods; a carefree sense of ease or well-being in the mind.
2. Dukkha-vedana: bad moods; a feeling of depression, sorrow, annoyance or discouragement.

3. Upekkha-vedana: neutral moods, during intervals when happiness and sadness are not appearing.

B. Outer feelings are also of three kinds --

1. Somanassa-vedana: pleasure or delight in objects of the six senses -- sights, sounds, smells, tastes, tactile sensations and thoughts; becoming attracted to these things as they come into contact with the heart.
2. Domanassa-vedana: displeasure or discontent that arises from contact with objects of the senses such as sights, sounds, smells, tastes, etc., as they appear to the eye, ear, nose, tongue, etc., and strike one as unsatisfactory or undesirable.
3. Upekkha-vedana: a feeling of indifference or neutrality as one comes into contact with sights, sounds, etc.

C. Feelings in and of themselves: This refers to the act of focusing on any single aspect of the above-mentioned feelings. In other words, you don't have to be particular. Whenever pleasure arises, for example, set your mind on investigating it. Keep it firmly in mind. Watch after it to see that it stays in focus, and that you stay focused on it. Don't let your frame of reference slip away and change -- and don't let any hopes or wants arise in that mental moment at all. Then use your powers of focused investigation to look into the truth of the feeling; and presence of mind to watch after the mind, to make sure that your awareness stays in place. Don't allow the mental current that causes stress to arise.

The cause of stress first arises when presence of mind is weak and the mind vacillates. The vacillation is called craving for not-being (vibhava-tanha). As the movement becomes stronger, a mental current arises and goes straying out. The current that strays out is craving for being (bhava-tanha). When it comes across a thought or sensory object and grabs hold, that's called craving for sensuality (kama-tanha). For this reason, you should watch after the mind to make sure that it stays with its one object, its feeling of pleasure. Don't let any other preoccupations get involved. Keep your mindfulness and presence of mind firmly in place, and then make a focused investigation of the truth of that feeling. Only when you do this can you say that you are making use of feelings in and of themselves as a frame of reference.

By and large, whenever a mood or feeling arises, we tend to give rise to various hopes or desires. For instance, when a good mood arises, we want that sense of well-being to stay as it is or to increase. This desire gives rise to stress, and so we receive results contrary to what we had hoped for. Sometimes a bad mood arises and we don't want it, so we struggle to find happiness, and this simply piles on more suffering. Sometimes the heart is neutral -- neither happy nor sad, neither pleased nor displeased -- and we want to stay that way constantly, or else we start to think that staying neutral is stupid or inane. This gives rise to more desires, and we start to struggle for something better than what we already are.

When this happens, we can't say that we're firmly based on our frame of reference -- for even though we may be mindful of the fact that a good or a bad or a neutral feeling has arisen, we're not beyond it. This shows that we lack the three qualities that can nurture and support mindfulness in becoming a factor of the Path. In other words, start out with presence of mind firmly established, and then use mindfulness to connect the mind with its object. Don't let the mind slip away from the object, and don't let the object slip away from the mind. Keep mindfulness in firm reference to the object, and watch the mind to make sure that it stays fixed on its one object. As for the object, it's the responsibility of your focused investigation to keep track of whatever aspect of feeling may appear: inner or outer; happy, sad or indifferent.

For instance, when pain arises, what does it come from? Look into it until you know its truth. What does pleasure come from? It's the duty of your focused investigation to find out. In what mental moment does indifference occur? It's the duty of your focused investigation to keep watch until you really know. Whatever feelings may arise, inner or outer, are the responsibility of your focused investigation. You have to use your powers of analysis to burn into whatever spot a feeling may arise. This is the first round in your investigation.

2. The second round: Watch the arising of feelings in the present. You don't have to follow them anywhere else. Tell yourself that whatever may be causing these feelings, you're going to focus exclusively on what is present.

3. Focus on the fading of feelings in the present.

4. Focus on the passing away of feelings in the present.

5. Stay with the realization that feelings do nothing but arise and fall away -- simply flowing away and vanishing in various ways -- with nothing of any substance or worth. When you can do this, you can say that your frame of reference is firmly established in feelings in and of themselves -- and at that point, the Path comes together.

If we were to express this in terms of the factors of the Path, we'd have to do so as follows: The presence of mind that constantly watches after the mind, keeping it at normalcy, making sure that it doesn't fall into unskillful ways, is virtue. The mindfulness that keeps the mind connected with its object so that it doesn't slip away to other objects, is concentration. The focused investigation that penetrates into each object as it arises so as to know its true nature clearly -- knowing both that which arises and disbands, as well as that which doesn't arise or disband -- is discernment. These three qualities have to arise together in a single mental moment for the Path to come together (magga-samangi), and then the Path will function on its own, in line with its duties, enabling you to see clearly and know truly without having to let go of this or work at that, work at this or let go of that, let go of the outside or work at the inside, work at the outside or let go of the inside or whatever.

When all three of these qualities are gathered together, you can deal with any feeling at all -- past, present or future; pleasant, unpleasant or neutral -- because when these three qualities are fully developed, they all connect. This is why I made the comparison at the beginning: The mind is like a drive shaft. Presence of mind is a pulley spinning in place around the drive shaft. Mindfulness is the belt that keeps the mind and its objects from slipping away from each other. Focused investigation is the saw blade that works back and forth, cutting each object to pieces -- which is what is meant by 'bhagavant.'

Only a person who has the discernment to see in line with the truth in this way can be said to have mastered fully the use of feelings as a frame of reference.

III. THE MIND

In using the mind as a frame of reference, there are three aspects to deal with:

A. The mind inside.
B. The mind outside.

C. The mind in and of itself.

'The mind inside' refers to a state exclusively in the heart when it isn't involved with any outer preoccupations. 'The mind outside' refers to its interaction with such outer preoccupations as sights, sounds, etc. 'The mind in and of itself' refers to the act of singling out any aspect of the mind as it appears, whether inside or out.

As for the modes of the mind inside, there are three --

1. Raga-citta: a mental state infused with desire or passion.
2. Dosa-citta: a sense of inner irritation and displeasure.
3. Moha-citta: a cloudy, murky or confused state of mind, in which it is unable to consider anything; in short, delusion.

The mind outside is divided into the same three aspects -- states of passion, irritation and delusion -- but these are said to be 'outside' because once any of these aspects arises, it tends to go out and latch onto an outer preoccupation that simply serves to further aggravate the original state of passion, irritation or delusion. The mind then doesn't clearly or truly understand its objects. Its knowledge goes off in various directions, away from the truth: seeing beauty, for instance, in things that aren't beautiful, constancy in things that are inconstant, pleasure in things that are painful, and self in things that are not-self.

All of these things are aspects of the mind outside.

'The mind in and of itself' refers to the act of singling out any one of these aspects of the mind. For example, sometimes passion arises, sometimes anger, sometimes delusion: Whichever aspect may be arising in the present, single it out. With your presence of mind firmly in place, be mindful of that aspect of the mind, without making reference to any other objects -- and without letting any hopes or wants arise in that particular mental moment at all. Then focus unwaveringly on investigating that state of mind until you know its truth. The truth of these states is that sometimes, once they've arisen, they flare up and spread; sometimes they die away. Their nature is to arise for a moment and then dissolve away with nothing of any substance or worth. When you are intent on examining things in this way -- with your mindfulness, presence of mind and powers of focused investigation firmly in place -- then none of these defilements, even though they may be appearing, will have the chance to grow or spread. This is like the baskets or jars used to cover new lettuce plants: If no one removes the baskets, the plants will never have a chance to grow, and will simply wither away and die. Thus you have to keep your presence of mind right with each mental state as it arises. Keep mindfulness constantly referring to its object, and use your powers of focused investigation to burn into those defilements so as to keep them away from the heart at all times.

To put this another way, all of the mental states mentioned above are like lettuce or green-gram seeds. Mindfulness is like a basket. Presence of mind is the person who scatters the seeds, while the power of focused investigation is the heat of the sun that burns them up.

So far, we have mentioned only bad mental states. Their opposites are good mental states: viraga-citta -- the mind free from the grip of passion; adosa-citta -- the mind free from the annoyance or anger that can lead to loss and ruin; amoha-citta -- the mind free from delusion, intoxication and misunderstandings. These are skillful states of mind (kusala-citta), which form the root of all that is good. When they arise, maintain them and observe them so that you can come to know the level of your mind.

There are four levels of good mental states --

1. Kamavacara-bhumi: the level of sensuality.
2. Rupavacara-bhumi: the level of form.
3. Arupavacara-bhumi: the level of formlessness.
4. Lokuttara-bhumi: the transcendent level.

1. The level of sensuality: A mental state arises and connects with a wholesome object -- any sight, sound, smell, taste, tactile sensation or idea that can form the basis for skillful mental states. When it meets with its object, it becomes happy, joyful and glad. (Here we are referring only to those sensory objects that are good for the mind.) If you were to refer to the Heavens of Sensual Bliss as they appear within each of us, the list would run as follows: Sights that can form the basis for skillful mental states are one level, sounds are another, and same with smells, tastes, tactile sensations and ideas. Together they form the six levels of heaven on the sensual level.

2. The level of form: A mental state arises from thinking about (vitakka) a physical object that serves as the theme of one's meditation; and then analyzing (vicara) the object into its various aspects, at the same time making sure that the mind doesn't slip away from the object (ekaggatarammana). When the mind and its object are one in this way, the object becomes light. The mind is unburdened and can relax its sense of concern. Rapture (piti) and ease (sukha) arise as a result. When these five factors appear in the mind, it has entered the first level of jhana -- the beginning stage in the level of form.

3. The level of formlessness: The mind lets go of its physical object on the level of form, but is still attached to a very subtle mental notion -- the jhana of unbounded space, for instance, in which you are focused on a sense of emptiness and awareness with no physical object or image passing into your field of attention, so that you are unable to know its full range. What has actually happened is that you have curled up and are hiding inside. This isn't the kind of 'going in to know' that comes from finishing your work. It's the 'going in to know' that comes from wanting to run away. You've seen the faults of what arises outside you, but haven't seen that they really lie buried within you -- so you've hidden inside by limiting the field of your attention.

Some people, when they reach this point, believe that they have done away with defilement, because they mistake the emptiness for nibbana. Actually, it's only the first stage in the level of formlessness, and so is still on the mundane level.

If you seriously want to know whether your mind is on the mundane or the transcendent level, then observe it when you turn your awareness inward and make it still -- when you feel a sense of peace and ease that seems to have no defilements adulterating it at all. Let go of that mental state, to see how it behaves on its own. If defilements can reappear, you're still on the mundane level. Sometimes that mental state remains unchanged through the power of your own efforts, but after a while you become unsure of your knowledge. Your mind has to keep fondling, i.e., making a running commentary on it. When this is the case, don't go believing that your knowledge is in any way true.

There are many, many kinds of knowledge: The intellect knows, the heart knows, the mind knows, cognizance knows, discernment knows, presence of mind knows, awareness knows, unawareness knows. All these modes are based on knowledge; they differ simply in how they know. If you aren't able to distinguish clearly among the different modes of knowing, knowing can become confused -- and so you might take wrong knowing to be right knowing, or unawareness to be awareness, or knowledge attached to suppositions (sammuti) to be freedom from suppositions (vimutti). Thus you should experiment and examine things carefully from all angles so that you can come to see for yourself which kind of knowledge is genuine, and which is counterfeit. Counterfeit knowledge, merely knows, but can't let go. Genuine knowledge, when it goes about knowing anything, is bound to let go.

All three levels of the mind discussed so far are on the mundane level.

4. The transcendent level: This begins with the path and fruition of entry into the stream to nibbana. Those who reach this level have begun by following the threefold training of virtue, concentration and discernment on the mundane level, but then have gone on to gain their first true insight into the four Noble Truths, enabling them to free themselves from the first three Fetters (sanyojana). Their minds are thus released into the stream to nibbana. The three Fetters are --

a. Self-identification (sakkaya-ditthi): the view that leads us to believe that the body is our own.

b. Doubt (vicikiccha): the uncertainty that leads us to be unsure of the good we believe in -- i.e., of how much truth there is to the Buddha, Dhamma and Sangha.

c. Attachment to precepts and practices (silabbata-paramasa): fondling the good that we practice; being attached to those forms of goodness that are merely external -- for instance, observing precepts or practices by clinging simply to the level of bodily action or speech. Examples of this attitude include such things as developing virtue by adhering simply to the precepts; practicing concentration by simply sitting like a post; not being able to free yourself from these actions, always holding onto the goodness that comes from them, happy when you have the chance to perform them in a particular way, upset when you don't; thinking, for instance, that virtue is something you get from monks when they give you the precepts; that the eight precepts are to be observed only on certain days and nights, months and years; that you gain or lose merit simply as a result of external actions associated with your accustomed beliefs. None of these attitudes reaches the essence of virtue. They go no further than simply clinging to beliefs, customs, and conventions; clutching onto these forms of goodness, always fondling them, unable to let them go. Thus this is called 'attachment to precepts and practices.'

Such attitudes are an obstacle to what is truly good. Take, for example, the long-held belief that goodness means to practice charity, virtue and meditation on the sabbath days: Stream-winners have completely let go of such beliefs. Their hearts are no longer caught up in beliefs and customs. Their virtues no longer have precepts. In other words, they have reached the essence of virtue. Their virtue is free from the limits of time. In this they differ from ordinary, run-of-the-mill people. Ordinary people have to hand goodness over to external criteria -- believing, for instance, that virtue lies on this day or that, during Rains Retreat, during this or that month or year -- and then holding fast to that belief, maintaining that anyone who doesn't follow the custom can't be virtuous. In the end, such people have a hard time finding the opportunity really to do good. Thus we can say that they don't know the true criteria for goodness. As for Stream-winners, all the qualities of virtue have come in and filled their hearts. They are able to unshackle themselves from the conventional values of the world that say that this or that is good. What is truly good they have seen appear in their hearts. Good lies right here. Evil lies right here. Neither depends on external actions. This is in line with the Buddha's saying, mano-pubbangama dhamma mano-settha mano-maya

All matters are preceded by the heart,
Excelled by the heart,
Achieved through the heart.

This is what is meant by 'Stream-winner'.

Stream-winners are like people who have rowed their boats into the main current of the Chao Phraya River, and so are destined to float down to the river's mouth and into the sea of amata -- deathless -- nibbana. There are three ways they can reach the sea:

(1) The lowest level of Stream-winner is like a boatsman who leans back with his hand simply placed on the rudder. This level of Stream-winner reaches the goal slowly.

(2) The second level is like a boatsman who has his foot on the rudder, his hands on the oars, and rows along.

(3) The third level: The boat is equipped with a motor and the boatsman is at the steering wheel, and so he reaches the goal in practically no time at all.

This -- reaching the stream to nibbana -- is the beginning stage of the transcendent level. If you were to simplify the three Fetters, you could do so as follows: To be attached to the body as being one's own is self-identification. To be attached to the actions of the body is attachment to precepts and practices. Not knowing how to separate the mind from the body or from one's actions makes one unable to see clearly and know truly: This leads to uncertainty and doubt.

These are simply my opinions on the matter, so you who read this should consider things carefully on your own.

This ends the discussion of the transcendent and mundane skillful states of mind.

When you know the characteristics of the various mental states, you should use the three qualities mentioned above as your tools: Keep your mindfulness, presence of mind and powers of focused investigation firmly in place at the mind. To be able to gain knowledge, you have to use the power of focused investigation, which is an aspect of discernment, to know how mental states arise and fall: pulling out, taking a stance, and then returning into stillness. You must keep your attention fixed on investigating these things constantly in order to be able to know the arising and falling away of mental states -- and you will come to know the nature of the mind that doesn't arise and doesn't fall away.

To know the arising and falling away of mental states of the past is one level of cognitive skill (vijja), and deserves to be called 'knowledge of previous births.' To know the states of the mind as they change in the present deserves to be called 'knowledge of death and rebirth.' To know how to separate mental states from their objects, knowing the primal nature of the mind, knowing the current or force of the mind that flows to its objects; separating the objects, the current of mind that flows and the primal nature of the mind: To be able to know in this way deserves to be called 'knowledge of the ending of mental effluents.' The objects or preoccupations of the mind are the effluent of sensuality. The current that flows is the effluent of a state of being. Not knowing the primal nature of the mind is the effluent of unawareness.

If we were to express this in terms of the four Noble Truths, we would have to do so as follows: The objects or preoccupations of the mind are the truth of stress (dukkha-sacca). The current of the mind that flows into and falls for its objects is the truth of the cause of stress (samudaya-sacca). The mental state that penetrates in to see clearly the truth of all objects, the current of the mind and the primal nature of the mind, is called the mental moment that forms the Path (magga-citta). To let go of the objects, the mental current and the primal nature of the mind, without any sense of attachment, is the truth of the disbanding of stress (nirodha-sacca).

When the three qualities that assist the mind -- presence of mind, mindfulness and focused investigation -- are vigorous and strong, presence of mind becomes the awareness of release (vijja-vimutti), mindfulness becomes intuitive understanding (nana), and focused investigation becomes liberating insight (vipassana-nana), the discernment that can stay fixed on knowing the truth of stress without permitting any sense of pleasure or displeasure for its object to arise. Intuitive understanding fathoms the cause of stress, and the awareness of release knows the heart clearly all the way through. When you can know in this way, you can say that you know rightly.

* * *

Here I would like to back up and discuss the question of the mind in a little more detail. The word 'mind' covers three aspects:

(1) The primal nature of the mind.
(2) Mental states.
(3) Mental states in interaction with their objects.

All of these aspects, taken together, make up the mind. If you don't know the mind in this way, you can't say that you really know it. All you can do is say that the mind arises and falls away, the mind doesn't rise or fall away; the mind is good, the mind is evil; the mind becomes annihilated, the mind doesn't become annihilated; the mind is a dhamma, the mind isn't a dhamma; the mind gains release, the mind doesn't gain release; the mind is nibbana, the mind isn't nibbana; the mind is sensory cognizance, the mind isn't sensory cognizance; the mind is the heart, the mind isn't the heart...

As the Buddha taught, there are only two paths to practice -- the body, speech and heart; and the body, speech and mind -- and in the end both paths reach the same point: Their true goal is release. So if you want to know the truth concerning any of the above issues, you have to follow the path and reach the truth on your own. Otherwise, you'll have to argue endlessly. These issues -- for people who haven;t practiced all the way to clear insight -- have been termed by people of wisdom as sedamocana-katha: issues that can only make you break out in a sweat.

So I would like to make a short explanation: The primal nature of the mind is a nature that simply knows. The current that thinks and streams out from knowing to various objects is a mental state. When this current connects with its objects and falls for them, it becomes a defilement, darkening the mind: This is a mental state in interaction. Mental states, by themselves and in interaction, whether good or evil, have to arise, have to disband, have to dissolve away by their very nature. The source of both these sorts of mental states is the primal nature of the mind, which neither arises nor disbands. It is a fixed phenomenon (thiti-dhamma), always in place. By the primal nature of the mind -- which is termed 'pabhassara,' or radiant -- I mean the ordinary, elementary state of knowing in the present. But whoever isn't able to penetrate in to know it can't gain any good from it, like the proverbial monkey with the diamond.

Thus the name given by the Buddha for this state of affairs is really fitting: avijja -- dark knowledge, counterfeit knowledge. This is in line with the terms 'pubbante annanam' -- not knowing the beginning, i.e., the primal nature of the mind; 'parante annanam' -- not knowing the end, i.e., mental states in interaction with their objects; 'majjhantika annanam' -- not knowing the middle, i.e., the current that streams from the primal nature of knowing. When this is the case, the mind becomes a sankhara: a concoctor, a magician, fabricating prolifically in its myriad ways.

This ends the discussion of the mind as a frame of reference.

IV. MENTAL QUALITIES

Mental qualities as a frame of reference can be divided into three sorts: inner mental qualities, outer mental qualities, and mental qualities in and of themselves.

A. Inner mental qualities can be either good or bad, but here we will deal only with the five Hindrances (nivarana), which are bad --

1. Kama-chanda: sensual desire.
2. Byapada: ill will, malevolence.
3. Thina-middha: sloth and torpor.
4. Uddhacca-kukkucca: restlessness and anxiety.
5. Vicikiccha: uncertainty.

These five Hindrances can be either inner or outer phenomena. For example:

1. The mind gives rise to desire, but hasn't yet streamed out to fix its desires on any particular object.

2. The mind gives rise to a sense of irritation and discontent, but without yet fixing on any particular object.
3. A state of torpor arises in the mind, without yet fixing on any particular object.
4. The mind is restless, anxious and disturbed on its own, without yet fixing on any particular object.
5. The mind is doubtful and uncertain -- unable to think anything through -- but without yet fixing on any particular object. It's simply that way on its own.

If these five Hindrances are still weak and haven't yet streamed out to become involved with any external objects, they are called 'inner mental qualities.'

B. Outer mental qualities simply come from the inside:

1. Once the mind has given rise to a sense of desire, it streams out and fixes on such external objects as sights, sounds, smells, tastes, etc.
2. Once the mind has given rise to a sense of irritation, it streams out and fixes on a sight, sound, smell, taste, etc., and then dislikes its object, wanting it to be destroyed.
3. The mind, already in a state of torpor, streams out and fixes on an outer object. Once it has fixed on the object, it then becomes even more torpid.
4. The mind, already restless, streams out to fix on such outer objects as sights, sounds, smells, tastes, etc.
5. A mental state of uncertainty arises in the mind, and the mind lets it stream out to fix on such external objects as sights, etc.

These are thus called outer mental qualities. When any mental quality first arises in the mind, it's called an inner quality. When it flares up, grows stronger and streams out to an outer object, it's called an outer quality.

C. Mental qualities in and of themselves: This means to focus on any one of these Hindrances -- because not all five Hindrances can appear in the same mental moment. You can thus pick out any Hindrance at all to focus on and examine. For example, suppose that sensual desire has appeared: Keep your presence of mind firmly in place at the heart, and use your powers of reference to keep the mind on the phenomenon. Don't waver, and don't let any hopes or wishes arise. Keep your mind firmly in one place. Don't go dragging any other objects in to interfere. Focus your powers of investigation down on nothing but the quality appearing in the present. As long as you haven't gained clear, true insight into it, don't let up on your efforts. When you can do this, you are developing mental qualities in and of themselves as a frame of reference.

The qualities mentioned above are all unskillful qualities (akusala dhamma). They act as obstacles to such things as jhana, liberating insight and the transcendent. Thus, if you want to gain release from them, you must first center the mind firmly in concentration. To be able to center the mind firmly, you have to develop the following three qualities within yourself --

(1) Sampajanna: presence of mind. Always have this firmly in place.

(2) Sati: mindfulness. Keep the mind in firm reference to whatever quality has arisen within it. Watch after the quality to keep it with the mind; watch after the mind to make sure that it doesn't lose aim and go slipping off to other objects. Once you see that the mind and its object have become compatible with each other, use --

(3) Atappa -- the power of focused investigation -- to get to the truth of the quality. If you haven't yet gained clear and true insight, don't relax your efforts. Keep focusing and investigating until the power of your discernment is concentrated and strong, and you will come to know that mental qualities -- whether inner, outer, or in and of themselves -- simply arise, fade and disband. There's nothing of any lasting worth to them, because they are all sankhata dhamma -- conditioned phenomena; and whatever is conditioned falls under the truths of aniccata -- inconstancy; dukkhata -- stress, i.e., it's hard to bear; and anattata: It's not you, yours, or anyone else's. It simply changes in line with natural conditions. No one with any real discernment holds onto these qualities as self or as anything of lasting worth, because such people have seen that these things are like wheels or gears: Whoever holds onto them will have to be trampled or mashed.

Thus if you hope for the genuine happiness offered by the Buddha's teachings, you should take the three qualities mentioned above and make them permanent features of your heart -- and you will come to see clearly the quality free from fabrication, called the Unconditioned (asankhata dhamma), the genuine Dhamma. Uncreated, uncaused, it simply is, by its very nature. It doesn't circle about, arising and passing away. The Unconditioned is a perfectly ordinary part of nature, yet no one in the world can know it aside from those who have developed virtue, concentration and discernment. So if you sincerely want to go beyond suffering and stress, you should work to give rise to clear and true insight through your own efforts. When you can keep your presence of mind constantly in place, you will be able to know the nature of the mind. Your powers of reference and focused investigation will have to be constantly in place within for you not to be misled by the objects and preoccupations of the mind.

Most of us, ordinarily, have no clear sense of our own nature, and so we can't clearly see the thoughts and urges that arise within us. As a result, we go out to fasten onto their objects, giving rise to the wheel of rebirth (vatta-samsara), circling around and around without end.

Here I will refer to the wheel within: Not knowing the primal nature of the mind is the cycle of defilement (kilesa vatta), or unawareness, which is the beginning of the cycle. This gives rise to the act of mental fabrication or synthesis, which is the cycle of intention and action (kamma vatta). This in turn leads us to experience mental objects and preoccupations, which is the cycle of retribution (vipaka vatta). Thus there are three parts to the cycle.

The three parts of the cycle can be illustrated as follows: Unawareness is the hub of the wheel. Mental fabrications are the spokes; and mental preoccupations, the rim. The sensory organs form the yoke and harness, sensory objects are the oxen, and the driver is birth, old age, illness and death. Now pile on your belongings -- your defilements -- and with a lash of the whip, you're off: The oxen drag you away, leading you up the mountains and down, until in the end you crash and are smashed to smithereens, i.e., death.

For this reason, we must make our awareness penetrate into the nature of the mind at the center of the axle, which doesn't turn with the wheel and which is said to be 'uncycling' (vivatta). Whoever can do this will find that the path is sudden and short, not slow. For example, in ancient times, monks and lay disciples were able to reach Awakening even while sitting and listening to a sermon, while going for alms, or while gazing at a corpse. From this we can gather that after they had imbued themselves with the qualities mentioned above, they focused their investigation on that particular point and gained clear and true insight right then and there, without having to pull in or out, back or forth. They were able to let go naturally, with no 'in' or 'out,' no 'coming' or 'going'.

Those who investigate will see the truth. Some people believe that they will have to abandon all mental preoccupations before they can train the mind, but the truth of the matter is that the mind is usually deluded right there -- at its preoccupations -- and the spot where you are deluded is the spot you have to investigate. If you don't solve the problem right where you're deluded, don't believe that you can let go by running away. Even if you do run away, you'll end up coming back and falling for the same old preoccupations once more.

People of discernment, though, whether they deal with what is inside or out, can give rise to virtue, concentration, discernment and release in every context. They have no sense that the inside is right and the outside wrong; that the inside is wrong and the outside right; or that the inside is refined and the outside base. Such opinions never occur to people of discernment. Discernment has to be all-around knowing or knowing all around before it can be called full-fledged discernment. Knowing all around means to know the inside first and then the outside. All-around knowing means to know the outside first, and then to bring that awareness all the way in. This is why they are called people of discernment: They can bring the outside in; what is base they can make refined; past and future they can bring into the present, because they have brought the parts of the Path together in equal measure -- mindfulness, presence of mind and focused investigation -- each performing its duties, forming the way that leads beyond all suffering and stress.

Those who can do this will be able to reach the truth in any posture. All that will appear to them will be the condition of stress (sabhava-dukkha) and the condition of things in themselves (sabhava-dhamma). To see things this way is called 'yathabhuta-nana' -- seeing things for what they really are.

SUMMARY

The four frames of reference can be reduced to two: physical and mental phenomena, or -- another way of putting it -- body and mind. Even though they are divided into four, it is simply the current of the mind that is divided. When you come to the essence of the practice, it all boils down to the body and mind. If you want really to simplify the practice, you should focus on investigating the body, and then focus on investigating the mind.

1. To focus on investigating the body: Be aware of any one aspect of the body, such as the breath, and then when you can keep focused on it accurately, spread your awareness to observe other aspects of the body, examining them from various angles. While making your investigation, though, don't let go of your original focus -- the breath. Keep examining things until you've gained clear and true insight into the aspects of the body, and the mind becomes more quiet, still and subtle than before. If anything arises while you are investigating, don't fasten onto it in any way.

2. To focus on investigating the mind: Set your awareness at one spot or another, and keep that awareness perfectly still. After your mind has been still long enough, examine the ways it then changes and moves, until you can see that its movements, whether good or bad, are simply a form of fabrication (sankhara). Don't let yourself become preoccupied with anything you may come to know, think or see while examining. Keep your awareness in the present. When you can do this, your mind is headed towards peace and clear insight.

This way of practice falls in line with all four of the frames of reference. When you can do this, you will give rise to the mental moment that forms the Path -- and the moment the Path arises in full power is the moment you can let go.

Letting go has two forms: (1) Being able to set go of mental objects but not of one's own mind. (2) Being able to let go both of the objects of the mind and of one's self.

To be able to let go both of one's objects and of one's self is genuine knowing. To be able to let go of one's objects but not of one's self is counterfeit knowing. Genuine knowing lets go of both ends: It lets the object follow its own nature as an object, and lets the mind follow the nature of the mind. In other words, it lets nature look after itself. 'Object' here refers to the body; 'self' refers to the heart. You have to let go of both.

When your knowledge can reach this level, you don't have to worry much about virtue, concentration or discernment. Virtue, concentration and discernment aren't the nature of the mind; nor is the nature of the mind virtue, concentration and discernment. Virtue, concentration and discernment are simply fabricated phenomena, tools for extinguishing defilement. When defilement is extinguished, then virtue, concentration and discernment disband as well. Virtue, concentration and discernment are like water. Defilement is like a fire. The mind is like the person using the water to put out the fire. When the water has put out the flames, the water itself has vanished -- but the person putting out the fire hasn't disappeared. The fire isn't the water, the water isn't the fire. The person isn't the water, the water isn't the person. The person isn't the fire, the fire isn't the person. The genuine nature of the mind isn't defilement, nor is it virtue, concentration and discernment. It simply is, in line with its own nature.

Those who don't know the nature of the truth maintain that death is annihilation or that nibbana is annihilation of one sort or another. This is simply their own misunderstanding. Even those who have gone no higher than the level of Stream-entry are able to know that the true nature of the mind isn't in any way annihilated, which is why they are people of strong, unwavering conviction, believing in the paths and their fruitions. Even though their hearts aren't yet entirely free from the admixture of defilements, those defilements can't efface the true nature of their hearts -- just as an ingot of gold, when it falls into the dirt, may be covered with soot, but the soot can't turn it into anything other than gold.

This is unlike ordinary, run-of-the-mill people. An ordinary person's mind may be pure from time to time, but it doesn't stay that way. It can't escape from being defiled again -- just as a sharpened knife will stay in shape only if it is kept bathed in oil. If you put the knife to use, or forget to keep it bathed, the steel of the blade might turn into something other than steel.

Thus each of us should earnestly make the effort to reach at least the Stream, for although all the qualities I have mentioned -- whether conditioned (sankhata dhamma) or Unconditioned (asankhata dhamma) -- lie mixed within every one of us, none of them are as exalted as viraga dhamma: the act of dispassion that extracts the Unconditioned from the conditioned as gold is extracted from crude ore.

The Buddha's teachings are subtle and deep. Whoever isn't set on truly putting them into practice won't know their taste -- like a cowherd hired to watch over cattle without ever knowing the taste of their milk.

Thus we are taught:

To study is to know
the texts,
To practice is to know your defilements,
To attain the goal is to know

& let go.

APPENDIX

Ajaan Lee's last recorded sermon dealt with the topic of making oneself one's own refuge by practicing the four frames of reference -- much like one of the Buddha's sermons in the last year of his life. Since the sermon expands on the topic of the four frames of reference in a slightly different way from the above book, I thought it would make an interesting addition to this file, so here it is:

A REFUGE IN AWAKENING

ye keci buddham saranam gatase na te gamissanti apaya-bhumim pahaya manusam deham
deva-kayam paripuressantiti

"Those who have gone to the Buddha as refuge will not go to the realms of deprivation. On abandoning the human body, they will fill the company of the gods."

I will now explain this verse so that you can practice in a way leading to the supreme attainment, capable of eliminating all your suffering and fears, reaching the refuge of peace.

We come into this world without a substantial refuge. Nothing -- aside from the Buddha, Dhamma and Sangha -- will follow us into the next life. These three are the only things in which we can take refuge both in this life and in lives to come.

There are two levels on which people take refuge in the Triple Gem. Some take refuge only on the level of individuals, while others take refuge on the level of inner qualities, by developing the steps of the practice within themselves.

I. On the level of individuals

A. Buddha. Buddhas are people who have attained purity of heart. There are four types:

1. Rightly self-awakened Buddhas: those who have attained Awakening on their own, without anyone to teach them, and who have established a religion.

2. Private Buddhas: those who have gained Awakening without establishing a religion. On attaining the goal, they live by themselves.

3. Disciple Buddhas: those who have practiced in line with the teachings of a Buddha until they too have gained Awakening.

4. Learned Buddhas: those who have studied the teachings in detail, have followed them and attained the goal.

All four of these types are individual people, so to take refuge in them is to take refuge on the level of individuals. They can give us refuge only in a shallow and not very substantial way. Even though taking refuge on this level can be advantageous to us, it helps us only on the level of the world, and can give only temporary protection against falling into the realms of deprivation. If we lose faith in these individuals, our mind can change to a lower level -- for all individuals fall under the laws of all conditioned things: They are inconstant and changing, subject to stress, and not-self -- i.e., they can't prevent their own death.

So if you go to a Buddha as refuge on the level of individuals, there are only two sorts of results you'll get: at first gladness, and then sadness when the time comes to part -- for it's the nature of all individuals in the world that they arise, age, grow ill and die. The wisest sages and the most ordinary people are all equal on this point.

B. Dhamma. For many of us, the teachings in which we take our refuge are also on the level of individuals. Why is that? Because we see them as the words of individual people.

Sages of the past have divided the teachings in the Buddhist Canon into four types:

1. Sayings of the Buddha.

2. Sayings of his disciples.

3. Sayings of heavenly beings. There were occasions when heavenly beings, on coming to pay respect to the Buddha, said truths worth taking to heart.

4. Sayings of seers. Some hermits and yogis uttered truths from which Buddhists can benefit.

All of these sayings were organized into the three parts of the Buddhist Canon: the discourses, the discipline and the Abhidhamma. If we take refuge in the Dhamma on this level, it is simply an object: something we can remember. But memory is inconstant, and can't provide us with a safe, dependable refuge. At best it can help us only on the worldly level because we are depending on individuals, on objects, as our refuge.

C. Sangha. There are two sorts of Sangha.

1. The conventional Sangha: ordinary people who have ordained and taken up the homeless life. This sort of Sangha is composed of four sorts of people.

a. Upajivika: those who have taken up the ordained life simply as a comfortable way of making a living. They can depend on others to provide for their needs, and so get complacent, satisfied with their ordained status, without looking for any form of goodness better than that.

b. Upadusika: those who, on being ordained in Buddhism, destroy the Buddha's teachings through their behavior -- not abandoning the things they should abandon, not doing the things they should do, damaging their own capacity for good and that of others, being destructive, falling away from the Buddha's teachings.

c. Upamuyhika: those who, on being ordained in Buddhism, make themselves blind and ignorant, who don't look for tactics for bringing their behavior into line with the Buddha's teachings. They don't pull themselves out of their useless ways, and stay continually deluded.

c. Upanisaranika: those who, on being ordained in Buddhism, are intent on studying and practicing in line with what they have learned, who try to find themselves a secure refuge, and who don't let themselves become negligent or complacent. Whatever the Buddha says is good, they behave accordingly. Whether or not they attain that goodness, they keep on trying.

All four of these count as one type of Sangha on the level of individuals.

2. The Noble Sangha. This has four levels: those who have practiced the Buddha's teachings until they have reached the attainments of Stream Entry, Once-returning, Non-returning or Arahantship. All four of these are still on the level of individuals because they are individual people who have reached the transcendent attainments in their hearts. Suppose, for example, we say that Annakondanna is a Streamwinner, Sariputta a Once-returner, Moggallana a Non-returner and Ananda an Arahant. All four of them are still individuals in name and body. To take refuge in them is to take refuge on the level of individuals -- and as individuals they are inconstant and unstable. Their bodies, sense faculties and mental phenomena by nature have to age, grow ill and die. In other words, they are anicca, inconstant and changeable; dukkha, subject to stress and suffering; and anatta: They themselves can't prevent the nature of conditioned phenomena from taking its course with them.

When this is the case, anyone who tries to take refuge in them is subject to change as well. We can depend on them only for a while, but they can't provide us any true refuge. They can't keep us from falling into the realms of deprivation. At best, taking refuge in them can give us results on the worldly level -- and the worldly level is changing all the time.

This ends the discussion of the Triple Refuge on the level of individuals.

II. On the level of inner qualities

Taking refuge in the Buddha, Dhamma and Sangha on the level of inner qualities means reaching the Triple Gem with the heart through the practice.

To reach the Buddha on the level of inner qualities, you first have to know the virtues of the Buddha, which are of two sorts: causes and results. The causes of his Awakening are mindfulness and presence of mind. The result of his Awakening is the transcendent: the stilling of all defilements and mental effluents.

So we have to develop these qualities within ourselves. Buddha-sati -- mindfulness like the Buddha's -- is what wakes us up. Full presence of mind is what makes us correctly aware of cause and effect. The way to develop these qualities is to practice in line with the four frames of reference. This will enable us to reach the Buddha on the level of inner qualities.

A. Contemplation of the body as a frame of reference. This means being firmly mindful of the body, using mindfulness to wake up the body and mind both by day and by night -- sitting, standing, walking, lying down. We use mindfulness and presence of mind to be fully conscious throughout the body. This is the cause for reaching the Buddha on the level of inner qualities -- i.e., reaching the Buddha by oneself and within oneself, without having to depend on anyone else. When you depend on yourself, that's when you're on the right track.

Before focusing mindfulness on the body so as to wake yourself up, you first have to know that there are two ways of looking at the body:

1. The body, i.e., all four physical properties gathered together as a physical object: the earth property, or the solid aspects; the water property, or the liquid aspects; the fire property, or the warm aspects; and the wind property, i.e., such things as the in-and-out breath.

When all four of these properties are in harmony, they intermingle and form an aggregate or object we call the body.

2. The body in and of itself, i.e., any one aspect of any of these four properties. For example, we can take the wind property. Focus your mindfulness and presence of mind on nothing but the wind property and keep them there. You don't have to get involved with any of the other properties. This is called the body in and of itself.

From there you can go to wind in and of itself. There are six aspects to the wind property: the breath energy flowing down from the head to the spaces between the fingers and toes; the breath energy flowing from the spaces between the fingers and toes up to the top of the head; the breath forces in the stomach; the breath forces in the intestines; and the in-and-out breath. These six aspects make up the wind property in the body.

When you focus on wind in and of itself, be mindful to keep track of only one of these aspects at a time -- such as the in-and-out breath -- without worrying about any other aspects of the breath energy. This can be called focusing on wind in itself. The same principle applies to earth in and of itself, water in and of itself and fire in and of itself.

When you have mindfulness and presence of mind constantly established in the body, the body in and of itself, wind, fire, earth or water in and of itself -- whichever seems easiest and most comfortable -- keep with it as much as possible. When you do this, the body will wake up, for you aren't letting it simply follow its natural course. To bring mindfulness into the body helps keep it awake. The body will feel lighter and lighter as we keep it in mind. Presence of mind is what enables us to be aware throughout the body. When these two mental qualities enter into the body, the body will feel agile, pliant and light.

In Pali, this is called kaya-lahuta. The mind will also be awake, and give rise to knowledge in and of itself through its own 'sanditthiko' practice -- i.e., the person who does the practice will see the results for him or herself in the here and now.

People who awaken from their slumbers are able to see and know things. The same holds true for people who practice mindfulness immersed in the body as a frame of reference. They are bound to see the true nature of their own bodies. To penetrate in, knowing and seeing in this way, is to reach the Buddha, Dhamma and Sangha -- which differ only in name, but are one and the same in their essence.

Whoever doesn't practice in this way is asleep, both in body and mind. A person asleep can't see or know anything at all, which is why we can say that people of this sort have yet to reach the Buddha on the level of the inner qualities.

B. Contemplation of feelings as a frame of reference. Be mindful of feelings as they arise within you. Feelings are results that come from your own past and present actions. There are three sorts:

1. Feelings of pleasure

2. Feelings of pain

3. Feelings of equanimity.

To practice contemplation of feelings, be mindful of each of the various kinds of feeling that occur in the body and mind. For instance, sometimes there's physical pleasure but mental distress; sometimes physical pain but mental pleasure; sometimes pleasure both in body and mind; and sometimes pain both in body and mind. So focus in on being mindful of feelings as they arise. Examine them closely. This is called contemplation of feelings.

As for feelings in and of themselves, this means focusing on one type of feeling. For instance, wherever there's pleasure, focus right there. Make the mind firm and one-pointed. You don't have to get involved with feelings of pain or equanimity. If you're going to focus on pleasure, keep focused right there. Or, if you want, you can focus on equanimity without getting involved with pleasure or pain. Don't let the mind jump around so that any other preoccupations come in and interfere. Keep monitoring the feeling you've chosen until you know its true nature through your own awareness.

Whichever type of feeling is easiest for you to focus on, keep your mindfulness and presence of mind right there as much as you can. This is what will enable you to awaken from the feelings within you. Whoever does this ranks as having developed the inner quality of 'buddha' that is the cause for coming awake.

C. Contemplation of the mind as a frame of reference. Be mindful of the state of your own mind so that you can awaken it from the slumber of its delusions. When your mind awakens, it will be able to see and know the various things occurring in the present. This will enable it to become firmly centered in the factors of concentration and jhana, or mental absorption, which in turn lead to discernment, skilled awareness and release.

There are three basic states of mind you can focus on:

1. Passion: The mind hankers after sensual objects and sensual moods that color it, making it intoxicated and oblivious to other things. This prevents it from experiencing states that are brighter and clearer.

2. Aversion: The mind at times gets irritated and angry, causing whatever internal goodness it has to deteriorate. Aversion is thus a way in which the mind destroys itself.

3. Delusion: absent-mindedness, forgetfulness, mental darkness, misunderstanding.

These states of mind arise from preoccupations with what we like and dislike. If you have mindfulness watching over your mind with every moment, it will enable the mind to awaken and blossom, to know the truth about itself.

Whenever passion arises in the mind, focus on being mindful of the mind in and of itself. Don't focus on the object of the passion. Pay attention solely to the present, and the passion will fade. Or, if you want, you can use other methods to help, by contemplating the object of the passion in certain ways. For example, you can contemplate the unattractiveness of the body, focusing first on the insides of your own body, seeing them as filthy and disgusting. Your mind will then be able to free itself from the passion in which it is immersed, and to become more blooming and bright.

Whenever aversion arises in the mind, focus on being mindful exclusively of the present state of your mind. Don't focus attention on the external object or person that gave rise to the anger and aversion. Anger in the mind is like a burning fire. If you aren't mindful and aware of the state of your own mind, and instead think only of the object or person that incited the anger, it's like setting yourself on fire, and all you can do is end up getting burnt. So you shouldn't preoccupy yourself with the outside object. Instead, focus on being mindful and aware of the state of aversion in the mind. When mindfulness reaches full strength, the state of aversion will immediately disperse.

Aversion and anger are like a cover over a fire that lets the fire provide heat but no light. If we remove the cover by doing away with the aversion, the light of the fire can brighten the mind. The 'light' here is discernment and skilled awareness.

Actually, there's nowhere else that we have to look for goodness other than our own minds. That's how we'll be able to gain the freedom from suffering and stress that is termed citta-vimutti, mental release, i.e., a mind beyond the reach of its preoccupations. This is one way in which we reach the Buddha, Dhamma and Sangha on the level of inner qualities.

As for states of delusion, in which the mind tends to be absent-minded and forgetful: These come from there being many objects crowding in on the mind. When we find this happening, we should center the mind on a single preoccupation where we can gather strength for our mindfulness and presence of mind, in the same way that we can take diffused light rays and focus them on a single point: The power of the light is sure to get brighter. In the same way, when we are constantly mindful of the mind and don't let it get involved with various outside perceptions and preoccupations, mindfulness will give rise to a powerful light: skilled awareness. When skilled awareness arises within us, our minds will grow shining bright, and we'll awaken from our slumber of unawareness. We will have attained a quality of secure refuge in our own hearts. We will know for ourselves and see for ourselves, and this is what will enable us to attain the noble qualities of the transcendent.

D. Mental qualities as a frame of reference. Be mindful to focus on the mental qualities that occur in the mind with every moment. Mental qualities are of two basic sorts, good and bad.

1. Bad mental qualities, which obstruct the mind from attaining higher levels of goodness, are called the Hindrances (nivarana), and there are five sorts.

a. Sensual desire: hankering after sensual objects -- sights, sounds, smells, tastes, tactile sensations and ideas that you like and find appealing; and a hankering after sensual moods, such as passion, anger, aversion and delusion -- assuming good to be bad and bad to be good, right to be wrong and wrong to be right. A hankering for any of these things is classed as sensual desire.

b. Malevolence: ill will for people or objects, hoping that they will be destroyed or come to a bad end.

c. Torpor & lethargy: sleepiness, sloth, lassitude, laziness and depression.

d. Worry & distraction: being upset at failure in your aims, lacking the mindfulness to put a brake on your worries and concerns.

e. Uncertainty: indecision; doubt about the various things or qualities your are working to develop in your practice.

These five Hindrances are bad mental qualities. If you fall into any of them, you're in the dark -- like a person at the bottom of a well who can't see anything on the surface of the earth, can't move around as he likes, can't hear what people at the top of the well are saying, and can't see the light of the sun and moon that illumine the earth. In the same way, the Hindrances obstruct us from developing goodness in many, many ways. They close off our ears and eyes, keep us in the dark, put us to sleep.

2. This is why we should work at developing the good mental qualities that will awaken us from the slumber of our unawareness. For instance, we should develop the four levels of jhana or mental absorption, which are the tools for suppressing or eliminating all of the Hindrances.

a. The first level of jhana has five factors. Directed thought: Think about any one of the objects of meditation that exist within you, such as the in-and-out breath. Make the mind one, keep it with the object you are thinking of, and don't let it slip off to anything else: This is called singleness of preoccupation. Evaluation: Carefully observe the object of your meditation until you see its truth. When you are thoroughly aware of the object -- this is called presence of mind -- the results will arise within you: pleasure or ease; and rapture -- fullness of body and mind.

When mindfulness fills the body like this, the body feels saturated, like soil saturated with moisture: Whatever you plant stays green and fresh. Plants flourish. Birds and other forest animals come to live in their shade. When rain falls, the soil can hold it instead of letting it wash away. A person who has mastered the first level of jhana is like a holding-place of goodness for other human and celestial beings because jhana and concentration can have a cooling influence not only on oneself, but also on others as well.

When mindfulness and presence of mind are fully aware in your mind, the mind feels saturated and full with an unadulterated sense of rapture and joy at all times. As for the pleasure and ease that come from the first level of jhana, they give you a sense of freedom with no worries or concerns for anyone or anything -- like a person who has attained enough wealth that he no longer has any worries or concerns about his livelihood, and can relax in peace.

When you attain the pleasure and ease that come from the first level of jhana, you are freed from the Hindrances of indecision and worry & distraction. So you should work at developing these factors in your mind until it can stay steadily in jhana. Your heart will then be blooming and bright, giving rise to the light of discernment, or liberating insight. And if you have developed your capabilities enough, then on attaining the first level of jhana you may gain entry to the transcendent. Some people, though, may go on to the second level of jhana.

b. The second level of jhana has three factors: rapture, pleasure and singleness of preoccupation. The power of the mind gets stronger step by step, so try to keep your mind in that state simply by focusing down and keeping mindfulness firmly established right there. The mind will grow even stronger and this will lead you on to the third level of jhana.

c. The third level of jhana has two factors: pleasure and singleness of preoccupation. Keep focusing down through the power of mindfulness and presence of mind, and you will be able to shed the factor of pleasure and enter the fourth level of jhana.

d. The fourth level of jhana has two factors: equanimity and singleness of preoccupation. On this level of jhana, the mind has great strength, based on its strong focus accompanied by mindfulness and presence of mind. The mind is firm and unmoving -- so completely unmoved by past and future that it lets them both go. It keeps track solely of the present, steady and unwavering like the light of a Coleman lantern when there is no wind. When the mind attains the fourth level of jhana, it gives rise to a brightness: discernment and the skill of liberating insight. This is what enables it to gain understanding into the four Noble Truths, and so to proceed to the transcendent -- the truly safe refuge.

People who have done this experience nothing but an inner brightness and happiness in their hearts, for they dwell with the quality they have given rise to within themselves. They reach the Buddha, Dhamma and Sangha on the highest level, the level of release or ultimate attainment, a quality free from defilement and mental effluents.

People who train their hearts in this way have reached the Buddha, Dhamma and Sangha on the level of inner quality. In other words, they have reached refuge in their own hearts. They have absolutely closed off the route to the realms of deprivation. At the very least, they are destined after death to go to the higher realms of happiness. At best, they will attain nibbana. All of them are certain to attain nibbana within at least seven lifetimes, for they have reached an inner quality that is steady and certain. They won't fall into anything low. Anyone who has yet to attain this quality, though, has an uncertain future.

So if we want the peace and security that Buddhism has to offer, we should all try to find ourselves a dependable refuge. If you take refuge on the level of individuals, find people of worth so that your conviction in them will take you to the happy realms. As for refuge on the level of inner qualities, which will really be of substantial value to you, practice so as to give rise to those qualities within yourself.

To summarize: On the level of inner qualities, the Buddha, Dhamma and Sangha are all one and the same thing. They differ only in name.

So you should 'opanayiko' -- bring these qualities into your heart. 'Sanditthiko' -- When you practice, you'll see them for yourself. 'Paccattam' -- You'll know them only for yourself. Things that other people know about aren't safe.

If you want peace and refuge that are substantial and sure, you should give rise to them in your own heart. The result will be nibbana, liberation from defilement, from all birth, ageing, illness and death in this world and any world to come.

nibbanam paramam sukham

'Nibbana is the ultimate happiness.
There is no happiness higher.'

This is 'buddha' on the level of results: freedom from sleep, total Awakening.

And this ends our discussion of the verse on refuge.

GLOSSARY

The definitions given here are based on the meanings these terms have in Ajaan Lee's writings and sermons.

avijja: Unawareness; counterfeit knowledge.

ayatana: Sense medium. The six inner sense media are the eye, ear, nose, tongue, body and intellect. The six outer sense media are their respective objects.

bhagavant: An epithet for the Buddha, commonly translated as 'Blessed One' or 'Exalted One.' Some commentators, though, have traced the word etymologically to the Pali root meaning 'to divide' and, by extension, 'to analyze', and so translate it as 'Analyst'.

dhamma: Event; phenomenon; the way things are in and of themselves; their inherent qualities; the basic principles underlying their behavior. Also, principles of behavior that human beings should follow so as to fit in with the right natural order of things; qualities of mind they should develop so as to realize the inherent quality of the mind in and of itself. By extension, 'dhamma' is used also to refer to any doctrine that teaches such things. Thus the Dhamma of the Buddha refers both to his teachings and to the direct experience of the quality of nibbana at which those teachings are aimed.

dhatu: Element; property; the elementary properties that make up the inner sense of the body and mind: earth (solidity), water (liquidity), fire (heat), wind (energy or motion), space and cognizance.

jhana: Meditative absorption in a single object, notion or sensation.

kamma: Acts of intention that result in states of being and birth. 'Kamma debts' are the moral debts one has to others either through having been a burden to them (the primary example being one's debt to one's parents) or from having wronged them.

khandha: Component parts of sensory perception: rupa (sense data, appearances); vedana (feelings of pleasure, pain or indifference); sanna (labels, concepts, allusions); sankhara (mental constructs or fabrications); and vinnana (cognizance, the act of attention that 'spotlights' objects so as to know them distinctly and pass judgment on them).

magga: The path to the cessation of suffering and stress. The four transcendent paths -- or rather, one path with four levels of refinement -- are the path to stream entry (entering the stream to nibbana, which ensures that one will be reborn at most only seven more times), the path to once-returning, the path to non-returning and the path to arahantship. Phala -- fruition -- refers to the mental state immediately following the attainment of any of these paths.

mala: Stains on the character, traditionally listed as nine: anger, hypocrisy, envy, stinginess, deceit, treachery, lying, evil desires and wrong views.

nibbana (nirvana): Liberation; the unbinding of the mind from greed, anger and delusion, from physical sensations and mental acts. As this term is used to refer also to the extinguishing of fire, it carries connotations of stilling, cooling and peace. (According to the physics taught at the time of the Buddha, the property of fire exists in a latent state to a greater or lesser degree in all objects. When activated, it clings and is bound to its fuel. As long as it remains latent or is extinguished, it is 'unbound'.)

sankhara: Fashioning -- the forces that fashion things, the process of fashioning, and the fashioned things -- mental or physical -- that result. In some contexts this term refers specifically to the fashioning of thoughts in the mind. In others, it refers to all five khandhas (see above).

* * *

If anything in this translation is inaccurate or misleading, I ask forgiveness of the author and reader for having unwittingly stood in their way. As for whatever may be accurate, I hope the reader will make the best use of it, translating it a few steps further, into the heart, so as to attain the truth at which it points.

The translator

Enquiries concerning this book may be addressed to: The Abbot, Metta Forest Monastery, PO Box 1409, Valley Center, CA 92082

Sabbe satta sada hontu
avera sukha-jivino
katam punna-phalam mayham
sabbe bhagi bhavantu te

May all beings always live happily, free from enmity.
May all share in the blessings springing from the good I have done.

ÉÍÍÍ

Sn Sutta Nipata
Vin Vinaya Pitaka
Vism Visuddhimagga

All translations from the Pali are by the writer

CONTENTS

1. Introduction
2. The middle way
3. The arising of the psycho-physical person
4. The person in bondage
5. Interdependent cessation
6. Interdependency
7. Causation over time
8. Conclusion
Bibliography

1. INTRODUCTION

The natural order

The doctrine of interdependent arising points to the structure of reality as experienced. The Buddha discovered this structure of reality under the Bodhi tree, and it was this discovery that turned Siddhattha Gotama into a buddha. Buddhism is a wisdom tradition. Buddha comes from the root budh, "know, wake". A buddha is one who knows, one who is awake; one who knows the nature of things as they are, who has awakened to reality. Where Christianity seeks to overcome the problem of original sin, Buddhism seeks to overcome the problem of original ignorance.

Referring to interdependent arising, the Buddha said:

Whether Tathagatas appear or do not appear this fact of nature remains, this fixed state of nature, this natural order, the conditionality-of-this [idappaccayata].

This is what the Tathagata awakens to, this is what he realises. After awakening to and realising it he explains, teaches, declares, lays it out, reveals, analyses and clarifies it, saying: "Look!".(3)

Interdependent arising is the "fixed state of nature", the "natural order", which reveals the regularity and pattern in the cosmos as experienced. It is not a description of objectively perceived entities out there in the universe, but concerns one's own consciousness and its interaction with the world(4). Because one's interaction with the cosmos is experienced as orderly, and functions according to laws which are discoverable, liberation from suffering is possible. If events occurred simply according to chance or by inevitable decree of fate, there would be nothing we could do to change our lives; we would be hapless victims of circumstances beyond our control.

As the Buddha, looking back to his awakenment(5), explained:

Before awakening, Bhikkhus, when I was a bodhisatta and not a fully awakened one, I thought: "Alas, this world has fallen into misery! One is born, ages and dies; one falls [from one existence] and rises [into another]. And yet escape from this suffering, this ageing and death, is not known. Surely escape from this suffering, this ageing and death, will be discovered!"...

"Arising!" Vision arose in me, Bhikkhus, regarding dhammas previously unheard of; insight, wisdom, knowledge and intuition arose...

"Cessation!" Vision arose in me, Bhikkhus, regarding dhammas previously unheard of; insight, wisdom and knowledge and intuition arose.(6)

The "fixed state of nature" that the Buddha discovered is one of ceaseless change; nothing is fixed, all is shifting. That is, what is fixed is the fact of change, and moreover the fact that things change according to certain patterns of relationship. Everything is subject to arising and cessation according to certain specific conditions. The path of practice consists in living in accordance with these natural conditions in such a way that suffering ceases and freedom arises. Means and end, path and result, are two aspects of the same "natural order". The practice that leads to the cessation of suffering is that of living without interfering with the natural arising and cessation of phenomena; life without interfering with the natural arising and cessation of phenomena is the cessation of suffering.

The doctrine of interdependent arising is therefore central to Buddhism. We suffer because we are ignorant of the natural laws that govern our existence. These laws determine the arising and cessation of phenomena. As we discover these laws, the relationships between things, we learn to let go of arising and cessation, and therefore what arises and ceases. In this way we ensure the cessation of that which causes us suffering and the arising of that which liberates us. The full understanding of these laws constitutes our final goal, awakenment.

At the time of the Buddha's awakenment two young men, Upatissa and Kolita, were students of the samana (philosopher) Sanjaya, the sceptic. The two friends vowed to each other that whoever awakened first would immediately inform the other. One day, Upatissa saw one of the Buddha's students, Venerable Assaji, going on alms round in Rajagaha. He was so impressed by the appearance of this monk that he approached him and asked for the teaching. Assaji protested that he was a new student and understood little of the Buddha's doctrine. What he did understand he summed up in the following verse:

The Tathagata has spoken of the cause
Of those dhammas produced by a cause,
And also their cessation.
This is the teaching of the Great Philosopher.(7)

Upatissa was immediately awakened to stream entry (sotapatti), the first stage of awakenment. He hastened to his friend and repeated the verse. Kolita also attained stream entry. The two men became students of the Buddha, bringing with them the other students of Sanjaya. These two converts became the Buddha's chief disciples, and were known as Sariputta, foremost in wisdom, and Maha-Moggallana, foremost in psychic powers.

This story illustrates the liberating power contained in the teaching of interdependent arising. "Dhammas" are arising and ceasing dependent upon causes; seeing this arising and cessation has the power to transform one's life, here and now.

The twelvefold formula

Interdependent arising is normally presented as consisting of 12 nidanas (ground, foundation, cause) linked in a causal chain which, in its forward order, shows how suffering arises dependent on ignorance, and in reverse order shows how suffering ceases with the cessation of ignorance.

This formula, which later became known as the "wheel of becoming" (bhavacakka), presents a number of problems in interpretation for the modern reader. Its importance is immediately evident as it explains the arising and cessation of suffering, which is the fundamental concern of the Buddha. The individual nidanas themselves create difficulties, as they make up a list of some of the most fundamental terms in Buddhist philosophy. In addition, however, the nature of the relationships between the nidanas present a major obstacle for modern Buddhists in their understanding of interdependent arising.

According to a tradition that has its roots in the Patisambhidamagga, an early treatise which systematically sets out the way to awakenment, the causal chain consisting of twelve nidanas takes three lives to complete one cycle. Interdependent arising therefore explains the process of rebirth and the end of rebirth. However, this explanation raises as many questions as it solves. If interdependent arising refers to a process which will come to completion in a future lifetime, what relevance is it to me now? And on what basis can I accept it as true other than that of an act of faith divorced from experience?

An existential problem

In the contemporary world traditional religions and religious world views are under attack from an advancing tide of secular and materialist culture. Buddhists in both East and West are seeking interpretations of traditional teachings which are directly relevant to their lives, and rejecting those that appear to be of merely historical, philosophical or cosmological interest. In the West, many Buddhists do not believe in rebirth and find the notion of liberation from an endless cycle of life after life is not an ideal which inspires them. Western converts to Buddhism are generally attracted to Buddhist meditation techniques for the benefits they provide in this life, not for the hope that rebirth will come to an end some time in the future. Their interest in Buddhism is existential, not cosmological. The same trend is observable among the emerging middle class in modernising Buddhist cultures such as Thailand.

Bhikkhu Buddhadasa was, until his recent death, one of the most influential teachers of Theravada Buddhism in contemporary Thailand. He was renowned as a meditation master, scholar and writer. At his forest monastery in southern Thailand, Wat Suan Mokkhabalarama (or Suan Mokh), more than 1,000 foreigners a year come to study and practice Buddhism.(8) His demythologising approach to Buddhist teachings has a particular appeal for Westerners seeking contact with the ageless wisdom of Buddhism, and for the Thai urban and intellectual middle class, who are at the cutting edge of Thailand's transformation from a traditional Buddhist to a modern secular culture.

For Buddhadasa, interdependent arising is the essence of Buddhism, and it forms the subject matter of most of his writings and talks. Yet he is uncompromising in his attacks on the classical interpretation of interdependent arising extending over three lives. His central objection to this theory is simple: interdependent arising that extends over three lives cannot be practised.

If it is understood in this way what can be done?...How can there be a practice to extinguish suffering when the whole thing is broken apart with the cause in one life and the result in another? So now no benefit is derived from Dependent Origination because it is incorrectly understood and taught so that it straddles three life times although there is only one cycle of Dependent Origination.(9)

Also, to suggest that interdependent arising covers three lifetimes of a person, in which defilements in one life cause karmic results in the next life, makes it into "a teaching of a self, soul, being or person which whirls about in the maelstrom of existence...to teach that paticcasamuppada covers three lives is to undo the Buddha's teaching and teach that there is a self."(10)

Buddhadasa, while himself a scholar, was primarily a teacher of Buddhist practice. He opposed any theory that diverts people from meditation practice and believed that Buddhist orthodoxy actively discourages Thais from seeking the freedom promised by the Buddha. It does this by encouraging an eternalist view that pushes the attainment of nibbana far into the future. Buddhists who should be encouraged to practise for awakenment in this life are instead encouraged to make merit for their future lives. For Buddhadasa, the three life theory is at the centre of this eternalist agenda.

The same concern is echoed by other voices within the Theravada. Nanavira Thera was an English bhikkhu who ordained in Sri Lanka and lived there until his death in 1965. He has influenced young Western bhikkhus with his radical and uncompromising attacks on Theravada orthodoxy, again with the three life theory at the centre of his sights. His objection is essentially the same: interdependent arising spread over three lives cannot be seen or realised now.

It is a matter of one's fundamental attitude to one's own existence - is there, or is there not, a present problem or, rather, anxiety that can only be resolved in the present?(11)

Nanavira was strongly influenced by Existentialism, and presented his understanding of interdependent arising in existentialist terms. He distinguishes the existentialist from the scientific method:

The scientist (or scholar) becomes "objective", puts himself right out of the picture...and concerns himself only with abstract facts; the existentialist remains "subjective" (not in the derogatory sense of being irresponsible), keeps himself in the picture, and describes concrete things (that is, things in relation to himself as he experiences them).(12)

Hence the similarity in language between some existentialist passages and the Nikayas. Both are concerned with the nature of the concrete or specific existence of oneself in the world, rather than with an abstract, objective entity entirely separate from the detached observer. That is, Nanavira believes that the Buddha's teaching is concerned with my present existence; your present existence; and anything that distracts us from this central fact is not true to the teaching.

It is significant that Sariputta and Maha-Moggallana were both sceptics before their conversion to Buddhism. The difficulty that the twelvefold formula creates for people today is partly a product of the scepticism that is inherent in the scientific, secular, materialist culture that dominates the planet. Even in Buddhist countries there is a reluctance to accept doctrines that appear to have no scientific basis or which must be accepted simply on faith. Teachers like Buddhadasa and Nanavira have a wide appeal because they insist on making a pragmatic examination of religious doctrines, no matter how hallowed by tradition, in an attempt to grasp the existential core of their meaning. Only doctrines which can be seen to correspond with the realities of human experience can be expected to survive the analysis of a rational, sceptical age. It is in this context that the question arises: what is the essential meaning of interdependent arising?

This thesis is an exploration of the meaning and significance of interdependent arising in early Buddhism. I will base my examination of interdependent arising on texts found in the Nikayas, especially Samyutta Nikaya. The Nikayas provide us with an account of the Buddha's teaching which is as close to the source as we can hope to get.(13) In addition, they present us with profound and subtle teachings which go to the essence of the Buddhist tradition, and do so in deceptively simple language. While the Nikayas are part of the Theravada scriptural tradition they precede the classical Theravada by centuries, and constitute a heritage common to all subsequent Buddhist traditions.

The subject of interdependent arising is so vast that I cannot hope to consider every aspect, but will confine myself to some fundamental questions which are implicit in the story of Sariputta and Maha-Moggallana:

ù What is the view of reality which underlies the teaching of interdependent arising?; what is meant by the arising and cessation of dhammas?
ù What is the significance of interdependent arising to life as we experience it?; how does an understanding of causation change one's life?

2. THE MIDDLE WAY

The Buddha called his teaching the middle way, and by the use of this term asserted the uniqueness of his doctrine. There are two suttas which together encapsulate the middle way. In the Buddha's first discourse, the Dhammacakkappavattana-sutta, he says:

There are these two extremes, Bhikkhus, which should not be practised by one who has gone out. What two? The practice of sensual enjoyment in relation to sense-objects, which is inferior, common, ordinary, ignoble and not useful; and the practice of self-exhaustion, which is painful and not useful.

After experiencing both these extremes the Tathagata has fully awakened to the middle way, which leads to tranquillity, higher knowledge, full awakening and nibbana.

And what is the middle way fully awakened to by the Tathagata, productive of vision and insight, which leads to tranquillity, higher knowledge, full awakening and nibbana? This very noble eightfold way, that is: right view; right intention; right speech; right action; right livelihood; right effort; right awareness; and right concentration.(14)

The noble eightfold way is the middle way of practice, or of one's way of life. It refers to what one does to gain freedom, and represents the practical aspect of the Buddha's teaching. Most of the suttas are concerned with expounding this noble eightfold way, which is the way from suffering to the cessation of suffering; from bondage to freedom. The Buddha was a practical teacher who was primarily concerned with propagating the practice that results in the experience of freedom. This practical aspect of the teaching, however, is embedded within a doctrinal structure - the "right view" which is the first aspect of the eightfold way. This ontological middle way is expounded in the Kaccayanagotta-sutta:

Venerable Kaccayanagotta said this to the Blessed One:

"'Right view!', Bhante(15), is spoken of. In what respect is there right view?"

"This world is normally reliant upon the duality of existence and non-existence. To one who sees with perfect wisdom, Kaccayana, the arising of the world as it is, there is no 'non-existence' regarding the world. To one who sees with perfect wisdom the cessation of the world as it is, there is no 'existence' regarding the world."(16)

The Buddha's assertion of the ontological middle way between the extremes of existence and non-existence, absolute identity and absolute otherness, was propounded in the context of the two major philosophical theories of his time. These were:

ù Existence (sat, astiva) in the Vedic tradition, which involved a belief in a permanent substratum within the person (atman) and the universe (brahman).

ù Non-existence (asat, nastitva) proposed by the Materialists, which involved a belief in the indestructibility of matter, the annihilation of the personality after death and the denial of any moral responsibility for human actions.'(17)

Existence implies the existence of "things out there" that are independent of me; and the "I in here" who is independent of the things out there. That is, "existence" refers to our conventional view of existing entities, the belief that entities are independent, self-contained, and endure without change over time. "I" am one of these independently existing entities. My belief in this "I" is bound up with notions of substance and attribute.(18) I see that I am constantly changing: my body grows and ages, my beliefs and opinions change and develop, my social circumstances alter over time, and so on. However, I assume an underlying, unchanging substance to whom these changes occur. This substance remains the same, but its various attributes - physical, ideological, social, etc. - change. Similarly, I project the same substance on to the world beyond the boundaries of myself. The world is constantly changing, but I assume an entity labelled "world" which is undergoing the changes, and which therefore remains the same beneath the surface changes of its attributes. This outlook is programmed into our language. For example, when discussing the weather I may say "It is raining"; I assume a substance called "weather" which has a number of changing attributes: sometimes raining, sometimes shining, sometimes hot, sometimes cold.

Identity assumes otherness. As an independently existing entity I possess a clear border beyond which I am not. The world is that which is not I, that which is separate from me. As such, it constitutes at least a potential threat against which I must defend myself, and a field of activity where I can expand myself and my own interests against the interests of others. The world is necessarily a battlefield.

Non-existence is a corollary of existence. Conceiving self, I conceive other; conceiving that entities exist, it is clear that non-existence too is possible. Entities end; their substance is no more, they cease and are annihilated. The most common form this belief takes is the belief that "I" as an independently existing entity will cease to exist after death.

The Buddha rejected these two views as extremes that go beyond the empirically available evidence of arising and cessation. He saw that all entities are constantly coming into being, changing and disappearing, and no view of existence that ignores either the arising or the cessation of entities can be regarded as encompassing their reality. Further, there is no separate, solid ground upon which this arising and cessation occur. There are no exceptions to this process, no substance to which this process occurs. The process of universal arising and cessation is the middle way between existence and non-existence.

The Buddha developed a technical vocabulary to express his vision of the middle way. Three central terms we need to become familiar with are: idappaccayata; paticcasamuppada; and paticcasamuppanna dhamma.

Idapaccayata

The general principle of interdependent arising is expressed in the compound term idappaccayata. Paccaya is derived from the verb pacceti (pati + i; come back to, fig. fall back on, find one's hold in). Literally meaning "support", its applied meaning is "reason, cause, ground, condition". The other parts of the compound are: ida (this); and the abstract suffix -ta. Idappaccayata refers to the fact that any given experience or phenomenon (ida - this) is supported (paccaya) by something other than itself. That is, any given phenomenon is contingent, coming into existence through phenomena other than itself, and going out of existence through phenomena other than itself. The whole compound can be translated as "the conditionality-of-this".

The general formula which expresses this structural principle is:

> Imasmim sati idam hoti; imass 'uppada idam uppajjati.
> Imasmim asati idam na hoti; imassa nirodha idam nirujjhati.(19)
>
> When this is, that is; because this arises, that arises.
> When this is not, that is not; because this ceases, that ceases.

The first part of the verse uses the locative absolute (imasmim sati), which does not convey causality, but structural or logical coincidence. "When this is, that is" does not say this causes that; it says this invariably accompanies that. To say that when there is x there is y and when there is no x there is no y is to assert both x and y are contingent. Their "reality" or "substance" depends on that of entities other than themselves, entities whose reality or substance in turn depends on entities other than themselves. Contingency asserts the reality of things to be their lack of independent or separate reality; their substance to be their lack of independent or separate substance.

The second part of the verse is unambiguously causal; because of the arising of this (imass 'uppada), that arises (idam uppajjati). To say because x arises, y arises, and because x ceases y ceases, is to assert causality, which implies change over time. However, the causation of entities is not being asserted, because the notion of independent and separate entities has already been denied. Causation occurs, but no entities are caused.

Idappaccayata expresses the nature of a phenomenon in terms of its relationship with other phenomena. It does not deal with the essence of a phenomenon, but with its movement, its activity; or rather, it sees the essence of any given thing to be its behaviour. Idappaccayata describes a dynamic model of reality, a model of things as processes. The pattern of this process, the behaviour of phenomena, is expressed in our next term.

Paticcasamuppada

Paticcasamuppada is a compound term made up of paticca and samuppada. Paticca is the gerund of the verb pacceti (come back to, fig. fall back on, find one's hold in), and means "grounded on" or "on account of". Samuppada is a compound word from the prefix sam (together) and the verb uppajjati (arise). Samuppada therefore means "arising together", or "co-arising". Paticcasamuppada has been translated in a number of ways, among them "dependent arising", "dependent co-arising", "dependent origination", "conditioned genesis", and "conditioned co-production".

A glance at the translations shows basic agreement except for the use of the prefix sam. Is paticcasamuppada dependent arising or dependent co-arising? Does it refer to production or co-production? Buddhaghosa, the great fifth century commentator, casts light on this question in a playful linguistic analysis found early in the Pannabhuminiddesa (Exposition of the ground of wisdom) of his Visuddhimagga.

This totality of dhammas [dhammasamuha] resulting from conditionality [paccayata] which is paticcasamuppada is a term which is regarded in two ways. Befalling [patiyamana] it leads to welfare and happiness, and therefore the wise regard it as worthy to fall back on [paccetum]; so it is paticca. And arising, it arises rightly [samma] and together [saha], not one after another and not causelessly; so it is samuppada Thus it is paticca and samuppada, so it is paticcasamuppada.

Further, it arises together [saha uppajjati], so it is co-arising [samuppada]; it is dependent upon [paticca] a combination of conditions, not rejecting any. Therefore paticca and samuppada is paticcasamuppada...

This totality of causes...is called paticca, taking it as "united with its opposite" [patimukham ito gato] by the mutuality of its combined factors, in that none are missing and they accomplish a common result. It is called samuppada in that it gives rise to dhammas together, such that each gives rise to the other and they are inseparable in their behaviour. Therefore paticca and samuppada is paticcasamuppada.(20)

Buddhaghosa is emphasising that, in practice, cause and effect manifest as a totality of causes leading to a totality of results, not as a single cause leading to a single result. That is, causation over time refers to totalities, not individual entities. That which is paticca (dependent) is a combination of factors; that which is samuppada (co-arising) is a combination of results. From this we can see that sam applies to both parts of the compound, and expresses the interdependency of causes and causes, effects and effects, and causes and effects; therefore paticcasamuppada is translated here as "interdependent arising".

Paticcasamuppanna dhamma

Dhammas arise and cease; because they arise and cease due to conditions, they are interdependently arisen dhammas (paticcasamuppanna dhamma), or, more simply, the interdependently arisen.

The Buddha's teaching is a "doctrine of analysis" (vibhajjavada). His analysis examines the given world of sense experience, and in so doing sees that entities which appear solid and lasting break up into a series of shifting experiences. They resolve into "dhammas" (Skt., dharmas). A. K. Warder defined the meaning of "dhamma" in this way:

The basic or more original meaning of dhamma appears to have been "nature", what truly exists, true reality, what actually is in the universe. An enumeration of dhammas (plural) will then be a list of what there is in the universe, the entities of which it is composed, ... its real elements as opposed to less real combinations of them or superficial appearances. In this book we use "principles" for dharma in the sense of these entities, understanding "natural principles", many of them "natural elements" as irreducible principles out of which the universe and all experience is constructed.(21)

For Warder, dhammas are "real elements", the basic building blocks of the universe. However, to understand the meaning of dhammas we must remember that the Buddha was primarily a yogin, not a scientist. Buddhist philosophy arises out of the foundation of Buddhist yogic experience, and can be regarded essentially as an analysis of the self and the world from the viewpoint of one who has awakened. It is an analysis of human experience based on yoga, not science.

As such it is very different from our science-based psychology. Science studies the objective world and assumes a radical division between the subjective and objective aspects of experience, investing "reality" into the objective.(22) In our science-based culture, to call a given view "subjective" is to regard it as at best suspect, very probably false. When we say we are being "objective", we are saying our view should be taken seriously; it is probably true. Subjective and objective in everyday discourse are almost synonymous with false and true.

The Buddha recognised the distinction between subjective (ajjhatta) and ohjective (bahira), but did not equate subjective with false and objective with true. The inner world of (subjective) experience and the outer world of (objective) facts are equally real, insofar as both of them are simply manifestations of experience.

The Buddha's view of the world is revealed in the Sabba-sutta:

I will teach you everything [sabbam]....

And what, Bhikkhus, is everything? The eye and forms; ear and sounds; nose and scents; tongue and tastes; body and tangible things; mind and phenomena.

Whoever would say, "Rejecting this everything, I declare another everything", the basis for that would be mere words, and if asked he could not sustain it. Furthermore, he would become distressed.

Why is that? Because it is beyond experience (avisaya).(23)

"Everything" is the totality of our experience. That which is beyond experience is, by definition, unknowable. Anything said about what is unknowable can be based only on speculation and logic - "mere words". The field of the known is the field of the six senses (which includes the mental sense of everything thought, felt, seen, heard, smelt, tasted and touched in the mind, imagination and memory).(24) The range of the six senses is the known universe, and therefore it is, for us, the universe.

In other words, the world is not an independently existing entity out there which, within our limits, we perceive and relate to; the world is our experience of the world. This does not mean that the world is merely subjective, for sense perception depends upon an object of sense. Nor is the world merely objective, for objects out there are beyond our experience and knowledge except for our perception of them.

That is, dhamma does not refer to "things" which are out there or in here, to substances which possess attributes, but to our experience of things.(25) A dhamma is a thing-as-experienced, or the experience-of-a-thing. Note that the experience-of-a-thing has two essential aspects: the experience and the thing experienced. Remove either and the dhamma does not manifest. This subtle shift in perception is vital for understanding the Buddha's teaching. His concern is with the nature of human experience, not with a scientific, objective description of the world. His concern is pragmatic - the cessation of suffering - not scientific - the development of a new theory.

Hence the Buddha's response to a question posed by a deva (god), who asked:

"Bhante, is it possible for us, by means of movement, to know, see, and arrive at the end of the world, where one is not born, does not age or die, does not fall [from one existence] and rise [into another]?"

"I declare, Friend, I would not, by means of movement, know, see, or arrive at that end of the world where one is not born, does not age or die, does not fall [from one existence] and rise [into another].

Moreover, I declare that within this very fathom-long body, endowed with perception and mind, is the world, the arising of the world, the cessation of the world, and the practice leading to the cessation of the world."(26)

Here a question which assumes the existence of an objectively existing and material "end of the world" receives an answer which turns the perception of the questioner around to the nature of his own experience, and the practice which illuminates that experience.

When examined with yogic insight, the self and the world resolve into a series of experiences. These experiences are not random and chaotic, but manifest according to patterns of perceived cause and effect. That is, experiences arise because of causes and cease because of causes. Experiences arise and cease interdependently - all dhammas are interdependent (paticcasamupanna dhamma).

Indeed, they are dhammas because they arise and pass away interdependently. A fundamental characteristic of "things out there" in our conventional sense of "things" is that they are regardless of our experience of them. A scientist has no experience of an atom, but he knows it is there. I have no experience of Melbourne, but I know it is there. The validity or existence of a "thing" is not affected by whether or not I have any direct experience of it. The Buddha gives the example of a blind man who denies the existence of the sun and moon because he cannot see them. He is wrong, because they do objectively exist.(27)

A dhamma, in contrast, refers to my experience-of-a-thing; it arises and passes away interdependently, because it is dependent on experience. Experience, in turn, is dependent on a functional sense organ (e.g., an eye), a corresponding sense object (form) and the appropriate sense consciousness (eye consciousness), all coming together as contact. The absence of any one of these factors means the dhamma (my experience of seeing "this") does not arise; the dhamma is dependent on the conjunction of these factors.

The thing-in-itself, or the thing out there, however, is not dependent on my seeing it. It is its in-dependence which makes it a thing; it is its inter-dependence, embracing both subjective and objective, which makes it a dhamma. Hence, the most appropriate translation for "dhamma" in the context of paticcasamuppada is not element or principle, but "phenomenon". This translation points out that all we know is what is present to consciousness; there is no "thing-in-itself" beyond the range of consciousness.(28)

Anatta

Central to the Buddha's teaching is the concept that all dhammas are anatta, not-self. This is the subject of his second discourse, the Anattalakkhana-sutta:

"What do you think, bhikkhus, is the body permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent (anicca), Bhante"

"Is that which is impermanent happy (sukha) or painful (dukkha)?"

"Painful, Bhante."

"Is it appropriate to regard that which is impermanent, painful and subject to change: "This is mine; I am this; this is myself (atta)'?"

"Certainly not, Bhante."

"Is sensation ... perception ... creations ... consciousness permanent or impermanent? ... Is it appropriate to regard that which is impermanent, painful and subject to change: "This is mine; I am this; this is myself (atta)'?"

"Certainly not, Bhante"(29)

Belief in attan (Skt.: atman) is characteristic of the thought of the Upanisads, but the Buddha, while also rejecting the Upanisadic teaching, was pointing to something more fundamental than an opposing religious doctrine. He was referring to a universal human view that "I" exist separately from the rest of the universe. My world is divided irrevocably into two aspects: me in here and everyone else out there. This conviction in my separate existence as "I" is characterised by a sense of permanence, in that even though I acknowledge that I was born and will die, yet I remain convinced that the I that was born so many years ago is the same I reading these words, who in turn will be the same I who eventually dies. The teaching of anatta is based on the experience of the yogi who investigates his mind-body process and fails to find any aspect of his experience which actually corresponds to this "I"; he fails to find anyone to whom experience is occurring, who owns the experiencing mind-body. That is, he fails to find any aspect of his experience which is independent of every other aspect.

The absence of a separate, independently existing self is the corollary of the absence of a separate, independently existing world. Separate things and a separate self are two sides of the same coin. When we see "things", we assume the self that sees things; when we construct "things", we assume the self that constructs things. Interdependent arising, however, presupposes no separate self, and therefore no separate things. Or, alternatively, interdependent arising assumes no separate things, and therefore no separate self.

To summarise, interdependent arising, the middle way between the extremes of existence and non-existence, involves three aspects:

ù Idappaccayata (the conditionality-of-this): the general principle that any given phenomenon is contingent. It is dependent upon something else and arises and ceases dependently upon that something else. That is, things depend on each other for their existence.

ù Paticcasamuppada (interdependent arising): the pattern of arising and cessation. What is central here is the behaviour of phenomena rather than their identity; the relationship between phenomena rather than the phenomena themselves. Together, the conditionality-of-this and interdependent arising comprise the structural principle of ourselves and the world as we experience them, the natural order, the fixed state of nature.

ù Paticcasamuppanna-dhamma (the interdependently arisen): what arises and ceases. All phenomena are contingent; all phenomena are dependent upon other phenomena. As the Buddha is primarily concerned with suffering and the cessation of suffering, the phenomena associated with "the middle way which leads to tranquillity, higher knowledge, full awakening and nibbana" receive a detailed analysis. We will begin this analysis in the next chapter.

3. THE ARISING OF THE PSYCHO-PHYSICAL PERSON

What, Bhikkhus, is paticcasamuppada?

Depending on ignorance (avijja), creations (sankhara);
Depending on creations, consciousness (vinnana);
Depending on consciousness, mind-body (nama-rupa);
Depending on mind-body, six sense-spheres (salayatana);
Depending on six sense-spheres, contact (phassa);
Depending on contact, sensation (vedana);
Depending on sensation, craving (tanha);
Depending on craving, clinging (upadana);
Depending on clinging, becoming (bhava);
Depending on becoming, birth (jati);
Depending on birth, ageing and death, sorrow, lamentation, pain, grief and despair.
Thus this entire mass of suffering (dukkha) arises.

This, Bhikkhus, is called arising.(30)

The most common exposition of paticcasamuppada is contained in the twelvefold formula. In forward order (anuloma), it begins with the arising of ignorance and ends with the arising of suffering; in reverse order (patiloma), it begins with the cessation of ignorance and ends in the cessation of suffering. The twelvefold formula in reverse order will be examined in the next chapter.

The twelvefold formula is essentially an expansion and application of the general formula ("When this is, that is ... "), which it often accompanies in the suttas.(31) Each factor of the formula is a nidana, a word which comes from da, dyati to bind, and the prefix ni, denoting downward direction. Literally "tying down to", nidana means "ground, foundation, cause". The twelvefold formula shows how suffering arises dependent upon the arising of ignorance, and ceases dependent upon the cessation of ignorance. This concern with suffering shows the practical intent of the formula. Its purpose is soteriological, and its subject matter is the nature of human experience. Suffering is not considered as an abstract category but as an inherent aspect of life, so any explanation of the arising of suffering is intimately bound up with an account of the human situation.

Ignorance

And what, Bhikkhus, is ignorance [avijja]? That which is absence of insight [annanaJ into dukkha, the arising of dukkha, the cessation of dukkha, and the way leading to the cessation of dukkha.(32)

Ignorance is simply ignorance of the four noble truths. The first noble truth asserts the truth of dukkha. Usually translated as "suffering" or "pain", dukkha is a technical term which points to the fact that no experience is perfect; all experience is imperfect, and therefore unsatisfactory. Dukkha ranges from the extremely gross to the extremely subtle. Extreme physical pain is dukkha; the knowledge lurking at the back of the mind during the most blissful experience that this too will end is dukkha. Dukkha can therefore be most accurately translated as "unsatisfactoriness", but here I will follow the usual convention and use "suffering".

Suffering arises and ceases. The fact of arising and cessation, of impermanence, is central to the Buddha's understanding. Suffering has a beginning, and because of that it also has an end. While the Buddha's preoccupation with suffering has caused some scholars to regard Buddhism as pessimistic, this assessment ignores the fact that the necessary corollary to the arising of suffering is its cessation.
During a discussion on impermanence the Buddha picked up "a pinch of cow dung" and said:

There is not even this much of oneself [atta-bhava] which is permanent, fixed, eternal, immune to change, that will remain forever just as it is.

If, Bhikkhu, there was even this much of oneself which is perrnanent, fixed, eternal, immune to change, this living of the holy life for the complete destruction of suffering would not be known. But because there is not even this much of oneself which is permanent, fixed, eternal, immune to change, the living of the holy life for the complete destruction of suffering is known.(33)

The fact that suffering is not "immune to change" means that it is possible to bring it to an end. Suffering, moreover, arises and ceases interdependently;(34) the development of certain conditions will cause it to cease. The development of such conditions comprises the noble eightfold way, the way leading to the cessation of suffering.

Ignorance arises and ceases within a specific context:

"'Ignorance' is spoken of, Bhante. What is ignorance, and in what respect is one in ignorance?"

"Here, Bhikkhu, an untrained ordinary person does not know, in accordance with truth, the arising of the body. He does not know, as it is, the cessation of the body. He does not know, as it is, the arising and cessation of the body.

"An untrained ordinary person does not know, as it is, the arising of sensation...recognition...creations...the arising and cessation of consciousness. This, Bhikkhu, is called ignorance, and in this respect one is ignorant."

"'Knowledge' is spoken of, Bhante. What is knowledge, and in what respect does one attain knowledge?"

"Here, Bhikkhu, a trained noble disciple knows, as it is, the arising of the body. He knows, as it is, the cessation of the body. He knows, as it is, the arising and cessation of the body.

"A trained noble disciple knows, as it is, the arising of sensation... recognition...creations...the arising and cessation of consciousness.

"This, Bhikkhu, is called knowledge, and in this respect one attains knowledge"(35)

Ignorance is ignorance of the nature of human experience. The knowledge of the arising and cessation of suffering occurs within the psycho-physical person. This echoes the Buddha's declaration that "everything" consists of the field of the six senses (the psycho-physical person and its objects of sense perception), and that the arising and cessation of the world is to be found within "this very fathom-long body, endowed with recognition and mind".

The psycho-physical person consists of five khandhas (factors, aggregates, or subsystems), which together make up the living being. These are: body (rupa); sensation (vedana); recognition (sanna); creations (sankhara); and consciousness (vinnana). The twelvefold formula speaks of mind-body (nama-rupa) and consciousness (vinnana), and these together make up the five khandhas, the living being.

While the twelvefold formula begins with ignorance, this does not mean that ignorance is a First Cause, as God is for theists or prakrti and purusa are for Samkhya. Ignorance is merely "a convenient starting point to explain a series of inter-connected phenomena".(36)

The concept of a "beginning" illustrates a distinction between conventional, linear causation and interdependent arising. Linear causation assumes a one-way flow of influence from the cause A to the effect B:

A >> B >> C >> D...(37)

Such a model assumes a first point from which causation begins: a causeless cause. Since, however, every cause that we actually experience arises as an effect from a previous cause, we have no actual experience of the original causeless cause. It remains "mere words". As the causeless cause remains beyond experience, it is dismissed by the Buddha.

Unthinkable (anamata) is the beginning of this continual moving along (samsara). A time prior to the continual moving and running along of beings bound by craving and hindered by ignorance is unknown (na pannayati).(38)

Further, ignorance is itself interdependently arisen.

The beginning of ignorance is not seen [na pannayati], Bhikkhus, such that one could say: "Previously there was no ignorance, and then ignorance arose". Further, it is seen that ignorance is dependent on something [idapaccaya]. Ignorance, I declare, is with support [ahara], not lacking support. And what is the support of ignorance? The five hindrances is the answer.(39)

The five hindrances (panca nivarana) are the hindrances to the attainment of concentration. They are: sense desire; ill-will; mental stiffness and dullness; restlessness and worry; and sceptical doubt. Far from being a causeless cause or origin of the cosmos, ignorance is an existential beginning. It is the not-knowing of the confused, dull mind of the "untrained ordinary person", one who is untrained in meditation (bhavana). As such, it is the necessary starting point for one who wishes to travel the noble eightfold way to the cessation of suffering.

Creations

Sankharas arise dependent on ignorance. The meaning of sankhara remains one of the most difficult problems in Buddhism, which is reflected in the number of different translations suggested for the word. Rune Johansson lists some of them: activity, habitual tendency, effort, aspiration, accumulation, construction, kamma-formation, kammic residue, condition, propensity, factor, thing, component thing, created thing, complex, constituent part, element of existence, trouble(40). To this list we can add dispositions(41), concoctions(42), and plastic forces(43).

In the Nikayas, sankharas include possessions, both animate and inanimate: towns, cattle, clothing, jewels, etc. The earth, rivers and ocean are sankharas. The contents of mind during the practice of samadhi are sankharas, as are false views. Human activities are sankharas: breathing, initial and sustained thought, recognition and sensation. Further, sankharas are invariably mentioned in the plural - there always appears to be a number of them.(44)

Sankhara is a noun derived from the verb karoti (to build, make, produce, act, perform, do) and the prefix sam (with, together). Sankharoti therefore means "to put together; to construct". From this we can see the common aspect of all the things listed as sankharas; they are all put together, constructed, compounded, created - they are sankhata (the past participle of sankharoti). Further, they in turn put together, construct, compound and create.

During the discussion on impermanence referred to above, the Buddha went on to describe his life as King Mahasudassana in a previous existence, and the power and wealth he enjoyed. All Mahasudassana's possessions were described as sankharas. The Buddha concluded:

In this way, Bhikkhus, all of these sankharas of the past have vanished, have changed. So impermanent are sankharas, so unfixed and unconsoling, that one is sure to be disenchanted with all sankharas, sure to have one's passion fade, sure to be liberated.(45)

Because these possessions are seen to be impermanent and unfixed, they are seen to be unconsoling, ultimately futile. Hence, disenchantment (nibbida) arises, passion fades and liberation is won. The reason why they are impermanent is that they are sankhata - put together, constructed, composite. They are made up of parts, so they must ultimately break up, fall apart. Further, they are sankhara - they put together, construct. The owner of all these possessions was King Mahasudassana, and it was these royal possessions which made him into King Mahasudassana. Mahasudassana's sense of himself, his self-nature (attabhava) or sense of identity, comes from his position as king, which in turn is produced by his immense wealth of goods, slaves and soldiers.

Hence the Buddha's definition of sankhara:

And why, Bhikkhus, do you say "sankharas"? "They create the created" [abhisankharonti sankhatam], therefore they are called "creations" [sankhara]. And what is the created that they create?

They create created form into its present state [rupam rupattaya sankhatam abhisankharonti]; ... created sensation into its present state; ... created recognition into its present state; ... created creations into its present state; ... they create created consciousness into its present state. Therefore they are called "creations" [sankhara].(46)

Buddhadasa gives three meanings for sankhara:

The single word "sankhara" can mean "conditioner", the cause that conditions; it can mean "condition", the result of the action of conditioning; and it can mean "conditioning", the activity or process of conditioning. We use the same word for the subject of the conditioning, "the concocter", as well as the object, "the concoction". We even use it for the activity, "the concocting", itself.(47)

Nanavira translates sankhara as "determination", as it determines other things. He argues that sankhara, "in all contexts, means 'something that something else depends upon'".(48)

The Buddha is attempting to provoke the insight that "I" am not an independently existing self (attan). This insight manifests when I see that my sense of self depends upon supports that are impermanent. If what I depend upon is impermanent, then I must be impermanent. Mahasudassana realised his identity depended on his possessions. With the cessation of these possessions, the thought "I am King Mahasudassana" ceased.(49) The possessions, therefore, are sankharas, because they create, condition, concoct, or determine something other than themselves.

Sankharas are interdependently arisen phenomena (paticcasamuppanna dhamma). If we regard them as meaning some kind of "thing", then the word covers so many meanings that it becomes meaningless. However, sankhara does not refer to a thing, but the fact that the thing - any thing - is constructed, put together, made, and in turn constructs, puts together, makes. Sankhara refers to constructive processes rather than things; the relationships between things rather than the things themselves.

Experience is endlessly changing: things turn into other things, which means things create other things. Like dhammas, which refer to our relationship with things (our experience of things), sankhara refers to the relationships between things, the fact that things create other things, and these other things (the created - sankhata) are therefore dependent on them (the creating - sankhara). Here I follow Johansson in emphasising the creative aspect of sankhara, and translate it as "creations".

Consciousness

Sankharas create consciousness; that is, consciousness is dependent on something other than itself for its existence.

Why, Bhikkhus, does one say "consciousness" [vinnana]? One cognises [vijanati], therefore one says consciousness [vinnana].

What does one cognise? One cognises sour, bitter, pungent, and sweet. One cognises alkaline and non-alkaline, salty and non-salty. One cognises [vijanati], therefore one says "consciousness" vinnana. Consciousness is defined by its action: consciousness is that which cognises or knows an object. Here, tongue or taste consciousness is used as an example of the cognising function of all forms of consciousness. (Definition by example is common in the Nikayas.) Another definition focuses on the objects that are cognised:

And what, Bhikkhus, is consciousness? There are these six classifications of consciousness: eye consciousness, ear consciousness, nose consciousness, tongue consciousness, body consciousness and mind consciousness. This, Bhikkhus, is called "consciousness"(51)

Note that there is no consciousness without an object (arammana); there is no such thing as pure consciousness. Consciousness is always consciousness of something, consciousness arises dependent upon something else. In turn, the object of consciousness arises dependent upon consciousness, for without consciousness the object could not be discerned. Consciousness is therefore both creating (sankhara) and created (sankhata); the object of consciousness is also both creating and created. Both that which creates and that which is created is an interdependently arisen phenomenon (paticcasamuppanna dhamma).

Consciousness is the presence of the phenomenon, the object of consciousness. Hence its mutually dependent relationship with mental and physical phenomena (nama-rupa), which constitute what is present.(52) The phenomenon and its presence together compose the experience. Consciousness, having arisen dependent upon creations, in turn gives rise to mind-body. However, the relationship is not linear, or one-way. If consciousness depends on its object, and the discernment of the object depends on consciousness, then we would anticipate a relationship of mutual dependence between consciousness and mind-body, rather than just: "depending on creations, consciousness; depending on consciousness, mind-body." This, indeed, is what we find, as Sariputta explains to Maha-Kotthita:

Just as, Friend, two sheaves of reeds would stand leaning against each other, in the same way consciousness is conditioned by mind-body, mind-body is conditioned by consciousness....

If, Friend, one should pull one of these sheaves of reeds toward oneself, the other would fall; and if one should pull the other towards oneself, the first would fall. In the same way, the cessation of consciousness comes from the cessation of mind-body; the cessation of mind-body comes from the cessation of consciousness.(53) Consciousness plays an integral part in the arising of suffering:

And what, Bhikkhus, is the arising of suffering?

Dependent upon eye and forms, eye-consciousness arises. The combination of the three is contact. Sensation is conditioned by contact; craving is conditioned by sensation. This, Bhikkhus, is the arising of suffering.(54)

The same process occurs for the other senses. No matter what form consciousness takes, it gives rise to sensation and craving, and therefore suffering. Consciousness is part of a process of growth and development which creates further becoming:

What one intends, determines and has dormant in one's mind is an object [arammana] for the maintenance of consciousness. When there is an object, there is a support [patittha] for consciousness. When this support for consciousness grows, further becoming is produced in the future. When further becoming is produced in the future, there arise together [sambhavanti] ageing and death, sorrow, lamentation, pain, grief and despair. Such is the arising of this entire mass of suffering.(55)

Consciousness is intimately bound up with becoming and suffering because of the ingrained tendency to identify with it. For untrained ordinary people, consciousness is not just the presence or cognition of the phenomenon, but the one who cognises. When consciousness arises dependent on ignorance, consciousness is always regarded as self (attan). From this comes the intimate relationship between ignorance, intention, consciousness and suffering.

If one who is ignorant, Bhikkhus, creates a meritorious creation [punnam sankharam abhisankharoti], consciousness is attached to merit. If one creates an unmeritorious creation, consciousness is attached to demerit. If one creates a motionless creation, consciousness is attached to motionlessness.

When, Bhikkhus, a bhikkhu's ignorance is abandoned and understanding developed, he, because of the fading of ignorance and the arising of understanding, does not create a meritorious creation; he does not create a demeritorious creation; he does not create a motionless creation.

Not creating [anabhisankharonto], not planning [anabhisancetayanto], he clings to nothing in the world. Not clinging, he is not disturbed; not disturbed, he is completely freed [parinibbayati] within himself. He knows: birth is exhausted; the holy life is fulfilled; duty is done; there is no more of this.(56)

The arising of consciousness in the forward order of the twelvefold formula is the arising of consciousness in the untrained ordinary person, for whom "This is present" means "This is present to me"; it is the arising of consciousness in one who assumes that "I am conscious of this"(57). It is, for all practical purposes, simply impossible for the ordinary, untrained person to break the power of this identification.

It may be, Bhikkhus, that an untrained ordinary person would be wearied of this body consisting of the four great elements, detach himself from it, and wish to be liberated from it. Why is that? The growth and decay, the taking up and putting down of this body consisting of the four great elements is seen....

But the untrained ordinary person is not able to be wearied of this which is called "inner space" [citta], "inner sense" [manas] or "consciousness" vinnana, is not able to be detached and liberated from it. Why? For a long time, Bhikkhus, the untrained ordinary person has hung on to, has been attached to, and has grasped it as: "This is mine; I am this; this is myself"....

Just as a monkey going through a forest or along a mountain side takes hold of a branch, releases it, and grasps another, just so this which is called "inner space", "inner sense" or "consciousness" arises as one thing and ceases as another, both by day and by night.(59)

The arising of the view, "This is mine; I am this; this is myself', is the arising of mind-body dependent on ignorance. When I am possessed of a sense of an independently existing self I interpret all my experience as "This is my experience"; "This is happening to me". The supposed independently existing self is a product of confusion: it does not actually exist. In Chapter 2 we saw the statement "It is raining" expresses the assumption that there is some "thing" which rains. If I searched for the "it" out there which is raining, I would fail to find it. There is just the process of raining. Similarly, although I say "I" and "mine", when I investigate my own mind-body process I fail to find the entity which is doing the existing or owning; there is just the mind-body process.

Despite this fact I construct myself by developing a sense of being a separate identity. The sense of identity includes both the bundle of mental and emotional processes we call ego and a sense of identification with the ego - the notion that "I am my ego". As an independent entity I am necessarily concerned with my life, my career, my security, my relationships. This process of construction and creation is sankhara, and it in turn confirms and develops my sense of identity, of ownership of experience: "Depending on ignorance, creations; depending on creations, consciousness". As consciousness is owned, so too are the objects of consciousness, mental and physical phenomena, or mind-body: "Depending on consciousness, mind-body".

Six sense-spheres and contact

And what, Bhikkhus, are the six sense-spheres [salayatana]? The eye sense-sphere, the ear sense-sphere, the nose sense-sphere, the tongue sense-sphere, the body sense-sphere, and the mind sense-sphere. This, Bhikkhus, is called the six sense-spheres.(60)

The six sense-spheres (sal-ayatana) arise dependent on mind-body. Ayatana is derived from a + yam, to stretch or spread out. It indicates the extent, reach or sphere of the senses. The six sense-spheres are the six functioning sense organs (eye, ear, nose, tongue, body and mind) and their appropriate objects (forms, sounds, scents, tastes, tangible things and mental phenomena). They arise interdependently. A functioning sense organ, that is, a sense organ capable of responding to sense-stimuli(61), requires an object of sense, a source of stimulus. An object of sense is not present without a functioning sense organ. Experience arises from the relationship between sense organ and sense object(62). The convergence of functioning sense organ, its appropriate sense object and its presence to consciousness is contact or stimulus (phassa). Hence, the six sense-spheres give rise to contact.

And what, Bhikkhus, is contact [phassa]? There are these six classifications of contact: eye contact, ear contact; nose contact; tongue contact; body contact; and mind contact. This, Bhikkhus, is called "contact"(63).

Contact is the communication between the psycho-physical person and the inner and outer world. As such, it cannot occur without functioning sense organs, their objects of recognition, and the appropriate consciousness.

Just as consciousness and mind-body are inseparable because consciousness and its objects are inseparable, so mind-body is inseparable from the six sense-spheres, as functioning sense organs and their objects of recognition are inseparable. The union of sense organ and sense object is contact. Any one of these phenomena are unimaginable without the others. We can break up the ignorance / creations / consciousness / mind body / six sense-spheres / contact nexus for purposes of intellectual analysis, but not in lived experience. They arise together as a single complex of interdependent identity, and therefore they are interdependently arisen.

The psycho-physical person is a single unit made up of a complex of interlinked processes. Without those processes and their interconnections there would be no person; and the absence of any one of these processes changes one person into another. Someone, for example, who is blind will develop in ways which are quite different from how he would have developed had he possessed vision. The experienced world of a blind person is different from that of a sighted person. The inter-relationships between the person and his experienced world create both the person and the world which is experienced.

The defining characteristic of the created person in the twelve fold formula is, from the Buddha's point of view, the fact that all these processes are based upon, and inseparable from, ignorance. The person thus created is one who assumes his or her separate, independent existence is standing at the centre of the experienced universe. Such an existence is characterised by suffering. How this "untrained ordinary person" functions is the subject of the next chapter.

4. THE PERSON IN BONDAGE

The fact that nama-rupa (mind-body) is a compound illustrates how neither mind nor body is found alone. Mind is always supported by a physical structure (even if a very subtle one, as for devas), and body without mind quickly decays. In lived experience, mind-body is always accompanied by consciousness. Mind, body and consciousness together make up a single being, the physical, mental and emotional person. A person is not an indivisible and solid entity, but a complex of processes. The Buddha called the processes that constitute the person the five khandas (panca khandha).

Usually the five factors are referred to as the five clung-to factors (panca-upadana-khandha). This term expresses the relationship between the untrained ordinary person and "his" mind-body. We do not simply experience mental and physical phenomena, we claim them as our own and identify with them as "me" and "mine". Wanting to possess, I believe that body and mind are mine; wanting to be someone, I believe that I am my body, I am my mind. Clinging and the five factors, while distinct, are inseparable in lived experience.

"on what, Bhante, are these five clung-to factors based?"

"These five clung-to factors are based on desire [chanda]."

"Is clinging [upadana] the five clung-to factors, or is clinging somewhere other than the five clung-to factors?"

"Clinging is not the five clung-to factors, nor is clinging somewhere other than the five clung-to factors; but where there is desire and passion [raga], there is clinging."(64)

The five clung-to factors consist of: body (rupa); sensation (vedana); recognition (sanna); creations (sankhara); and consciousness (vinnana). These phenomena arise from causes. They are interdependently arisen, and their arising can be seen by meditative insight. The Buddha explains the causes of these five clung-to factors:

The four great elements, Bhikkhu, are the cause (hetu), the four great elements are the condition (paccaya) for the disclosure of the body factor (rupa-khandha). Contact (phassa) is the cause, contact is the condition for the disclosure of the sensation factor (vedana-khandha). Contact is the cause, contact is the condition for the disclosure of the recognition factor (sanna-khandha). Contact is the cause, contact is the condition for the disclosure of the creations factor (sankhara-khandha). Mind-body (nama-rupa) is the cause, mind-body is the condition for the disclosure of the consciousness factor (vinnana-khandha).(65)

Body

The four great elements (mahabhuta) are: earth-element (pathavi-dhatu); water-element (apo-dhatu); fire-element (tejo-dhatu); and air element (vayo-dhatu). They refer to the nature of physical experience rather than physical elements in the modern sense. Earth-element is the experience of softness and hardness, or resistance; water-element is the experience of fluidity and cohesion; fire-element is the experience of temperature, whether cold or hot; and air-element is the experience of movement, tightness and tension(66). These experiences can be subjective or objective, but in every case they have these characteristics. Again we encounter this fundamental aspect of the Buddha's view of reality: the world is our experience of the world; the physical elements are the irreducible units of our experience of the physical world.(67)

Hence the Buddha's definition of body (rupa):

Why, Bhikkhus, do you say "body" [rupa]? One is afflicted [ruppati], therefore it is called "body". What is one afflicted by? One is afflicted by cold, heat, hunger, and thirst; one is afflicted by contact [samphassa] with snakes, wind, heat, mosquitos and gadflies. One is afflicted [ruppati], therefore it is called "body".(68)

This definition is based on a word play with the verb ruppati which, despite its similarity, is not etymologically related to rupa. The definition is made within the context of the Buddha's conviction that physical experience is essentially unpleasant (dukkha). The point is that what defines "body" is the way in which a person is affected by the experience of physical phenomena. That is, "unless the experience of such phenomena are available, it is meaningless to speak of material form"(69). Or, as Johansson says:

The body is a collection of observed processes. Without vinnana there would be no consciousness of our own body, i.e. no body-processes.(70)

All physical experiences, when closely examined, resolve into one or more of the four elements of hardness/softness, fluidity, temperature and movement/tension. In brief, the body is the experience of the body.(71)

Sensation

And why, Bhikkhus, do you say "sensation" [vedana]? One senses [vediyati], therefore it is called "sensation". What does one sense? One senses what is pleasant [sukha], unpleasant [dukkha] and neither pleasant nor unpleasant [adukkhamasukha]. One senses, therefore it is called "sensation".(72)

Vedana is the hedonic or affective aspect of experience: the automatic discernment of experience as being either pleasant, unpleasant or neither. It is usually translated as "feeling", but the English word "feeling" is associated with emotion, which is not meant here. Vedana is not emotion, but simply the registering of every experience, the direct sensation, as either pleasant, painful, or neutral. In a conversation with Visakha, Ayya(73) Dhammadinna explains:

Whatever physical or mental experience is pleasant [sukha] or agreeable [sata] is pleasant sensation; whatever physical or mental experience is unpleasant [dukkha] or disagreeable [asata] is unpleasant sensation; whatever physical or mental experience is neither agreeable nor disagreeable is neutral sensation.(74)

At the root of our psychological makeup is an inbuilt attraction for the pleasant and aversion for the unpleasant. We all want happiness and seek to avoid pain. Visakha asks Dhammadinna:

"What tendency [anusaya] lies dormant [anuseti] in pleasant sensation, Ayya; what tendency lies dormant in unpleasant sensation; what tendency lies dormant in neutral sensation?"

"A tendency towards passion [raga] lies dormant in pleasant sensation; a tendency towards revulsion [patigha] lies dormant in unpleasant sensation; and a tendency towards ignorance [avijja] lies dormant in neutral sensation.(75)

This attraction and aversion has nothing to do with choice or intention, just as the instant reaction of "I don't like this" when I accidentally burn my hand is not intentional. As sensation is a direct response to sense stimulus, it is caused by contact.

Recognition

And why, Bhikkhus, do you say "recognition" [sanna]? One recognises [sanjanati], therefore it is called "recognition". What does one recognise? One recognises blue-green, yellow, red, and white. One recognises, therefore it is called "recognition".(76)

Recognition takes the raw percept, then classifies and interprets it. The eye sees forms, which are simply shifting patterns of colour. Recognition takes the changing patterns of colour and, on the basis of past experience, interprets them as "man close by", "woman further away", "house in the distance", etc. Walpola Rahula explains:

It should be clearly understood that consciousness does not recognise an object. It is only ... awareness of the presence of an object. When the eye comes in contact with a colour, for instance blue, visual consciousness arises which simply is awareness of the presence of a colour; but it does not recognise that it is blue.... It is perception [sanna] ... that recognises that it is blue. The term "visual consciousness" is a philosophical expression denoting the same idea as is conveyed by the ordinary word "seeing". Seeing does not mean recognising.(77)

Eye consciousness sees a pattern of black symbols against a white background; recognition recognises written words on a page. Hearing consciousness hears random sounds; recognition recognises some of them as words expressing meaning and some as background noise. Similarly with the other senses: recognition takes the raw data of experience and recognises patterns and structures based on our past experiences. Recognition is made up of "a mixed bag of memories, concepts, dispositions, and material elements".(78) From it "we carve out discrete objects out of the flux of experience"(79). Like sensation, recognition is based directly on sense experience, and is therefore caused by contact.

Creations

We saw in the last chapter that the general term sankhara refers not to any particular phenomenon, but to the fact that the phenomenon in question is constructed, put together, made, and in turn constructs, puts together, makes. Sankhara refers to constructive processes rather than things.

Note that vedana, sanna, sankhara and vinnana are defined in terms of their activity: sensation is sensing, recognition is recognising, creations are creating, consciousness is cognising. There is not some "thing" in the mind which can be labelled "recognition" or "consciousness"; rather, there are processes of ongoing activity, and for purposes of linear thought and analysis we abstract "things" or "entities" from these processes. It is a different, and, for us, unusual, standpoint - that of interdependent arising and interdependently arisen phenomena - where instead of beginning with entities and proceeding to their actions and the relationships between them, we begin with the experience of interrelated processes and from these infer the existence of entities. Even the solid, material body is a process: one of being afflicted or affected. Hence, all these phenomena are sankharas.

In the context of the five factors, however, sankhara has a more specific meaning:

And what, Bhikkhus, are "creations" [sankhara]? There are these six types of intention [sancetana]: intention regarding forms ... sounds ... scents ... tastes ... touches ... (mental) phenomena. These are called "creations".(80)

In the context of the five clung-to factors, sankharas are all those mental events that involve intention or volition. Both vedana and sanna are automatic: we do not have to intend to feel pleasure or pain as we experience the events that make up our lives; pleasure and pain simply manifest. We do not have to intend to recognise the sounds of our names when we hear them; recognition simply manifests. Vedana and sanna are beyond the realm of choice, and therefore beyond the realm of moral responsibility. We cannot do anything about the fact that we feel pleasure and pain, or that we understand one language and not another; these are simply givens of experience. Although experienced as givens, they are already the result of a complex process of interpretation which has turned the raw data of experience into a meaningful world populated by the everyday objects and entities our senses present to us. Creations, however, involve choice. They constitute the higher level processing of sense data, what we choose to do with this everyday world. Because creations are based on sense stimulus, they too are caused by contact.

Creations are kamma (action), the realm of moral responsibility:

Intention [cetana], I declare, is action [kamma]: after intending one performs action of body, speech or mind.(81)

The Buddha goes so far as to say that the body itself is simply old kamma that has been intended [abhisancetayita] and performed abhisankhata. My body in the condition it is today is the result of innumerable decisions taken regarding, for example, what and how I eat and drink, how and to what extent I exercise. A different lifestyle will result in a different body in the future.

Kamma begins as plans and intentions, and develops into actions of body and speech. The actions we take and the choices we make determine the development of our bodies and minds, our lives, and our identities, in an ongoing process of becoming. In brief, we are our actions; identity is a verb:

One is a farmer by action, a craftsman by action,
A merchant by action, a servant by action.

One is a thief by action, a soldier by action,
A priest by action, a king by action.

Thus the wise see action as it is,
Seeing interdependent arising, understanding action and its result.(83)

The wise do not see people and their actions, in-dependently existing entities and their attributes. They see an inter-dependently arisen pattern of actions and results, and for purposes of communication use conventional terms such as "farmer", "priest", etc. They are not deceived by these words, however, as they do not reify the phenomena indicated by them into separately existing selves.

Consciousness

Consciousness (vinnana) arises along with the other factors, as an integral aspect of a wider system.

If one were to say: "I will declare the coming or going, the death or birth, the increase, growth or full development of consciousness somewhere other than the body, sensation, recognition and creations"; this is impossible.(84)

This is essentially a restatement of: "Depending on consciousness, mind-body; depending on mind-body, consciousness". Consciousness, the presence of the object, arises dependent upon the object which is present - the sense object - and the functioning sense organ. When any of the five factors are present to awareness, then there is consciousness. Consciousness, therefore, is inseparable from the experience of the five factors. Consciousness acts like a spotlight on a dark night, bringing into the light of awareness specific aspects of the wider functioning of the mind-body process.

Contact

Contact is the "coming together" (sangati) of consciousness with an object through a sense faculty. Contact is the communication between the psycho-physical person and the inner and outer world. Where there is contact, there is sensation and recognition, as we process the raw data of sense perception. Hence, sensation, recognition and consciousness are interdependent, as Sariputta explains to Maha-kotthita:

Sensation, recognition and consciousness, Friend, are united, not separate, and it is not possible to distinguish any difference between them, even after repeatedly sifting through them.

What one senses, one recognises; what one recognises, one cognises. Hence these phenomena are united, not separate, and it is not possible to distinguish any difference between them, even after repeatedly sifting through them.(85)

The five factors are distinguished for purposes of analysis, but in lived experience they, like the other factors of the twelvefold formula, arise together as a single complex of interdependently arisen phenomena. When one is present, all are present.

In the twelvefold formula, contact is mentioned only as the condition of sensation. However, we have seen that the Buddha also saw contact as the condition of recognition and creations. It appears that the twelvefold formula, in declaring "depending on contact, sensation", is using sensation as an example of a wider process. This is another instance of definition by example, and its use here alerts us to the possibility that the twelvefold formula is not meant to be a complete exposition of interdependent arising, but rather a series of examples used to illustrate aspects of a wider structural principle.

Craving / clinging / becoming

Where there is experience there is a sense of pleasure and pain, and therefore an automatic tendency to turn toward and cultivate what gives pleasure, and turn away from and avoid what gives pain. As Dhammadinna explained above, passion (raga) lies dormant in pleasant sensation, revulsion (patigha) in unpleasant sensation, and ignorance (avijja) in neutral sensation. These tendencies must be abandoned.(86) If they are not, there is craving (tanha).

And what, Bhikkhus, is "craving" [tanha]? There are these six classifications of craving: craving for forms, sounds, scents, tastes, tangible things, and (mental) phenomena. This is called "craving"(87).

Tanha literally means "thirst". It is simple want, like the desire for a drink when one is thirsty. We want forms, scents, tastes, tangible things, and (mental) phenomena that provide us with pleasant sensations. We also want to avoid or bring quickly to an end unpleasant sensations. Such wants are entirely natural, and are an inherent aspect of sentient existence. However, wants do not remain simple and natural, any more than we satisfy our thirst simply and naturally with water. Craving tends to be cultivated, and when cultivated develops into clinging (upadana) and becoming (bhava).

Craving develops for the one who lives contemplating the enjoyment regarding the things that are clung to [upadana dhamma]. Clinging conditions becoming; becoming conditions birth; birth conditions ageing and death; sorrow, lamentation, pain, grief and arise together. Such is the arising of this whole mass of suffering.(88)

Craving is part of a continuous process of psychological development. I realise I am thirsty and begin to think of what I would like to drink - perhaps a cold beer. My desire is cultivated and refined, influenced by tastes and by imagined images of satisfaction in the future that themselves are the products of habits cultivated over a lifetime. To satisfy my desires I make plans to gain the necessary money. I plan my life to ensure I will always have the money necessary to satisfy this and other desires. I feel comfortable with people who share my desires and spend my time with them, perhaps at the local pub. At work, I find myself looking forward to my time with my mates at the pub. Over time, it may be I find my life revolves around the physical, emotional and social satisfactions that come from the neck of a beer bottle. From a simple desire, I have constructed a life and an identity. This is the maturing of a journey beginning with craving and proceeding through enjoyment and clinging. Its end result is a personality defined by its desires for specific types of sense (including mental) satisfaction. As the Buddha says:

What one is desiring [kamayamana] gives rise to its appropriate personality [attabhava], whether favourable or unfavourable.(89)

Upadana is one of a number of terms from the same root which contain a complex of related meanings. Upadana is "that ... by means of which an active process is kept alive or going". It comes from: upa, denoting nearness or close touch, with the idea of approach from below or rest on top; a, "towards (oneself)"; and da, "to give". It can mean "taking up"; or "that which is placed under, support".(90)

In terms of the first meaning, upadana means "clinging". One takes up, clings to and develops simple wants which are rooted in pleasurable and painful sensations. Sense experiences and personality processes are taken up, collected and developed, and in this way a personality is formed.(91) One "becomes" someone of specific character and identity; clinging (upadana) conditions becoming (bhava). This development is characteristic of consciousness, which develops by way of clinging into the presence to me of experience, the owner of experience, the one who experiences.

Should consciousness remain clinging to body [rupa-upaya], with body as its object and its support in the pursuit of delight, it would undergo increase, growth and full development.

Should consciousness remain clinging to sensation ... recognition ... creations, with creations as its object and its support in the pursuit of delight, it would undergo increase, growth and full development.(92)

In terms of the second meaning, upadana can mean "fuel", that which supports a fire. The self-in-process is likened to a great fire (aggi-khandha), "consuming and constituted by its impressions, fuelled by sights, sounds, touch, tastes, smells, mental objects, and driven by the wants that they awaken ... "(93). Hence, after explaining that "craving develops for the one who lives contemplating the enjoyment regarding the phenomena that are clung to (upadana dhamma)", the Buddha goes on to say:

For example, if one was to light a great fire of ten, twenty, thirty or forty cartloads of wood, and a person was, from time to time, to throw into it dry grass, dry cowdung and dry sticks; such a great fire, fed [ahara] and supplied with fuel [upadana], would burn for a long time.(94)

A fire is interdependently arisen; it arises dependent on nourishment (ahara) and fuel (upadana), and is inseparable from these factors. Its nature and identity is dependent on the nature of the fuel; hence, we call it a bush-fire, house-fire, coal-fire, etc. Dependent upon the fuel (upadana), the fire comes into existence (bhava). Like a fire, the self is a pattern of dynamic processes which maintains a shape although its substance constantly changes.(95) The type of personality result that comes from clinging depends on the type of clinging cultivated.

And what, Bhikkhus, is clinging [upadana]? There are these four classifications of clinging: clinging to sense desires [kama-upadana], clinging to views [ditthi-upadana], clinging to morality and practices [sila-bbata-upadana], and clinging to belief in a self [atta-vada-upadana]. This is called clinging.(96)

Clinging to sense desires, I can become a person addicted to certain pleasures or physical habits. Clinging to views, I can become dogmatic and intolerant, obsessed with the correctness of my chosen ideology. Clinging to morality and practices, I can become obsessed with specific moral codes and spiritual practices, complacently convinced that merely by reproducing certain traditional practices my spiritual liberation or salvation will be assured.

However, for the Buddha, the fundamental form of clinging is atta-vada, the belief in oneself as a separate entity; belief in in-dependently existing things, rather than interdependently arisen phenomena. The becoming that is conditioned by clinging blossoms into the becoming of a supposedly separate, independent self.

Bondage

Someone who imagines oneself to be such an entity is like the king who was entranced by the sound of a vina the first time he heard it. He ordered that the sound be brought to him, and was disappointed by the sight of a wooden instrument. Where was the sound? His courtiers explained that what is called a "vina" is made up of many parts, including the effort of the player. But the king was unconvinced, and broke up the vina in his attempts to discover the sound.(97) Like the king entranced by the vina's sound, we are entranced by our own existence, but when we examine this complex mind-body we fail to find the one who exists, the one to whom experience occurs.

We are bound to our imagined independent self like Narcissus was bound to his reflection in the water. After speaking of the "continual moving and running along of beings bound by craving (tanha)" which is samsara, the Buddha says:

For example, Bhikkhus, a dog bound by a leather strap to a strong pillar or post is closely tied up. If he goes, he goes around that pillar or post; if he stands, he stands around that pillar or post; if he sits, he sits around that pillar or post; if he lies down, he lies down around that pillar or post.

In the same way, the untrained ordinary person regards the body as: this is mine; I am this; this is myself. He regards sensation ... recognition ... creations ... consciousness as: this is mine; I am this; this is myself.

If he goes, he goes around these five clung-to factors; if he stands, he stands around these five clung-to factors; if he sits, he sits around these five clung-to factors; if he lies down, he lies down around these five clung-to factors.(98)

No matter where we go or what we achieve in life, we are, from the Buddha's point of view, like that dog bound to a post. No matter how noble our ideals or exalted our thoughts, our lives are limited by the fixed length of the strap. This bondage is the source of our suffering.

And what, Bhikkhus, is the arising of body? What is the arising of sensation ... recognition ... creations ... consciousness?

Here one delights in, welcomes, and remains hanging on to. What does one delight in, welcome and remain hanging on to? One delights in, welcomes, and hangs on to body. Delight arises in the one delighting in, welcoming and hanging on to body. That which is delight in the body is clinging; conditioned by his clinging is becoming; conditioned by becoming is birth; conditioned by birth is ageing and death; sorrow, lamentation, pain, grief and despair arise together. Such is the arising of this entire mass of suffering.

One delights in, welcomes and hangs on to sensation ... recognition ... creations ... consciousness.... That which is delight in consciousness is clinging; conditioned by his clinging is becoming; conditioned by becoming is birth; conditioned by birth is ageing and death; sorrow, lamentation, pain, grief and despair arise together. Such is the arising of this entire mass of suffering.(99)

The five factors together constitute the person, which in turns constitutes the world of experience. These five factors manifest according to natural processes, taking the raw data of sense experience and transforming it into an intelligible world. However, something has gone wrong; the natural tendency towards pleasure and away from pain has resulted in the development of a separate, independently existing entity: a self which imagines itself to be independent from the world and other beings in the world. This independently existing self suffers because of the open-ended nature of the desires that created him. No matter how much he satisfies his desires he will not be finally contented, hecause the creation of new desires goes on apace. Further, his sense of separation creates its own anxiety. Faced with the other, he must defend himself and his possessions from a threatening world; having borders, he must defend his borders.

The owner of experience is in the same situation as King Mahasudassana. He was king because of his royal possessions, so his identity depended upon these possessions. However, it was impossible for him to hide the fact that these possessions, and the royal position dependent upon them, were impermanent and subject to change and decay. The sense of identity and security that the arising of the self provides is inherently unstable, for it rests upon creations that are constantly coming into and going out of existence. We search for security in our jobs, our relationships, our income and our sense of identity, precisely because we know deep within that there is no security. Our hard-won identity is like a heavy person walking over thin ice. It is only a question of time before the abyss opens.

The development from sense experience to suffering is neatly summed up in this famous passage from the Madhupindika-sutta:

Depending on eye and forms eye consciousness arises; the union of the three is contact; depending on contact, sensation.

What one senses, one recognises; what one recognises one reflects on; what one reflects on one multiplies [papanceti].

Based on what one multiplies, concepts characterised by multiplied recognitions [papanca-sanna-sankha] assault the person in regard to forms of the past, present and future cognised by the eye.(100)

The first paragraph shows a natural process of sense perception proceeding as nature is designed to do. The second paragraph shows the functioning of creations, volitional actions, and the first appearance of someone to whom experience is occurring. We have become someone (bhava). We reflect, and these reflections proliferate and multiply. Unwilling or unable to let them go, we build them up by clinging (upadana) to them; they become fuel (upadana) cast onto the fire of our thinking mind. Our thoughts multiply and become ever more fascinating, like the characters in a soap opera whose developing fates draw us in. In the third paragraph, we have lost all semblance of control over the process. From being the actor who reflects on what we experience, we become the acted upon, assaulted by a multiplicity of thoughts and images from the past, present and future. Now we find we cannot turn off the soap opera even if we wanted to. We are possessed by our own rampaging mental and emotional processes.

Hence we have travelled the road from natural processes of sense stimuli, to the ownership of experience, to the loss of control over our own inner world because of our multiplying obsessions (papanca). We have become the victim of forces beyond our control. We are in bondage. How we emerge from this bondage is the subject of the next chapter.

5. INTERDEPENDENT CESSATION

But from the complete fading away and cessation of ignorance, creations cease;
From the cessation of creations, consciousness ceases;
From the cessation of consciousness, mind-body ceases;
From the cessation of mind-body, six sense-spheres cease;
From the cessation of six sense-spheres, contact ceases;
From the cessation of contact, sensation ceases;
From the cessation of feeling, craving ceases;
From the cessation of craving, clinging ceases;
From the cessation of clinging, becoming ceases;
From the cessation of becoming, birth ceases;
From the cessation of birth, ageing and death, sorrow, lamentation, pain, grief and despair dissolve.

Such is the cessation of this entire mass of suffering(101).

Implicit in interdependent arising is interdependent cessation. What arises, ceases, and if we understand arising - the conditions that result in the emergence of any given phenomenon - then we can understand cessation. If certain conditions cause a phenomenon to arise, then removing those conditions will cause it to cease. The Buddha's path of practice, the noble eightfold way, is the skillful management of conditions in order to achieve a particular result, the cessation of suffering. Suffering, in the Buddha's view, is the suffering implicit in birth and all those phenomena associated with birth. In the last chapter we saw how interdependent arising describes the arising and dynamic development of the psycho-physical person, the living being, from the viewpoint of the yogin examining her own existence. To understand cessation, however, we must be clear on who or what ceases. Central to this question is the meaning of birth (jati) in interdependent arising.

Birth

There are these two searches [pariyesana], noble [ariyal and ignoble [anariya].

And what, Bhikkhus, is the ignoble search?

In this case someone, because he himself is subject to birth [jati-dhamma], searches out what is subject to birth. Because he himself is subject to ageing, he searches out what is subject to ageing. Because he himself is subject to disease ... dying ... sorrow ... fixation [sankilesa] ... he searches out what is subject to disease ... dying ... sorrow ... fixation.

And what, Bhikkhus, should you say is subject to birth? Sons and wife are subject to birth ... male and female servants ... goats and sheep ... cocks and pigs ... elephants, cows, horses and mares ... gold and silver are subject to birth.

Those phenomena that are subject to birth are an attachment [upadhaya], and here, because he himself is bound to, infatuated with and clinging to what is subject to birth, he searches out what is subject to birth.(102)

This list is mostly unexceptional, a catalogue of living creatures who, having been born, will one day die. But how can gold and silver be subject to birth? And why is birth equivalent to fixation? We know that what is born, dies; what begins, ends. What things that are "subject to birth" have in common is a beginning and an end. They are sankhata, constructed and complex entities, and being constructed, they are subject to falling apart, to deconstruction. They are sankhara, constructing entities, that create and define entities other than themselves, as Mahasudassana was constructed and defined by his possessions. They are upadhaya, an attachment: what is taken up and developed, or a support, what underlies and supports a dynamic process.

Kilesa and its equivalents, sankilesa and upakkilesa, are associated with attachment and birth. Usually translated as "defilement", kilesa is derived from the verb kilissati, to adhere. We can compare the mind to a white cloth. If we throw mud on the cloth, the mud sticks or adheres. This quality of the stuckness or fixation of the mud creates a stain or defilement on the cloth. In the same way, when the mind moves toward an object and is stuck there, that fixation is kilesa. The mind is fixated on a particular experience or aspect of experience. Having moved to the desired object or away from the hated object, consciousness is fixated in a posture of attraction or aversion. Creations, attachment and fixation all refer to processes that give rise to phenomena that endure, that are clung to, and that ultimately end.

The Buddha says:

Everything, Bhikkhus, is subject to birth. And what is everything?

The eye is subject to birth; forms are subject to birth; eye consciousness is subject to birth; the pleasant, unpleasant or neutral sensation that arises dependent on eye contact is subject to birth.

Tongue ... body ... mind [manas] is subject to birth. (Mental) phenomena are subject to birth; mind consciousness is subject to birth; the pleasant, unpleasant or neutral sensation that arises dependent on mind contact is subject to birth.(103)

In brief, all experience is sankhata, constructed out of parts: the functioning sense organ, the sense object, and the appropriate sense consciousness. All experience is subject to birth, and therefore to ageing, disease, death, sorrow and fixation. "Everything" (sabba) is subject to birth, the world and all it contains; in brief, the interdependently arisen is subject to birth.

The Buddha is using the word "birth" in an unconventional way. This is not surprising, given his unconventional view of the world. Our use of language presupposes the existence of subject and object. There are beings that act and entities and beings that are acted upon; there are "things" to which words apply. That is, in our conventional world view there are in-dependently existing entities. The Buddha, however, sees patterns of inter-dependently arisen phenomena rather than things. His use of language seeks to frustrate our tendency to project real existence onto phenomena by labelling them as nouns.

Hence the Buddha used statements which are neyyattha (whose meanings need to be drawn out) which refer to "things" and their activities; and statements that are nitattha (having the meaning drawn out) which do not assume the existence of "things".(104) Similarly, Theravada Buddhism distinguishes vohara-vacana, or "conventional" everyday language; and paramattha-vacana, the language used especially in Abhidhamma, which speaks not of "things" but of ultimately existing phenomena (paramattha-dhamma).(105)

Buddhadasa also maintains the distinction between these two ways of using language, which he calls everyday language and dhamma language. Everyday language is the language of relative truth, the purpose of which is to teach morality to people "still befuddled with the idea of eternalism; those who feel that they are selves ... ". Dhamma language is the "language of ultimate truth", and therefore the language of interdependent arising.(106) To teach morality, the Buddha speaks as if persons exist and will receive the results of merit and demerit after they die. Such language carries the danger that it presupposes and therefore encourages an eternalist view, a view that there is someone to whom words refer, someone who acts, continues in existence, and suffers the consequences of actions. When teaching ultimate truth the Buddha uses dhamma language, which is intended to eliminate both the eternalist and annihilationist points of view.(107)

There are only those interdependent events which arise for a moment and then pass away ... called paticcasamupanna dhamma (events which arise by reason of the law of causation) and which are called paticcasamuppada when they are connected together in a chain or string of events. There is no way to say "who" or "self' in any of those moments, even the present one, so there is no one born and no one to die and receive the results of past deeds (karma) as in the case of the theory of eternalism.(108)

We are caught in a paradox. At the level of relative truth, of the self and the world in our ordinary experience, there is past, present and future, there are those who act and experience the consequences of their actions, there is this life and a future life. At the ultimate level, however, there is neither existence nor non-existence, there is no doer and owner of actions and their results; there is simply the middle way of interdependent arising:

When this is, that is; because this arises, that arises.
When this is not, that is not; because this ceases, that ceases.

Both these views, however, are correct within their respective domains(109); each view supplements rather than contradicts the other. We can see something similar in contemporary science. The fixed laws of the Newtonian universe are quite different from the probabilities of quantum physics, yet both are correct - or rather, both work - within their contexts. The quantum physicist knows that solid entities dissolve into space and energy when examined, but this does not keep him from getting out of the way of a bus when he crosses the street.

And what, Bhikkhus, is birth? That which is, regarding all beings and classifications of beings, birth, origin, entry, becoming; the appearance of the factors [khandhanam patubhavol and the taking up of the sense spheres [ayatananam patilabho]: this is called birth.

And what, Bhikkhus, is ageing and death?

That which is, regarding all beings and classifications of beings, ageing, old age, broken teeth, grey hair, wrinkled skin; the decline of life and the decay of the faculties [indriyanam paripako]: this is called ageing.

That which is, regarding all beings and classifications of beings, falling away, separation, disappearance, mortality, the fulfilment of one's time; the breaking up of the factors [khandhanam bhedo] and the laying down of the body; this is called death.(110)

Birth is "the appearance of the factors" (khandhanam patubhavo), and death is "the breaking up of the factors" (khandhanam bhedo). Can these mean something other than biological birth and death?

We have seen that the Buddha is concerned with life as we experience it rather than life as an object of abstract analysis, regarded as separate from an objective, uninvolved observer. As a psychologist, the Buddha's object of study is himself; the yogin is both therapist and patient. From this focus on experience comes the Buddha's distinctive use of words: a dhamma is not a thing but our experience-of-a-thing; the world is not something out there but our experience-of-the-world. Things are processes; nouns are verbs. Dhamma language is used to describe phenomena from the intimate perspective of interdependently arisen phenomena.

This view is inherent to the Buddha's method of investigation, the yogic contemplation of his own mind and body. The Buddha investigated his own mind-body processes, and in doing so investigated birth and death(111); he gained insight into his own mind-body processes, and in doing so gained insight into birth and death(112). Birth and death are immediately available to yogic investigation; the Buddha did not have to rely on memory or anticipation to know and see them, any more than he had to rely on memory or anticipation to know and see the five factors constituting his own person.

Here, Bhikkhus, an untrained ordinary person is unaware of the noble ones. He is ignorant of the noble teaching and untrained in the teaching of the noble ones; he is ignorant of good people and untrained in the teaching of good people. He regards body as the self, the self as possessed by body, body in the self, the self in body.

He regards sensation ... recognition ... creations ...consciousness as the self, the self as possessed by consciousness, consciousness in the self, the self in consciousness.

This is how he regards it: it occurs to him, "I am".

When it occurs to him "I am", then there is the appearance of the five senses [pancannam indriyanam avakkanti hoti]: seeing, hearing, smelling, tasting and touching. There is mind, there are (mental) phenomena, there is the sphere of ignorance.

To the untrained ordinary person touched by experience born of ignorant contact [avijja-samphassa-jena vedayitena] comes "I am"; "I am this"; "they will be"; "they will not be";...

In this situation, Bhikkhus, the five senses remain. But in the case of the trained noble disciple, ignorance is abandoned, knowledge arises. Because of the fading of ignorance and the arising of knowledge, for him there is no "I am"; there is no "I am not";...(113)

The ordinary untrained person identifies with the five factors and therefore fabricates an "I" which really does not exist. The "I" is clung to, protected and further developed. This fabrication comes from "experience born of ignorant contact", which is: "depending on contact, sensation" restated, with ignorance and contact linked in one compound. This reminds us that interdependent arising in forward order is not meant to explain the evolution of the human species or the biological mechanisms of birth, but the arising of the unfree person, the person in bondage. All its terms refer to phenomena that arise within this state of bondage - phenomena that arise dependent upon ignorance.

Hence the five senses appear when we think "I am". When the Buddha talks about the five senses he is not concerned with the senses in an abstract, scientific sense, but with our relationship to our existing five senses which are, for the normal healthy human, a given of experience. The five senses "appear" when they appear to someone. They "cease" when the someone who owns them ceases. This does not mean that the arahant(114) no longer sees, hears, smells, tastes or touches. Seeing, hearing, smelling, tasting and touching proceed, but they are not claimed or owned by anyone; the arahant does not identify with his senses or the data the senses transmit. The senses that arise in interdependent arising are the senses "born of ignorant contact"; they are my senses, not simply the senses. These senses cease in interdependent cessation; in the absence of ignorant contact, they cease to be my senses, but are simply the senses. In the same way, "birth" in this fundamental sense is the appearance of the factors as my factors; "death" is the breaking up of the factors as my factors.

Buddhadasa therefore declares that birth is "the birth of the I concept ... and not the physical birth from a mother's womb."(115) He argues that when someone decides to steal, he is born a thief at that moment; if someone is lost in the experience of pleasure, he is born into heavenly realms at that moment; if someone can't eat fast enough because the food is so good, he is born a peta or hungry ghost at that moment.(116)

In this sense the ordinary person is born very often, time and time again. A more developed person is born less frequently; a person well advanced in practice is born less frequently still, and ultimately ceases being reborn altogether.... As soon as anyone thinks like an animal, he is born as an animal that same moment. To think as a human being is to be born a human being.(117)

In the world described by everyday language we know that where there is birth there is ageing and death. Birth, ageing and death are painful, suffering. The same is true of the world described by dhamma language. The Buddha says:

The manifold and multifaceted suffering which is decay and death arises in the world. This suffering has attachment [upadhi] as its ground [nidana], attachment as its arising, attachment as its origin.

When there is attachment, there is ageing and death; when there is no attachment, there is no ageing and death.(118)

Attachment (upadhi) is synonymous with clinging (upadana). Note the structural simultaneity in the use of the locative absolute, which we have seen in the general formula of the conditionality-of-this (idappaccayata): when there is x there is y, and when there is no x there is no y. The Buddha is not saying that when there is attachment, ageing and death will occur in the future, or that when there is no attachment, in the future there will be only one more death. He is saying that the absence of attachment now necessitates the absence of ageing and death, now.

There is ageing and death for one who clings to ageing and death; for one who thinks he ages and dies, one who identifies with the natural processes of ageing and death and says: "This is my ageing and death"; "I am ageing and dying". There is no ageing and death for one who does not cling to ageing and death, despite the inevitable fact that his body ages and dies.

Not creating, not planning, he clings to nothing in the world. Not clinging, he is not disturbed; not disturbed, he is completely freed within himself.

He knows: birth is destroyed, the holy life is fulfilled, duty is done, there is no more of this.(119)

The destruction of birth is immediately apparent to the arahant. He is not saying "birth will be destroyed in the future". The destruction of birth is synonymous with being completely freed (parinibbayati), which again is happening, now. The holy life is now fulfilled, duty is now done.

The cessation of consciousness

Another problem associated with interdependent cessation is that of the cessation of consciousness. This reminds us that interdependent arising does not concern merely objective phenomena, but the mind itself; interdependent arising assumes personal involvement.(120) The twelvefold formula says, "From the cessation of consciousness, mind-body ceases". If we are to regard consciousness in the conventional sense then it would appear that the arahant is unconscious; in fact, since mind-body ceases, he must be dead. Yet we know that the Buddha functioned normally for 45 years after his awakenment.

Should consciousness remain clinging to body, with body as its object [arammana] and support [patittha], and in pursuit of delight, it would undergo increase, growth and full development. Should consciousness remain clinging to feeling ... perception ... creations ... it would undergo increase, growth and full development. If a Bhikkhu abandons passion for the earth-element, then because of the abandoning of passion its object is cut off; there is no support for consciousness. If a Bhikkhu abandons passion for the feeling-element ... perception-element ... creation-element ... consciousness-element, then because of the abandoning of passion its object is cut off; there is no support for consciousness.

That unsupported consciousness does not grow, does not create creations and is liberated. Because of its liberation, it is stable; because of its stability, it is happy; because of its happiness, it is untroubled. One who is untroubled is completely freed in his own heart. He knows: birth is destroyed, the holy life is fulfilled, duty is done, there is no more of this.(121)

We saw in Chapter 3 that consciousness is subject to growth and development. This growth is produced by clinging (upadana) to the five factors, the psycho-physical person as experienced. When clinging is abandoned the object (arammana) of consciousness is cut off and support (patittha) is absent. This unsupported consciousness is liberated, stable, happy and untroubled. Again we are faced with a paradox. How can consciousness be without an object? Consciousness arises dependent upon a functioning sense organ and a sense object; these three together are contact. Take away one of these factors, and none of them can arise. Similarly, how can the cessation of consciousness also be described as consciousness that is stable, happy and untroubled?

The paradox is resolved when we see that interdependent cessation involves the same proeesses as those of interdependent arising, except for the absence of ignorance. Unsupported consciousness is that of the arahant touched by experience born of contact without ignorance. Consciousness without an object is consciousness which does not have passion for its object, which does not cling to any specific object.(122) The contact, or sense stimulus, is the same; what is different is the absenee of ignorance, and therefore the absence of clinging.

The cessation of consciousness in the reverse order of the nidana formula is the cessation of consciousness coloured by the assumption that there is someone who is conscious, someone to whom this is happening. For the arahant, nothing extra is added to the bare experience. Rather than "This is present to me", there is simply "This is present". There is no craving, and therefore no suffering.

In Chapter 4 we saw how intentional action (kamma) is a powerful force in creating ourselves as independently existing entities, defining ourselves by our habitual patterns of action. When there is no ignorance, and therefore no clinging to the results of action or to the identity of the actor, then again consciousness is unsupported.

And if, Bhikkhus, one does not intend, determine or have something dormant in one's mind, there is no object for the maintenance of consciousness. When there is no object, there is no support for consciousness. When there is no support and growth for consciousness, no further becoming is produced in the future. When further becoming is not produced in the future, future birth, ageing and death, sorrow, lamentation, pain, grief and despair cease. Such is the cessation of this entire mass of suffering.(123)

Note the connection between intention, latent tendencies and the object of consciousness. Where there is intention fuelled by latent desire and aversion coming to the surface of the mind, there is grasping after or clinging to particular objects. The mind moves toward an object because of the attraction which is latent in pleasant feeling; or it moves away from an object because of the aversion which is latent in painful feeling. This movement towards the object in order to grasp it or away from the object in order to avoid it is asava.(124) Asava literally means "that which flows", and is translated variously as canker, taint, corruption, intoxicant and bias. Here I translate it as "movement". When there is no desire and aversion disturbing the mind, such that consciousness is stable, happy and untroubled, then there is no movement towards and away from desired or hated objects, because there is no attraction or aversion and therefore no objects which are desired or hated. Consciousness continues to function, but in the absence of these movements.

Asava implies kilesa. The mind moves to an object to grasp it and remains stuck or fixated on that object; it moves away from an object to avoid it and remains fixated on that posture of avoidance. This fixation is the object and support of consciousness. In the absence of object and support, in the absence of fixation that arises from clinging to any given object, there is the absence of becoming any particular identity or being, which is freedom, the cessation of suffering.

Action is free and spontaneous. The arahant is not fixated (kilesa) on any particular outcome of action, nor on an identification with the actor; consequently she does not intend a particular result, and therefore does not create (sankharoti) results in the form of constructing (sankhara) and constructed (sankhata) entities.(125) The Buddha says:

What do you think, Bhikkhus? Would a bhikkhu who has exhausted the movements intend a meritorious act or a demeritorious act or a motionless act?

Certainly not, Bhante.(126)

The arahant does not grasp after or cling to actions or results, not because she has rejected the virtuous life but because virtue, along with everything else, is no longer to be grasped.

What ceases in interdependent cessation is ignorance and everything that flows from ignorance. In our ignorance we construct ourselves along the lines of our likes and dislikes and cling to these constructions. In the absence of ignorance, craving and clinging cease, and therefore our sense of identity with experience ceases. The arahant ceases to be someone, ceases to claim ownership to the experiences that necessarily flow from the functioning of the senses. Experiences arise, but identification with those experiences cease. The arahant, in ceasing to cling to the notion that she is or must be someone, is free.

6. Interdependency

Many causes, one result

We saw in Chapter 3 that conventional causation - the causation assumed by ordinary untrained people who regard themselves as separate, independently existing entities tends to be linear. It assumes independently existing entities that give rise to other independently existing entities. Linear causation follows this model:

A >> B >> C >> D ...(127)

A now causes B to arise later; B now causes C to arise later; C now causes D to arise later. We find a different model of causation in interdependent arising. When the Buddha asked himself how suffering arises, he did not frame the question as: "What is the cause of suffering?", but: "When what is present does suffering come to be?; what is suffering dependent upon?"(128). In the twelvefold formula he gives a list of twelve nidanas that result in suffering. This list cannot be considered simply a linear chain of A follows B follows C. In Chapter 3 we saw how ignorance, creations, consciousness, mind-body, the six sense spheres and contact all presuppose each other and cannot be separated. They are all essential aspects of the existing person. Nor can any of the other nidanas be separated in lived experience. If there is one, there must be all.

The interdependence of phenomena is brought out in a number of passages dealing with the problem of suffering. In the Dvayatanupassana-sutta of the Sutta Nipata, the Buddha explains how suffering arises and ceases:

There are, Bhikkhus, teachings that are skillful, noble, leading beyond, leading to full awakening. Why should you listen to these teachings? If you are asked, this is how you could answer: "There are two things which should be known as they are." What should you say the two are?

The first insight is: "This is suffering; this is the arising of suffering." The second insight is: "This is the cessation of suffering; this is the way leading to the cessation of suffering."

Possessed of these two insights, Bhikkhus, a bhikkhu who lives watchful, ardent and resolute can expect one of these two results: either perfect knowledge in this life or, as long as a trace of attachment remains, the state of non-return...

Is there another way of correctly describing the twofold insight? If you are asked, this is how you could answer.

The first insight is: "Whatever suffering arises, all of it is based on attachments [upadhi]." The second insight is: "Because of the remainderless fading and cessation of these very attachments, there is no arising of suffering."

Is there another way of correctly describing the twofold insight? If you are asked, this is how you could answer.

The first insight is: "Whatever suffering arises, all of it is based on ignorance [avijja]". The second insight is: "Because of the remainderless fading and cessation of this very ignorance, there is no arising of suffering."

.... creations [sankhara] ... consciousness [vinnana] ... contact [phassa] ... sensation [vedana] ... craving [tanha] ... clinging [upadana] ... effort [arambha] ... nutrient [ahara]...

The first insight is: "Whatever suffering arises, all of it is based on vacillation [injita]". The second insight is: "Because of the remainderless fading and cessation of this very vacillation, there is no arising of suffering."(129)

The model of causation outlined above can be pictured as follows:

```
ignorance       _
creations       |
consciousness   |
contact         |
sensation       |->>  suffering
craving         |
clinging        | effort          |
nutrient        |
vacillation     |
```

For A to arise, there must be B, C, D, E, F, G, H, I, J and K. Remove any one of these supports and A will not arise. Further, remove A and all those supports are removed; and if any one of these supports is removed, then the rest of them and A also is removed. If one is missing, all are missing; if one is functioning, all are functioning.

Joanna Macy comments:

Here the series clearly represents no linear chain: Each upadhi, in giving rise to all pain, gives rise to the others. Occasioning and occasioned by each other, their causality is mutual. Like a house of cards, the constellation of factors that condition our existence can be disrupted and collapsed at any point.(131)

We can see the same model of causation expounded by the Buddha in his discourse on seeds:

"There are these five kinds of seeds, Bhikkhus. What five? Seeds from roots, cuttings, shoots, buds and seeds. These are the five kinds of seeds.

"If these five kinds of seeds were unbroken, not rotten, not spoiled by wind or heat, fertile and well planted, but earth and water were lacking, would these five kinds of seeds undergo increase, growth and full development?"

"Certainly not, Bhante."

"If these five kinds of seeds were unbroken, not rotten, not spoiled by wind or heat, fertile and well planted, and there was soil and water, would these five kinds of seeds undergo increase, growth and full development?"

"Certainly, Bhante. "(132)

For a seed to grow there must be a number of causal factors operating together: the condition of the seed itself; fertile soil and adequate water; suitable weather conditions; proper planting. If any of these conditions are lacking the seed will not grow. If all these conditions are available then the result - a healthy plant - will arise. No one factor is solely determinative. Similarly, two sticks rubbed together are needed to make fire and all the rafters, converging on the roof-peak, are required to construct a house.(133)

When one is missing, all are missing

This structure of conditionality can be seen in terms of the path that leads to awakenment. The Buddha shows both aspects of the path: one aspect leads to bondage; the same process, when reversed, leads to liberation. He begins with the fact that ignorance, the beginning of the path, is itself contingent (idapaccaya), interdependently arisen:

The beginning of ignorance is not see, Bhikkhus, such that one could say: "Previously there was no ignorance, then ignorance arose". Further, it is apparent that ignorance is contingent [idapaccaya]. Ignorance, I declare, is with support [ahara], not lacking support. And what is the support of ignorance? The five hindrances [panca-nivarana] is the answer.

The five hindrances, I declare, are with support, not lacking support. And what is the support of the five hindrances? The three wrong ways of life [ducarita] is the answer...

And what is the support of the three wrong ways of life? Unrestrained sense faculties [indriya-samvara] ...

And what is the support of unrestrained sense faculties? An absence of awareness and understanding [sati-sampajanna]...

And what is the support of an absence of awareness and understanding? Superficial attention [ayonisomanasikara] ...

And what is the support of superficial attention? Lack of faith [asaddhiya] ...

And what is the support of lack of faith? Not hearing the true teaching [asaddhammasavana] ...

And what is the support of not hearing the true teaching? Not associating with the true people [asappurisasamseva] is the answer.

Thus, Bhikkhus, the fulfilment of not associating with true people fulfills not hearing the true teaching; the fulfilment of not hearing the true teaching fulfills lack of faith; the fulfilment of lack of faith fulfills superficial attention; the fulfilment of superficial attention fulfills the absence of awareness and understanding; the fulfilment of the absence of awareness and understanding fulfills unrestrained sense faculties; unrestrained sense faculties fulfills the three wrong ways of life; the fulfilment of the three wrong ways of life fulfills the five hindrances; the fulfilment of the five hindrances fulfills ignorance.(134)

This teaching is a restatement of interdependent arising using nidanas other than those found in the twelvefold formula. The factors of the formula differ, but the structure remains the same: when x is, y is; when x is not, y is not. The fact that we find in the texts formulas of interdependent arising and cessation that use different factors indicates the importance of the underlying structure compared to the specific factors. In the example above we again have the situation where there is not one single determining factor, and the absence of one factor means the absence of all.

When one is fulfilled, all are fulfilled

In the same way, the fulfilment of one factor means the fulfilment of all. The Buddha says:

I declare, Bhikkhus, that release by knowledge [vijja-vimutti] is with support, not lacking support. And what is the support of release by knowledge? The seven aspects of awakenment [satta bojjhanga] is the answer.

And what is the support of the seven aspects of awakenment? The four foundations of awareness [cattaro satipatthana] ...

And what is the support of the four foundations of awareness? The three right ways of life ...

And what is the support of the three right ways of life? Restraint of the sense faculties ... awareness and understanding ... penetrating attention ... faith ... hearing the true teaching ... associating with good people is the answer.

Thus, Bhikkhus, the fulfilment of associating with true people fulfills hearing the true teaching; the fulfilment of hearing the true teaching fulfills faith; the fulfilment of faith fulfills penetrating attention; the fulfilment of penetrating attention fulfills awareness and understanding; the fulfilment of awareness and understanding fulfills restraint of the sense faculties; the fulfilment of restraint of the sense faculties fulfills the three right ways of life; the fulfilment of the three right ways of life fulfills the four foundations of awareness; the fulfilment of the four foundations of awareness fulfills the seven aspects of awakenment; the fulfilment of the seven aspects of awakenment fulfills release by knowledge.(135)

To walk this path one does not first associate with good people; then later hear the true teaching; then later develop faith; then later develop penetrating attention; then later develop awareness and understanding; etc. Rather, in associating with good people one hears the teaching, develops faith, develops penetrating attention, etc. All these phenomena are occurring at the same time. Faith develops penetrating attention; penetrating attention develops faith. The fulfilment of the four foundations of awareness is the fulfilment of penetrating attention. If any one of these factors is fulfilled, all are fulfilled; if any one of them is absent, all are absent. These factors are inter-dependent.

For example, awareness and understanding (nidana 5) here come before the four foundations of awareness (8); yet the four foundations of awareness include awareness and understanding.(136) If this were a purely linear path, one would be faced with the absurdity of having to fulfill awareness (5) before fulfilling awareness (8). Restraint of the sense faculties require awareness,(137) as does penetrating attention. Similarly, all the seven aspects of awakenment (awareness, investigation, effort, rapture, calm, concentration and equanimity) are inherent in and necessary to the practice of satipatthana (cultivation of awareness) from the beginning, although they develop from weak to strong during practice.(138) Out of the nine nidanas listed, the cultivation of awareness is crucial to at least five of them (penetrating attention; awareness and understanding; restraint of the sense faculties; the four foundations of awareness; and the seven aspects of awakenment). Indeed, awareness is a condition for all nidanas leading to liberation, as the absence of awareness is a condition for all nidanas leading to bondage.

Returning to Buddhaghosa's commentary, we see the model of causality assumed by interdependence:

Further, it arises together, so it is co-arising [samuppada]; it is dependent upon [paticca] a combination of conditions, not rejecting any. Therefore paticca and samuppada is interdependent arising.

...Just as in the world sugar is a condition for phlegm, it is said

"sugar is phlegm"; and in the teaching the arising of buddhas is a condition for happiness, it is said "the arising of buddhas is happiness".

This totality of causes, which is expounded one by one under the heading of causes beginning with ignorance for the appearance of creations, etc, is called paticca... by the mutuality of its combined factors, in that none are missing and they accomplish a common result. It is called samuppada in that it gives rise to dhammas together, such that each gives rise to the other and they are inseparable in their behaviour. Therefore paticca and samuppada is paticcasamuppada.(139)

A combination of conditions together give rise to a totality of results. Conditions arise together, as do their results. Buddhaghosa adds:

Among the conditions explained under the heading "ignorance, etc", those conditions that give rise to phenomena beginning with creations are unable to give rise to them when they are not mutually dependent or when there is a deficiency in their mutuality.

Therefore this conditionality, having depended [paticcal, gives rise to phenomena equally and together, not one by one and in successive order.(140)

The model of causation Buddhaghosa is outlining is as follows:

ignorance		ignorance
creations		creations
consciousness		consciousness
mind-body		mind-body
six sense bases		six sense bases
contact	->	contact
sensation	<-	sensation
craving		craving
clinging		clinging becoming		becoming
birth, ageing, death, sorrow,		birth, ageing,death, sorrow,

lamentation, pain, grief and despair

lamentation, pain, grief and despair

Interdependent arising asserts the arising and cessation of the entire phenomenal world within this very mind-body. Every aspect of our experience is contingent upon phenomena other than themselves, which are in turn dependent upon phenomena other than themselves. Our world is an infinitely complex web of mutually supporting conditions in which there is no solid ground standing outside the process of interdependent arising and cessation. It is, finally, because nothing in our existence can be found to be separate from anything else; because the web of interconnecting phenomena is effectively infinite, that liberation is possible. Bondage is not fixed; it can be worked on and ultimately overcome.

There remains, however, one final problem to be examined: how does interdependent arising deal with the given fact of continuity over time? In particular, how does interdependent arising deal with rebirth?

7. Causation over time

We have examined the interdependent arising and cessation of phenomena and have seen how our ignorance of this process results in bondage, and our understanding of it results in freedom. Interdependent arising is our experience of phenomena under the influence of ignorance; interdependent cessation is our experience of phenomena in the absence of ignorance. That leaves us, however, with the problem of the three life theory of the classical Theravada. Where does that fit in?

Rebirth

The Buddha believed in and taught rebirth, which he had directly verified by means of his own perception.(141) The problem of rebirth is bound up with that of personal continuity over time, which in turn is bound up with that of identity; the entities who endure over time, who experience the results of their actions and who are rebom from life to life. My tendency to identify with and own experience manifests most strongly in my determination to identify with consciousness, which is the "unbroken stream" providing the link between one life and another,(142) and between one moment and another. Questions of rebirth and identity are bound up with notions of "my" consciousness.

The Buddha had great difficulty in countering his students' tendency to identify with consciousness. For example, after a discussion on the "food" (ahara) or support of beings, Venerable Moliya-Phagguna asked: "Bhante, who is supported by the consciousness support?"

"The question is not relevant", the Blessed One said. "I do not say 'One is supported'; should I say 'One is supported', the question 'Who is supported?' would be relevant. But I do not say so. Not saying so, one could ask me: 'What does consciousness support?'; this is a relevant question.

"The relevant answer is: 'The consciousness-support is the condition for further becoming and birth in the future. When that comes to be, there are the six sense bases. The six sense bases are dependent on contact.'"

"Who contacts?"

"The question is not relevant ... contact is dependent on the six sense bases; sensation is dependent on contact."

"Who senses?"

"The question is not relevant ... sensation is dependent on contact; craving is dependent on sensation." ...(143)

Note that the Buddha is not denying the existence of the future: there is "further becoming and birth in the future". What he is denying is the one who thinks he endures from past to future. But there were many students who could not grasp this distinction - students like Venerable Sati:

At that time a bhikkhu called Sati, a fisherman's son, came to this evil conclusion: "I understand the teaching taught by the Blessed One to be this: it is this very consciousness and not any other that continuously moves [samsarati] and runs along".

Like Moliya-Phagguna, Sati identifies with consciousness, believing that he is the one who senses, recognises, creates and cognises, and is ultimately reborn. "His" body will die, but "his" stream of consciousness will go on to rebirth. When the Buddha heard of Sati's belief he summoned and questioned him:

"What is this consciousness, Sati?"

"It is this very one who speaks and senses, Bhante, who experiences the result of actions whether good or bad."

"You stupid man, to whom do you think I teach this teaching in such a way? Have I not said in many ways that consciousness is interdependently arisen? That other than from a condition there is no arising of consciousness? You not only slander me by your own misunderstanding, but you also destroy yourself and create a great deal of demerit which will bring you harm and suffering for a long time."(144)

The severity of the Buddha's reaction to this wrong view indicates it must have been very common. Rebirth occurs but no-one is reborn: this is a paradox that cannot be resolved by philosophical thought, only by directly seeing the arising and cessation of one's own mind-body process.(145) It was Siddhartha Gotama's full realisation of this process that turned him into Sakyamuni Buddha, and it was Venerable Kondanna's glimpse of it during the Buddha's first sermon that turned him into an noble one:

While he delivered this teaching the stainless and passion-free dhamma-eye arose for Venerable Kondanna: Whatever is of the nature to arise, all that is of the nature to cease.(146)

Those of the Buddha's students who did not have this insight - who were not at least stream-enterers - necessarily assumed that someone is reborn. Lacking direct insight, they remained fixated on the ordinary, everyday world of enduring entities indicated by conventional language. Consequently they, like Sati, misunderstood the teaching regarding rebirth. Assuming in-dependent existence, they thought rebirth meant beings are reborn, and struggled with the teaching of inter-dependent arising.

The three life theory

Interdependent arising is a theory formulated on the basis of the direct experience of interdependently arisen phenomena; it refers to the immediately available present.(147) Note that for the Buddha, the present is not a momentary "knife-edge" between past and future, but a "saddle-back", and includes the perception of duration.(148) Phenomena are perceived as arising, ceasing, and "changing as they endure" (dhammanam thitanam annathattam).(149)

When we fail to see interdependent arising and assume the existence of an independently existing entity, we assume permanence. We assume the same entity extends from the past through the present to the future. One who sees, now, the arising and cessation of phenomena no longer assumes permanence, and is therefore no longer concerned with past and future:

Because, Bhikkhus, this interdependent arising and these interdependently arisen phenomena are well seen, as they are, by the perfect wisdom of the noble disciple, he will surely not run back to the past:

"Did I exist in the past? Did I not exist in the past? What was I in the past? How was I in the past? After being what, what did I then become?"

Nor will he run after the future:

"Will I exist in the future? Will I not exist in the future? ... "

Nor will he now, at the present time, have personal doubts:

Do I exist? Do I not exist? What am I? How am I? The being that I am - from where did he come and to where will he go?"(150)

Not owning experience, not identifying with experience, the noble disciple lives in the pure experience of the given present. Past and future are no longer identified with and therefore no longer constitute a problem.

While conventional, or linear, causation assumes separate, independent entities that give rise to other separate, independent entities over time, interdependent arising assumes there are no separate entities to begin with. Rather, it says that every "entity" exists only through its dependence on other "entities"; there is no independence, and therefore no separation. Interdependent arising refers to the structure of our experience of phenomena, now. From this viewpoint, past and future are merely ideas in the mind.

Nevertheless, I remember yesterday and would be wise to plan for tomorrow. Causation over time applies to the world of conventional language; interdependency applies to the world of dhamma language. Neither denies the other; rather, each supplements the other. Interdependent arising includes but is not confined to causation over time, but sees causation over time in a specific way - as the arising over time of this totality of phenomena, rather than one phenomenon after another.

In terms of linear causation, I can say this paper is caused by a number of factors, including the work involved in researching and writing it, the printing, the binding, etc. In terms of interdependent arising, this situation, now, in which I am reading this paper is a full and complete experience, a gestalt, within which phenomena arise and cease. It is tathata, the just this-ness of immediate experience.(151) Nevertheless, part of the givenness of just this is the sense of flow within it, which comes from the arising, change while enduring and cessation of phenomena.

Linear causation selects an individual phenomenon from this gestalt, reifies it into an independent entity and examines the lines of cause and effect that give rise to it. Interdependent arising is concerned with the gestalt, and sees each individual phenomenon in terms of its radical contingency; in terms of its context within the experienced gestalt.

Linear causation, in focusing on individual phenomena, supports our innate tendency to assume the existence of independently existing entities. Interdependent arising cuts through this false assumption from the very beginning. Therefore, any use of interdependent arising to construct a model of causation over time runs the risk of defeating its own purpose by encouraging the assumption of entities - by encouraging eternalism.

Buddhists were faced with the task of explaining how rebirth occurred without anyone being born. They used the twelvefold formula of interdependent arising, and spoke in terms of the formula extending over three lives:

PAST
Cause
(1) ignorance; and
(2) creations
are the "causal phase of the previous life which brought about existence in the present

PRESENT
Result
(3) consciousness; (4) mind-body; (5) six sense bases; (6) contact; and (7) sensation are "their fruit, the resultant phase of the present life".

Cause
(8) craving; (9) clinging; and (10) becoming are "renewed causal activity in the present life".

FUTURE
Result
(11) birth; and (12) ageing and death are "the resultant phase of the future life".(152)

Why three lives? Why not two or four? The purpose of the three life theory is to explain cause and effect over time. When we consider time, we are faced with three times: past, present, and future. The pattern of causation is the same whether the unit of time be a moment, a day, a human life span, or whatever. We have seen how terms like birth and death are used in different ways by the Buddha, depending on whether he is speaking in conventional or dhamma language. The notion of a single human life span assumes an entity who exists from physical birth to physical death, but such an enduring entity is explicitly denied by interdependent arising. Govinda points out that according to the Abhidhamma birth and death are taking place with extraordinary rapidity every moment.(153) "Three lifetimes" really means three consecutive periods of time, regardless of the unit employed.

K. N. Jayatilleke points out the relativity of past, present and future:

[T]o imply that the past and the future are not accessible to me in the present is not correct since the present life, from the point of view of the past, is the future, and from the point of view of the future life, is the past. So we do not have to take the first two links or the last two on faith since they can be experienced in this life itself. We can be aware of our ignorance here and now, although ignorance was also present in our past life.(154)

We are now experiencing life two, the present life. The past is life one; and the future is life three. We are always situated at this moment (life two), where there is consciousness, mind-body, six sense bases, contact, sensation, craving, clinging and becoming. For these phenomena (3 - 10) to exist now, there must have been ignorance and creations (1 - 2) in the past; and since these phenomena (3 - 10) exist now, there will be birth, ageing and death (11 - 12) in the future.

Life one gives rise to birth, ageing and death in the next, which is now (life two); so birth, ageing and death are operating now. From the viewpoint of the future time (life three) there were ignorance and creations in the previous life, which is now (life two), so ignorance and creations are operating now. For the three life theory to work, all twelve nidanas must be functioning in the present.

Bhikkhu Bodhi says:

To prevent misunderstanding it has to be stressed that the distribution of the factors into three lives is an expository device employed for the purpose of exhibiting the inner dynamics of the round [of birth and death]. It should not be read as implying hard and fast divisions, for in lived experience the factors are always intertwined.(155)

In conclusion, while interdependent arising does not deny causation over time, it is fundamentally concerned with the structure of the experienced present. However, one aspect of the experienced present is its flow from past to future. Interdependent arising can, therefore, be used to explain causation over time in terms of continuity without someone who continues. To the degree that interdependent arising can explain continuity from one moment to the next, it can explain continuity from one lifetime to the next. From the viewpoint of interdependent arising, there is no qualitative distinction between the two.

8. Conclusion

Interdependent arising is a matter of direct experience, here and now. It is this experience, seeing into the arising and cessation of phenomena, that produces the liberating insight that was the Buddha's awakenment. Indeed, that all phenomena arise and pass away dependent upon other phenomena is the content of the Buddha's awakenment.

The phenomena that arise and cease in dependence upon conditions are our experiences of ourselves and the world. Interdependent arising is not concerned with the purely objective realm of science, but with the existential realm of human experience that includes both subjective and objective. The world is our experience of the world; mind and body are our experiences of mind and body. When examined, solid entities dissolve into dynamic processes; nouns dissolve into verbs; being dissolves into becoming.

Any given phenomenon that arises and ceases does so because of specific conditions. All phenomena are contingent, and by understanding what conditions give rise to what results we can live in a way that maximises the appearance of favourable phenomena and minimises the appearance of unfavourable phenomena. Interdependent arising implies freedom, the capacity to mould our lives according to our aspirations. We do not have to be victims of circumstances beyond our control.

There are no exceptions to this universal law of interdependent arising. There is no-one outside this process to whom it is happening. There is therefore no independently existing self, no owner of experience. Bondage is essentially the conviction that there is one who exists independently, one who is separate from the world and other beings within the world. This independently existing self is a product of a process of clinging and appropriation founded on open-ended desires that can never be satisfied. The sense of separation inherent in independent existence involves an anxiety which results from the need to defend one's identity and possessions. The ceaseless struggle to satisfy the needs and desires of a non-existent independent self is suffering.

When ignorance ceases, when we see into universal arising and cessation, craving and clinging cease, and therefore our sense of identity with experience ceases. The arahant ceases to be someone, the owner of experience; she is free from bondage.

This is not a matter of faith or philosophical reasoning, but of direct perception. The sphere of interdependent arising is that of the available present, and this includes a sense of flow from past to future. Interdependent arising does not deny causation and continuity over time, and can therefore be used to explain rebirth. Because interdependent arising deals with dhammas, phenomena as experienced, as distinct from independent entities, the unit of a conventional lifetime of a being is of no more validity than that of any other unit of time. Continuity from one moment to the next is structurally the same as continuity from one lifetime to the next.

Interdependent arising assumes no separate entities; consequently, it deals with the totality of phenomena that is my experience of this situation, now. Within this experienced gestalt, specific phenomena arise, change and pass away. Linear causation selects an individual phenomenon, reifies it into an independent entity and examines the lines of cause and effect that give rise to it. The classical three life theory adapts interdependent arising to the task of explaining the process of rebirth without reifying an independent entity who is born.

Any attempt to explain rebirth, however, may confirm the assumption of the ordinary untrained person that there is someone who develops, someone who is reborn, someone who is liberated from rebirth. Clinging to such a theory justifies a sense of separate identity and destiny, and postpones to a more favourable time in the future one's practice of investigating the interdependently arisen nature of the mind-body process. Buddhadasa and Nanavira warn against this danger, for such a view denies the fundamental purpose of the Buddha's teaching of interdependent arising.

The Buddha's teaching aims at the cessation of suffering and bondage. This experience of freedom is expressed in terms of finality: "birth is destroyed, the holy life is fulfilled, duty is done, there is no more of this". Such finality can only be experienced in this present moment - duty is now done - without any sense of postponement or further developments. The doctrine of interdependent arising is concerned with the problem of freedom, and therefore it is fundamentally concerned with the structure of our existence, now, as freedom postponed is freedom denied.

Bibliography

Original sources

Pali

Anguttara Nikaya: Vol. 2 Catukka Nipata. Edited by Richard Morris. First published 1888. London: Luzac, 1955 reprint.

Anguttara Nikaya: Vol. 3 Pancaka Nipata and Chakka Nipata. Edited by E. Hardy. First published 1897. London: Luzac, 1958 reprint.

Anguttara Nikaya: Vol. 5. Dasaka Nipata and Ekadasaka Nipata. Edited by E. Hardy. First published 1900. London: Luzac, 1958 reprint.

Buddha's teachings: Sutta Nipata. Edited and translated by Lord Chalmers. Harvard oriental Series, Vol. 37. Cambridge, Massachusetts: Harvard University Press, 1932.

Buddhaghosa, Acariya. Visuddhimagga. Edited by Henry Clarke Warren, revised by Dharmananda Kosambi. Harvard Oriental Series, Vol.41. First published 1950. Delhi: Motilal Banarsidass, 1989 reprint.

Digha Nikaya, Vol. 2. Edited by T. W. Rhys Davids and J. Estlin Carpenter. First published 1903. London: Oxford University Press, 1947 reprint.

Digha Nikaya, Vol. 3. Edited by J. Estlin Carpenter. First published 1911. London: Luzac, 1960 reprint.

Majjhima Nikaya, Vol. 1. Edited by V.Trenckner. First published 1888. London: Luzac, 1964 reprint.

Samyutta Nikaya, Part 2 Nidana Vagga. Edited by Leon Feer. Pali Text Society. First published 1888. London: Luzac, 1960 reprint.

Samyutta Nikaya, Part 3 Khandha Vagga. Edited by Leon Feer. Pali Text Society. First published 1890. London: Luzac, 1960 reprint.

Samyutta Nikaya, Part 4 Salyatana Vagga. Edited by Leon Feer. First published 1894. London: Luzac, 1960 reprint.

Vinaya Pitakam: Vol. 1 the Mahavagga. Edited by Hermann Oldenberg. First published 1879. London: Luzac, 1964 reprint.

English

Buddhaghosa, Acariya. Thc path of purification (Visuddhimagga). 3rd ed. Translated by Bhikkhu Nanamoli. Kandy: Buddhist Publication Society, 1975.

The book of the discipline: Part 4. Sacred Books of the Buddhists, Vol. 14. Translated by I. B. Horner. London: Luzac, 1962.

The book of the gradual sayings (Anguttara Nikaya), Vol. 2. Pali Text Society Translation Series, no. 24 First published 1933. London: Luzac, 1952 reprint.

The book of the gradual sayings (Anguttara Nikaya), Vol. 5. Translated by F. L. Woodward. Pali Text Society Translation Series, no.27. First published 1936. London: Luzac, 1955 reprint.

The book of the gradual sayings (Anguttara Nikaya), Vol. 3. Translated by E. M. Hare. Pali Text Society Translation Series, no. 25. First published 1934. London: Luzac, 1952 reprint.

The book of the kindred sayings (Samyutta Nikaya) or grouped suttas, Part 2 the nidana book. Translated by Mrs. Rhys Davids and F.H. Woodward. Pali Text Society Translation Series, no. 27. First published 1936. London: Pali Text Society, 1982 reprint.

The book of the kindred sayings (Samyutta Nikaya) or grouped suttas, Part 3. Translated by F.H.Woodward. Edited by Mrs. Rhys Davids. Pali Text Society Translation Series, no. 13. First published 1925. London: Pali Text Society, 1975 reprint.

The book of the kindred sayings (Samyutta-Nikaya) or grouped suttas, Part 4. Translated by F. L. Woodward. Pali Text Society Translation Series, no. 14. First published 1925. London: Pali Text Society, 1980 reprint.

The collection of the middle length sayings (Majjhima Nikaya), Vol. 1. Translated by I. B. Horner. Pali Text Society Translation Series, no. 29. First published 1954. London: Pali Text Society, 1987 impression.

The great discourse on causation: the Mahanidana Sutta and its commentaries. Translated by Bhikkhu Bodhi. Kandy: Buddhist Publication Society, 1984.

The Sutta Nipata. Translated by H. Saddhatissa. London: Curzon Press, 1985.

Thus have I heard: the long discourses of the Buddha. Translated by Maurice Walshe. London: Wisdom, 1987.

Twenty-five suttas from Mulapannasa. Rangoon: Burma Pitaka Association, 1989.

Secondary sources

Bucknell, R. S. and Stuart-Fox, M. 'The three knowledges' of Buddhism: implications of Buddhadasa's interpretation of rebirth", in Religion 13 (1983): 99- 112.

Buddhadasa, Bhikkhu. Anapanasati: mindfulness with breathing. Translated by Santikaro Bhikkhu. 2nd ed. Bangkok: Dhamma Study and Practice Group, 1989.

..... Me and mine: selected essays of Bhikkhu Buddhadasa. Albany: State Univershy of New York Press, 1989.

..... Paticcasamuppada: dependent origination. Bangkok: Kurusapha

Ladprao Press, 1986.

Cruise, Henry. "Early Buddhism: some recent misconceptions", in Philosophy East and West 33, no. 2 (April 1983): 148-166.

Daye, Douglas D. "Reflexivity and metalanguage games in Buddhist causality", in Philosophy East and West 25 no. 1 (January 1975): 95-100.

Geiger, Wilhelm. Pali literature and language. Translated by Batakrishna Ghosh. 2nd ed. Calcutta: University of Calcutta, 1956.

Gombrich, Richard F. Theravada Buddhism: a social history from ancient Benares to modern Colombo. London: Routledge & Kegan Paul, 1988.

Gomez, Luis O. "Some aspects of the free-will question in the Nikayas", in Philosophy East and West 25 no. 1 (January 1975): 81-90.

Govinda, Lama Anagarika. The psychological attitude of early Buddhist philosophy. New York: Samuel Weiser, 1974.

Guide to Tipitaka. Rangoon: Burma Pitaka Association, 1986.

Habito, Ruben L. F. "Buddhist philosophy as experiential path: a journey through the Sutta Nipata", in International Philosophical Quarterly 38, no. 2 Issue no. 110 (June 1988): 125-139.

Hosaka, Gyokusen. "Asrava", in Encyclopaedia of Buddhism, Volume I Fascicle 2. Government of Ceylon, 1966: 202-214.

Inada, Kenneth K. Nagarjuna: a translation of his Mulamadhyamakakarika with an introductory essay. Tokyo: Hokuseido Press, 1970.

Jayatilleke, K. N. The message of the Buddha. London: George Allen & Unwin, 1975.

Jayawardhana, Bandula. "Causality", in Encyclopaedia of Buddhism, Volume 4 Fascicle 1. Government of Ceylon, 1979: 1-11.

Johansson, Rune E.A. The dynamic psychology of early Buddhism. Scandinavian Institute of Asian Studies Monograph Series no.37. 2nd ed. London: Curzon Press, 1979.

..... The psychology of nirvana. London: George Allen & Unwin, 1969.

Kalupahana, David. J. A history of Buddhist philosophy: continuities and discontinuities. Honolulu: University of Hawaii Press, 1992.

..... "A Buddhist tract on empiricism", in Philosophy East and West 19 no. 1 (January, 1969): 65-67.

..... Buddhist philosophy: a historical analysis. Honolulu: University Press of Hawaii, 1976.

..... Causality: the central philosophy of Buddhism. Honolulu: University Press of Hawaii, 1975.

..... Mulamadhyamakakarika of Nagarjuna: the philosophy of the Middle Way. First Indian edition. Delhi: Motilal Banarsidass, 1991.

"The Buddhist conceptions of 'subject' and 'object' and their moral implications", in Philosophy East and West 38, no. 3 (July 1988): 290-306.

..... The principles of Buddhist psychology. Albany: State University of New York Press, 1987.

..... "Dhamma (1)", in Encyclopaedia of Buddhism, Volume 4 Fascicle 3. Government of Ceylon, 1988: 438-453.

Karunaratne, W.S. The theory of causality in early Buddhism. Nugegoda, Sri Lanka: Indumati Karunaratne, 1988.

Karunaratne, Upali. "Dhamma (2)", in Encyclopaedia of Buddhism, Volume 4 Fascicle 3. Government of Ceylon, 1988: 453-469.

King, Winston L. "The existential nature of Buddhist ultimates", in Philosophy East and West 33, no. 3 (July 1983): 263-271.

Lesser, A. H. "Eastern and western empiricism and the 'no-self theory", in Religious Studies 15 (1979): 55-64.

Ling, Trevor. The Buddha. Harmondsworth, Middlesex: Penguin Books, 1976.

Loy, David. "The paradox of causality in Madhyamika", in International Philosophical Quarterly 25, (1985): 63-72.

Macy, Joanna. Mutual causality in Buddhism and General Systems Theory: the dharma of natural systems. Albany: State University of New York Press, 1991.

McCance, Dawne. "Physics, Buddhism and Postmodern interpretation", in Zygon 21 no. 3 (September 1986): 287-297.

Mizuno, Kogen. Primitive Buddhism. Karin Buddhological Series No.2. Oyama: The Karinbunko, 1969.

..... Basic Buddhist concepts. (First English edition) Tokyo: Kosei Publishing, 1987.

Nanananda, Bhikkhu. Concept and reality in early Buddhist thought. Kandy: Buddhist Publication Society, 1986.

Nanavira Thera. Clearing the path: writings of Nanavira Thera (1960 - 1965). Colombo: Path Press, 1987.

Narada Maha Thera. The Buddha and his teachings. Second edition. Singapore: Singapore Buddhist Meditation Centre, 1973.

Norman, K. R. Pali literature. A history of Indian literature, Vol. 7. Edited by Jan Gonda. Wiesbaden: Otto Harrassowitz, 1983.

Nyanatiloka Maha Thera. Buddhist dictionary. 3rd ed. Singapore:

Singapore Buddhist Meditation Centre, 1970.

..... Guide through the Abhidhamma-Pitaka. 4th ed. Kandy: Buddhist Publication Society, 1983.

Pandita, Sayadaw. In this very life: the liberation teachings of the Buddha. Boston: Wisdom, 1992.

Rahula, Walpola. What the Buddha taught. 2nd ed. New York: Grove Weidenfeld, 1974.

Reichenbach, Bruce R. "The law of karma and the principle of causation", in Philosophy,East and West 33 no. 4 (October 1988): 395-399.

Rhys Davids, T. W., and William Stede (eds.) The Pali Text Society's Pali-English dictionary. First published 1921 - 1925. London: Pali Text Society, 1979 reprint.

Sachs, Mendel. "Comparison of the field concept of matter in relativity physics and the Buddhist idea of nonself', in Philosophy, East and West 33 no. 4 (October 1983): 395-399.

Schumann, Hans Wolfgang. Buddhism: an outline of its teachings and schools. Translated by Georg Fenerstein. London: Rider and Company, 1973.

Siderits, Mark. "A note on the early Buddhist theory of truth", in Philosophy East and West 29, no. 4 (October 1979): 491-499.

Silananda, Ven. U. The four foundations of mindfulness. Wisdom: Boston, 1990.

Smart, Ninian. "Action and suffering in the Theravadin tradition", in Philosophy, East and West 34 no. 4 (October 1984): 371-378.

Streng, Frederick. "Reflections on the attention given to mental construction in the Indian Buddhist analysis of causality", in Philosophy East and West 25 no. 1 (January 1975): 71-80.

Warder, A. K. Indian Buddhism. 2nd rev. ed. Delhi: Motilal Banarsidass, 1980.

Watts, Jeffrey D. "Necessity and sufficiency in the Buddha's causal scheme", in Philosophy, East and West 32 no. 4 (October 1982): 407-423.

Wayman, Alex. "Discussion of Frederick Streng's 'Reflections on the attention given to mental construction in the Indian Buddhist analysis of causality' and Luis O. Gomez 'Some aspects of the free-will question in the Nikayas'", in Philosophy East and West 25 no. 1 (January 1975): 91-93.

Notes

1. M 1.190-191

2. S 3.120

3. S2.25

4. Streng, Frederick. "Reflections on the attention given to mental construction in the Indian buddhist analysis of causality", in Philosophy East and West 25 no 1 (January 1975) p 77; and Jayawardhana, Bandula "Causality", in Encyclopaedia of Buddhism, Volume 4 Fascicle Govermnent of Ceylon, 1979 pp 2-3

5. English word enlightenment is not equivalent to the Sanskrit or Pali word Bodhi. Enlightenment comes from an 18th century European philosophical movement and implies the supremacy of reason. A buddha is one who has awakened, one who knows; the condition he or she has attained is one of awakenment.

6. S 2.10

7. Vin 1.40

8. Buddhadasa, Bhikkhu. Me and mine: selected essays of Bhikkhu Buddhadasa. Albany: State University of New York Press, 1989. p 2.

9. Buddhadasa, Bhikkhu. Paticcasamuppada: dependent ongination. Bangkok: Kurusapha Ladprao Press, 1986.pp 24-25.

10. Ibid.,p49

11. Nanvira Thera. Clearing the path: writings of Nanvira Thera (1960 - 1965). Colombo: Path Press, 1987. p.21.

12. Ibid., p.432.

13. They represent the consensus among the "elders" (theras) regarding the Buddha's teaching during the reign of Asoka (c. 268-235 B.C.). Norman, K. R. Pali literature. Wiesbaden: Otto Harrassowitz, 1983. p 5: (Geiger, Wilhelm. Pali literature and language. Translated by Batakrishna Ghosh. 2nd ed. Calcutta: [University of Calcutta, 1956. p11.

14. Vin 1.10

15. "Bhante" is a respectful form of address

16. S 2.17

17. Kalupahana, David. J. Mdlamadhyamakakarika of Nagarjuna: the philosopoy of the Middle Way. First Indian edition. Delhi: Motilal Banarsidass, 1991. pp 9 & 13.

18. See: Macy, Joanna. Mutual causality in Buddhism aod General Systems Theory: the ddhamma of natural systems. Albany: State University of New York Press, 1991. pp29-30; and Streng. op. clt. p 73.

19. S 2.28

20. Vism p 443

21. Warder, A. K. Indian Buddhism. 2nd rev. ed. Delhi: Motilal Banarsidass, 1980. p 98.

22. Although this attitude shows signs of changing, due to the fall-out from the rise of postmodern physics: McCance, Dawne. "Physics, Buddhism and Postmodern interpretation", in Zygon 21 no. 3 (September 1986: 287-297.

23. S 4.15

24. See the discussion in Kalupahana, David J. "A Buddhist tract on empiricism", in Philosophy East and West 19 (1969): 65-67.

25. See the discussion regarding causation and things caused in Cruise, Henry. "Early Buddhism: some recent misconceptions", in Philosophy East and West 33, no. 2 (April 1983). pp 155-156; and the "first person" aspect of dharmas in Daye, Douglas D. "Reflexivity and metalanguage games in Buddhist causality", in Philosophy East and West 25 no. 1 (January 1975). pp 96-97. See also Kalupahana, David J. "Dhamma (1)", in Encyclopaedia of Buddhism, Volume 4 Fascicle 3. Government of Ceylon, 1988. pp 442 & 444; and Karunaratne, Upali. "Dhamma (2)", in Encyclopaedia of Buddhism, Volume 4 Fascicle 3. Government of Ceylon, 1988. p 454.

26. A 2.47-47.

27. D 2.328

28. Kalupahana, David J. Causality: the central philosophy of Buddhism. Honolulu: University Press of Hawaii, 1975. pp 86-87.

29. Vin 1.14

30. S 2.1

31. Kalupahana. Causality. op.cit. p 144

32. S 2.4

33. S 3.144

34. S 2.33

35. S 3.171-172

36. Jayatilleke, K. N. The message of the Buddha. London: George Allen & Unwin, 1975. p 201.

37. Macy. op. cit. p 9.

38. S 3.151

39. A 5.113

40. Johansson, Rune E. A. The dynamic psychology of early Buddhism. Scandinavian Institute of Asian Studies Monograph Series no. 37. 2nd ed. London: Curzon Press, 1979.p 41.

41. Kalupahana, David. J. A his1ory of Buddhist philosophy: continuities and discontinuities. Honolulu: University of Hawaii Press, 1992.p 72.

42. Buddhadasa, Bhikkhu.Anapanasati: mindfulness with breathing Translated hy Santikaro Bhikkhu. 2nd ed. Bangkok: Dhamma Study and Practice Group, 1989.p 37.

43. Sn p 175

44. Johansson. op.cit. p.44

45. S 3.146

46. S 3.87

47. Buddhadasa Anapanassati. op. cit. p.37

48. Nanvira. op.cit. p. 108

49. Ibid., pp 108-109

50. S 3.87

51. S 2.4

52. Nanvira. op.cit. p 103

53. S 2.114

54. S 2.72

55. S 2.65

56. S 2.82

57. Nanvira. op.cit. p. 104

58. Citta is the inner centre or space which "contains" mental processes. Manas is the mind as sense organ: like the physical sense organs it perceives a particular type of object. The eye, for example, is the organ which perceives visible forms; manas is the organ which perceives dhammas (mental phenomena). Vinnana is the presence of all phenomena, whether physical or mental. Together, citta, manas and vinnana constitute "mind".

59. S 2.94-95

60. S 2.3

61. Nyanatiloka Maha Thera. Buddhist dictionary. 3rd ed. Singapore: Singapore Buddhist Meditation Centre, 1970. p 28.

62. Kalupahana. Causality. op. cit. p 122.

63. S 2.3

64. S 3.100-101

65. S 3.102

66. Pandita, Sayadaw. In this very life: the liberation teachings of the Buddha. Boston: Wisdom, 1992. p 106.

67. See: Sachs, Mendel. "Comparison of the field concept of matter in relativity physics and the Buddhist idea of nonself', in Philosophy East and West 33 no. 1 (October 1983). pp 395-399; for a discussion of physical "things" resolving into process, according to the field concept of matter contained in the theory of general relativity.

68. S 3.86

69. Kalupahana, David J. The principles of Buddhist psychology. Albany: State University of New York Press, 1987. p 17. 70 Johansson. op. cit. p 32.

70. Johansson. op. cit. p32.

71. Note that this definition embraces both the subjective (being affected) and the objective (that which affects), denying neither. See Kalupahana, David J. "The Buddhist conceptions of 'subject' and 'object' and their moral implications", in Philosophy East and West 38, no. 3 (July 1988). p 292.

72. S 3.86-87

73. "Ayya" is a respectful form of address for bhikkhunis (nuns).

74. M 1.302-303

75. M 1.303

76. S 3.87

77. Rahula, Walpola. What the Buddha taught. '2nd ed. New York: Grove Weidenfeld, 1974. p 23.

78. Kalupahana. A hisfory of Buddhist philosophy. op. cit. p 71.

79. Kalupahana. The principles of Buddhist psychology. op. cit. p 18.

80. S 3.60

81. A 3.415

82. S 2.64-65

83. Sn 651-653

84. S 3.55

85. M 1.293

86. M 1.303

87. S 2.3

88. S 2.84

89. A 3.411

90. Rhys Davids, T. W., and William Stede (eds.) The Pali Text Society's Pali-English dictionary. London: Pali Text Society, 1979 reprint pp 138 & 149.

91. Johansson. op.cit. p 71.

92. S 3.54-55

93. Macy. op.cit. p 110.

94. S 2.85

95. Macy. op.cit. p 111.

96. S 2.3

97. S 4.196-197

98. S 3.151

99. S 3.14

100. M 1 111-112 See Kalupahana A history of Buddhist philosophy. op cit. p 32; and Nanananda, Bhikkhu. Concept and reality in early Buddhist thought. Kandy: Buddhist Publication Society, 1986 pp 5-6

101. S 2.1-2

102. M 1.161-162

103. S 4.26-27

104. Streng. op.cit. p.78

105. Nyanatiloka Maha TheraGuide through tlie Abhidhamma-Pitaka. 4th ed. Kandy: Buddhist Publication Society, 1983 p 2

106. Buddhadasa.Paticcasamuppada. op. cit. p 4.

107. Ibid., pp 7-8

108. Ibid., p.5

109. Ibid., pp. 15-16

110. S 2.2-3

111. S 2.80-82

112. S 2.56-58

113. S 3.46-47

114. Lit "worthy one". In early Buddhism, no distinction is drawn between the liberating insight enjoyed by the Buddha and an arahant. In regard to questions of freedom and bondage, therefore, buddha, tathagata and arahant are synonymous.

115. Buddhadasa. paticcasamuppada. op.cit. p.44

116. Ibid., p 32.

117. Buddhadasa. Me and mine. op.cit. p 132.

118. S 2.108

119. S 2.82

120. Streng. op.cit. pp 77-78

121. S 3.54-55

122. See Buddhadasa. Me and mine. op. cit. pp 92-94 for a discussion on arammana; and Streng. op cit pp 75-79 for the role of "support" in consciousness.

123. S 2.65-66

124. Hosaka, Gyokusen. "Asrava", in Encyclopaedia of Buddhism, Volume 2 Faccicle 2. Government of Ceylon, 1966. p 202.

125. "For the arahant there is nothing more to do..." S 3.169 See the discussion on the distinction between phala (result) and sankhara in

Reichenbach, Bruce R "The law of karma and the principle of causation",in Philosophy East and West 38 no 4 (October 1988) p 401

126. S 2.83

127. Macy. op.cit. p 9

128. S 2.10

129. Sn pp 172-178

130. See Kalupahana Casuality. op. cit. p 98; and Cruise, Henry "Early Buddhism: some recent misconceptions", in Philosophy East and West 33, no 2 (April 1983). p 153.

131. Macy. op.cit. p 55

132. S 3.54

133. Macy. op.cit. p 51

134. A 5.113-114

135. A 5.114-115

136. M 1.57; Silananda, ven U, The four foundations of mindfulness. Wisdom: Boston, 1990 pp 50-51

137. Pandita, Sayadaw op. cit. p 172.

138. Ibid., p 98

139. Vism p 143. Emphasis added.

140. Vism p 444. Emphasis added.

141. Kalupahana. Causality. op. cit. p 115. this verification was itself an interpretation of meditative experience: Bucknell, R. S. and Stuart-Fox, M. "The 'three knowledges' of Buddhism: implications of Buddhadasa's interpretation of rebirth", in Religion 13 (1983). p 106.

142. D 3.105

143. S 2.13

144. M 1.256 & 258

145. M 1.486

146. Vin. 1.11

147. Kalupahana. A history of Buddhist philosophy. op. cit. pp 53-54

148. Kalupahana. "Dhamma (1)". op. cit. p 243

149. S 3.38

150. S 2.26-27

151. Loy, David. "The paradox of causality in Madhyamika", in International Philosophical Quarterly 25, (1985). p 69.

152. The great discourse on causation: the Mahanidana Sutta and its commentaries. Translated by Bhikkhu Bodhi. Kandy: Buddhist Publication Society, 1984. p 5.

153. Govinda, Lama Anagarika. The psychological attitude of early Buddhist philosophy. New York: Samuel Weiser, 1974. p 58.

154. Jayatilleke. op.cit. pp 204-205

155. The great discourse on causation. op. cit. p 5.

<end of file>

AWARENESS ITSELF: THE TEACHING OF AJAAN FUANG JOTIKO Compile Thanissaro Bhikkhu (Geoffrey DeGraff) Mind what you Say  Normally Ajaan Fuang was a man of few words who spoke in response to circumstances: If the circun it, he could give long, detailed explanations. If not, he'd say only a word or two--or sometime all. He held by Ajaan Lee's dictum: "If you're going to teach the Dhamma to people, but they listening, or not ready for what you have to say, then no matter how fantastic the Dhamma y teach, it still counts as idle chatter, because it doesn't serve any purpose."  I was constar amazed at his willingness--sometimes eagerness--to teach meditation even when he was ill.
once, "If people are really intent on listening, I find that I'm intent on teaching, and no matter
I have to say, it doesn't tire me out. In fact, I usually end up with more energy than when I st if they're not intent on listening, then I get worn out after the second or third word."  "Befo say anything, ask yourself whether it's necessary or not. If it's not, don't say it. This is the firs in training the mind--for if you can't have any control over your mouth, how can you expect to control over your mind?"  Sometimes his way of being kind was to be cross--although he of doing it. He never raised his voice or used harsh language, but still his words could burn r heart. Once I commented on this fact, and asked him, "Why is it that when your words hurt, the heart?"He answered, "That's so you'll remember. If words don't hit home with the person don't hit home with the person speaking, either."  In being cross with his students, he'd ta from how earnest the student was. The more earnest, the more critical he'd be, with the thou sort of student would use his words to best effect.Once a lay student of his--who didn't unde point--was helping to look after him when he was ill in Bangkok. Even though she tried her b his needs, he was constantly criticizing her, to the point where she was thinking of leaving h happened, though, that another lay student came to visit, and Ajaan Fuang said in a passing
"When a teacher criticizes his students, it's for one of two reasons: either to make them stay them go."The first student, on overhearing this, suddenly understood, and so decided to stay that Ajaan Fuang liked to tell--with his own twist--was the Jataka tale of the turtle and the sw there were two swans who liked to stop by a certain pond every day for a drink of water. As struck up a friendship with a turtle who lived in the pond, and they started telling him about s many things they saw while flying around up in the air. The turtle was fascinated with their st after a while began to feel very depressed, because he knew he'd never have a chance to s world the way the swans did. When he mentioned this to them, they said, "Why, that's no pro We'll find a way to take you up with us." So they got a stick. The male swan took one end of his mouth, the female took the other end in hers, and they had the turtle hold on with its mou middle. When everything was ready, they took off. As they flew up into the sky, the turtle got many things he had never dreamed about on the earth below, and was having the time of hi flew over a village, though, some children playing below saw them, and started shouting, "Lo carrying a turtle! Swans carrying a turtle!" This spoiled everything for the turtle, until he thoug smart retort: "No. The turtle's carrying the swans!" But as soon as he opened his mouth to sa straight to his death below.The moral of the story: "Watch out for your mouth when you ente

 "Litter" is Thai slang for idle chatter, and once Ajaan Fuang used the term to dramatic e happened one evening when he was teaching in Bangkok. Three young women who were lo to show up together at the building where he was teaching, but instead of joining the group t meditating, they found themselves an out-of-the-way corner to catch up on the latest gossip busy talking, they didn't notice that Ajaan Fuang had gotten up to stretch his legs and was w past them, with an unlit cigarette in his mouth and a box of matches in his hand. He stopped lit a match, and instead of lighting his cigarette, tossed the lit match into the middle of their g Immediately they jumped up, and one of them said, "Than Phaw! Why did you do that? You me!""I saw a pile of litter there," he answered, "and felt I should set fire to it."  One day Aj Fuang overheard two students talking, one of them asking a question and the other starting "Well, it seems to me..." Immediately Ajaan Fuang cut him off: "If you don't really know, say know, and leave it at that. Why go spreading your ignorance around?"  "We each have tw mouth--which shows that we should give more time to listening, and less to speaking."  " happens in the course of your meditation, don't tell it to anyone except your teacher. If you g other people, it's bragging. And isn't that a defilement?"  "When people advertise how go they're really advertising how stupid they are."  "If something's really good, you don't hav advertise."  Thailand has a number of monk magazines, somewhat like movie-star maga the life stories and teachings of famous and not-so-famous monks, nuns and lay meditation stories tend to be so heavily embellished with supernatural and miraculous events, though, t hard to take seriously. From the occasional contact he had with the editors and reporters res these magazines, Ajaan Fuang felt that, by and large, their primary aims were mercenary. A great meditation teachers went into the wilds and put their lives on the line in order to find th
When they found it, they offered it free of charge on their return. But these people sit in their air-conditioned offices, write down whatever comes into their heads, and then put it up for sa result, he never cooperated with them when they tried to put him in their magazines.Once a reporters from a magazine named People Beyond the World came to visit him, armed with c recorders. After paying their respects, they asked for his prawat, or personal history. Now it that the Thai word prawat can also mean police record, so Ajaan Fuang responded that he c he had never done anything wrong. But the reporters were not easily discouraged. If he didn his life story, they said, could he please at least teach them some Dhamma. This is a reques refuse, so Ajaan Fuang told them to close their eyes and meditate on the word buddho--awa their tape recorders and then sat in meditation, waiting for a Dhamma talk, and this was wha heard:"That's today's Dhamma: two words--bud- and dho. Now if you can't keep these two w would be a waste of time to teach you anything else."End of sermon. When they realized tha the reporters--looking very exasperated--gathered their cameras and tape recorders and left him again. Mind what you Eat  "We human beings have long tongues, you kn sit around and suddenly your tongue flicks out to sea: You want to eat seafood. Then it flicks world: You want to eat foreign cuisine. You have to train your tongue and shrink it down to s

"When you eat, keep your mind on your breath, and contemplate why you're eating. If you're the taste of the food, then what you eat can harm you."  After his trip to America, one of h asked him if he had had a chance to eat pizza while he was there. He mentioned that he had very good. This surprised one of his students who had gone along on the trip. "You ate only said. "We thought you didn't like it.""Two bites were enough to fill me up," he answered. "Wh want me to eat more?"  Once a woman who had been studying with him for only a short prepare some food to donate to him. Wanting to make sure it would be something he liked, s straight out, "What kind of food do you like, Than Phaw?"His answer: "Food that's within rea was a Friday evening, and a group of Ajaan Fuang's students were riding in the back of a pi their way from Bangkok to Wat Dhammasathit. Another student had sent a bushel of orange donate to the monks at the wat, and after a while on the road one of the students decided th looked awfully good. So he came up with the following argument: "We're Than Phaw's childr wouldn't want us to go hungry, right? So anyone who doesn't have an orange isn't a child of of the group were observing the eight precepts, which forbid eating food after noon, so they slip through the net. Everyone else, though, helped him or herself to the oranges, even thou felt bad about eating food intended for the monks.When they arrived at the wat, they told Aja had happened, and he immediately lit into them, saying that anyone who takes food intende eats it before it has been given to the monks is going to be reborn as a hungry ghost in the r scared one woman in the group, who immediately responded, "But I only ate one section!"A "Well, if you're going to be a hungry ghost, you might as well eat enough to fill yourself up w can."  During the Rains Retreat in 1977 a couple from the town of Rayong came out to th every evening to practice meditation. The strange thing about them was that whatever happ of their meditation would tend to happen to both of them at the same time.On one occasion that they couldn't eat, because they were overcome by a sense of the filthiness of food. This three or four days without their getting weak or hungry, so they began to wonder what stage in their meditation.When they mentioned this to Ajaan Fuang on their next visit to the wat, he in meditation, and then told them. "Okay, contemplate food to see what it's made of. Elemen what's your body made of? The very same elements. The elements in your body need the e order to keep going. So why get all worked up about the filthiness of food? Your body is eve the Buddha teaches us to contemplate the filthiness of food, it's so that we can get over our about it--not so that we won't be able to eat."That ended their inability to eat food.

People practicing the Dhamma

 One of Ajaan Fuang's students--a seamstress--was criticized by a customer: "Yo the Dhamma, don't you? Then why are you so greedy, charging such high prices? People p should take only enough profit just to get by."Although she knew her prices were fair, she co of a good answer, so the next time she saw Ajaan Fuang she told him what had happened.
time they say that, tell them--'Look, I'm not practicing the Dhamma to be stupid.'"  When to stay at Wat Dhammasathit, the B-52's from Utapao Air Force Base could sometimes be h the wee hours of the morning, flying on their bombing missions into Cambodia. Each time I h began to wonder what business I had meditating when there were so many injustices in the to be fought. When I mentioned this to Ajaan Fuang, he said, "If you try to straighten out the really straightening yourself out first, your own inner goodness will eventually break down, a will you be? You won't be able to do anybody--yourself or anyone else--any good at all." ***

we're born, we're sentenced to death--just that we don't know when our turn will come. So y com-placent. Start right in and develop all your good qualities to the full while you still have t chance."  "If you want to be a good person, make sure you know where true goodness r just go through the motions of being good."  "We all want happiness, but for the most par interested in building the causes for happiness. All we want are the results. But if we don't ta interest in the causes, how are the results going to come our way?"  When I first went to meditation with Ajaan Fuang, I asked him if people really were reborn after death. He answe start out practicing, the Buddha asks you to believe in only one thing: karma. As for things a that, whether or not you believe them isn't really important."  There is an old tradition in Buddhism--probably based on the Jataka tales--that whenever you make a gift to the religion other meritorious deed, you should dedicate the merit of the deed to a particular goal. There when Ajaan Fuang would tell his students to make similar dedications every time they medit dedication he'd recommend would depend on the individual. Sometimes he'd recommend th made at the end of his life: "In my future lives may I have sovereignty over the mind."Other t say, "There's no need to make any long, drawn-out dedications. Tell yourself: If I have to be always encounter the Buddha's teachings." But it wasn't always the case that he would reco dedications. Once a woman told him that when she made merit she couldn't think of any par dedicate the merit towards. He told her, "If the mind is full, there's no need to make any dedi don't want to. It's like eating. Whether or not you express a wish to get full, if you keep on ea there's no way you can help but get full."  One year, shortly before the Rains Retreat--a t people traditionally make resolutions to step up their practice of the Dhamma--one of Ajaan approached him and said that she was thinking of observing the eight precepts during the R afraid that going without the evening meal would leave her hungry.He retorted: "The Buddha didn't have any flesh at all--just skin and bones--so that he could discover the Dhamma to te here we can't even stand going without one single meal. It's because of this that we're still s around in the cycle of birth and death."As a result, she resolved that she'd have to observe t precepts on each Buddhist sabbath--the full moon, the new moon and the half-moon days-- months of the Rains. And so she did. At the end of the Rains she felt really proud of herself kept to her resolution, but on her next visit to Ajaan Fuang, before she was able to broach th all, he commented, "You're lucky, you know. Your Rains Retreat has only twelve days. Ever three months."On hearing this she felt so embarrassed that she has observed the eight prec throughout each Rains Retreat ever since.  Another student was meditating in Ajaan Fua when--in a spasm of mindlessness--she slapped a mosquito that was biting her arm. Ajaan F

"You charge a high price for your blood, don't you? The mosquito asks for a drop, and you ta exchange."  A young man was discussing the precepts with Ajaan Fuang and came to nu taking intoxicants: "The Buddha forbade alcohol because most people lose their mindfulness it, right? But if you drink mindfully it's okay, isn't it, Than Phaw?""If you were really mindful," answered, "you wouldn't drink it in the first place."  There seem to be more excuses for b fifth precept than for any other. One evening another student was conversing with Ajaan Fua time that a group of people were sitting around them in meditation. "I can't observe the fifth p said, "because I'm under a lot of group pressure. When we have social occasions at work, a in the group is drinking, I have to drink along with them."Ajaan Fuang pointed to the people s them and asked, "This group isn't asking you to drink. Why don't you give in to their group pr instead?"  The seamstress saw her friends observing the eight precepts at Wat Dhamma decided to try it herself. But in the middle of the afternoon, as she was walking through the m she passed a guava tree. The guavas looked inviting, so she picked one and took a bite.Aja to be standing not far away, and so he remarked, "Hey. I thought you were going to observe precepts. What's that in your mouth?"The seamstress realized in a jolt that she had broken h Ajaan Fuang consoled her, "It's not all that necessary to observe the eight precepts, but mak observe the one precept, okay? Do you know what the one precept is?""No, Than Phaw. Wh any evil. I want you to hold onto this one for life."  A woman came to Wat Dhammasathit precepts and meditate for a week, but by the end of the second day she told Ajaan Fuang th return home, because she was afraid her family couldn't get along without her. He taught he her worries by saying, "When you come here, tell yourself that you've died. One way or anot will have to learn to fend for themselves."  On his first visit to Wat Dhammasathit, a middl was surprised to see an American monk. He asked Ajaan Fuang, "How is it that Westerners Fuang's answer: "Don't Westerners have hearts?"  A Bangkok magazine once carried the autobiography of a lay meditator who used his powers of concentration to treat diseases. On mentioned how he had visited Ajaan Fuang, who had certified that he (the layman) had attai didn't sound like Ajaan Fuang's style, but soon after the magazine came out, unusual numbe to the wat under the impression that Ajaan Fuang, like the author of the autobiography, coul illnesses through meditation. One woman asked him if he treated kidney diseases, and he a only one kind of disease: diseases of the mind."  A student asked permission to keep a n Ajaan Fuang's teachings, but he refused, saying, "Is that the sort of person you are?--always around in your pocket for fear there'll be nothing to eat?" Then he explained: "If you jot every you'll feel it's okay to forget what you've writ-ten, because it's all there in your notebook. The result is that all the Dhamma will be in your notebook, and none in your heart."  "The text if you listen well, you'll gain wisdom. To listen well, your heart has to be quiet and still. You li with your heart, not just with your ears. Once you've listened, you have to put what you've he practice right then and there. That's when you'll reap the benefits. If you don't put it into prac you've heard will never become real inside you."  Once, while the chedi at Wat Dhamma built, some of the students working on the chedi got into a serious argument. One of them b that she went to tell Ajaan Fuang, who was staying in Bangkok at the time. When she finishe asked her, "Do you know what gravel is?"Taken aback, she answered, "Yes.""Do you know are?""Yes.""Then why don't you gather the diamonds? What good do you get out of gatheri Even in a Buddhist country like Thailand, some young people who practice the Dhamma find are against it, and feel that they should be spending their time in more practical ways. Once of the seamstress tried to put a stop to her visits to Wat Makut, and this got her very angry. I told her feelings to Ajaan Fuang, he warned her, "You owe a huge debt to your parents, you angry with them, or yell at them, you're stoking the fires of hell on your head, so watch out. A yourself: If you wanted parents who would encourage your practice, why didn't you choose t somebody else? The fact that they're your parents shows that you've made past karma with up your old karma debts as they come. There's no need to create any more karma by gettin  Channeling spirits has long been popular in Thailand, and even some people who practi like to attend seances. But Ajaan Fuang once said, "If you want results from your practice, y up your mind that the Buddha is your one and only refuge. Don't go taking refuge in anything

"If you practice the Dhamma, you don't have to be amazed by anyone else's powers or abilit do, say or think, let your heart take its stand on the principles of reason."  "The truth lies you. If you're true in what you do, you'll meet with the truth. If you're not, you'll meet only wit that are fake and imitation."

Student/Teacher  "Whatever you do, always think of your teacher. If you forget your teacher, you're cutting yourself off at the root."  "A person who from teacher to teacher doesn't really have any teachers at all."  On occasion people wou Ajaan Fuang with amulets, and he would hand them out among his students--but only rarely were especially close to him. One day a monk who had lived several years with him couldn't complain, "Why is it that when you get good amulets, you never give any to me, and always else?"Ajaan Fuang replied, "I've already given you lots of things better than that. Why don't them?"  "Meditators who live close to their teacher, but who don't understand him, are lik a pot of curry: It'll never know how sweet, sour, salty, rich or hot the curry is."  Ajaan Fua analogy for students who always have to ask their teachers for advice on how to handle eve in everyday life: "They're just like baby puppies. As soon as they defecate they have to run t to have her lick them off. They'll never grow up on their own."  "Students who get stuck o teachers are like gnats. No matter how much you chase them away, they keep coming back alone."  "If a teacher praises a student to his face, it's a sign that that's as far as the stud will go--he probably won't be able to practice to any greater heights in this lifetime. The reas teacher praises him is so that he'll be able to take pride in the fact that at least he's made it t His heart will have something good to hold on to when he needs it at death."  Many of Aj students were convinced that he was able to read their minds, because time after time he w that happened to be going through their heads or weighing down their hearts at the moment experiences like this, and many were reported to me while I was compiling this book. In mos sort, though, what he had to say had special meaning only for those directly involved, and so pass over them here. But there are two cases I'd like to mention, since they strike me as bei all who practice the Dhamma.Once, one of his students--a young man--took the bus from Ba help work on the chedi. He got off at the intersection of the road leading to the wat, but didn' walking the six kilometers it would take to get there, so he sat at the noodle stand by the inte said to himself--as a challenge to Ajaan Fuang--"If Than Phaw is really something special, m and give me a lift to the wat." One hour passed, two, three, and not a single car or truck turn road, so he finally had to walk the distance on foot.When he arrived at the wat, he went to A hut to pay his respects, but as soon as Ajaan Fuang saw him approach, he got up, entered h the door. This shook the student a little, but still he bowed down in front of the closed door. T he finished, Ajaan Fuang opened the door a crack and said, "Look. I didn't ask for you to com came of your own free will."Another time, after the chedi was finished, the same young man meditation at the chedi, in hopes that a voice would whisper the winning number of the next ear. What he heard, though, was the sound of Ajaan Fuang actually walking past and saying in particular, "Exactly what are you taking as your refuge?"

